AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush has signed an anti-stalking bill into law.

It's the first bill of the 1997 legislative session to be signed and became law immediately upon the governor's signature.

"No Texans should have to live in fear of a stalker and I am pleased that legislators acted to restore this important protection," Bush said Tuesday.

Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said the governor will hold a ceremony to mark the bill's signing later this week. She said he wanted to sign it as quickly as possible to put the law into effect.

"That's great. That's what he should have done," said Rep. Brian McCall, R-Plano and a sponsor of the law. "There was no protection before the signature."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last year ruled the state's former anti-stalking law unconstitutional. Bush made replacing the law an emergency issue for state lawmakers, who began their session Jan. 14.

Trial begins for Hanks in slaying case

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

Testimony was expected to continue today in the murder trial of William Harley Hanks in connection with the shotgun slaying of his brother-in-law, Salvador Rodriguez.

The seven-man, five-woman jury listened intently Tuesday afternoon to a tape-recorded statement by Hanks in which he described shooting Rodriguez in the face with a 20-gauge shotgun as the two stood in the living room of Hanks' home at 317 Miami on the night of Oct. 25, 1995.

"I wouldn't have shot him if he hadn't threatened me first," the agitated voice of Hanks repeated from a tape recorder played in the courtroom.

The statement was recorded by Pampa Police Detective Terry Young only hours after the shooting.

Hanks sat silently in the courtroom, looking at his hands in his lap, as the jury listened to his recorded voice describe the events of the fatal evening.

In an emotion-filled voice recorded shortly before 4 a.m. Oct. 26, 1995, less than five hours after the shooting, Hanks told police detectives that he and friends had been drinking beer, and Rodriguez had joined them at Hanks' house the night of the shooting.

The jury listened to the recording of Hanks telling Detectives Young and Bracie King that Rodriguez was drunk and belligerent that night.

"He was a coke freak," the recorded voice echoed through the 31st District Court of Judge M. Kent Sims.

In his recorded statement to police, Hanks said that Rodriguez was armed with two pistols, a .44 and a .357 magnum, and that Rodriguez had threatened him with them.

Hanks said that when Rodriguez was intoxicated, he wanted to fight with everybody and that on several occasions in the preceding year and a half, Rodriguez had threatened to beat the slightly built Hanks. Hanks was 18 years old at the time of the shooting. Rodriguez was 23. The wives of the men were sisters.

Hanks said in his recorded statement that he was afraid of Rodriguez.

Earlier Tuesday, as testimony began, the jury heard from a trauma nurse, Jan Dickson, from Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, concerning the wound to Rodriguez' head.

Pampa Police Officer Shawn Fulager testified that he was at Allsup's convenience store at 140 S. Starkweather about 11 p.m. the night of Oct. 25, 1995, when a woman came into the store and asked for help saying, "He's got a gun. There's a man been shot."

Fulager said he followed the woman back to Hanks' house, where he was met by Hanks, who was in the front yard smoking a cigarette.

The Pampa patrolman said Hanks told him, "I shot him. He had a gun, and I was defending myself."

Fulager said he went inside the home, where he found an Hispanic male lying on his back on the living room floor staring blankly at the ceiling.

"I saw a pool of thick, bright red blood around his head," Fulager said.

The police officer also said he saw the butt of a pistol sticking out of the man's waistband.

Tammie Davis, 23, who now lives in Mississippi and who was identified as the woman who summoned Fulager, testified that she had been drinking beer that night with a group including her husband, Mike, and Hanks.

Testimony ended Tuesday with defense attorney Harold Comer questioning the discrepancies in two statements given to police by Mike Davis, Tammie Davis' husband, following the shooting.

Young testified that Davis told him in a statement taken early the morning of Oct. 26 that he had grabbed the barrel of the shotgun Hanks was holding, and it went off.

In a second statement taken later that afternoon, Davis told police he had grabbed the barrel of the shotgun, looked at Hanks' face and let go. His second statement said Hanks walked around Davis, and Davis then heard the shotgun go off.

District Attorney John Mann said he expected testimony in the case to last through today and that the case would most likely go to the jury on Thursday.

Source: Saddam orders more training exercises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has ordered a large number of training exercises for his troops and put his wife under house arrest and is pondering invading Kuwait, a senior U.S. military officer says.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry, asked about the report, said today: "I am not aware of anything that would suggest any offensive designs" on Saddam's part.

The officer, speaking Tuesday with Pentagon reporters on condition of anonymity, quoted unnamed intelligence sources as telling U.S. officials the Iraqi leader "comes in every morning and makes a decision" on whether his forces should move toward Kuwait.

He cautioned that he did not believe the high level of training means Iraq will "attack tomorrow morning."

The officer said Iraq's air and ground forces have maintained a rapid pace of training over the past several weeks, presumably to educate new commanders put in place after a recent military purge.

The officer called Saddam "irrational" and a man who could "drive his commanders ... to go south" toward Kuwait.

"We watch his movements very carefully every night," the officer said.

Last week, a leading Iraqi opposition figure said Saddam's security forces had arrested about 600 people, including more than 20 senior military officers and officials, since the assassination attempt on his eldest son and heir apparent, Oday.

McCurry, asked about the goings-on in Iraq, replied, "There is a great deal of complicated internal struggles for power."

Asked if the United States was aware of internal power struggles, McCurry said, "No. I'm saying there have been some things that have happened there recently — the attack upon Hussein's son — there are obviously things that have been reported publicly that would indicate that there are some internal machinations."

1996 United Way Campaign Chairman Jack Reeve, left, shakes the hand of David Gantz, who will be heading up the 1997 campaign, at Tuesday's Pampa United Way annual meeting.

Pampa United Way celebrates campaign victory at annual meeting and luncheon

The Pampa United Way held its annual Awards Luncheon and Annual Meeting on Tuesday, having a victory celebration for exceeding its fundraising goal for the 1996 campaign drive.

Meeting in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building, United Way board members, campaign volunteers, agency representatives and others gathered to mark a successful drive which saw pledges and donations exceed the goal of $315,000 to provide funding assistance to 17 agencies.

Jack Reeve, who served as the 1996 campaign chairman, praised the efforts of the volunteer campaign workers.

"As you can see by our banner behind us, we went 8.5 percent over our goal of $341,600," he said. "Each of our working divisions was magnificent."

United Way Board President Kim Hill presented Reeve with a plaque in appreciation of his efforts in guiding the very successful 1996 drive.

Hill also presented United Way Executive Administrator Katrina Bigham with a plaque in appreciation of the hard work Bigham has provided in her 10 years working in the Pampa United Way office.

In business items, the assemblage approved minutes from last year's meeting, accepted new board members and approved an amendment to the by-laws modifying the surplus funds requirements to match changes in accounting requirements for non-profit corporations.

Elected as new board members for three-year terms were Jack Reeve, Jan Oblak, Jeff Andrews, Bob Marx and Bob White.

The other board members also were recognized: Kim Hill, James Scroggins, Michael Trimble, Porter Briggs, Dr. Jerry Lane, Bob Eskridge, Karen Heare, Curt Beck, Jane Steele and Chuck White.

David Gantz was recognized as the 1997 drive chairman, taking over the reins from Reeve.

Serving as the new Executive Committee for the coming year will be Bob White, president; Karen Heare, vice president; and Jeff Andrews, treasurer.

Reeve also recognized the agencies that will be receiving the United Way assistance: American Red Cross, Big Brothers Big Sisters, Boy Scouts Golden Spread Council, The Bridge, Community Day Care Center, Genesis House, Texas Plains Girl Scouts Council, Gray County Child Protective Services, Gray County Latch Key, High Plains Epilepsy, Pampa Meals on Wheels, Pampa Sheltered Workshop, Pastoral Counseling, The Salvation Army, Southside Senior Citizens Center, Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority and Tralee Crisis Center.

Most of the meeting was dedicated to honoring the campaign workers and special supporters for the 1996 drive.

"Everyone here and many people not here today made this year's campaign a success," Reeve said. "Thank you for those efforts."

Sen. Teel Bivins receives Golden Apple Award

AUSTIN - The Texas Association of Mid-size Schools (TAMS) presented State Sen. Teel Bivins their Golden Apple Award this week in Austin.
 The presentation was made by representatives of the 12 mid-sized schools in Sen. Bivins' legislative district on behalf of all members of TAMS. The schools include Andrews, Borger, Dalhart, Denver City, Dumas, Greenwood, Hereford, Kermit, Pampa, Perryton, River Road and Seminole.

 "Teel Bivins is a champion for children," said TAMS President Dr. Wayne Pierce. "He is known as a tenacious advocate for education, and will not hesitate to stand up for what is right. Texas is fortunate to have him as chairman of the important Senate Education Committee."
 "I am as honored by this award as I am humbled by the enormity of the challenges that we face setting policy for public education in Texas," Bivins said.

 TAMS is an organization of mid-sized public schools and represents over 750,000 Texas children. The Golden Apple Award is made to public officials who have demonstrated exemplary support and leadership on behalf of the children of Texas, according to Ron Eubanks of Kaufman, a TAMS spokesman.

Southwest wins religious discrimination suit

DALLAS (AP) - A former Southwest Airlines flight attendant says she has no regrets about quitting her job despite losing a lawsuit that alleged the airline refused to accommodate her religious practices.
 Vanessa McCauley said her lawsuit was about religious freedom. Herb Kelleher, chief executive of Southwest Airlines, said her motivation was greed, that she sued hoping to get a large cash settlement.
 Jurors Tuesday deliberated about eight hours before finding in favor of the airline on Tuesday.
 Still, Ms. McCauley told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "there've been great victories" in pursuing her case.
 "I'm honored to have stood for Christians across the nation" against corporate America, she said. "I refused to sell my faith in Jesus Christ for a paycheck.
 "I will never be ashamed that I made this choice."

There was so much hostility involved in the 10-day trial that U.S. Magistrate Jane Boyle barred both a plaintiff's witness and a defense witness from the courtroom.
 Ms. McCauley, an ordained minister affiliated with the nondenominational Stepping Stone Family Church of Burleson, resigned from the airline in October 1994 and sought back wages and damages in her lawsuit.
 She said Southwest Airline officials told her she couldn't wear her small gold cross necklace while on duty and also couldn't read her Bible or carry it around with her while working. She said she resigned rather than comply.
 The jury also found for Southwest in a separate libel claim against Kelleher.
 Shortly after McCauley filed the lawsuit in 1995, Kelleher said in a letter that she was trying to blackmail the $2.8 billion-a-year company to start her own ministry, not preserve her religious freedom.

 "We're obviously pleased that the jury heard all the facts and exonerated the company of all the charges and exonerated Herb Kelleher of all the charges," Southwest attorney Jim Parker said.
 Kelleher testified last week that this case was actually about greed.
 The executive said McCauley was told she could wear a cross on a short chain that did not drape over her uniform.
 "Nobody said that Ms. McCauley can't wear her cross," he said.
 "The airline's uniform policy would prohibit a flight attendant from wearing any necklace outside the uniform, because we try to present a uniform appearance," he testified.
 Southwest policy would also prevent a flight attendant from initiating a religious discussion with a passenger, he added.

Former Pampan to head new Texaco division

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Texaco has announced the formation of the Worldwide Lubricants, Coolants and Fuels Additives business unit designed to leverage the company's capabilities in meeting customers' requirements in an increasingly competitive and global marketplace.

Thomas S. Neslage has been appointed general manager of the new unit, which will be based in Houston. The formation of the Worldwide Lubricants, Coolants and Fuel Additives business units follows Texaco's October 1996 announcement to functionally align and globalize its businesses.

Neslage, the son of Fred J. Neslage and the late Dorothy Neslage of Pampa, was born in Pampa, Texas. He is a 1970 graduate of Pampa High School. Neslage graduated from Texas Tech University in 1974 with a bachelor of arts degree in marketing and management, and earned a master's of business administration degree from the University of Tulsa in 1977. He recently relocated to Houston from Copenhagen, Denmark. He has two sons, Stephen and Scott, who currently reside in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Thomas S. Neslage

Coolants and Fuel Additives business unit's responsibilities will include the development and implementation of a global lubricants strategic plan; brand management of Texaco's lubricants, coolants and fuels additives products; coordination of worldwide sales and account management; purchases of additives and the base oils; worldwide sponsorships; and coordination of product development.

The new Worldwide Lubricants unit, Texaco Inc. Senior Vice President and President of Global Business Glenn F. Tilton said, "Texaco markets lubricants in more than 100 countries and has some of the most powerful lubricant and coolant brand names in the industry, including Havoline Formula¹ and Ursa motor oils, and Havoline Extended Life Anti-Freeze/Coolant. This new structure will allow us to leverage and drive these brands to greater competitive advantage."

"Tom Neslage's broad international management experience and proven leadership abilities will play a key role in our quest to make Texaco lubricants, coolants and fuel additives the products of choice of consumers around the world."

Texaco Inc. Vice President and President of Texaco's International Marketing and Manufacturing unit Clarence P. Cazalot, Jr. added, "This new business unit will help develop a focused worldwide lubricants strategy that will clearly benefit Texaco. This allows our organization and affiliates around the world to maximize the market and operating synergies that come from a global strategy."

in 1974, which later became a part of Getty Oil Company, and was the company's regional marketing coordinator in Tulsa when Getty merged with Texaco in 1984. Neslage was named Tulsa Region marketing manager - retail in 1987. He moved to Houston as director of Credit Card and Automated Marketing Systems in 1988, and was appointed director of quality for Texaco Refining and Marketing Inc. (TRMI) in 1990.

Neslage was named general manager, Texaco A/S located in Copenhagen, Denmark, in July 1991.

In 1994 he was appointed managing director and chief executive officer of the Hydro-Texaco joint venture which markets fuels and lubricants under the Hydro-Texaco brand throughout Scandinavia and the Baltic Region. In that position, Neslage was responsible for the operation of the joint venture, while also serving as board chairman for both the Danish and Norwegian operating companies.

Most recently, he has been on special assignment relating to Texaco's discussions with Shell and Saudi Aramco concerning the possible formation of a U.S. downstream business venture.

Now is time to apply for residence homestead exemptions

According to officers of the Gray County Appraisal District's office, now is the time for homeowners to file for their residence homestead exemptions.

Chief Appraiser Pat Bagley is concerned that there are still many homeowners who have not filed for their exemptions, according to the Texas Property Tax Code.

"The Texas Property Tax Code provides for partial exemptions from property tax on your home if you own the home and live in it as your principal residence on the first day of January of the tax year," Bagley said.

He said the general homestead exemption is available for homeowners. There is also an additional exemption for those homeowners that are 65 and over, or who are disabled. Once a homeowner has applied, he or she need not reapply in subsequent years, unless a change in ownership has occurred or after he or she has reached the age of 65 years.

"For example, a homeowner 65 years old or older could be eligible for $15,000 in exemption from the value of their home for school tax purposes," Bagley said.

In addition to homestead exemptions, there is an exemption available to veterans with a qualified service connected disability, according to Bagley. This exemption may be applied to any property the taxpayer owns and is based on the percent of service connected disability as determined by the Veterans Administration. A letter from the V.A. must accompany the person's application.

The disabled veteran's exemption is not the same as the "Disability" exemption mentioned above and may be applied in addition to the homestead exemption for those who qualify.

"Many taxpayers may not be aware of special value for qualified agricultural land which is provided for by the Code, and also those who own their businesses need to remember to list and render the property owned by their business," he said.

Each of the exemptions are a specific amount deducted from the total value of the property, according to the appraisal district. The amounts of each exemption vary according to the type of exemption and the taxing unit offering the exemption.

An example listing of taxing units and the type and amount of each exemption offered is outlined as follows:

All School Districts
General homestead	$ 5,000
65 & over or disability	$10,000
Gray County
County General/ 65 & over homestead	$13,040
County Road/ General homestead	$ 3,000
65 & over homestead	$13,040
State	$13,040
Indigent Health Care/65 & over homestead	$13,040

Panhandle Groundwater Conservation District #3
65 & over homestead	$13,040
City of Lefors
65 & over homestead	$ 5,000
City of Pampa
65 & over homestead or disability	$15,000
Veteran's Exemptions Apply to All Districts (Based on percent of service connected disability)
10 percent to 30 percent	$ 5,000
31 percent to 50 percent	$ 7,500
51 percent to 70 percent	$10,000
71 percent to 100 percent	$12,000
10 percent or more and age 65 & over	$12,000

In order to receive exemptions a person must apply at the Gray County Appraisal District offices at 815 N. Sumner in Pampa.

Bagley advises that many property owners may not be fully aware of what is available and may need to check with the Appraisal District to make sure they have taken advantage of exemptions and other benefits that are available to them.

If any taxpayer has questions, or needs application forms or assistance in any way, he or she may contact the Gray County Appraisal District at P. O. Box 836, Pampa, Texas 79066-0836 or come by the office. For special assistance, call (806) 669-3276.

Virginia ponders retiring 'Carry Me Back to Old Virginia' as state song

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — With lyrics glorifying slavery and words like "darkey" and "old massa," Virginia's state song survived school desegregation and the election of the nation's first black governor.

It's an anthem blacks and many whites find so offensive that it has not been sung at an official state function in more than two decades, but it has defied legislative efforts to replace it every year since 1988. This year, a black Democrat and a white Republican are asking fellow lawmakers in the state General Assembly to retire Carry Me Back to Old Virginia while recognizing its place in Virginia's history.

"I'm a white woman here, and I'm embarrassed," said Melissa Harrell, 27, of Richmond. "That song had its day. This is not it."

On Tuesday, the Senate - gathered in the same Capitol where the Confederate Congress met - voted 24-15 to designate Carry Me Back as state song emeritus and direct a study committee to come up with a new state song.

Monkey virus stirs debate over animal use for vaccines

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Scientists are dusting off a 40-year-old medical mystery: Does a monkey virus that contaminated a polio vaccine millions of Americans took during the 1950s increase the risk of certain rare cancers?

Government data suggest such fears are unwarranted, because the types of cancer involved do not appear to be increasing among people old enough to have gotten the tainted vaccine. And the polio vaccine sold today is tested to ensure it is free of this monkey virus, called SV40.

But scientists recently found genetic pieces of the SV40 lurking inside tumors removed from cancer victims, and injecting the virus into laboratory animals gives them cancer.

That's far from proof that SV40 actually harmed a person. But international scientists who spent two days furiously debating the issue here contend this virus might predispose some people - perhaps those with damaged immune systems - to certain cancers of the brain, bone and lung.

And some question whether continuing to use monkey tissue to make vaccines might allow viruses that people don't yet know exist to sneak in.

"Make it in anything but animals," said Barbara Loe Fisher of the National Vaccine Information Center, which criticizes vaccine safety.

"We have the technology to make vaccines in human cell lines that are clean," said Dr. Michele Carbone of Loyola University Medical Center, one of the first to discover SV40 inside human tumors.

Carbone doesn't want Americans to fear vaccines; he recently had his own child immunized against polio.

But government officials worry that even debating the issue will frighten some parents. "We do a grave disservice to the public if we were now to question the safety of the current polio vaccines on the basis of SV40," warned Dr. Arthur Levine of the National Institutes of Health.

Making polio vaccines using human cells - the kind sold in Canada but not here - isn't risk free either, Levine added, because they must be tested for human infections.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Clinton's speech was contradictory

President Clinton became only the 14th chief executive to deliver a second inaugural address and only the first Democrat since Franklin Roosevelt to do so.

His address, filmy and indecisive, seemed to reflect all the complexities and conflicts of a president who was re-elected with less than a majority of the popular vote and a Republican Congress to deal with.

If the speech had any theme or structure, it would be one borrowed from his campaign, when he discarded the activist policies of his first two years in favor of a winning "triangulation" strategy that moved him to a "vital center."

Among his better turns of phrase: "We must keep our old democracy forever young. Guided by the ancient vision of a promised land, let us set our sights upon a land of new promise."

And, "At the dawn of the 21st century, a free people must choose to shape the forces of the information age and the global society, to unleash the limitless potential of all our people and form a more perfect union."

He explained in broad strokes the challenges of moving from an industrial economy to an information economy. He talked of fiscal prudence and the need to work with a Republican Congress in reforming Social Security and Medicare.

But for the most part, it was more of the Clinton we've come to know in the last two years — a president offering positions that ever straddle the fence of values and concerns. For instance, he seemed to call for bigger government and smaller government at the same time:

"As times change, so government must change. We need a new government for a new century, a government humble enough not to try to solve all our problems for us, but strong enough to give us the tools to solve our problems for ourselves."

He proposed "a government that is smaller, lives within its means, and does more with less. Yet where it can stand up for our values and interests in the world, and where it can give Americans the power to make a real difference in their everyday lives, government should do more, not less."

Which does he believe in? And if he believes government needs to be strengthened in some areas and reduced in others, why can't he be more precise?

We would have expected this address to more closely define what Clinton sees on the other side of his bridge.

Had the inaugural address laid the broad themes and set a more pointed moral tone, we would be prepared for details of the administration's legislative proposals to flow in the president's State of the Union address Feb. 4.

Maybe more government, maybe less. Maybe a government that is the problem, maybe a government that is the solution.

Meanwhile, the real substance of American lives — honest labor, unity of family and friends, volunteerism and more — will carry on outside Washington, still awaiting the leadership that will look outward, recognize and do.

Television rating system is a hoax

The much ballyhooed television ratings system unveiled by the industry last month is now in effect. Judging from the initial results, it's time to pull the plug on what everyone knew was a concept doomed to failure.

You'll recall that the television industry told us its new ratings would accurately measure the suitability of programming for children. There would be four age based categories for television (TV-G; TV-PG; TV-14; TV-M) and, with it, no need for the more comprehensive content based system proposal. And because of the enormity of the undertaking, each network would rate its own shows.

Right off the bat, the problem was obvious: So different are each network's standards that the system is rendered meaningless. There is no "system" at all.

Take David Letterman's Late Show. CBS has determined it should have the TV-PG rating ("parental guidance is suggested... the program may contain infrequent coarse language, limited violence, and some suggestive sexual dialogue and situations.") Letterman's biggest competitor is Jay Leno, but the Tonight Show, with contents virtually identical to the Late Show, somehow earns a TV-14 grade ("parents strongly cautioned... may contain sophisticated themes, sexual content, strong language and more intense violence") from NBC.

If the 11:35 p.m. Tonight Show gets a TV-14 rating from NBC, how do you suppose a network should rate a drama series appearing on prime time that features in one episode alone: a) a young unmarried couple, naked in bed, grunting, groaning, crunching, scratching and moaning in the throes of sexual orgasm; b) a married woman making out with a younger man; and c) a prolonged lesbian kiss with the scene fading out as one woman's kisses trail down the others neck.

L. Brent Bozell

Why, if you're ABC, you give that show (Relativity) a TV-14 rating, too.

On the other end of the spectrum, it's equally bizarre. One would imagine that the TV-G rating is reserved for those programs that are perfectly appropriate for youngsters, right? Would you consider appropriate an exchange between parents (on CBS' Everybody Loves Raymond) in which the wife informs the husband that she hasn't breast fed their twins for six months, and he responds, "I thought it was a little less crowded around there!"? What about another scene where in a woman (on NBC's Mr. Rhodes) reminisces about having sex in her high school's Driver Ed car? Both shows got G ratings from their networks.

But those ratings are the exception to the rule. The networks are driven by the desire to capture the highest possible audiences, and that calls for them to label just about everything TV-PG if they can get away with it.

The Jan. 8 episode of NBC's Wings featured a man boasting of having sex with his girlfriend four times a day, adding that the previous night, "we did it on the hood of my El Camino." TV-PG. That same night on that same network, Chicago Sons included a character discussing his plans to invite a female colleague to a bed and breakfast "where we'll eat pralines off each other's naked bodies." TV-PG.

On Jan. 6, during the eight o'clock so-called Family Hour, CBS was airing its newspaper sitcom Ink, in which a reporter gets his hands on a madam's black book of client names and exclaims: "This story has everything! Sex in a car, sex after lunch, sex under water!" Later in the episode, another character looks back on her boarding school days when she "sold pictures of the gym teacher on the tumbling mat doing it with the headmaster." TV-PG.

On the Jan. 9 episode of NBC's Friends, Joey remembers how depressed he felt when he saw a woman he'd broken up with "just walkin' with her friend Donna, laughin' and talkin'. It just killed me." "Yes," responds his roommate, Chandler, "but you ended up having sex with both of them that afternoon." TV-PG.

Two nights before that, on ABC's Life's Work, a character jokes about a man who masturbated while rubbing against a tree. TV-PG.

Just how internally absurd is this ratings system? At the same time that Life's Work was cracking jokes about masturbation, CBS was airing Promised Land, one of the finest family friendly programs on television today. On this episode, the protagonist saves a woman and her child from the physical abuses they suffer at the hands of the woman's husband, the town sheriff. The rating? You guessed it, TV-PG.

On and on the examples go, but you get the point. It's a senseless system that has done nothing to help the public and, in fact, is doing everything to confuse them. You say tomato, I say tomato — let's call the whole thing off.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 29, the 29th day of 1997. There are 336 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 29, 1820, Britain's King George III died insane at Windsor Castle, ending a reign that saw both the American and French revolutions.

On this date:

In 1843, the 25th president of the United States, William McKinley, was born in Niles, Ohio.

In 1845, Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven" was first published, in the New York Evening Mirror.

In 1850, Henry Clay introduced in the Senate a compromise bill on slavery which included the admission of California into the Union as a free state.

In 1861, Kansas became the 34th state of the Union.

In 1900, the American League, consisting of eight baseball teams, was organized in Philadelphia.

In 1936, the first members of baseball's Hall of Fame, including Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth, were named in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1958, actors Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward were married.

A new consensus or old medicine?

The 24th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade seems a good time to drop in on Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League. Michelman, in a speech before the National Press Club, declared her wish to "end the conflict" over abortion and forge a new consensus.

But alas, her version of a new consensus is simply a reworked rendition of the pro-choice worldview — a view that remains unchanged despite 24 years of experience that should teach otherwise.

Michelman does acknowledge that abortion is a moral issue. She calls it the "most crucial moral question of our times." But just when you suspect that she might be about to say something interesting, she lapses into crass political sloganeering. "Who should decide whether or not to have a child?" she asks. "A woman or Newt Gingrich? A woman or Ralph Reed?"

Sigh. Michelman refuses to acknowledge the responsibility of men and women to make informed and moral decisions about sexual behavior. Sure, a woman has the right to choose whether or not to become pregnant. She makes that choice before engaging in sex. To make that "choice" after a pregnancy is underway, merely as a matter of birth control, is an immoral act.

Michelman and her allies feel a sense of entitlement to risk free sex. She demands to know why a nation that can spend $600 million per year in research on new cosmetics has not yet found a contraceptive that is "safe, simple and foolproof." Well, for one thing, the trial lawyers have made the risk of marketing new contraceptives prohibitive for drug companies. But here's a revolutionary thought — short of putting contraceptives in the drinking water, there may not be any method that is "fool-proof." Body chemistry is changeable, and humans are sometimes foolish. The birth control pill is very reliable when used properly — that is, swallowed faithfully at the same time every day. Yet lots of women on the pill conceive every year. It isn't the contraceptive that's unreliable; it's the consumers.

Michelman professes to believe that "responsible sexual education" is the key to reducing the number of abortions (she does claim to want 800,000 fewer abortions by the year 2000.) Everyone is for that, right? Well, that depends upon the emphasis.

Michelman expressed veiled dismay at President Clinton's endorsement of abstinence education. "Abstinence is important," she allowed, "but let's be real here."

Her idea of being "real" is instruction in contraceptive use. She wants to reach every homeroom in America. Well, the sex educators have pretty much done that over the past generation. And the results have been nothing like what Michelman envisions. Greater sex education has not led to greater care about contraception.

It is difficult to measure these things, since mores have also changed dramatically in the past quarter century. But certainly it is clear that universal sex education has not prevented an explosion in out-of-wedlock births and abortions.

Well, nuts-and-bolts instruction isn't enough, argues Michelman. She also seems to want to transmit wholesome attitudes about sex. "We should be teaching from the earliest years right into adolescence that sexuality is not a dirty word." Haven't we been doing just that, with doleful consequences?

Abortion advocates want to strip sex of its generative nature and make it the province of mere play. That's what they mean when they talk about "healthy attitudes." But the two cannot be severed by technology or ideology. Perhaps accepting the awesome responsibility that comes with fertility is the better course.

Haven't we seen what comes of treating sex as play? Women are cheapened. Children are cheated. All those young couples displaying "healthy attitudes" have created an ocean of misery in the form of unwanted babies, millions of whom have been aborted. Biology has had the last laugh.

Thirty years of experience with soaring illegitimacy and abortion have not budged abortion advocates. They continue to preach the empty gospel of more sex education and better technological fixes to the annoying fact of human fertility.

They have the media on their side. They get grants from the big foundations. The only thing they can't seem to overcome is human nature.

Newt survives near death experience

"With Gingrich's new eminence, however, has come a less welcome change in his status: He is now, and will be for at least the next two years, the chief target and whipping-boy of the liberal media. If (improbably) he doesn't know what that entails, he will find out... No one expects him to change overnight into a Francis of Assisi, but if he keeps letting the liberals cast him as Savonarola, he too could wind up being hanged and burned."

Thus I wrote in this space on Nov. 24, 1994. No doubt it is hard for a busy speaker to read all the columns that appear in Washington, but I do wish Gingrich had read that one.

Instead, he has just survived a near death experience, and his numerous enemies are confidently proclaiming that he is too crippled by it to function for long, or effectively, as speaker.

They are probably letting the wish father the thought. Just at the moment, the evidence toward bipartisanship is very strong in Washington, and — since there can't be much bipartisanship without the cooperation of the House of Representatives — Gingrich stands to benefit from the warm breezes that are blowing. To be sure, the Democratic House leaders show signs of wanting to destroy him before the bipartisan spirit takes over, but they clearly aren't going to get their wish.

In addition, in the way things so often happen in Washington, the spotlight is about to shift again — away from Gingrich. We mustn't forget that little matter of the recorded cellular phone call among the speaker and various of his lieutenants that a Democratic congressman (probably Jim McDermott — of the Ethics Committee, no less) leaked to the New York Times and the Atlanta Constitution. That entire episode is now under study by the Justice Department, and it is by no means clear that even a spirit of sweet bipartisanship will be able to obscure that fact that felonies were committed for which the penalty is up to five years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

Moreover, special prosecutor Kenneth Starr is reportedly very close to bringing indictments against various members of the Clinton administration for crimes, including perjury, committed in the wide areas under his jurisdiction: Whitewater, Travelgate, Filegate, etc. Whether or not the first lady is, as rumor has it, among those to be indicted, it is safe to say that the misdeeds of Speaker Gingrich are soon going to look comparatively trivial.

We can expect, therefore, that over the next few months the Gingrich flap will die down to some considerable extent. How should he behave while it is doing so, and thereafter?

He must, and no doubt will, be seen attending diligently to what is unctuously being called "the people's business." This will involve negotiating with the Clinton administration, and in the process appearing neither too weak nor too intransigent. The hardshelled conservatives, in Congress and elsewhere, will be on the lookout for signs that he is giving away the store in an effort to placate the liberal media. The liberals, on the other hand, are sure to charge that any attempt to stand firm for some conservative principle marks a return of "the old Gingrich."

One certainly hopes that, in walking this tightrope, he can avoid stifling the vision, eloquence and leadership that have been his unique contributions to the Republican congressional resurgence.

In the long run — say, in mid-1998 — Gingrich will have to evaluate his situation realistically, and decide whether to ask his loyal allies in the House to pledge, in the elections that fall, to reelect him as speaker yet again, or to call four years as speaker enough and step down in favor of someone else. That decision, however, doesn't need to be made now.

Cruise film tops charts Super Bowl weekend

By LYNN ELBER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Tom Cruise comedy Jerry Maguire captured the No. 1 spot at the box office in its seventh week, earning $5.5 million to edge out two competitors in a generally lackluster Super Bowl weekend.

In Love and War, the saga of Ernest Hemingway's World War I romance with a nurse, and Beverly Hills Ninja were close behind, earning $5.49 million and $5.48 million, respectively.

Overall earnings were down, apparently the result of competition from the Super Bowl.

"The game always puts a dent in the Sunday box office," said John Krier of Exhibitor Relations Co., which tracks movie grosses.

Metro, the Eddie Murphy police action movie, finished with $5.47 million for fourth place, just ahead of the musical Evita ($5.41 million).

Also opening in the top ten were Fierce Creatures, a reunion of the cast from A Fish Called Wanda in a nonsequel comedy about a zoo, and Zeus and Roxanne, a story about a dog-and-dolphin friendship.

Senate, House seats filled in special election

BRYAN (AP) — Add another Republican to the GOP's majority in the state Senate.

State Rep. Steve Ogden got a promotion to the Senate on Tuesday, defeating Democrat Mary Moore in a Senate District 5 special election.

Ogden, a three-term House Republican, polled a 55 percent majority to advance to the Senate. With 100 percent of the ballots counted, unofficial returns showed him with 21,242 votes to 17,252 for Mrs. Moore, a Bryan certified public accountant.

In a race of Republicans to succeed Ogden in the House District 14 seat, retired College Station physician William Roman defeated former state Rep. Richard Smith of Bryan 4,809-4,425 in unofficial returns, drawing 52 percent of the vote.

State Republican Chairman Tom Pauken hopes that the addition of a 17th Republican to the 31-seat Senate translates into immediate leverage with Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the Democrat who presides over the chamber.

Doctor, patients criticize government prosecution

HOUSTON (AP) —

Supporters of a cancer doctor on trial on fraud charges in his use of an experimental drug say they are gathering signatures and airing television advertisements about the legal battle.

Dr. Stanislaw Burzynski and his Burzynski Research Institute are on trial for mail and insurance fraud involving antineoplastons, which he developed and dispenses at the Houston clinic.

Burzynski contends antineoplastons serve as biochemical switches that "turn off" cancer genes by interrupting signals for cells to multiply.

Patients and relatives participating in a rally Tuesday outside the federal courthouse where Burzynski is on trial repeated their long held beliefs that the government should not interfere in their treatment choices.

Cancer victims will die if Burzynski is convicted because they no longer will be able to get his drugs, they said.

Mexican American Chambers list top legislative issues

AUSTIN (AP) — Access to state government, education and fair consumer laws should be the Legislature's top priorities this year, according to the Texas Association of Mexican American Chamber of Commerce.

"The one issue is access. We have to continue to keep the doors open," said Massey Villarreal, chairman of TAMACC.

TAMACC, with 27 member chambers, on Tuesday listed a renewal of affirmative action programs; homeowner's equity borrowing; initiative and referendum legislation; and utility deregulation as key issues for the 1997 Legislature.

Villarreal said Hispanic-owned businesses are the fastest growing business segment in the Texas economy "in spite of the obstacles we've faced which are lending, diversity and access."

"My personal feeling on affirmative action ... I don't care what you call it, what we want is access," Villarreal said.

"There are all these vehicles in place based on lawsuits. But they're not getting us there. So we'll just continue to work and help us pass legislation that's good for all of us."

End of lawsuit marks possible budget battle

AUSTIN (AP) — Higher Medicaid payments to cover indigent patients in Texas nursing homes means the end of a federal lawsuit against state welfare officials, but they could be the beginning of a budget battle.

A nursing home industry group, the Texas Health Care Association, sued state welfare officials last year over state-approved Medicaid payments. The group said the payments approved last year weren't enough to properly care for residents, in light of costs including last year's minimum wage increase.

After the Texas Department of Human Services board Monday approved a proposal to raise the average daily nursing home rate by about seven percent, association Executive Director Tom Suehs said the lawsuit will be dropped.

But Texas Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bill Ratliff voiced concern Tuesday over the future cost of the agreement. He cited an estimate that it would require $150 million more in the next two-year budget period.

"I encourage them to re-look at the formulas, because we can't keep on with these nursing home rates going up like they are. As a matter of fact, I think we have to start looking at options of reducing eligibility if it keeps on going at the rate it's going," said Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

State judge: Selena's killer not entitled to new trial

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) —

The former fan club president convicted in the shooting death of Tejano singing star Selena does not deserve a new trial because records she claimed are missing never were admitted into evidence, the judge who presided over her trial says.

"All exhibits which were properly marked, offered and admitted into the record are accounted for and are in the custody of the 14th Court of Appeals," State District Judge Mike Westergren said Tuesday.

The judge, responding to a request from the 14th Court of Appeals, said he told a clerk or other court employee to make a box of documents subpoenaed from the singer's father part of the trial record even though he did not allow them into evidence.

His instruction, however, was not followed and the judge said none of the court clerks or court reporters recalls receiving such directions, he said.

Westergren said it was up to Ms. Saldivar, serving a life prison term for the March 1995 shooting of Selena Quintanilla Perez, 23, to make sure a sufficient record was presented to show her case should be overturned.

Military closing gender gap in fitness requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gunnery Sgt. Melissa Crane knows she doesn't have to run as fast as her male counterparts under the written fitness rules of the Marine Corps. The unwritten rules are another story.

"Women would always try to keep up with the men in the run," Crane said. "Then when we would finish the run we would always try to do as many sit-ups."

Crane, a 15-year veteran of the Corps based at Quantico, Va., said new rules narrowing the gap in fitness requirements for men and women have had little impact on those like her who have always tried to keep up.

Gone are the days when female Marines ran 1.5 miles while their male counterparts ran twice as far. As of this month, all Marines run three miles. Women can run a slightly slower time and still pass the test.

Before the new rules took effect, women in the Marine Corps had to do 50 sit-ups in two minutes as part of their standard fitness test. Now they do 80, as do the men.

"I'm glad we're getting more on equal terms. It's long overdue," said Gunnery Sgt. Karen Imhoff, an 18-year veteran of the Corps. "The transition wasn't difficult at all because I'd always done more than what the minimum requirements were for us."

The Army also has closed the gap on sit-ups, and all soldiers run two miles. Female soldiers, however, can run a slower time and can do fewer push-ups than the men and still pass. The Navy's rules are similar. The Air Force administers a stationary cycle stress test, with some differences in severity based on gender.

At a time when women make up only 13.2 percent of the active-duty force — up slightly from eleven percent in 1990 — and recruiters encounter difficulty attracting women into the military, officers explain the equalized fitness rules as a morale booster.

Marine Corps Gen. Charles Krulak, the service's top officer, started the move toward equalized fitness rules two years ago.

"What signal do we send to the Corps when at the end of a mile and a half, all the women drop off to the side and the men keep running?" Krulak said.

Not everyone is satisfied with the results.

When Army drill sergeants at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., were accused of widespread consensual and nonconsensual sex with subordinates, James Webb, former Navy secretary, took a different view. He suggested the problem may stem from forcing young men and women together in units that depend on equality in discipline, recognition and exposure to danger.

"When double standards are introduced in matters of physical training and performance, they work against these very criteria," Webb wrote.

Three female Marine sergeants said in interviews that grumbling from men about lighter fitness requirements for women occurs only when women do the bare minimum of what is required. In most cases, they say, women do more.

"We still get ribbing once in a while," said Gunnery Sgt. Jennifer Regn. "I see more women trying to keep the same running standards."

Combat and specialty training, as opposed to fitness testing, is the same regardless of gender.

In the Army, a male soldier in the 17-21 age group must do between 42 and 82 push-ups and 52 and 92 sit-ups, and must run two miles in no more than 15:54. A female in the same age group must do between 18 and 58 push-ups and 50 and 90 sit-ups, and run the two miles in at no more than 18:54.

Psychiatrist testifies that Darlie Routier likely telling truth

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Darlie Routier doesn't fit the profile of a mother who would kill her children and seems honest when she blames an intruder for her sons' stabbing deaths, a psychiatrist has testified.

"It's my medical opinion that she was truthful," Dr. Lisa Clayton of Dallas said Tuesday, adding that pain medication Mrs. Routier was taking after the attack may have even acted as "truth serum."

And during prosecution cross-examination, Clayton testified Darlie Routier and her husband, Darin, told police about a man who may have had a motive to harm their family.

"A lot of people are afraid of him because of his temper," Dr. Clayton testified, identifying the man only as "Glen."

Mrs. Routier is accused of fatally stabbing five-year-old Damon and six-year-old Devon Routier then slashing herself in their suburban home June 6, 1996. Prosecutors claim the Rowlett homeowner was angry over money problems and the burdens of motherhood.

Mrs. Routier contends a man dressed in dark clothing and a baseball cap attacked her and her sons with a kitchen butcher knife.

Her trial was moved to Kerrville because of publicity in North Texas.

Dr. Clayton, who first interviewed Mrs. Routier in her role as a psychiatrist for the Dallas County Jail and later as a hired defense witness, said Mrs. Routier's vague memories and inconsistent accounts of the attack likely were caused by "traumatic amnesia."

She also said "psychic numbing" was responsible for Mrs. Routier's seemingly unemotional demeanor shortly after the stab-

"Their mind has blocked it off and separated the emotion from the event," Dr. Clayton said, explaining the condition.

Dr. Clayton testified Mrs. Routier doesn't fit the typical categories of women who kill their children, such as women who continually abuse their children or teenage mothers who don't want a child.

"It's my opinion that Darlie Routier was a very devoted mother. She went that extra mile for her children," the psychiatrist said.

Mrs. Routier's reaction to her sons' deaths — including her seemingly happy mood at a graveside birthday party a week after the killings — should not be judged as inappropriate, Dr. Clayton said.

"I don't think you can say what's appropriate and not appropriate about grief situations. Everyone grieves differently," she said.

Federal judge favors landlords who refuse to rent to unwed couples

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Three Alaska landlords who refuse to rent to unmarried couples based on religious beliefs are protected by the First Amendment, a federal judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge H. Russel Holland said city and state laws forbidding rent discrimination based on marital status are unconstitutional. The city's and state's interests in ending the discrimination, he wrote in the Jan. 25 opinion, were not compelling enough to outweigh the right to religious expression.

The opinion makes moot a 1994 state Supreme Court decision in a similar case that found in the renters' favor.

The latest case was brought by Anchorage landlords Kevin Thomas and Gary and Joyce Baker. The Anchorage Equal Rights Commission and the Alaska Human Rights Commission were the defendants.

Thomas and the Bakers are Christians who believe couples should not live together before marriage, said their lawyer, Kevin Clarkson.

In the 30-page opinion, Holland reasoned that if the laws were allowed to stand, landlords would have to choose between breaking the law or abandoning their religious beliefs.

"The burden here is more than merely economic; it directly forbids plaintiffs from conforming to their religious convictions," he wrote.

The 1994 case reached the U.S. Supreme Court, but justices left intact the Alaska Supreme Court ruling that said Tom Swanner violated state and local laws by refusing to rent to unmarried couples.

Clarkson said he expects the issue to reach the U.S. Supreme Court again. A nearly identical California case awaits the Supreme Court's decision on whether to consider the case.

The California Supreme Court sided with unmarried tenants in that case. Courts in Massachusetts and elsewhere have ruled in favor of landlords.

Cliff Groh, a lawyer for the city, said he would discuss Holland's ruling with the Equal Rights Commission and might appeal.

A 1990 U.S. Supreme Court ruling said laws that apply broadly and are neutral toward religion are not unconstitutional just because they may infringe on the religious beliefs of some people.

But in 1993, Congress sought to overcome the 1990 ruling by passing the Religious Freedom Restoration Act. The act gives more weight to claims that actions taken by the government sometimes improperly restrict religious freedom.

The Supreme Court is expected to consider the religious freedom law and issue a decision by July.

West Texas girl hopes treatment will bring smile

By MARLA DIAL
San Angelo Standard-Times

SAN ANGELO (AP) — For years, Kara James has stood in front of mirrors and tried to will her immobile face to smile.

No matter what she did — even pushing at the corners of her mouth with her fingers — it never worked. The 14-year-old San Angelo girl was born with Moebius Syndrome, an extremely rare condition marked by a lack of facial expression.

When Norma and Buck James adopted Kara and her sister, Cerina, 12 years ago, they — like most people — had never heard of the disorder, which affects only about 1,000 Americans. They still have never seen anyone else who has it.

"They told us she was a lot worse than what she really was. She was supposed to be mentally retarded and everything else," Buck said, recalling the warnings that came along with the 2-year-old girl.

But in most ways, Kara was, and is, normal. One of her hands is misshapen, and she lacks some muscles in part of her chest — signs of Poland's Anomaly, a condition that often accompanies Moebius Syndrome. But her speech is only slightly affected by the facial paralysis, and she certainly is not retarded.

Although her symptoms are relatively minor, compared to the worst-case scenarios of Moebius Syndrome, the pile of pictures Kara's family has kept through the years don't tell the whole story.

The unchanging face beneath differing hairstyles in the collection of snapshots and school pictures doesn't portray the eighth-grader's love of percussion instruments or horses. Nor does it give any hint of self-consciousness, or the exasperation Kara felt as photographers cajoled her with phrases like, "Smile — don't look so sad."

After initial curiosity, Kara said her friends at school eventually have learned to detect her emotions, as her family can.

"When (people) got to know me, they said, 'You always can see a smile in your eyes,'" Kara said.

But the James family hopes all of that will change very soon, when Kara receives a breakthrough surgery that could allow her to smile.

They didn't know it at the time, but the wheels were set in motion a year ago, when a 7-year-old California girl named Chelsey Thomas went through the same surgery on half of her face. The Jameses heard about her well-publicized case in May, when she received the second surgery to complete her smile.

"We were just so excited," Norma said. "We said we wanted to do that for Kara, because that's what she's wanted all her life. We were as thrilled as we could be."

The first step was to contact the doctor who performed Chelsey's surgery: Dr. Ronald Zuker, head of the plastic surgery division at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, Canada.

Although other surgeries exist for those with Moebius Syndrome, Zuker has pioneered a technique that uses part of a muscle from the patient's inner thigh and transplants it to the face. The gracilis muscle from the leg is connected to the masseter — a cheek muscle that controls chewing — and positioned to lift the corner of the mouth and upper lip.

"It is a very, very delicate surgery," Norma said.

"It's all done under a microscope," her husband added.

Since Zuker has never seen Kara, the Jameses allowed someone to shoot videotape of their daughter so he could examine her long distance. They eventually got a letter saying she was a perfect candidate for the surgery, which is now scheduled for Feb. 28 in Toronto.

The family spent several months working out arrangements with their medical insurance company. Their insurance will pay for the $48,000 procedure because it is not considered cosmetic surgery.

Knowing about the procedure has given Kara and her family new hope.

"When we got her, we were told there was nothing that could be done. And at that time, there wasn't," Buck said.

For the first time, the Jameses also are finding support from other families that know firsthand what living with Moebius Syndrome is like. They discovered and joined the Moebius Syndrome Foundation, a non-profit organization started by parents and people who have the disorder.

"I've really learned a lot," Norma said. "I hardly knew anything until we started getting these newsletters."

Kara is impatiently waiting for Feb. 26, the day she will leave for Toronto. She's looking forward to seeing Niagara Falls along the way.

Her family will stay in Canada at least 10 days, then return in the summer for her second surgery.

"After the surgery, it takes seven weeks before you notice anything — before the smile appears," Norma said.

Kara, who has been through eight previous surgeries — seven for her eyes, one for her hand — shows no sign of nervousness about the long-awaited smile surgery.

"I guess it's going to make me feel like I can do anything," she said.

"I want to show everybody my smile — show the whole world that I can smile."

Study finds no sign of harm from Prozac during pregnancy

BOSTON (AP) — A reassuring new study found no sign that taking Prozac during pregnancy can harm a woman's unborn child.

Prozac is the most widely prescribed medicine for depression. It is taken by more than 12 million people worldwide. While Prozac is not thought to cause major birth defects, some wondered whether it might cause subtle harm to babies' brains.

The new study turned up no evidence that women who take Prozac or a variety of medicines called tricyclic antidepressants during pregnancy in any way affected their children's IQs, language development or behavior.

"I am very confident that if a woman needs antidepressants, she should continue them during pregnancy, because the risk of not being treated is much bigger than any risk of the drug," said Dr. Gleason Koren of the University of Toronto. His study was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Pregnant women who suffer from depression are often told to stop taking their medicines because of the possibility of harm to the unborn child. Koren said some women end up getting abortions or even attempting suicide because they cannot bear their depression.

The issue surfaced again in October, when a team from the University of California at San Diego published a study in the New England Journal of Medicine raising the possibility that Prozac increases the risk of premature delivery and some minor newborn health problems.

Massachusetts proposes rules to legalize medical marijuana

BOSTON (AP) — Entering a national debate on the medicinal use of marijuana, Massachusetts proposed legalizing the drug for patients suffering from glaucoma, asthma or chemotherapy side effects.

The Department of Public Health's proposal would implement an August law that declared medical certification a defense against a charge of marijuana possession.

Similar laws passed in November in Arizona and California, and at least 35 other states have laws providing greater tolerance for the medical use of marijuana, but many are little-known and little-used.

The Massachusetts law would not let doctors prescribe marijuana for patients. Rather, it would allow them to certify that the patients had exhausted other methods of relief.

A doctor would recommend a patient to a three-member panel, which would review the patient's medical records and decide whether to issue the certificate. Patients would have to obtain the drug on their own.

"We're trying to alleviate suffering and pain," public health commissioner David Mulligan said. "In no sense are we encouraging marijuana use by the public."

The proposal will be considered next by the state's Public Health Council, which will hold a public hearing before voting in late March.

Massachusetts also will try to set up a research program, using these certified patients, on the medicinal effects of smoked marijuana with quantities grown by either the federal or state government.

Fatty foods, smoking increase teens' risk for heart disease

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teenagers may increase their risk of heart disease later in life by smoking or eating fatty foods, according to a study of autopsy results that found artery blockage in young people who died accidentally.

The study found dramatic differences in the severity of fatty deposits on the arteries of teen-agers and other young people, depending on whether they smoked or ate diets rich in fat.

Fatty deposits and lesions were found in the major arteries of young people with high levels of cholesterol in their blood, according to the autopsies performed on 1,079 men and 364 women between the ages of 15 and 34.

The amount of fatty deposits increased with age, and the difference between subjects with high and low cholesterol showed up as early as age 15, according to the study published in the January issue of Arteriosclerosis, Thrombosis and Vascular Biology.

Although studies based on autopsies of American soldiers killed during the Korean and Vietnam wars found similar results, this is the first large sample of data from young women, said Dr. Basil Rifkind, of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which sponsored the research.

The researchers said their study disproves the notion that women, who generally have heart attacks 10 years later than men, do not have to alter their diets as early in life as men.

"It pretty firmly adds another large piece to the jigsaw puzzle and says the problems of diet and heart disease is something that starts off early in life," Rifkind said.

A childhood diet rich in fatty foods can begin the progression toward heart disease later in life, the researchers concluded.

Children who eat a lot of cheeseburgers and milkshakes increase their risk of heart attacks if they do not change their dietary habits by young adulthood, researchers said.

"The saturated fat intake and the calories a single meal of that sort provides is tremendous and make you use up your daily rations in one meal," Rifkind said.

The heart institute's National Cholesterol Education Program recommends that all children over the age of 2 keep fat consumption under 30 percent of daily calories and saturated fat under 10 percent.

But there has been a debate among scientists about how early dietary changes are needed to reduce the risk of heart disease later in life.

Begun in 1985, the study's findings were extended for the first time to women.

The study found a high correlation between cholesterol levels and fatty deposits in girls and young women as well as boys and men. The same patterns were found in whites and blacks.

Blood-serum cholesterol tests were performed during the autopsies, which also tested for the presence of the chemical thiocyanate, an indicator of smoking.

Subjects with high levels of low-density (LDL) cholesterol, the bad cholesterol, also had streaks of fat or raised lesions on the inner surfaces of the aorta and the right coronary artery.

Fewer deposits of fat were found among subjects with high levels of high-density (HDL) cholesterol, which is credited with helping clear the arteries, and low levels of LDL cholesterol, the study found.

As fat deposits build up in the arteries, the risk of blockage and heart attack increases.

Fifteen centers around the country collected data from autopsies performed on young people who were victims of homicide, suicide or accidental deaths.

Tissue samples and blood were analyzed at the Louisiana State University Medical Center in New Orleans.

FDA allows heart-healthy claims for eating oatmeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has decided to let that morning box of oatmeal advertise that it's heart-healthy.

Under the new regulation, companies can claim that eating foods made from rolled oats, oat bran and oat flour that contain enough soluble fiber may reduce the risk of heart disease — as long as they're part of a low-fat diet.

The regulation, effective immediately, was prompted by a request from Quaker Oats, the nation's leading maker of oatmeal.

Other cereal makers will benefit, too: General Mills is preparing to relabel original Cheerios and other brands.

"Essentially the FDA is telling consumers that they can help reduce their risk of heart disease every morning with a bowl and a spoon," said General Mills Vice President Joe Rutledge.

But not every oat-containing product — like high-fat bran muffins and granola — qualifies, the FDA warned. Only low-fat products — those that have 3 grams or less of fat per serving — qualify. And General Mills can't even put the label on Apple-Cinnamon or Frosted Cheerios because they don't contain enough oat bran.

Consumer advocates said the FDA decision sends consumers the wrong message, ignoring that fruits and vegetables are full of soluble fiber.

"If one wants to increase soluble fiber consumption, it's easier eating a variety of foods rather than gorging on oat products," said Bruce Silverglade of Center for Science in the Public Interest.

Certain oat products already could be labeled as low-fat or high-fiber foods. But the new regulation marks the first time the FDA has let a specific food claim that it fights a disease.

President answers fundraising questions mere hours before attending $1 million donor dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) - By day, he's a champion of campaign finance reform. But by night President Clinton is still the Democrats' million-dollar man.

Hours after a White House news conference dominated by questions about Democratic Party fundraising irregularities, Clinton was the star attraction at a $1 million donors' dinner.

About 70 business leaders paid $10,000 per person or $15,000 per organization to attend the Democratic National Committee event at the Carlton Hotel just across LaFayette Square from the White House.

"To the rest of the American people this may sound ridiculous, but $10,000 is a small amount to pay to converse with intelligent people that will be able to help you," Sean P. O'Keefe, 29, president of Winco Corp., a small communications company based in Los Angeles, said after the dinner.

Not everyone was so talkative. Seven people entering the dinner through the hotel's main door declined comment.

One donor arrived in a chauffeured Lincoln Town Car, another in a Mercedes-Benz with a "Clinton-Gore '96" bumper sticker.

But most arrived by taxi or on foot, and many men ventured out without overcoats on a chilly night; the city's biggest lobbyists are based on K Street, within walking distance of the Carlton.

Inside the lobby, a harpist accompanied by a flute played as the donors passed below a gilded ceiling and were greeted by smiling young women wearing DNC Finance name tags.

As the guests dined on salmon and asparagus beneath the room's four chandeliers, Clinton said no donor has ever asked him to use the presidency on their behalf, and he has never done so.

"There is no system which has been offered which is completely publicly funded from start to finish," he said. "So we have to depend upon people to help us."

DNC spokesman David Eichenbaum said the list of paying guests would not be available. "Read the FEC reports," he quipped.

There was nothing illegal, or even unusual about the Tuesday night dinner. Some say that's the problem.

"The fundraising machine in Washington never shuts down," said Don Simon, executive vice president of Common Cause, a non-partisan group that lobbies for tighter restrictions on campaign spending.

"It's a truism that as soon as one election is over, everybody starts raising money for the next - or paying off debts from the last," Simon said. "The sale of access and influence never really stops."

O'Keefe described Tuesday night's fundraiser as an open forum for small businesses that have an important stake in government decisions.

"It's really a whole basis of access to an open ear with the government, which I have not experienced directly, but which I think is important to the entrepreneurial and capital process within the United States and always has been," he said.

At his news conference earlier, Clinton conceded that "mistakes were made" in raising millions of dollars for his re-election campaign. But he insisted his administration was never for sale.

Clinton acknowledged it was wrong to have the nation's top banking regulator meet with leading banking executives at a White House session arranged by Democratic fundraisers last May. But he said there was nothing improper about his own attendance, or that of Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin.

He urged Congress to fix a campaign finance system that has not been updated since Watergate-era reforms 20 years ago.

Clinton said the huge costs of campaigns have produced an inevitable race for cash. "A huge percentage, way, way over 90 percent" of the money is raised "in a perfectly lawful fashion," he said.

Air ace, author, BBC pioneer, Oscar winner Cecil Lewis dies at 98

LONDON (AP) - Cecil Lewis, whose wide-ranging career took him from flying ace to author, and from broadcast executive to Oscar winner, has died. He was 98.

He died Monday at London's King Edward VII Hospital, his family said. No cause of death was given.

Lewis joined the Royal Flying Corps at age 17. Wounded in action, he emerged from World War I with a Military Cross, one of Britain's highest bravery awards. His autobiographical account of the air war, "Sagittarius Rising," saw its fifth edition published in 1993.

After the war, Lewis went to China as manager of commercial aviation for a British company. The Chinese government appointed him as a flying instructor and he helped form a Chinese air force.

Lewis returned to Britain in 1922 and became program manager for the fledgling British Broadcasting Co., precursor of the British Broadcasting Corp. He and the three other founders received a government license that year to set up a pioneer national radio broadcasting service.

"Cecil Lewis was one of the great pioneering spirits of the BBC," BBC director-general John Birt said.

Lewis left the BBC in 1926 for film and theater work. In 1938, he won an Academy Award for his screenplay adaptation of Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw's play "Pygmalion."

In World War II, Lewis rejoined the armed forces as a flying instructor and later embarked on several more careers - sheep farming in South Africa, broadcasting work for the United Nations in New York and a spell with British commercial television.

He worked as a journalist for the London newspaper the Daily Mail from 1956 to 1966, then went to live on the Mediterranean island of Corfu. His autobiography "Never Look Back" - one of 19 books he wrote - was published in 1974 and filmed for television in 1978.

Lewis, who divorced twice, is survived by his wife, and by a son and daughter from his first marriage. His family said funeral services would be private.

Wife Lacks Ginger To Join Husband's Fred Astaire Act

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 14 years. He is a good provider and a loving father to our two children.

We are part of a social circle that entertains frequently, and that is where the problem lies. My husband dances with every woman at the party while I sit at the table watching him make all kinds of sexy movements with them. He doesn't ignore me completely, but I am uncomfortable watching him touch all these other women.

If I say anything, my husband argues that I am the one he goes home with, buys the jewelry and gifts for, and comes home to every night. He says my disapproving looks spoil his fun, and claims he just likes to have a good time.

He shows his affection toward me when we are alone. We go on vacations together frequently. He says he loves me and the children and that our marriage is forever. But this dancing thing is bothering me.

How do I handle this? Should I just not pay attention, or try to give him a dose of his own medicine (but I am not the type to go around asking every woman's husband to dance)?

and is affectionate and generous in word and deed.

Since no one else reacts negatively to his dancing, evidently he is not behaving inappropriately. Consider taking some lessons, thereby making yourself a more interesting and enjoyable dance partner. Then perhaps your husband will ask you to dance more often.

DEAR ABBY: This is another true story about a kind act from a man of character: Harry S. Truman. Many years ago, I was a young Army wife traveling with an infant. I was at Washington National Airport, having been bumped from my connecting flight, badly in need of a bathroom, but I could not leave my baby alone.

A gentleman sitting on the bench with me saw my distress and said, "I will be here for the next half-hour and I am experienced in child care, as I have a young daughter." His face was familiar, but I could not place it until the loudspeaker blared, "Senator Truman, please come to the desk." As he left, he said, "Don't worry, I'll be right back."

He was true to his word, and I felt very comfortable letting the man who had recently been nominated for the vice presidency babysit for me. When I returned, he proudly said, "Your baby needed a change, so I found your diaper bag and took care of everything."

How the world has changed!
NANCY HERTZBERG, PALM BEACH, FLA.

DEAR NANCY: What a wonderfully warm memory of President Truman. Obviously, he could be counted on to do whatever had to be done in any situation. Thank you for sharing it.

PAMPA — The Pampa 9th grade Lady Harvesters basketball team defeated Hereford last Saturday by a score of 34-29.

Pampa faced a much taller team, but by using a pressure half-court press and a man to man defense, the freshmen Lady Harvesters held off Hereford to stay in third place in the district standings.

The Pampa freshmen finish the season out this week, playing in the District 1-4A Tournament at Dumas on Thursday and Saturday.

MIAMI — Miami swept Lefors in a District 5-1A boys' girls doubleheader Tuesday night.

In the girls' game, Lindsay Gill scored 16 points and Erin Locke added 10 as Miami posted a 47-23 win.

Penny Summers had 8 points to lead Lefors in scoring.

Miami won the boys' contest by a score of 47-23.

Jared Neighbors and Shane Mitchell scored 12 points each to lead the Warriors in scoring.

Justin Howard led Lefors in scoring with 24 points. Chris McKean added 6 points.

FOOTBALL

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Bill Parcells is playing another game three days after the Super Bowl: the waiting game.

Parcells, coming off a Super Bowl loss Sunday night to Green Bay, is waiting for NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue's decision on whether Parcells is free to coach elsewhere next season.

Tagliabue was expected to issue his decision as early as today after presiding Tuesday over a conference call in which Parcells and Patriots owner Robert Kraft aired their contract differences.

"There's nothing, I really can't talk about anything because I don't know," Parcells, rumored to be headed to the New York Jets as coach and general manager, said Tuesday after arriving at Foxboro Stadium.

At issue is a provision added to Parcells' contract in 1996, which the team claims gives it exclusive rights to Parcells' coaching service in 1997.

The Boston Globe reported today that Parcells' attorney, Joel Kozol, argued that the coach's original contract — negotiated with former owner James B. Orthwein in 1992 — supersedes the 1996 amendments.

The newspaper said Kozol contended the 1992 deal allows Parcells to terminate his contract by paying his base salary for his final coaching season as a buyout. Parcells earned $1.2 million in 1996, and wants to pay that amount in return for complete freedom.

"He'll be taking a big business risk that he can replace that money," Parcells' agent, Robert Fraley, told New York newspaper Newsday.

If the commissioner rules in favor of the Patriots, the team is expected to ask for compensation — likely draft picks — from a team interested in Parcells. The Jets, who fired Rich Kotite as coach following a 1-15 season, have the top pick in the April draft.

Newsday said today that Kraft asked Tagliabue for a first-round pick to allow any move. However, the newspaper cited a source close to Tagliabue as saying it was unlikely a first-round pick would be allowed as compensation.

"(Tagliabue) feels that that would go against the philosophy of the league," said the source, who believes New York's second-round pick would be a more likely settlement.

Fraley told The New York Times that if Tagliabue ruled in favor of the Patriots, Parcells would be prepared to buy his way out of New England.

"Bill will have to pay a lot of money to be rid of the final year," Fraley told the newspaper.

WACO, Texas (AP) — It was enough to make Texas coach Tom Penders' trademark curls stand on end.

Diamond Mannon's 3-pointer with 21 seconds to play snapped the game's final tie and gave Baylor a 76-72 victory over Penders' 23rd-ranked Longhorns on Tuesday night.

Mannon launched his bomb four feet from the 3-point line and banked it home off the glass. Penders could only stare in wonder of how victory was lost.

"When something like that goes in, you know it wasn't meant to be," he said. "I don't know, the basketball gods ... I've never seen anything like it."

The upset was all the more startling considering that the Bears had won only one of its six Big 12 Conference games coming into Tuesday night's match on Baylor's home court.

The win was the first for Baylor (13-7, 2-6 Big 12) against a ranked opponent since the Bears upset Arkansas in 1990.

"This was something we needed," said Baylor coach Harry Miller. "It's a big confidence-builder."

"We hadn't lost our confidence, but when you keep telling players to play hard and something will happen, something has got to happen," Miller said.

Texas (11-6, 5-2) had an opportunity to tie the score after Mannon's shot gave Baylor a 75-72 lead, but Reggie Freeman was called for traveling as he drove to the lane.

Texas then fouled Rodrick Miller, who made one of two free throws for a 76-72 lead with 10 seconds left.

Doug Brandt led Baylor with 20 points and 14 rebounds. Patrick Hunter, who scored eight points over the final seven minutes, finished with 18 points.

Freeman led Texas with 24 points.

There were 10 lead changes and 54 personal fouls in the game.

Kris Clack had 11 points as the Longhorns took a 41-38 halftime lead. Trailing 69-63, Baylor went on a 7-0 run that was started by a 3-pointer by David Jones.

Patrick Hunter followed with two free throws and a 19-foot jumper that the Bears the lead for good at 70-69.

Aggies hold off Missouri

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Brian Barone had only 4 points, but the Texas A&M freshman point guard was all over the floor, literally, against Missouri.

Barone, the son of Aggies head coach Tony Barone, had six assists, six rebounds, a steal and only one turnover, directing a Texas A&M defense that held off Missouri in a 61-57 victory Tuesday night.

"It really pumps us up to see him dive on the floor after loose balls. His hustle gets the crowd pumped up as well," said Shanne Jones, whose career-high 21 points led A&M (8-9, 2-5 Big 12).

After an 0-5 start in the inaugural Big 12 season, the Aggies now have two straight wins, counting Saturday's 76-67 victory over Kansas State.

"These last two victories are really a confidence builder for us. It lets the rest of the conference know that we are here and have to be reckoned with," Jones said.

PHS girls nipped by Randall in season's last home game

PAMPA — The Pampa Lady Harvesters almost gave head coach Mike Jones a big win in his final coaching appearance in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Randall's Lisa McPherson hit a shot with three seconds remaining to give the Lady Raiders a 33-31 win Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Raiders, 8-3 in District 1-4A and 18-8 overall, had already clinched a playoff spot going into the game. The Lady Harvesters are 3-8 in district and 11-15 overall.

Pampa's Faustine Curry led all scorers with 14 points and the 6-1 junior also collared 12 rebounds.

Courtney Gilmore led Randall scorers with 12 points.

Pampa trailed by as many as a dozen points in the first half, but rallied to narrow the gap to three, 17-14, at intermission.

Curry's three-point play at the 4:47 mark of the third quarter gave Pampa its first lead at 23-21. Randall gained a one-point edge, 29-28, going into the fourth quarter and the lead changed twice going down the stretch before McPherson's bucket put the visitors in front to stay.

Jones, who has been the Lady Harvesters' head coach the past four years, has accepted the head girls' basketball coaching position at Howard Payne University in Brownwood.

Randall 33, Pampa 31

Pampa — Faustine Curry 14, Yvette Brown 9, Jennifer Jones 3, Tina Dwight 2, Kristi Carpenter 2, Jordanna Young 1; Three-point goals: Jones 1.

Randall — Courtney Gilmore 12, Andrea Burrows, 7, Cynthia Benson 7, Lisa McPherson 5, Melissa Trevino 2; Three-point goals: McPherson 1, Burrows 1.

Pampa's Faustine Curry had 14 points and 12 rebounds against Randall.

Among golfing's royalty, Palmer is still the king

When Arnold Palmer walks into a room heads still turn. His mere presence sets off a whispered wave of words. "There's Arnie," they say. "It's the king," others murmur.

Nearly a quarter century after his last PGA Tour victory, nearly a decade after last winning on the senior tour, Palmer remains the most popular player in the history of the game.

The buzz that Tiger Woods created in his few months as a professional golfer has followed Palmer for 42 years, since he won for the first time in 1955.

The true importance of Palmer to golf far transcends talent. His appeal was based on victories, surely, but it was also based on how he won — in a hard-charging, gambling, go-for-broke style.

Perhaps more important was the way he connected with fans. Palmer's winning smile, easy charm and generosity with his time remain the models for all athletes on how to deal with success and disappointment.

All athletes should learn from Palmer that they are not bigger than the game they play.

All athletes should learn from Palmer that the millions they make come from the ordinary people who watch them play.

All athletes should learn from Palmer that part of the price of success must be paid by never forgetting where you came from.

That's what made Palmer's announcement that he will return to competitive golf when he recovers from prostate cancer surgery such great news.

Every measure of success and satisfaction Palmer has taken out of the game he has given back in the form of autographs, interviews, dinner appearances, charity work and just plain playing.

There have probably been only two golfers in the history of the game who reached outside the sport and appealed to the non-golf fan.

Bobby Jones, the only person to receive two ticker-tape parades on Broadway in New York, was as big in the 1920s as Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey and Red Grange.

And Palmer, who had the perfect personality and style for the new media of television, captured the nation's imagination in the 1950s and '60s.

Ben Hogan was intriguing. Jack Nicklaus was dominating. But Jones and Palmer were the complete package.

So when word got out that Palmer had cancer, the response from his fans was overwhelming.

"I've got mail from people that is unbelievable," Palmer said last week at Bay Hill Golf Club in his first public appearance since cancer surgery Jan. 15. "From golfers and non-golfers. There is no way I could answer them all."

Palmer stood behind the podium at Bay Hill still as dashing as ever with his white hair standing out in handsome contrast to his tanned, slightly lined face. He paused for a second and searched for just the right words to express how touched he was by the outpouring of affection.

"In some way I would like all the people to know how much I appreciate it," Palmer said. "I want them all to know how much their cards and letters meant to me."

There was a twinkle of amusement in the heart of Palmer's eyes that offset the touch of weariness around the edges.

"I have heard from prostate cancer people all over the United States," he said. "Most of them said their handicaps went down after surgery. So maybe my handicap will go down."

Asking Palmer when he will play competitive golf again is almost like asking him when he will take his next breath. The answer is: As soon as possible.

"I have every intention of being at Augusta," Palmer said about the Masters. "I hope to play. I plan to play."

Palmer won't be able to swing a club again until March 1 and he said it's been more than 40 years since he's gone that long without playing.

"If the doctors are right, and I think they are, I will be playing some competitive golf," Palmer said. "As for when, it depends on my recovery and the state of my game."

That's Arnold. At age 67 he is talking about the state of his game. He has achieved riches that would make even Tiger Woods jealous yet he has no intention of walking away from the game.

"I'm happy," Palmer said about the doctors' assessment that he is likely now free of cancer. "I feel very fortunate."

As should everyone who has had the chance to watch Palmer play. As should everyone who will once again see Palmer's hard, awkward swing with the grimacing, head-ducking follow-through and the knock-kneed putting stance.

All athletes should take note of the reception Palmer receives when he steps onto the first tee at Augusta National in April. They will see the reward for being a nice guy.

Raiders close in on district title

PAMPA — Kevin Clayton scored 27 points and Jared Lopez added 14 as Randall downed Pampa, 78-63, Tuesday night in District 1-4A action at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Randall drew closer to wrapping up the district championship, improving to 9-1 in the 1-4A race. For the year, the Raiders are 22-5. Pampa is 4-5 in district play and 11-17 overall.

August Larson and Devin Lemons combined for 43 points, Larson with 23 and Lemons 20, to pace the Harvesters.

The Harvesters trailed by 10 points, 40-30, at intermission, but went on a scoring spurt early in the third quarter to cut the margin to four, 40-36. However, Randall scored the next 12 points to put the game almost out of reach.

Randall led by 13, 63-50, going into the fourth quarter.

Randall had a 39-27 rebounding advantage with Jimmy Webb pulling down 17 rebounds for the Raiders. Larson and Gabe Wilbon led the Harvesters in rebounds with 7.

Pampa had one less turnover, 18-17, than the Raiders.

Pampa hit 15 of 22 free throw attempts while Randall was 8 of 15.

The 6-5 Clayton, who hit three 3-point goals, scored 16 of his 27 points in the first half. Brandon Sims added 12 points for the Raiders.

Larson, who is averaging 19.1 ppg, scored 13 first-half points and drilled three 3-pointers for the game. Lemons, who had his best scoring output of the season, had 12 second-half points. He was averaging 9.1 ppg going into the game.

Kaleb Meek chipped in 9 points for the Harvesters.

Randall won the junior varsity tilt, 84-67.

The next district clash for the Harvesters is Friday night at Canyon. Gametime is 7:30.

In other district games Tuesday night, Dumas defeated Caprock, 69-63, and Canyon won over Borger, 62-54. The Eagles are 8-1 and have wrapped up one of the three playoff spots.

Arkansas turns back Stephen F. Austin in overtime

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — When it was Hog-killing time Tuesday night, Stephen F. Austin lacked the killer instinct, coach Royce Chadwick said.

Karyn Karlin's layup with 2:52 left in overtime led No. 18 Arkansas to an 85-76 victory over No. 20 Stephen F. Austin in a non-conference matchup Tuesday.

To get there, the Razorbacks had to come back from a 15-point deficit with 13 minutes left in regulation.

Arkansas (15-4) outscored SFA (17-3) 19-10 in the extra frame after the Razorback's Karen Jones hit a layup to tie the game 66-66 with 1:05 left in regulation. Arkansas was unable to get a last-second shot off as the buzzer sounded.

Karlin's layup put Arkansas in front before Kimberly Wilson followed with a 3-pointer with 1:06 left in overtime to give the Razorbacks a six-point lead and force the Ladyjacks to foul the rest of the way.

SFA took a 31-24 halftime lead and had opened a 15-point lead at 47-32 with 13:04 left in regulation. Then the Razorbacks began their comeback.

Arkansas outscored the Ladyjacks 34-19 in the final 13 minutes of regulation.

Rodman gets counseling from Jackson

CHICAGO (AP) — Rev. Jesse Jackson, after counseling Dennis Rodman, wants the NBA to immediately reinstate the misbehaving Chicago Bulls forward.

Jackson planned to meet with commissioner David Stern today in New York to plead the case for Rodman, who was suspended at least 11 games for kicking a courtside cameraman on Jan. 15.

The Bulls' 111-96 victory Tuesday night at Vancouver was the sixth game of the suspension, which will cost Rodman more than $1.1 million in salary. He also was fined $25,000 by the league, and he has agreed to pay a $200,000 out-of-court settlement to Minneapolis cameraman Eugene Amos.

Stern has insisted that before Rodman is reinstated, he must undergo psychiatric counseling and assure the league that he will adhere to acceptable standards of behavior.

Highlight for Toronto, lowlight for New Jersey

By The Associated Press

Toronto and New Jersey came up with record-setting performances. That was good for the Raptors and bad for the Nets.

The Raptors got the most lopsided victory in their two-year history, 120-84 over Portland on Tuesday night. Doug Christie led Toronto with 33 points, tying a career high.

"They just came out and jumped us," Portland guard Kenny Anderson said. "They out-hustled us and hit their shots. They did everything right and we did everything wrong."

Meanwhile, New Jersey was held to its lowest point total since joining the NBA in 1976, losing to the Cleveland Cavaliers 84-62.

"We have to get better as individuals and get better as a team," Nets coach John Calipari said. "Today we took a giant step backwards, and it was a team effort."

The Cavs' stingy defense held the Nets to 10 points in the first quarter and 11 in the fourth.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was New York 109, Boston 107; Washington 102, Orlando 82; Charlotte 98, Indiana 97; Detroit 93, Milwaukee 84; Sacramento 91, Minnesota 88; Los Angeles Lakers 102, Dallas 83; Utah 114, Denver 99; Chicago 111, Vancouver 96; and Atlanta 112, Los Angeles Clippers 96.

Bullets 102, Magic 82
At Landover, Chris Webber had 17 points and 14 rebounds as Washington snapped Orlando's four-game winning streak. Juwan Howard had 26 points and 10 rebounds for the Bullets, who won for only the third time in nine games. Anfernee Hardaway scored 22 for the Magic.

Lakers 102, Mavericks 83
Shaquille O'Neal had 31 points and 10 rebounds as Los Angeles won at Dallas. The Mavs, playing without suspended star Chris Gatling, led 51-49 midway through the third period before the Lakers took control with an 18-2 run. Jamal Mashburn scored 26 points for Dallas.

Hornets 98, Pacers 97
Glenn Rice scored 30 points, including a pair of clinching foul shots with four seconds left. Reggie Miller scored 26 points for the Pacers, who have lost three straight at home.

Kings 91, Timberwolves 88
At Minneapolis, Mitch Richmond celebrated his fifth consecutive All-Star selection with 28 points and nine assists for Sacramento. Minnesota got 25 points and eight rebounds from Tom Gugliotta, who was selected to his first All-Star game.

Pistons 93, Bucks 84
At Milwaukee, Grant Hill scored 22 points and Detroit held its opponent under 100 points for the 22nd straight game. The Houston Rockets are the only team to score 100 points against Detroit this season, in a 115-96 victory on Dec. 12. Glenn Robinson scored 15 points for the Bucks.

Knicks 109, Celtics 107
At New York, Chris Childs made a 3-pointer with 8.4 seconds left — his only basket of the game — and the Knicks beat Boston for the 18th straight time. Allan Houston scored 25 points and Charles Oakley had a season-high 20 for the Knicks, who shot a season-high 58.4 percent from the field. Boston rookie Antoine Walker had 27 points and a season-high 16 rebounds.

Ditka is new Saints' coach

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Before he left football in 1992, Mike Ditka developed a reputation as a tough guy who put up with little from players, management or the media.

Ditka, the latest coach to shake off burnout and return from the broadcast booth to the sidelines, is the new coach of the New Orleans Saints.

He's also intent on showing that his old image doesn't match his new ways.

"I want to create a sense of pride here," Ditka said he was hired as the Saints' 12th head coach. "I want to make it fun for everybody, especially the people in the organization. I want the fans to enjoy it too."

Ditka, an NBC studio analyst the past four years, was offered the job Jan. 20, and on Tuesday he signed a three-year contract that will pay him between $5.5 million and $6 million over the length of the deal. He and owner Tom Benson said they decided last week not to announce his hiring until after the Super Bowl on Sunday in order not to divert attention from the NFL's marquee game.
