Careless waste disposal endangers water supply

By LAURA HALEY
Staff Writer

Texas residents may be throwing away items that could contaminate their local water supply, said Ingrid Dierlam-McDonald with the household hazardous waste division of the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission.

Both the Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission addressed this problem in 1992 by banning certain items - such as tires, antifreeze, oil, oil filters, paint and vehicle batteries - from municipal landfills.

These items were banned because of their ability to contaminate local water supplies, said Dierlam-McDonald. The actions of just a few residents, she said, could threaten an entire community's drinking water.

Workers at Pampa's municipal landfill regularly conduct waste screenings to look for hazardous material, said Rick Stone, Pampa's sanitation superintendent. However, there is a possibility some hazardous waste could slip through these screenings, he said. Therefore, it is up to local residents to protect their water supply by disposing of hazardous materials properly.

In Pampa, the local Household

The actions of just a few residents could threaten an entire community's drinking water.

Hazardous Waste Committee has taken on the task of educating residents about proper disposal of household hazardous waste. On March 22, the committee will be sponsoring the third annual Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day at the community recycling center in Hobart Street Park.

The collection day allows residents to rid of their hazardous waste without paying a disposal fee. Items that will be collected at the event include paint, tires, pesticides, herbicides, motor oil, oil filters, antifreeze and vehicle batteries. In addition, they will also be collecting any recyclables residents might have stored up.

Although the number of participants in Pampa's previous collection events increased from 156 in 1995 to 250 in 1996, committee members are hoping even more residents will attend the Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day this year.

In addition to keeping the municipal landfill free of contaminants, the hazardous waste collection day will also be used to educate residents about other potential hazards.

Dierlam-McDonald with the TNRC explained that other household items not banned from municipal landfills could also pose a threat to Pampa's water supply. Some of these items are hair spray with a butane propellant, finger nail polish containing formaldehyde, finger nail polish remover and bleach, she said.

She encourages residents to completely use these items or give them to others who would use them.

"A lot of people bring perfectly good stuff to the collection events," said Dierlam-McDonald. "These things can be given away and used by neighbors or friends."

The Pampa Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day is funded in part from a grant received from the TNRC. The grant can cover everything except disposal costs, which has to be raised from local contributions.

The approximate cost of disposal fees, said committee chairman Scot Aler, is $15,000.

Any business or individual wishing to make a donation may contact John Horst, c/o the City of Pampa, P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79066.

PISD trustees discuss remodeling plans

The Pampa School Board met in their regular meeting on Thursday for regular business as well as to discuss the progress of plans to remodel some of the district schools.

The board voted to accept the proposed structural bid of $172,524 from the Ennis Steel which includes steel construction by Davis Construction from Pampa.

Representatives of the architectural firm in charge of the projects said the Ennis Company will have no problem providing the steel at an appropriate time.

In non-action items the board heard discussion on the progression of plans and the benefits of staff input.

The facility site-base committees have met a number of times with the architects and specific departments to make uniform adjustments to the plans.

Representatives have said the plans are moving along smoothly and final plans should be ready by next week.

Along with the construction updates, the board heard possible attendance zone updates from Raymond Thornton, facilities study coordinator.

Thornton presented a possible attendance zone, but said that some minor adjustments need to be made, so that all schools have nearly equal attendance.

The board also heard a presentation of a possible baseball fund raiser which would improve the playing field and allow baseball players to practice in during inclement weather.

The plan includes the purchase of a metal building, which would be paid for out of funds raised by selling advertisement space on the field fence.

As a final item the board went into executive session to discuss the renewal of Dr. Dawson Orr's superintendent's contract.

The contract was approved, but according to Dr. Orr, an increase in salary was not discussed at this time.

The board will be calling a special meeting for next week for final approval of some of the building plans.

Highway 70 landscape project nears completion

Work is progressing on a landscape project aimed at beautifying Pampa's north and south transportation corridors on Hwy. 70.

The majority of the project is funded through a Governor's Community Achievement Award the city received in 1993. The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) worked with representatives from the city to design the project.

The project includes planting red oak trees, Bradford pear trees, some flowering shrubs and wildflowers on State Hwy. 70 at North Loop 171 and at South Loop 171. The $65,853 project was awarded to Grass Services Inc. of Arlington.

Work on the project began in late fall. The laying of irrigation pipe has been completed on the north end and is expected to be finished at the south end this week.

Planting of trees and shrubs will require another two weeks, according to Jana Perez, TxDOT project supervisor.

The Governor's Community Achievement Award is sponsored by TxDOT and Keep Texas Beautiful to reward communities that excel in their efforts to decrease litter; improve solid waste management; beautification and recycling; and educate the community about anti-litter and beautification activities.

Parks board considers concrete trail overlay

By LAURA HALEY
Staffwriter

Members of the parks and recreation advisory board met Thursday and discussed using labor from inmates at the Jordan Unit to place a concrete overlay on the city's hike and bike trail.

The trail, which runs through Pampa adjacent to the Red Deer Creek basin, currently has an asphalt covering and needs many improvements, said advisory board members. Some of these improvements, such as placing quarter mile markers on the trail, can be done using the concrete overlay.

Many users have expressed an interest in knowing how far they walk, jog or bike on the trail, said board members. With a concrete overlay, markers can be etched into the concrete rather than spending additional funds for signs.

In addition, the concrete overlay should last much longer than asphalt, which was the covering placed on the trail in 1986. Because the concrete is mixed with fibrous material, it will not crack as easily from regular usage.

Gary Henderson, chairman of the advisory board, has spoken with the warden at the Jordan Unit about using the inmates. However, nothing has been finalized at this time, said Pampa's Park and Recreation Director Reed Kirkpatrick.

Parks and Recreation Advisory Board member Judy Elliott expressed concerns about the inmates' ability to meet construction deadlines, but the discussion was tabled until further information was gathered from the warden.

Members of the advisory board are hoping to begin the construction on the Kirk Duncan memorial trail by the spring. The construction must be finished by the end of the city's fiscal year (in September) or the advisory board will lose funds set aside by city commissioners for the improvements, Kirkpatrick said.

City commissioners have approved $15,000 from the 1997 budget to place the overlay on one-fourth of the hike and bike trail. It will take three more years, after this section is complete, to overlay the entire trail.

Dr. Chumley (portrayed by Monty Montgomery) tells Wilson (Bill Hildebrandt) to lock the door to keep Harvey (a supposedly imaginary giant rabbit) out in ACT I's production of 'Harvey,' opening tonight at the Pampa Mall.

'Harvey' offers fine family entertainment

By DANNY COWAN
Guest Reviewer

Area Community Theatre (ACT I) has done it again with its production of Harvey, a three-act play for Mary Chase, under the direction of Cheryl Shuck and assistant director Darlene Hodges.

The stage direction and costumes were given a great deal of thought. Cheryl and Darlene did a fine job in picking a superb cast for the play's production.

Chase's play is the longtime popular story of a man who claims to have a giant rabbit as a friend. Problem is, the rabbit is seen only by the man, Elwood P. Dowd, leaving others to wonder if he is insane and needs to be committed.

As the play continues, the audience begins to wonder: Is the rabbit really just an imaginary creation, or is it just invisible to all but Dowd?

The beginning of the play started off kind of slow during a final dress rehearsal Thursday night. I'm sure it was pre-opening night jitters, "no problem."

Myrtle Mae Simmons (played by April Roundy), Mrs. Chauvenet (Sybil Kay King), Betty Chumley (Andrea Perez), Judge Omar Gaffeny (Gail I. Davis) and E.J. Lofgren (John McKeon) did a good job during their brief appearance.

Nurse Kelly (Debra D. Hartman) and Dr. Sanderson (James Kane) were excellent.

Dr. Chumley (Monty Montgomery), you convinced me. I really think you need to take your own therapeutic advice. I really thought you wanted Harvey to stay with you.

Elwood P. Dowd (Ace Acevedo), it's not easy trying to pretend you have a six foot rabbit standing next to you. Great job.

What can I say? Veta Louise Simmons (Berinda Turcotte) and Wilson (Bill Hildebrandt) stole the show. They really took advantage of their characters, and from beginning to end they gave a superb performance.

If you're looking for a great night of family entertainment, spend an evening with "Harvey." I talked to him during the intermission and he convinced me.

Performances open tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the ACT I Theatre at the Pampa Mall. Other performances will be at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 31, and Saturday, Feb. 1.

U.S. trying to lower dues to United Nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is free to lower its United Nations dues — so long as it can sell other member nations on the idea, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said today.

"I am always willing to help move such a process. But this is a challenge for American diplomacy, not the secretary-general," Annan said in remarks prepared for the National Press Club.

Congress is trying to cut the U.S. assessment to the U.N. from 25 percent of the operating budget to 20 percent, and to lower the U.S. share of peacekeeping operations.

"The formula is not sacrosanct," Annan said. "The United States can negotiate a lower rate for itself, but it must persuade other member states first."

President Clinton has pledged to pay U.S. arrears to the U.N., but congressional leaders are telling Annan they first want to see specific steps toward reform of the world body.

Sen. Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told Annan on Thursday that he will introduce legislation, possibly next week, setting down unspecified "benchmarks" for U.N. reform, with rewards forthcoming "as those benchmarks are met."

Annan, who took office Jan. 1, arrived here to convince skeptics that he is committed to reform and that the United States should pay the $1.3 billion which the United Nations says it owes. The Clinton administration puts the figure at about $900 million.

The 58-year-old Ghanaian is delivering that message again today during meetings with House Speaker Newt Gingrich and the chairman of the House and Senate appropriations committees.

He also was addressing the National Press Club before returning to New York.

Annan received a strong endorsement from President Clinton, who told him the United States "cannot expect to lead through the United Nations unless we are prepared to pay our own way and to pay what we owe."

"In the weeks ahead, I will be working with Congress to reach an agreement through which America can pay our arrears to the U.N., meet our obligations, and continue to spur real progress," Clinton said.

U.S. planes may fly south to fight drugs

DALLAS (AP) — The Clinton administration is considering a proposal from the National Security Council to supply U.S. aircraft to Colombia, Mexico, Venezuela, Brazil, Peru and Ecuador to track drug traffickers' planes, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

More than 70 planes being retired by the Pentagon would still be under U.S. ownership but would be operated by foreign governments, according to a summary the newspaper obtained. The equipment ranges from A-10 Thunderbolt attack jets to a variety of surveillance and tracking planes, including E-2 Hawkeyes, P-3 Orions and HU-25 Guardian jets, the newspaper said.

Administration sources said the proposal is preliminary and would need significant changes before it could be implemented.

The proposal is one of several being studied by an interagency group, which will make recommendations for review by the president's top national security aides.

The newspaper quoted administration sources as saying that while initially greeted with skepticism in other agencies, the proposal reflects a White House desire to expand the anti-drug effort.

Planners say agencies have circulated several proposals as the administration considers responses to rising drug use and to Republican criticisms that the anti-drug effort has lagged under the Clinton administration.

"This is just one of several ideas being pondered at various stages of the bureaucracy," National Security Council spokesman David Johnson said.

Bob Brown, acting director for source reduction at the White House drug policy office, said the security council proposal is one of the most ambitious under consideration and unlikely to be implemented in whole.

"To enhance the source-country detection and monitoring capability has merit, but this proposal surely overstates our approach in terms of available resources," Brown said.

The United States would coordinate and maintain the planes at a new center in Panama. Latin American pilots would fly the planes primarily to track drug smuggling aircraft. Some of the planes might carry arms for strafing traffickers' planes on the ground, their landing strips and cocaine labs.

When first circulated in December, the proposal stirred alarm across the federal drug-fighting bureaucracy both because of its cost and because of potential sovereignty concerns among Latin American nations.

The plan immediately met resistance from the State Department, Pentagon, Customs, Drug Enforcement Administration, and the office of National Drug Control Policy when it emerged last month, the newspaper said.

Readying the aircraft for transfer, as well as providing training and ground-based technology to help the nations use the equipment, could cost $400 million over the next several years.

It would be the largest single transfer of U.S. military aircraft in history to those countries, and would for the first time put significant and sophisticated surveillance planes in the hands of Latin American allies.

Other agencies have drafted similar, but less ambitious proposals to strengthen anti-narcotics efforts in Latin America.

An alternative proposal now circulating would spend about $120 million over five years on equipment that targets river and trail smuggling. Many traffickers have taken to rivers and overland travel after attacks on the air bridge.

In the security council proposal, Colombia, Venezuela and Brazil might share 24 A-10 Thunderbolt attack jets, now in storage after having been retired from the U.S. military.

The Pentagon would make them less lethal and more useful for tracking by replacing their 30mm anti-tank cannon systems with infrared sensors and advanced radar. Some of the A-10s would get machine guns for strafing.

Dallas school district official pulls plug on student broadcast

DALLAS (AP) — The decision to yank a student produced cable TV interview of a gay man in drag was denounced Thursday by protesters who disrupted a school board meeting and accused administrators of stifling free speech.

But Dallas school Superintendent Yvonne Gonzalez defended the decision by one of her assistants last month to pull the plug on the live "Getting Personal" cablecast three minutes into a Dec. 5 program.

The show featured a Lincoln High School student interviewing a man who wore a blond wig and a black dress and discussed what it was like to be gay.

"It isn't the Jenny Jones show," Superintendent Yvonne Gonzalez told students and others who showed up at a regularly scheduled board meeting and demanded to be heard on the issue.

"It's a district-operated broadcast channel, so we have to be very cognizant of that. Parents in this community hold me responsible for what happens to their children and I take that duty very seriously."

The student run show, which has been canceled until further notice, was carried over one of several public access cable stations dedicated to school programming.

Student Terilyn Tse conducted the interview for the episode entitled "Understanding Gays."

"I thought that it was my responsibility to get to know somebody from that culture, not only hear what other people tell me about them, but get to know one of the people personally," she said.

Juanita Simmons, dean of humanities and communications at Lincoln High School, said Thursday that the blackout violates Lincoln's mission "of exploring and understanding human experiences not unique to Lincoln alone."

"I believe it was Thomas Jefferson who said that knowledge is the only thing that stands between civilization and the vast wasteland of ignorance," she said at a news conference called at the 1,300-student school in South Dallas.

Principal Napoleon B. Lewis expressed dismay that

Robert Hinkle, the superintendent's assistant who made the decision, would pull a live cablecast without consulting him or other officials at the school.

"I asked Mr. Hinkle ... who gave him the authority to stifle the education of my children?" Lewis said.

Hinkle said sex education isn't even taught in the district without parental consent.

French court orders pro-Nazi to trial

PARIS (AP) — Two decades ago, Michel Slitinsky unearthed documents implicating Maurice Papon, a former official in the pro-Nazi Vichy regime, in his father's death. The case got caught up in France's complex legal system, and intervention at high levels kept it out of the courts.

On Thursday, in a landmark ruling, France's highest court threw out Papon's final appeal, clearing the way for a war crimes trial that could begin as early as this fall.

"We've been waiting for this verdict," Slitinsky, 71, told Europe 1 radio. "All of Papon's maneuvering ... has gone up in smoke."

Papon, 86, would be the highest-ranking Vichy official ever to be tried for war crimes.

In accordance with French legal procedure, Papon will remain free until the day before the trial. Jewish groups have asked that he be placed under house arrest and that his passport be confiscated.

He is charged with ordering the arrest and deportation of 1,690 French Jews between 1942 and 1944, when he was a local Vichy police supervisor in Bordeaux.

He has denied any wrongdoing, saying he sacrificed a few Jews to save others and emphasizing his actions on behalf of the Resistance. Papon has also claimed he knew nothing about Nazi plans to kill all Jews, and never embraced Nazi ideology.

The trial is expected to give the nation its first penetrating and systematic examination of the Vichy regime's role in the Holocaust.

The only Frenchman convicted of crimes against humanity in postwar France was Paul Touvier, a militia chief in Lyon. He died in prison in July. Rene Bousquet, Vichy's national police chief and Papon's superior, was assassinated on the eve of his war crimes trial in 1993 by a crazed gunman.

Jury to consider deliberate cadet rape case

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — A jury of seven male U.S. Army officers is expected to decide the fate today of a West Point cadet accused of raping a female cadet. James Engelbrecht, 22, of Conroe, Texas, faces life in prison and dismissal from the Army if he is convicted of assaulting and raping the woman during a night of drinking at a Memorial Day weekend party in New Jersey.

Engelbrecht didn't play for Army's football team last season, but is listed in Army's 1995 football guide as a 6-foot-2, 245-pound nose guard.

The jurors are expected to begin deliberating the case today after attorneys present their closing arguments.

"I felt like I was asleep for a while, and then I felt like there was somebody on top of me," said Engelbrecht, who appeared pale in his West Point dress gray uniform but spoke clearly. "She kissed me, and I kissed her back."

After fumbling with their clothes, Engelbrecht said they briefly had consensual sex, which he said ended quickly because he did not want her to get pregnant.

The woman testified that she woke up in pain as Engelbrecht raped her during the night of May 24-25, 1996.

Estes testified that when he entered the bedroom to get his things, he saw the woman on top of Engelbrecht but didn't see them engaging in sexual activity.

Prosecution rests in murder trial of Rowlett mother

KERRVILLE (AP) — Darlie Routier grieved after her sons' stabbing deaths the same as any mother would who'd lost her children, witnesses testified as the defense began its case.

Mrs. Routier's attorneys called two of her friends, her aunt and a pastor to the witness stand Thursday after the state rested its case.

Prosecutors questioned nearly 40 witnesses over 2 1/2 weeks in an attempt to prove Mrs. Routier killed five-year-old Damon and six-year-old Devon on June 6 in their suburban home near Dallas. Prosecutors allege she slashed herself and staged a crime scene to fool the police.

Mrs. Routier contends an intruder attacked her and her sons.

Mrs. Routier's friends and relative testified she was a loving mother who treated her sons well.

Prosecutors ended their case with dramatic testimony from FBI agent Alan Brantley, who said Devon and Damon likely died at the hands of someone they knew, not a stranger breaking into their home.

State offered Texas' only aerial tramway

EL PASO (AP) — Although Texas parks officials are intrigued, they won't move immediately on an offer that would give them control of the state's only aerial tramway and 170 acres of mountain real estate.

The El Paso Community Foundation, a charitable group, and KTSM-TV told legislators this week they will donate the land in El Paso's Franklin Mountains and the tramway if the state wants it.

But officials must first consider legal issues and the fact that it will take $365,000 to begin operations. The state would have to get new cable cars, improve the braking system and make other improvements, McCorkle said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Waco Tribune-Herald on school vouchers:

The notion of school vouchers keeps running up against an immovable force called the Constitution. Actually, make that two constitutions: the U.S. version and the Texas version.

Thursday a federal judge ruled Wisconsin's school voucher program unconstitutional since it effectively subsidized religion by allowing the vouchers to be used at church-run schools.

The judge's reasoning is simple. American taxpayers can't be compelled to fund religious indoctrination, which is exactly what vouchers would do in religious schools.

This ruling is one of two good reasons why Texas lawmakers should back away from an attempt to experiment with school vouchers. The second good reason is the Texas Constitution, which explicitly prohibits public funds from going to churches. And the fact is that most parochial schools are direct extensions of churches.

Proponents could push for vouchers that could be used in non-religious private schools, but too many of those are exclusive academies that have no need for students with vouchers. Take religious schools out of the mix and private education is but a very thin, very elite stratum.

Underwriting from a church and church givers is what makes it possible for parochial schools to be affordable to people with modest means. Secular private schools must rely on tuition that places them out of the reach of poor people, even with vouchers in their hands.

In other words, without church schools participating, the voucher movement isn't going to get very far. Since 1990 Wisconsin has had a voucher program which, using non-religious schools solely, involving only 1,650 students. The Legislature had voted to expand that to 15,000, but the key was making vouchers applicable in religious schools.

In Texas, the Legislature stopped short of implementing an experimental voucher program for poor children in 1995, but proponents have vowed to return to the issue. Meanwhile, the Lake Travis Independent School District has asked the state to approve a voucher program which it hopes will relieve school overcrowding.

The state shouldn't play along, especially if a church-state entanglement is involved.

Without that entanglement, vouchers can't come close to the sweeping results that proponents believe are possible.

San Antonio Express-News on anti-abortion terrorism:

A stronger federal law and increased vigilance by law enforcement has cut violent attacks on the nation's abortion clinics.

But "the violence against abortion providers remains unacceptably high," the National Abortion Federation's Vicki Saporta noted.

Two explosions last Thursday morning, apparently directed at a clinic in suburban Atlanta, underscore the danger reproductive health providers face every day.

That danger comes at the hands of "pro-life" extremists who use violence, including murder, to deny women a procedure that has been ruled to be a constitutionally protected right.

After those explosions, Atlanta Mayor Bill Campbell stepped up police protection of other reproductive health clinics in the city.

This is a precaution other law enforcement agencies around the nation also should take, especially with the 24th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision recognizing abortion rights, coming on Wednesday.

"Anyone who brings violence against a woman trying to exercise her constitutional rights is committing an act of terror," President Clinton said after the suburban Atlanta explosions.

Austin American-Statesman on regulating ground water:

It is time for the Legislature to change the state's outdated, unreasonable and dangerously wrongheaded "rule of capture" for ground water.

A growing Texas struggles more each year to provide adequate amounts of water for individuals, businesses, farms and ranches. The traditional rule of capture, which allows any landowner to pump unlimited amounts of water for just about any reason, threatens the future of Texas.

Water is this state's most precious resource. It needs to be regulated.

Kudos to Tiger Woods' parents

When I see Tiger Woods, I see the embodiment of the American dream. I see a 21-year-old lad of black and Asian extraction vaulting to the top of a professional sport at which exceedingly few minorities have excelled. And, no less impressive, I see a young gentleman who is a credit to his old-fashioned parents, Earl and Kultida Woods.

Anyone who follows sports, or reads Newsweek or People magazine, is probably well acquainted with Tiger's resume. He is the first golfer in the history of the game to win three straight U.S. Amateur titles. After his most recent victory, this past August, he turned professional.

So promising is his golf career that Nike, the sports apparel maker, and Titleist, the golf equipment manufacturer, signed young Woods to endorsement contracts valued at $60 million over the next five years. Such sums are unheard of not only for a rookie golfer, but for virtually any kind of professional sports rookie.

Woods' staggering contracts put a lot of pressure on him to perform right out of the box (as does the pressure from fellow pro golfers who may have been just a little jealous of the new kid on the block.) But Woods won two of his first seven tournaments as a professional, a record unmatched by any golfer in history.

Not by Arnold Palmer. Not by Jack Nicklaus. Not by Greg Norman.

So it is against this backdrop that I visited La Costa Country Club (just north of San Diego) for the Mercedes Championship, which officially opens the golf season. Most fascinating was the number of black professionals who were on hand to witness the proceedings. At the two dozen or so golf tournaments I have previously attended, I could count the number of black golf aficionados on one hand.

It seemed to me that many of the black patrons at La Costa viscerally felt they had finally found a sports hero with whom they could identify, a pro athlete whom they wouldn't mind their own upper-middle-class kids emulating.

Again, I think this is a tribute to Tiger's parents. Earl Woods is a former Green Beret, who raised his son with equal measures of love and discipline. I confess that I got a little teary-eyed when I watched the two warmly embrace after each of young Tiger's U.S. Amateur championships. It's not often on television that you see that kind of relationship depicted between black fathers and sons.

Tiger's mom "Tida," of Thai heritage, was no less responsible for keeping the golf prodigy grounded. As a toddler, she recalled in the Newsweek cover story, Tiger would watch tennis bad boys John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors on TV throwing racquets on the courts. She admonished her precocious Tiger, "I don't want you to ruin my reputation as a parent. I will spank you in a minute if you act like that."

Isn't it a pity that many other black athletes didn't receive the same kind of parenting at home? That's why so many, it seems, get into so much trouble. And I, for one, can barely stand to watch most professional sports these days because I just can't separate the athletes' performance on the field, the diamond, the court from their personal conduct.

Look at Michael Irvin and Erik Williams, the Dallas Cowboys bad boys.

Or how about Albert Belle, the Chicago White Sox slugger, who's had so many run-ins with fans and reporters that he's had to receive anger-control counseling?

Then there's Dennis Rodman, of the Chicago Bulls, who not only is unsatisfied with the natural hair color God gave him, but also feels a need to degrade himself by traipsing around in a wedding dress.

These pros are disgraceful. And I hope no black youngster in America views them as role models. They have been blessed with extraordinary athletic prowess that has made each of them millionaires many times over, and they have done nothing but bring shame upon themselves and, by association, all black athletes.

If Tiger Woods ever roughs up some young woman, if he ever goes postal on his fans, if he ever puts on a dress of any kind, he will break my heart and many others as well. I view him as a black Luke Skywalker, the last best hope for a world famous superstar athlete/role model. May the force be with him.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1997. There are 341 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 24, 1848, James W. Marshall discovered a gold nugget at Sutter's Mill in northern California, a discovery that led to the gold rush of 1849.

On this date:
In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Robert Baden-Powell.

In 1943, President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill concluded a wartime conference in Casablanca, Morocco.

In 1972, the Supreme Court struck down laws that denied welfare benefits to people who had resided in a state for less than a year.

In 1978, a nuclear-powered Soviet satellite plunged through Earth's atmosphere and disintegrated, scattering radioactive debris over parts of northern Canada.

How the polls deceived America

William Rusher

What did the polls tell Americans about the likely outcome of last year's presidential election? The average person would say that they showed Bill Clinton as the overwhelming favorite, usually beating Bob Dole by nearly 20 percentage points.

And the average person would be right. That is exactly what they showed. Yet on Election Day Bill Clinton's margin over Bob Dole was just eight percentage points (49 to 41), with Ross Perot getting another eight. (Two percent of the voters voted for minor candidates.)

Did the polls' persistent and outrageous overestimate of Clinton's margin, month after month, make any difference? Of course it did. Many people are swayed to what they believe is the winning side, especially if they think that side is going to win overwhelmingly. And even the staunchest Dole supporters found it harder to generate enthusiasm (let alone cash) for their candidate because he was so widely believed to be doomed.

I had decided to let this manifest case of bias pass without comment, under the general heading of What Else Is New, when my eye was caught last month by a New York Times article on the subject. Incredibly, it appears that the pollsters are actually taking bows for their performance.

"The polls did a pretty good job," said Andrew Kohut, director of the Pew Research Center for the People and the Press (and himself a veteran pollster). "I would give the polls a grade of B. Most were within the margin of sampling error."

How on earth does Kohut come up with such a conclusion? He achieves it by concentrating exclusively on the very last polls taken by the various polling organizations, on the weekend immediately preceding Election Day.

Even then, with the sole exception of the Reuters/Zogby poll (which was far ahead of the rest in predictive accuracy all year long), the pollsters credited Clinton with margins of 12% to 18% over Dole - or, in other words, exaggerated the Clinton lead by anywhere from 50% to 125%. For this they get a B?

But of course their final predictions were, in any case, the least important of all. Who gives a hoot what the polls predict the day before Election Day? By then everybody has made up their minds, and in any case we'll know the actual result in 36 hours. It was what the polls predicted in the spring, summer and fall that really mattered.

And there the polls did devastating damage to Bob Dole's chances. On May 16, for example, a Wall Street Journal/NBC News poll reported that respondents favored Clinton over Dole by 54% to 37% - a 17-point lead. A New York Times/CBS News poll conducted July 11-13 gave Clinton a lead of 22 points: 49 to 27, with 16% favoring Perot. A Washington Post/ABC News poll conducted Sept. 3-4 showed the president leading Dole 51% to 37% (i.e., by 14 points) with Perot taking eight.

A USA Today/CNN/Gallup poll conducted Sept. 13-15 was worse: The president's lead over Dole was 16 points (51 to 35), with Perot getting seven. Another poll conducted for the same group just six days later showed the president's margin over Dole widening - it was now 17 points (53% to 36%), with just five going to Perot.

No wonder the polls prefer to dwell on their very last (and least important) samplings. As Election Day approached, they had to reduce their hype to save their own reputations, and so they headed for the high timber. Even so, they missed the truth by a country mile.

No doubt Bob Dole would have lost anyway, by some narrower margin. But credit the polls with trying to make sure.

Translating promises into reality

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

The poetry was Democratic with Republican rhymes, as President Clinton spoke his themes for a second term, pledging to balance ingrained political and philosophical rivalries.

Indeed, he claimed - surely prematurely - to be burying a central point of dispute, over the role of the federal government. He said that debate has been resolved in favor of limits, neither conservative nor liberal, but both.

His keynote at Monday's inauguration was a promise of humbled federal government, strong enough that it can act where need is real, living within the means of a balanced budget, doing more with less.

Those inaugural words could just as well have begun a Republican administration, but they reflect the promises that won re-election for the Democratic president.

Clinton said the future he envisions will require alliances outside the barriers that normally govern political lives.

It is, he said, a bipartisan common task, and work on it starts today. And in earnest two weeks from tonight, with his State of the Union address, followed on Feb. 6 by the budget that will set out the fine print of his New Promise proposals.

They will be modest, minimal by traditional Democratic standards. He is committed to a balanced budget in six years, a goal adopted from the GOP.

But Clinton also wants measures the Republicans won't buy - additional money to ease the most stringent measures of the welfare law he accepted as a candidate, broader health care coverage for the needy, an expanded family leave law.

And he vows to fight, as bad policy, the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, a first priority on the Republican agenda. There will have to be mutually accepted settlements on contentious questions about Medicare and Medicaid financing. Clinton is committed to modest tax cuts, Republicans to broader and deeper reductions.

The elegant promises that celebrated the 53rd presidential inauguration on Monday must now be translated into the plain language of governing. When last a president of one party was inaugurated to face a Congress run by the other, George Bush reached out his hand in a symbolic gesture of bipartisanship to Democratic leaders.

Before his one term was done, it was clenched in gridlock.

Four years ago, Clinton was inaugurated to his first term with Democrats in congressional charge, calling for bold experimentation. But those ventures, notably into national health insurance, failed in the big government backlash that awarded Congress to the Republicans in 1994.

So on this Inauguration Day, this president echoed his GOP predecessor.

"The American people returned to office a president of one party and a Congress of another,"

Clinton said. "Surely they did not do this to advance the politics of petty bickering and extreme partisanship they plainly deplore."

"No, they call on us instead to repair the breach, and to move on with America's eternal mission."

All the differences will not be partisan. All the liberals haven't gone and Clinton will have to deal with those factions within his own party. They will, for example, demand the changes in the welfare overhaul he has promised and Republicans reject.

Clinton's political revival was built around his reach to the center, marked by his State of the Union declaration a year ago that "the era of big government is over."

Republicans said that was campaign year cover, that once past his last election, Clinton would revert to the ways of big government Democrats. They remain suspicious, although he promised otherwise.

He did so again with a series of rhetorical compromises, rejecting Ronald Reagan ideology on one hand, activist government on the other.

"Government is not the problem; government is not the solution," he said. "We, the American people are the solution ..."

"We need a new government for a new century, a government humble enough not to try to solve all our problems for us, but strong enough to give us the tools to solve our problems for ourselves."

The debate is, and will be, over what that means in practical terms.

Balancing words is simpler than governing by them.

Scientists use bloodclots to starve cancers

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an advance that could be tested in people within two years, scientists are starving cancers to death in mice by creating clots in tumors' blood vessels.

The therapy, much like killing a plant by cutting its roots, caused rapid cancer cell death within 24 hours, Dr. Philip Thorpe of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center reports today in the journal Science.

Two weeks later, tumors had disappeared in 38 percent of the mice and had shrunk by more than half in another 24 percent.

Much work is needed to prove the treatment could work in people. But it could one day offer doctors a less-toxic alternative to chemotherapy for breast, lung, ovarian and other cancers.

"It would be wonderful," said Dr. James Pluda, a National Cancer Institute senior drug investigator. "What this paper demonstrates is proof of the concept that ... this kind of therapy can be effective."

Said Harvard University professor Dr. Judah Folkman, whose research into blood vessels that feed tumors formed a foundation for the discovery: "This is very promising and very elegant work."

Solid tumors, which represent most major cancers, depend on blood for oxygen and nutrients. Blood vessels grow rampantly through the cancer mass, often making surgery difficult because of heavy bleeding. The vessels eventually snake into other organs and spread the malignancy.

Thorpe theorized that by clogging vessels deep inside a tumor would make it die from the inside out. The question was how to avoid life-threatening blood clots in arteries throughout the body.

To create an intravenous drug, Thorpe used a human protein called tissue factor, or TF, that is vital in helping people's blood clot. So the TF in this drug dose would not coagulate on the way through the bloodstream to the tumor, he removed the molecule that would allow it to latch onto normal cells.

Then Thorpe attached a homing device, an antibody that recognizes a substance found only inside the tumor's blood vessels. Once that substance hooks TF to these tumor vessels, the TF starts creating blood clots inside the tumor.

Clogged vessels appeared throughout mice tumors in 30 minutes and caused rapid cancer-cell death within 24 hours. Two weeks later, tumors large enough to be the equivalent of 2-5 pounds in a person had died in 38 percent of the mice.

Key to making the process work in people is finding the right homing device to direct TF to a tumor's blood vessels. Thorpe already has engineered drugs that would target one substance, called vascular endothelial cell growth factor.

A biotechnology firm, Technidone Corp. of Tustine, Calif., is licensing the therapy and plans to begin testing it in people within two years.

"We give the tumor a stroke," Thorpe said. "We can envision making a single drug for treating all types of solid tumors, whereas previously we had to tailor to each disease."

Before Thorpe's work, scientists were trying to stop the runaway growth of new blood vessels that allows cancer to spread, a field pioneered by Folkman called "anti-angiogenesis" that recently yielded potential drugs to fight metastasis.

Thorpe's approach severs the cancer's original blood vessels, using the body's own clotting mechanisms instead of a chemical.

The two methods are complementary, the cancer institute's Pluda said, and it is unclear which would prove best for certain tumors.

Education Secretary Richard Riley has ruled out using federal bilingual education money to help the district. But the district gets about $14 million in other funds, some used to train teachers to educate children with other native tongues.

Oakland officials say if pupils comfortable only in Spanish or Cambodian get that kind of consideration, black children should, too.

"Parents sit and they see one group of children's teachers get special training and special help and materials and another group of children, who also don't speak standard English, don't get special training for their teachers or special help," said Jean Quan, Oakland school district president.

Miss Amarillo Area visit

Miss Amarillo Area Katina Thomas visits with Ashleigh Burns after meeting with the Pampa Middle School team leadership classes on Wednesday. Later in the day Thomas also watched as students acted out a mock trial presented by the seventh grade Gifted and Talented students. Thomas is a Pampa High School graduate. She is the daughter of Steve and Bobbie Thomas and the sister of Miami Dolphins player Zach Thomas. She will be competing in the state pageant later this year.

Senate committee hears testimony on Ebonics controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — When high school student Michael Lampkins talked to senators about helping black schoolmates get better marks, he misspoke, by one way of thinking. By another, he was merely lapsing into a native tongue.

"We do have teachers who have went into the classrooms not having the capability to understand," the nervous 17-year-old testified.

Whether that was a grammatical mistake or an expression of ebonics goes to the heart of a national debate started by the Oakland, Calif., school board, where Lampkins is student director.

The debate pits traditional grammarians against some black nationalist scholars who believe speech is neither good nor bad — just standard or nonstandard. The subject was explored Thursday by a Senate committee.

For his part, Lampkins cares little about whether ebonics is a legitimate language using English words with African speech patterns. He just wants teachers to be able to do a better job.

"When a student doesn't understand the teacher and the teacher does not understand the student, learning does not take place," he said.

Oakland school officials say that despite a board decision recognizing a separate black language, their aim is to teach in standard English, recognizing it as the common tongue of business and education.

Education Secretary Richard Riley has ruled out using federal bilingual education money to help the district. But the district gets about $14 million in other funds, some used to train teachers to educate children with other native tongues.

Oakland officials say if pupils comfortable only in Spanish or Cambodian get that kind of consideration, black children should, too.

"Parents sit and they see one group of children's teachers get special training and special help and materials and another group of children, who also don't speak standard English, don't get special training for their teachers or special help," said Jean Quan, Oakland school district president.

Amarillo Symphony to have annual Pops Concert Saturday night

AMARILLO — The concert hall at the Amarillo Civic Center will swing to a different sound Saturday when the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra presents its annual Pops Concert, with the featured guest artist for the concert being a jazz group called Rhythm & Brass.

"The majority of this group is from a former group called The Dallas Brass, which performed to rave reviews with the Symphony several years ago," James Setapen, music director and conductor, said.

The first half of the concert features George Gershwin's "Cuban Overture."

"Gershwin wrote this lively piece in 1932, following a trip to pre-Castro Cuba, which was a dream vacation spot," Setapen said. "While in Cuba, he found several new percussion instruments, some of which have now become standard with orchestras. The variety of percussion instruments featured in this piece makes it not only exciting to hear, but exciting to watch."

"American Dance Music" by Daniel McCarthy, which was written for Rhythm & Brass, will makes its world debut with the Amarillo Symphony Orchestra. "This is the first time this piece has been played with a full orchestra," Setapen said. "It is a very upbeat work that the audience will really enjoy."

The second half of the concert is devoted to Duke Ellington, one of the most important American composers.

"The Amarillo Symphony has not performed many of Ellington's works, so we are all excited about doing these well-known pieces," Setapen said. "The second half begins with an orchestrated medley some of Ellington's most famous tunes, and then the orchestra will be joined by Rhythm & Brass for several more numbers, including "Mood Indigo," and "Caravan."

The concert, which is being sponsored by American Airlines, begins at 8 p.m. in the Amarillo Civic Center auditorium. Tickets are available by calling the Amarillo Symphony office at (806) 376-8782.

Religion briefs

PAMPA — So you can't decide what to do for Super Bowl Sunday? No problem! Calvary Baptist Church, located at 900 E. 23rd, is happy to announce the best Super Bowl party in town!

Cheer on your team while watching the game on a big 8 by 10 foot television. Hear every grunt and groan through concert-hall sound system.

There will be assorted food and snacks available to satisfy those sideline munchies. Child care will be available for those with nursery age children. A worship service will be held during half-time.

So come on down Sunday, Jan. 26, at 4:30 p.m. and root for your favorite team and enjoy some good fellowship. If you have any further questions, call 665-0842.

NASHVILLE — Embassy Music of Nashville, Tenn., is conducting its third annual artist and song search, "The Ultimate Talent Search," which will offer over $50,000 in prizes, including a recording contract for the grand prize winner in the artist's division.

The grand prize winning song will be recorded and distributed nationwide to Christian radio.

Entry forms will be available Jan. 31 and must be postmarked no later than April 5.

This year's judges include

Michelle Davis of CCM Magazine; Jay DeMarcus of East to West; Joel Lindsey, staff writer for Benson Music; Scott Mills, president of Chandler/Mills Agency; and Darwin Moody, president of Embassy Music.

To receive entry information, call the Ultimate hotline at 1-800-677-1207, Ext. 2500, or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Embassy Music, 1161 Murfreesboro Road, Suite 323, Nashville, TN 37217.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — State churches are "adopting" welfare families and helping them make the transition to independence.

The goal is to have 50 churches and civic groups signed up by Jan. 22, when the governor gives his State of the State address. Twenty-two churches have made commitments.

"Here we are actually developing relationships with people — caring, compassionate relationships," said the Rev. Rod Mays of Woodruff Road Presbyterian Church. "This is like Christ taught. We are responsible for those who don't have — the widows and orphans and the poor."

The Putting Families First Foundation aims to give people on welfare a personal, long-term commitment.

"This is necessary," director Lisa Van Riper said. "There's a need and there's an imperative."

Gov. David Beasley set up the foundation with $200,000 left over from his campaign fund. The foundation spent most of its first year getting organized. Now, it is looking for churches to participate.

Ms. Van Riper hopes to involve 500 churches within the next two years. That still would reach only a fraction of the state's 43,000 welfare recipients.

DALLAS (AP) — The dream of racial harmony in America didn't die with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., his son and namesake says.

Martin Luther King III told a Dallas congregation that the dream his father evoked so vividly in his famous 1963 speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial lives on.

It persists in the hearts of all Americans of good will and in church institutions that served as the foundation of his father's work, King said in a sermon to the Wilshire Baptist Church.

The vehicle for the dream is love, he said.

"That was true in 1957. It is true in 1997. It will be true in 2007. And it will be true through the ages of time," he said...

'Most beautiful' Washburn Bible can be found all over the world

By MATT TRUPELL
Associated Press Writer

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Radical but beautiful, one of the limited first editions of the Washburn Bible sits on display here in the Bradbury Thompson Alumni Center of Washburn University.

The Bible was designed by Thompson, considered one of the greatest graphic artists ever. It looks very different from other Bibles because its lines are set like poetry — flush on the left side, ragged on the right.

"It's the most beautiful Bible in the world," said Ruth Fink of Topeka, chairwoman of the committee that published it. "I think it's the best Bible in the art world today."

Ten years in the making, the Bible won accolades when it first was published in 1979 in a limited three-volume edition. It continued to receive notice when Oxford University Press published it in 1980, and was made a Book of the Month Club selection.

There are editions at the Vatican, the British Library, the Gutenberg Museum in Mainz, Germany, and at the Kremlin Museum in Moscow, among other places.

Now it is sold only at the Washburn University bookstore.

"I'm disappointed it didn't take off and become the standard," said Alfred Eisenman, retired director of graphic design studies at Yale University, where Thompson taught.

"I think it is significant because it is so readable," Eisenman said in a telephone interview from his home in Greenwich, Conn.

Thompson, a 1934 Washburn graduate and one-time captain of its track team, was considered by some the dean of American graphic arts when he died in 1995. He designed commemorative stamps for the U.S. Postal Service, was art director at Mademoiselle magazine for 14 years and produced editions of American classics, such as The Red Badge of Courage.

For his Bible, Thompson took the King James Version and eliminated the imposing columns of solid, even lines of type. Instead, the length of the lines vary. Words that belong together are kept together as part of a phrase.

"My father would break the lines of the sacred text where the reader needs to take a breath," said Dodge Thompson, the designer's son and director of exhibits at the National Art Gallery in Washington, D.C. He said his father got the idea from Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass.

Such a phrased version, with comfortable type, means a bigger book. The Oxford edition is 8-by-11 inches, with 1,769 pages and 66 illustrations.

"In my view, it was the greatest masterpiece of book typography of the century," Eisenman said. "I've used this Bible for a long time, ever since it came out. I just wish it weren't so big."

Thompson was planning to bring the volume out through a Chicago publisher when the 1973-74 recession came along. The publisher decided not to pursue the project, even though much of it was completed.

So Thompson returned to his old alma mater in Topeka to see if it could help.

Washburn University's endowment money could not be used for a risky venture. Topekans were interested enough to form the Washburn Bible Committee to raise money for the project. Mrs. Fink's mother, Olive White Garvey, became the project's principal benefactor.

In 1979, a limited three-volume edition was published. Three hundred ninety-eight copies were made in Italy, and 375 were put up for sale at $2,500 a set. Nineteen of those are left, Mrs. Fink said, and they now sell for $3,500 each.

In 1980, Oxford University Press printed 50,000 copies of the one-volume edition. About 47,000 have been sold at $75 each.

Last summer, the Washburn Endowment Association sent a limited edition to the Kremlin Museum in Moscow and an Oxford edition to Nobel Prize-winning novelist Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, to his apparent delight.

"Even a casual examination of this Bible yields proof that such an enduring masterpiece — a showcase of impeccable quality and diligent preparation — can still be produced in our hasty age," Solzhenitsyn wrote in a July 1996 letter of thanks to the American embassy.

Amarillo has new bishop

AMARILLO (AP) — The diocese of Amarillo has a new bishop, the Rev. John Yanta, who has been serving as auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese of San Antonio.

Yanta, 65, becomes the seventh bishop of the 70-year-old diocese, replacing the Rev. Leroy Matthiesen, who has served since May of 1980. Matthiesen reached the mandatory age of 75 last June.

The Amarillo diocese covers the top 26 counties of the Panhandle and represents about 52,000 Catholics.

The announcement was made early this week by archbishop Agostino Cacciavillan, papal nuncio to the United States.

Yanta has served under archbishop Patrick Flores in San Antonio. In 1995, the San Antonio archdiocese had a Catholic population of nearly 640,000.

Treasured Pieces Of Jewelry May Be The Ones Rarely Worn

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to your answer to "Sad in the Midwest." She had purchased a piece of jewelry for her closest friend after receiving some money from an inheritance. The friend wore the jewelry only occasionally, so "Sad in the Midwest" wanted to buy the jewelry back.

I don't think she should request the jewelry back. When I receive a piece of jewelry, I treasure it so much that I wear it only on special occasions because I am afraid of losing it.

My mother-in-law has hurt my feelings in the past because I'm reluctant to wear my better jewelry often, but I feel I have a valid point. Maybe "Sad in the Midwest's" friend feels the same way.

TEXAS LIL

DEAR TEXAS LIL: Thank you for the input. Many other readers also disagreed with my answer. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I can hardly believe the advice you gave "Sad in the Midwest" to offer to buy back the jewelry she originally gave her friend as a gift. Although "Sad" may have seen her friend wear the jewelry only three times, it does not mean her friend has not worn the piece of jewelry in her absence. Nor does it suggest her friend does not appreciate or cherish the gift.

When you give people a gift, it is theirs to do with as they wish; surely she does not expect her to wear it every day. For her to offer to buy the jewelry from her friend is declassing. If "Sad" liked the piece of jewelry as much as she indicates, she should have bought it for herself. I would suggest that instead of offering to buy it, she ask her friend if she can borrow the piece and have it copied by a jeweler.

MICHELLE M. HURLEY, COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR MICHELLE: Mea culpa! How do you say, "Your solution was better than mine" in Latin?

DEAR ABBY: Please add this to your collection of "acts of kindness."

Back in 1990, I saw the movie "Crazy People," starring Dudley Moore. It was about people with mental illness bonding together to become productive citizens. This movie sent a clear message to the public that mental illness is just that — an illness.

Since I suffer from clinical depression and have for most of my life, I wrote a letter to Dudley Moore telling him how much this picture helped me. To my surprise, a few months later, my phone rang and I heard, "May I please speak to Carol? This is Dudley Moore calling."

Abby, he was so interested in my illness, so supportive and caring. He was modest and sincere. I can't tell you what a big help it was knowing that someone of his fame still cares for those who fight a daily battle with mental illness. It made my day.

CAROL ANN IN BETHESDA, MD.

DEAR CAROL ANN: Thank you. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: I have a perfect response for "Speechless," the woman who didn't know how to respond to her mother-in-law's "Did you miss me" question: "Yes, but my aim is getting better!"

BASKETBALL

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Jason Yarbrough scored a career-high 19 points and Thomas Mouton added 17 points and 15 rebounds Thursday as Sam Houston State beat Nicholls State 85-76.

The Bearkats (3-13, 2-4 Southland) took a 42-30 half-time lead, and Nicholls never got closer than 65-61 with five minutes to go.

Nicholls State (5-12, 2-5) was led by Kendrick Franklin with 31 points on 11-of-17 shooting from the field. Taurus Howard added 11 points and Wayne Edwards 10.

For Sam Houston, David Amaya had 18 points, Boney Watson added 13 points and Josh Girtz 10. Eleven of Mouton's 17 points were from the free-throw line, where he was 11-of-13.

TENNIS

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — An ankle-high winner around the net post. An impressive dash to catch up to a lob at the baseline. A sprinting forehand pass down the line.

Pete Sampras confounded Thomas Muster and his computer analysis with a full range of sharpshooting today and advanced to the Australian Open final against surprising Spaniard Carlos Moya, a 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 upset winner over Michael Chang.

The women's title will be decided Saturday when fourth-seeded Martina Hingis attempts to become the youngest Grand Slam tournament singles champion this century when she takes on unseeded Mary Pierce, the 1995 Australian Open winner.

In his 6-1, 7-6 (7-3), 6-3 victory, Sampras came out with more than his devastating serve and volley attack. He also hit frequent winners from the baseline against Muster, an acknowledged master of back-court rallies.

It took them 30 shots to decide the first point of the second-set tiebreaker. Sampras finally won with a crosscourt forehand.

"It kind of set the tone for the tiebreaker, and I played a real good aggressive tiebreaker," said the world No. 1.

Muster had his chance to win the second set before reaching the tiebreaker. Serving at 5-3, he gained a set point by blasting a backhand at Sampras' feet at the net, but wasted it by netting a forehand.

Sampras then took the game with a drop volley after Muster had retrieved two overheads.

"Here was my chance to take a set from him, and I think it would have been wide open," Muster said. "But he came right back from 5-2 and once he is ahead, he's very tough to beat. He doesn't give you many chances. If you don't take those you get, you're going to lose."

Muster has been unable to add a Grand Slam tournament title on hardcourts or grass to his impressive list of clay court titles, including the 1995 French Open. He also has been unable to beat Sampras more than once in eight meetings.

Sampras, seeking his ninth Grand Slam tournament crown, said Muster "should have won the second set. ... Once I won the second, I felt that was a big turning point."

He went on to a 3-0 lead in the third set, breaking Muster in the second game by racing to retrieve an angled volley and drilling a forehand down the sideline, leaving Muster helpless on the other side of the court.

It was one of 17 ground-stroke winners for Sampras to 23 for Muster. But Sampras' ability to control the baseline rallies led to some of his 16 volley winners. He also slammed in 16 aces.

"I felt I was going toe-to-toe with him from the backcourt," he said.

"The thing that makes him difficult to play is when he's standing where he wants to stand and hits the big forehand and kind of dictates play," Sampras added.

Super Bowl buildup: It's really a super grind

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Enough, already. Can't they just play the game?

The Super Bowl buildup has become nothing more than a super grind. The players can hardly wait for Sunday. The reporters are running out of questions. The dearth of news coming out of this year's NFL championship game has forced a resurgence of the same old stories — with a new twist here and there.

Here's a flash: It was reported Thursday that Pete Carroll has been chosen to replace New England coach Bill Parcells.

Hey, wait a minute, doesn't Parcells still have at least one more game to coach for the Patriots? Haven't we been listening to reports about Parcells' future all week? Aren't we all growing a little weary of this subject — and just about everything else associated with this Super Bowl?

"I've answered the same question a hundred times," Green Bay tight end Mark Chmura said Thursday, sitting wearily at table as he prepared for the players' final news conference. "I'm glad this is the last day for this. Now we can just concentrate on the game."

Sports Fan Radio Network reported that Carroll, San Francisco's defensive coordinator, will be named the Patriots new coach when Parcells resigns after the Super Bowl. The Patriots denied the report, which was the latest incarnation of the ongoing saga concerning Parcells' future.

Here's some other big news that developed Thursday: Gerry Austin will be the Super Bowl referee, and the $1.2 million halftime show will be "The Blues Brothers Bash" featuring James Brown, ZZ Top and Dan Aykroyd.

"There's no news to write about, which is good for the players," Chmura said. "But it's also bad for us because we have to keep talking about what happened during the season. What we want to think about is Sunday."

The Super Bowl is being played at the aptly named Superdome, but apparently the NFL players don't think it's such a super playing surface. The dome was rated the 12th-worst playing surface in the NFL, according to a study released Thursday by the NFL Players Association.

The best playing surface is Houlihan's Stadium in Tampa, while Philadelphia's rock-hard Veterans Stadium is ranked the worst.

The St. Louis Rams used the Super Bowl forum to announce that new coach Dick Vermeil has fired Steve Ortmeyer, the team's vice president of football operations. Of course, that sort of news meant little to the Packers and Patriots, who are starting to get a little antsy about their own business.

"We can play the game in our minds and we can see the game in our dreams," Green Bay receiver Antonio Freeman said. "But we can't play the game until Sunday."

Some players are so anxious to get on the field that they're counting points instead of counting sheep.

"I had a dream last night that I scored 10 touchdowns," said Andre Rison of the Packers. "I know it is not going to happen, but I just had a dream. They were feeding me (passes). I haven't been fed in a long time. Now, just picture Andre Rison getting fed. I don't drop too many balls. Picture them throwing the ball to me."

"But, if I catch zero balls and we win the game, I'm fine. ... I'll be a world champion."

New England's Keith Byars has been dreaming about the Super Bowl since he was 2 years old.

"I've been playing in this Super Bowl game ever since the '60s, when I first picked up a football," he said. "I've been playing in this Super Bowl since the '70s when I was a teen-ager. I've been playing since the '80s when I was a young adult and just starting my career. I've been playing even in the '90s as a seasoned veteran."

"I've been playing this Super Bowl game many times throughout my life, and I've won every time. We've blown the other team out; we've been down and we've come back. Even when I'm dreaming about it, we've been down a lot and it looked bleak, but the game never ended until I won. It's not going to end Sunday until I win the football game."

End? Hey, let's just get it started.

PHS swimmers ready for District Three meet

PAMPA — The Pampa High swimmers enter district competition this weekend and expectations are high that most of the team members will qualify for regionals.

"There's 18 on the team and I'm betting we'll be taking at least 14. We're sitting real high in the seedings and the kids are focused and ready to go. They know this is the first step and they definitely don't want it to be the end of the season," said Pampa head coach David Pink.

The district meet is set for today and Saturday at Texas Tech in Lubbock. Starting times are 2 p.m. today and 10 a.m. Saturday.

In the boys' division, Bobby Venal (100 butterfly) and Dakota Tefertiller (100 breaststroke) will contend for the gold medal at district.

"They're both listed in the top three in their event and they have a very good chance of making it to state. In fact, the majority of the team members are very confident," Pink said. "They're all so energized right now it's hard to keep up with them."

In the girls' division, Pink expects strong performances from Ashlee David, Stacy Huddleston and foreign exchange student Sara Verdoni of Italy.

"Ashlee has been around a long time and she's always done well. Stacy is a talented sophomore and Sara is looking good," Pink added.

The top six in each district event qualify for the regional meet.

"Our goals is for the boys to take third place and the girls fourth place. The boys want to knock off Amarillo High and the girls want to knock off Tascosa"

Mike Jones resigns Lady Harvesters' post

PAMPA — Pampa High head girls' basketball coach Mike Jones has resigned to accept the head women's basketball coaching position at Howard Payne University in Brownwood.

"This is a real neat opportunity for me, but we do have mixed feelings about it," Jones said. "We feel sad about leaving Pampa. The people have been good to us and it's been a great place for our kids to go to school. On the other hand I'm excited about the new challenge. We've had a lot of prayer about it and we feel like the Lord is leading us to Howard Payne."

Jones has been the Lady Harvesters' head coach the past four years. Before that he was assistant to Harvesters' head coach Robert Hale for six years.

"This is the longest I've ever been in one place in 23 years of coaching," Jones said. "We're going to miss this area and the people of Pampa."

Jones said he was recommended for the job by outgoing Howard Payne coach John Nichols, who resigned his position to become a full professor.

"They called me," Jones said. "I wasn't looking for the job. In fact I was shocked."

Jones is hoping his assistant, Mark Elms, becomes the Lady Harvesters' new head coach.

"Mark has helped me every year with my camp and we have the same philosophy. Hopefully, they'll see fit to have him carry on the program," Jones said.

Reynolds signs Astros' contract

HOUSTON (AP) — Shane Reynolds, one of four Houston Astros players who were eligible for salary arbitration, agreed today to a three-year contract with the team.

Reynolds, a 16-game winning pitcher, struck out more than 200 batters last season.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed. Reynolds, who earned $330,000 last season, had asked for $2.7 million. The Astros had offered $1.7 million.

Reynolds, who has played in the major league for three years, is the first Astros player with less than five years in the majors to get a multi-year deal.

Reynolds had a breakthrough season in 1996, reaching career-highs in wins, games (35), starts (35), complete games (4), innings (239) and strikeouts (204).

His number of strikeouts ranked sixth in the league.

Texas Tech cagers face 'Murderer's row'

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Thanks in part to their coach, Texas Tech players can recite the words "we'll take it one game at a time" as easily as they can execute an alley-oop.

Coach James Dickey's mantra has become even thicker this week. After Saturday's road trip to No. 14 Iowa State looms the much-anticipated home tilt with top-ranked Kansas, then a road game against rival No. 23 Texas.

"Right now we're worried about Iowa State," said guard Stan Bonewitz of the No. 20 Red Raiders (13-3, 5-1 Big 12).

The Cyclones (12-3, 3-2), who may be without leading scorer Dedic Willoughby and his sore left hamstring, showed they can still put together a win by beating Kansas State 54-48 Tuesday night. Even with Willoughby and his 18 points-per-game average, Iowa State isn't exactly an offensive showcase. Without him, they'll be even more reliant on the ferocious defense that vaulted them to No. 4 earlier this year.

Dickey said low-scoring affairs, like a 70-64 victory over Oklahoma State on Monday, should continue to be the norm in the rough-and-tumble Big 12.

"I expected a dip in scoring," Dickey said, after his team entered league play averaging nearly 90 points per game. "The defenses are outstanding, and the conference opponents are putting a lot of emphasis on stopping us more."

Dickey doesn't expect his charges to lose sight of the Don and Lois Thompson get a laugh when showing off his new Wisconsin Cheesehead hat to prove his loyalty to the Green Bay Packers for Sunday's Super Bowl game between the Packers and New England Patriots.

Packers' fan gets his Cheesehead hat just in time for Super Bowl

By SHERRY CROMARTIE
Staff Writer

In an effort to give a transplanted Texan fan a new cheering assignment, a brother and sister-in-law of Dan Thompson are making sure he will be recognized as a Packers' fan when watching Sunday's Super Bowl game.

Gary and Polly Phillips (sister of Mrs. Thompson) of Oklahoma City plotted with Thompson's wife Lois recently, and together they were able to find a giant Wisconsin Cheesehead hat through a service called the Packer-Net internet of Green Bay, Wis., to be sent to Thompson this week.

Thompson said he had been in contact with Phillips recently about a certain kind of part for a saw-tool, and that he was pleased when the package came Wednesday because he was anxious to receive that part.

"When he opened that box and saw that cheesehead hat, the look on his face was priceless," Lois Thompson said.

"It's a split deal for me, sort of, because I used to be a Packers' fan, until I moved to Texas and developed a thing for the Dallas Cowboys," Thompson said.

The Thompsons moved to Pampa from Duncan, Okla., in 1961; however, Don is a native of Viroqua, Wis., about 100 miles from Green Bay. Thompson first left his home at age 18 to join the U.S. Army, but he's always favored the Green Bay Packers regardless of where he lives.

"I've been a loyal fan to the Packers for over 50 years, and I lend my support to the Cowboys, too. So when the two teams are playing each other, it is really difficult for me," he said.

When playing high school football in his home town, Thompson said his team members were entertained by Don Hudson, who was playing for the Packers' team in the 1950s, when Hudson was the speaker at Thompson's senior year annual football banquet. Thompson was quite impressed by Hudson as a young man and was excited to see him again on television three years ago when he was picked to flip the coin to start the Super Bowl game between the Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills.

"The Packers have been my team for years because of getting to know Don Hudson back then, and because, after all, it is my home state," he said.

Thompson, now retired, is the former owner and operator of the Eagle Radiator Shop at 516 W. Foster Street in Pampa. He believes the Packers will have a chance at winning the Super Bowl. He and his family will be getting together at his home Sunday to watch the game — and he will wear his new cheesehead hat.

Wake Forest ends Clemson's streak

By The Associated Press

Wake Forest didn't need any reminders that there are no gimmes in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The No. 4 Demon Deacons, coming off a tough home loss to Maryland last weekend, withstood a second-half rally by second-ranked Clemson to defeat the Tigers 65-62 Thursday night.

Tim Duncan had 16 points, 15 rebounds and five blocks as Wake (14-1, 5-1 ACC) ended Clemson's 12-game winning streak.

"I think we learned from the Maryland game that we have to have poise and pull together when times are tough," Duncan said. "We find somebody who has to make a play."

Tony Rutland was the one this time.

Rutland made a 3-pointer with 1:02 left to give Wake a 62-57 lead. Then with the Deacons holding a three-point lead, he drew a charging foul on Clemson's Andrius Jurkunas.

Elsewhere in the Top 25, it was: Memphis 64, No. 6 Louisville 58; No. 8 Minnesota 66, Iowa 51; No. 11 Arizona 99, Oregon St. 48; No. 16 Xavier, Ohio 62, George Washington 61; and No. 17 Stanford 78, Washington 67.

Greg Buckner scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half as Clemson (16-2, 5-1) rallied from 12 down to close to 63-62 with 15.1 seconds left. The Tigers lost their chance to take the lead when Jurkunas, driving to his left, was whistled for charging when Rutland cut in front of him.

After Duncan made a free throw, Jurkunas missed a 30-footer at the buzzer.

"It was a great, great basketball game and I'm proud of our team for being able to survive it," said Wake Forest coach Dave Odom, who started 7-foot-1 freshman center Loren Woods alongside Duncan.

Terrell McIntyre's 3-pointer brought Clemson as close as it would come. Duncan twice went to the free-throw line in the final 12 seconds and made one shot.

"There's still a long way to go," McIntyre said. "We know we've got to improve. But we didn't back away when things were going bad."

The game had the aura of an ACC championship with scalpers asking $100 a seat and fans tailgating outside Littlejohn Coliseum.

Memphis 64, No. 6 Louisville 58

At Louisville, Ky., Chris Garner scored off two midcourt steals, made two 3-pointers and sank two clinching free throws for the Tigers (10-8, 4-2 Conference USA).

Louisville (15-2, 3-1) shot a season-low 34 percent (20-of-59), including 19 percent (5-of-26) from 3-point range.

Sunday Adebayo had 16 points, Garner added 15 and Cedric Henderson 12 for Memphis.

Alex Sanders led the Cardinals with 17 points and 12 rebounds.

No. 8 Minnesota 66, Iowa 51

At Minneapolis, Sam Jacobson scored a career-high 29 points and the Golden Gophers held Iowa to its lowest point total this season.

Jacobson, whose previous career high was 26 points, was 5-for-6 from 3-point range and gave Minnesota (17-2, 6-1) the lead for good with an exhilarating dunk midway through the first half.

Guards Eric Harris and Bobby Jackson teamed to hold Iowa's Andre Woolridge, the Big Ten's leading scorer at 22 points a

ROCKETS SCRAMBLE TO BEAT NETS, 111-104

HOUSTON (AP) — The New Jersey Nets are the type of team that gives the Houston Rockets fits. One with a losing record.

Hakeem Olajuwon, Clyde Drexler and Sam Mack each scored 20 points but the Rockets had to scramble at the end to beat the Nets for the eighth straight time, 111-104 Thursday night.

The Nets used a 9-0 run, including five points by Gill, to cut Houston's lead to 103-93 with 3:24 to play, but the Rockets played the clock wisely and pulled out the victory.

Rice defeats Brigham Young

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Shaun Igo had 19 points and Bobby Crawford had 11 to lead Rice University to a 62-59 victory over Brigham Young Thursday night.

Jeff Campbell and Eric Nielsen led Brigham Young (1-14, 0-5 Western Athletic Conference) with 16 and 15 points respectively. Campbell also had 13 rebounds. Crawford led Rice (8-7, 2-3 in 3-
