PAMPA — Starting Thursday night, Nov. 2, some 80 percent of local merchants are expected to be open late on Thursdays.

The merchants will be staying open late every Thursday night until Christmas.

The retail merchants will be having the late hours on Thursdays in conjunction with the Celebration of Lights project.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II got a taste of the common life — and airplane food — traveling for the first time on a commercial plane.

Well, not that common: the first-class section was for her alone and the seats were ripped out and replaced with an elegant table, four armchairs and two beds.

The food was regular airplane fare, though. She even had a layover — 1 1/2 hours at Los Angeles International Airport on Monday — en route to New Zealand for a meeting of leaders of the Commonwealth.

The queen agreed to fly Air New Zealand at the suggestion of the New Zealand government, which is hosting the meeting, Buckingham Palace said last week.

The queen usually flies in an aircraft of the Royal Squadron or charters a long-range jet. Costs for all flights on official business are paid by England. Her decision to fly commercially saved British taxpayers an estimated $630,000.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's peso opened weaker against the dollar Tuesday as investors stepped back from a two-day rally in the local currency.

On spot markets in Mexico City, the dollar opened at mid-rate levels of 6.9850 pesos against 6.9250 pesos at Monday's close.

The peso appeared to be hit by an early speculative sell-off after it followed up Friday's 2.4 percent rally against the dollar by gaining another 2.0 percent Monday on weekend news of a new economic pact inked by government, business and labor representatives.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Police recovered a 1,700-year-old stone statue of an ancient idol on Monday after a man tried to sell it to tourists visiting the Sphinx and the Giza pyramids.

The statue of the god Hobei — worshiped by Arabs before the advent of Islam — was found in the Cairo apartment of Amir Mohammad Tawfiq, a man authorities said was a known smuggler. He was arrested.

Clinton: Talks offer Bosnians hope for peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the eve of critical negotiations among the warring parties in Bosnia, President Clinton said today the talks offer the best chance for peace since the war began four years ago. "It may be the last chance we have for a very long time," he said.

The president met with leaders of his national security team before they headed to Dayton, Ohio, where negotiations begin Wednesday at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

"We have come to a defining moment in Bosnia," the president said.

Clinton sought to allay strong reservations in Congress about using American troops to enforce any peace settlement in Bosnia. NATO is the only organization with the strength and track record to enforce the peace, he said, and the United States is the leader of NATO.

"The United States must participate," Clinton said in a brief, nationally broadcast address from the Roosevelt Room. He emphasized that American troops would not be deployed unless there is a peace agreement.

To build support for his policy, Clinton will meet on Wednesday with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress.

On a roll call of 315-103 the House passed a nonbinding resolution late Monday declaring "there should not be a presumption" that enforcement of a peace agreement "will involve deployment of United States armed forces on the ground in the territory of the Republic of Bosnia."

The resolution doesn't require the president to do anything. Many senators have expressed similar sentiments, but there is no comparable measure awaiting a vote in the Senate.

Clinton said he did not expect the House vote to have any impact on the negotiations in Dayton.

"Only the parties to this terrible conflict can end it," the president said. "The world now looks to them to turn the horror of war to the promise of peace."

"For four years," he added, "the people in Bosnia have suffered the worst atrocities in Europe since World War II: mass executions, ethnic cleansings, concentration camps, rape and terror, starvation and disease."

So far, the conflict has been contained in the former Yugoslavia, Clinton said. However, he noted that the Balkans lie at the heart of Europe.

"If the war there reignites, it could spread and spark a much larger conflict, the kind of conflict that has drawn Americans into two larger European wars this century."

"We have to end the war in Bosnia and do it now," Clinton declared.

Clinton has said he would commit up to 25,000 U.S. troops to a NATO peacekeeping force if all warring parties in Bosnia reach a peace agreement. McCurry said Clinton would seek agreement for any deployment from Congress, although the administration does not believe it is required.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich called the vote Monday night "a sad vote" and said it was a message telling the president, "You have not convinced us this is a good policy."

Speaking to the Nixon Center for Peace and Freedom an hour after the vote, Gingrich, R-Ga., said, "I don't think any of us should feel gleeful or partisan or happy about this."

Before leaving for Dayton, U.S. mediator Richard Holbrooke said Monday afternoon before the vote that supporters of the House resolution were "doing grave damage to the national interests." He said the negotiations would open "without any assurance of success."

New dress code for teachers?

A number of familiar faces turned up in radically different outfits this morning at Pampa High School as teachers and administrators came to school decked out in their Halloween best. That's Principal John Kendall in the tutu, Assistant Principal Cay Warner as a dance-hall girl, Assistant Principal Floyd Sackett as Santa Claus and Science Department Chair Ann McAnelly with her hair down, something most Pampa residents haven't seen in years, according to Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele (not pictured and not costumed). The PHS dignitaries agreed to wear costumes after students raised over $1,700 to light the school.

PEDC board backs Proposition 3

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

Pampa Economic Development Corporation board members Monday passed a resolution in support of Proposition 3 on the November constitutional amendment ballot, an amendment they say will help the Panhandle area agriculturally.

The proposed amendment, also endorsed by the Texas EDC, would allow the use of existing bond authority of the Texas farm and ranch finance program to include assistance for expansion, development and diversification of production, processing, marketing and export of Texas agricultural products.

Primarily, PEDC Executive

Director Jack Ippel said that the amendment would promote value-added agriculture products by getting more money to fund their production.

In other business, board members Ernest Ramirez and Lewis Meers agreed to serve on a committee with Ippel to develop a strategic planning and visions plan.

PEDC's attorney Gene Thompson told the board that non-friable asbestos had been found in the Panhandle Equipment building. The board voted earlier this month to aid Crall Products in purchasing the building. Thompson indicated that he had a tentative agreement with Crall's lawyer to clean up the property before final contracts are signed.

The board also discussed a labor survey they plan to commission from West Texas A&M management instructor Dr. Suresh Gopalan.

Gopalan indicated in a letter that the project could cost almost $5,000, but PEDC board president Vic Raymond felt the cost could reach as high as $10,000.

At the board's August meeting, Ippel said the survey would show potential businesses the level of underemployment, salary and benefits in the area.

Underemployment, Ippel explained, occurs when a person is employed at a level under his or her education level; for example, when a person trained as a chemical engineer is pumping gas.

Ruins of burned, abandoned house touched by Halloween spirit

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff writer

As the shadows lengthen along McClellan Creek this time of year, the landscape begins to change.

Off the pavement, down a long, sparsely-traveled county road south of Pampa, the prairie drops off into the breaks of McClellan Creek and the tributaries that feed it. The road forks and begins its descent deep into the thick under brush that lines the dry creek bed.

The road, cut into the red dirt like a fresh scar across the face of dry dead prairie grass, dips and winds until it crosses a small bridge and begins climbing toward the burned out hulk of a once magnificent home on the hillside overlooking the creek.

The origins of the home, towering like Stonehenge in the setting sun, are shrouded in local myth as vague as the Druids of ancient England. The curved concrete steps leading to the once graceful porch are crumbling. The roof is gone leaving only the waning moon to light the ruins on a cold autumn's night.

The structure burned about two years ago, local authorities say.

Where once people lived, laughed and loved, there is now only the decay of broken bricks, charred wood and the cold, concrete walls emblazoned with graffiti.

Inside, the rusted body of a refrigerator, a sink and a hot water heater lie in an area that was once a warm, hospitable kitchen.

Toward the front of the house on an inside wall are markings, all illegible except for the word "HATE" scratched into the plaster.

On the walls of the basement, now filled with empty paper bags of range cubes, a few words and symbols can still be traced in the fading light. "DEATH" and a pentagram in gray spray paint are about all that is legible any more.

"When it was first built, it was quite a home," says one Gray County deputy.

After the home became abandoned, it was vandalized, officers say.

Over the years, law enforcement officers reported answering calls in the area of teenagers partying around the house.

"It had a porch that went all the way around," says one deputy, "but they tied ropes from the pillars to their pickups and tore down the porch."

Known to authorities as the Clown House, the structure featured a painting of a clown and balloons on one of the walls upstairs.

"It was probably a kid's bedroom," one officer says.

A number of years ago, a pentagram was spray painted on the hardwood floor near the entrance to the basement.

"I don't know if it was a cult or just a bunch of wannabees," the deputy says.

The warm autumn sun rests on the broken prairie, its rays glowing on the concrete walls. Three dead trees surround the house while mesquite and cedar grow green and rich only a few hundred feet away. The only life in evidence at the house now are vines of acacia greggii, devil's claw.

Just a pale white skeleton of the structure remains in the twilight.

In the west, the setting sun lights up the mare's tails floating in the sky. The wispy clouds are ablaze in angry reds and oranges.

To the north, the sky turns a dull blue gray, signaling an approaching front.

High in the southern sky, hangs the quarter circle of a waning moon.

Mesquite and cedar rustle slightly in the evening breeze, a breeze with a chill of winter to come. The dead trees near the house stand sentinel with their bare branches reaching out, clawing at the warmth of the fading light.

Coyotes can be heard nearby. An owl announces its presence in a cottonwood tree down in the bottoms of the creek. A twig snaps in the shallow ravine that runs behind the house.

The reds and oranges of the western sky fade leaving only a pale blue that turns to a darker hue overhead. What is left of the moon takes on an unnatural glow. The shadows of the structure lengthen with the setting sun and blend into darkness.

Despite the wind, the old windmill towering nearby stands still.

Fiery eyes reflect a car's headlights from deep in the brush along the creek.

Halloween has come to Gray County.

Rising from the banks of McClellan Creek like an ancient Druid ruin, the charred remains of an abandoned house remains the source of rumors of satanic cults and mysterious ceremonies in the Texas Panhandle.

States get failing grade in treatment of special ed

DALLAS (AP) — A national advocacy group has given the vast majority of states a failing grade in placing children with mental retardation in regular classrooms.

Using a weighted system that put the most emphasis on placement in the regular classroom and the least on placement in a separate school or residential facility, The Arc graded the 50 United States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Vermont earned a "B," while 16 states scored a "D" and 35 got an "F," according to the report card by The Arc, a national organization for the mentally retarded.

While some states have made "great strides" in placing mentally retarded students in regular classrooms, the average percentage increase was less than one percentage point from 1989-90 to 1992-93, the most recent year reported, The Arc says.

"On the eve of the 20th anniversary of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), The Arc is extremely disappointed to issue this report verifying that for children with mental retardation, placement in segregated educational environments continues to be the rule of the land," said Alan Abeson, executive director of the Arlington, Texas-based organization.

"Tragically, only 7.1 percent of children with mental retardation were receiving their education in regular classrooms in the school year 1992-93."

That compares with 6.7 percent in The Arc's first report, based on 1989-90 data. At the time, the group set a goal of at least 50 percent inclusion by 1995 and full inclusion by 2000.

For its report, The Arc analyzed data that was reported to Congress on IDEA's implementation. The law requires school districts to consider placing a child with disabilities in a regular classroom setting with the use of supplementary aids and services before exploring other alternatives.

"Our concern is if they're segregated in school, they miss out on much of the educational opportunities as well as such things as social interaction," said Sharon Davis, the author of the report.

"We're hopeful that by bringing attention to it, we'll be able to improve the situation."

State PTA offers training guide for parent school involvement

AUSTIN — The Texas Parents and Teachers Association and the Texas Education Agency have joined efforts to help increase parent involvement statewide by developing a training guide, Parent Involvement Manual, that can be used by churches, neighborhood associations, civic organizations, businesses, teacher associations, Title One parent groups, as well as PTAs to increase parent involvement.

Developed by the Texas PTA under contract with the TEA's Parent Involvement and Community Empowerment Initiative (PICEI), this manual offers 100 pages of resources, transparency masters and information to help present parent involvement training to a broad group of individuals.

"This training manual may include many references to PTA; however, it is by no means limited to PTA participation," stated Charlotte Travis, president of the 800,000-member Texas PTA.

"This training manual may be adapted and used by any community-based organization that is striving to increase the involvement of parents and families in schools," Travis added.

TEA has placed great emphasis on the importance of parent and family involvement in public education. In addition to the agency creating PICEI, the newly revised Texas Education Code requires parent representation on both the campus and district-level decision-making committees, a parent-teacher organization on every campus and the guarantee of rights to parents in participating in their child's education.

"Goal number one for public school education listed in the code says parents will participate as full partners in the education of their children," said Commissioner of Education Mike Moses.

For information about obtaining the manual, call the Texas PTA office in Austin at (512) 476-6769.

The manual is available free of charge to organizations or individuals interested in helping parents become more involved.

Judge accused of impeding justice

FORT WORTH (AP) — A federal judge has received a rebuke from a judicial panel that called his conduct in two trials an obstacle to effective justice.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' Judicial Council has found that Judge John McBryde undermined a grand jury investigation by refusing to respect another federal jurist's orders to seal records of a telemarketing fraud case.

The 19-member council also determined that McBryde also treated the clerk of the Northern District of Texas with "unwarranted, abusive" behavior and threatened to damage her career.

"Judge McBryde respectfully disagrees with the findings and rulings made by the Judicial Council..." read a statement by an aide at McBryde's Fort Worth chambers. "He is presently considering what further action should be taken in that regard."

An attorney had earlier urged McBryde's impeachment, with a special panel of four jurists appointed to investigate his complaint.

Waco attorney David H. Martin's grievance to the 5th Circuit had called McBryde "obstructive, abusive and hostile."

Martin's complaint stemmed from a civil trial he lost in McBryde's court in April.

The New Orleans appeals court ruled twice last year that McBryde had overstepped his authority, and it has thrown out harsh sanctions that he ordered.

Pampa United Way agency profile

The Community Day Care Center is a state-licensed child care facility that provides conscientious care for young children in our community. Very often, the Day Care Center is some parents' only hope for providing safe, concerned day care while they struggle to recover from adverse circumstances and earn a living for their families.

Operated by a trained staff of dedicated care providers, the Center provides quality care for children aged newborn to 12 years old. Enrollment is affordable to all socioeconomic levels in the Pampa area and is based on a sliding-fee scale. Its services include nutritious meals prepared at the Center, developmental activities and necessary transportation such as to and from school. Last year, the

The Community Day Care Center offers licensed child care for young children, providing quality care, nutrition, games and developmental activities.

Day Care Center provided 22,680 total days of child care, along with 47,880 meals.

Community Day Care Center is governed by a Board of Directors, a Center Director and 12 staff members. The staff members receive continuing education and training in child development, as well as training in CPR and first aid.

The Center is located at 1100 Gwendolen and is open Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Inquiries can be made by appointment with the director at the Center.

New footage of Kennedy assassination surfaces

DALLAS (AP) — It was fear that caused Patsy Paschall to hold back the film for almost 32 years, she says.

Mrs. Paschall shot the film out of a window of the old Dallas County Courthouse on Nov. 22, 1963 as President John F. Kennedy's motorcade rolled into Dealey Plaza. It resumes seconds after shots were fired and shows the chaotic scene in front of the old Texas Schoolbook Depository Building.

The Warren Commission concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald fired the shots from the old schoolbook depository building that killed Kennedy and seriously wounded then Texas Gov. John Connally.

She kept mostly quiet about the film until recently, when she says she felt safe enough to really go public with it.

"I used to think that someone would blow my head off," the 58-year-old city employee cheerfully offers. On a work break, she glances around the ground floor of City Hall. "I feel safe now."

She hopes to sell the four-minute film, she said. But some say the film may raise more questions than it answers.

Some say it might show a compelling puff of smoke coming from the grassy knoll and movement behind the picket fence at the rear of the knoll — something that might hint at a conspiracy. Others say the film has no new, stunning revelations.

Although versions and pieces of the film have floated in certain circles, the former court clerk from suburban Mesquite has kept it locked away in a safety deposit box.

Her attorney saw it, the FBI and the House Select Committee on Assassinations apparently viewed it, and Life magazine once borrowed a frame from it.

The general public has never seen the entire film, she says. Except for a dozen or so of her friends and associates, she says, no one has seen the complete version of what she sporadically captured with her little Bell & Howell camera.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that the jumpy, occasionally blurry film shows the motorcade passing down Main Street. The motorcade racing under the triple underpass. The frantic crowd scene in front of the Texas School Book Depository after the president had been shot.

"I had a view with a camera that no one else had," she said.

Louisiana governor's friend in prison

FORT WORTH (AP) — Gus Mijalis, close friend of Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards, has reported to a federal prison to begin serving a 20-month sentence for bank bribery and bankruptcy fraud.

The Shreveport businessman reported to the Federal Medical Center in Fort Worth about 9:30 a.m. Monday, said Betty Taylor, the prison's executive assistant.

Mijalis was assigned to the low-security prison and hospital so that he can be treated for congenital heart disease and other medical problems.

The bank bribery charges grew out of the collapse of Anglo-American Insurance Co., which left $29 million in unpaid claims for Louisiana taxpayers to make good.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Justifying term 'revolutionary'

A case can be made that last year's election ushered in changes that could almost justify House Speaker Newt Gingrich's favorite term, "revolutionary." But as reform ideas get massaged and bargained in capital back rooms, it is becoming increasingly obvious that a few more elections in which smaller government is acknowledged as the central issue - and in which small government advocates score significant new gains - will be necessary before a real revolution can occur.

Two key issues illustrate this fact: the gingerly way the Senate approaches what should be the slam-dunk issue of cutting taxes, and caution about actually eliminating government agencies.

It should be easy to cut taxes with a Republican majority, even though some tax cuts would face a veto threat from a Democratic president. But it hasn't been easy in the Senate at all.

The main reason is that early on in the debate, significant numbers of Republican senators decided they had to look respectable to inside-the-Beltway analysts, most of whom have a strong bias against tax cuts. So they put themselves in a position that amounts to a trap, vowing not to cut taxes until the Congressional Budget Office certified that a spending program guaranteed to balance the budget in seven years was in place.

The problem is that the Congressional Budget Office, even though Republicans now control the principal appointments, still clings to a "static" model of calculating the effect of changes in the tax code. That means, for example, that even though every recent reduction in the capital-gains tax rate has led to higher tax revenues (and every increase has reduced revenues), the CBO will score a capital-gains tax cut as a net loss of revenue to the government.

Such perverse analysis means the Republicans have to promise to cut Medicare spending to get enough savings to cut taxes, and that opens an emotional debate in which they can be portrayed as Scrooges.

Likewise, when the new majority came into power in January, much talk was heard about how the Departments of Energy, Education, Commerce, and maybe Transportation could be eliminated. Even though there's heavy pressure to cut spending, however, the pressure against actual elimination of agencies seems to be even heavier. Or at least the pressure that the Old Bulls respect - the lobbyists and inside-the-Beltway analysts they have come to know over the years.

So all the brave talk about eliminating departments has come down to a compromise, emerging after much fighting in the legislative trenches, that would eliminate the Department of Commerce as an entity but preserve most of its functions by shipping them off to different departments.

So the agency's $4.1 billion budget would be cut only slightly - by $6 billion over the next seven years, which would leave more than three-quarters of the budget in place. Of 35,000 jobs in the department, only about 6,000 would be eliminated - and that over seven years.

Perhaps taxpayers should sneer at any reduction in taxes or government spending. But what we've seen so far hardly justifies being called revolutionary.

The real story on Medicare reform

Congressional debates are supposed to inform the public, but often they do nothing more than distract. The Medicare debate has rarely risen above Democrats accusing Republicans of wanting to rob the elderly to fatten the rich and Republicans accusing Democrats of endangering old people by bankrupting the program. You've heard all this before, maybe?

When the back-and-forth gets less cliched than that, it focuses mainly on the amount of money the GOP proposes to save over the next seven years - whether $270 billion is far too much or just barely enough. All this amounts to an exercise in missing the point. You'd never know that the House and Senate have agreed to a basic restructuring of our biggest health care program, with huge potential benefits for the entire system of medicine in America.

The problem with Medicare is that it costs a lot today and will cost far more tomorrow. It is the third biggest single item in the federal budget, swallowing $180 billion a year, with expenses rising 10% annually. It also generates health care inflation by increasing the demand for treatment and minimizing the need for doctors and patients to control expenses.

Controlling expenses is the chief problem in American health care. We know how to stamp out polio, prevent heart disease, treat cancer, transplant organs, you name it. We even know how to extend medical insurance of one kind or another to everyone (as we do for the elderly through Medicare). What we don't know how to do is assure universal coverage and the most advanced medical treatment in the world without going through morley like a drunken sailor.

Fixing that flaw was the ostensible goal of President Clinton's health care package. It was rejected, though, out of well founded fear that it would strangle doctors and hospitals with red tape, deprive people of choices by effectively forcing them into health maintenance organizations (HMOs), lead to rationing of treatment and, in the long run, increase costs rather than reduce them. Unfortunately, the issue didn't expire when the Clinton plan did.

Those who oppose the GOP Medicare plan fling the charge of hypocrisy, arguing that Republicans are doing to the elderly what Clinton wanted to do for everyone - push them out of traditional fee-for-service medicine into HMOs in order to save money, never mind if the quality of care suffers. The proposal, you see, lets beneficiaries opt out of traditional Medicare coverage in favor of private insurance or HMOs. The New York Times story on a recent House vote said the measure would "curb Medicare spending and encourage the elderly to turn to private managed-care organizations."

So what's the difference between Clinton's approach and this one? A crucial innovation that would allow the elderly to keep the same doctors they have now without paying a financial penalty, while giving them powerful incentives to eliminate unnecessary expenditures. It's called the Medical Savings Account, and it holds considerable promise.

Here's how it would work. A Medicare recipient would get the money the government now spends each year on the average beneficiary (currently about $4,800). Then she could buy a catastrophic insurance policy covering only those expenses above $3,000 and put $1,500 in a special account to pay for expenses below the deductible.

This has several virtues: It gives patients the freedom to go to the doctor they choose; it reduces their maximum out-of-pocket exposure; and it gives them a stake in eliminating unnecessary spending, since they would get to keep any money left in the MSA at the end of the year. Contrary to myth, MSAs would be a winning bargain for the sick as well as the healthy.

Critics assume the GOP plan will drag down the elderly into HMOs, but the assumption is mistaken. Peter Ferrara, a health care expert at the National Center for Policy Analysis who helped draft the legislation, estimates that at least half of the people in Medicare will choose MSAs instead - for the simple reason that it offers the best deal. No more than 20%, he says, will join HMOs.

That's a good thing for the rest of us, because HMOs give the individual patient no reason to economize on medical care and have proven a weak antidote to our money troubles. MSAs, on the other hand, restore many of the cost-control incentives needed to rein in health care expenditures without compromising quality.

If the plan works, it would be a great improvement in our health care system, preserving the best of the status quo at an affordable cost. There are no guarantees, but give the Republicans points for boldness.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 31, the 304th day of 1995. There are 61 days left in the year. This is Halloween.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 31, 1517, Martin Luther posted the 95 Theses on the door of the Wittenberg Palace church, marking the start of the Protestant Reformation in Germany.

On this date:

In 1795, English poet John Keats was born in London.

In 1864, Nevada became the 36th state.

In 1926, magician Harry Houdini died in Detroit of gangrene and peritonitis resulting from a ruptured appendix.

In 1941, the U.S. Navy destroyer Reuben James was torpedoed by a German U-boat off Iceland with the loss of 115 lives, even though the United States had not yet entered World War II.

In 1955, Britain's Princess Margaret ended weeks of speculation by announcing she would not marry Royal Air Force Capt. Peter Townsend.

Chilling result of government solutions

Charley Reese

There have been two examples of a liberal society carried to its logical conclusion - Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union.

Of course, you don't think of either of those regimes as liberal. If you define the word "liberal" the way it was defined in the 18th and 19th centuries, you would be correct. But "liberal" as it is defined today means exactly the kind of society that emerged in Hitler's Germany and Stalin's Russia.

What is the common belief that you see expressed by liberals in America in the 1990s? - that government can and should engineer solutions to all human problems. Well, that is exactly what the Nazi Party and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union set out to do.

The parallels between what led to those tyrannies and our society today are there if you have the nerve to take off your rose-colored glasses and look reality in the face. What do you see?

You see a government that pays no attention to the idea of constitutional restraints. The operative attitude in Washington is that any social problem is fair game for federal laws and federal law enforcement.

Do children smoke? The federal government will stop them.

Do loutish husbands beat their wives? Ah, the federal government will stop that, too.

Should killing be allowed as a solution to unwanted children? Oh, yes, that's legalized already, and there is a lot of talk about legalizing euthanasia for the elderly and the terminally ill.

Study the early Third Reich. Death as therapy started out with the retarded, the terminally ill and the insane, but once you accept killing as a solution to social and economic problems, well, the powers that be will always find more "social problems" to "solve."

That's why anyone with sense enough to open an umbrella in a rainstorm should be opposed to legalized abortion. It's government sanctioned killing for the purpose of solving social problems.

If you wish to see where such thinking can lead, go visit Auschwitz. Jews weren't killed because of hate. They were killed because the Third Reich declared them to be a social and economic problem, and they saw death as a final solution.

Note how American police are becoming militarized. There is a simple reason why we should stop this trend. A police officer is person who enforces laws, sometimes having to take into custody people who are only, at the time, presumed to be guilty. Their guilt or innocence will be established by a jury in court.

The military philosophy, however, is to close with and destroy the enemy. The soldier is not trained to see the enemy as people who may or may not deserve to die. All enemies deserve to die. We need to put law enforcement officers back into suits and ties and take away the masks, combat boots, machine guns and other such military paraphernalia.

Note, too, how secretive and paranoid the federal government has become. Virtually all foreign policy decisions are made in secret with no opportunity for public debate. All Federal Reserve decisions are made in secret. Look how much of the public record is classified as secret.

Finally, note how often the president (and not only this one) disregards Congress and governs by executive order, by international agreement or by treaties. Richard Nixon created the Environmental Protection Agency by executive order.

The American Revolutionaries recognized that government is dangerous. They knew the only way to avoid tyranny was to limit the power of government to do anything, good or bad.

Today's liberals, in their zeal to do good, are asking government to assume total power to solve all problems. The best of them, like the best of the Germans, will weep bitter tears of regret one day. But, by then, the monster they created will be loose.

Choosing more resourceful career options

Last winter Cindy Sanborn had a revelation while watching late-night television. The divorced mother of two was at the end of her rope. Her ex-husband was not paying child support, and she had sold nearly everything the family owned to keep food on the table and buy medicine for her 15-year-old daughter.

"It was about 1 a.m., and I saw this weird commercial with women and trucks," she says describing the ad for Women Unlimited, an organization that teaches trade and technical skills to women who are reentering the workforce.

Faced with piles of bills and the realization that the child support wasn't ever going to come, Sanborn decided to pursue a trade. "I was sick and tired of being helpless," she said.

Now the image Sanborn projects is far from helpless, especially since it can frequently be found working atop the Million Dollar Bridge in Portland, Maine. After completing Women Unlimited's 14-week course, Sanborn became the first woman to be a unionized ironworker in her state. She makes $10 an hour now and will make $17 an hour once she becomes a journeyman ironworker, probably in about four years.

Lured by good wages and the satisfaction that comes from skilled work, many women are pursuing careers in trades such as carpentry, welding, electrical work, masonry and truck driving - fields that were all but off limits to women just a few decades ago.

Sara Eckel

Groups such as Women Unlimited and Chicago Women in Trades help welfare mothers, unemployed women and displaced homemakers take the first step toward nontraditional work. As well as teaching the technical aspects of the trades, the classes also offer weight and aerobic training, interviewing techniques and assertiveness training. Students are encouraged to learn back-up trades as well as primary ones. Sanborn, for example, is also trained to drive trucks containing hazardous waste.

For many of the students, one of the best things that the training programs provide is the assurance that they're not crazy for wanting to enter this very masculine arena. "It helps build a support system so you don't think you're the only woman in the world who wants to go into construction," says Barbara McCollum, a graduate of Chicago Women in Trades' program.

McCollum, a former accountant turned carpenter, says the reactions from male bosses and crew members vary with each job, where she is frequently the only woman on board. "With some crews you can socialize and have lunch with the guys, but on other crews the talk is in the toilet, basically," she says.

Success rates for the programs are high. Eighty-nine percent of Women Unlimited's 1995 graduates have already found work, and 65% of Chicago Women in Trades grads now have a steady paycheck. Lauren Sugarman of Chicago Women in Trades is heartened by the fact that so many women are discovering the trades the number of tradeswomen has doubled since 1980 - but warns that these well-paying fields would never have opened to women if it weren't for affirmative action. "It's no accident that women were not included in these programs before," she says. "It wasn't until employers had specific mandates to hire women and people of color that things changed."

Even now, things are far from perfect. McCollum says she is sometimes put on the fringe of a job, isolated from other crew members, doing menial tasks that don't teach her new skills. Sanborn says she still gets strange looks when she walks around town in her soot-covered work clothes, a crescent wrench peeking out of her pocket.

"We're in uncharted territory," says Sanborn. "It's going to take people some time to get used to it."

Clinton to meet with GOP leaders on federal debts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will meet with congressional leaders Wednesday to explore how the government can avoid defaulting on its debts during the battle over the budget, the White House said today.

The meeting was suggested by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole during a telephone conversation late Monday with White House chief of staff Leon Panetta.

The subject is to be taken up at the end of a meeting between Clinton and the congressional leadership on Bosnia. White House press secretary Mike McCurry discouraged speculation that the meeting might be the beginning of budget negotiations between the administration and Congress. He said they would be "talking about default, not budget."

Wednesday's meeting comes in the wake of a rare conciliatory note from the head of the Senate Budget Committee in the battle over balancing the federal budget and keeping the government operating.

Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said he would consider lifting the debt ceiling to permit borrowing through November — but not through January as the administration would like.

Domenici's idea gained little support from other GOP leaders.

Dole, R-Kan., and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Monday they are waiting to hear from President Clinton. They balked at discussing the debt limit question with Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin. Gingrich said: "It's very hard to follow Rubin, so it would be nice to talk to his boss."

"I think there's some feeling among Republicans that Secretary Rubin's been so political ... that he doesn't have a lot of credibility up here," Dole told reporters. "He may have a good case, but no credibility. If this is this important, it ought to be ratcheted up to the presidential level."

Republicans are refusing to raise the debt limit until Clinton agrees to their plans for balancing the budget in seven years, cutting taxes and scaling back Medicare and Medicaid.

The House and Senate passed similar versions of a sweeping budget bill last week and negotiators are to meet to work out the details. Clinton has said he would veto the measure.

Rubin said Congress is acting irresponsibly by refusing to separate the debt limit issue from broader budget matters to avoid the first default in the federal government's history. He proposed last week that the $4.9 trillion debt limit be raised by $85 billion, enough to keep the government going into next year.

"Linking a debt limit increase to resolution of differences on the budget could cause profound damage to our country," Rubin said.

Rubin said that without an immediate extension of the government's borrowing authority, the Treasury will run out of cash and be unable to issue new securities next week.

Canada survives Quebec independence referendum

MONTREAL (AP) — Canada survived, just barely. But Quebec emerged today from its independence referendum torn in half, with the defeated separatists targeting scapegoats and defiantly pledging another breakaway attempt.

The federalists who backed national unity squeaked through to win with 50.6 percent to 49.4. By a margin of barely 50,000 votes out of 4.67 million cast Monday, Canada was spared the loss of its largest province, with one-quarter of its people.

But victory speeches calling for reconciliation coincided with street fighting between hundreds of youths from the rival camps, as well as a fire set at the office of a federalist leader.

The co-leader of the separatists, Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau, shocked Canadians with a bitter speech blaming the defeat on big business and Quebec's non-francophone immigrants.

"It's true we have been defeated, but basically by what? By money and the ethnic vote," Parizeau said. "We (French Quebecers) voted for the Yes by a margin of 60 percent."

About 82 percent of Quebecers are French-speaking. As expected, more than nine in 10 of English-speaking and immigrant Quebecers voted No — they have traditionally felt excluded by the francophone majority.

B'nai Brith Canada, an anti-discrimination group, demanded that Parizeau retract his remarks, saying they were "unfitting for a premier of a province."

"Parizeau's disdain for minority communities is extremely harmful," said Frank Dimant, the organization's executive vice president.

Prime Minister Jean Chretien, a Quebecer who campaigned vigorously to keep the province in Canada, went on national TV to invite Parizeau to discuss reforms that would satisfy Quebecers.

"We have every reason to be proud of a democracy where citizens can peacefully debate the very existence of their country," Chretien said. "The time has come for us to work together ... to turn a new page."

But there was no echo of compromise from Parizeau.

"We lost by a tiny margin," he told supporters at separatist headquarters. "What do you do? Well, you roll up your sleeves and you begin all over again."

President Clinton called Chretien after the results were announced and expressed admiration for a "strong and united Canada," said White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano.

One of the few certainties to come out of the referendum was that Chretien would face intensified pressure to overhaul the federal system. Premiers of several English-speaking provinces, while hailing the outcome of the referendum, said the narrow vote proved it was time for Ottawa to discuss decentralization that would give more power to the provinces.

"This is not so much a victory for the No side as it is a reprieve — a reprieve that must be used wisely if Canada and Quebec are to avoid paralysis," said Preston Manning, leader of the right-wing Reform Party that has pushed for reduced federal power.

Among those most relieved by the results were residents of Canada's four Maritime provinces, who would have been cut off from the rest of their country if Quebec had separated.

"I'm glad it's a No, but it's such a dicey No that it's not exactly comfortable," said Jennifer Vankessel, 24, a social-work student at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"It seems things will be pretty scary for the next little while."

Employment costs register smallest increase on record

WASHINGTON (AP) — American workers' wages, salaries and benefits rose 2.7 percent in the year ended Sept. 30, the tiniest increase on record, showing employee compensation was failing to keep up with inflation.

The Labor Department said today the increase in its Employment Cost Index was the smallest since it began tracking costs in 1981. But while compensation remained slack, the report suggested price increases also were being held in check.

The index is considered one of the beat gauges of wage inflation pressures since compensation represents about two-thirds of the cost of a product. Consumer prices were rising at a 2.8 percent annual rate during September.

Many analysts had expected employee cost increases in the year ended Sept. 30 to match the 2.9 percent advance in the 12 months ended June 30.

Although the economy grew at a robust 4.2 percent annual rate during the third quarter, job growth has been relatively modest. That, combined with continued business restructuring and downsizing, has provided workers with little leverage to seek increased wages and benefits.

The index showed wages and salaries — nearly three-fourths of total compensation — rose 2.8 percent in the year ended Sept. 30, even slower than the 2.9 percent advance a year earlier. Wages and salaries gained 3 percent during the year ended June 30.

The cost of benefits inched up 2.2 percent, also the smallest gain on record. It was down from a 3.8 percent advance in the year ended Sept. 30, 1994, and from the 2.7 percent increase in the 12 months ended June 30.

Economists say budget means brighter future

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States could have a bright future, with falling trade deficits, rising productivity and a higher standard of living, all thanks to a balanced budget, many economists believe.

They caution, however, that the long-term gains will not come without some near-term pain. Economic growth will be marginally slower and unemployment slightly higher over the next seven years as the federal government trims nearly $1 trillion from its spending plans, they say. "Most analysts don't expect the deficit savings in the House- and Senate-passed budget bills to be enough to trigger a recession, as long as the Federal Reserve does its part by lowering interest rates. "What we all expect to happen is for the Fed to respond to the deficit reductions by letting interest rates decline. That is the biggest factor that will cushion the economy from the impact of the spending cuts," Chris Varvares, economist at Laurence H. Meyer & Associates in St. Louis, said Monday.

Economists predict that the declines in interest rates would be substantial, sending the 30-year Treasury bond, currently at 6.4 percent, down by as much as 2 percentage points by 2001.

This gain would come from a looser Fed interest rate policy and smaller federal borrowing demands as the deficit shrinks.

Such a sharp reduction in borrowing costs would be a boon not only for business investment but other interest-sensitive sectors of the economy such as housing and autos.

Analysts said that by reducing overall demand in the government and private sectors, the move to a balanced budget would help the country attack its other deficit headache, the trade imbalance.

Peter Jaquette, senior economist at the WEFA Group in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said his firm forecasts that a balanced budget would allow the country's broadest measure of trade, the current account, to move into surplus by 2002.

But while WEFA forecasts higher growth rates after 2002, Jaquette said his firm's economic model shows slower growth and higher unemployment until that time.

WEFA projects that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, will be 0.3 percentage point slower through 2002, with some of the biggest impacts coming in later years as the spending cuts really begin to bite.

David Wyss, of DRI-McGraw Hill Inc., was not as pessimistic, believing that the Fed's lower rates would be able to offset the spending cuts. But if the Fed does not act, DRI predicts unemployment will average 0.4 percentage point higher through 2002, a difference of about 500,000 jobs.

Economists are in agreement that once the federal government is brought into balance either in 2002 or probably a little later, allowing for some slippage in the program, the economic gains will be significant.

"In the long run, this program is clearly good for the economy. It shifts the mix away from consumption toward investment. That allows for stronger productivity growth and faster increases in living standards," said Wyss.

The optimism stems from a belief that a balanced budget would attack the country's biggest economic problem, a low savings rate.

With higher savings, brought about because the government would be borrowing less, more capital at lower rates would be available to businesses to invest in new equipment that would boost worker productivity.

Couple help catch their attackers

DALLAS (AP) - Despite enduring unspeakable horrors, a North Dallas couple has helped police track down three men they believe were responsible for their three hours of hell.

Three men were charged Monday with raping the 31-year-old wife while her 34-year-old husband was forced to watch, a crime that shocked even hardened Dallas police detectives.

The arrests, in turn, have police detectives dusting off the files of robbery cases dating back to 1993.

Kenneth Ray Johnson 23; Noel Raul Cordoba, 19; and James Alexander Hopson, 22, all of Dallas, were charged Monday with aggravated sexual assault in the Thursday attack. Hopson also was charged with aggravated robbery. More charges are likely to be filed, police said.

Police said the rape was so savage that they declined to reveal details. It also left the victims so traumatized that, at first, they could not aid in the investigation, police said.

But the couple came through with descriptions.

"They said one of the men was white, one of the men was black, one of the men spoke Spanish," police spokesman Sgt. Jim Chandler said. "Of the suspects we've arrested, one is white, one is black and one is Hispanic."

Furthermore, police believe those men and two others are responsible for a chain of robberies dating back two years.

Johnson and Cordoba, along with David Darren Woodruff, 19, and Michael Eugene Porter, 22, were charged with aggravated robbery in an Oct. 17 holdup in which a cab driver was shot and two passengers were robbed, Chandler said.

Law enforcement agencies facing new scrutiny over Waco tragedy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Still stinging from recent Senate criticism of their conduct in the deadly Ruby Ridge standoff, federal law enforcement agencies are being scrutinized anew for their siege against the Branch Davidians near Waco, Texas.

The Senate Judiciary Committee was to open hearings today on the 1993 Waco tragedy, in which cult leader David Koresh and 80 of his followers died following a 51-day siege by federal law enforcement agents.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, called today's hearings essential so that we may identify necessary policy changes, in order that public confidence in law enforcement can be strengthened."

Witnesses in the new round of hearings were to include John

Magaw, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and Ronald Noble, undersecretary for law enforcement at the Treasury Department, which has authority over the ATF.

Other witnesses were to include three ATF agents at Waco - among them Jerry Petrilli, who was one of the first law enforcement officials through the compound's gate, as he attempted to serve a search warrant as part of a firearms investigation. He took about 10 steps before a grenade exploded, peppering him with shrapnel.

Four of Petrilli's fellow ATF agents were killed and more than a dozen others were wounded in that botched raid on Feb. 28, 1993, which set off the 51-day siege.

Two agencies - the FBI and the ATF - bore a steady barrage of criticism by Republican lawmakers last summer in politically charged House hearings on the Waco siege.

About a month after the House hearings on Waco, the FBI and ATF took another pounding in a Senate subcommittee inquiry into the 1992 standoff against white separatist Randy Weaver at Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

But the two-day Judiciary Committee inquiry was expected to be far different from the often raucous 10 days of hearings last summer by a special House panel, in which the majority Republicans targeted the law enforcement agencies as well as Attorney General Janet Reno and President Clinton.

The Senate hearings were to be more narrowly focused, with emphasis on the policy decisions of the FBI and the ATF, according to committee spokeswoman Jeanne Lopatto and administration officials.

World briefs November 8 hearing set to revoke ex-pathologist's probation

Russian Arctic voyage may be canceled

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russian weather service says a German shipyard might seize its flagship research vessel over an unpaid bill, forcing the cancellation of Russia's 41st annual Antarctic voyage.

Spokesman Anatoly Yakovlev told the ITAR-Tass news agency that the weather service owes $3.2 million for repairs to the Akademik Fyodorov, flagship of the Russian Antarctic fleet.

He said the repair bill is due Nov. 10 and the Russian Finance Ministry hasn't released funds to pay it. If the bill isn't paid, the shipyard might sell the vessel at auction, he said.

Newspaper publishes photos of premier's wife

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Front-page topless photos of the premier's wife failed to get her to withdraw from politics, so a newspaper is taking its campaign a step further.

Friday's edition of Avriani featured a front-page, full-color shot of Dimitra Papandreu sitting naked on a beach, while another naked woman fondles her genitals. The headline reads: "Look At Who Governs Us!"

Mrs. Papandreu called the latest photograph "an inconceivable fabrication, the culmination of a dirty campaign of political blackmail." Avriani says it's genuine.

Giorgos Kouris, the owner of Avriani and a former friend and supporter of Premier Andreas Papandreu, threatens to continue the campaign until Mrs. Papandreu withdraws from political life.

LUBBOCK (AP) — Discredited ex-pathologist Ralph Erdmann could see his 10-year probated sentence turn into time behind bars at a Nov. 8 hearing.

Erdmann, 69, awaits that hearing from a solitary cell at the Hockley County Jail in Levelland.

The man who once performed autopsies for more than 40 West Texas counties — earning $140,000 a year from Lubbock County alone — last week was transferred to Levelland, about 35 miles west of Lubbock, from jail in Seattle.

"He's in a good mood, quiet, doesn't have much to say," Hockley County Jail administrator Roger Lindsey said Monday.

Erdmann pleaded no contest in 1992 in Lubbock County to seven felonies tied to botched or falsified autopsies. Then he moved to Seattle.

He was sentenced in September to a year in jail in King County, Wash., for possessing a machine gun. He completed his term early through good behavior and credit for the time he spent jailed since his arrest in May.

Erdmann was arrested after a cache of guns, including a fully automatic M-16 assault rifle, was seized in a raid at his home. Firearms possession would violate terms of his Lubbock County probation.

Texas authorities began clamoring earlier this year to seek his return here and force him to serve the remainder of his sentence behind bars.

"What hurts is that I have a family ... and they really need me," a tearful Erdmann said before his sentencing in Seattle.

Meanwhile, questions about an Erdmann autopsy led authorities in Lubbock to exhume the body of a 1986 shooting victim last week.

Deputy Medical Examiner Randall Frost examined the remains of 18-year-old Artemio Guerra on Friday to determine the path of the fatal gunshot.

"We believe things are a little different than what was reported initially," Frost said of Erdmann's work, which since has led to several exhumations.

High powered telescope listens for extraterrestrials

HARVARD, Mass. (AP) — Scientists have developed quite an ear for extraterrestrials: an 84-foot radio telescope with a billion channels tuned to finding intelligent life elsewhere in the universe.

About 250 physicists, astronomers and curious stargazers from Harvard University and beyond gathered Monday to watch and listen as one of the Earth's largest receivers was turned on.

"No one knows the likelihood that we will find a civilization," said Paul Horowitz, a Harvard physics professor who directs the telescope. "But we won't know if we don't try."

The Billion Channel Extraterrestrial Assay, or BETA, is a 300-fold upgrade of the first telescope dedicated to listening in on aliens, activated nearly a decade ago on the same hilltop in this rural town 20 miles west of Boston.

Resembling a huge satellite dish, the new telescope can best be thought of as an enormous radio receiver with millions of separate channels tuned to different stations. It is designed to pick up outside signals, or beacons, that may be beaming from hundreds, if not thousands, of light years away.

Horowitz, who along with some other scientists is driven by the belief that there is life elsewhere, said he is hopeful that the stronger BETA system will be able to detect what its weaker predecessor could not.

Blind Date's Burst of Candor Should Have Been Kinder

DEAR ABBY I am writing this for my 20-year-old daughter who recently had a bad experience with a blind date.

The morning after the date, which she thought had gone very well, the young man called her up and told her he thought she was a wonderful person, but he would never consider marrying her because he didn't want to have ugly children. Then he went on to tell her that she needed to have surgery on her nose and chin, her nose is too big and she has a receding chin.

In my day I would have hung up on him and never seen him again, but it seems today people are encouraged to be completely honest regardless of how much it hurts others.

Abby, what response should my daughter have given this fellow in order to have put him in his place?

A CARING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I might have said: "You may think I'm less than movie-star material, but what kind of insensitive clod would say that after one date? My flaws can be corrected, but your rudeness and insensitivity cannot. Goodbye."

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter from "Worried Mom in Virginia," whose son is constantly ridiculed by his schoolmates:

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

As a kid, I was ostracized for many years — beginning in elementary school and continuing through high school. My problem was that I was the girl who developed sooner than anyone else. I had breasts and acne before any of my classmates.

Each day, I dreaded school. I tried to fight off the teasing. (I even popped a guy in the eye once for a nasty remark.)

Moving halfway across the country and attending a new school didn't help — nor did parental advice, talks with other parents, etc.

However, I discovered a few things that did help: I became involved in local children's theater, my church's high school group, and I also continued in Girl Scouts. These groups didn't tolerate teasing. Everyone was a little different, but everyone was accepted. It helped me tremendously.

By the way, Abby, I was an ugly duckling who grew up to be a swan.

HAPPY ENDING
IN PLANO, TEXAS

DEAR HAPPY: Thank you for an inspiring letter that may help other children overcome ridicule by cruel classmates.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Annoyed in Minnesota," who no longer wanted to hear "I don't care" when offering a guest something to eat or drink, I may have a simple solution:

When given a choice of several items, I always respond with, "I like them all, so surprise me!"

I have even done this in restaurants when I can't make up my mind.

ANNETTE T.
IN MIDLAND PARK, N.J.

DEAR ANNETTE: In a restaurant? What would you do if they "surprised" you with a filet mignon, and all you could pay for was a hamburger?

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter from "Still Grieving in Ohio" who wrote to say "the loss of a pet can be just as painful as the loss of a child."

What tripe! Whoever can utter such an asinine statement (and believe it is) is not playing with a full deck.

JAN EDGEWORTH,
EVERETT, WASH.

Horoscope

Your Birthday

Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1995

Partnership arrangements might prove more successful in the year ahead if you take the helm. Try to be a leader, not a follower.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Relax and enjoy yourself when socializing with friends today. Stifle the temptation to talk shop with people even if they can help your career. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although the end result might not be perfect, vexing situations will still work to your advantage today. Try to remain hopeful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Compassion and generosity are two of your marvelous attributes, but today, beware of someone with ulterior motives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your evaluation of a financial matter may be more accurate than the opinion of your advisers today. Have the courage to stick by your decision.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) People with similar opinions will be regarded warmly today while those who disagree with you might not see your pleasant countenance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might be lucky again today in an area where you were recently fortunate. However, this should not be viewed as an opportunity to take frivolous chances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Involvements with friends will be pleasant today if you are appropriately cooperative. A self-serving attitude, however slight, could destroy the mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to treat everyone with respect today. If you're nice only to those who can help you, your actions will betray your true motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you participate socially in a competitive sport today, avoid placing wagers on the outcome. Betting could dampen everyone's mood.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial indicators continue to favor you again today, especially in joint endeavors. Selfishness could cut down your margin of profit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, you may have to deal with someone whom you have yet to forgive for a past transgression. For your own peace of mind, let bygones be bygones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial interests may be augmented by some good luck today. However, you will not be as fortunate in your love life.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — Pampa slipped by Valleyview, 36-34, in 9th grade football action last week.

The deciding touchdown was scored by Brandon Hill on a 1-yard run.

Jared White scored twice for Pampa, on runs of 60 and 70 yards. Hill also scored on a 3-yard run.

Justin Roark scored Pampa's other touchdown on a 48-yard run. Greer scored two conversion runs and Hill had one.

Pampa's offensive line of Jeremy Miller, Wes Graham, Jess Baker, Billy Rushing and Daniel Murrah provided outstanding blocking, coach Dennis Doughty said.

White and Roark combined for several long runs while Kris Davis was outstanding on both offense and defense, Doughty said.

Pampa (5-2) plays at Dumas on Thursday with the game starting at 5:30 p.m.

BASKETBALL

HEREFORD — The Pampa Academy of Christian Education Pacers got the basketball season off to a fast start. The Pacers defeated Community Christian of Hereford, 68-51, last Friday night.

"It was a great opener for the Pacers, who showed aggressive play the entire game," said Pampa coach Terry Ferguson.

Pampa scored first and led the whole game.

A.J. Taylor for Pampa led all scorers with 28 points along with 10 rebounds, 5 steals and 3 assists. Brooks Ferguson scored 16 points, 11 rebounds, 8 assists and 6 steals. Matt Hunter scored 10 and had 11 rebounds, Andy Edmondson had 8 points, 10 assists, 6 steals and 3 rebounds, Steve Terry, 4 points, 7 rebounds and 2 assists, Chad Platt, 2 points and Trevor Muniz, 2 assists.

Leading scorer for Community was C. Hendershott with 25.

The Pacers' next game will be tonight against Borger Christian Academy in Borger.

HOCKEY

DALLAS (AP) — The way Jocelyn Thibault sees it, the Colorado Avalanche won their fifth consecutive game because the Dallas Stars hadn't lost in five games.

Thibault stopped 21 shots Monday night, and the Avalanche matched their season-high for goals in a 6-1 victory.

"They had been playing great, so maybe that's why we were so ready for them," Thibault said after coming within 11 seconds of his second career shutout. "We were a little more aggressive early because we were expecting a great game from them. That's why we were able to take the lead like we did."

They took the lead early, 72 seconds in to be exact, as Craig Wolanin beat a screened Darcy Wakaluk with a 50-foot wrist shot.

"We played a solid game," Wolanin said. "And he (Thibault) was exceptional. If we play defense like that, the scoring will take care of itself."

Joe Sakic had two goals and two assists for Colorado, which leads the Western Conference with a 7-3-1 record, but it was the defense that drew the most attention.

"We've been playing well on defense, but this was our best defensive game all year," Thibault said after improving his record to 1-1. "My teammates played almost a perfect game in front of me."

Thibault was seldom tested by the sluggish Stars, who had only 12 shots in the first two periods.

"That's probably as good a competition as we've faced all season," Stars coach Bob Gainey said. "We get behind and it changes our game, although I'd say that's true for every team."

The Stars were 3-0-2 in their unbeaten streak.

Sakic scored a first-period power-play goal and added an insurance score in the third

Red Raiders put win streak on the line

By JEAN PAGEL

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — No. 23 Texas Tech puts its four-game winning streak on the line Saturday against the only unbeaten team in the Southwest Conference.

"We are the only team that hasn't lost, but the challengers will come at us hard," said John Mackovic, coach of 13th-ranked Texas.

The Red Raiders (5-2, 2-1) upset Texas A&M and have lost only to Penn State and Baylor by a combined three points in their best start since 1989.

Tech coach Spike Dykes knows that if his team can beat the Longhorns at 6 p.m. Saturday in Austin, the Red Raiders will be favorites to win the rest of their season's games at home against Texas Christian and on the road against Southern Methodist and Houston.

"A lot of chips are on the line for this game," Dykes said Monday. "It doesn't take long to figure out as long as you've got that zero out there ... all wins and no losses, it looks like they're the team to beat."

The Longhorns (5-1-1) got their two league victories against last-place teams Rice and SMU.

Mackovic said his players still must face the SWC heavyweights in what he called "the championship run."

Perhaps no one comes at an offense harder than Tech, which features Zach Thomas, one of the nation's best linebackers, in a blitz-crazy scheme that has resulted in 41 tackles for loss and 21 turnovers. The Red Raiders' attacking defense has contributed heavily to two straight victories against Texas, including a 33-9 rout last year in Lubbock.

"Their defense is such a pressure-type defense," Mackovic said. "They just gamble. They say, 'Even if you get a 14-yard play here, we'll drop you for a 14-yard loss there,' and it all evens out."

"If we handle the pressure, we have a chance to make plays. We didn't handle it last year."

Dykes said Texas' defense has been unfairly criticized for giving up 210 yards per game on the ground. He said Texas opponents Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and Oklahoma "all have great rushing offenses. I think when you play those kind of people, the stats maybe are a little misleading."

Dykes said Tech must contain UT quarterback James Brown, who engineers the SWC's top passing offense.

"Brown's got great feet," Dykes said. "He gets off the line of scrimmage so fast, he's a hard guy to pressure with his ability to scramble."

Texas players are still smarting from Tech's last two victories.

Longhorns cornerback Taje Allen, who went to high school in Lubbock, said last year's loss made it difficult to go home.

"I've got some friends at Tech and I heard about it (the loss)," Allen said. "They had a right to talk. They won. I hope this year it's my turn to talk."

Dazzling Array

(Special photo)

Kathy Hess of Pampa has qualified her American Quarter Horse, Dazzling Array, for the 1995 American Quarter Horse Association World Championship Show, Nov. 5-18 in Oklahoma City, Okla. Hess is one of more than 3,100 entries expected to compete in this invitational show, which features more than $1.2 million in prize money. Dazzling Array will compete in the 2-year-old Halter Geldings event. The event is one of the richest championship shows in existence. To qualify for the AQHA World Championship Show, horses must earn a predetermined number of points at AQHA-approved shows between Aug. 1, 1994 and July 31, 1995. The Oklahoma City show is the highlight of the American Quarter Horse show season and a world championship title and trophy is considered the epitome of success in the show arena.

Johnson is new Orioles' manager

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles were underachievers last season, and their clubhouse was just as dreary.

New manager Davey Johnson promises things will be different next year.

"Most of my teams usually play up to their potential," said Johnson, who signed a three-year contract Monday. "I give everyone the opportunity to play, and it's fun. The reason it's fun is because you usually win. If you win, everyone's happy."

Johnson led the Cincinnati Reds to an 85-59 record and the NL Central title this season. He owns the best winning percentage among active managers (.576) and is 799-589 in nine seasons with the New York Mets and Reds.

Johnson, 52, is a proven winner who has a reputation for getting the most out of a talent-laden club. That makes him a perfect fit for a team that features such standouts as Cal Ripken, Mike Mussina, Bobby Bonilla and Rafael Palmeiro.

"We are committed to building a winner in Baltimore, and Davey is a vital part of that effort," owner Peter Angelos said.

Johnson replaces Phil Regan, who was fired after the Orioles finished 71-73 despite carrying a payroll in excess of $40 million. Baltimore hasn't made the playoffs since 1983, but Johnson expects to change all that — quickly.

"We're going to win next year and we'll win a world championship while I'm here," he said.

When asked if that meant 1996, he said: "We have a good chance at it. Coming out of spring training, this ballclub should be the odds-on favorite to win our division."

Baltimore finished third in the AL East under Regan, well behind Boston and the New York Yankees.

Johnson applied for the Orioles' job last year, but Angelos instead hired Regan. Better late than never, Johnson got finally got the job he long coveted.

"I'm a firm believer in the adage that things happen for the best," he said. "I really wanted to be here last year. I really felt like I was the man for the job. I felt like I was a perfect fit."

In retrospect, he probably was. Joe Foss, the team's director of business and finance, was part of the committee that recommended Regan for the job.

"You always think you're making the right decision at the time, and we thought very strongly that Phil was the right man for the Orioles," Foss said. "He made a very significant and useful contribution, and we're sure Davey Johnson will do the same."

Baltimore third baseman Jeff Manto said, "We got the right man for the job. He's got a winning track record and is known as a great motivator. Plus, he's a former Oriole."

Johnson, who played second base for the Orioles from 1965-72, always hoped that he one day would get to return to the city where he forged his fondest baseball memories.

"It sure feels great to be home, and I consider this home," Johnson said. "I've been an Oriole ever since I've been here."

The hiring of Johnson fills one void, but the Orioles are still looking for a general manager to replace Roland Hemond, who resigned the same day Angelos fired Regan.

"Davey Johnson certainly knows what it takes to put a World Series ballclub together," said Mike Gabriele, 28, an ad copywriter from Baltimore. "I just hope when they find a general manager, they'll get along with each other."

Harvesters striving for balanced offense as season goes along

PAMPA — Most football teams try to achieve some sort of balance between the rushing and passing offense to keep the defense off-balance. As the season goes along, the Pampa Harvesters' power-i offense seem to be getting closer to achieving that balance in the run-pass.

The Harvesters have surpassed triple-digits in both rushing and passing yards in three of the last four games. Pampa didn't reach the 100-yard pass mark the first three games, but the Harvesters won two of those three — defeating Garden City, Kan., 14-8; losing to Amarillo High, 7-6, and shutting out Plainview, 29-0.

"We work a lot on our overall offense," said Pampa junior J.J. Mathis, who starts at split end on offense and free safety on defense. "Our running skills are getting better and our passing is coming along."

Mathis caught a 21-yard touchdown pass from Joel Ferland and he also threw a 30-yard scoring strike to Floyd White out of a flea flicker in Pampa's 40-3 romp of Randall last week. Both Pampa quarterbacks, Joel Ferland and Clint Curtis, were effective. Ferland scored on a 14-yard run and Curtis threw a 12-yard TD pass to White.

Archibald, who topped off Pampa's scoring with a 54-yard run midway in the fourth quarter, led all rushers with 140 yards on 17 carries.

There's also Pampa's field goal threat. Senior Todd Finney booted two 34-yard field goals against Randall. He's now kicked 5 this season.

For the game, Pampa had 271 yards in rushing and 103 yards passing. After seven games, the Harvesters are averaging 230 yards on the ground and 77 yards through the air.

Despite the easy win over the Raiders, Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier was concerned about the 116 yards in penalties the Harvesters piled up.

"There are things like the penalties we need to work on, but it was a victory none the less. We executed well, there were no major injuries and everybody got to play," added Cavalier.

The Harvesters (6-1 overall and 3-0 in district) continue district play Friday night at Dumas. The Demons are 2-5 for the season and 0-3 in district play.

Bears trim Vikings, 14-6

By RON LESKO
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Chicago Bears' Monday night jinx seemed alive with 2:17 left when rookie Rashaan Salaam fumbled against the Minnesota Vikings.

But the Bears' defense, which kept the Vikings out of the end zone all night, got a turnover of its own with 1:32 left in a 14-6 victory that ended Chicago's NFL-worst eight-game losing streak on Monday nights.

"It's a satisfying feeling that the game came down to the last minute and was in our hands," said safety Marty Carter, whose hit on Qadry Ismail forced the decisive fumble that Albert Fontenot recovered. "We finally got the monkey off our back."

The Bears (6-2) entered the game with three consecutive victories, but they allowed nearly 29 points a game in the victories over Jacksonville, Carolina and Houston, winning by a combined 10 points.

Minnesota (3-5) controlled the clock much of the game, with Warren Moon directing a low-risk offense, but the Bears sacked Moon four times and limited Minnesota to Fuad Reveiz's two field goals. Chicago made due with Erik Kramer's two touchdown passes 1:58 apart in the second quarter with its first season sweep of the Vikings since 1991.

They completed their sweep that year with their last Monday night victory, also at the Metrodome. The Bears now enter the second half of the season with a one-game lead over Green Bay in the NFC Central.

"Unfortunately, we don't like to make it easy on ourselves," Kramer said. "But the defense came up big. We exorcised a lot of demons."

They also put the defending division champions in a big hole.

The Vikings lost their third consecutive game and are 6-10 over their last 16 regular-season games. They probably must win six of their remaining eight games if they hope to qualify for the playoffs.

"Time is getting short," rookie cornerback Corey Fuller said. "We've got to come together as a team. We have to refocus. This loss is difficult, you can't get away from that, but we can't dwell on it."

With the NFL's fifth-worst pass defense entering last weekend's games, the Vikings seemed an easy target for Kramer. He came into the game with 16 touchdown passes and just four interceptions, directing an offense that was averaging an NFC-best 29 points.

Yet the Vikings allowed the Bears only one prolonged scoring drive, which Kramer capped with a 4-yard pass to defensive tackle Jim Flanigan, a goal-line substitute, for a 7-3 lead with 2:23 left in the first half.

Then Minnesota made one of its few defensive mistakes. Kramer stunned the Vikings with a perfectly thrown 48-yard touchdown to Curtis Conway, the ball barely clearing the outstretched hand of a leaping Alfred Jackson, as Chicago took a 14-3 lead just 25 seconds before halftime.

"They have a tough time on Monday night, so for them to score twice like that was a real momentum boost for them," Vikings defensive tackle John Randle said.

A 43-yard field goal by Reveiz was the only scoring in the second half, but both teams had chances in the final minutes.

After forcing a punt, the Bears took over at their own 17 with 8:16 remaining. They had only 39 rushing yards to that point, then added 44 on that drive to move into field-goal range. Kevin Butler, who had been perfect in 14 field-goal attempts this season, pulled a 38-yard attempt wide left.

A roughing-the-kicker call against Dewayne Washington gave the ball back to Chicago, but Ed McDaniels stripped Salaam on the next play and Broderick Thomas recovered at the Minnesota 13.

An 18-yard pass from Moon to Jake Reed gave the Vikings a first down at the Chicago 31. After two incompletions, Moon threw to Ismail. Carter hit Ismail in the back as he fought for extra yardage, and Fontenot recovered at the Chicago 19.

"That's what we talk about every week, making a big play," defensive back Kevin Miniefield said. "That's what we think about every time we go out on the field, and fortunately it happened for us."

Minnesota certainly wasn't willing to concede its playoff hopes with eight games left. But the Vikings needed a team meeting last week to restore unity, and the fear now is that they might begin to unravel.

"We're going to have to muster all the character we have in that locker room," Moon said. "Hopefully, we don't have dissension creeping in there, because when a team is 3-5 at the halfway point, that can happen."

Astos' owner meets with county leaders

HOUSTON (AP) — Astros owner Drayton McLane met Monday with county political leaders and city business leaders, saying he needs to know within a week whether there's enough fan support to keep the team in Houston.

McLane, who claims to have lost more than $60 million since buying the National League club three years ago, is negotiating a possible sale to Virginia businessman Bill Collins.

Pending approval by other baseball owners, Collins would move the team to the East Coast. Both McLane and Collins previously said the sale talks were on hold until after the World Series, which ended Saturday.

Nation briefs

Former director of charity embezzler

NEW YORK (AP) — A former director of a Parkinson's disease charity embezzled more than $870,000 in donations, federal authorities say.

Frank Williams, 54, allegedly stole the money from the American Parkinson's Disease Association, which raises money for research and information on the neurological disease.

Williams is accused of sending donations to an unwitting accomplice that headed the group's Minnesota chapter and asking the man — a Parkinson's patient — to deposit the checks and write new ones that were sent to Williams' home.

Federal prosecutor Douglas Burns said there was no indication the money went to nursing homes as intended. He said it was unclear what Williams did with the money.

Williams, who resigned in April, was arrested Monday. He faces five years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted of the federal charges.

Post office announces new stamp releases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The post office has scheduled a series of announcements across the country to reveal its 1996 new stamp releases.

Most of the new stamps will be unveiled in the traditional Washington news conference where 93 designs covering 30 subjects will be made public at a Nov. 7 ceremony hosted by Postmaster General Marvin Runyon at the National Postal Museum.

Other stamps of local interest will be unveiled in a series of briefings in 11 cities over three days.

Stamps commemorating the statehood of Utah and Iowa will be announced at ceremonies in Salt Lake City and Des Moines on Nov. 7.

Stamps to be unveiled Nov. 8 are American Indian dances, Denver, Pecos Bill, Midland, Texas; Casey at the Bat, Boston; Lunar New Year, Philadelphia; marathon running, New York City.

Unveilings planned for Nov. 9 are riverboats, St. Louis; folk hero John Henry, Pittsburgh; Paul Bunyon, Bemidji, Minn., and endangered species, Vallejo, Calif.

Salesman says Halloween backbone of his business

CHICAGO (AP) — Marshall Cordell can call up the names of his "skeleton crew" with ease: Petite Pete, Tiny Tim, Mr. Thrifty and Max.

They don't make any bones about working, though, since their normal duties consist merely of hanging around and looking scary.

Cordell's company, Anatomical Chart Co., sells more than 30,000 skeletons a year. They're mostly plastic, but he does sell about 300 real ones — all named Max. His customers include Hollywood studios, police departments and even a Caribbean resort looking to startle scuba divers.

Latest Rock Hall of Fame inductees announced

CLEVELAND (AP) — The psychedelic sounds of the 1960s and pioneering performers of the '70s mark the 1996 inductees into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum.

The class of '96 includes Jefferson Airplane, David Bowie, Pink Floyd, the Velvet Underground, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Little Willie John and the Shirelles. Early influence Pete Seeger and FM radio pioneer Tom Donahue will also be inducted in a Jan. 17 ceremony in New York City.

Rock Hall Director Dennis Barrie and Rock Hall Foundation Executive Director Suzan Evans, announced the inductees Monday.

"I think it's a great list," Barrie said. "It shows the breadth of rock 'n' roll. The fact that it goes from a Little Willie John to a Pink Floyd ... shows how vigorous the music has been over the years."

Barrie also announced that the hall, which had its grand opening over Labor Day weekend, expected to welcome its 175,000th visitor this week. Because the demand for tickets to the $92 million rock shrine remains high, the hall will begin opening Mondays in mid-November, Barrie said.

To be eligible for induction, a rocker must have recorded at least 25 years ago. Some 800 musicians, critics and other rock experts voted on the inductees from among nominees selected by a committee.

Bowie, who began as a cult phenomenon in England in the 1960s and later emerged as a leading performer of the '70s and '80s, already is represented in museum displays.

Pink Floyd, best known for its surreal stage shows and phenomenal Dark Side of the Moon album — which spent 741 weeks on the Billboard chart — has also donated artifacts to the museum.

Jefferson Airplane emerged from the San Francisco scene, mixing folk rock, blues and psychedelia on such hits as "Somebody to Love" and "White Rabbit." Gladys Knight and the Pips had hits with "I Heard It Through the Grapevine" and with "Midnight Train to Georgia."

Little Willie John, a soul and blues performer from the 1950s, co-wrote the song "Fever," which became a hit for Peggy Lee. The Shirelles, a girl group founded in 1957, sang "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow," "Baby It's You" and "Soldier Boy."

The Velvet Underground's hits include "Waiting for My Man" and "Rock and Roll."

Seeger, 76, wrote or co-wrote such folk standards as "Turn! Turn! Turn!" and "If I Had a Hammer." His social activism has been as much an influence as his music.

Donahue was an executive at KMPX and KSNB in San Francisco in the 1960s and 70s. He led a rebellion against Top 40 radio that continues today in the battle for dominance between rigidly formatted radio stations and college and alternative stations.
