GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz.

(AP) — The flood of cars at Grand Canyon National Park would be trimmed to a trickle under a government plan to solve the traffic crunch with mass transit.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt was at the canyon today to unveil options that include diesel-powered light rail cars and buses that run on electricity or methanol.

The National Park Service wants to ban nearly all cars from the park by the summer of 2000.

People staying at hotels or camping inside the park and those traveling along state Route 64 still could drive in. Other visitors would have to leave their cars in nearby towns or at a massive lot to be built outside the park, then shuttle in by bus or rail.

The plan would eliminate 80 percent of the 1.5 million tourist-filled cars that enter the park each year.

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A home thermostat switched to air conditioning dropped temperatures into the teens, leading to the death of an elderly man. His wife was hospitalized today for hypothermia.

Authorities said they didn't know who set the switch or how long the home had been cold.

Robert and Phyllis Heppner, both 73, were found Wednesday at their home by a nephew who had been unable to contact them for two days. Mrs. Heppner was in critical condition.

Heppner likely died because of breathing difficulties, Coroner Dan Heinz said. Hypothermia can contribute to respiratory problems.

The thermostat switch was set to activate the air conditioning system instead of the furnace.

Only black woman on O.J. civil case jury dismissed

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The only black woman on the O.J. Simpson wrongful death trial jury was dismissed today and deliberations were ordered to begin anew with a new juror, an Asian man in his 30s.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki gave no reason for the dismissal, which came after a 90-minute closed-door meeting with attorneys.

It was unknown if the juror's ouster was linked to an investigation into two jurors from the criminal trial who allegedly tried to contact two jurors from this trial with a letter.

Before the dismissal was announced, the remaining 11 jurors and four alternates were brought into the courtroom and seated in the jury box.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, a juror has been excused for legal cause," Fujisaki told them.

A new juror was then selected by lottery. It was Juror No. 369, an Asian-American computer programmer.

The new panel consists of six women and six men and includes nine whites, one Hispanic, one Asian and a Jamaican-born man of black and Asian parentage.

The judge then told the newly constituted panel to start over again with deliberations.

"You are ... instructed to disregard and put out of your mind all past deliberations and begin deliberating anew, he said.

Fujisaki told the jurors to act as if they had not deliberated at all.

Before jurors were brought to the courtroom, plaintiff's attorney Daniel Petrocelli argued the jury should be sequestered for the remainder of deliberations but the judge rejected it.

"This being a civil case, the court doesn't know what authority the court has to do that," Fujisaki said. He noted it would involve public funds.

A grim-faced Petrocelli told him, "These jurors are going to be subjected to an extraordinary blast of publicity about their deliberations. I'm very concerned about this. We don't want a mistrial."

The judge then announced he was sealing the records of all conversations that have been held in his chambers and he declared "I am not going to sequester the jury."

Attorney John Q. Kelly, who represents the estate of Ms. Simpson, then suggested public funds could be allocated in the interest of preserving the administration of justice.

The judge dismissed the suggestion, saying perhaps where Kelly practices in New York that would be an option but it was not an option here.

He then summoned jurors and alternates into courtroom and advised them about the dismissal, which leaves three alternates left.

Earlier in the trial, when a juror was dismissed for sleeping, lawyers noted that juror No. 7, the woman dismissed today, also had been nodding off. The judge said he was aware of the situation and keeping an eye on it. After that, she remained alert and didn't appear to have any problems.

The dismissed juror, the sixth juror or alternate to be dismissed during the trial, was widowed and in her 60s. Her late husband was a parole agent.

During jury selections, she told attorneys she was concerned about possible rioting in the wake of the criminal verdict for acquittal. She said she had doubts about Simpson's guilt and thought the evidence was handled improperly.

In the closed-door session, plaintiffs fought vigorously to keep the woman on the panel, a source said.

Also today, the parents of Nicole Brown Simpson have a hearing in family court to ask a judge to reverse her decision last year awarding Simpson custody of the two young children he had with Ms. Simpson.

Louis and Juditha Brown were expected to ask Judge Nancy Wieben Stock to stay her order, effectively returning the children, while they appeal her original ruling to a higher court.

Lamar Elementary School fifth-graders Chris Woodward, Jesus Torres, Nerissa Perry and Kera Ivey show off their edible quilt the class made to celebrate the end of a history lesson that depicts the importance of quilts and quilting in American History. The "quilt" is made out of graham crackers and other edible items placed atop a lining of napkins. After fashioning the quilt Thursday, the students then got to eat their quilting project.

Jury assesses 20 years for Hanks on conviction in shotgun slaying case

By LAURA HALEY
Staff Writer

A jury found William Harley Hanks, 19, guilty of the Oct. 25, 1995 shooting death of his brother-in-law, Salvador Rodriguez, Thursday afternoon.

The seven-man, five-woman jury returned a guilty verdict in the murder trial after five hours of deliberation. Hanks stood quietly, looking down as 331st District Court Judge M. Kent Sims read the verdict.

Afterwards, Hanks mouthed the words, "It'll be okay" to family members sitting behind him.

Upon deciding the verdict, jury members then had to deliberate about the sentence they were going to issue Hanks. Defense attorney Harold Comer pleaded with jurors to be lenient in the sentencing phase, asking for 10 years probation.

"I don't think we do much rehabilitation by sending a man to a crime school like the penitentiary," said Comer. "This isn't the type of man who needs to be in the penitentiary for a long period of time."

However, District Attorney John Mann argued that crime has gotten out of hand and this was the opportunity for jurors to have their say.

"People always say, 'Why don't they do something about it (crime)?' he said. 'Well, now you are they. And now you have the opportunity to do something about it.'"

After further deliberation by the jury, Hanks was sentenced to serve 20 years in the Texas Department of Corrections and pay a $5,000 fine.

Most of Hanks' family members and friends left the courtroom as soon as the sentence was read. Hanks' wife, Amanda, stayed, seemingly shocked at the sentence.

When asked if she wished to make a comment, she simply asked, "Why does he have to go to prison for protecting his family?"

Amanda's estranged sister and Salvador Rodriguez's wife, Veronica Rodriguez, commented, "I think justice was served. At least he will get the time to think about taking away my husband and my son's father."

Both Veronica and her sister-in-law, Blanca Rodriguez, stated they thanked God for the verdict and felt Rodriguez could rest in peace.

Drug lord gets 11 life terms

HOUSTON (AP) — Mexican drug kingpin Juan Garcia Abrego was sentenced to 11 concurrent life prison terms and fines that will total nearly a half-billion dollars for his conviction last year on 22 counts of cocaine trafficking and money laundering.

Garcia Abrego was found guilty Oct. 16 by a Houston federal jury of smuggling 15 tons of cocaine into the United States and laundering about $10.5 million.

Garcia Abrego smiled and laughed with his attorneys before standing to hear the sentence from U.S. District Judge Ewing Werlein Jr. Garcia Abrego wore a headset to hear the judge's words translated into Spanish.

The judge did not indicate where Garcia Abrego would be imprisoned.

Including fines assessed by the court and $350 million in forfeitures, the financial penalties total nearly $500 million.

Several members of his family were in the courtroom. They declined to comment.

Garcia Abrego, 52, quickly rose from marijuana courier to the head of the Gulf Cartel in the 1980s.

For 10 years, federal drug agents tracked his progress and, in 1995, Garcia Abrego was added by U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno to FBI's "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives" list — the first international drug lord ever listed.

Juvenile offenders receive look at prison life in court-ordered visit to Jordan Unit

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

The bus rolled up to the razor-wire topped chain link fence, stopped, waited for clearance, then pulled into the interior holding area to let 25 would-be felons get a taste of real prison life.

Juvenile offenders, who have been court ordered to take part in an outreach program based on the Scared Straight federal program, stepped off the bus and entered the most inhospitable of worlds.

The guards informed them that this was the real thing. They would do as they were told or there would be severe consequences. They were pat searched, their coats were turned inside out and searched and some even had their shoes searched while a cold north wind blew through the prison wires.

"When you need to ask one of us something," said a female guard, "you address us as Boss or Boss Lady and nothing else. Am I understood?"

Mumbled answers weren't accepted.

"You're getting off easy," said one guard. "The next time you come through these gates you will be strip searched. It won't matter what the weather is like, you and all those who arrive with you will find yourself butt naked on the grounds until the search is complete. You'll find there is no privacy when you enter TDCJ."

The old kindergarten lessons of walking with a partner, without talking, was strictly enforced.

"You do one wrong thing in here, just one thing, and you'll have all of us down on your back. 'Cause what one person does in here affects us all," said Bennie Alexander, an inmate originally from California.

"There ain't no one in here to listen to your complaints about being mistreated. 'Cause no one cares once you get here," he said. "And if you think the guards are here to protect you and your fancy tennis shoes, think again. They can't watch us all, all the time," said James Foster, an inmate who says he didn't learn his lesson the first time here.

Many of the young offenders stepped off the bus thinking this was another game the system was playing with them, but Larry Green, a long-time inmate, let them know that new legislation says that offenders as young as 14 can now be tried as an adult.

"And if you think this is joke, let me tell you this. The country is tired of punks like you! The states are tired of you. The counties, cities and towns are tired of you. Sometimes even your families are tired of you, and once you get here you do your time! Day for day," Green said.

"New legislation keeps new offenders in here for at least half their time. You punks can expect no time off for good behavior, and parole boards not even considering you until three-fourths your time is done," he said.

PFAA re-elects Loralee Cooley as president at annual meeting

Loralee Cooley was re-elected president of the Pampa Fine Arts Association at its recent annual meeting.

Dr. Malouf Abraham of Canada was guest speaker for the meeting held Monday in the Heritage Room at M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

An art collector and member of the Texas Commission on the Arts (TCA), Dr. Abraham lauded "visionaries" who instigate creative ideas, even though success in a project might take years to develop.

Abraham also warned that smaller towns too often measure the success of a program by the numbers in attendance, forgetting the importance of the event. He hopes to help the TCA enlist more funding per capita for the arts, as Texas ranks low among the states with 17 cents per capita.

New PFAA board members elected at the meeting are Mitch Mamoulides, Joe Martinez, Kathy Morris and Nancy Hahn. Treasurer Bobby Ketchersid was re-elected to the board.

Other officers include Sandra Keeton, vice president; Nancy Hahn, secretary; Nancy Shaffer, membership; Barbara Bigham, junior fine arts; Kim Trimble, musical arts; Dean Birkes, theatre arts; and Lisa Smith, membership assistant.

Lee Crow is the new office manager.

The next PFAA event is the all-member Art Show to be held at the FirstBank Southwest Saturday and Sunday, 2-6 p.m. each day.

Fugitive businessman visited White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although an international warrant had been issued for his arrest on embezzlement charges in Lebanon, businessman Roger Tamraz was able to hobnob with President Clinton and other Democratic donors at a White House coffee klatch last April.

The fugitive former banker joins a cast of controversial figures — including a businessman whose company has been linked to Russian organized crime, a Chinese arms dealer and a convicted felon — who were welcomed into a White House that has since admitted lax security.

The Democratic National Committee sponsored the April 1 gathering with Clinton that was attended by Tamraz and nine other guests. Tamraz's U.S.-based oil company donated $72,000 to the party in 1995 and 1996.

Tamraz, now a U.S. citizen living in New York City, said in a telephone interview Thursday that Clinton aides were aware of the charges filed against him in Lebanon but did not consider them legitimate.

"I don't think anyone takes this seriously in civilized countries," he said, denying all the allegations made against him in Lebanon.

According to magistrate records filed in Beirut, Tamraz was accused by the Lebanese government in the late 1980s of embezzling about $200 million from the collapsed Al Mashreq Bank when he was its chairman.

Lebanon issued an arrest warrant for him in 1989 and asked Interpol, the international police agency, to declare him an international fugitive, according to Lebanese officials and records.

Interpol issued an international arrest warrant in June 1989, according to a U.S. official familiar with Interpol, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Tamraz disputes the allegations, alleging they were fabricated by the Lebanese government in retaliation for his contacts with Israeli government officials. In addition to the bank charges, a Lebanese military tribunal accused him of collaboration with Israel and in 1996 sentenced him in absentia to three years in jail.

"They used the bank fraud for political reasons," Tamraz said in the interview. "There was no bank fraud at all."

Tamraz, 56, a friend of former Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, also disputed the legitimacy of a longstanding warrant. "Do they have a problem in finding me?" he asked. "I travel all over the world. ... They would have stopped me 10 years ago."

White House special counsel Lanny Davis said "there is an effort under way to improve the standards as to who is properly at the White House with access to the president."

But Davis declined to specifically address Tamraz's situation, saying "as a general matter the White House is reserving comment on specific cases where we don't have the information on the allegations."

The Lebanese ambassador to Washington did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

In recent weeks, it has been disclosed that several controversial figures attended DNC events with the president and Vice President Al Gore.

Presidential aides said they failed to do adequate security checks, and have made changes to prevent such problems in the future.

Another donor invited to a White House coffee was Jerome Berlin, a longtime Democratic fund-raiser and lawyer from Florida who once was charged with telling clients he could bribe Gore when Gore he was a senator.

In 1990, federal prosecutors alleged that Berlin and another attorney tricked their clients out of $225,000 by telling them the money would be used to bribe Gore and Florida officials to end state investigations of their company.

Marines Corps opens investigation into brutal hazing incidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps has opened an investigation of two hazing incidents known as "blood pinnings" in which elite paratroopers have golden jump pins beaten into their chests.

The incidents, in 1991 and 1993, were videotaped by participants. The service says the hazing was brought to its attention by NBC's Dateline NBC, which was planning to broadcast portions of the tapes tonight. CNN broadcast portions Thursday night.

However, news of the incidents leaked out Thursday at the Pentagon.

The events involve an elite unit of Marine Corps paratroopers, who primarily are trained for reconnaissance and scouting duty.

The paratroopers earn golden pins upon completion of ten training jumps, and such individuals evidently were the ones taped in the incidents.

Marine Corps spokesman Maj. Scott Campbell said the Marine Corps has viewed the tapes. About 30 Marines are seen in the 1991 tape, and most have been identified.

Campbell said about ten have been interviewed by investigators. About nine of the Marines involved remain on active duty, he said.

Because the Marines prohibit such hazing activities, Lt. Gen. Charles E. Wilhelm has been put in charge of the investigation, Campbell said. Wilhelm is the commander of U.S. Marine Corps operations in the Atlantic, located at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

The 1991 incident involved the 2nd Air Delivery Platoon from the 2nd Landing Support Battalion, 2nd Force Service Support Group from Lejeune. The individuals in the 1993 video have not yet been identified, he said.

Wilhelm has the authority to bring both active-duty Marines and recently retired Marines back to Lejeune "for action he deems appropriate," Campbell said.

Campbell said no disciplinary action has been taken because the investigation was only opened early this month.

A military source who viewed the tapes called them "sickening" and said, "They just keep beating

Three dead, seven injured in wall collapse at Houston shopping mall

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert Delaney was making his regular walk through Northline Mall when he heard someone say a rock had fallen through the ceiling. Then everything started collapsing around him.

"You couldn't see nothing but dust. ... It was just dust, dust, dust," Delaney, 67, a retired utility worker, said Thursday after he managed to escape the torrent of concrete as a wall along a mall walkway collapsed.

Officials have found the bodies of three victims and had earlier feared that as many as six people were missing and possibly killed. Seven were injured.

Assistant Fire Chief H.G. Torres said early today it is doubtful that any other victims will be found.

He said five of the six people first believed to be missing have been accounted for and authorities are hopeful that the sixth person simply hasn't contacted relatives.

"We have moved all of the large pieces of concrete. We have removed all the beams. In the process, we have discovered three bodies. We have not discovered any more."

The Harris County Medical Examiner's Office early today identified three of the victims whose bodies have been found.

They were Leola Edwards, 59, Ema Curtis, 62 and Thelma Loraine Jolly, 53, all of Houston.

"I was about two feet from the last beam that fell in," said Delaney, who was among a couple dozen elderly "mall walkers" who use the indoor shopping area about five miles north of downtown for early morning exercise.

Jury to deliberate capital murder trial of homemaker

KERRVILLE (AP) — Darlie Routier's testimony that a mysterious intruder stabbed her two young sons to death is about to be considered by a Kerr County jury.

Prosecutors claim the young Rowlett homemaker committed the grisly murders then slashed herself to cover the crime.

And in closing arguments today, the state's attorneys planned to tell the seven woman, five man jury that blood and other evidence collected in Mrs. Routier's home in Rowlett proves her guilt.

"The real Darlie Lynn Routier is a self-centered woman, a materialistic woman and a woman cold enough in fact to murder her own two children," prosecutor Greg Davis told jurors at the start of the trial.

Five-year-old Damon and six-year-old Devon Routier were killed in the June 6, 1996, knife attack. Mrs. Routier's eight-month-old baby, Drake, was in another part of the home with his father and wasn't injured.

Former lottery director wants job back

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Texas Lottery director Nora Linares wants her job back.

Linares was fired Jan. 7 after nearly two months of questions about a contract between a long-time friend and the lottery's main contractor.

Linares said she knew nothing about the five-month, $30,000 contract between friend Mike Moeller and GTECH Corp. until she was asked about it by a newspaper reporter in November.

Other questions also arose at the end of her tenure, including the whereabouts or state of numerous investigation files about lottery- and bingo-related complaints and her friendship with a lobbyist for another lottery contractor.

No allegations of wrongdoing were ever directly leveled against Linares, but the three-member Texas Lottery Commission said she had been so damaged by the questions that she could no longer be effective as executive director.

Sale of water rights discussed at symposium

AUSTIN (AP) — The sale of water rights isn't a final solution, but it could be a short-term answer for Texas' water shortage, said an Environmental Defense Fund economist at a water symposium.

Peter Emerson, a senior economist with the group, offered water marketing as a viable — and low cost — alternative at the "Markets and Water: Allocating Scarce Resources in the 21st Century" symposium Thursday. "I don't know that water marketing would solve the problems forever," said Emerson. "I think it's something you can use within the situation of San Antonio and the aquifers region ... for the next 10-20 years in a very effective way."

Water marketing involves the sale or lease of a property owner's water rights. It can involve water transfers either within a river basin or between two basins. The concept is not regulated by the government.

Emerson said the sale of water rights would ensure supply was meeting demand while giving the state more time to research conservation and water management strategies.

Senate votes to end automatic early release of inmates

AUSTIN (AP) — After a get-tough-on-crime debate cut short by a bomb threat, the Texas Senate voted to end the automatic early release of thousands of prison inmates.

Notified of the threat, lawmakers ended their debate, quickly passed the bill and joined other state employees filing out of the Capitol shortly before noon Thursday. The building was reopened about 40 minutes later. Before the incident, backers of the measure said it is needed to keep as many as 80,000 prisoners from being turned loose based not on a parole board review but a mathematical formula.

"The ones that are most outrageous are people that are murderers, rapists, child molesters, repeat offenders, just some of the worst of the worst," said Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, an author of the bill.

Houston Chronicle on Colombia policy:

U.S. officials must decide by March whether Colombia regains the certification it lost last year as a reliable partner in this country's war on drugs.

It is a tough decision for American officials, including White House drug czar Barry McCaffrey, because of the mixed signals Colombia is sending about its resoluteness in the deadly anti-drug struggle which has taken the lives of thousands of Colombians.

A fact that cannot be ignored is the strong evidence Colombian President Ernesto Samper's political campaign received contributions from the Cali drug cartel, although Samper says he was personally unaware of the money. This was a large part of the reason Colombia lost its certification last year.

But on the positive side are the new measures passed by Colombia's legislature that provide for tougher sentences for drug traffickers and stronger laws to confiscate their properties.

Most recently McCaffrey publicly criticized the lenient prison sentences given two well-known drug kingpins, although another judge in another trial sentenced a brother of the late Pablo Escobar to 26 years in prison.

One thing certain is that the United States can be more effective in fighting narco-traffickers in Colombia with Colombian cooperation.

What is uncertain is whether President Samper and members of his administration are genuine in their professed goal to eliminate the drug business in Colombia.

If Colombia fails to regain certification, it stands to feel the effects of some economic sanctions from the United States.

But in punishing the Colombians, the United States and Colombia will be losers in the drug war.

El Paso Times on higher education funding:

Money spent on higher education always has been viewed as an investment, but now it must be seen by Texans in the context of preventing a crisis.

The Texas Higher Education Coalition is lobbying the Legislature for additional funding. The strategy presented by the coalition is sound, and the logic behind increased funding is clear and crucial. Legislators must take a strong look at the coalition's report, and taxpayers must face the fact that preventing a crisis will cost almost $1 billion more in higher education funding.

The coalition's "Back to Basics" plan, if followed, will add meaningful clout to a college diploma. For example, partnerships will be strengthened among universities, community colleges and public schools. Obviously, this will better prepare more young people to enter college.

Also, student financial aid programs would be beefed up, thus removing yet another barrier to higher education.

Strategies for keeping students in college will be emphasized.

Demographics scream in support of funding increases for higher education. A Texas A&M University study projects an 80 percent increase in the state's population by the year 2030. That study also indicated that fewer Texans will earn high school diplomas if current trends continue, and that annual household income will decline.

The crisis could affect all Texans, because it threatens the quality of life throughout the state.

Austin American-Statesman on need to improve VA health care:

Health care for veterans available through the Department of Veterans Affairs is in desperate need of an overhaul to bring it in line with today's realities.

VA hospitals have too many empty beds and are riddled with inefficiency and lack of accountability. While there have been some calls for turning to a voucher plan for medical care, both Congress and the Clinton Administration have ignored them.

The time is now for a radical overhaul of veterans health care.

A voucher system makes more sense than the continued operations of expensive hospitals that stay mostly empty and encourage costly and unnecessary hospital stays.

This session of Congress presents another opportunity for this long overdue initiative.

Berry's World

"LET'S MOVE FROM CALIFORNIA TO WASHINGTON AND GET AWAY FROM THE MUD SLIDES, YOU SAID."

How to spend the next four years

Welcome - ahem - to the next four years, the second half of The Clinton Years.

A great variety of things will happen in these years; also, a great variety of things will not happen. Some things the government will do right; others it will do wrong.

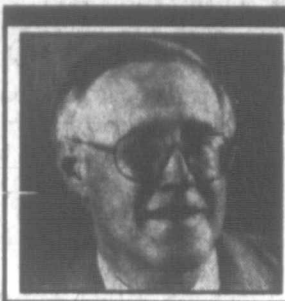

Inaugurations are moments for shining promises and glittering visions of what government means to do. From Bill Clinton, for instance, we have had a vision of racial bonding. "For any of us to succeed," the president declaimed on Monday, "we must all succeed as Americans."

A scarier likelihood rears its head in, of all sensible cities, Dallas, where turmoil on the local school board is attracting national notice. On the school board, divided equally among white, Hispanic and black members, blacks distrust whites, Hispanics distrust blacks, and whites stare in bewilderment.

In theory, this shouldn't be happening. The school board is, for heaven's sake, a democratically elected government body. In government of, by, and for the people - hear the soft humming: "O beautiful for spacious skies..." - Democracy triumphs. Here the people rule. In theory.

The practice turns out less wonderfully. Democratic control of the legislative process centers certain blessings; other blessings it sidetracks. (What is the Social Security Problem but the ultimate democratic mess - how to make 265 million people happy at the same instant?)

Always at inaugurations, and for about twelve and a half minutes after they end, hopes rustle like Old Glory in the cold Washington air. The new administration and the new Congress fall to work. Reform of Social Security. Reform of Medicare. Racial healing. A balanced budget. A variety of hopes will find fulfillment; a variety won't. The main thing of which we may feel reasonably certain is that four years on, something else is going to be amiss.

What should we do in the interim between this administration and the next? One arresting thought comes to mind. We can downsize our expectations regarding what politicians are able to do for us. We can try simply to live good lives.

This doesn't mean tuning out politics. If anything, it involves tuning in politics for the sake of tuning it out again. In other words, it means working for smaller government, following the prescription of, yes, the profoundly embarrassed Dr. Newt Gingrich.

Virtuous living comes easier under smaller government, where your arm isn't perpetually bent behind your back. But it's something that can be practiced in the short run for its transformative value. When society - insofar as this ever happens in human affairs - practices virtue, good results spring spontaneously into being, instead of descending from government's outstretched hand, to be fought over and disputed and paid for in taxes.

An overworked mom - or dad - puts in extra hours making sure seventh-grade Johnny understands his algebra. Virtue. Off to church all go on Sunday to worship a greater Lord than the president. Virtue. Husband sacrifices for wife, wife for husband. Virtue. Service to Rotary Club, Junior League, Jaycees, Elks, Habitat for Humanity; after school tutoring of the poor; fixing meals at the shelter. Or just stopping at red lights, paying taxes, holding open the door for a stranger. Virtue. The living of good lives.

Virtue, translated as love, can alone repair the race relations for which Clinton pines and cities languish; practiced diligently, love - not government - equalizes blacks, whites and all the rest, assigns to them the same duties, the same right to respect and concern.

None of these imperatives depends on the success of the Clinton agenda or, alternatively, on its failure. Life isn't politics; politics isn't life. How easily this essential fact regarding the human condition eludes humans accustomed to seeing government as their savior and friend. Well, it's neither. Suppose we spend at least the next four years trying to recover this unremarkable but neglected truth. There are infinitely worse ways to spend a presidential term. Want me to name some?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 31, the 31st day of 1997. There are 334 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Jan. 31, 1958, the United States entered the Space Age with its first successful launch of a satellite into orbit, Explorer 1.

On this date: In 1606, Guy Fawkes, convicted for his part in the "Gunpowder Plot" against the English Parliament and King James I, was executed.

In 1797, composer Franz Schubert was born in Vienna, Austria.

In 1865, Gen. Robert E. Lee was named general-in-chief of all the Confederate armies.

In 1917, Germany served notice that it was beginning a policy of unrestricted submarine warfare.

In 1944, during World War II, U.S. forces began invading Kwajalein Atoll and other parts of the Japanese-held Marshall Islands.

In 1945, Private Eddie Slovik became the only U.S. soldier since the Civil War to be executed for desertion. He was shot by an American firing squad in France.

America still produces great leaders

Where have all the great leaders gone?

That's a question I've heard many times. My answer is: It's not that America no longer produces great men and women. It's that our political and media establishments no longer revere the qualities that make for greatness. They even turn on greatness when it threatens their complacency.

I would submit to you that no one poses a greater threat to the complacency of the Washington establishment than Newt Gingrich, the narrowly re-elected Speaker of the House of Representatives, and leader of a noble campaign to get Washington off the backs of American families and workers.

Ever since young Congressman Gingrich had the temerity to challenge then House Speaker Tip O'Neil in the 1980s, the Washington establishment has had it in for him. It comes as no surprise that the business-as-usual crowd eventually drew blood.

It's not just that Gingrich favors balancing Washington's checkbook, lessening the burden of taxes on American families, giving authority and autonomy back to states and localities, and giving all Americans greater economic independence by reforming welfare, Medicare and Social Security - three of Washington's biggest power-grabbing programs.

It's that he has forced President Clinton to sign on to all of these objectives, albeit in different forms, which cut at the heart of big government.

Say what you want about Gingrich. But he believes his ideas passionately, pursues them relentlessly, and is willing to take a beating for it. When all the smoke clears, he frequently comes out on top. By contrast, Americans still are trying to figure out what the occupants of the White House believe.

To the Washington establishment, Gingrich has horns and a tail. His 104th Congress eliminated 270 federal programs, agencies, offices and projects. It enacted farm and telecommunications reform, changing antiquated laws dating back to the Depression. The 104th Congress also reduced discretionary domestic spending by $53 billion.

His revolution is rolling. It wasn't repudiated by the voters in 1996 as liberals believed it would be. The 105th Congress is on the brink of truly ending the era of big government and re-instituting the era of citizen-directed self-government. Bill Clinton was re-elected because he sang Gingrichisms like a canary: lower taxes, balanced budgets, family values.

How did Gingrich pull off this victory? By being the lightning rod and taking the heat. Like any great leader, he recognized that since his cause was just, the only thing his opponents could attack was himself. Accepting this, he didn't buckle, and while his enemies attacked, the victory was being won. And more victories lie ahead.

Heck, Newt Gingrich even admits and apologizes for his mistakes! By contrast, can you imagine hearing an admission of guilt or an apology - about far worse "ethical lapses" than anything even dreamed of by Gingrich - from other key players in Washington?

"We are at the end of a 60-year cycle of liberalism," Gingrich said recently before The Heritage Foundation President's Club. "We had to have at the national level a great debate about where we were going. And that debate was a confrontation with those on the left who still believe in redistribution of wealth, centralized bureaucracy, command-and-control planning."

With so much at stake, this is a leader who deserves another look.

Clinton pushes campaign finance reform

Campaign finance reform is a motto that can't miss - but it can misfire, again.

Republican and Democratic accounts that something ought to be done about political money fray when the slogans veer to specifics.

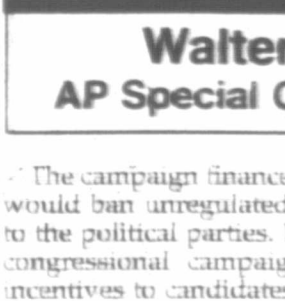

President Clinton will be pressing the case for an overhaul in his State of the Union message next Tuesday, and a White House aide said he regrets not making it a higher priority earlier in his administration.

That's understandable, given the Democratic fundraising excesses that are about to come under Republican-led congressional investigations.

Clinton has promised the sponsors of a bipartisan campaign finance bill that he will use every option available to try to get it passed this year. The Democratic National Committee, which repaid the disputed, though limited, donations of the 1996 campaign and returned $1.5 million of them, has imposed new limits and rules on its own future fundraising, including a bar on contributions from noncitizens.

Clinton first steps, the president said, proposing that both parties stop asking the unscrupulous donations that flow around current political finance laws - $14 million to the Republicans, $12 million to the Democrats in the last campaign. "If you will to it, we will to it," Clinton said the day after his inauguration.

They're not doing it, at least not yet, on either side, although the self-imposed Democratic rules limit donors to the party to no more than $100,000 a year. The ceiling on contributions to a candidate in each election is $1,000, set in 1974 and unchanged since.

Walter Mears
AP Special Correspondent

The campaign finance bill Clinton has endorsed would ban unregulated, "soft money" donations to the political parties. It also would seek to limit congressional campaign spending by offering incentives to candidates who agree to run within the ceilings. It would end, or limit, contributions by political action committees.

That's the bipartisan bill Clinton is urging Congress to handle quickly, before people lose interest and the momentum for reform ebbs. He said delay would doom the measure.

Sen. Tom Daschle, the minority leader, put campaign reform atop the Democratic priority list, and said there's been talk enough. Over the past decade, he said, Congress has held 29 sets of hearings on the subject, which has stirred 17 filibusters, and the Senate has voted 113 times on questions of campaign finance. No bill has passed Congress.

While Republican leaders said they want to deal with reform, they're not rushing the issue. Republicans may be inclined to wait out the investigations, which are to deal with the fundraising practices of both parties, but are certain to concentrate on the Democrats' Asian-connected campaign money.

The only campaign finance item among Senate GOP priority bills is one that includes a ban on the use of union dues for political purposes, money spent to Democratic advantage - $35 million in the last congressional campaign.

Bipartisanship is tested to the point of testiness on matters like that.

Republicans are rankled over Clinton's remark to the Democratic National Committee that the GOP gets the big money and the Democrats get the blame.

"On the other side, our friends may not think that they have any interest in campaign finance reform," Clinton said in that Jan. 21 speech. "Why should they? They raise the money, they raise more foreign money, they raise more money in big contributions, and we take all the heat."

"It's a free ride," he complained. "I don't think the defense everybody does it, is what we're saying," said Larry Davis, lawyer-spokesman for the White House in the fundraising cases. But he said on CNN recently that Republican presidents offered White House access to their big donors, too, and that Clinton's sessions with Democratic money people were neither unprecedented nor wrong.

"What is wrong here is the system," he said. "President Clinton has said the system is rotten. We need to reform it."

To which Sen. Mitch McConnell, the ranking opponent of bills seeking to limit campaign spending, countered that the debate is driven by conduct that violates existing law, including donations from foreigners and contributors giving donations in the names of other people.

"So I have just two words to the president," the Kentucky Republican said. "Retire yourself."

U.S. official: Full reading of Swiss memo eases concerns
DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — A senior U.S. official today toned down Washington's criticism of a memo that led to the resignation of the Swiss ambassador to the United States.

The U.S. undersecretary of commerce, Stuart Eizenstat, said the memo that portrayed Switzerland as being at war with American Jewish organizations and others over its handling of Holocaust assets did contain some "very strong, unfortunate wording."

A study of the full memo found no signs of anti-Semitism, Eizenstat said.

Jewish groups and others reacted angrily when details of the memo were published by a Swiss newspaper last weekend, prompting Ambassador Carlo Jäggi to resign.

Eizenstat, who coordinates U.S. investigations into Swiss handling of Holocaust assets, said the Clinton administration's view of the memo had changed as more information became available.

Reports on the document "gave a sense that somehow Switzerland was in a war and that there were enemies out to get Switzerland. That is not the case," he said. "There are no enemies of Switzerland in the United States."

Major says Britain won't return Gibraltar to Spain

LONDON (AP) — While Britain prepares to lower the Union Jack in Hong Kong, the government is insisting it won't be budged from two other contentious outposts: Gibraltar and the Falkland Islands.

Prime Minister John Major reaffirmed the government's position on Gibraltar on Thursday, telling the House of Commons that it would remain a colony so long as its people wished.

"Britain stands by its commitments to the people of Gibraltar, enshrined in the 1969 constitution," Major told the House of Commons.

"We will not be entering into arrangements under which the people of Gibraltar would pass under the sovereignty of another state against their freely and democratically expressed wishes."

Britain has taken a similar position in the Falkland Islands, the South Atlantic islands also claimed by Argentina, which invaded in 1982 and was defeated by British forces.

Communist Party member, executives sentenced to die

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A judge today ordered the death by firing squad of a Communist Party member and three associates for a corruption scandal that led to the collapse of a state-run company.

In all, 20 people, including business executives, bankers and government officials, were charged in Vietnam's landmark corruption case involving the state-run import-export company, Tamexco.

Presiding People's Court Justice Bui Hoang Danh read the sentences with a word of warning to others: corrupt officials and business executives must be prepared to pay for their crimes with their lives.

Outside the courtroom, Danh's voice, broadcast over a public address system, echoed through the neighborhood as hundreds of people stood by, listening in silence.

Bribery, embezzlement, gambling and a string of bad business deals led to the downfall of Tamexco and the loss of more than $27 million.

Colombian authorities raid huge jungle cocaine lab

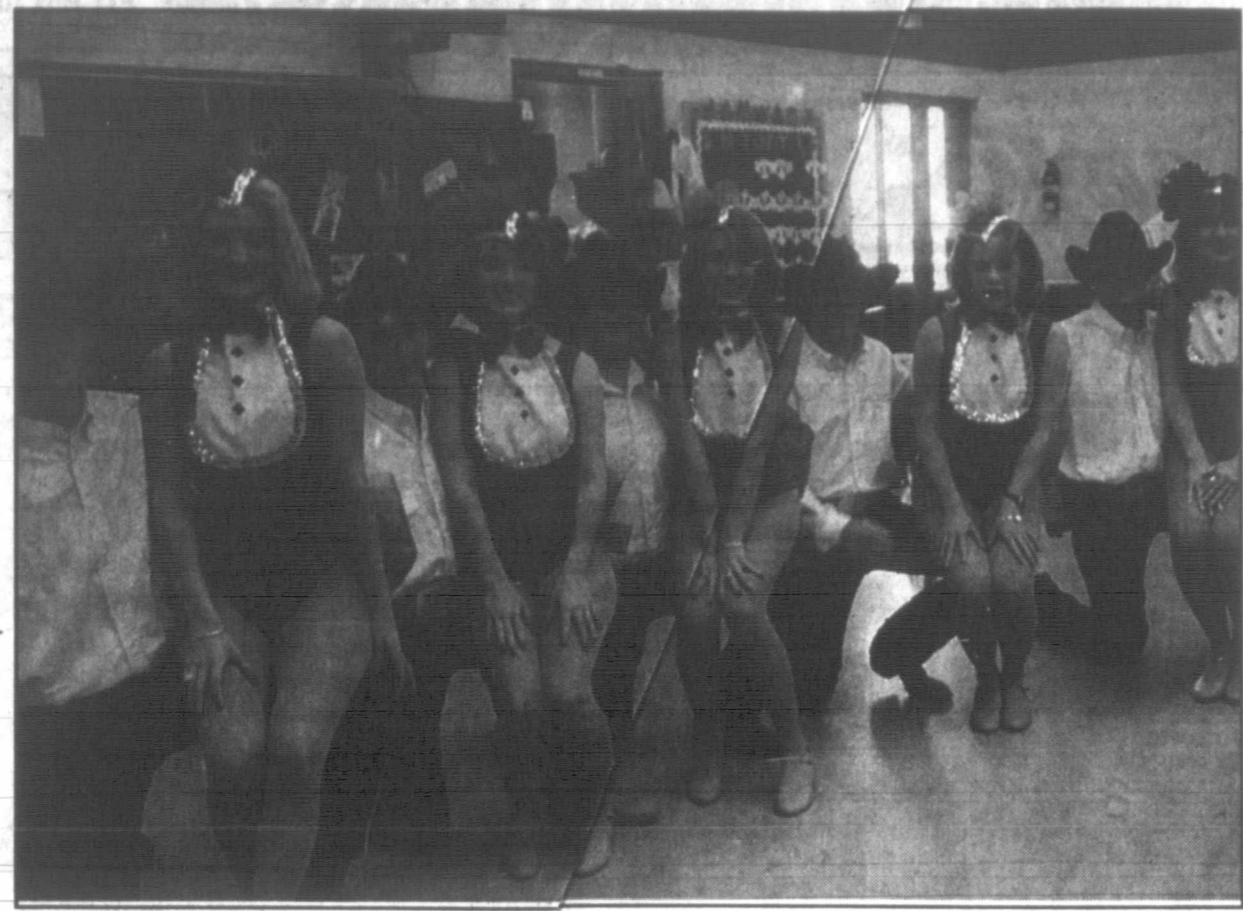

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Authorities seized eight tons of cocaine in a raid that shut down a major drug laboratory in Colombia's jungle that could process 1 1/2 tons of raw cocaine a day.

The complex in the southeastern state of Guaviare was the largest uncovered in more than a decade, officials said Thursday.

The lab was raided by 50 helicopter-borne police commandos in a jungle area where leftist guerrillas of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia protect coca-growing plantations and labs in exchange for commissions.

There were no arrests. Lab workers fled the complex in the Puerto Cordoba region before police landed Tuesday.

Deputies search house of ex-juror from O.J. Simpson murder trial, confiscate computer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A juror from the O.J. Simpson murder trial has been accused of writing a letter to jurors in Simpson's civil trial, urging them to hire her agent.

Sheriff's deputies descended on Brenda Moran's South Central Los Angeles home Thursday night, searching cars and shutting themselves in the house with Ms. Moran and her parents.

Investigators hauled away a computer from the home.

"They wouldn't even let me in," said James Moran Jr., the ex-juror's brother. "I don't know what's going on."

Ms. Moran and fellow juror, Gina Rosborough, who had a book deal together, are under investigation because of a letter that was sent to the homes of at least two civil-trial jurors, sources told The Associated Press.

Also under investigation is an entertainment agent who was mentioned in the letter, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Through their attorney, the women denied wrongdoing and contended they were merely trying to help the new Simpson jurors cope with the inevitable media avalanche that awaits them after the verdict.

"There was absolutely no attempt in the world to interfere with the jury, and the letter really is innocuous," attorney Jeff Brodey said.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki ordered the investigation Tuesday after two civil-trial jurors reported receiving the letter.

In the handwritten letter, Ms. Moran praises the civil trial jurors and urges them to consider contacting an entertainment agent-publicist named Bud Stewart.

"Congratulations on successfully surviving a trying experience," says the letter, which was apparently written by Ms. Moran. It was unclear if Ms. Moran and Ms.

Rosborough both signed the letter.

The women would "respect your verdict and look forward to meeting you," said the letter, which was read to The Associated Press.

Brodey said the women wrote the letter and handed it over to Stewart, who is linked to Lincoln Press, the company publishing a book planned by the two former jurors.

"They didn't send it out," Brodey said.

He said he didn't know who sent the letter, or how the person who sent it figured out where the civil trial jurors lived. The judge has kept the jurors' identities secret, even from the lawyers in the case.

A man who responded to a telephone message for Lincoln Press claimed he was Stewart and said the publisher's office had been searched. Five juror notebooks and all the paperwork related to the book were confiscated, he said.

Student making waves in fight against random drug testing

VIGO PARK, Texas (AP) — Hollister Gardner says he reacted to his school's random drug testing program just like he's approached dope all his life: He just said no.

Barely a month after his 18th birthday, Gardner drafted a federal lawsuit challenging the policy — and sued his father in the process.

Gary Gardner is among the Tullia Independent School District board members named as defendants in the lawsuit. But Gardner, the only board member to oppose the policy, has been happy to help his son by providing tapes of board meetings and other district documents.

"Boy, you think you raise them right, and as soon as they turn 18 they up and sue you," Gardner joked. This rural district, about 45 miles south of Amarillo, asked parents and students last fall to sign permission slips agreeing to random drug testing as a condition of involvement in extracurricular activities.

Hollister Gardner, who is representing himself, filed suit in Amarillo earlier this month, arguing the district is violating search and seizure protections by conducting random tests without cause.

"If I understand the law the way I think I understand the law, I can't lose in this situation," he said.

Gary Gardner's family helped found the tiny crossroads of Vigo Park in northeastern Swisher County 91 years ago.

"These hick towns out here have the attitude that we can do anything we want, and it's not so,"

FBI agent claims to have been threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI agent who claims the bureau's lab mishandled evidence from the Oklahoma City bombing was threatened with government discipline for answers he gave the defense in the case, his lawyer alleges in a complaint to the Justice Department.

The two government lawyers named in the complaining letter denied in interviews Thursday that they were trying to intimidate the lab whistleblower, scientist-agent Frederic Whitehurst.

The allegations by Whitehurst, once the FBI's top explosives residue expert, that the lab mishandled evidence touched off an internal investigation of the world-renowned facility that could affect a dozen or more criminal cases.

Whitehurst may be called as a witness by defense attorney Stephen Jones to challenge government evidence against Timothy McVeigh in the April 1995 bombing that killed 168 people. The complaint by Whitehurst's attorney, Stephen Kohn, is being reviewed in Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick's office, Justice officials said Thursday, requesting anonymity.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the document, which was delivered to Attorney General Janet Reno on Monday.

Earlier Thursday, Gorelick told a news conference the Justice Department inspector general who investigated Whitehurst's complaints found "a serious set of problems" in "a limited number of units within the lab and a limited number of ... cases."

For more than a year during the investigation, the government has redone flawed evidence tests, alerted defense attorneys to past errors and taken other steps to insure fair trials, but Gorelick said it was too soon to tell if the problems will harm any prosecutions.

Gospel concert

Southern gospel group The Florida Boys, pictured above, will be appearing in a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 4, at the Borger High School auditorium. Also appearing will be the McLaughlin Brothers of Oklahoma City, Okla. The Florida Boys arose from the Gospel Melody Quartet in the late 1940s, taking their current name in the 1950s. Over the years they have been a popular gospel group, with more than 100 albums to their credit. Their hits have included such songs as "Standing on the Solid Rock," "When He Was on the Cross, I Was on His Mind," "Lead Me to the Altar" and "I Lean on You, Lord." They also have a nationally syndicated television program, The Gospel Singing Jubilee, which has won several Dove Awards.

Generation X keeps the faith, studies find

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

Generation X is standing by the church.

Following the "lost generation" of baby boomers who abandoned organized religion in large numbers, baby busters — stereotyped as angry, alienated individualists — were expected to be even more likely to stay outside the fold of church, synagogue or mosque.

More than a decade of national poll results show that in general they are no less religious than baby boomers, and in some respects faith is more important in their lives.

Since generally people tend to become more religious as they age, and more people from Generation X can be expected to return to church as they start families, the findings indicate many young people are not abandoning the faith they grew up with.

"Overall, we must conclude that, popular rhetoric notwithstanding, the prognosis for organized religion generally is quite good," said David W. Machacek, who presented the study on "Generation X and Religion" at a recent meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

Machacek, a graduate student at the University of California, Santa Barbara, reviewed the data on religion, moral and social attitudes gathered from 1983 to 1994 in national polls. The poll data is part of the General Social Surveys collected by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago.

What he found was not a "post-Christian generation," or a generation trying to make sense of "life after God," as some popular essayists have described the first generation raised in a nation without school prayer or other civic accommodations to religion.

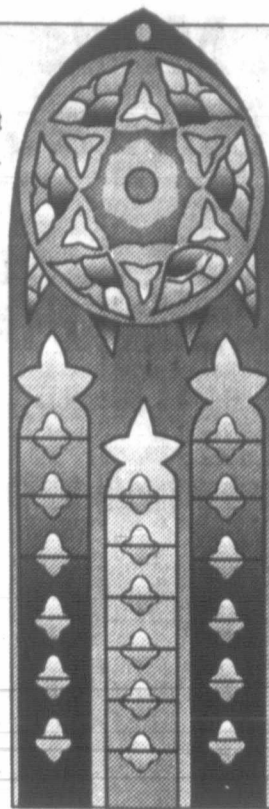

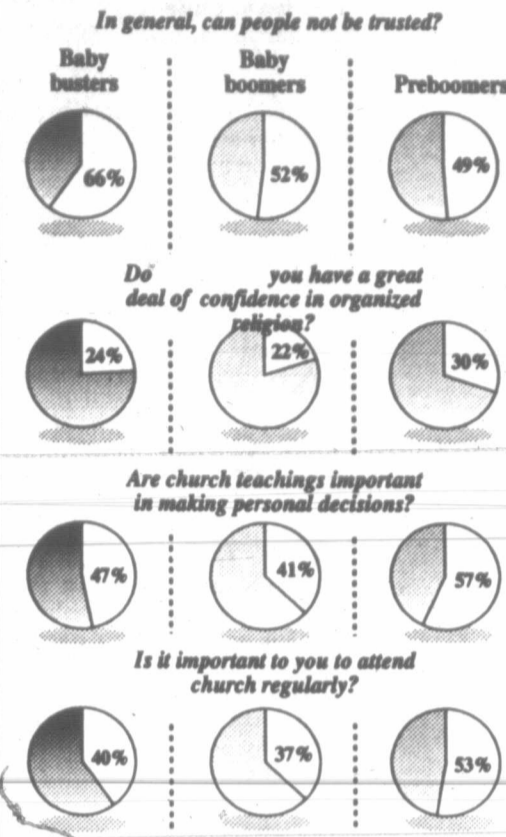

Instead, Machacek said, the baby boomers are a lot like the baby boomers when it comes to religion.

For example, 40 percent of cent of baby boomers who said regular attendance was important.

While it is doubtful Generation X will return to levels of religiosity found among the World War II generation, the prognosis for religion among baby busters is good, according to Machacek.

"Considering that the busters are currently at a stage of the life cycle when interest in religion is typically low, it is possible that we will find signs of recovery ... as they begin to settle down into careers, families and communities," he said. "Overall, the story of religion in Generation X is one of relative stability."

Benton Johnson, a sociologist of religion at the University of Portland in Oregon, said the study findings sound reasonable.

While mainline churches continue to decline among the young, the surveys indicate conservative megachurches and other "new-style" churches are finding ways to reach Generation X, Johnson said.

Machacek said the study shows that churches have to reach out to Generation X to make worship meaningful to them.

"Churches that aren't selling themselves ... are going to end up losing out," he said. "A generation that grew up in a period of intense social change appears to be receptive to religion."

"A religious tradition that says 'we can provide meaning' is attractive," he said.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A man calling himself the devil burst into a Birmingham church and robbed the worshippers, telling the congregation he had killed a man the day before.

"This is a stick-up, and I want all your purses and wallets," witnesses quoted the man as saying. "I'm the devil. I don't like God and God don't like me."

Police said the suspect, McArthur Peake, 29, then told the Wednesday night congregation at the Center Street Baptist that he had killed a convenience store clerk.

"He told God and everybody," said police officer Anthony

Parks. "He told everybody in the church that he did it."

A warrant for Peake's arrest had been issued earlier in the day in connection with the slaying of Frederick Patterson, 43, who was gunned down in an apparent robbery at an Avondale convenience store.

MILLEN, Ga. (AP) — In a show of spiritual and racial unity, volunteers from as far away as California and Washington, D.C., are helping rebuild a black church in Georgia that may have been torched out of racial hatred.

The volunteers gathered this week in east Georgia to begin raising the framework of the tiny Gays Hill Baptist Church, which was destroyed almost a year ago.

They included Republican U.S. Reps. Jack Kingston and Charlie Norwood of Georgia and about a dozen members of their Washington and local staffs.

"I think a lot of people would like to come together along racial lines, but they don't know where to start," said volunteer Doug Tanner of Washington, D.C.'s Faith and Politics Institute.

"In a place like this, you really have the mandate to get down and start understanding each other on a deeper level."

Gays Hill, a 45-member church first built in 1920, burned last March 27 after someone started a fire with gasoline, investigators say.

No arrests have been made.

Calvary Baptist Church plans DivorceCare series

Divorce hurts. There aren't many people who understand the pain in your divorce or separation has caused. To you. Your family. Your friends.

That is why Calvary Baptist Church is offering a seminar called DivorceCare. DivorceCare is a non-denominational series of support groups and seminars led by people who understand what divorced people are experiencing. Most importantly, those who attend will learn how to deal with the pain of the past and look forward to rebuilding their lives.

At DivorceCare, participants will become part of a small support group of people who are also experiencing separation and divorce. By interacting with these people, participants will learn there are others who understand what they are feeling and will be able to offer encouragement.

The 13-week seminar will cover topics such as "What Is Happening to Me?" "Facing Your Anger," "Financial Survival" and much more.

There will be a $10 fee for the workbook. The first lesson will begin on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 6:30 p.m. at the Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd. Child care for all ages will be available at the church.

Miami First Methodist plans special 100th year services

MIAMI — On Sunday, Jan. 19, the First United Methodist Church of Miami opened its year-long program celebrating 100 years of its charter.

Special plans throughout 1997 involve special guest speakers and returning preachers for each monthly "Third Sunday" services and the congregations' noon-day social and covered-dish meal.

That Sunday was the first of the church's Third Sunday services, and Bishop Alfred Norris of Albuquerque, N.M., honored the congregation, bringing the religious sermon and also presiding over the dedication ceremony of the "Designs" building deeded to the church by Georgia Locke before her death in 1993.

Activities and special events will be scheduled each month, said Debbie Rice, publicity chairman for the Miami First United Methodist Church 1997 Centennial Committee.

Each month's programs will be coordinated with events looking back on certain periods of time throughout the 100 years, using background scenes, costumes and music of those early days.

All area persons and past members of the church are welcome to attend programs and services scheduled for the next several months, said Rice.

Returning preachers and special guests tentatively scheduled for the following Third Sunday events include:

Feb. 16, Ted Dotts, with the focus period covering the years 1890 through 1910.

March 16, J.V. Patterson, with the focus period covering the years 1910-1920.

April 20, Layne Boyd, with the focus period covering the years 1920-1930.

May 18, Julius Early, with the focus period covering the years 1930-1940.

June 15, Tommy Ewing, with the focus period covering the years 1940-1950.

July 20, David Black, with the focus period covering the years 1950-1960.

Aug. 17, W. Vernon O'Kelly, with the focus period covering the years 1960-1970.

Donations Made For Others Create Uncharitable Thoughts

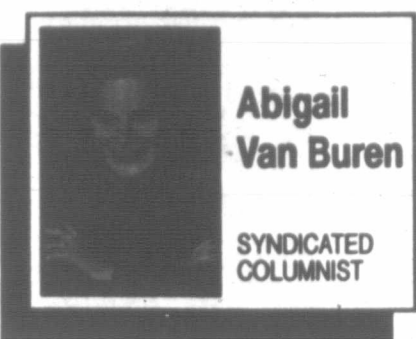

DEAR ABBY: Is there a kind and tactful way to tell a distant relative to stop making donations to his favorite charities in our names? He's a very nice man and we know he means well. Obviously, he has the right to donate to any organization he wants, but he should do it in his own name — not ours.

People who perform this act of kindness may not realize the uneasy position in which they place "fake donors." We feel hypocritical for the beneficiaries thinking we did the good deed, when the money didn't come from us.

Another undesirable side effect of vicarious giving is the glut of requests and junk mail that hound us for months (or years) after the donation. We have our own preferred charities and do not wish to receive requests from organizations we do not support, however worthwhile they may be.

On one occasion when a family member died, a self-appointed philanthropist made a very generous donation to his favorite charity in memory of the deceased, and indicated it came from us. Abby, you can imagine our embarrassment and discomfort when his widow thanked us heartily for our generous gift.

Perhaps a comment in your column to people who give this kind of gift, suggesting that they first ask the donors if they would like to have their names on a donation, would help to curb this practice. Some people may not want to be identified with a particular organization. And I'm sure even fewer will want the junk mail that follows.

Thank you for any suggestions you and your readers might offer.

NO NAME OR LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Tell your relative that you are being inundated with pleas from charities to which he has donated in your name. Stress that you would prefer that he make donations to charities which you support. (That should put a stop to it!) Also, advise the charities that are soliciting you that you want your name removed from their donor lists.

The reason that many people make charitable donations as "gifts" is that such donations are tax-deductible for the giver who has written the check.

DEAR ABBY: My husband joins a group of male friends every now and then for a "guy's day off." They get together for a day of fishing or golfing.

I don't mind this except for one little problem. The organizer invites his daughter's boyfriend to come along with the guys, and she shows up in short-shorts and tags along for the whole day. If the spouses let the men have this day for themselves, why can't the daughter stay home and let her boyfriend have fun without her? She can be with him afterward.

Abby, several of the men and most of the spouses would like to know how to handle this problem.

NO WOMEN ALLOWED IN INDIANA

DEAR NO WOMEN ALLOWED: If one of you will clip this column and hand it to the organizer, the problem should be solved. If not, the guys should talk to the organizer and ask him to tell his daughter that this is strictly a guy thing, so she should make other plans for the day.

PAMPA — Pampa plays Canyon in District 1-4A games tonight in Canyon.

It will be the season's final game for the Lady Harvesters, who are 3-8 in district play and 11-15 for the season.

Canyon's Lady Eagles, the No. 3 ranked girls' team in the nation by U.S.A. Today, is 11-0 in district and 26-0 for the season.

Pampa boys are 4-5 in district and 11-17 for the season. Canyon boys are 8-1 in district and 19-8 for the season.

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Tyrone Hopkins had 24 points and 20 rebounds and No. 6 Central Oklahoma used a 19-0 second-half run to pull away and beat West Texas A&M 89-81 in a Lone Star Conference game Thursday.

The Bronchos avenged a 90-68 loss to West Texas A&M three weeks ago to improve to 18-2 overall, 10-1 in the conference. West Texas A&M is 11-8 and 4-5.

Central Oklahoma got four straight 3-pointers, two of them by Joe Newton, during the 19-0 run that gave the Bronchos a 61-41 lead.

Newton had 21 points. Mike McGhee scored 29 for the Buffaloes.

FOOTBALL

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Kelly's welcome to Buffalo Party 12 years ago included Bills fans standing along the highways, holding signs and waving as his limousine pulled into town.

His final game for the team ended with a concussion and two fumbles on the same play, followed by a ride off the field on a motorized cart to jeers he move out of town.

Today, the only quarterback to start four consecutive Super Bowls planned to announce his retirement. The Bills called a noon EST news conference at Rich Stadium to officially announce what sources have said for a week: Kelly's career is over.

The quarterback's future had been in doubt since the end of the season, and questions about his future intensified last week before the Super Bowl. Kelly had reserved comment until reaching a settlement reportedly worth $1 million with Bills owner Ralph Wilson.

The 11-year NFL veteran started his career with two seasons in the USFL and led the Bills to four consecutive Super Bowl appearances. He leaves without winning the big game. He told family and friends before last Sunday's Super Bowl that his playing days were over.

Kelly doesn't remember the last play of his career. He sustained a concussion after fumbling twice on the same play before he was sacked in a play-off loss to Jacksonville.

Backup Todd Collins will take over the starting job for the Bills next season. The former Michigan star spent two years as Kelly's understudy and won two of three games he started when Kelly was injured last season.

Kelly was a college star at Miami and, with Dan Marino and John Elway, was among six quarterbacks from the Class of 1983 taken in the first round.

He is considered the greatest quarterback in Bills history, having completed 60 percent of his passes for 35,467 yards, 237 touchdowns and 175 interceptions in his career. He turned the franchise around and gave hope to a football town but never achieved the ultimate goal.

Kelly, who will be 37 on Feb. 14, is coming off his worst season since joining Buffalo in 1986. He had a career-low 14 touchdowns passes and a career-high 19 interceptions, including five that were returned for touchdowns last season.

The former All-Pro's skills had been in decline during the past several years. After throwing three interceptions and being sacked seven times this season against Miami, he suggested Collins should take over if the mistakes continued.

It's a rush job at Pro Bowl practice

HONOLULU (AP) — Since the NFL all-stars have a very brief time together before they play the Pro Bowl, Dom Capers and Tom Coughlin appear to be ideally suited to coach the two teams.

After all, Capers needed just two years to turn the expansion Carolina Panthers into a Super Bowl contender, and Coughlin did the same with the Jacksonville Jaguars.

The opposing coaches have had a considerably shorter period to meld a winning team this week.

Both Capers' NFC all-stars and Coughlin's AFC squad worked out for the first time Tuesday, so the teams will have had a total of only five short — two hours or less — practices by kickoff time Sunday at Aloha Stadium.

"We're obviously limited with what we can do," Capers said. "The main thing we try to do is just get everybody on the same page, terminology-wise. The defense is different, of course, because the rules for the Pro Bowl restrict what you can do, don't allow blitzing for instance."

Both he and Coughlin were enjoying their first time as Pro Bowl coaches.

"It's great to be here representing the Jaguars, and to be here rubbing elbows with all these great players," Coughlin said.

Drawing the duty of coaching the Pro Bowl squads is a tribute to how far Capers and Coughlin took their teams in such short spans. The coaches for the all-star game, both the head coaches and their staffs, annually are from the teams that lost in the conference championship games.

So both Capers' Panthers, who won the NFC West title, and Coughlin's Jaguars, a wild-card team in the playoffs, came within just one win of playing in the Super Bowl.

"We're very proud of what we accomplished," Capers said. "We firmly believe we can get to the Super Bowl with hard work and dedication."

Pampa's Hale to be honored by PSHOF

Coach Of The Year should be getting old hat for Harvester's head basketball coach Robert Hale, except that every accolade seems to outshine the previous one in a career in its 11th season at PHS.

The latest recognition comes Sunday at 200 pm at Amarillo Junior College's Ordway Auditorium where Hale will step onto the stage to receive the Panhandle Sports Hall Of Fame award for Coach Of The Year.

Although the PSHOF will honor a coach and an athlete from each sport, Hale's latest Coach Of The Year recognition is a very big deal because it includes all basketball coaches, boys and girls, in every school and college in the Panhandle.

The PSHOF will also honor the 1996 Pampa girl's Cross Country state championship team on Sunday.

Also tops in Panhandle sports for 1996 goes to Pampa basketball. Sunday, the PSHOF will name Rayford Young as the recipient of their "Big Play" award. No athletic achievement ranks as spectacular as Young's flurry of 7 points in the last 1.06 of the Region 1-4A semi-final game to bring Pampa from a 58-52 deficit to a 62-58 win.

Behind Pampa's last ten years of basketball dominance is Robert Hale, who from his arrival in Pampa in 1986 and through the past season has rung up an incredible 253-81 record. In that decade, Hale has led the Harvesters to 8 straight district titles, 3 state finals' visits in Austin, and 7 consecutive trips to the regional finals. This last season culminated in a state championship, which is probably the catalyst that vaulted him to Coach Of The Year winner in the ballot box of the PSHOF.

His court excellence is matched with classroom expertise. In 1975, Coach Hale became a lifetime member of the Texas State Teacher's Association after he was scouted by the University of Texas as an outstanding educator in the classroom.

Recruited by UT Austin that year to enter a masters program in administration, Hale opted to concentrate on coaching, having already earned a masters degree in supervision from TCU.

Hale has a love of coaching basketball that stems from his playing days. Pampans might be shocked to learn that Hale played on the Lubbock High Westemers in 1963, placing second to a district champion Pampa team featuring Randy Matson. Pampa won both games that year, each by 3 points.

Hale went on to play college ball at UT Arlington, where as in high school, his coach asked him to be team captain. Hale, who talks "play hard" to his Harvesters was the epitome of Play Hard in college. As a junior he severed the lead muscle in his right thigh, kept playing that game, and had such a positive attitude that he came back to start as a senior despite what was considered a career ending injury.

Since coming to Pampa in the fall of 1986, Coach Hale has received a string of awards that just might outshine every other coach in the state.

In April, we reported Hale had been chosen by the TABC (Texas Association Of Basketball Coaches) as Coach Of The Year for 1996 among all coaches in the state, 1-A to 5-A. Texas Sportswriters also voted him the 1996 Coach Of The Year among all 4-AAAA basketball coaches.

Checking our files, we see that other accolades that have placed Hale as one of the greatest high school coaches in Texas. In 1992, he was selected by the THSCA (Texas High School Coaches Association) as one of the two coaches from all districts — in the state for this high honor. The game took place at SMU in Dallas.

In 1993, he was chosen by the TABC as one of four coaches in the state to coach the two East/West All Star games. This was only the second year a high school coach could be selected, and the TABC picked the three most winning coaches in Texas history (all legendary with more than 3000 total wins), plus our own Robert Hale. He is held in very high regard in the big population centers of the state. Literally every coach knows him or knows of him.

In 1995, the THSCA appointed Hale as an Advisory Board member, a high honor because each person serves one three year term and can only be chosen once in a lifetime.

Hale is in high demand as a speaker around the state at many basketball clinics. Four years ago, the TCU coach asked Robert to come down to their camp and teach players how to shoot free throws. Other awards are too numerous to mention, and we haven't researched the plethora of accolades Hale received before joining PHS. (One was Coach Of The Year for the Fellowship Of Christian Athletes, we understand.)

Pampans are encouraged to come to Ordway Auditorium and see a teacher who has invested his life in helping others receive a well deserved award as Coach Of The Year from the very prestigious Panhandle Sports Hall Of Fame.

Woods, Costner steal the show at star-laden Pebble Beach Pro-Am

By RON SIRAK
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — With so much sensational golf and so many big names on the leader board after the first round, why was all the talk about a couple of guys not among the leaders?

Because they were named Tiger Woods and Kevin Costner. It was simply the sexiest, sassiest, most compelling matchup in the 60-year history of the celebrity-laden event.

Jesper Parnevik birdied seven of the last 11 holes and David Duval closed with four straight birdies Thursday to tie for the lead at 7-under-par 65 at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

British Open champion Tom Lehman shot a 66. Masters champion Nick Faldo and PGA Championship winner Mark Brooks both shot 67.

All were overshadowed by the Woods-Costner pairing.

This tournament has seen stars before, but it never saw anything like this. The leading draw on the PGA Tour and the leading man of "Tin Cup" were a two-man sideshow followed by a U.S. Open-like gallery that was a dozen deep around some tees and greens.

"It's huge," PGA Tour tournament director Arvin Ginn said about the galleries. And tournament officials said it was the largest Thursday crowd ever in the event first played in 1937, but gave no specific numbers.

Pity the poor guys who had to play with Woods and Costner — in this case Steve Stricker and former "Today" host Bryant Gumbel. They had to endure thousands of fans and dozens of photographers who chatted, clicked, rattled and chuckled when the two glory boys weren't hitting.

Ginn admitted that gallery control and "protecting the rights of the other players" was a concern.

The party atmosphere around Woods and Costner made it seem almost like the scores didn't matter.

"I was down on Poppy and I could hear the crowd at Spyglass," Lehman said about the course where Woods and Costner were playing. "And that's like, what, five miles away?"

Woods and Costner — a 15 handicap — combined to shoot an 8-under-par 64 — four back in the team competition.

In the pro tournament, Woods shot a 70 at Spyglass Hills and trailed Parnevik and Duval by five strokes.

Costner was relaxed, joking with the galleries, kissing a baby coming off one green, tossing golf balls to the crowd and stopping to pose for a picture as he walked to one tee.

Good golf will relax you like that.

"I'm hitting it better than I was three days ago," Costner said as he walked to the fourth green. "You pick up a lot playing with these guys."

Costner crushed his drive on No. 9 and whooped "Go baby" as it split the fairway.

While Costner was playing well and enjoying the atmosphere — he made four pars in a row on one stretch — Woods was not at his best and at times was distracted by the constant movement in the gallery and the click of cameras. This is the only PGA Tour event where spectators are allowed to have cameras on the course during competition.

Several times he backed off shots and after both of his three-putt greens on the front nine Woods slammed his putter on the ground, yelled at himself and stared at a specific spot in the gallery.

Woods' best shot of the day came on No. 8 when he drove into the left rough, giving him a lie with the ball way below his feet. He also had two trees blocking his line to the green.

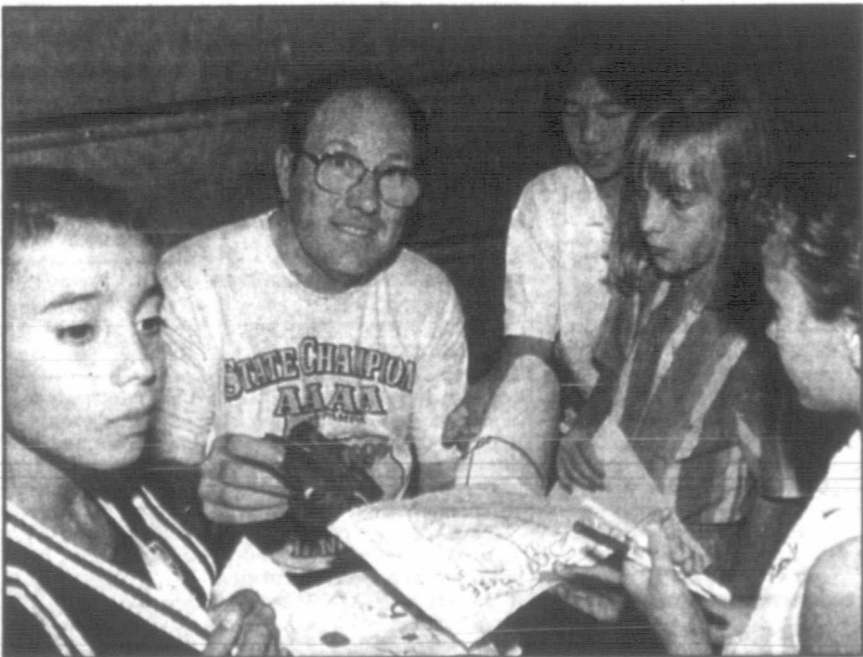

"Not a lie to work off of," Woods said to his caddie, Mike "Fluff" Cowan. "Think this ball is going to have to hook a little bit?"

He then hit a 7-iron from 179 yards that started out about 15 yards right of the green and then hooked back for the flag like a homing pigeon returning to roost and plopped down 15 feet from the hole.

"One of the best I've ever seen, is all," Cowan said about Wood's shot.

Woods then rolled in the birdie putt to complete the incredible sequence.

DIVOTS: Tiger Woods sported just the bare outline of a mustache and goatee. It wasn't clear if he was growing something or just missed a couple of spots shaving. ... All three courses — Poppy Hills, Spyglass and Pebble Beach, were still soaked from weeks of rain, and the players were allowed to lift their ball, clean off the mud and replace it, even in the rough. ... Parnevik, known for the upturned bill of his hat, now has SAP America written on the underside of it instead of Titleist.

No. 21 Hurricanes overcome SMU

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Shea Seals needed 17 shots to score 14 points against Southern Methodist. Some of his Tulsa teammates weren't far behind.

The No. 21 Golden Hurricane went 7-for-31 from 3-point range Thursday night — Seals was 1-of-10 — and survived a dismal first half to win 69-49.

"I heard more clanks in the first half than I want to hear for a long, long time," said coach Steve Robinson, whose team missed 16 of its 19 3-point tries in the first half. "I thought we did a good job in the second half of getting the shots we wanted instead of the shots they wanted us to take."

One Tulsa player immune from the shooting blues was reserve guard Adrian Crawford. He made all five of his shots, including four 3-pointers, and scored a career-high 14 points.

The Golden Hurricane, coming off a 26-point loss to No. 4 Utah on Monday, went 10-of-28 from the field in the first half and only led by a point.

The shots finally started falling in the second half. A 16-4 run just after the break helped carry Tulsa (16-5, 6-1 Western Athletic Conference) to the victory.

"They (the Mustangs) came out in that zone and did a good job," Robinson said. "We just kept firing. We got decent shots, we just didn't make any."

Seals hit consecutive jumpers in the run big second-half run, the first of which pushed him over 2,000 points for his career.

Crawford contributed two 3-pointers and Coley scored six consecutive points on nice inside moves as Tulsa rolled to a 55-35 lead and then coasted.

OHIO STATE SHOCKS 17TH-RANKED INDIANA

By The Associated Press

A win over Indiana is special for Ohio State anytime. This one, though, had extra meaning for the Buckeyes.

Ohio State, playing with its second leading scorer sidelined with heart problems and amid speculation about coach Randy Ayers' future, stopped a four-game losing streak Thursday night with a 73-67 victory over the No. 17 Hoosiers at Columbus.

Damon Stringer scored 18 points, including four free throws in the final 21 seconds, as Ohio State — coming off a 31-point loss to Northwestern — ended a four-game losing skid against the Hoosiers (17-5 overall, 4-4 Big Ten).

Neshaun Coleman added 15 points, Shaun Stonerock 14, Otis Winston 11 and Jason Singleton 10 for Ohio State, which was missing starting center Jermaine Tate.

Tate, the team's second-leading scorer at 14.1 points a game, is undergoing tests after complaining of heart palpitations.

Following the win, Ayers' emotions were tempered by concern for his player's condition.

"It's still going to be a tough week until we get Jermaine's situation resolved," Ayers said.

Elsewhere in the AP Top 25, it was No. 4 Utah 74, Texas-El Paso 51; No. 7 Clemson 70, Georgia Tech 57; No. 9 Louisville 81, No. 8 Cincinnati 70; No. 10 Arizona 78, Washington State 78; No. 21 Tulsa 69, Southern Methodist 49; and No. 24 Marquette 71, South Florida 36.

Indiana coach Bobby Knight praised the Buckeyes' effort.

"Ohio State had a challenge to play without the kid who has played well for them and we had a challenge to rise to the occasion," Knight said. "We didn't, and that was the story of the game."

Neil Reed scored 19 points, A.J. Guyton had 14 — 11 in the first half — and Charlie Miller 11 for Indiana (17-5, 4-4).

Ohio State used an 8-0 run midway through the second half to open a 54-47 lead.

Indiana, 0-4 in Big Ten games when trailing at halftime, closed within three points twice in the final minute, but each time Stringer followed by hitting free throws.

"It was gut-check time," Stringer said. "We know the effort we have to give for 40 minutes."

Finch to resign at Memphis victories a season, will resign at the end of the season.

The announcement, made Thursday night by Finch and the university, came after several days of reports that the university was negotiating to buy out the final three years on Finch's contract.

"Right now this is an emotional time for me, and any statement I make will be forthcoming," Finch, 45, said following a 68-54 win over Southern Mississippi, No. 4 Utah 74, Texas-El Paso 51.

Keith Van Horn, plagued with foul trouble and held without a point in the first half, keyed a second-half run to lead the Utes (15-2, 7-0 Western Athletic Conference) at El Paso.

Van Horn scored 11 of his 13 points in a decisive 15-2 run that gave the Utes a 24-point advantage with less than five minutes remaining.

Michael Doleac led the Utes with 15 points, and Drew Hansen added 14.

UTEP fell to 8-9, 2-6.

No. 7 Clemson 70, Georgia Tech 57

At Clemson, S.C., Terrell McIntyre scored 14 of his 17 points in the second half as the Tigers snapped their two-game ACC losing streak.

Greg Buckner scored 17 points and Merl Code 14 for Clemson (17-3, 6-2 ACC), which rose to No. 2 nationally before losing to Wake Forest and North Carolina last week.

Matt Harpring scored 22 points to lead the Yellow Jackets (8-10, 2-6).

No. 10 Arizona 87, Washington State 78

At Pullman, Wash., Michael Dickerson scored 28 points and the Wildcats (13-4, 6-2 Pac-10) beat the Cougars for the 23rd straight time.

Washington State (10-9, 2-6) closed to 83-76 when Isaac Fontaine hit a pair of free throws with 45 seconds remaining.

Arizona's Miles Simon hit four of six free throws in the final seconds to put the game out of reach.

Fontaine scored 32 points and Carlos Daniel added 17 and a game-high 10 rebounds for WSU.

No. 9 Louisville 81, No. 8 Cincinnati 70

At Louisville, Eric Johnson scored 10 points during a 20-5 run that sparked the Cardinals (18-2, 5-1) in the rugged Conference USA matchup.

Louisville made 34 of 45 free throws as Cincinnati committed a season-high 34 fouls.

Cincinnati (14-4, 3-1) also turned the ball over 22 times, leading to 18 points for Louisville.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP)

— Jim Kelly will end an 11-year NFL career that includes four straight Super Bowl appearances today.

The 36-year-old quarterback and owner Ralph Wilson have reportedly been working on a $1 million compensation deal. Kelly will announce his retirement during a news conference at the team's practice facility.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)

— Center Jesse Sapoku, a member of four Super Bowl winning teams in his 14 years with the San Francisco 49ers, is recovering from open-heart surgery in which doctors repaired a leaking valve.

LARCHMONT, N.Y. (AP)

— Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers and two-time Outland Trophy recipient Dave Rimmington head a group of 12 players elected to the College Football Hall of Fame.

Rogers won the Heisman as a running back for South Carolina in 1980, while Rimmington won the Outland as a Nebraska center in 1980-81.

HORSE RACING

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)

— Roythelstone, winner of the $60,000-added Hot Springs last year at Oaklawn Park, may be favored Saturday in the $60,000-added King Cotton.

Roythelstone drew the outside in the field of nine for the 1/2-mile race.

Owned by Roy Davis and trained by Kerry Smith, Roythelstone has not raced since he was third in the $150,000 Arlington Breeders' Cup Sprint at Arlington International last August. He has won 12 of 23 starts and has earned more than $232,000.

Roythelstone will carry 112 pounds, including Robby Albarado.

Highland, owned by Gerald Dixon and trained by Chuck Turco, is extremely quick from the gate and may be difficult to catch. In his last start, Highland won the $60,000 Oklahoma Classic Sprint Nov. 3.

Turco said Highland ran the first quarter mile in :21 1-5 and the half mile in :43 1-5. "But it looked like they'd send a rabbit and I'd left it up to Tim (Doocy) and he went on and won so everything turned out all right," Turco said.

"I've never had a horse that could go 21 1-5 before. In fact, I've never heard of one."

Highland lost three of four starts last autumn at Remington Park but was a disappointment at Arlington. "He just didn't like Arlington," Turco said. "He didn't like the track, he didn't like the atmosphere, he didn't like the noise. Nothing helps a horse like peace and quiet."

Doocy will again ride Highland, who carries 118.

Also in the field are My My (118), Dabland Gambler (115), Calixtus (115), Moro Oro (118), One Sailor (112), Quikote's Luck (112) and Bold Comic (112).

Congressman Frank Tejeda dies at age fifty-one

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Frank Tejeda, a decorated Vietnam veteran who dedicated much of his congressional tenure to assisting the military and its veterans, has died. He was 51.

The San Antonio Democrat, who first came to Congress in 1993, died Thursday night at his home, surrounded by family. He had battled a malignant brain tumor since September 1995, undergoing surgery, radiation and chemotherapy treatments.

He died of pneumonia, a complication from treatments that made him vulnerable to infection, his Washington office said.

While most of the tumor was removed during surgery in 1995, it reappeared a year later. Although the disease had robbed him of much of his speaking ability by late 1996, Tejeda refused to bow to the illness.

"I'll do my best to recuperate quickly and join my colleagues in the House chamber," he said earlier this month when he revealed the tumor's recurrence. "The Marine in me intends to attack this thing with full vigor."

Colleagues mourned his death. "Texas has lost a patriot and I have lost a friend," said U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, who teamed frequently with Tejeda on behalf of San Antonio defense interests.

Raised in San Antonio's hard-scrabble South Side, Tejeda enlisted in the Marines in 1963 after dropping out of high school at 17. One of the youngest staff non-commissioned officers in Corps history, Tejeda earned a Bronze Star and Purple Heart during his four year tour of duty in Vietnam.

"I was a grunt, and proud of it," he once told Roll Call, a publication that covers Congress.

It was while serving in the military that Tejeda earned a high school equivalency certificate, paving the way for later academic successes.
