LEFORS — Lefors city government officials are currently searching for a new city secretary and a new utilities superintendent.

Phyllis Crutcher and Mike Steele tendered their resignations for those respective positions last Wednesday. The resignations are effective this Friday.

Lefors City Council members accepted the resignations at a special meeting Monday night and began accepting applications at that time.

The deadline for applications is Oct. 9 at 5 p.m. Also that day is the council's regularly scheduled meeting at 7 p.m.

Steele had recently been charged with not performing his job by several city residents, including City Marshal Rocky Stewart. Steele denied those charges.

He was unavailable for comment this morning.

Crutcher indicated that she resigned because she has another job lined up.

Council member J.C. Callaway said the city will have a temporary replacement work from Friday until a new secretary is hired.

PAMPA — City of Pampa landfill hours will switch to the winter schedule Oct. 1, according to Sanitation Director Rick Stone.

Operating hours are 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. six days a week. The landfill is closed on Sunday.

The hours will remain in effect until April 1, 1996.

VICTORIA (AP) — The Victoria City Council has scheduled a meeting next week on a proposal that would prohibit anyone under 18 to buy or possess tobacco products — from cigarettes and cigars to chewing tobacco and snuff.

Unlike a draft earlier this month by Mayor Pro Tem Taylor Starkey, this proposal puts less responsibility on stores and clerks to prevent such sales. The stiffest fine is for the underage person caught buying tobacco products.

"What this is doing is shifting the fines to those who are actually using the tobacco products illegally," Starkey said.

Council members refused to support the first plan because they felt it put too much responsibility on the businesses and clerks.

AUSTIN (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, one of Texas' most notorious death row inmates, has lost another round at the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

But his lawyer, Danny Burns of Fort Worth, says he doesn't expect Lucas' Monday execution date to be carried out because he still has appeals to pursue in federal court.

City rejects PEDC budget in split vote

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

A special meeting is set for noon Thursday so Pampa city commissioners may reconsider the Pampa Economic Development budget rejected in a split vote Tuesday.

The proposed $179,497 budget, adopted by PEDC board of directors Monday, was rejected in a three-to-two vote during a city commission meeting Tuesday evening. The budget year begins Sunday. Without city approval, the agency may make only emergency expenditures, according to City Attorney Don Lane.

The budget barely made it to the floor for consideration. Mayor Bob Neslage called for a motion on the budget three times before Commissioner Faustina Curry moved to accept the budget as presented. It was seconded by Neslage. Voting against the budget were Commissioners Jeff McCormick, Robert Dixon and McCormick.

No PEDC board or staff members were present when the vote was taken. During the work session, however, PEDC Executive Director Jack Ippel and board President Vic Raymond were present.

Ippel told commissioners about recent attendance at a meat industry trade show, membership on two economic development committees, foreign prospects for beef and pork export, a November export seminar planned for Pampa, an end of October trade show for the auto, truck and recreational vehicles after-sale market, and a prospective tenant for the Hughes Building.

Raymond said today he had no idea the city commission was displeased with PEDC because no criticism was expressed during their Monday meeting which several commissioners attended nor at the Tuesday pre-meeting work session.

Ippel and PEDC secretary Wayne Stribling could not be reached this morning.

Commissioners made their feelings clear Tuesday.

"It's just a ... well, it's kind of displeasure, nothing really about the budget. I just feel like we're not going the right direction," said Dixon.

"I'd like to see more enthusiasm on the part of PEDC. I'd like to see more creative thinking. I think we've got to the point where we've got to try different things. We've got to be more creative in our thinking. I think these restrictions, there are ways I think we can be creative and bring new jobs, new business and enthusiasm here. ... The commission had high hopes when we sold (an economic development corporation) to (the citizens) two or three years ago," he said.

The project — which passed overwhelmingly at the time — has been a disappointment, he said.

"Maybe it can't be done. I'd rather us try and fail than not try at all," Dixon said.

"I'm very disappointed that they failed to give any indication they would give economic consideration to the Celebration of Lights," the commissioner said. "I feel like they want to help but I get the feeling they don't. I'm probably going to get crucified ... I'm very enthusiastic about the Celebration of Lights," he said. (See related story this page.)

Curry, who voted for the budget, said she felt the budget should be presented so the public can get a feel for what the commission thinks. The budget is not a bad budget, Curry said, and was a budget she could support.

However, Curry said, she was not satisfied with Ippel's earlier explanation of PEDC activities, though she said she does not regularly attend meetings.

Pampa United Way launches annual fund-raising campaign

It takes 150 volunteers to tell the world about the good guys — 16 local service agencies, said Pampa United Way campaign chairman Chuck White Tuesday.

He was joined at the United Way kick off luncheon at Pampa Country Club by Marilyn Morris, president of United Way of Texas.

"I find it's folks like you who are the future of Texas ... you are what a caring Texas is all about," Morris said.

The campaign goal is $306,000. Allocations total $255,400 — $9,000 more than 1995, said Executive Director Katrina Bigham.

The total budget — which includes $33,251 for administration, $14,000 in lost pledges, $2,295 to United Way of America, $1,010 to United Way of Texas — totals $305,956.

Agencies receiving United Way funding and their 1996 allocation: Texas Plains Girl Scouts, $20,000; Pampa Sheltered Workshop, $15,000; Boy Scouts, Golden Spread, $25,000; Big Brothers/Big Sisters, $15,000; Southside Senior Citizens, $11,000; Community Day Care, $27,900; Gray County Latch Key, $8,000; Texas Panhandle Mental Health, $10,000; American Red Cross, $31,500; Salvation Army, $31,500; Genesis House, $9,000; Pastoral Counseling Center, $3,200; Gray County Child

Marilyn Morris

Protective Services, $4,300; High Plains Epilepsy, $4,000; Pampa Meals on Wheels, $19,000; Tralee Crisis Center, $21,000.

United Way board of directors are Joe Kyle Reeve, Kim Hill, Bill O'Brien, Bob Eskridge, Jane Steele, David Cory, Jack McCavit, Randy Watson, Karen Heare, Chuck White, Porter Briggs, Bob Marx, Marilyn McClure and Curt Beck.

Check in times for volunteers are set for 5 to 6 p.m. Oct. 5, 12, 26 and Nov. 5 at Pampa Community Building. A noon check-in is set for Oct. 19 at Danny's Market.

City gets composting program grant

The city of Pampa's composting program will get a boost thanks to a $10,000 grant from the North Rolling Plains Resource Conservation and Development Area Council.

The city is participating in a demonstration project with the RC and D council to show how compost can be used on cropland fields to help reduce erosion and pollution. Pampa was selected as a demonstration site due to the city's high quality composting operation, according to John Crowell of the agency.

North Rolling Plains RC&D

council is a 501c3 non profit organization that promotes community development and natural resource conservation in a 10 county area of the eastern Panhandle. Joe Wheeley represents Gray County on the board of directors.

The grant will be used by the city for expansion of the composting program. The grant is part of a statewide demonstration program of the United States Department of Agriculture - Natural Resources Conservation Service with similar sites at Lufkin, Big Springs and the Farmer-Stockman Farm Show in Lubbock.

Funds for the project are provided by the Environmental Protection Agency's 319 H Program. State agencies contributing to the project include the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board and the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission in Austin.

North Rolling Plains RC&D covers Ochiltree, Lipscomb, Roberts, Hemphill, Gray, Wheeler, Donley, Collingsworth, Briscoe and Hall counties.

Celebration of Lights project considered in rejection of PEDC proposed budget

Pampa Economic Development Board's support for the holiday Celebration of Lights figured into at least one city commissioner's rejection of the agency budget's request to take effect Oct. 1.

Commissioner Robert Dixon mentioned that he was unhappy with what he perceives to be PEDC's lack of enthusiasm for the project touted to boost tourism in Pampa.

But PEDC officials say they are restricted by law regarding tourism projects.

Board President Vic Raymond said today he fears that beyond turning on the lights and natural gas in the building, further financial involvement with Celebration of Lights violates state law governing operations.

PEDC is incorporated under the Texas Development Corporation Act of 1979 as amended, which defines the scope of projects it may support. The agency as incorporated is forbidden from promotional or tourism activities.

He told Celebration of Lights representatives the same Monday.

"I think this could be good for Pampa ... I think we need something like that," Raymond said today.

When PEDC met Monday, Celebration of Lights representatives packed the house, forcing PEDC board members to temporarily relocate their meeting to accommodate their guests.

Almost 20 supporters of the town-wide Christmas lighting project appeared before the board seeking permission to occupy the currently vacant Bourland & Leverich Building on South Barnes.

The committee plans to use that building as a central location to build displays and ornaments to be dispersed around the city.

PEDC currently maintains the city-owned building with a management contract.

Celebration of Lights volunteer Gary Willoughby talked to PEDC board members Monday.

Returning repeatedly to the theme that the lights festival would be a boon to tourism, organizer Gary Willoughby charted the development of the Celebration of Lights organization to the PEDC.

Willoughby began with the Altus (Okla.) Christmas in the Park, which began in 1993 and has brought as much as a $30,000 increase in sales tax revenue in six weeks for the city.

Speaking rapidly and excitedly, Willoughby went on to discuss similar festivals in Chickasha, Okla., Sweetwater and Marshall.

"This is a big dream, but if we put forth the effort a lot could come true," he said.

"I don't know how anyone could be opposed to this project," said Raymond, but he then quoted from a letter he received that listed a number of concerns. The concerns of letter writer Ray Velasquez, who was not present at the meeting, included:

- The building would be taken off the tax rolls. Raymond answered that the building is not currently on tax rolls.

- Sale of lights from community businesses would be circumvented. Organizer Seleta Chance replied that she had contacted local businesses who traditionally sold lights. Those businesses told her that they had already placed their orders for lights and were grateful that the organization would help provide lights they say would be in great demand.

- Using inmate labor would take away jobs from citizens of the community. City Commissioner Faustina Curry said that there was no way the organization could "pull this off" without the inmate labor, because there were not enough volunteers to do the work.

- That only a few people would actually benefit. Willoughby told the board that tourism impacts every aspect of the local economy, from service stations to hotels to restaurants to shopping centers.

Court to decide if census is to be adjusted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether the government must adjust 1990 census figures to make up for an undercount of minorities.

The court said it will hear arguments by the Clinton administration, Oklahoma and Wisconsin that the census count should not be changed. Such an adjustment could force the redrawing of some congressional districts.

The government has acknowledged that the 1990 census, like others before it, resulted in an undercount of racial minorities even though the Commerce Department made special efforts to find people likely to be missed.

Census figures are used for drawing congressional and state election districts as well as distributing federal financial aid.

The government was sued in 1988 by local governments and groups — including the city and state of New York, Chicago and

Los Angeles — that sought an adjustment in the 1990 count to boost the minority figures.

Commerce officials decided not to use the adjusted figures, saying they appeared to be less accurate and could even lower the count of large cities, including New York.

An adjustment would have caused Wisconsin and Pennsylvania each to lose one member of the House of Representatives, and California and Arizona to gain one each.

Budget

"I don't understand what they do day to day and what the goal is every month," she said referring Ippel's earlier work session comments.

"I would just like to have a better feel for what that office does on a daily basis," Curry said. "I'd like to know the philosophy they're working under trying to improve the economy in Pampa."

"I just can't make a commitment to go everywhere at 4 p.m.," Curry said, citing family obligations. "I could go all the time. This is not my full time job."

"A large part of it was to send a message that we'd like a more open line of communication and the ability to sit down and work toward where we're going. That budget was to be approved 56 days ago. It was approved (Monday). They were cautioned last year when it came in at the last minute," said Andrews, who also voted against the budget.

"Commissioner Andrews is right. No question, our budget should have been in 60 days ago," Raymond said.

"There appears to be a communication gap. I'm not sure what it is ... We need to find out what it is they need to hear ... It's not because of privacy," Raymond said.

The budget rejection took him by surprise.

"They perceive apparently a communication problem. We had a joint meeting with the PEDC and commission (in February) when Bill Waters was there," he said.

The agency is working with a local manufacturer to help it expand and maybe the commissioners did not know that, Raymond said.

"Clearly we have to have a better way to tell them," he continued.

"I am totally convinced reasonable people can resolve something like this," Raymond said.

Rescue workers from McLean pack up after pulling the trapped body of a truck driver from the cab of his 18-wheeler this morning at the intersection of Texas 70 and Interstate 40.

Texas truck driver dies in I-40 access road accident today

A Texas truck driver was killed today when his tractor-trailer rig overturned on the access road north of Interstate 40 near McLean.

The truck had apparently crossed the Highway 70 overpass coming from Clarendon and failed to negotiate the curve turning west.

Firefighters from McLean used the jaws-of-life to free the dead driver from his crumpled cab about 9:30 a.m. today as ghosts of trucks and cars rolled by in the dense gray fog on I-40 only a few feet away.

Officers said a motorist from Memphis headed toward Pampa called law enforcement authorities shortly after 8 a.m. today to notify them of the accident in front of the KOA Kampground at the intersection of

I-40 and Texas 70. Officers said the man told them the front wheels of the truck were still spinning in the air when he came upon the vehicle lying upside down on the north side of the road.

The right wheels of the truck apparently went off the pavement on the north side of the access road as the driver rounded the curve and rolled digging a trench a hundred feet long and knocking down a traffic sign.

The body was pinned in the wreckage for an hour to ninety minutes before McLean firefighters removed it.

DPS officials in Amarillo said that further information would be not be available until this afternoon.

Authorities did not release the name of the truck driver this morning.

Bargainers near deal, avert federal shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration and congressional leaders seem likely to shake hands soon on a deal temporarily keeping the government functioning as the two sides seek to settle disputes over spending.

With neither party ready to risk being blamed for a federal shutdown, a pact appeared near that would let agencies operate for six weeks beyond Sunday, the first day of fiscal 1996.

Congress is likely to have completed no more than four of the 13 annual spending bills by then — some of which President Clinton may veto — and without a stopgap measure, many federal workers would be sent home.

"Our intention is to have no furloughs, no train wreck, no disruptions of government," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La.

The deal, when finalized, would avert only one of several crises that loom this autumn as Republicans and Democrats grapple over the GOP's plans to slash spending, cut taxes and balance the budget by 2002. But it is the most immediate crisis lawmakers face, and congressional leaders want to clear it in time for Congress to take a one-week break next week.

Although final agreement on a precise formula remained elusive, the two sides were moving toward a deal that until Nov. 13 would hold federal spending below 1995 levels and the amounts Clinton prefers. By then, both sides hoped, all 13 bills for 1996 would be signed into law.

The House seemed likely to vote on the temporary measure Thursday, the Senate soon afterward.

Elsewhere, lawmakers tackled an even bigger part of the Republicans' balanced-budget agenda, the overhaul of Medicare and Medicaid. The Senate Finance Committee began working on a bill slicing projected spending from both health-care programs, but the House Ways and Means Committee postponed its own votes, which were to begin today. The House panel blamed delays in getting cost estimates from the Congressional Budget Office.

In the meantime, Democrats reminded Republicans how difficult it will be to get the 13 annual spending measures enacted. Top Democratic senators said three of those bills being debated this week by the Senate contained such radical cuts in education, job training, anti-crime and other social programs that they would let the measures sail through to hasten the inevitable veto by Clinton.

"If they can't be improved upon on the Senate floor, and I don't expect that they will be, I think it's quite certain they will veto them," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

As if to prove Daschle's point, the Senate voted 52-47 to refuse to restore money for Clinton's national service program, one of his top priorities. The program provides education stipends for young people who perform community service, but Republicans say it is too costly and should be eliminated.

Trying to show that they are moving ahead with their budget business, Republicans sent Clinton the first two of the 13 spending bills on Tuesday. Those measures, financing Congress' own operations and military construction, traditionally contain little controversy.

But they became ensnared in this year's budget battle and the president has threatened to veto the legislative measure, accusing lawmakers of financing themselves in the face of possible shutdowns elsewhere in government.

Gray-Roberts Farm Bureau convention on Oct. 6

The annual Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau convention will be held Friday, Oct. 6, at 7 p.m. at the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center's Heritage Room.

This year's meeting will feature guest speaker Kenneth L. Chambers, known as The Cellular Cowboy, from Dawn, Texas.

Chambers, a noted program speaker and humorist, is currently a field inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, headquartered in Fort Worth. His topic of discussion will be "The Funny Side of Catching Cattle Rustlers: Or How Not to Steal Cattle for Fun and Profit."

With 28 years as a law enforcement veteran, including 26 years in Texas, Chambers has spent the past 21 years on the trail of "cattle rustlers" and "horse thieves" in Texas and Oklahoma. He is commissioned as a Special Texas Ranger by the State of Texas.

Chambers is a Dale Carnegie course graduate, noting he has been through the "Human Relations and Public Speaking" program six times, five of those being as a graduate assistant helping teach the course. He has spent more than 14 years helping people to reach their goals and become more confident in their daily lives.

Born in Miami, Okla., Chambers moved to Texas when he was just a couple of years old. He father was in the U.S. Air Force and he grew up in Amarillo. When he was a young boy, he also lived in Alaska for three years.

Kenneth L. Chambers

Chambers is a commissioned law enforcement officer in Texas and Oklahoma. His law enforcement experience includes being a deputy sheriff for Potter County, a policeman in Amarillo, a Ranger commission for the Oklahoma Bureau of Investigation and a Special Texas Ranger commission in Texas. His professional associations and memberships include United Peace Officers Association, Sheriff's Association of Texas, Panhandle Peace Officers Association and Texas Police Association.

His law enforcement activities have been directed to the investigation of cattle rustling, horse stealing and the theft of other farm and ranch related equipment. He also has investigated other crimes, including homicide, robbery and forgeries.

"In the past years, I have seen many humorous incidents, which I use in my program," Chambers says. "Audiences say I have a natural sense of humor, and I use that humor to relate stories to the public so they can find happiness and success in the everyday world."

Chambers has given several hundred speeches and listened to more than 8,000 speeches, evaluating and assisting others to become confident, successful speakers. He has studied motivation and inspiration extensively during and since graduation from the Dale Carnegie course 14 years ago.

Tickets for the Farm Bureau convention and the barbecue meal for $5 per person are available at the Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau office, 1132 S. Hobart, in Pampa. Tickets also will be available at the door.

For more information or to make meal reservations, call 665-8451 by Oct. 2. The public is invited to attend.

A business session for members will be held after the speaker.

Space station survives yearly attempt to cut laboratory's funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is once again on record in support of the space station, rebuffing the yearly attempt to pull the plug on the giant orbiting laboratory's funding.

Following a low-key floor debate lacking much of the passion of previous fights, the Senate voted 64-35 Tuesday to reject an amendment cutting $1.8 billion from NASA's budget next year.

"I am thrilled with the huge lopsided vote in favor of keeping our international commitments on the space station," Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, said after the vote.

In his annual raid on the station, Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said Congress can ill justify the multibillion-dollar program at a time when lawmakers are slashing funds for health care, education, child care and the poor. He also questioned the scientific payoffs promised by NASA and other boosters.

"It's a question of priorities, colleagues, where your heart is," Bumpers said.

Advocates countered that the space station holds the promise of important medical and scientific breakthroughs. Failure to proceed with the international venture also would harm the United States' standing in the world space community, they said.

And, they argued the space station — which has been redesigned several times to scale back its cost and scope — has taken its share of budget cuts.

Bumpers attributed the space station's survivability on Capitol Hill to the fact that 36 states benefit from the venture, with California, Alabama and Texas receiving 78 percent of the economic benefits.

Bumpers offered his amendment to a fiscal 1995 appropriations bill that sets aside $2.1 billion for the space station. That bill passed the House this summer after two separate attempts to kill the space station were defeated.

Bumpers pegged the cost of the station at $94 billion through 2012, relying on a General Accounting Office estimate.

NASA estimates it will cost $17.4 billion to design and build the space station, along with another $13 billion to operate it over a decade. Some $14 billion has been spent to date on the project, much of which is under development at the Johnson Space Center near Houston.

Thousands of jobs in Texas are linked to development of the space station, which is due to have its first hardware launched into space in November 1997 with completion in 2002.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who is seeking the GOP presidential nomination, was on the campaign trail and was the only senator not casting a vote on the Bumpers amendment.

Spokesman Larry Neal said Gramm would have been in town had his vote been necessary to salvage the station.

The Texas Cattlemen's Association's convention is only a few weeks away.

The TCFA "New Realities" Convention will be Oct. 15-17 at the Wyndham Anatole in Dallas.

Tickets for The Phantom of the Opera are sold out, TCFA officials said, but tickets for other events, including ice hockey, the State Fair, sporting clays, golf and tennis are still available.

Retail beef prices dropped during the past month, hitting a three-year low.

According to the National Cattlemen's Association's 19-city survey of beef prices, the average price of six cuts on Sept. 14 was $3.02 per pound, compared with $3.12 on Aug. 10 and $3.17 a year ago.

The six-cut average of $3.02 is the lowest since January, 1992, NCA reported.

poultry processors to tell the truth about whether birds were "fresh" or "frozen."

The USDA rule was scheduled to go into effect in August 1996.

The Market Promotion Program (MPP), a major funding source for overseas beef promotion and market development, narrowly avoided the Senate's budget ax.

The Senate rejected an amendment to its $63.8 billion agricultural appropriations bill for fiscal 1996 that would have terminated the program, funded at $110 million this year.

The House and Senate have completed work on their versions of an agricultural appropriations bill, which now goes to a conference committee to iron out differences. The 1996 fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Beef dominates the menu in foodservice establishments, according to Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board.

Beef appears on restaurant menus 91 percent of the time, compared with chicken at 82 percent, pork at 68 percent, fish at 52 percent and turkey at 50 percent.

Man takes advantage of actor's kindness
SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former San Antonio disc jockey has been indicted for theft in connection with guns, tools and audio-visual items taken from the residence of television personality John Schneider.

A Bexar County grand jury returned the indictment Tuesday naming John May, 32. He had been living with Schneider and his wife, who befriended him and allowed him to stay in their Hill Country Village home, officials said.

May was arrested on Tuesday and jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Schneider and his wife, police say, settled in Hill Country Village in early June. They were unavailable for comment Tuesday.

The actor rose to fame more than a decade ago when he starred in The Dukes of Hazzard, an eat-my-dust comedy and action adventure show that featured souped-up cars running from corrupt lawmen down dusty country lanes.

Oldest WWI soldier in Texas dies at 107
SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A.I. Stevens, the oldest World War I soldier in Texas and possibly the nation, is dead at 107.

Stevens, honored in April at Randolph AFB when he was 106 as the oldest World War I veteran living in the San Antonio area, was having trouble swallowing when he entered Metropolitan Hospital on Wednesday of last week.

He died peacefully Thursday, said his son, retired Marine Staff Sgt. Charles Stevens of San Antonio.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at East St. Paul United Methodist Church, under direction of Lewis Funeral Home. Interment with military honors will be at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery.

Stevens was a rural school-teacher taking summer classes when he was drafted June 18, 1918, his son said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Sugar industry federal cartel

As the rhetoric continues about the need to cut back wasteful government programs - including welfare programs - an unusual coalition has come together to demand an end to the U.S. sugar program. Consumer groups and environmental groups have joined with free market advocates and sugar users to urge something closer to a free market in sugar.

Briefly, the sugar program works this way. The government fixes the domestic price of sugar at 23 cents a pound, almost triple the price on the world market. To help keep prices "stabilized," the government limits the quantity of sugar that can be exported from abroad, and has the authority to limit sales of domestic sugar as a back-up.

In brief, the sugar industry is a government run cartel. Defenders of the sugar program say it doesn't cost taxpayers anything directly. They also note that the world price of sugar is kept artificially low because the European Community routinely "dumps" artificially low priced sugar on the world market to help it keep prices artificially high in Europe.

In a really free international market without such government subsidized dumping, they say, American sugar producers could compete very nicely. But until the Europeans stop dumping, domestic sugar producers need a little help from their friends in Washington.

Complaints about "dumping" by European governments are valid enough. If the international sugar market were truly free - no U.S. sugar program and no government sponsored European dumping - the world price of sugar would probably be somewhat higher than it is now - although still lower than the current U.S. prices.

That means some estimates of the cost of the sugar program to consumers - like a recent General Accounting Office calculation that it costs consumers $1.4 billion a year in higher prices - are probably a bit high. But is a government program that costs almost nothing in direct taxes but hits you in the pocketbook as a consumer defensible? If anything, it is more insidious because the costs are hidden.

The sugar program, like most government regulatory or "stabilization" programs, creates very large, direct benefits for a few wealthy people at the expense of everybody else. But the known or "felt" costs to each consumer are relatively small, so the program stays in place, buttressed by aggressive lobbying and lavish campaign spending.

The administration, through mechanisms provided under the GATT treaty, can challenge European dumping and should do so. Such a challenge would provide an interesting test of the capacity of GATT to make trade more genuinely free. But even given the unfairness of government subsidized dumping, the domestic sugar program cannot be justified. It should be ended at once.

Defunding corporate welfare

Democrats make the claim that poor people are not the only feeders at the government trough. They are right. What they don't say is that the Democrats, who held power for 40 years, were equal opportunity Santa Clauses, giving taxpayer money to every special interest - from the poor to the rich - who asked for it.

The battle now being waged by Rep. John Kasich (R-Ohio), Sen. Spencer Abraham (R-Mich.), Rep. Dick Chrysler (R-Mich.) and others will determine whether the Republican Party is truly the party of smaller government or not. They are trying to defund "corporate welfare," the web of tax breaks, incentives and subsidies threaded throughout the federal budget that benefits corporations at taxpayers' expense. If Republicans cannot bring themselves to take a serious whack out of these benefactions, the voters will be justified in concluding that the difference between the two parties amounts only to this: Democrats refuse to cut anything, and Republicans will cut only those programs aimed at the poor.

The Republican Party has an opportunity to be better than that, and Abraham and Kasich are pushing it in that direction.

Did you know that you pay taxes to help McDonald's sell Chicken McNuggets overseas? The government spent $465,000 on it in 1992. U.S. taxpayers also forked over $10 million to promote the sale of Sunkist oranges and $1.2 million to help sell American Legend mink coats. The Market Promotion Program gets $110 million yearly. It strains the imagination to come up with less needy beneficiaries of federal largesse. According to the libertarian Cato Institute, there are 129 spending programs in the budget that benefit business at a cost of $87 million annually.

That's small change. The real money is to be found in tax breaks, whose costs run into the billions. It costs taxpayers $3.4 billion to help U.S. companies that do business in Guam and Puerto Rico. The government gives $500 million tax breaks to companies that produce ethanol; $333 million in tax breaks to the big car makers to help them develop more fuel efficient models; $2 billion in low interest loans to electric utility cooperatives in rural areas, the better to provide cheap electricity to impoverished areas like Aspen, Colo., and Las Vegas, Nev.; $5.4 billion in grants and loans to foreign countries to help them buy U.S. manufactured military equipment and supplies; $451 million to help companies like Xerox, DuPont and Caterpillar convert basic research into consumer products; and more.

Even some beneficiaries want to see corporate welfare killed. Over the past decade, according to the Guardian of London, Cargill Corp. has received almost $1.3 billion in cash bonuses from Uncle Sam for selling grain abroad at below market prices. Cargill opposes the practice, saying it "distorts the market, letting the government decide which commodities will be sold, to whom and at what price."

But others will fight fiercely for their welfare. "The uniform castigation of all government outlay programs is ridiculous," Paul Huard of the National Association of Manufacturers told the Minneapolis Star Tribune. "We judge government programs by whether they create jobs and increase prosperity. If they don't, maybe we stop doing them. If they do, let's keep them. It's a pretty straightforward standard."

Yes, but it's the wrong standard. We ought to judge government programs by whether they are necessary.

Most of us don't object to paying taxes to ensure that our streets are safe (though we're not getting value for money on that at the moment), our nation is defended from foreign threats, our courts are functioning smoothly and our children are educated (though we'd like more choice about just where). But when you go beyond essential functions, you find that government involvement inhibits, rather than creates, prosperity. Companies that get government money are companies that needn't struggle to compete.

The true story of corporate welfare is the story of raw power. Those interests, business and otherwise, that can persuade Congress to smile upon them have an unfair advantage over everyone else. It isn't the job of the government to help McDonald's or Cargill or Honeywell or their competitors. It is the job of the government to stay out.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1995. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Sept. 27th, 1964, the Warren Commission issued a report concluding that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President Kennedy.

On this date:
In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated by George Stephenson in England.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic Ocean liner occurred when the steamship Arctic sank with 300 people aboard.

In 1928, the United States said it was recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War II.

A plea to moderate GOP senators

The Greek poet Constantine Cavafy once wrote (as translated by Rae Dalven):

To certain people there comes a day when they must say the great Yes or the great No.

He who has the Yes ready within him reveals himself at once, and saying it he crosses over to the path of honor and his own conviction.

He who refuses does not repent. Should he be asked again, he would say No again. And yet that No - the right No - crushes him for the rest of his life.

I once worked, as a staff member, for the United States Senate. I know how hard most senators work, and how heavy are the pressures that bear down on them. I know how much more they know about the problems facing us than most voters (and most commentators) will ever know. I know how often what seems the right thing to do is in fact precisely the wrong thing to do - and I know the painful price honorable men and women may be forced to pay for refusing to do it.

I could not blame any so-called "moderate" Republican senator for feeling that he or she has been put between a rock and a hard place by the conservative agenda now being pressed upon the Senate. The "Contract With America," after all, was devised by House Republicans; not a single Republican senator was asked to endorse it. Why should they now be called on so peremptorily to enact it into law?

The answer, I think, lies in the nature of the times. To borrow a phrase from Winston Churchill, "He must indeed have a blind soul" who cannot see that this is a rare moment in the history of America, when an impressive number of voters have decided to resist and if possible reverse the constant and often blind expansion of federal power that has been the central theme of American politics for more than 60 years.

We cannot be altogether sure that this impulse is a wise one. Tomorrow (there is always a tomorrow) the defects of the new policy (there are always defects) will become apparent, and the voters who produced the Revolution of November 1994 may well try to lynch the politicians who dared presume to take them seriously.

But the tradition of the devolution of political power has a long and honorable pedigree in this country - far longer than that which calls for the concentration of all power at the center. At a minimum, it deserves to be tried.

Certainly no one can say that centralized power wasn't given a fair chance. But 30 years and $5 trillion after Lyndon Johnson declared war on poverty, it is clear that the war has been lost. Worse yet, the moral barriers against the worst consequences of poverty - the family, self-discipline, religion - have largely collapsed, leaving devastation everywhere.

That is the crisis the 104th Congress has been called upon to confront, and its members, in the House and Senate alike, will largely be known to history by how they respond to it.

That is why I am addressing this plea to the "moderate" Republicans in the U.S. Senate. Newt Gingrich and his fellow House Republicans have come up with a dramatic plan to balance the federal budget, reduce taxes and turn many functions that have been federal for several decades back to the states to administer. The Democrats' only response has been defiance.

Thanks to procedural and constitutional differences between the House and the Senate, it may well rest within the power of the "moderate" Senate Republicans to decide whether the Revolution of November 1994 shall have lasting effects or not.

This opportunity may never come again. I beg of you: Say the great Yes.

Senior discounts, not discounted seniors

Having just turned 62, eligible now for senior discounts, I stand before you as a leading indicator. What is happening now to us Depression babies will be happening soon to the baby-boomers. It is time to think about aging in America, governmentally and psychologically, separately and together.

The Republican Congress is wrestling with Medicare, trying to "decrease the rate of increase" in spending. President Clinton is pledged to the same goal, but would do it more slowly. All the players are driven by the same facts: People are living longer. There are 80 million boomers coming to seniorhood and they haven't had enough children to keep the social benefits pyramid game going at quite the same rate. Medical costs are rising. There is a federal deficit.

So we will end up with somewhat higher premiums, somewhat lesser benefits or somewhat more efficient health care - probably all three. It won't be a disaster. In a few years, there will also have to be an adjustment in Social Security benefits. That won't be a cataclysm either. Other social benefit programs will be curtailed. Again, no tragedy. America is still a very rich country.

The psychological situation is not nearly so predictable. Northwestern University Professor David Gutmann, a developmental psychologist and a 70-year-old who still jogs regularly, is the author of an acclaimed book about aging, Reclaimed Powers (Basic Books). Gutmann's cross cultural research leads him to believe that aging can be, and often is, a process of healthy and intrinsic growth.

Ben Wattenberg

In most traditional non-modern societies, Gutmann says, the elderly gain a new psychological freedom, compensating for the physical erosion that comes with age. Unshackled from the daily sense of emergency that goes along with rearing children, the aged often find new fulfillment. Older women tend to become more authoritative and powerful, often presiding over a family matriarchy. Older men tend to become softer, wiser and more understanding. They are the shamans, high priests and tenders of the culture, often revered for their wisdom.

Moreover, Gutmann points out, the elderly - by definition - are survivors. Dependent types die off early. Somehow the aged have managed to keep body and mind working.

In modern societies, new medicines and treatments keep people alive longer - and in better health. Alas, says Gutmann, these modern societies typically don't use the potential resources of the elderly as productively as do the more traditional societies. Mobility erodes matriarchy. It's even tougher on elderly men; there is not much of a market for shamans or culture tenders these days. Self-esteem is peddled to teenagers, but ignored for seniors, who may need it more.

We may speculate: Is there, potentially, a useful confluence between what's happening in government and what's happening demographically and psychologically? Perhaps. As the government diminishes some of its care giving functions, wouldn't it be nice if more of the elderly came back into play through the private and voluntary sectors? Lord knows, we are a society that needs teachers, mentors, matriarchs and tenders of the traditional culture.

Meanwhile, we Depression babies take it one day at a time, learning the game. The other day in a fast food restaurant, I stepped up to the cash register and pointed to a sign offering a senior discount. "You don't look like a senior," growled the young man at the register. "But I am. I just turned 62," I said. "I'll let you get away with it this time," he barked, knocking a half dollar off the check. It was a double victory; I got my discount and I balanced out some of the times I was offered a senior discount before I was eligible.

The last time I had been carded was as a teenager seeking a drink in a college town. It feels better to look too young at 62 than it did at 18. It bathed me in self-esteem, a warm glow that lasted until I came home to read a letter from the Social Security Administration informing me that I was now eligible for retirement.

Lobby reform language stalls spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawmakers trying to advance a spending bill are at an acrimonious standstill over a proposal that Republicans say will end an abuse of taxpayers' money by nonprofit groups.

Democrats charge that the initiative is a threat to free speech. With the blessing of Speaker Newt Gingrich, House Republicans say they will vote down the $23 billion Treasury-Postal appropriations bill for the new budget year unless it contains an amendment restricting "political advocacy" by groups receiving federal grants.

But Democrats say the bill, the work of Rep. Ernest Istook, R-Okla., is a frontal attack on nonprofit groups that support liberal causes. "It suppresses political speech and political expression in an absolutely chilling, overreaching way," said Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo.

The bill as proposed by the GOP would deny grants to any organization that spends more than 5 percent of its nonfederal funds on political activities. It also would require extensive reporting on how a group spent its money and would prohibit the use of grant money to buy goods or services from any group spending more than 15 percent of its own funds on political activity. Supporters said the bill targets political misuse of the $40 billion the federal government hands out to nonprofit groups every year.

It's "been a dirty little secret in this town that federal taxpayer money has been going to lobbying groups in the form of grants," said Rep. David McIntosh, R-Ind.

Opponents maintain the GOP language is so broad that it would victimize groups such as the YMCA, the American Red Cross and universities receiving research grants. They say it could even be used to stifle the political activities of people on welfare, or students getting subsidized lunches.

In early August, the House voted 232-187 to put similar language into a Labor-Health and Human Services spending bill. The debate became so furious that Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., shouted, "It's a glorious day if you're a fascist!" and Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., then the presiding officer, banged the gavel so hard that it shattered.

When the Senate refused to accept the language in the big Labor-HHS bill, Istook reintroduced it in the spending bill that finances the Treasury and Postal Service.

That bill already had far narrower anti-lobbying language, offered by Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., which would have affected only large advocacy groups with annual incomes of more than $10 million.

A House-Senate conference on the bill was deadlocked two weeks ago over this single issue, with the Senate saying it would accept only the Simpson plan and Istook standing by his language.

The White House has promised a veto if the bill contains the Istook provisions.

Last Thursday, 19 House Republicans, including 16 freshmen, wrote a piece in The Washington Times saying they would vote against any bill that did not have the Istook language.

That night, Istook took to the House floor and complained of a "vast disinformation campaign that has been stimulated by groups receiving federal funds."

The accusations run both ways. Republicans say the National Council of Senior Citizens, for example, receives 96 percent of its budget, or $68 million, from taxpayers - and is using the money to lobby against GOP plans to reform Medicare.

"It is a lie and it is a premeditated lie," said the NCSC's Patrick Burns, who stressed that his group merely administers a program that provides employment to more than 10,000 low-income seniors.

"They are trying to extort, intimidate us into silence," he said. "Are we going to silence our lobbying to get federal grants? I don't think so."

Gary Bass, executive director of the nonprofit research and advocacy group OMB Watch, said there are already laws that strictly bar use of federal funds for lobbying and under the Republican plan "the limits on private funds for advocacy will be enormously chilling."

Istook, whose proposal is supported by such groups as the National Taxpayers Union, the Americans for Tax Reform and the Christian Coalition, insisted that the legislation was not aimed at individuals, and in no way prohibits political activity. He said that it merely sets a reasonable threshold, with the 5 percent spending limit.

Nation briefs

Trucker claims to be serial killer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In handwritten letters decorated with "happy faces," an interstate trucker awaiting a murder trial is claiming he killed eight women from Florida to Washington state.

Keith Jespersen, 40, says that in at least one case, in Portland, innocent people are serving life sentences for his crime.

Jespersen is being held at Clark County jail in neighboring Vancouver, Wash., on charges he kidnapped, raped and strangled a woman in March. He began a letter-writing campaign from jail two weeks ago, saying his conscience was bothering him.

"I want this to end as soon as possible," Jespersen wrote in one letter to a local TV station, with a request that it be forwarded to The Associated Press. "Unlike O.J. Simpson, I do not want this to drag on."

New York City yanks down Levi's pants

NEW YORK (AP) — Levi Strauss got a real steal on some publicity — until the city barged in and declared: Pull down those pants!

The company began putting pairs of its new $50 khaki pants in bus shelter ads in New York City and San Francisco this week, fully expecting that the crowbar-and-brick crowd would steal them.

New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani was not amused.

So the pants — ads and all — will be down by tonight. San Francisco officials did not pull the ads.

The controversy surrounding the ad campaign was just what Levi's wanted: free publicity.

Anticipating possible breaking and entering, Levi Strauss designed the ads for pre-theft and post-theft presentation.

With the khakis on display, the ad copy reads "Nice Pants." Once the pants disappear, an outline of the khakis remains with the words, "Apparently they were very nice pants."

Air bag plant ordered to close after explosions

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — An automotive air-bag plant that earlier this year was fined $89,000 for disregarding safety precautions has been ordered to close until it can submit a safety plan.

After two small fires Tuesday, Mesa Fire Chief John Oliver ordered TRW Vehicle Safety Systems Inc. to stop processing sodium azide, a volatile chemical used to deploy air bags.

"I find that the operations currently in effect pose an imminent threat to both life and property," Oliver said.

Thomas Cresante, vice president of operations for TRW's plants here, said the company, which produces 39 percent of the worldwide air-bag market, hoped to resolve the issue within the next few days.

'Seven,' 'Showgirls' top fall opening box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Violence won out over voyeurism at the box office over the weekend, as the murder thriller Seven easily outdrew the NC-17-rated Showgirls.

Seven, the story of a sadistic killer starring Brad Pitt and Morgan Freeman, grossed $13.9 million in its debut weekend while Showgirls had $8.1 million for second place, according to industry estimates Sunday. However, Showgirls, showing at much fewer locations, had a slightly higher average per screen take than Seven.

Showgirls, the story of a career-climbing Las Vegas stripper, played on nearly 1,400 screens — the widest opening ever for an NC-17 film.

The roundly panned movie was preceded by a wave of hype that included a free rental video of its racier highlights.

"We're really pleased the way the picture opened," said Larry Gleason, head of distribution for MGM. "We would have liked to have better reviews but that's the way (critics) see the movie. We have no control over that."

The two shows provided the only bright spots for box office receipts on the first official weekend of fall. Other movies had generally lackluster receipts after a near record-breaking summer.

The top 20 movies at U.S. and Canadian theaters Friday through Sunday, followed by studio, gross, number of theater locations, receipts per location, total gross and number of weeks in release, as compiled Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.:

- Seven*, New Line, $13.9 million, 2,441 locations, $5,715 per location, $13.9 million, one week.
- Showgirls*, MGM, $8.1 million, 1,388 locations, $5,845 per location, $8.1 million, one week.
- To Wong Foo, Thanks for Everything! Julie Newmar*, Universal, $4.5 million, 1,458 locations, $3,070 per location, $24.3 million, three weeks.
- Dangerous Minds*, Disney, $2.8 million, 1,582 locations, $1,783 per location, $71.3 million, seven weeks.
- Clockers*, Universal, $2.6 million, 1,234 locations, $2,140 per location, $9.5 million, two weeks.
- Unstrung Heroes*, Disney, $2.5 million, 576 locations, $4,299 per location, $2.7 million, two weeks.
- The Usual Suspects*, Gramercy, $2 million, 876 locations, $2,252 per location, $15.4 million, six weeks.
- Hackers*, MGM, $1.6 million, 1,812 locations, $893 per location, $5.8 million, two weeks.

Prosecutor says Nicole left behind murder 'road map'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutor Christopher Darden called it a road map from Nicole Brown Simpson, a special message to a jury she'd never know, in a trial dealing with a violent death she knew would come.

The message came from a safety deposit box drilled open last year by an investigator with a search warrant: letters from O.J. Simpson, a will and Polaroid photos of Ms. Simpson with scrapes and bruises inflicted by the man she loved.

"She left these for you," Darden told jurors, displaying two pictures of the battered Ms. Simpson on the courtroom big screen. "This is a sign. She wanted you to know who killed her when the time came."

On June 12, 1994, Darden said in prosecution summations Tuesday, the time did, in fact, come. And the man who killed her, Darden said, was her ex-husband, the famous football star and commercial pitchman sitting at the defense table across the courtroom.

Simpson also killed his ex-wife's friend Ronald Goldman, prosecutor Marcia Clark told jurors earlier. Goldman, she said, died because he unexpectedly walked up during the attack on Ms. Simpson and "the defendant could not leave a witness alive."

Closing arguments, which cap presentations that began eight months ago, resume today with more from Darden. He will be followed by summations from defense attorneys Johnnie Cochran Jr. and Barry Scheck.

Clark spent most of the emotional court day Tuesday going over the physical evidence in the case, sometimes having to talk over the sobs of family members of the victims and of Simpson.

Delivering a closing argument that grew more powerful throughout the long court day, Clark disavowed her own police witness as a racist and ridiculed a defense contamination-conspiracy theory as "far-fetched."

Each point she made to the jury — about shoe prints, strands of hair, bloodstains and fibers from the carpet in Simpson's Bronco — were pieces in a murder puzzle, she told jurors. As she assembled these "pieces" throughout the day, an actual picture puzzle was projected on the giant screen overhead. When all the pieces were in place, it showed Simpson's face.

"There it is," Clark declared.

She handed off to Darden, who reinforced the prosecution's motive theory. The prosecutor spoke of Simpson's short fuse, in a slow, quiet summation that spoke to Darden's own slow-burn intensity.

It was Darden's most powerful courtroom remarks since his bitter clash with rival Cochran over whether the jury should hear the word "nigger."

As Clark did, Darden quickly distanced himself from retired Detective Mark Fuhrman, who testified that he never used that word in the last decade, only to have his voice on tape spewing that very racial epithet. Fuhrman said he found a bloody glove on Simpson's estate; the defense has attacked him as a racist capable of framing Simpson.

"I'm not even going to call him Detective Fuhrman, if I can help it, because he doesn't deserve that title, doesn't warrant that respect, not from me," Darden said. "But this isn't the case of Mark Fuhrman, this is the case of O.J. Simpson."

Darden described Simpson as an intensely jealous man, the only man to ever "take a hand" to Ms. Simpson, as graphically shown in pictures of Ms. Simpson after a beating. Those photos contrasted with another Darden showed the jury, a studio picture of a lovely Ms. Simpson, hand on chin in a pose, smiling slightly.

After a beating on New Year's 1989, Darden said, Ms. Simpson had the imprint of a hand on the left side of her neck.

"We submit to you that the hand that left that imprint five years ago is the same hand that cut that same throat, that same neck," Darden said. "It was the defendant."

Simpson was so obsessed with Ms. Simpson that he couldn't contain his rage, Darden said, reminding jurors of testimony and evidence that Simpson spied on his ex-wife through a window in 1992 and broke through her door in October 1993 — an incident captured in Ms. Simpson's dramatic 911 call.

"He is out of control. He cannot handle it. And the fuse is burning," Darden told jurors as he methodically outlined the tumultuous relationship.

The summations came on a day in which the TV camera was briefly barred because the judge said the camera operator violated court rules, and the anguish of three families almost overwhelmed Clark's closing presentation.

Dallas Brass to perform at WT concert

CANYON — West Texas A&M University's Department of Music and Dance and the Office of Student Activities will host Dallas Brass in concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Mary Moody Northern Recital Hall.

The six-member Dallas Brass has developed a reputation for innovation, style and musical artistry. The group combines brass with a wide range of percussion instruments. Dallas Brass performs a variety of musical styles from classical to jazz. They have expanded the traditional concert format to include lighting and choreography.

The group, beginning their 12th year, has toured worldwide, including the United States, Canada, Italy and Japan. They recorded the national anthem for the Texas Rangers, which was played at Rangers home games in Arlington stadium. In 1990, Dallas Brass premiered with the United States Air Force Orchestra in the Constitution Hall.

Dallas Brass recently performed at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

They have released four recordings, including Dallas Brass Debut, Dallas Brass II, A Merry Christmas with Brass and Windbornem and an album of original pop and jazz music.

As a Yamaha Performing Ensemble, they present clinics, master classes and clinics in schools and music camps. The group has also published educational articles to assist students in their musical development.

"The success of the group has a great deal to do with it beginning in Dallas," Michael Levine, founder and artistic director, said. "Although we don't play there much anymore, we still feel we represent Dallas wherever we go."

Tickets for the concert are $10 in advance and are available for purchase at Tolzein Music Company, C&D Music and the Jack B. Kelly Student Center Information Desk on the WTAMU campus.

For more information, contact Jeff Chisum, director of student activities, at (806) 656-2313.

Border patrol seizes two Japanese fishing vessels

TOKYO (AP) — The Russian coast guard today seized two Japanese fishing vessels accused of poaching octopus in Russian waters, after firing on the boats and wounding one of the captains. The Japanese Foreign Ministry said the two vessels were seized in the Soya Strait, which separates Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido from Russia's Sakhalin Island.

A Russian news agency said 10 vessels without identification marks were poaching two miles inside Russian waters in a popular area for gathering octopus. ITAR-Tass said the coast guard fired on the boats after they did not respond to warning shots and had begun to "maneuver dangerously."

It said the captain of one boat was shot in the thigh and was being taken by helicopter to a hospital. One boat was damaged in the hull, it said.

Russian authorities found poaching tackle and 1 1/2 tons of octopus on one of the boats.

Lt. Gen. Vitaly Sedykh, Pacific commander of the Russian border guards, said two more coast guard vessels and a helicopter have been sent to the area with orders to detain the remaining vessels and escort them to Sakhalin.

Russian border patrols were stepped up last year in the southern Kuril islands, which Japan claims as its northern territories.

Female bullfighter wows crowd in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — With a distinctive flourish, Cristina Sanchez became the first woman bullfighter to perform in Plaza Mexico, the world's largest bullfighting arena.

Before 40,000 spectators, Sanchez killed a bull named Caleno on Sunday night, impressing a crowd of many drawn simply by the prospect of seeing a female bullfighter. In reward for her grace and skill, she was given the bull's ear, a honor similar to a standing ovation in music halls.

Sanchez said bullfighting gives her enormous satisfaction.

"I need this in order to live," she told Associated Press Television. "The bull, the danger, death, (it's) all that I need. When you enjoy bullfighting, you become addicted to it."

There have been a handful of female bullfighters over the years in Spain. But up to now, bullfighting in Latin America has been the exclusive realm of men, allowing women only to watch and throw carnations to triumphant fighters.

Power-sharing disputes slow Bosnian peace negotiations

NEW YORK (AP) — With battlefields grown quiet in anticipation, Bosnia's warring factions met in New York on Tuesday to decide how their future government should be set up.

Delegates were discussing the constitutional question of how much power should be given to the central authorities in a Bosnian state divided between rebel Serbs and a Muslim-Croat federation.

Convening the meeting, which also included diplomats from Britain, France, Germany, Russia and the European Union, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said it was "an important day, a time to maintain the momentum for peace."

Christopher said the meeting at the U.S. mission to the United Nations would be a success if "the parties adopt a set of constitutional principles" for the structure of a future Bosnian government.

The Serb rebels, who want the right to secede eventually and unite with neighboring Serbia, oppose a strong central government. But the Muslims, who insist on keeping their country intact, want to make it as powerful as possible.

Elections for an all-Bosnian parliament and for a joint presidency council, the nation's top executive body, emerged as the most contentious issues with the negotiations.

The plan under discussion calls for a presidency, not a single president. Collective presidencies are a common fixture in former communist countries.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the official said Muslims and their Croat allies wanted free, nationwide elections for both bodies, while the Serbs insisted on appointments for their members in the legislature and the presidency.

The Serbs also wanted the presidency to deal only with foreign policy, with the governments of the two entities in charge of everything else, the official said.

"Serb efforts to create two completely separate states, one of which could secede at some later date, are evident," said Sven Alkalaj, Bosnian ambassador to the United States.

These are the first formal peace talks since a U.S.-brokered agreement in Geneva on Sept. 8 aimed to keep Bosnia's external borders intact while dividing the state internally between the two groups.

"I hope we will adopt the constitutional arrangements by tonight," said Milan Milutinovic, the foreign minister of Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. He is negotiating on behalf of the Bosnian Serbs.

Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey said his side was committed to the talks but was demanding countrywide elections and the return of refugees driven out by Serbs.

"We simply do not want war criminals to dictate our future," Sacirbey said in a speech Tuesday to the U.N. General Assembly. "We will not settle for sham elections."

Elections cannot be held before "war criminals" are handed over to the international tribunal in The Hague set up to try them, he said.

"We want to see democracy

Bosnia update

and human rights take hold in our country," Sacirbey told The Associated Press. "Unfortunately, we are dealing with despots and tyrants who want the opposite."

In a preliminary meeting on Monday, Christopher told the Balkan officials that the United States "will oppose any settlement that will undermine its (Bosnia's) territorial integrity."

Keeping genetic forecasting confidential

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ann Fagan's daughter was just 12

when gene testing revealed she had a genetic mutation that might cause colon cancer. Her first question: Would she ever be able to get health insurance?

Her mother had no answer.

Most states don't prevent insurance companies or even employers from learning the Pennsylvania girl's test results.

But as scientists race to commercialize gene testing, lawmakers are beginning to design ways to keep Americans' genetic forecast a secret between patient and doctor.

"The fundamental premise is ... that my genetic characteristics are my private property and others are not entitled to access those," said Oregon attorney Bob Shoemaker, who helped write the nation's strictest genetic privacy act, passed in July by Oregon's legislature.

Scientists are creating tests that reveal whether now-healthy Americans have genes that signal they might get cancer or other illnesses years or even decades in the future.

Such tests are not routinely available to most Americans yet. None has been cleared by the Food and Drug Administration for commercial sale. But laboratories around the country are beginning to test hundreds of patients.

The issue is whether genetic tests deserve more protection than, say, a cholesterol check that typically is seen by dozens of health care workers, insurers and even family members.

Can you be forced to be tested or force your children to be? Will your insurance be canceled for fear you'll have cancer in 20 years? What if your relatives don't want to know that they have a certain gene, and a doctor who reveals that you have it alerts them against their will?

"More and more people are beginning to find out this information, and more and more people are at risk," argues Dr. Francis Collins, director of the government's Human Genome Project, which is identifying the body's 100,000 genes.

Seven states — Oregon, Colorado, California, Wisconsin, Ohio, Minnesota and New Hampshire — have comprehensive genetic privacy acts that require patient permission in writing to release any genetic information and prohibit health insurers from discriminating based on the tests.

Oregon, Wisconsin and New Hampshire include employer provisions.

Square House Museum marks 30th anniversary

PANHANDLE — Nearly 30 unique attractions and activities on will be on display Saturday as the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle celebrates its 30th anniversary.

"As we chug toward the 21st century, we're going to stop for a bit and appreciate our roots," said Dr. Paul Katz, museum director. "Spectacular oil paintings of Native Americans and the Southwest have been loaned to us from the Santa Fe Railway's Collection of Southwestern Art. Models, artifacts and history recreate railroading in the Texas Panhandle during the early 20th century, courtesy of the Texas Panhandle Railroad Historical Society and the Amarillo Model Railroad Association."

The art collection will be in the Hazelwood Building, while the trains will be in the Square House Museum Annex, Katz said.

A ribbon cutting for a new permanent exhibit featuring a Santa Fe Railway Depot telegraph and freight office will take place at 10:30 a.m. at the Caboose. Panhandle railroading history as interpreted through dance and drama is the theme of an original Gene Murray Reader's Theater, "Train's A Comin'." Katz said. Murray, Jerry Williams, and W.A. Moore will perform, with a special finale by the musical drama TEXAS dancers beginning at 2 p.m. at Panhandle High School.

Company E of the 4th Cavalry (memorial), Native American crafts, a mountain man camp, woodworking, pottery making, stone tool working, an 1870s Texas Ranger camp, accompanied by 19th century food and drink, will be on the west side of the museum grounds from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A recognition ceremony for Carson County pioneers will take place at the Conway Community Church at 11:30 a.m. on the south end of the Museum grounds. The traditional Pioneer Reception will be at the War Memorial Building, beginning at 3:30 p.m., Katz said.

More activities will be underway in the County Agriculture Barn, several blocks east of the museum. The barbecue dinner takeout lines open at 3:30 p.m. and seating is at 4 p.m. Live western music will be provided by the Good Timers Band, beginning at 4:30 p.m.

At 5:30 p.m., author Ruth Lowes will sign copies of her new book, A Penny's Worth of Candy, describing her life as a nine-year-old in a town just like Panhandle. A drawing for two round-trip tickets to anywhere American Airlines flies in the continental U.S. will take place at 6 p.m. The Country Store, stocked with homemade crafts and food donated by county residents, will be open in the Ag Barn throughout the day.

All proceeds from the dinner and Country Store are used to operate the museum's educational, exhibit and public programs.

Nurse errs, jury awards patient

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury has ordered a hospital to pay $12.7 million in damages because a nurse injected a labor-inducing drug to a Liberty County woman who had already started labor.

The mistake resulted in severe injuries to Lisa Lee, 39, the mother, and caused severe brain damage to her son, Alexander. The mother required emergency removal of her uterus and other life-saving measures.

It was alleged that nurse Rosario Tarriman, a Parkway Hospital nurse with only four months experience, injected the drug without the approval of the woman's physician, Dr. Chin Hyun Lee. The doctor was not related to the patient.

The lawsuit alleged that the nurse administered Pitocin, a labor-inducing drug, after the woman was already in labor, causing spasms and shock to the woman's system.

The verdict on Tuesday came after two days of deliberations in a month-long trial in the court of state District Judge Carolyn Clause Garcia.

Attorney Mark D. Clore, who represented Lee, said the large damage award is needed to provide intensive medical care and therapy for the son, who could need it for 60 years or more.

"These jurors had the courage to render a verdict that may not be 'politically correct' in this era of so-called tort reform," Clore said.

"But the truth is that the public should ask the question: 'Would you rather that all of society be responsible for paying for these damages, or should those costs be paid by the wrongdoers responsible for what happened?'"

Hospital lawyers were not available for comment, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

Clore said the drug Pitocin is beneficial when properly used to induce labor but can be catastrophic if administered later.

Good Relations With an 'Ex' Will Reduce Stress on Kids

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter from "Ticked Off in Texas," I had to respond. My husband also has an ex-wife with whom he tries to stay on friendly terms. This is the biggest point of contention in our marriage. However, I keep reminding myself that she is the mother — and custodial parent — of his children, and he hasn't a leg to stand on if she decides to withhold visitation. Children whose parents are divorced already have enough stress in their young lives.

Even more important, studies show that, increasingly, fathers are pushed out of their children's lives. This is rarely beneficial to children — especially boys.

"Ticked Off" didn't indicate the nature of her relationship with her stepchildren, but I would bet she would find it better if she didn't hate their mother so much.

BEEN THERE IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR BEEN THERE: The letter from "Ticked Off in Texas" inspired a flood of letters such as yours. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years, but was never moved to write to you until now. "Ticked Off in Texas" wrote that she was furious about having to share her husband with his ex-wife. That letter brought back memories for me.

proceeds to tear down her husband and herself (a situation where no one wins)? Or is she willing to have her husband remain friends with the mother of his children, allowing him to develop the father/child relationship that is so important to young people, and also gives her the opportunity to know what may turn out to be an exciting young person? In this scenario, there are no losers. WINNER IN SAN MATEO, CALIF.

DEAR WINNER: Your husband is fortunate to have married a woman with such a caring heart and an abundance of common sense. Unfortunately, many women lack your maturity and judgment. Thank you for an important letter.

DEAR READERS: A bit of philosophy from Albert Schweitzer: An optimist is a person who sees a green light everywhere, while the pessimist sees only the red stoplight. The truly wise person is color-blind.

ed to his daughter as well, even though he paid child support. There were no phone calls to his daughter, no letters, no visits, no contact at all — because to have done so would have put him in the position of running into his ex-wife, which was the last thing he wanted to do!

Abby, this meant the responsibility of developing a relationship with my husband's daughter fell on me. I was the one who initiated all contact, telephoned, etc. — and ultimately opened the way for my husband to get to know his own daughter.

I would have dearly loved to have found myself in the situation that "Ticked Off in Texas" complained about. The opportunity to keep a relationship going with his child, without the interference of an angry and bitter ex-spouse (which frequently happens in a divorce), is a blessing and a joy, and makes for a better relationship for the second marriage as well.

Which would "Ticked Off" prefer? A relationship where the first wife has a good time. Unfortunately, you might not believe this, much to the dismay of your wallet.

Pampa won the junior varsity match against Caprock, 15-5, 15-6.

Marisol Resendez and Tiffany McCullough led Pampa in service points with 6 each. Resendez, Katy Cavalier and Keli Earl had outstanding matches, both offensive and defensively.

Pampa junior varsity, with a 9-6 record, hosts Randall junior varsity at 1 p.m. Saturday.

BASKETBALL

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Houston Rockets have signed Portland Trail Blazer forward Mark Bryant, an unrestricted free agent, a Portland television station reported Tuesday night.

An official announcement of the trade would be made Wednesday, KOIN-TV reported.

Bryant averaged 5.6 points, four rebounds and 18.3 minutes per game with Portland last season.

Fitzgerald, Jones earn SWC honors

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Baylor linebacker LaCurtis Jones didn't take lightly the Bears' 31-20 loss to Mississippi State two weeks ago.

Just ask North Carolina State. Jones, a senior from Waco, had eight tackles and one pass break-up in the Bears' 14-0 victory against the Wolfpack Saturday, earning honors as The Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

Texas tight end Pat Fitzgerald, who caught four passes for 42 yards, including touchdown tosses of 1, 15 and 19 yards in the Longhorns' 55-27 loss to Notre Dame, is the AP's SWC Offensive Player of the Week.

Jones led a Baylor defense that held North Carolina State to 138 yards and handed the Wolfpack their first shutout since 1962 and the first ever in the 29-year history of Carter-Finley Stadium. With only 24 rushing yards and 114 yards passing, North Carolina State averaged 0.7 yards per run and 2.7 yards per pass.

Jones said a difficult 30-21 loss to Mississippi State two weeks ago helped motivate the Bears' defense.

"We wanted to come back from the Mississippi State game and play well," said Jones, who ranks fifth in the SWC in total tackles. "We're playing as a team. The most important thing is to do just what we did, keep their offense off the field and out of the end zone."

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy said no one practices or plays harder for the Bears than Jones.

"We're playing better defense because we're getting great senior leadership," Reedy said. "LaCurtis is the perfect example of what this defense is all about."

Fitzgerald isn't much into records, especially when they come in defeat.

But even he couldn't help but smile when told his three-touchdown performance in the Longhorns' loss to Notre Dame had found its way into both the Texas and Fighting Irish record books.

"It's hard to lose a game like that," said Fitzgerald, a junior from Agoura, Calif. "But if there is a positive, it's kind of an honor to get into both the Texas and Notre Dame record books because the programs have so much tradition."

Fitzgerald tied the Longhorn record of three touchdown receptions in a game set by Pete Lammons in 1965 against Baylor. And he tied the Notre Dame record for touchdown catches by an opponent set by Andy Hamilton of Louisiana State in 1971.

Texas coach John Mackovic said Fitzgerald has helped make Texas' tight ends — including Steve Bradley, Derrick Scott and Derek Lewis — the best group the fourth-year coach has had at UT.

"Pat had a great game. The thing about Pat is he came here and has learned and worked his way up," Mackovic said. "Now he is in the record books both for Texas and for Notre Dame. He has a 3.45 grade point average, and I think he will be an academic All-American. So it's great to see people like that do well."

Fitzgerald gave credit to teammates such as wide receiver Mike Adams, who also had a great game against the Irish, catching five passes for 141 yards.

"When you have receivers like Mike, they have got to cover him and leave someone open. If they are going to leave me open, I'll catch the ball," Fitzgerald said.

Prolific passer

Texas quarterback James Brown threw for 326 yards and four touchdowns in the Longhorns' 55-27 loss to Notre Dame last weekend. Brown and the Longhorns will try and bounce back against Southern Methodist this Saturday, starting at 12 noon. The Longhorns have a 2-1 record while the Mustangs are 1-2 going into the Southwest Conference opener in Waco.

Cayuga sophomore puts himself in prep record book

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — When Cayuga lines up in its I-formation, there's not much mystery about what will happen next: a punishing run right up the gut.

Knowing what's coming is one thing. Stopping it is quite another, as Frost proved last week.

Cayuga sophomore Gary Turner launched himself into the Polar Bears defense 37 times for 431 yards in the Wildcats' 37-21 victory Friday night, placing himself squarely in the state's prep record books.

It was the fifth-best performance in Class 2A history and 13th best ever in Texas, according to Bill McMurray's Texas High School All-Time Sports Record Book.

It was the 24th ever 400-plus rushing game in Texas, and it was accomplished mostly between the tackles.

"He's tough. He doesn't use much finesse," said coach Jerry Ives of the 5-foot-8, 180-pounder. "He's hard to get off his feet because he's so well-balanced."

Other notables from Week 3 included:

—Workhorse fullback Charvis Richmond covered 313 yards on 42 carries, scoring four touchdowns in a 38-27 victory over Brownsboro.

—The Ketric Sanford show continued for 4A's second-ranked team. Corsicana back Ketric Sanford gained 283 yards and four touchdowns in a 45-7 rout of Waxahachie.

—Harland Hill gained 284 yards and three touchdowns on 18 carries in a 34-7 Cedar Hill victory over Fort Worth Southwest.

—Mike Wallace rushed for 280 yards and two touchdowns in a 29-6 victory over San Antonio Edison.

—Belton's Mario Bronson scored two touchdowns in a 21-carry, 273-yard effort during a 42-23 victory over Brownwood.

—Quinlan Ford's Dustin McClintock rushed for 264 yards and four touchdowns against Mabank in a 27-21 victory.

—Jonathan Fryer of San Antonio East Central set a school record with 254 rushing yards, including a 99-yard TD run, in a 35-27 victory over Austin Johnston. He finished with three touchdowns.

—Michael Lane rumbled 228 yards on 14 carries, including touchdown runs of 94 and 55 yards, while Flour Bluff teammate Greg McCann picked up five sacks in a 39-0 victory over San Antonio Taft.

—Irving free safety-wide receiver Wes Fritz pulled down two interceptions, caught two touchdown passes and rushed for another on a reverse, made four tackles and punted five times for a 33-yard average in a 34-7 victory over Weatherford.

—Undray Smallwood of Raines scored five offensive touchdowns, scored another on a 34-yard interception return and blocked two punts and three passes in a 46-0 blanking of Bullard.

—Garland senior Shaylon Hart added a punt return touchdown to his four rushing TDs in a 41-14 victory over Arlington Bowie.

—Tellis Redmon rushed for 105 yards and four TDs, caught three passes for 59 yards and touchdown and returned for punts for 100 yards in Grapevine's 35-6 victory over Grand Saline.

—Jesse Roberts helped Mansfield to a 3-0 start with a 14-of-26 performance for 230 yards and a touchdown in a 24-20 victory over Carrollton Smith.

—George Latu of Keller grabbed two interceptions and returned a kickoff for a touchdown in a 27-22 victory over Hurst Bell.

—Springs' 41-38 victory over Cy-Falls was capped with a 5-yard toss by Eric Wilson (192 passing yards) to Raymond Turner with 14 seconds left. Sophomore Ben Gay paced Spring with 254 yards on the ground.

—Clear Brook's Dashaun Richard picked off four passes to help ensure a 37-4 victory over Houston Furr.

—In the absence of stand-out running back Wes Danaher, who was injured with a concussion early in the game, Corpus Christi Calallen's Travis Fallon threw for 142 yards on 7-for-13 passing and rushed for 80. He fired for one TD and ran for three.

Pirates piling up big offensive numbers

LEFORS — Without all-state candidate Tommy Green, the Lefors Pirates are proving they're no pushovers by any means. Just ask Vernon Northside.

The Pirates, now 2-1 on the season, piled up some big numbers in beating Northside, 51-6, last Friday.

"We're improving week by week. We're emphasizing teamwork and all the players are learning to rely more on themselves instead of looking to someone else," said Lefors coach Ronny Miller.

The Pirates received a blow before the season kicked off when Green, who ran for 36 touchdowns and threw 13 TD passes a year ago, sustained a season-ending knee injury in a scrimmage.

After dropping the season opener to a strong Silverton club, the Pirates bounced back to down Higgins, 35-18. Last week, led by back Keith Franks, the Pirates rolled up 413 yards in disposing of Northside.

Franks, a senior, passed for three touchdowns and ran for two others. Jeremy Howard caught two of those TD passes and also ran for another one.

"Franks is our team captain and he's really stepped it up a notch. He's been quite a leader. Howard is really coming through for us," Miller added.

Archie Summers and Craig Seely have also been impressive for the Pirates, Miller said.

"Summers has made some big improvements and Seely is playing tough defense," he said.

Lefors plays at Follett Friday night with the 6-man game kicking off at 7:30.

"Follett is going to be a tough one," Miller said. "They've got a 1-2 record, but they're one of the better 1-2 teams around."

Pampa, Andrews contest could be defensive struggle

PAMPA — The last non-district game of the season for Pampa Friday night against Andrews has promises of being a defensive struggle.

In three games, Andrews has allowed an average of 87.5 yards, ranking the Mustangs in the top 10 defensively among Class 4A teams. Pampa's defense, which has given up an average of 119 yards in three games, is tops among District 1-4A teams.

Andrews, however, has had problems on the other side of the ball. The Mustangs (1-2) lost to Snyder, 6-2, in the season opener, came back to beat Lubbock Estacado, 13-7, then fell to Sweetwater, 21-6, last weekend.

Andrews' wishbone offense has accounted for only a touchdown, an 11-yard pass to end Justin Stricklin from quarterback Dewayne Wilkins.

"Our offense is really down," said Sports Editor Rudy Diaz of the Andrews County News. "We're on the high side on defense and the low side on offense."

The Mustangs' defense is led by all-state candidate Brian Valenzuela (210-pound senior) at end and tackle Chisum Moore (198-pound senior), who combines both strength and quickness.

"The defense isn't real quick, but they do a good job of gang-tackling. They're very sound fundamentally," Diaz said.

Pampa defeated Andrews, 22-7, last season.

Oklahoma City will bid to be Big 12 headquarters

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Mayor Ron Norick said it might be a long shot, but Oklahoma City will make a bid to become home to the Big 12 conference next year.

Norick confirmed Tuesday that Big 12 Commissioner Steve Hatchell has asked city officials for a proposal on locating the league headquarters here.

"It's up to us to put together a package. We'll treat it like any other economic development prospect," Norick said.

In a recent letter to Norick, Hatchell outlined three areas of concern. The league needs a 15,000- to 20,000-square-foot facility with parking spaces for 20 workers and 30 visitors. Also needed are special incentives for league officials and office equipment with a management system to handle accounting services.

"Those special inducements include things like free automobiles for college presidents and coaches when they visit the league office, and tax abatements for real property for off-site meetings," the mayor said.

Norick said the private sector likely would pick up the tab for some of those incentives.

The mayor viewed Oklahoma City as "somewhat of a long shot" for a headquarters site because it lacks direct air service flights. Other inducements, such as quality of life and low cost of living, will be used in attempts to counter the disadvantage, he said.

"We have three new sports facilities, including the renovations going on at the Myriad, the 20,000-seat sports arena and the Triple A baseball park," Norick said.

Those sites could field Big 12 sports such as indoor track, wrestling, basketball and baseball tournaments, he said.

Hatchell has been using temporary offices in Dallas and Kansas City, Mo., since being named in March to lead the expanded conference.

He is seeking proposals from a number of cities, and he plans to visit each potential site before the Oct. 23 submission deadline. League officials will draft a short list before making a final decision on a site by Dec. 1, Norick said.

The new league gets under way July 1 when Big Eight schools join Baylor, Texas, Texas A&M and Texas Tech from the Southwest Conference.

Rockies move back into first

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Walker hit two home runs and Bret Saberhagen won for the first time in nearly eight weeks Tuesday night as Colorado moved back into first place in the NL West by beating Los Angeles 7-3.

With five days left in the season and one game left in this series, the Rockies lead the division by a half-game. Los Angeles leads Houston by a half-game in the wild card race.

Walker's second homer of the game off Tom Candiotti (7-14), a two-run shot to right-center following a leadoff walk to Dante Bichette in the sixth, snapped a 2-2 tie. It was the third two-homer game of the season for Walker, who has a career-high 34.

Ellis Burks hit a two-out, two-run single off Pedro Astacio in the eighth and Joe Girardi had a two-out RBI single in the ninth to give the Rockies some breathing room.

Rangers keep hopes alive

ARLINGTON (AP) — Mark McLemore's two-out RBI single in the eighth inning broke the final tie and the Texas Rangers remained alive in the AL West and wild-card races with a 7-6 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Tuesday night.
Rusty Greer led off the eighth with a single off Carlos Reyes (4-6). He moved to third on pinch-hitter Jeff Frye's sacrifice bunt and a throwing error by shortstop Mike Bordick on Otis Nixon's grounder.
McLemore followed with a single up the middle to make it 6-5. Will Clark added an insurance run with an RBI single scoring Nixon from second.
Roger McDowell (7-4) pitched 1 1-3 innings for the win, but ran into some trouble in the ninth, loading the bases with no outs. Jeff Russell came on and got Brent Gates to hit into a double play as one run scored and then got the final out for his 20th save.
Seattle's 10-2 victory over California coupled reduced the Mariners' magic number for eliminating the Rangers from divisional contention to one. Any Seattle victory or Texas defeat would knock out the Rangers.
New York's magic number for eliminating the Rangers from the wild-card race is two as the Yankees beat Milwaukee 5-4. Any combination of two New York victories or Rangers losses will eliminate Texas from that race.

Texas rallied for a 5-4 lead with four runs in the sixth, three on one play that was marred by two errors. But the A's came back to take advantage of two seventh-inning miscues by the Rangers to tie the game.
Stan Javier reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and went to third on catcher Ivan Rodriguez's throwing error. Geronimo Berroa walked and Gates hit a liner to right that was muffed by Greer for an error, allowing Javier to score the tying run.
Oakland appeared to be in command 5-1 entering the sixth behind Mark McGwire's 37th and 38th homers and the pitching of Todd Stottlemyre, who struck out 10 and allowed four hits through five innings.
Juan Gonzalez got the sixth-inning rally started with a solo homer, his 27th. Mickey Tettleton followed with a double and Rodriguez walked. Greer followed with a chopper that glanced off the glove of Brosius at third base for the inning's first error.

Bordick retrieved the ball in short left field and threw late to the plate as Tettleton scored. Catcher Terry Steinbach fired to third in an attempt to throw out Rodriguez, but the ball bounced into left field and both Rodriguez and Greer scored.
McGwire gave Oakland a 2-0 first-inning lead. The 440-foot blast to center tied for the second-longest homer at The Ballpark in Arlington this season and was McGwire's third in his last four at-bats against Kevin Gross.
McGwire, who has 10 homers in 13 games, added a solo shot in the sixth.
Notes: Third baseman Dean Palmer was in the Rangers starting lineup for the first time since June 3 when he tore his left biceps tendon on a swing. He was thought to be lost for the season, but his rehabilitation went ahead of schedule. He was 2-for-3. ... Cecil Fielder of Detroit had a 442-foot homer for the longest at The Ballpark in 1995. Frank Thomas of the Chicago White Sox also had a 440-foot shot this season. ... McGwire has 23 homers on the road. ... Stottlemyre's 10 strikeouts gave him 202 for the season, the third A's pitcher to strike out 200 or more.

Astros' Swindell pitches shutout

HOUSTON (AP) — Greg Swindell finally took the step Houston Astros manager Terry Collins had been expecting.
Given pre-game instructions not to hold anything back for the later innings, Swindell pitched six innings and combined with three relievers to help the Astros shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-0 Tuesday night.
"A few people have been waiting for Greg Swindell to step up and tonight he stepped up," Collins said. "He gave up some hits but he did today what we've waited for him to do for a long time."
The victory allowed the Astros to stay close in the NL wild-card race, one-half game behind the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Statues grim reminder of Flight 103

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) - The larger-than-life figures are captured in their most private moments - trapped in agony, anger and grief.

Some have arms raised imploring skyward, the fists of others pound the ground, still others are curled up in balls of helplessness.

The naked stone statues depict the mothers of the 35 Syracuse University students killed in the 1988 terrorist bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over the the Scottish village of Lockerbie.

"We were truly stripped to the core of our being. Age, color, race, religion played no role; at that devastating moment we were all the same," said Suse Lowenstein, the artist who sculpted the striking exhibit. It is on display at Syracuse University through March 1996.

National Cattlemen's Beef Association names CEO

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - Charles P. (Chuck) Schroeder of Lincoln, Neb., will be the first chief executive officer of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), according to the organization's transition executive committee.

NCBA is the organization formed out of the consolidation of the National Live Stock & Meat Board/Beef Industry Council and the National Cattlemen's Association that also will incorporate many aspects of the Beef Board through a joint operating agreement.

Selected from a field of more than 200 candidates, Schroeder is now executive vice president and director of development for the $350 million University of Nebraska Foundation, where he coordinates fundraising activities for the university's four separate campuses. Schroeder is a principal in the Schroeder Cattle Company, a diversified ranching, feeding and operation in southwest Nebraska, and a former director of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture.

Among his many professional pursuits, he is co-founder and president of the Heartland Center for Leadership Development and national chairman of the Council for Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching.

Members of the industry search committee responsible for finding the NCBA's first executive said they found Schroeder to be a man with a track record for getting results, an effective leader with a sense of vision, energetic, a man of integrity and committed to the beef industry.

Schroeder said industry leaders have worked diligently to define a new vision for the beef industry.

"A dynamic and profitable beef industry, which concentrates resources around a unified plan, consistently meets consumer needs and increases market share," Schroeder said. "In the months ahead, my utmost priority will be to support, to promote, to inject that vision statement and its fundamental truths into every segment of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association. In both staff and our complex volunteer organization, we must be willing to measure the value of every action against the standard of our vision statement."

As CEO during the early days of the NCBA, Schroeder said his role would be to listen to, learn from and lead staff and volunteer organization toward a consensus around the vision statement.

"With that consensus, we can most effectively make the decisions, take the actions necessary to implement the long range plan and make a difference on the leverage points spelled out in the plan," he said.

The transition executive committee, which includes members of the executive committees of both National Cattlemen's Association and Meat Board along with representatives of the Beef Board, U.S. Meat Export Federation and American National CattleWomen, will oversee the transition to a single consumer-driven organization representing all segments of the industry by Feb. 1, 1996. NCBA will for the first time bring together membership and checkoff efforts under a single plan and budget, Schroeder said.

Weatherford fast becoming Lotto Texas capital of the state

AUSTIN (AP) - Weatherford is fast becoming the Lotto Texas capital of the state.

The town of roughly 18,000 just west of Fort Worth has produced not only three jackpot winners, but three BIG jackpot winners.

On Tuesday, the latest to have lotto luck in Weatherford, Leah and Rodney Riedel, claimed the $32.3 million jackpot drawn on Saturday. The other two winning tickets sold in the city were worth $26.9 million in August and $20.2 million last December.

"There's got to be something going on in Weatherford," quipped Nora Linares, Texas Lottery Commission executive director.

In addition to the lotto winners, Mary Andress of Weatherford was one of the first to claim a $1 million prize in the Texas Lottery's Lone Star Millions game in September 1993.

Michael Dunnahoo of nearby Springtown, just 15 miles north of Weatherford, claimed a $7.8 million Lotto Texas jackpot in January 1994, giving Parker County a total of four lotto winners.

"I would like to invite everyone across Texas to buy their lotto tickets here. It's clear we have the luck," Weatherford Mayor Sherry Watson said. "We've had Quick Pick winners and winners who have selected their own numbers. We can offer it all."

Neoma Patterson would agree with that. Ms. Patterson is the owner of Handy Place in Weatherford, the eighth retailer to sell two winning lotto tickets.

Because retailers who sell a winning ticket receive a bonus totaling 1 percent of a jackpot, Ms. Patterson has received more than $500,000 for selling the Riedels' ticket and the ticket worth $20.2 million to former waitress Diane Leiding last December.

"A bunch of people were telling me they wouldn't buy their ticket at Handy Place anymore because they didn't think lightning could strike twice," Ms. Watson said. "It did, and it would be neat if we got three times in one spot."

Christopher M. Tull is Weatherford's other lotto winner. He claimed a $26.9 million jackpot in August.
