Great Britain and the United States had been assured that France would not take such action, regardless of Japan's moves.

It was stated France was happy at Japan's denouncement, hoping France might get a better ratio in possible new treaties.

H. H. Hardin Lumber Co. Receives Large, Tall Pine Christmas Tree

A Christmas tree, the likes of which many Big Spring people have never seen, was shipped to the Hardin Lumber Co. Thursday from a Louisiana mill.

The tree is a long-leaved yellow pine, and came with an order of long-leaved pine from Urania, La. The tree was tucked into the car as a Christmas gift to West Texas and was included on the bill of lading as a small pine. To the average West Texas child it will seem like a very big tree. It is about 13 feet high.

L. W. Croft, manager of Hardin Lumber Co., has given the tree to the First Baptist church, to be used in its Christmas exercises.

The tree will be moved Saturday to the basement of the First Baptist Church and decorated for Christmas. People who have never seen a long-leaved pine may see there the kind of tree that Louisiana children expect Santa to hang their gifts on.

Arthur Wilson Reported Ill

EL PASO—The threat of pneumonia hung heavily Thursday over Arthur C. Wilson, convicted slayer of Mrs. Irene DeBolt, who was taken from his county jail cell to the jail hospital ward with a high fever and racking cough, but apparently had been averted late Thursday night.

"He was on the verge of pneumonia," said Dr. J. W. Tappan, assistant city-county health officer who attended Wilson, "but he seems to be pulling out of it. His fever is much less and the cough seems some better."

Jailers said Wilson had been suffering from a cold for some time, but his condition did not seem serious until Thursday morning, when the fever gripped his body rose alarmingly. He was then removed to the hospital ward.

Dr. Tappan said Wilson should recover readily unless complications set in.

Postoffice To Remain Open All Day Saturday

Press of Christmas business will keep the post office open here all day Saturday. Customarily the office closes at 1 p. m. on Saturday.

All trains into Big Spring, and especially those from the east, were running from one to three hours late this week as Christmas business piled up.

The post office here was jammed with packages, as many going out of the city as were being shipped in.

"We want to thank the public in general for the splendid cooperation given us in shopping and mailing early," said Postmaster Nat Shick Friday.

Meanwhile D. E. Bigony and A. A. Porter were kept exceptionally busy at the parcel post window weighing and stamping packages. Thus far they have been able to prevent an unduly long waiting line from forming.

WASHINGTON GEORGE DURNO Raincheck

Political advisers have been arguing with President Roosevelt against the idea of a "fireside" radio talk with the country in advance of the opening of congress. Reasons are varied but the conclusions are identical. They are urging that the annual message to congress be the President's next big blast.

The radio talk tentatively had been set for Sunday night. As that is written, chances are that it will be passed up.

If the President waits, as expected, it will be no indication he has backed down from his purposes in any respect. He is determined that TVA's cheap power experiment in the Tennessee Valley shall be extended to every other section of the country if the private companies fail to reduce their rates to fit the TVA yardstick. He wasn't fooling a bit when he made his Tupelo, Miss., speech.

Federal Housing Administrator Moffett would like to have the President go on the air and give his home-building drive a little impetus but FDR hardly could devote a whole speech to that subject.

The idea of the fireside chats has been made the infrequent and so important that everybody will stay home to listen in. Publicity-minded New Dealers don't want to get out from their apartment to go to the office to see the sign-off of the coming message to congress—which apparently is going to be hot stuff.

Howl—

Tariff trade agreements are under negotiation with Switzerland and the Netherlands, including Netherlands East and West Indies. Concessions in imports of fuel oil and gasoline are looked for in the case of Netherlands-West Indies. Practically all tariff agreements aim to increase American farm exports while granting concessions on imports of manufactured goods. Secretary Wallace seems to be at least as Secretary Hull in favoring new agreements.

Protected manufacturers are beginning to take notice. Officials of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce says: "Protected industries are lying back after filing protests against tariff cuts affecting them. The howl will come when an agreement is made with some important manufacturing nation, like Belgium. The deal with Belgium is about to go through."

Division—

Sliverites and inflationists are planning to take the administration around a few curves when congress meets—unless the White House beats them to the punch and does some voluntary inflating in the few days remaining.

A good scrap is in prospect because New Deal financial realties have just about decided there is no immediate need for additional currency tinkering. The international situation is such we would not benefit, they report, and the people are in a spending mood which makes it easy to run up the public debt to permit more pump-priming.

Union—

Hidden hands are maneuvering to consolidate the inflationary forces. One of them, believe it or not, is Henry Ford. The flivver king is said on reputable authority to be (CONTINUED ON PAGE 7)

7 MILLION FARM INCOME SEEN AS IMPORTANT AID FOR ECONOMIC RECOVERY

By FRANK R. CARNEY
President, Chicago Board of Trade

CHICAGO, (17)—Seven dollars are being in the pockets of the American farmer than any time in several years.

This is reflected in greater buying power. Lines of business that sell to the farmer are recording increased volume. Such increases mean more employment—a paramount aid to economic recovery.

From income, in its exact, is one billion dollars greater than the preceding year. The total income is placed at seven billion dollars by the government. The extra billion, at this stage of recovery, should prove an immense incentive in the drive back to normal times. Measured in buying power at current price levels, its importance is somewhat arresting.

Thousands of indebted farmers have been able to meet their obligations. Both farmers and mortgage holders are heartened by the bright ray of hope now penetrating the gloom of depression. That the farm has come for the farmer is shown in sales of mail order firms, equipment houses, wholesalers and retailers. The rather definite gains are apparent for the first time in several years.

Grain and cotton prices are higher. The return from butter and eggs, the important farm items, is well above that of a year ago.

Five stock prices are substantially above last year, and returns are larger in dollars than last year.

Some able crop experts feel that a cycle of over-production in wheat has been passed and that a cycle of short or normal wheat crops has been entered. If true, this would aid in a return of prosperity to the grain farmer. Such prosperity would be doubly assured if we carry out our hope of restoring foreign markets for American surplus, markets lost through the price-pegging experiment of the late Farm Board. This experiment brought retaliatory measures by France and other countries through the raising of tariffs and like steps harmful to wheat growers of this country.

Up to that time private trade had always distributed the American wheat surplus expeditiously and at good price levels. Political tampering with markets always proves disastrous to the farmer. For that reason the incoming study to any new measures having influence upon the machinery for distributing grain.

Receipts and shipments of flour and grain, January 1 to December 1, 1934, compared with same period last year, are as follows:

Receipts		Shipments
1934	1933	1934	1933
Flour..... 8,290,000 Bbls.	8,256,000	Flour..... 5,621,000 Bbls.	4,599,000
Wheat..... 22,398,000 Bu.	12,973,000	Wheat..... 17,393,000 Bu.	15,493,000
Corn..... 52,964,000 Bu.	58,923,000	Corn..... 38,108,000 Bu.	49,347,000
Oats..... 13,751,000 Bu.	20,496,000	Oats..... 12,515,000 Bu.	16,916,000
Rye..... 8,714,000 Bu.	6,633,000	Rye..... 4,544,000 Bu.	1,544,000
Barley..... 9,714,000 Bu.	8,244,000	Barley..... 2,092,000 Bu.	1,350,000

Wheat prices have been held down in this country by the somewhat tattered foreign situation. France, dumped part of her surplus on the world market as a stimulant to her disastrous price-fixing scheme. Argentina showed slight disposition in feverishly disposing of her remaining old crop.

But in face of surprisingly low Liverpool prices our prices hold well, simply because of the inevitable shortage that exists. Our combined crops of wheat, corn and oats this year were little larger than a normal crop.

The shortage of cereals in general cannot be overcome this year except by high prices, which will

The Political Anvil

In a tremendous build-up of argument for a state sales tax by interested people before the senate tax survey group, it is being made increasingly clear that an objective is to offset every call for new relief financing—specifically the proposed $40,000,000 bond issue—with the requirement that it shall be paid off through sales tax levies.

Both open and covert advocates of the "tax on poverty" have left the hint that relief expenditures are of a different order from ordinary state governmental costs, in that the benefits flow to people who do not otherwise pay much taxes, and therefore creates an obligation upon these beneficiaries of the government to pay back something if its support.

Dr. Jack Johnson of Denton, opponent of the sales tax principle, answered this argument in that if there is to be a drawback, ultimately, the grant must include the return, so that the governing agency is no better off.

It is too early for anyone to forecast definitely the tax-on-poverty of the next session. Several senators lean strongly toward the sales tax, but can do all sorts of things to say that reaches it.

Conclusions of opinion may reach pretty close to the final outcome; but on that basis some observers see this sort of situation:

1. The house will accept no general sales tax system for support of state government. The incoming governor would veto such a bill.
2. A constitutional amendment resolution, for relief bonds or otherwise, is not subject to executive veto. Any extensive relief financing by bonds or work-creation appropriations, will call for specific means of paying the bill, although the obligation probably will be laid against all state revenue. It is probable the sales tax plan would not much further along in support of an extensive relief bond issue or relief financing program, than in any other relation.
3. If embodied in a constitutional amendment based on the stress of necessity for relief financing, such an amendment may achieve submission. If so, it would be on the basis that lawmakers allow the voters to pass on the policy of a sales tax, and with a time limitation upon its levy. But if voters turned down such an amendment, the legislature would have the task again without further remedy than subsequent legislation under present constitutional authority.

The sales tax agitation, both in purpose and in scope, originally was rather adroitly masked, but as the senate committee pushed through to a focus upon conflicting proposals, it was sketched in at least to distinct outline.

There have been groups and interests actively fighting for it, a "one time, back earlier even than the Ferguson administration offered the severest sales tax plan yet proposed. Some of them have been so frank, and some so utterly dishonest and economically selfish about it that their efforts have had little result. Others have immensely selfish and diplomatic.

Small home owners have been given relief in the home-ownership amendment. The underlying motive and driving force of the sales tax campaign has been disclosed as the effort to relieve larger property of taxation. This was most frankly disclosed by Vance Mease, on behalf of the Texas Tax Relief association that "we stand for a consumer's tax to reduce all property taxes—for shifting taxes from property to needs." Mr. Mease insisted every dollar of sales tax revenues go to reduce present property taxes, and not to be cumulative.

Trend of events in an accumulating state deficit, constant school forces for more money, formidable organization to prevent nickel each to help do their part in raising funds for the association.

The money raised through the sale of the Seals goes to the support of the county, state and national organizations and used only in the fight against tuberculosis. Howard county victims depend on the funds from the seal sales this year.

Along with the urgings to follow this course are offered the blandishments that "it is the most painless of all taxes;" and the persuasive theory that "it amounts to only a few cents at a time—it is invisible;" and the third contention, "it spreads taxation more widely, recovers something that those now getting a free ride, a part of it comes from special beneficiaries of government generosity or bounty."

Mail Checks For Christmas Seals, Officials Urge

Holiday shopping is not finished until checks are mailed for Christmas seals, reminded the officers of the Howard County Tuberculosis Association. They say: In the hurry of holiday preparations it is easy to delay in sending a check for the stamps, but it is not yet too late.

Christmas seals on packages and letters indicate one's active interest in saving human lives and overcoming tuberculosis, and in the best of good taste. The association wants them used generously. Their cost is trifling, their good far reaching.

The sale of these seals is the only source of revenue for the Howard County Tuberculosis association, which carries on a continuous preventive campaign and treatment of the disease in this county.

Approximately one thousand postal cards were mailed to individuals Thursday asking them to use the seals on their holiday packages and letters, with a gentle reminder that if the money had not already been sent the association would appreciate receiving it before Christmas. School children have been selling the double-barred red bangles for a

Suggestions FOR THE CHRISTMAS FEAST

Menus Of The Day

Save Spinach Stock
The stock left from cooked spinach should be saved and used in vegetable soup. It contains valuable food properties.

Here's Measuring Aid
For expediency and accuracy help why not make up a list of measurements and fasten it up in the kitchen so that it will be before you when you need it? Here are some suggested items to put on such a list:

4 gills equal 1 pint
2 pints equal 1 quart
Four quarts equal 1 gallon
5 quarts equal 1 peck
Four pecks equal 1 bushel
A gallon of water is equal to 8 1/2 pounds in weight.
1 pint of water or milk is equal to a pound.
2 1/2 cups of powdered sugar are equal to 1 pound.
2 cups of granulated sugar are equal to 1 pound.
4 cups of flour are equal to 1 quart or 1 pound.
2 cups of butter are equal to 1

Lemon Juice On Avocado
Lemon juice sprinkled over avocado pear salad just before it is served improves the flavor.

Scissors In The Kitchen
Use scissors, dipped in cold water, when cutting marshmallows, dates or figs for the pudding, cake or cookies you are about to make. Scissors are also useful in cutting string beans, and string beans should be cut diagonally if they are not to take too long to cook.

Unbroken Poached Eggs
To poach eggs so that they will not "break," break eggs one at a time into shallow dish and slip easily into slowly boiling salted water. When all eggs are in pan, cover and turn off fire or place on back of stove. Let stand until white film forms over tops and then carefully, with aid of wide spatula or pancake turner, remove to serving platter.

Use Tomato Juice
Canned tomato juice can be used to place of water when making vegetable gelatin salad.

A spring of holly or bit of mistletoe along with nuts, candied fruits and plenty of spice can transform even the humblest cookie into a Christmas gift of enchantment. Baskets or boxes "filled to overflowing" with these sweets impart the old Yuletide spirit and make most acceptable remembrances for family and friends. Candy and cookie jars for home use should be well stocked to witness the extra strain made upon them during this time.

"Do Your Christmas Cooking Early" is an excellent slogan. The whole family can assist in cookery preparations which mark the real beginning of the holiday season.

Lots of Turkeys and Chickens

I did not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

CHAPTER 17
IMPORTANT DATE

"There's one objection," I said. "If Sir William knew Osborne why didn't he come forward and give evidence at the trial?"

"He probably had very good reasons," returned Jerry. "These big financial bugs aren't like ordinary human beings. I don't suppose he'd raise a finger to stop you being hanged unless it happened to suit his own book." He stared at the letter again for a moment and then glanced at his watch. "Have you rung him up?" he demanded.

I shook my head. "Not yet. I was only just finishing breakfast when you came and one can't telephone with one's mouth full of omelet."

"Well, you get on to him straight away. He's sure to be at his office by now. Tell him that you've got his note and fix up an appointment with him as soon as you can."

As a result of our frequent sailing trips together, I have developed the bad habit of obeying Jerry's orders almost instinctively. Making my way upstairs to the bedroom I took off the receiver and having consulted the letter which I had brought with me, asked for City 3037. In a few moments I heard a brisk voice at the other end.

"Hello! Avon and Sons."

"My name's Trench," I said. "I should like to speak to Sir William Avon with reference to a note which I received from him last night."

"Will you hold on, please?"

A brief silence followed.

"Hello! Is that Mr. Nicholas Trench?"

"It is," I admitted.

"Sir William Avon's private secretary speaking. I am afraid Sir William is out of town today. He has had to go to Birmingham on important business, but he hopes to be back some time this evening. He left instructions that if you rang up, I was to ask you whether you could lunch with him tomorrow at the Park View Hotel in Piccadilly."

"I shall be delighted to," I said.

"Good! That's settled then. One-fifteen tomorrow, Park View Hotel, Piccadilly. When you arrive, will you please ask for Sir William's private suite?"

"I will," I said.

"Thank you. Good-bye."

"Good-bye."

"Crisp and to the point," I observed, as I descended the staircase, whatever they do at Trehan House they certainly waste no time.

"What did he say?" demanded Jerry.

I repeated the conversation, and at the end of it he nodded.

"So much the better. Give us a chance to look round and make our arrangements. You must both clear out of this—that's obvious."

"It's not obvious to me," I protested. "Why should I be driven from home by a couple of comic Dagobets?"

"Because if you stop here," said Jerry placidly, "they'll probably cut your throat."

"I think he's right," intervened Molly. "They've made up their minds that you've got the formula, and Dimitri is the kind of man who will stop at nothing." She paused. "I've a feeling inside me that the other one is even more dangerous."

"Sensible girl," remarked Jerry approvingly. He turned to me. "You're coming back to Whitehall Court and you're going to stay at the flat until this business is worked out. You'll be quite safe there with George and Dawson to look after you."

"But what about Molly?" I asked.

"That's a rather more difficult question." He eyed her for a moment thoughtfully. "You won't mind my asking, he said, 'but how are you off with regard to money?' 'I've quite a lot,' she replied. 'Father left me nearly thirty thousand dollars.'"

"Well, in that case, if you don't mind being extravagant for a week or so, I think the best thing you could do would be to take a room at the Milan Hotel. It will cost you about a pound a day but it will be well worth the expense. You see, those beauties are probably watching the studio and after what's happened they're not likely to let you out of their sight. They may even have guessed who you are. If you were by yourself in a small flat or anything of that sort, it would be quite easy for them to roll up and make themselves unpleasant. In a big public place like the Milan you'll be as right as rain."

"It sounds a very good plan," she hesitated. "I suppose I shall be able to see something of—of you two?"

"Why, of course. That's the idea. My flat's only a few minutes away."

"You'll see lots of me," I assured her. "As a fellow director of the A. D. Syndicate I shall need frequent consultations."

"Why shouldn't we push off as soon as we're ready?" suggested Jerry. "I've got the car outside. It will take you both a little while to pack your things and by the time we've got them there and fixed up the room, we shall all be ripe for a spot of grub. After two months of yacht cooking I can do with a decent meal."

Molly jumped up. "I'll go along now," she said. "A quarter of an hour will be plenty for me."

I rose, too. "I'll come with you and see that it's all right you might walk in and find Mr. Stellman crouching behind the coal box."

"Shout to me if he is," said Jerry. "I love a little exercise before lunch: it improves my appetite."

I nodded towards the table. "In that case," I said, "you can wash up the breakfast things."

I had never yet been inside the adjoining studio, but when Molly opened the door and I followed her in, I discovered that it was practically a duplicate of mine. It looked perhaps a shade larger owing to the absence of furniture. Except for a rug, a table and a couple of chairs, the place was empty; its depressing effect being further heightened by the fact that the big north window had apparently not been cleaned since the departure of its previous tenant.

"I haven't bothered about making a comfortable," explained Molly. "I didn't know how long I was going to be here, so I just ordered in what I wanted from one of those installment shops."

"It's not exactly an ideal place for hiding in," I observed. "Still, now I'm here, I'd better have a look round."

I peered first into the kitchen, and then, mounting the stairs, made a brief examination of the bathroom and the bedroom. In each case I drew a comforting blank.

"All clear," I announced as I rejoined Molly in the studio. "If you're not afraid of being left alone actors—they never get up until the pubs are open." I paused. "What do you think of Jerry?" I inquired.

"He's a dear," she said promptly. "I never knew English baronet were like that. I thought they all wore eyeglasses."

"That's only in the films," I explained. "In real life they're practically harmless." I took out the revolver and laid it on the table. "You may as well have this back," I said. "I shall feel more comfortable if I know you've got it with you."

When I got back to my own quarters I found Jerry still lounging in the same attitude. He was puffing away meditatively at his pipe, and had apparently made no attempt to carry out my parting suggestion.

"Can't see anyone about," I remarked, "but that doesn't mean that we're not watched. I wouldn't mind betting that they've got the number of your car already."

"More than likely, I should say," he stretched himself luxuriously. "You don't know how grateful I feel to you, Nick. I hadn't a notion what to do with myself the next few weeks, and this little business will fill to the time slowly. By the way, I'm rather taken with that girl of yours—she's extremely pretty."

"Not precisely the word I should have used," I said, "but I entirely agree with the sentiment."

"I wonder whether she likes me?"

"She says you're 'a dear', but she seems a little disappointed because you haven't got an eyeglass."

"I'll wear two if it will give her any pleasure." He jerked his head towards the bedroom. "Now you shove along and collect your traps."

Winnipeg Views Monster

WINNIPEG, Man. (UP)—A 65-year-old prehistoric monster, a relic of the days when semi-tropical waters covered most of Manitoba with their ooze, has been placed on exhibition at the museum here. The skeleton of the reptile was found on the banks of the Assiniboine River near Treherne in 1932. It is 30 feet long and resembles a huge lizard. It took museum workers 18 months to assemble the bones.

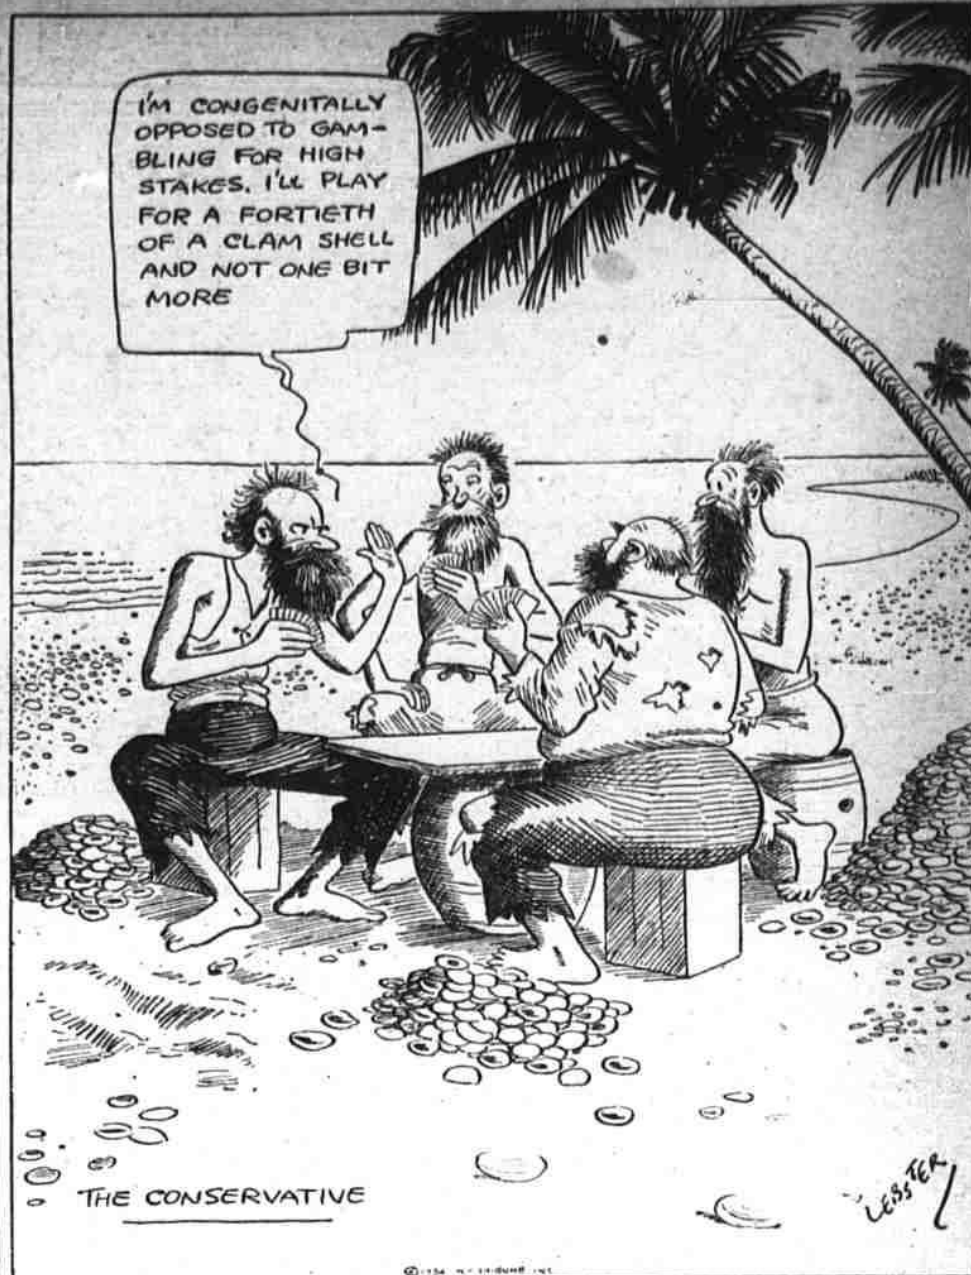

BELOIT, Wis. (UP)—Earth worms get along better without heads than with new ones, Dr. Carl Welby, head of the Beloit College zoology department, reported after an experiment. The worms learned to go through a routine after hundreds of attempts by trial and error. They continued to perform the routine after their heads were cut off. When they grew new heads, they had to learn their tricks all over again.

In the early days of the United States postal service the fees for sending an envelope containing a single sheet of paper ranged from six cents for the first 30 miles to 25 cents for 350 miles.

"OL' KING PHAROAH"

And his wards in the amusing courtroom scene in "The Green Pastures" to be presented at the Municipal Auditorium on the evening of January 7th.

"The Green Pastures" is one of the largest stage shows ever to be presented here. The stage of the municipal auditorium has to be renovated to make room for the three motor driven treadmills employed by "de Lawd" on his trips to the earth, where he appears in the form of a natural man. The orchestra pit has to be rearranged to hold the many members of the "Heavenly Choir."

In writing "The Green Pastures" Marc Connelly filled it with enough details to swerve an already hazy rainbow required the use of five rainbows before an effective color display was reached. It was projected from the edge of a gallery and many experiments were made before it was found that the best effect came from the projection room.

The agitated author became slightly hysterical the night before the opening in New York City in 1930, when he discovered the waves did not recede when the flood subsided. It was cool and commanding Robert Edmond Jones who came to the rescue. He experimented with the waves. He added skirts to the clouds and at the premier performance they functioned so beautifully that the illusion was complete.

The business of endowing Moses with the great power as a "trickster" was also a difficult one. When he called for a plague of flies and gnats as it was originally done, the stage darkened and on the screen curtain objects appeared representing flies and gnats. The only trouble there was that these insects looked like dirigibles. It was decided to abandon this effect and instead have the plague take place in total darkness. Illusion does the rest.

Later, when Moses commands Aaron to rest his rod on Pharaoh's throne a bewildered court was to see it change into a snake. Foul came a hapless property man, brick holes in the steps of the throne and many other items could not give the illusion of a cane changing into a snake. The undaunted property man, however, worked away on the trick, and by placing springs on a cane and having it put on a spot that was wired, finally achieved a realistic effect.

Just as a revue must be carefully plotted, so that sketches afford enough time for the members of the company to make costume changes, so did the scene in "The Green Pastures" have to be arranged to allow for quick changes. After opening night, the Babylonian number had to be completely rearranged because it was found that the players couldn't make their changes quick enough for the Hez-dral scene which followed.

The famous play comes here January 7th for one night presentation at the municipal auditorium. When the company protests a rate reduction the consumer gets no breaks until AFTER the courts have ruled.

The echoes of this issue will be heard far beyond New York State. Consolidated Gas is the first important utility to switch from passive resistance to rate reductions to an aggressive counter-attack. In doing so it is fulfilling the suppressed desires of the whole power industry. The worm has turned publicly and future trends of national power policies hinge on whether the turn is successful. The strategy of making the contest appear purely a city affair won't work.

Mr. Malibie's fate has national significance too. Insiders point out what a sweet chance it is for the federal government to take the play away from State commissions which are not sufficient in sympathy with New Deal aims—or which lack legal authority to enforce lower rates. This local scrap may easily lead to a rapid extension of federal utility supervision.

the motor settlement left them out on a limb and don't propose to be had again. Also they're beginning to believe the Steel Labor Board—is playing the steel men's game. That doesn't help the cause of harmony either.

Hull—

New York understands that a lively inside row is developing between Cordell Hull and George Peek on foreign trade policy. The boys expect Hull to win. Comment runs that the political typhoon hasn't yet been brewed which can submerge meeting of the "last true Democrat" left in Washington.

Uncle—

Wall Street got a laugh out of a statement by a Ford Motors official that his company wasn't paternalistic toward its employees. "Henry may not play papa to his men—but he sure can give a swell imitation of a Dutch uncle."

City Publishing Business To Be Alternated Between Two Papers

Regular meeting date of the city commissioners was moved up to Thursday evening because the Tuesday meeting would fall on Christmas.

An ordinance was passed approving an amendatory agreement in connection with the PWA swimming pool grant and loan, and authorizing the mayor to sign same. The amendatory provision provided the date of the first repayment out of revenues from the project be moved up from March 1, 1935 to March 1, 1936, inasmuch as the project will barely have been started by the time of the original initial repayment date. This was due to the fact that the first application was made more than a year ago.

The commissioners adopted a policy of rotating the city's legal publishing between the two recognized weekly newspapers in the county, this business to be awarded

A Dvice to the Love-lorn

To Mr. C. M.—If Mary is the kind of girl you say she is, there's just one answer to your question: Marry her—before some man, with a quicker eye for feminine values, takes her for his own.

Any woman can be good-looking, Mr. C. M., who knows how to handle a powder-puff and lipstick. But the woman is a find indeed, who is a good-looker—for bargains!

For you can't live on a peaches-and-cream complexion, Mr. C. M. You need more solid food for the years and years of married life.

So never smile at Mary because she happens to know the ads by heart. Thank your lucky stars that she does. You'll earn the money, Mr. C. M., but Mary will have to spend it for you. And a wife who knows her advertisements is a joy indeed. It's ten to one she'll save money and make her home a happier place to be.

Suspicious—

Myron Taylor of U. S. Steel is still in there trying to reach an agreement with steel workers which will protect the open shop. His latest proposition to the Amalgamated—via the Steel Labor Board—offers practically everything organized labor asks in return for the concession that company unions have a right to exist. His real objective is to get the Amalgamated to acknowledge the principle of proportional representation—something disguised—and forestall future fights on the question of majority rule.

TEXAS TOPICS
By Raymond Brooks

Federal authorities were willing to assume without question the responsibility of controlling the smallest details of Texas oil production in each field.

Yet in order to reach even the academic figure of market demand prorated among states to known potential, Texas officials have had each time to go to Washington in order to get the two adjustments made to the state's quota that have been "granted" in Washington.

Federal figures are based on data gathered by the state. Federal action so far has been as the result, and only cause, by aggressive state initiative in showing it a proper course.

There has been no objection to a federal empire to allocate states' production but the evidence up to now, just as Texas produces and operates, or get $60,500 a day for extra oil under revision of state and federal allowances, is that without state action the federal government would have been poorly equipped to deal justly with the Texas industry.

persecution or by arresting him for complicity—all this tends sharply to discredit these achievements.

Law enforcement has the doubly-bound duty of functioning within the terms of the law. Even the gun-carrying officer who represents the authority of the law, ought to suffer heavier penalties for breaking the law than a person not sworn especially to enforce and uphold it.

The department of justice deserves credit for two things: For its relentless war upon crime and the success of that war and for its good record in the present drive from very bad records in the past of not shooting down innocent people "kill on sight" policy. Its readiness to harass and persecute people accused of no crime in overdoing the thoroughness of a clean-up drive, distinctly is discrediting to it.

Rufus H. Thornton
Buried in Walnut Springs Cemetery

The many friends of Rufus Hardy Thornton at this place were grieved when they learned of his death in the Fitzsimon General Hospital at Denver, Colo., on Friday morning, November 30, 1934, at 1:37 o'clock, where he had been receiving treatment since November 17, 1933. The remains arrived here on the 8:07 M.K.T. passenger Sunday morning and were taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. H. B. Mounce. Funeral services were held in the Pentecostal Church at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Jerry Osborn of Glen Rose, assisted by Rev. E. W. Copeland, pastor of the local Pentecostal Church. Interment was made in the Oak Grove Cemetery. Among the out-of-town relatives here for the funeral were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Thornton, and brother, Jesse T. Thornton, Jr. of Big Spring.

Your son's condition is exceedingly grave and the attending physician feels that death is imminent.

"Your son has indeed been very plucky in what appears to be a hopeless fight and it certainly seems too bad that the wonderful spirit and courage which he is showing cannot bring about a recovery.

"In closing, please understand that the entire hospital staff is doing everything humanly possible to assist your boy in his fight and that until he does actually come, hope will not be abandoned."

The remains were accompanied to Walnut Springs by Earl Galaway, of the U. S. Army, who is stationed at Denver, Colo. (From Walnut Springs Hustler).

IN MEMORY OF RUFUS H. THORNTON

On Sunday, December 2, 1934, in the midst of sorrowing friends and relatives, Rufus Hardy Thornton was laid to rest in the Walnut Springs cemetery to await the Great Judgment Morning. Although his stay in this world was brief, his life was not lived in vain because over a year before his death he wrote to his mother from Washington, D. C. that he had changed his ways and was going to live a Christian life. His father made a visit to the Fitzsimon Hospital at Denver, Colo., in October of this year and Rufus told him that he wanted to live, but if that was impossible, he was ready to go and had been for some time.

The doctors and nurses at the hospital wrote to the family and stated, even though Rufus knew the end was near he never once complained and when asked how he was feeling his reply always was "just fine."

Rufus was born at this place and remained here until, with his parents, he moved to Big Spring in November, 1930, and there remained, with the exception of a few months spent with his brother Jesse T. Thornton, Jr. in Austin, until he joined the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas. He was transferred to Washington, D. C., in June, 1933. When his illness was discovered he was told that he had but a few months to live if he remained in Washington. He then went to the Fitzsimon General Hospital in Denver, Colo., and remained until his death November 30, 1934.

He attended the local school and members of his class and friends here served as pallbearers. They were A. B. Reed, T. D. Baker, Jr., Clyde Gosdin, Louis Gosdin, Raymond Nelson and Howard Mounce. It was hard to give up this loved one who added so much cheer and gladness to all with whom he came in contact. His earthly sorrows, cares and sufferings are over and he is now in the hands of the One
