LACON, Ill. (AP) - A 10-year-old and his 8year-old brother pleaded guilty to sexually assaulting a 5-year-old girl who lived next door.

The older boy, who was 9 at the time of the assault, admitted Friday in court to having sexual intercourse with the girl in a vacant house near their homes in Henry, about 40 miles north of Peoria. He pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual assault, a felony. The younger boy pleaded guilty to aggravated criminal sexual abuse, a lesser charge that does not involve penetration. Marshall County Juvenile Court Judge C. Brett

Bode said he would decide at a future hearing whether to place the boys in a foster home or institution until they reach age 18.

In the meantime, he ordered psychological evaluations for them and their parents. "I've probably had more juvenile cases than anyone else in this area. But this is something new for me," Bode said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last time a senior Cuban official came to Washington, Bill Clinton was not even a teenager and John Kennedy was the junior senator from Massachusetts.

The visitor during that spring of 1959 was Fidel Castro, then a youthful revolutionary firebrand who had seized power in Cuba less than four months earlier.

This week, one of Castro's closest confidantes, veteran diplomat and National Assembly President Rafael Alarcon, has been making the rounds in Washington. But improving relations with the United States is not on his agenda.

He attended an international health conference this week, keeping a low profile until Friday when he spoke to a luncheon gathering at the National Press Club, just minutes from the White House.

Alarcon, a former foreign minister, held out little hope for an improvement in Cuba's relations with the United States so long as Washington insisted first on democratic reform in Cuba.

U.N. authorizes attacks on Serb rebels

By DONALD W. SWINTON Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Anxious to stop Serb attacks on the "safe zone" of Bihac in northwest Bosnia, the Security Council on Saturday authorized NATO to bomb rebel Serb forces striking from neighboring Croatia.

The measure will allow NATO to target on Bihac and an attack Saturday on the nearby town of Cazin, said Security Council president Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador.

Fog, drizzle cover Panhandle area

From AP and Staff Reports

Pampans awoke Saturday to a cool drizzle and went to bed wrapped in a thick fog.

Clouds began building over the Top O' Texas in the wee hours of Saturday, and by the time most people were getting up, the wet weather system had already produced 0.02 inches of moisture.

As the day wore on, the fog became more dense and the drizzle fell-lightly but steadily, to produce a total of 0.35 inches by midevening.

Forecasters were predicting that even more rain would fall in the area overnight, but that the chance of moisture would decrease to about 20 percent by today, with a high of 55 predicted.

Skies are expected to clear tonight, which means that temperatures likely will fall 8 to 10 degrees below what they were Saturday night. Forecasters were predicting an overnight low of just under 40 degrees for Saturday night, Saturday. Skies over the rest of the region compared to the low 30s for tonight.

The Pampa-area weather was typical for much of the Lone Star State Saturday. Most of Texas endured cloudy skies and rain during the day.

There was a flash flood watch in effect for most of North Texas Saturday. Widespread light rain and isolated showers and thunderstorms extended across the area in a 50-mile band from north of Paris to southwest of Stephenville.

Skies were cloudy throughout the region with temperatures ranging from 60 to 74 degrees. Winds were from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph with gusts of near 30 mph at Abilene.

Sunday's North Texas calls for partly cloudy skies to the west. Skies will be cloudy in the central part of the region with thunderstorms in the morning, then clouds will decrease and temperatures will drop. Rain and thunderstorms are expected in the east. Highs will be in the low 60s to the low 70s.

Skies were sunny over far West Texas were cloudy.

Demand surges for Texas veggies

McALLEN (AP) - Demand for Texas vegetables has surged and prices have skyrocketed because of the estimated $200 million in damage

Tropical Storm Gordon inflicted on South Florida produce.

"It has increased the demand 100 percent," said John Bearden, vice president for marketing for Plantation Farms in Sharyland.

Bearden said prices for local cucumbers and bell peppers have soared since the storm ravaged Florida farms early in the week. Cucumbers were selling for $10-per-bushel box at the beginning of the week and now are going for $18- to $20-per-bushel box, he said.

The price for bell peppers also has shot up, from $8- to $10-per-bushel box before the storm to $16 to $18.

Photographer to be back to continue 'Gray County Adventure' video work

By DARLENE BIRKES Guest writer

The Forest Glen TV Production photographer Glen Ely of Austin will be back in Pampa Dec. 2 and 3 to complete the last of five filmings for the "Gray County Adventure" video to be released about Dec. 10.

It is hoped that some homes will have outside Christmas decorations up by then because Ely will tour the area to take pictures of night lights and the community Christmas tree. He will also be filming The Nutcracker production at M.K. Brown Auditorium Dec. 3.

Ely will be honored with a brunch by the Gray County Historical Commission Dec. 3.

The 60-minute video, a year in the making, can be reserved at the Gift Box in Pampa. Reservations should be made by Dec. 3 to ensure copies by Dec. 10 and for Christmas giv-

The video will be full of action, beginning with the Adobe Walls and Buffalo Wallow battles re-enacted by the 4th U.S. Cavalry of Amarillo and the 1994 TEXAS cast of wranglers. Included will be the capture of the German sisters that occurred after the Battle of McClellan Creek in Gray County.

The video is designed for use in the classroom to enrich studies on local history as well as to inform prospective businesses about the heritage and opportunities in the area.

Background piano music will include "Llano Estacado," "Adobe Walls" and "Panhandle," original music by Eloise Lane, music coordinator for the video. Fred Mays plays the guitar, and the Jack Selby and Pickin' Shack groups provide some bluegrass music. Dance clips include the Country Western Dancers and Calico Capers square dancers.

The 100-member Pampa Elementary Choir opens the video with "Gray County" by Wanetta Hill, choir director. The video closes with "This Land Is Your Land," written by former Pampan Woody Guthrie and sung by the Pampa High School Show Choir, directed by Mays, at the sculpture on Hobart Street.

Short history clips by pioneer citizens will include Ruth Magee,

Mayor Sam Haynes and Fayette Belle Barton of McLean, Elmer McLaughlin of Laketon, Frank Daugherty of Hoover, Norman Lantz of Lefors, Eloise Lane and Bette Bates of Pampa.

Buster Carter visits the site of his grandmother's oil well, the first in Gray County, and former Cabot manager Dudley Steele reviews a short history of the carbon black history. Also in the industrial development segment are some intriguing night shots of the Hoechst Celanese Route 66 scenes and barbed wiremaking are shared by Delbert Trew of the Devil's Rope Museum in McLean. Rochelle Lacy gives a lively narration on pioneer dress at the White Deer Land Museum. Louise Fletcher, retiring publisher of The Pampa News, relates history while the backroom production, rolling presses, and folding and stacking of the paper is shown.

Area art includes the wall mural at McLean, the outdoor sculpture in Pampa, and short visits to art, quilt, drama and photography shows.

Government may drop gay sailor court case

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Clinton administration officials are inclined to end a court battle over the Pentagon's old policy on homosexu-. als and probably will not ask the Supreme Court to overturn the reinstatement of a sailor who declared his homosexuality on television.

A senior administration official said Friday that Solicitor General Drew Days, who represents the government in the Supreme Court, is leaning against asking the justices to overturn a court order reinstating Navy sonar operator Keith Mein-

One of these old cases, that of ·Supreme Court. National Guard Col. Margarethe Cammermeyer, a lesbian from Washington state, has been put on hold by the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in the hope that a final ruling in the Meinhold case will settle her case as well. Like Meinhold, she has been reinstated pending the outcome of the court battles.

The administration would rather concentrate its attention on defending cases under the Clinton administration's new "don't ask, don't tell" policy, the official said. The 9th Circuit said the case should be resolved by simply forbidding the Navy to discharge Meinhold solely because of his statement, which expressed no desire to engage in prohibited sexual conduct.

Both sides prepare to sign Angola peace treaty

By TOM COHEN Associated Press Writer

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) Angola's government and rebels will sign a treaty Sunday ending 19 years of civil war, but their leaders are not even expected to attend the ceremony, diplomats said Saturday.

UNITA rebel leader Jonas Savimbi, normally a master of public relations, designated a deputy to sign the treaty in Lusaka, the Zambian capital, a rebel statement said.

That increased speculation that Savimbi - who has not been seen in public for months – was wounded or even killed in a recent government

Angolan President Jose Eduardo dos Santos, who arrived in Lusaka on Saturday, may also designate a deputy so that representatives of equal stature put their names to the Fighting continued as diplomats scrambled to pull off an event already delayed by five days, Government artillery boomed north of Huambo, the fallen UNITA stronghold. Aid workers trapped in Uige said fighting continued in that northern city.

The peace treaty originally was to have been signed Tuesday, but the coaxed back to negotiations.

A truce was called Wednesday, but UNITA – the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola – claimed government troops broke it within hours. On Friday, the rebels said all airports in rebel-controlled areas were under bombardment, preventing Savimbi from leaving for Lusaka.

Government Gen. Higino Carneiro said the army had agreed to truce kicked in. mediators' requests for safe passage for the rebel chief. The rebels did not take up the offer.

The government also denied any truce violations. In a statement Saturday, it gave an "absolute guarantee" that fighting had stopped. Yet there were clear signs of clash-string of government victories on the es just 9 miles northeast of Huambo battlefield. The rebels had to be on the main road to Kuito, another central city.

> Soldiers from a government patrol said they clashed with a group of 20 rebels to the northeast. The soldiers said artillery further east had been booming for days.

Aid workers in Uige, in contact with Huambo by radio, said fighting continued for the northern city that the government claimed had fallen to its troops before Wednesday's

Capping nearly a year of painstaking negotiations, the peace pact is supposed to end fighting that has killed more than half a million Angolans since independence from Portugal in 1975 and lead to shared power between the government and the rebels.

The murderous toll from totalitarianism

Some new historical research offers a profound affirmation of Lord Acton's timeless truth, that "Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

A University of Hawaii professor named R.J. Rummel has authored a book that substantiates Acton's 19th century observation with a well-documented indictment of the 20th century's most notorious mass murderers. The book, Death by Government, is of course not referring to lesser maniacs like Charles Manson, but to the likes of Joseph Stalin and Adolf Rummel's painstaking research is reputed to be the first attempt to do a thorough accounting of the genocide committed at the hands of power-hungry governments during this century, as well as a ranking of those who murdered.

Stalin, who tops the list, is "credited" with 42,672,000 murders in the former Soviet Union, ranging from execution to starvation. (His predecessor, Vladimir Lenin, had to settle for fifth place with only about 4 million murders to his name.)

Communist Chinese dictator Mao Tse-tung claims second place on Rummel's list. In pursuit of his collectivized utopia, Mao wound up liquidating some 37,828,000 Chinese, from the origins of his guerrilla movement in 1923 until his death

And Hitler's reign of murder came in third, claiming 20,946,000 lives.

The list also names more recent figures, like Cambodia's Pol Pot (2,397,000 killed) and Yugoslavia's Josip Broz Tito (1,172,000).

It's noteworthy that Rummel's accounting of some 170 million victims doesn't refer to deaths of combatants in wars ("only" about 38 million this century). These are by and large innocent civilians premeditatively killed by their own governments. And the real lesson here, Rummel told Gannett News Service's John Omicinski, is that the culprit isn't so much the dictators as power itself.

"Power kills. The more power a government has, the more it kills. It's not just a matter of crazy people coming to power - it's a belief in absolute truth combined with absolute

At root, Rummel said, "is the belief in power as a tool ... In this century there has been a concerted attempt to use power to change societies in ways never thought of in the past."

In other words, "visionary" dictators never let a few lives get in the way of their grand designs.

We're trading liberty for safety

Without question, Americans have known unprecedented liberty. But increasingly, we're trading liberty for safety - somewhat like a caged canary. If ignorance rather than design explains our headlong rush toward tyranny and servitude, there's hope for us. So let me share some liberty tidbits from Lysander Spooner (1801-1887), one of my early American heroes (his collection is available from Laissez-Faire books Co.).

Spooner argued that all people are endowed with equal rights to life, liberty and property, adding that these "natural rights are inalienable and can no more be surrendered to government, which is but an association of individuals, than to a single individual." This vision inspired Spooner to write as a gigolo. Would you have him arrested? Has a "Unconstitutionality of Slavery" and later "A Defence for Fugitive Slaves."

He advanced the brilliant argument that would become known as "jury nullification" - that juries are legally sovereign. As such, juries have the right to judge a defendant not guilty if it judges the law, even if it has been upheld by the Supreme Court, to be defective, unwarranted or wrongly applied. Thus, Spooner argued, since slavery itself was unjust, the newly enacted fugitive-slave law was unjust, and juries should exonerate all accused of violating it. Today's juries still have the common-

bench either deny or don't inform juries of that

Suppose you see Williams making lots of money crime been committed? First, what's a crime? Spooner says, "Crimes are those acts by which one man harms the person or property of another." Prostitution is a vice, and Spooner says, "Vices are simply the errors which a man makes in his search after his own happiness." He adds, "It is a maxim of law that there can be no crime without criminal intent; that is, without the intent to invade the person or property of another."

"Hold it, Williams," you say. "Any violation of a law is a crime and warrants punishment." You're gance of Congress. It's the emerging leave-mewrong. For the government to declare a vice a crime alone attitude developing across the land. The

erty and pursuit of happiness, which are enunciated in our Declaration of Independence.

Spooner says only a fool or an impostor believe's that he as individual has the right to punish other men for their vices. Therefore, government cannot have a right that individuals do not have. For example, individuals don't have the right. Individuals do have the right to protect their property and punish violators; therefore, they can grant such a right to

These principles of natural law that played such an important role in the Farmers' thinking about our Constitution are held in high contempt by Congress, the courts and, I'm afraid, most Americans. My deepest lifetime disappointment is the fact that black Americans share so much of this generalized contempt and eagerly advocate and participate in the attack against the principles of natural law. Blacks, more than any other Americans, should love and respect natural law and have the deepest suspicions of government. After all, the horrors of slavery and the abuses of Reconstruction and Jim Crow were rooted in disrespect for natural law.

The good news is there's a ray of hope on the horizon directly proportional to the growing arrolaw right of nullification, but the thugs sitting on the is to violate those natural-law guarantees of life, lib- Founders might have called it "Don't tread on me!"

Clinton sees his foe in mirror

Some newspaper and television pundits, mainly the Beltway fellows, profess to be puzzled that the American people don't care for President Clinton. They say, after all, he has been successful.

Some Clinton supporters blame the media. Garrison Keillor, with characteristic humor and grace, blame the people. We're just sore-heads, he Actually, it's Clinton's fault.

Most Americans, I think, are fair minded. When Clinton won the election, most were ready to take him at his word and wish him success. Clinton, however, proceeded to undo his won success.

He broke promises, reversed positions, vacillated, pushed policies he had criticized as a candidate and neglected policies he had cherished as a candidate. It is not just Republicans who are disillusioned by Clinton's actions. Democrats, liberals, progressives, labor unions and others who had supported his campaign have been disappointed. This is the core of Clinton's lack of popularity, not all the wild charges, which I suspect few people believe. It is essentially the same problem that cost his predecessor, George Bush, the election. Bush broke his read-my-lips-no-new-taxes promise and was too arrogant to apologize and explain to the American people why he did so. Hence, people decided they couldn't trust him. That out-weighed his "successes."

Charley Reese

This desire to trust is the key to understanding the electorate. More than anything else, more than new programs or tax cuts or entitlements, Americans want to believe in their government and their public officials. They want to be able to trust them. Distrust is psychologically disturbing. It's like a bad back pain. You want it to go away.

If I don't trust you, then what you say doesn't matter. Even if you are saying what I want to hear, I won't believe you really mean it. I would rather trust you and have you disagree with me than the distrust you and have you agree with me.

What we want is predictability. We want to be able to predict what an officeholder will do based on what he, as a candidate, has promised. Otherwise, an election is a pointless farce. We cannot say we are a free, self-governing people if our only choices are candidates whose words are worthless and whose future actions are therefore unpredictable. We, as voters, can only effect change if the people we elect do what they say they will do.

In fact, they don't have to do it, as long as they honestly try hard to do it. Americans are not stupid. They understand that with our system of separate ror.

branches of government, an official may not be able to accomplish what he sets out to accomplish. But if he tries, he doesn't lose our trust.

Unfortunately, Clinton has shown that his word is no good and that he is the kind of guy who refuses to accept responsibility. Whatever goes wrong, it's not his fault, to hear him tell it. He will change his position four times on one issue and then deny that he has changed it. He never inhales.

Well, that's why people don't care much for him. That doesn't mean they won't re-elect him. Republicans may present people with a worse alter-

The problem of no-credibility is widespread throughout our society, and for the same reason: basic dishonesty. Sometimes it seems that everybody is lying to everybody about everything from carpets and toothpaste to politics and trade. Lying is an indication of selfishness, a desire to advance one's interests at the expense of others. Selfish people, even large numbers of them, live alone. They cannot make a community.

They have also degraded language. It is rarely used for communication. Instead, language is used as a manipulative tool, a weapon or a smoke screen. The Biblical story of the Tower of Babel contains a valid point: Without communication, society collapses.

Same-sex classes make a difference

Loath as I am to sympathize with Sen. John Danforth, I do. A little.

Last summer the Clarence Thomas apologist and reproductive-rights foe introduced an amendment to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act that would have allowed same-sex classes in some of the nation's poorest schools. Boys in one room; girls in another.

Obviously, feminist organizations went bonkers. So did the NAACP, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Anti-Defamation League, Americans for Democratic Action, the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under the Law and the Council of Chief State

The arguments against the amendment were not only effective - it was stricken from the bill last September - they were eminently reasonable, The amendment proposed by Danforth, R-Mo., would have waived Title IX, which guarantees gender equality in the classroom. Waiving civil rights laws and, in essence, the 14th Amendment - was far too dangerous a precedent, opponents said.

What's more, studies, such as one conducted by the American Association of University Women, found that the public school system has been short-changing girls for years. Boys receive more encouragement, are asked more questions and are permitted to speak out far more than their female classmates. If public schools don't treat girls equally when they are sharing classes with boys, it's hard to expect them to give girls a fair shake when they are taught in separate rooms. In other words, separate is rarely equal.

But there's something here that keeps gnawing at me, an itch that won't go away. It is this: single-gender education is good for girls. We don't know very much about boys, but about girls the research is quite

"Girls in single-sex schools have higher selfesteem, are more interested in non-traditional subjects such as science and math, and are less likely to stereotype jobs and careers. They are more intellectually curious, serious about their studies, and achieve more," say Myra and David Sadker in their recently published book Failing at Fairness: How America's Schools Cheat Girls. This assertion is based on a number of studies, published in periodicals such as the Journal of Educational Psychology, the Comparative Education Review and the Sociology of Education.

Even the American Association of University Women, which was strongly opposed to the Danforth amendment, found in its 1992 study that girls both preferred and benefited from same-sex work groups. But so far, the only girls who have been able to take advantage of these boy-free zones are the ones gle-gender classes make girls more confident, more whose parents can afford to send them to private allgirls schools. And the young women who need the mathematicians, I'm all for it.

most help, those in low-income public schools, can't get it because single-gender education breaks too many laws. Surely there must be a way out of this. "Everyone appreciated what Sen. Danforth was trying to do," says Michael Lieberman of the Anti-Defamation League. "The question was, was this the right way to do it?"

Both Lieberman and Ellen Vargas at the National Women's Law Center say that the problem with the Danforth bill was that it sought a waiver of Title IX, rather than an allowance within the law, "Title IX permits sex-conscious programming where it serves specific purpose - to compensate for (a historic) disadvantage or under representation," says Vargas.

But what about all the above-mentioned studies? Unfortunately, though there has been a lot of independent social research on the effects of all-girls schools on the rather privileged young women who attend them, there has yet to be a legal finding that says that single-gender education significantly benefits economically disadvantaged girls and boys.

And that is precisely what we need. I don't want anyone to mess with Title IX, and I'm certainly not suggesting that we tamper with the U.S. Constitution. But we do need to find a better way to educate our young people, especially those from dis-advantaged backgrounds, especially girls. Many feminists may not like the implications of studies that say girls perform better when boys aren't around. But there is no time for such pedantry. If sin-

Three cheers for the players, their parents and the coaches of the Harvester football team. That may seem a little strange since we didn't win the "big game," but I mean every word of it. Anyone with character and wisdom knows that the measure of a game is never the final outcome on the scoreboard. Those who judge people by such meaningless measurements are to be pitied. Let me explain why I give three cheers.

First, to the coaches I give a cheer for being willing to put up with constant community judgment by a few "reserved seating experts." Isn't it strange that the ones with all of the right answers, the ones who know immediately following the play whether it would have worked or not, never seem to apply for the many coaching jobs available throughout the state? They don't even seem to turn out for the volunteer coaching jobs available in our local elementary school football program. It seems strange that those with so many answers would selfishly conceal them until after the game. Thanks, coaches, for working many long hours with the young men of our community and for not hearing the foolish things that thoughtless fans say. 'My prayer is that each player has learned less about football from their time with you, and more about hard work, teamwork, how to encourage someone who made a mistake and how to win and lose with humility.

Second, to the parents of every player I give a cheer for somehow being deaf to the incomprehensible things that a handful of adults sometimes yell at your children. The only reassurance I can give you is that those rude, obnoxious adults are only a tiny portion of the total crowd. The rest of us are proud of your children; they represent our town! We are also proud of them when they mess up. The vast majority of us are so familiar with our hundreds of mistakes that we choose to support your children when they make theirs. I only wish those few could open their eyes and see how hypocritical it is for them to be so impatient and angry with the players. High school football players can at least blame some of their mistakes on adolescence. Childish adults can only blame

Finally, to the players I give a cheer for playing hard, for showing sportsmanship throughout the game, for shaking hands with each Borger player after the game, for singing the school song after the game, and for being willing to represent our town. Always remember that 95 percent of the people in the stands are proud of you, pray for your safety and support you - win or lose. Concerning the other 5 percent, I can only tell you that many of them never played sports, never had to perform athletically under pressure in front of hundreds of Pampans and don't have a clue. The others in the 5 percent who did play sports have obviously either 1) forgotten the many mistakes they made during their years of representing PHS, or 2) become arrogant concerning the abilities that God gave them when they were young. Try to be patient with all the 5 percent.

So in closing, CHEER to the coaches, CHEER to the parents and CHEER to the players.

Be thankful for our food

The Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau is proud to help sponsor National Farm-City Week, Nov. 18-24.

The Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau is involved in Farm-City Week because of the crucial importance of this connection between urban and rural America. We have a food and fiber miracle here in the U.S.A. It takes the combined effort of researchers, farmers, agribusiness and consumers to produce the abundance we often take for grant-

For this we can thank the hard work and dedication of our nation's farmers and ranchers, and the equally important labor of our partners in Less than two percent of the U.S. population lives on the farm, yet our food needs are met with room to spare. Each farmer can produce enough food and fiber for 128 people here at home and overseas.

The agricultural production system in Texas is estimated to have an economic impact of about $40 billion. Businesses related to agriculture employ more than 20 percent of the work force. Across the U.S., that's one job in five, making agriculture the nation's top employer.

Thanksgiving Day is our annual celebration of the bounty our nation enjoys. Abundant food is something that is a rarity in the history of the world. That is a blessing for which we should be truly thankful.

Rural and urban folk must continue working together for our future and that of our children.

Trusting our officials

I'm growing more concerned about the judgment of our local government. It seems no one locally stops and thinks about the results of the actions they take "IN THE PUBLIC NAME."

After all, elected officials, police officers, etc., govern us. We give them our trust, pay them with taxes we pay, we the people teach our children to respect and trust them. Are we wise? I'm beginning to wonder. Here are just two recent examples.

First: Sunday I opened the paper to find Sammie Morris had fired her opponent. Why? Stress!!! Poor Sammie has to deal with stress, like everyone else in the world. Talk about integrity and Christian acts.

I usually vote straight Democrat, but voted off the ticket because I thought she was the best person for the job, Boy, do I feel like a fool!!! Sammie, if re-elections were today, you would lose me and many others. I am sure you will not get my vote next time. Thank you for the les-

By her act, Mrs. Morris has shown very poor "sportsmanship"; what an example for our young people. If I'm not mistaken, our democratic system of government allows you an opponent. We would be a poor place to live if no one ran for fear of reprisals, such as what Sammie did to Donna Daugherty.

Further, our new county attorney gave an official, public "okey dokey"; in other words, it is OK to retaliate against a fellow employee when you become the boss. What a Christian, moral thing to do. I wonder what the EEOC would say!

By the way, I voted for you too, Mr. County Attorney. I was wrong again! Second: Addressing the "recent shooting" - yes, I would be scared if someone were pointing a gun at me, as I have had a gun pointed at me. But at no time would I shoot someone 11 TIMES! To compound the problem, this young man was mentally ill. Imagine not allowing this young man's family into the house to HELP HIM and prevent a loss of life! And just because there were no procedure!!!

My gosh, some morals!! His family was outside. Imagine how those shots hurt and will now echo through their minds forever. They could not help because of procedure!!

Chief Flemins, there are many places for you to get information and help in formulating procedures. This is 1994. The mentally ill are no longer locked away. Plenty of information is available, if only at the library. MHMR is here also.

Seems like we have been down this road before. Blunders and mis-

Perhaps you sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair. Perhaps you sent a funeral spray, if so we saw it there. Perhaps you spoke the kindest words, as any friend could say, perhaps you were not there at all, just thought of us that day. # .et's take time on GATT

Why is there such a hurry to pass GATT/WTO during the lame-duck session? We have nothing to gain and everything to lose! We have until June of 1995 to pass this legislation. During the lame-duck session, it will be on "fast track," which prohibits any amendments or changes and forbids a filibuster as well as limits debate. It will be a straight up or down vote, all or nothing!

The "fast track" rules prevent the removal of sections that must be deleted, some of these being:

(1) The World Trade Organization (WTO) must be removed! This 14page charter would put the U.S. into a world government of trade, giving us one vote out of 123, the same voting power as Haiti or Cuba. Developing nations will have 83 percent of WTO votes. More than three-fourths of WTO members voted against the United States on more than half of U.N. votes in 1993. Unlike the United Nations, where we have veto power, in WTO we have none.

The WTO section is a treaty and not a trade agreement. It will subjugate American sovereignty to WTO contrary to what many advocates say! Why is the press so quick to sell out America? Why are so many willing to place us under world domination?

Article XVI, paragraph 4, states: "Each member shall ensure the conformity of its laws, regulations and administrative procedures with its obligations." Under this, our laws must conform to the rulings of WTO. Some have claimed that Congress has protected us by "reservations" or "exceptions" inserted in the implementation of legislation. However, that language has no legal effect since Article XVI of WTO, paragraph 5, states: "No reservations may be made in respect to any provisions of this agreement."

(2) Section 801 must be removed! This section gives a subsidy worth over $2 billion to the Washington Post, the Atlanta Constitution and several other insiders.

(3) Section 745, which authorizes the U.S. Treasury to eliminate the guaranteed minimum interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds, must be removed.

(4) Section 742 requiring every newborn baby to get an IRS taxpayer identification number at birth must be removed!

(5) Section 766, dealing with pension laws, must be removed. What does U.S. pension laws have to do with a trade bill anyway?

In 1947 the U.S. Senate rejected the attempt to put the U.S. in a world trade organization. President Truman did the same. "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread!" Let us be cautious and wise. It will do no harm to delay a few months.

Call or write your senators and representatives. Urge them to be thoroughly informed on every aspect of this legislation before they vote. The vote comes up in the House the last of November and in the Senate the first part of December.

A carload of thanks

It is dark in Chicago at 5:43 a.m. As I pull out of the hotel parking lot and head north up State street, I shiver in the cold. Later, as I exit the Congress Expressway I'm thankful for the heat that is now streaming form the heater. I realize that fall is here and winter won't be far behind.

The drive from downtown Chicago to O'Hare International Airport shouldn't take more than 30 or 40 minutes. I'm thankful for the light flow of traffic and grateful to head back to warm, sunny

The rental car I'm driving is quiet. I decide to leave the radio off. There will be time enough for news, music and noise when I arrive at the airport. Just now I'm thankful for the quiet.

As the shivers give way to the warmth, I find myself in a reflective, thankful mood. It has been a good 48 years. I've much to be thankful for.

A time for reflection

As I drive on toward the airport I begin to count my blessings. First, I think about my family. I have a loving wife of 24 years and a 17-year-old daughter who would make any father proud. I'm also thankful for our family's health. To the best of our knowledge we're doing pretty well. All of our in-laws-and-out-of-laws are productive, hard-working folks. My mother and mother-in-law have always been caring teachers for my wife and me. Their early guidance helped shape our present lives. We are thankful for our heritage.

I think about our friends; we are blessed in that area, too. We have make many friends and we have them scattered all around the country. It always amazes me how we can walk right into their homes and pick up where we left off last.

I'm also thankful for those with whom I work. My co-workers at the office — Ann, David, and Bill — always keep things going smoothly even when I'm gone. Their personal integrity, motivation and good attitudes are the reasons our clients are well served. I'm also blessed with a fine boss and a host of professional partners. Together we've made an impact on West Texas.

To all of those I've mentioned above and others I may have forgotten, I want to say a big, personal "Thank you." You're the ones who have made my life exciting and joy filled.

Let's get started

We shouldn't wait for Thanksgiving every year to get into a thankful mood. In fact, let's break the habit right now. For the rest of this year and all year long, let's try to be more thankful.

- Here is a list of places we might start:
- Thank someone for their courtesy. • Thank someone for their help.
- · Thank someone for their good attitude. Thank someone for making your job easy.
- Thank someone for their sincerity Thank someone for their dedication.
- Thank someone for their service.
- · Thank someone for their good advice. Thank someone for their honesty.
- · Thank someone for their friendship. • Thank someone for being sensitive.
- Thank someone for their leadership.

In Sony's case, the $5 billion purchase of the Columbia and TriStar studios five years ago was to feed the company's array of VCRs, wide-screen TVs, CD players and other electronic gizmos it hoped would dominate the multimedia age.

Cab Calloway dies at 86

Calloway, the prancing, dancing band leader whose shouts of "hi-deho" resounded from the stage of mances he Harlem's famed Cotton Club, has died. He was 86.

Calloway, who suffered a severe Hepster's stroke on June 12 at his home in Dictionary White Plains, died Friday night in a and Prof. Delaware nursing home with his Cab Callo-Calloway family at his side, said his wife, way's Nuffie.

Afterwards, she spent a quiet hour for the unhep. alone with him: "I put my head on his shoulder, and that was very healing," Mrs. Calloway said.

"He had two separate lives: His life onstage and his life with the stylish dresser, he was said to have family. When he closed the door on his dressing room, he came home as a husband, father and grandfather."

As a bandleader, singer, author, dancer and songwriter, Calloway performed for more than 60 years, from Chicago jazz joints to the Cotton Club, on Broadway and in Hollywood movies. His influence in the music world was huge.

Calloway was the man who hired an unknown Dizzy Gillespie and promoted the careers of Pearl Bailey and Lena Horne. He later became known to a younger generation through the 1980 hit film The Blues Brothers.

Even in old age, he was a marvel to watch - a veritable dervish who the other, his limbs and his mop of unruly hair flying in all directions as he flashed an enormous smile.

His trademark song was "Minnie the Moocher," and audiences would respond in kind when he sang the chorus of "hi-de-hi-de-ho." He said his scat refrains were the product of a faulty memory - he couldn't recall the words.

"I love being called a living legend. Sure, I love that," Calloway Minnie had a heart as big as a said in a 1985 interview.

PAMPA — The Top of Texas Bassmasters of Pampa held their last tournament for the year at Lake Graham on Nov. 5-6. The club weighed in a total of 15.92 pounds of bass.

First place went to Roy Alderson and Billy West with 6.61 pounds; Steve and Maxine Stauffacher were second with 3.79 pounds; Lynn Odom and Joe Millican, third, 3.32 pounds; Mike Young and Floyd Lott, fourth, 2.20 pounds.

The Big Bass weighed 2.53 pounds and was caught by Steve Stauffacher.

The tournament was sponsored by Hugoton Energy of Pampa.

The club's top six for 1994 were Roy Alderson, 71.26 pounds; Steve Stauffacher, 65.73 pounds; Billy West, 61.26 pounds; Mike Young, 55.51 pounds; Joe Millican, 48.13 pounds and Maxine

The club's next meeting will be Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. at Pampa Lovett Library.

The club will host a Casting for Kids event for young anglers from 7 to 14 years of age on Dec. 3, starting at 11 a.m. at the Pampa Mall.

All those interested are invited to participate.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — About the only thing that could have overshadowed a 2,000-yard rushing

Rashaan Salaam ran for 259 yards and two touchdowns to become major-college football's fourth 2,000-yard runner as No. 7 Colorado beat Iowa State 41-20 on Saturday. But the jubilation of the Buffaloes' locker room was replaced by shock and Coach Bill McCartney abruptly announced his resignation, effective after Colorado's bowl game. McCartney has compiled a 92-55-5 record in 13 seasons, including a 10-1 mark this year.

"I've been thinking about this for some time now," McCartney, 54, said. "I've been here 13 years. It's time. There are no negatives here."

McCartney made the announcement moments after his team generated 576 yards and set several records in downing the winless Cyclones.

Salaam, the nation's leading rusher and scorer, ioined Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders, Southern Cal's Marcus Allen and Nebraska's Mike Rozier, all of whom won the Heisman Trophy after passing 2,000 yards.

"It's just been a dream season," Salaam said. "Getting 2,000 is a good feeling. But it's all of us. It's something we can all look back on and be proud of, even though it's under my name. It means that a lot of hard work paid off."

The Buffaloes (6-1 Big Eight) were clinging to a 20-13 lead after three quarters before quarterback Kordell Stewart ran 23 yards for a score with 13:20 left and Salaam dashed 67 yards for another with 10:27 remaining.

Salaam, a junior, broke the 2,000-yard barrier on that run, giving him 2,055 for the season. He was mobbed by teammates and hoisted on their shoulders in the corner of the end zone.

"I was out of breath," Salaam said of his 67yarder. "The guys were saying, 'Strike the (Heisman) pose, strike the pose.' But that's not my

Iowa State (0-10-1, 0-6-1), which drew within 20-13 on Troy Davis' 99-yard kickoff return late in the third quarter — the longest in school history suffered its first winless season since the 1930 team

It was the final game at Iowa State for coach Jim Walden, who spent the game in the radio booth, having been suspended by the Big Eight for criticizing officials. Walden earlier announced his resignation effective at the end of

"I missed having him here," Cyclones offensive line coach Barry Wilson said of Walden. "He keeps us in our comfort zones."

Wilson said his team "tried everything defensively against Salaam that we could come up with, but we knew he was so explosive that he could outrun our kids. When he gets on your perimeter, he can literally shake and bake.'

Colorado freshman Herchell Troutman also scored twice for the Buffs.

Salaam, who ran 9 yards for a first-quarter score to put Colorado ahead 17-3, set up another score with a 40-yard run. He carried 29 times.

McCartney's announcement was unexpected. He informed his assistants and school officials Saturday morning and told his players after the

"Everyone broke down and cried," Salaam said. "Mac was the main reason I came to CU. He's been a great inspiration to me."

Stewart said he was confident "we'll all go out and play that bowl game for coach Mac. Our only desire is that he leaves in style. We'll make sure of that."

The teams traded early field goals, both set up by turnovers, but the Buffs went ahead 10-3 with 4:18 left in the opening period. Salaam ran 40 yards to the 1, and Troutman scored on the next play. Four minutes later, after Stewart had passed 37 yards to tight end Christian Fauria, Salaam scored on a 9-yard run.

Two second-quarter Colorado drives died at the Iowa State's 14 and 28 when fourth-down passes fell incomplete.

Salaam, who had 123 yards on 17 carries at halftime, fumbled early in the third quarter, setting up a Cyclones field goal. Iowa State then recovered an on-side kick but missed a long field goal.

A Colorado field goal made it 20-6, but Davis ripped up the middle for his scoring return 15 seconds later. It was the first Iowa State kickoff return for touchdown since 1976 and eclipsed the longest ever, a 96-yarder by Dick Howard against Kansas State in 1945.

Stewart set a Big Eight record for career total offense. He had 196 yards passing and 89 rushing for a total of 285 on Saturday, giving him 7,770, bettering the 7,749 of Oklahoma State's Mike Gundy from 1987-89. Salaam and Stewart became only the second set of teammates to have 2,000 yards rushing and 2,000 passing in the same season. Oklahoma State's Sanders and Gundy did it in 1988. Stewart joined Gundy as the only three-time 2,000-yard passers in Big Eight history.

Texas Tech routs Houston

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Their fans already were thinking Cotton Bowl, but the Red Raiders couldn't afford to ponder that prospect.

They can ponder it a little more now. After beating Houston 34-0 Saturday, Texas Tech needs just one more victory to ensure its first Cotton Bowl berth since 1939. Tech wins the Southwest Conference title and goes to Dallas for the Cotton Bowl with a victory over Texas Christian on Friday. If the Red Raiders lose to TCU, they still go to the Cotton Bowl if Baylor loses to Texas on Thanksgiving. Byron Hanspard rushed for 109 yards and two touchdowns and Zebbie Lethridge passed for 186 yards and scored one touchdown as the Red Raiders (6-4, 4-2 SWC) shut out their first opponent since Red Raiders coach Spike Dykes said the victory was a sweet one, especially in light of the Cotton Bowl pressure on the team. "The kids did a good job considering what they hear all week. Their concentration was excellent. They have done a good job of keeping everything in perspective," Dykes said. Texas Tech never has represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl since entering the SWC in 1960. Texas Tech faced St. Mary's of California in the Cotton Bowl in 1939.

Hanspard's third 100-yard game of the season gave him 648 yards this year, breaking Tech's freshman rushing record of 613 yards set by James Gray

Optimists celebrate 40 years

Sports Editor

Some folks probably thought W.A."Gip" Gipson and 36 other Pampa men had developed some kind of a fever when they formed the Optimist Boys Club back in March of 1954. After all, the city was overflowing with all kinds of clubs and civic organizations. Another club just wasn't needed.

Now, 40 years later, the Optimist Club is still going strong and the critics soon discovered Gipson and his group weren't out of their minds after all. Today, the club, located in a sports complex in the 600 block of East Craven, annually draws well over 1,000 youngsters to play baseball, basketball, football and girls' softball. The complex contains five ballparks, a gymnasium, meeting rooms, storage sheds and concession stand, all built by volunteers and personal and company contributions in money and equipment.

In the early days, Gipson himself the club would become.

"I was very much surprised the club grew like it did. We had people telling us 'we just wouldn't make it because we had enough civic clubs in town," said Gipson, a semi-retired barber. "That first year we had one Pony League team and two little league teams with 15 boys on a team. We were playing our games in the south part of town (near the Wheeler-Evans Elevator) and we ran out of space pretty quick. There was room for only two fields there and we ended up having fields scattered all over town. The next year we purchased the land where we're at now and starting building."

Gipson said it wasn't long before the club added basketball, football, boxing and wrestling to the program. The membership continued to grow and now the club can boast to having close to 150 members involved in coaching, umpiring, concessions and maintenance of the buildings and grounds. The club expanded in 1955 to include the "Opti-Mrs," a women's organization involved in promotional activities for the club.

The Pampa Optimists actually have two clubs — The Pampa was uncertain just how successful. Men's Club and the Pampa Youth Club (previously known as the Optimist Boys Club). To join the men's club a person isn't required to coach or umpire, but the men's club does control the youth club.

Through the years, the Optimists have been involved in other programs besides sports. Other programs have included the Oratorical Contest, Bicycle Safety Week, Christmas Shopping for the underprivileged and Respect for Law Week, just to name a few.

Longtime Optimist Club member James Davis said the club couldn't have survived without the support of the community.

The companies, the foundations and the people of Pampa have just been great to the club. We have a lot of companies that have made donations, but they never wanted it advertised," Davis said. "The peo-served as Master of Cermonies.

ple have a facility they can be proud of. There's been no tax dollars involved. It's all come out of peoples' own pockets."

Gipson, Newt Secrest and Herman Jeter are the only charter members who are currently active in the club.

"Newt played baseball for the Oilers (Pampa's professional baseball team of the 1940s and '50s) and several of the players joined the club and worked with the kids. That was something the kids really liked," Gipson said. "I only coached baseball that one year, but I umpired for several years. Me and Newt called a lot of games. I don't think Herman ever coached, but he sure did a lot of work for the club. It's hard telling how much money it cost him over the years. The three of us didn't have any boys of our own, but we liked baseball and we wanted to see the kids have something."

DALLAS (AP) - A truck mechanic overcame two electrical jolts to pull an 8-year-old boy from an underground barrel, then used CPR to revive him by the time paramedics

The mother of Justin Reed said he had no pulse and wasn't breathing when her neighbor, Chris Stevens, pulled her son from an underground barrel. Justin had fallen into the space while playing with friends.

"I really feel thankful for Chris," said Marilyn Reed, 33, of Dallas. "He was there, and he helped and he reacted real fast. If he hadn't been there, he (Justin) would have been gone."

The boy was released from Medical City Dallas Hospital on Saturday, a hospital official said.

Stevens, 36, said he would never have discovered the boy except that he has a taste for barbecued pork chops, and he had a habit of dumping his used charcoal briquettes into an underground barrel behind his apart-

When Stevens went out to empty his grill Thursday night, he said, he noticed that the lid of the barrel was ajar and that a boy's hands were sticking up out of the wet hole. It was a boy who lives in an apartment above Stevens'.

When Stevens grabbed Justin's hands to pull him up, he was hit with a jolt of electricity that knocked him backward, he said.

"I'm a welder, and I get shocked pretty much," he told The Dallas Morning News. "This was a pretty good hit. At least 220 volts. It threw me back."

But Stevens gathered his senses, reached down again, grabbed Justin by the shirt collar and pulled him out of the hole. The underground barrel contained an electrical line - and the power hit Stevens with another jolt of juice.

Stevens said the boy appeared to have stopped breathing, and had no pulse. His eyes were rolled up in his head. Stevens, though he had no training in emergency medical techniques, began cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"I'd never done CPR before," he said. "I just saw it on Rescue 911. I watch those shows all the time.'

Justin's pulse soon returned, but he wasn't breathing, so Stevens provided Justin vomited and began to cry. His first words, Stevens said, were "Don't tell, please don't tell."

Mike Foster, the fiance of Justin's mother, arrived while Stevens was administering CPR. Ms. Reed was upstairs in their apartment calling

"I picked his arm up, and he was gone," said Foster, 30. "I didn't feel his heart or nothing. I really think he was gone. When he woke up, his lips were white."

Foster said Justin told them later that he and a few friends had been playing on the barrel.

Jury strikes down SOS plan

Hays County has struck down the Save Our Springs ordinance that was approved by Austin voters to protect Barton Springs and the limestone aquifer that feeds it.

The Austin City Council is scheduled to meet with lawyers Tuesday to discuss a possible appeal.

The Save Our Springs ordinance also is being challenged in eight other lawsuits, including a federal court case filed by FM Properties, whose development along Barton Creek spawned the citizens' initiative that placed the SOS ordinance on the ballot two years ago.

The ordinance was approved 64 percent to 36 percent by voters in 1992, despite opposition from the real estate industry.

"This is not over and very clearly SOS is not dead," said council member Brigid Shea, a leader of the SOS initiative before her election. "I am convinced that my colleagues on the AUSTIN (AP) - A jury in nearby council who are firmly in support of water-quality protection for Barton Springs and Barton Creek will vote to appeal this."

The ordinance technically remains in force until Senior Judge John Forbis, who presided at the trial, issues a final judgment. He didn't indicate when he would do so.

Forbis also could rule on several other issues that were not considered by the jury, such as whether the SOS ordinance must be approved by the state to be effective and whether Hays County residents affected by the ordinance should have been allowed to vote on it.

State law didn't allow residents in Austin's extraterritorial jurisdiction to vote in city elections.

Without the SOS ordinance, new development in the Barton Springs watershed would be governed by a less-strict ordinance enacted by the council in 1991.

"I have also found absolutely authentic works I'd never have thought were O'Keeffes. My mind has been opened by that. When a work is questionable I have an advisory committee to turn to and we make a decision."

The dating of works is important for art history, Lynes says. "I can see something that I think looks like 1939-40, but it is indisputably 1945.

"I learn a lot from people's comments. They say they remember O'Keeffe saying 'I've got to paint that church' at a certain time, so we know the church was not painted before then.

"It is very difficult sometimes to figure out the years in a work's history — there are different accounts, complicated by different owners. Also some dealers broker paintings, so there may be more than one 'owner' at any time.

"I have had access to a lot of O'Keeffe's letters. Parts of them will be published in a 'comments' form in the catalog, when they are part of the documentation."

In early June Lynes went to the

"We knew she was born in Sun Prairie. There's some confusion about which school she was at. I was working with the archivist at Sun Prairie, and found a bunch of records and archives.

"I found the names of her teachers, used the telephone books in the Milwaukee-Madison-Chicago area, and pinpointed her presence in a Madison high school. I found some early works, from 1902-1903 and 1904, mostly watercolors, done in grade school and high school ...

"It was fascinating to get a feel of where she was raised."

Boys as well as girls often victims of rape

By GOOD HOUSEKEEPING For AP Special Features

Parents of teen-age boys probably do not realize that it is not just girls who are victims of sexual assault and rape — boys also may be targets and victims.

Statistics from the Bureau of Justice show that 10,000 males age 12 years and over reported being raped in 1992, Jill Jones wrote in an article in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, and that figure probably represents less than 5 percent of the true number.

"Adolescent males are unaware of their potential to be targets of sex crimes and reluctant to report these crimes when they happen," said Men's Resource Center in Portland, of aggression rather than sex.

That is not surprising, according to Nicholas Groth, a Florida psychologist and author.

"It's little wonder most young victims remain silent, given the stigma attached to sexual assault," Groth said. "Rape implies powerlessness, an inability to defend oneself. This goes against the popular image of masculinity."

A boy may wonder why the rapist chose him, worry that somehow this indicates he is gay. He may worry that people will believe he is gay if he tells them what happened. Typically, a teen-age boy will know his assailant — at least casually. Drugs and- or alcohol are usually involved, not only in making the boy easier to overpower, but also ensuring that he will be too ashamed to tell his parents.

To protect your son from an assault, you must make him realize that he could be in peril and advise him on how to avoid being a target.

Give your son the same information about rape that you would give a daughter. Stress that there is safety in his. numbers and warn him about anyone who may try to maneuver him into an isolated situation.

Understand that this is not a gay problem. Rapists look for vulnerability - often with no regard to the gender of their victim. As with David Leventer, a therapist at the assault on women, the crime is one

Let your son know that there is nothing he cannot discuss with you. If he thinks sex is a taboo topic, he certainly won't tell you if he has been molested or raped. If your son tells you he has been

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You have published letter from women who were involved with (or married to) men who had drug problems. Perhaps my story can be used to warn other women.

I, too, fell in love with a man who had a history of drug abuse. His choice of drug was heroin, and it nearly destroyed my life. I met him when I was 18. For the next four years, I tried to keep him off drugs. He went through a methadone program several times. I remember the nights I spent in hospital emergency rooms when he has OD'd. I begged him to stay away from heroin and his drug-addicted friends, but he wouldn't lis-

He spent time in jail for crimes he committed trying to support his habit. Of course, he always left jail "clean"— but then he'd use drugs, and the cycle would begin again.

I married him when he was "clean" -- or at least I thought he was. Money started to disappear from my purse. He would miss work and be gone for days with no explanation. Checks from our joint checking account began bounce. Then one day when I was sorting laundry, I found a needle and syringe in the pocket of his work jacket. That night we had the biggest fight we ever had, and I finally faced the fact that the love of his life.was heroin.

So, Abby, please advise young women to run as fast as they can away from these men. They'll never change. Love is not enough to keep an addict clean. I know. It has been 20 years since I fell in love with that hopelessly addicted man.

He has been dead for seven years. He was found on a Detroit city street. The coroner said his body was full of drugs.

At his funeral, as I looked at the almost unrecognizable body of the man I had loved for so many years, I thought to myself, "Well, at least the monkey is off your back for good now!"

But even after seven years, I still jump when the telephone rings at night, thinking it's the hospital, the police or the morgue. Sisters: Get away from these men. Don't let them ruin your lives. The longer you stay, the longer you enable them to be addicts, and the harder it will be for you to walk away. Heroin is the destroyer of lives - not just Worse yet, many of these addicts carry the AIDS virus. Seek support from friends and family, your church or a support group; but don't waste your life trying to save or help addicts. Run like hell in the opposite direction, and help yourself to a new life.

Planning ahead is the key. It is best to defrost your turkey in the refrigerator. The rule of thumb is a minimum of 24 hours of defrost done so. time for every five pounds of turkey. Therefore, it can take 4-5 days to defrost a 20-pound turkey. A completely thawed bird will last for an additional 1 to 2 days in the refriger- to the cooking time.

ator once defrosted. If you need to speed up the defrost time, it is safe to defrost the bird in a large sink of cold water. Submerge the wrapped bird in cold water. *Check or change the water every 30 minutes to make sure the water remains cold. Allow 30 minutes per pound to defrost this way.

NEVER defrost a turkey by leaving it at room temperature! (2) How long should I roast the turkey? Roughly 15-18 minutes per pound for an unstuffed bird and 18-24 minutes per pound for a stuffed bird. Have your oven preheated to 325 degrees F.

Use of a meat thermometer to determine doneness is recommended. A whole turkey is done when the temperature reaches 180 degrees F. in the inner thigh. A breast is done at 170 degrees F. The juices should run clear. Stuffing temperature should reach at least 165 degrees F.

(3) What do I do if the turkey is done an hour ahead of schedule? It is safe to hold a turkey in the oven at a reduced temperature. Use a tic: meat thermometer to verify that the bird is done. Keep the thermometer

You will need to lower your oven emperature. Start by moving your oven temperature to 200 degrees F. Adjust the temperature of the oven to assure that the temperature of the turkey never drops below 140

Do not keep opening and closing the oven door to baste the bird or a shallow roasting pan. You may check its progress. This will only lower the oven temperature and add

(5) Can you roast the turkey the day before?

Yes. However, for safety reasons, the cooked bird must be deboned before being refrigerated. The carved meat should be stored in shallow containers. The meat then can be reheated in the regular oven the next day for approximately 10 minutes per pound.

To prevent the meat from drying out, add either the leftover meat drippings, gravy or turkey broth, and cover with foil.

DO NOT partially cook a turkey the day before. This can actually increase the possibility of bacteria (6) How low of a temperature can I cook my turkey?

Cooking below 325 degrees F. is unsafe because low temperatures permit the bird and stuffing to remain in the "danger zone" (40 degrees to 140 degrees) too long. While in the "danger zone," bacteria can grow and produce some heat resistant toxins.

the classic "Swan Lake," producerdirector Richard Rich's full-length moonlight shines upon her wings. animated film, "The Swan Princess," offers a nice little twist to the typical fairy tale. Mirroring real life, this production acknowledges that royal couples can have their share of problems.

The film begins with the matchmaking of baby Princess Odette with toddler Prince Derek, heirs to immense but separate kingdoms. They are brought together each summer for extended "playdates" with the hope that they will marry some

As the two grow older, they become both competitive and combative. But as Derek leaves childhood and becomes a man, he is struck by Odette's beauty and he proposes. In a happy twist, Odette refuses, because she feels Derek loves her only because of her physical appearance. When she demands love to her, he is at a complete loss

At this point in the story, adults take a deep breath, hoping against hope that the princess will show that she has some brains behind her good

While Odette is confined to a lake in an enchanted forest, she befriends a French frog named Jean-Bob (John Cleese), a sluggish turtle named Speed and a puffin. There are some lively and humorous scenes as the animals join forces with the princess so that she can be reunited with the prince. By now, the audience is thoroughly perplexed: What makes her decide she loves the prince now? Is it only because she is being held hostage and needs someone to rescue her? Sadly, it seems as if this is the answer.

Despite the weak attempt at combating sexism, it is still rampant in the film. The prince wins the princess back with a terrifying battle (quite scary for young children.)

While the plot may have problems, the film is a visual delight. The vibrant colors and rich details that he give her other reasons for his (almost every image was hand-colored or drawn), combined with soft Impressionistic-style backgrounds, are impressive.

Seinfeld's childhood love of Abbott and Costello results in TV special

By BOB THOMAS Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It all started in the late 1950s when Jerry Seinfeld was a Brooklyn kid staring at reruns of old TV comedy series.

"Watching Abbott and Costello was one of the things that really got me interested in humor as a child," he says. "It was the purest humor. Sitcoms and stuff weren't really pure. This was burlesque- and vaudeville-based style.'

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello learned their craft on the raucous stages of burlesque houses throughout the country. Jerry Seinfeld earned his education in a different school: doing standup in comedy clubs. Yet he has been able to borrow from Bud and Lou for his hit comedy series Seinfeld.

"We've always taken little bits that reminded us of Abbott and Costello in ways that only we would notice," he said. "Little turns and attitudes Jason (Alexander) and I try to do.

The comedian's adulation finds expression in Abbott and Costello Meet Jerry Seinfeld, a one-hour NBC special Thanksgiving night. Seinfeld narrates the show, which includes Buck Privates and a few other films, but emphasizes the pair's live-TV specials and their 52 filmed shows, all made in the early

"I was more fond of the TV stuff," Seinfeld said. "The comedy seemed to be more pure, especially that syndicated series they did for two years."

The special offers a sanitized version of the Abbott and Costello saga, ignoring the fact that they were at odds during most of their successful years and finally broke up the act in bitterness.

The show suffers from the MTV school of editing, the rapid cuts precluding development of the routines, But at least "Who's on First?" is shown in all its glory.

"In the making of the special, I probably saw it 25 times, and I a lot of money was spent to get that things. particular version of the routine. I ing performance of a great rou-

"I was never a fan of Martin and Lewis. You can't compare Laurel and Hardy, because that wasn't the classic straight man-comic team. There was enormous skill on both sides of (the A&C) equation of straight man and comic. Great material, and years and years of polish.'

Now in its sixth year, Seinfeld continues collecting top ratings and critical applause. How does he do

Our office is happy to announce that we are currently fitting a completely in-thecanal hearing instrument. This remarkable new hearing instrument is discreet and comfortable to wear. It's placement deep in the canal of the ear (see illustration at top) makes it barely visible. Others may not recognize you are wearing a hearing aid.

The Miniscopic is the smallest hearing instrument ever manufactured by NU-EAR. Call now to schedule an appointment for your hearing assessment and consultation. Hearing tests are for hearing aid selection and not for medical diagnosis of hearing loss.

WHEAT—(BULL)

OUTLOOK: The demand problem we've talked about for the past month - the virtual lack of significant export business since September – is still hanging around like an unwanted relative. It looks like our major customers have played this market like a fiddle.

I believe China will be in for sig-Their crop shortfall points to big imports. They sat and watches prices rise from harvest till about a month ago. I think they missed the market, but they still have one weapon left. That's the ability to "jawbone" the price lower. (Recently, a top Chinese official made a big noise about the market being too high and that they wouldn't buy any wheat for the balance of the year.)

Well, the price isn't so high anymore. Plus sources tell us the Egyptians (who want to purchase up to 2 million metric tons) will get reacts to the news that's important. fresh export subsidy allocations soon. And when the Russians get their credit package, you can be assured this year they'll use it for food (wheat), not feed.

CORN—(BULL/BEAR)

OUTLOOK: The crop report conbin-buster.

I've talked in this column about the potential for this year's crop to be above 10 billion, but I don't think many people believed the USDA would post a number this big. But they did, and the market closed 2¢ higher the day of the report.

So what does it all mean? Well, it's not the news, but how the market The reaction was good, and it makes me a bit more bullish.

I think we can thank the loan program and good feed demand for placing a solid base under this market. On the other hand, I can't place the bull in the box yet, because the tained price surge. Rather, look for a choppy market, perhaps a slight upward bias into the new year.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Last week we discussed selling futures to procarrying charges built into the futures. An alternative strategy is to sell calls against stored corn.

For example, if you sell May 240 calls for 10¢/bu., and the market ends up under the 240 level at option While the 380s still have some expiration in mid-April, you keep

The information and recommendations presented herein are believed to be reliable; however, changing market variables can change price outlooks. Neither Pampa News nor George Kleinman assume liability for their use. Use this section as a guide only. Futures and options trading can involve risk of loss. higher than 240, you keep the 10¢, but since you will be assigned a sale at 240, in effect you're accepting a futures price equivalent of 250. If this price is attractive to you, do this with a portion of your production.

Traders: I've been looking to buy December futures on dips under $2.07, but since it appears the market won't reach this level, this recommendation is canceled. I don't see the market going much of anywhere for now, so option sellers can look to sell the March 230 puts and calls to firmed what we know - this crop is a collect a total of 14¢. Call for details. CATTLE—(BULL)

OUTLOOK: The last few weeks the cattle market has been fairly directionless. This isn't bad action for this time of year as we approach the Thanksgiving holiday.

Actually, this flat action is taking place at levels as much as $5/cwt. above where the cash was about a month ago. This isn't bad at all. In fact, just as the retailer steps up his beef demand post holiday, and the packers get more aggressive in bids for inventory, the cattle numbers won't be as plentiful as they have been. This should translate into prices moving back to the mid-70

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Since the trend in cattle prices is up, we've preferred the options to futures or By MICHAEL LANDWEBER forward contracting as a means of price protection. "True hedgers" own the December 68 puts, and "selective hedgers" own the December 70 puts. These options give us downside price insurance, while leaving upside potential open.

To hedge feeder needs, cattle feeders have purchased the November feeder contract at 72, the January under 72 and the March at about 71. The Jan. has gained on the Nov., but they've all gained in value. Look to see the Nov. at 75 or higher. Hold the backs for now.

Cow/calf operators: Since the market still appears to be trending higher, we would still consider remaining un-hedged (if that's a word?) for now.

Traders: You are long November feeders at 7260 or lower. The risk point is 7280, and since we're running out of time, we'll lower our profit objective to 75.

You are also long the December futures under 6895 and have moved cent higher than a year earlier. United States in 1995 also are which has suffered the risk point up to 6895, with an Favorable feeder cattle prices and expected to fall off slightly to about induced losses. objective of 72.

Elimination of tobacco price support appears dead under new Congress

By ESTES THOMPSON Associated Press Writer

WILSON, N.C. (AP) - Mention the notion of eliminating the price support system for tobacco in this tobacco-rich town and expect one answer: No way.

This is the place where bumper stickers proclaim "Enjoy Smoking" and state politicians flock every fall to help open the state's largest tobacco market. Nearly every business depends on tobacco.

Rose, D-N.C., proposed eliminating the price support system, which is financed by farmers' fees and administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He suggested that the government pay farmers for their allotments, then allow the free market to govern future sales.

Several dramatic changes have occurred since Rose first floated his idea: A majority of Republicans were elected to the House; cigarette companies are negotiating to buy 700 million pounds of surplus tobacco; and health care reform and its higher cigarette tax stalled.

"Charlie Rose's idea is dead," said Rep.-elect Walter B. Jones Jr., a North Carolina Republican. Jones' district is rich in tobacco, as is all of eastern North Carolina. Tobacco remains the largest cash crop in the state.

'It's not going to help tobacco families," Jones said. "We've got to look at the long-term future of tobac-

U.S. sheep inventories forecast to continue decline

sheep inventories are expected to decline by up to 15 percent in 1995 and total herd numbers could drop below 8.5 million head at the beginning of the year, the Agriculture Department says.

The continued decline in U.S. sheep numbers has been attributed to a phasing out of a government wool incentive program for domestic growers.

Stock sheep slaughter levels were even with the previous year for the first 10 months of 1994. However, because breeding inventories were down by 11 percent at the beginning of the year, the maintained slaughter rates suggest that breeders are reducing their flocks.

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's little mystery to words - tell much about what he believes and what he wants

The Georgia Republican, architect of the GOP House takeover that will make him speaker next year, has been a rhetorical provocateur since his arrival in 1979.

His words have inspired and divided, enraged and illuminated.

In his strategist mode, Gingrich has been prodding his. party for years to get out of its defeatist, minority habits.

Some of his advice: "We must master the art of dominating the headlines," he told a Republican women's group in 1985. "Running as the people who will protect the past ain't Gingrich said he intends to cool some of his fiery speech as speaker, though the day after the election he Newt Gingrich as he ascends to the speakership of the was calling the White House staff "left-wing elitists" House. His own words - cascades and bullet-clips of and President Clinton and his wife, Hillary, "counterculture McGovernicks.'

Over the years, much of Gingrich's rhetoric has centered on the House and the Democrats who are losing control of it for the first time in four decades.

"The problems of the U.S. House and Senate are much more fundamental and much more dangerous to your values than you (Republicans) have any notion of," he said on Oct. 13, 1987. "The next administration ought to look up here and recognize that Capitol Hill is not currently dominated by reasonable, normal people."

And two years later: "As long as we retain 99 percent re-election of incumbents, we're going to have scoundrels, because power does corrupt.

That same year, he told the Christian Science Monitor, "I didn't come here to pleasantly rise on an escalator of self-serving compromises." It was a reflection on his controversial - and successful - campaign the year before to bring down Speaker Jim Wright on ethics vio-

after the Iran-Contra affair. "It's essentially a sobering but not a scandalous report," Gingrich said of the Tower Commission Report on Feb. 26, 1987. "He is not going to regain our trust and our faith easily," he said of Reagan, but added that "the country does not want to see him destroyed."

A sampling of his views on other figures: "It's not that Dukakis isn't a patriot. It's that Dukakis is nuts. His value system has no relation to reality," on the 1988 Democratic presidential nominee in a pre-election speech to the California Republican

"He's clearly the leading intellectual House Republican of my lifetime. It's like losing Theodore Roosevelt," he said in December of the same year, reflecting on Jack Kemp's impending departure from the

- "Clinton sort of goes after whatever he thinks of next. There's no discipline. It's maddening to get the president to focus his schedule. But you've got to work with the human being you've got. He makes up for it by his enormous energy, his enormous zest for the game, from an Oct. 26, 1993 breakfast, describing the joint GOP-White House effort to pass the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Of himself, Gingrich has said that he was "pretty weird as a kid" (Jan. 3, 1985 interview in the Washington Post). And furthermore:

"In the land of pure process, the principled man is a heretic." December 1990, after having tried to kill the Bush administration's tax-raising deficit-reduction plan.

Gingrich was a severe skeptic of warming relations. between the United States and former Soviet Union. In 1984 he wrote in his book Window of Opportunity that 'many analysts feel that we are entering a period during which the Soviet Union will have enough power to pursue adventurist policies around the world without fear of American response."

The following year, he said an approaching meeting: between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev was "the most dangerous summit for the West since Adolph Hitler met with (Neville) Chamberlain in 1938 at Munich."

Gingrich uses similar apocalyptic rhetoric about today's social problems. "It is impossible to maintain civilization with 12-year olds having babies, with 15year olds killing each other, with 17-year olds dying of AIDS, and with 18-year olds ending up with diplomas they can't even read," he said this month in a typical formulation.

And campaigning before the Nov. 8 election; Gingrich linked politics to a highly publicized family murder case. "I think the mother killing her two children in South Carolina vividly reminds every American how sick the society is getting and how much we have to have change," he said.

Fish design leads to test of 'Robotuna' submarine

By JON MARCUS Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) -When engineers began casting around for a more efficient means of driving submarines, they spied on nature.

And so, after three years of research, scientists have created an unmanned sub shaped like a fish. A bluefin tuna, to be precise. Robotuna, they call it.

"Sixty million years of evolution have made this the epitome of high-speed motion," said David S. Barrett, a graduate student in ocean engineering who is developing the robot fish.

dubbed Charlie, made its maiden voyage July 4.

It has 41 polystyrene ribs, compared to 48 ribs in a real tuna. Its 'tendons" are made of stainlesssteel aircraft cables and its skin of latex, foam and Lycra in a sort of neon-blue California beach design that makes it easier to see during

It swims gracefully down a 110foot testing tank, its tail oscillating and its body bending to cut down on drag, exactly like a living fish.

"It kind of startles me at times," said Barrett. "It's amazingly biological."

To accomplish this, designers camped out at the New England Aquarium's tuna research tank and built a scale model that hangs by its tail in the lab. They use a pool in MIT's Department of Ocean Engineering where models of most U.S. Navy and many America's Cup boat designs were

But Robotuna far exceeds the efficiency of sails or propellers.

-"What we're trying to do is achieve maximum watts of thrust going out for watts coming in,"

Unmanned submarines used for research have a restricted range because of their limited power supply. One solution is to improve the supply, but "nobody likes the idea of a totally autonomous sub with a nuclear generator," Barrett said. "What if it washed up on Hampton Beach? So the option is better propulsion." Within five years, engineers believe they can construct 15-foot, fully autonomous, tuna-shaped underwater submarines to carry sonar, navigation equipment and testing instruments to map the ocean floor and find the sources of underwater pollution.

They even could collect specimens through their. "mouths" and The 4-foot-long prototype, store them in their "stomachs." The projected cost is $50,000 each; so far, the research has been partly underwritten by the Navy.

> "We could throw it off the dock in Charlestown and tell it to find out what's out there and come back in three months," Barrett

> For now, the tuna is connected to a carriage that supplies its power. Its movements still are being studied from the "bridge" of the testing tank, where one computer monitor is labeled with the word "TUNA" scrawled on a piece of masking tape. From there, researchers can monitor its estimated 137 trillion possible motions. The room is filled with biology textbooks.

> "It's a big enough accomplishment just to make it swim in a straight line," said Barrett.

> Whether people ever would be able to travel in tuna-styled submarines is another question because of the difficulty in pressurizing a flexible hull.

> Barrett chuckles at the idea, although he keeps a plastic model of a fish-like minisub from the television series seaQuest on his

"That's Hollywood," he said.

After 15 years of war, Afghanistan sinks deeper into misery as the world forgets

EDITOR'S NOTE: The savage war in Afghanistan is nearing its 15th anniversary in December, but it has largely been forgotten by the world. Every day rival factions battle for control of Kabul in a bitter power struggle that has made life a living hell for the beleaguered residents of the capital.

By GREG MYRE Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) - Call it the Kabul

wake-up call.

Well before the sun rises over the jagged, snowcapped mountains of the Hindu Kush, the gunmen of Kabul fire their screeching rockets. They unleash a mighty thunder, jolt the population from slumber and send hearts racing into overdrive.

By daybreak, jet fighters are roaring through the skies, machine guns are crackling and the long-suffering people of Kabul are braced for another nightmarish day of urban warfare in one of the most brutal wars in the world.

Some of the most intense day-to-day combat in the world is in the Afghan capital, where rebellious Prime Minister Gulbuddin Hekmatyar and his ally, warlord Rashid Dostum, reignited a simmering civil war with a blistering assault on the capital at 4 a.m. last New Year's Day. The guns have blazed ever since.

Despite the relentless rocket attacks, Hekmatyar's troops have been pushed back several miles to the southern and eastern fringes of the city and have virtually no chance of driving President Burhanuddin Rabbani from the Presidential Palace.

The sheer routineness of the stalemated war is best illustrated by the daily battles in the southwestern corner of the city. The president's men are fighting from the abandoned Dehmazang Prison, separated from Hekmatyar's forces by a few hundred yards and crumbling buildings that now look like ancient ruins.

The acting commander of the presidential force, Syed Kadar Shah, lives and works in a dank, cramped former prison cell. Shafts of light filter through the window bars and highlight the smoke from the cigarettes that never leave his

Incessant bursts of gunfire drown out his words, yet he sits like a man at a picnic, his legs casually crossed as he speaks to an Associated Press reporter about the roaring battle across the

"This is normal. The shooting has been like this here every day for the past seven weeks," said Shah. "When the rockets land in the streets, people are killed all the time. But we are safe

His words fail to reassure. Every wall of the prison has been hit. Many have collapsed into heaps of rubble, or have gaping holes punched by mortars and rockets.

Shah is not worried. He pulls back his right sleeve to show several dark scars left by shrapnel. He points to his left shoulder where a bullet once ripped off a chunk of flesh.

Now 37, Shah was a young man when he became a guerrilla in the war to evict Soviet troops from Afghanistan. That enemy has been vanquished and now he is a prominent commander in the presidential army. Yet Shah finds himself barricaded inside a prison under constant attack and without a clue as to when he will get

He is a prisoner of war, a metaphor that extends to most everyone in Afghanistan.

The Islamic holy warriors, or mujahedeen, were national beroes and somewhat united when they drove out Soviet forces in 1989 and toppled a communist Afghan government in April 1992.

The ferociously independent guerrillas quickly turned their guns on each other in a fight for control of Kabul. Nine separate factions are involved in the civil war, and today the fighters are widely reviled as ruthless killers by helpless civilians, who account for most of the city's estimated 30,000 dead and wounded this year.

No faction is powerful enough to win an outright military victory and all peace efforts have collapsed. All factions want an Islamic government, and the feud is seen as little more than a raw struggle for power among a handful of warlords.

Hekmatyar, a fiery Islamic fundamentalist, was named prime minister last year in an attempted compromise, but he has yet to set foot in Kabul. He wants Rabbani replaced as president by a neutral interim government that would ing.

Afghanistan from his base in neighboring killing Muslims."

Pakistan in a bid to reconcile the positions, but the forecast is for continued fighting.

Soldiers on both sides are dug in and rarely risk ground assaults, preferring to heave rockets at one another from a safe distance, though they often miss their targets.

The front lines seldom change, which allows Hekmatyar to maintain his headquarters in Charasyab, only 15 miles south of the Presidential Palace in downtown Kabul.

It is the civilians who suffer.

Mohammed Ajmal, 12, has been lying in the Indira Gandhi Children's Hospital for a month with shrapnel embedded in his chest. He was flying a kite in his yard when a rocket hit.

The doctors have no plans to operate at present because the main chest surgeon has left the country and the hospital lacks oxygen required for such surgery.

"We haven't seen kindness from any of the military groups," said Shah Jahn, Mohammed's mother. "All the military sides are our enemies."

More than 250,000 people - one-fourth of Kabul's population - have fled the city, most settling in refugee camps on rocky, windswept plains near the eastern city of Jalalabad.

Almost all foreign organizations have pulled out of Kabul, save a few determined aid groups, led by the International Red Cross.

The Red Cross' administrative house was so badly damaged by shelling that the group had to move earlier this year. Its cars have been hijacked on the presidential side of the front. On Hekmatyar's side, Red Cross food and medicine convoys have been stopped from entering the Peter Stocker, head of the Red Cross delegation, said his group is now out of 30 of 180 essential items for their medical work.

"The knife is to our neck," said Stocker. "We spend weeks negotiating with one commander. Then he's not there when our trucks come through and they get held up."

Rabbani's nominal government barely functions, there is no formal economy and food prices have skyrocketed. The city's commercial center, along the Kabul River in the southeast, has been smashed into a huge pile of brown bricks. It is devoid of people, except for shepherds who bring their flocks to nibble on the grass along the river bank.

But Afghans are legendary survivors and have adapted their behavior to deal with rockets.

When shells begin pounding one area, a street will clear instantly. Shop owners close their shutters. Vegetable sellers push their carts of tomatoes and carrots around the corner. Three streets away business carries on uninterrupted.

But the main business of Kabul is still fight-
