

French Mould Church Doors

PARIS, (UP)—The four bronze doors, which will open the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine in New York, are being made here. A British sculptor, Henry Wilson, has designed them and they are being moulded by the Barbedienne factory, moulders of the Statue of Liberty and John Brown.

Each of the Cathedral doors weighs three tons and is 20 feet high and 12 feet wide; each contains 28 tableaux and 24 circles, and in two of the latter is the following inscription: "To the Glory of God and in Thanksgiving for the Life and Service of Haley Flaks these doors are presented." In the other two circles, the beholder is informed that: "The names of the donors are inscribed in the Golden Book of Remembrance."

The two New Testament doors have been completed, and the various tableaux narrate the life of Christ from His Birth to His death and resurrection. Work is proceeding on the Old Testament portals, which will depict the exploits of the Jewish patriarchs and prophets. Each door is marked by a tremendous amount of artistic detail and symbolism evoking the principal teachings and events of the Bible.

Upon every visit here, Bishop William T. Manning has conferred with Wilson. No date has been set for the shipment of the doors, but it is understood that they will be delivered in the spring.

BOY'S LOVE OF SPIRITED HORSES COSTS HIS LIFE

PETTISVILLE, O., (UP)—Paul Frey, 17, was killed because he liked lots of spirit in horses.

The boy had been sent out to one of his father's pastures for one of two horses grazing there. Though the more docile of the two was usually brought in for the chores, Paul decided to bring the wilder and almost unmanageable animal.

He threw a rope around its neck, tied the other end to his wrist, and got astraddle. Then he headed the rambunctious steed toward the house. The horse, getting rough, bucked and dashed through a woods. As it ran, Paul was thrown off. He was dragged several yards before the rope on his wrists snapped. His father found him later and took him to the home of the boy's grandfather, Jacob Frey, nearby. There Paul died.

DICTATOR -- American Style

1. Huey Long Peers Over Louisiana Border For More Worlds To Conquer

From pig farm boy to dictator of Louisiana—that is the amazing story of Senator Huey Long. The man, his methods and his victories are discussed in a series of three daily articles, of which this is the first, written by Ralph Wheatley, chief of The Associated Press bureau in New Orleans, who has been reporting Long's ascendancy since the kingfish first attracted wide attention.

By RALPH WHEATLEY (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, New Orleans)

NEW ORLEANS, (P)—Miles of copy have been written about Huey Long, Louisiana's senator and dictator.

He has been called a buffoon, a coward, an ignoramus, a fool and even a lunatic.

But Long is none of these things. He cannot be described in a word or a phrase to describe him it is necessary to dig deeply into the bag of descriptive language, for rarely in the history of this country has there appeared on the political stage a man like him.

The word "amazing" may fit Long as well as any simple word always is amazing. He is full of surprises and a finger never can be put on him.

He has a nimble mind and keen insight into the moods of the masses. He excels as an organizer, at breaking down opposition, at browbeating his enemies.

In a flash he can be either a terrific tyrant or a beaming jovial, good companion. He will "dish out" the act that he thinks the occasion requires.

His Main Weapon—Money

In his march from a pig farm to the dictatorship of Louisiana, and a possible candidacy for the presidency, Huey Long known as the "kingfish," has carried one main weapon—money.

It takes three things to make a war, he will tell you. Money! Money! Money! He not only gives money direct to his leaders to carry an election, but he spends it lavishly in public works. He probably can point to more material things he has created than any other state politician. It has reached the point where it is said almost every resident of Louisiana has benefited in some manner by Long's dictatorship.

With Louis XIV, Huey Long, Louisiana 'kingfish,' can say 'L'etat—c'est moi,' for he controls the destinies of the state over which he now rules as a virtual dictator. Here he is flashing his smile of victory.

In the last six years he has spent more than $350,000,000 in the state. These funds went for a network of paved roads, a skyscraper capitol, a new governor's mansion, bridges, airports, various public works, free school books and other things. His opponents claim that several millions of these funds found their way into political channels, but Long denies it.

Looks Beyond Border

This expenditure has given Huey a wealth of material to shout about from the hustings until he has convinced a majority of voters in the state that he is their benefactor and a Moses leading them out of the wilderness. With skill and cunning, Long has pressed this advantage until today he has reached the ing to the courts for writs and injunctions. But now his cohorts form a majority in the state supreme court and the recent session of the legislature made all courts impotent against him.

Not content to dominate the state government, he now has the power to regulate city government. He has control of all policemen, firemen and school teachers. He is the creator and enforcer of the laws.

But for the federal government, Long would make Louisiana a monarchy. He has swelled under his new power and has become a powerful factor who some day may have to be reckoned with by the American people at the national ballot box.

Montana Tries Newest Crop

SIDNEY, MONT. (UP)—From the steaming, tepid fields of the tropics has come Montana's newest crop—safflower.

Because the safflower yields an oil valued highly in manufacture of paints and varnishes, and because it appears to thrive in soil and climatic conditions of the northwest wheat belt, agricultural experts predict a bright future for it.

Alfred Rehbein, a painstaking farmer near Lambert, pioneered development of safflower growing in the United States and this year shipped four carloads of the seeds to a Milwaukee paint company.

Safflower oil has proved unusually satisfactory in drying oils, has many characteristics of linseed oil, and is superior to the latter in

LAPLAND WAR TABLET GIVEN TO CANADIANS TORONTO, Ont. (UP)—A tablet, which was placed in the old Red Star liner Lapland to commemorate the landing of the first Canadian Contingent in Britain in the Fall of 1914, has been turned over to the Second Canadian Infantry Brigade Association here.

It was placed on the transport ship by Col. Arthur Currie, later General Sir Arthur Currie, commander-in-chief of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who died in 1933.

The Lapland ferried 20,924 Canadian soldiers and 21,845 United States troops, over the Atlantic without the loss of a man.

stage, in Louisiana, of Alexander the Great—there are no more worlds to conquer there.

Instead of weeping, the "kingfish" is locking beyond the horizon of Louisiana into the other 47 states and has ordered an immediate drive for organization of "share-the-wealth societies" in other commonwealths. From this nucleus he hopes to build a political machine that some day will land him in the White House.

For several years Long has controlled the executive and legislative branches of the state government. Control to Long means complete dominance, the rule of a monarch with a mailed fist.

Arliss Reveals Devotion To Job During Filming Of "Rothschild," At Ritz Tuesday And Wednesday

George Arliss, who has given the screen many unusual things in the way of characterization, enjoys a new experience in his latest picture, "The House of Rothschild," his first 20th Century starring vehicle which is the feature attraction at the Ritz theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

For seldom do the varieties of the drama permit an actor to play father to himself as Arliss does in this Joseph M. Schenck-Darryl F. Zanuck presentation. Taking for its plot the rise to world power of the Rothschild family during the Napoleonic era and stressing the loyalty and love between its members, this picture has been pronounced the biggest production in the respective careers of 20th Century pictures and George Arliss, who plays both old Mayer Rothschild, the father, and Nathan Rothschild, the son, and the five sons who did the most to win the family world renown.

There are more than seventy speaking parts in the film, the cast of which includes such screen luminaries as Boris Karloff, Loretta Young, Robert Young, Helen Westley, C. Aubrey Smith and others. Nunnally Johnson wrote the screen play which is based on a play by George H. White.

could have been easily realized. He is one star who works for the joy of his labor and to justify the large salary he receives.

While his contract requires that he be permitted to leave the set every afternoon at 4:30, he gives more of himself until quitting time than any young player whose career is still in the making. Every minute of the working day is concentrated on the picture, and even while snatching a brief relaxation between scenes, he is studying, studying; his mind never relaxes.

He has a keen eye for every detail of his production. He inspects the costumes of his fellow players as well as his own to insure their authenticity. He knows instantly whether the gold braid on the Duke of Wellington's uniform is right and the buttons on Napoleon's coat correct in number.

Stops Cameras In the midst of a scene he will stop the camera and call the director and actors into debate on a single word in a line of dialogue. At all these variels, the advice of Maude T. Howell, who assisted Werker in the direction, was taken. Miss Howell has sat in on the filming of every Arliss picture. Previous to his cinema debut, she was similarly a consultant on George Arliss' stage productions.

Father Ledwig Denounces Class Distinction And Propagandists

Reverend Francis J. Ledwig, noted missionary and lecturer to non-Catholics bitterly denounced class distinction and pernicious propaganda experts who go about this country scattering a philosophy which is contrary to the principles of this nation from the point of citizenship as well as from that of Christianity.

He bitterly denounced the "easy divorce mills" of the United States and the "pernicious practices" of birth control. "If our nation is to recover we must come back to our senses and realize that we, as finite and human beings, cannot be contented with the things of this world when we are made for Him who made them. If this nation and this world is to rise from the mire in which we are now struggling, we must go back to a love of God, a love of our fellow-man and our neighbor."

Father Ledwig has spent twenty-two years in the giving of these lectures to non-Catholics on the teachings in the union and has become renowned for his oratorical powers. Besides this he has spent several years as professor of psychology and sociology in the school of Education, Duquesne University, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he came to be known as an authority on his subjects. He was born and reared in the state of Texas and has been active not only in the circles of his church but also in the organization of the American Legion, having served as state chairman, state chairman of the Americanization committee, state historian and is a member of the national speakers bureau of that organization.

Father Ledwig's message is clear and succinct. He is a master of his subject and presents his arguments in a clear and forceful manner. His greatest asset, perhaps, is that he speaks in such terms that all may understand clearly his trend of thought. His message is one of the love of God and of charity toward all, regardless of their religious affiliations.

Father Ledwig will continue his series of lectures at St. Thomas Catholic this evening using as his subject: "The Church and the Bible."

What Will the Answer Be?

Testing children with tuberculin is one of the modern methods of fighting tuberculosis. This boy is receiving the test, which is harmless and painless, and tells whether the germs of tuberculosis are lodged anywhere in the body. In two days the doctor will know the answer. If it is "yes," the boy will be X-rayed to discover if any damage in the lungs is apparent. If so, his environment will be studied to learn if he is living with someone who has the disease. This is real preventive medicine—an attempt to forestall tuberculosis before it has done actual harm.

The protection of children is one of the chief responsibilities of tuberculosis associations in their war against the disease. Their work is financed by the annual sale of Christmas Seals.

The Christmas Seal sale in Big Spring did not begin until this week. Seals were mailed out by members and helpers of the Howard County Tuberculosis Association. No personal solicitations are being made. School children are not selling the stamps, as they have done in former years.

Those who receive stamps are asked to keep as many of them as they can afford and to send checks or make payments to the treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Douglass of the Douglass hotel.

Pirandello Says, With Three Scripts Under Way

How To Win The Nobel Prize In Literature

Luigi Pirandello, shown at his typewriter, says out with only one finger the scripts that won him the Nobel prize in literature. He hunches himself over the machine, perches his left elbow on the table, and dangles a cigarette in the air. When he finishes a script, his son, who acts as his secretary, copies it.

Nevertheless he crossed them half after the fashion of a tailor and set to work.

With Pirandello to work means to bend over and perch the left elbow on the table, with the cigarette in the air. In this position he begins to tap on the typewriter with one finger of the right hand.

“I never write with more than one finger,” he said.

When he finishes a script, his son, who acts as his secretary, copies it.

Pirandello may be compared to the English writer Conrad who began to publish at the age of 50. Pirandello wrote many novels and short stories, but did not begin to write plays until he was 50. It is particularly his plays that have made him famous.

“THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD”

By George Arliss

Chapter VI

The semaphore, of which we spoke in the preceding chapters, underwent the metamorphosis from a visual to an audible agency of communication, chiefly through the electrical experiments of Samuel F. B. Morse, in 1832. It was put into first practical applica- tion by him in 1844. The visual methods of transmitting signals remained in almost universal use as far as Europe and Asia were concerned, until late in the nineteenth century.

It must not be supposed that Morse invented the perfect telegraph of this day and age, unaided. Many men and many na- tions developed the sciences of electricity and magnetism, funda- mental telegraphic crones. It was the application of the Morse ingenuity to these scientific develop- ments which today allows the en- tire world to keep in touch with all its parts.

And a tremendous step from the dot and dash method of Morse was made by the new Simdex machine. This development of the telegraph, as adopted by Western Union, now utilizes an automatic printing cy- cling receiver, which receives and records, in the fashion of a type- writer, messages which have been actually typed in a similar man- ner, on a similar machine at an- other point.

Had one of these machines been at my disposal instead of the method called for by the honest- y of the script, it is likely that as Rothschild in “The House of Roth- schild,” my new feature for 20th Century, I would have been wor- shipped or martyred as one with diabolic powers, instead of being allowed to pose as a shrewd bar- rater with an altruistic diplomat complex.

I trust that my new picture will be as entertaining to you as have been the research incidents in this- quest for data, to me. To you an- to Mr. George Peck Oella, whose “Story of Communication” is now in preparation. I say “thanks.”

HIRAM COLLEGE MOVES TO REBUILD AFTER FIRE

HIRAM, O. (UP)—Hiram Col- lege's historic administration building, destroyed recently by fire, will be rebuilt by funds to be obtained from an emergency campaign, President Kenneth I. Brown has announced.

Hundreds of telegrams sent to colleges, friends and alumni brought immediate contributions from several. The old adminis- tration building was only partly covered by insurance. An organ in the auditorium, worth $30,000 was ruined.

Leaders A politician who backs his judgment with cash and seldom loses is offering $50 to 40 that Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas will be next Speaker of the House.

The "field" actually narrows down to Rep. Joe Byrnes of Tennessee. Although precedent dictates that last session's majority floor leader should inherit the speakership, many of the railbirds are convinced his candidacy is fading as January approaches.

Vice President Garner will be in town any day now. He is a close friend of Rayburn's. Cactus Jack will deny any part in the House contest but there will be skeptics who will think he is yarning a little.

It is in the cards that Garner has been commissioned to sell Byrnes the idea of leaving congress altogether and becoming director of the budget. Such a job will tax the V. P.'s political skill if the situation is to be cleaned up with no dangerous hard feelings.

On the other hand, if Byrnes could be shown in black and white he couldn't be elected speaker, that budget job might suddenly become attractive. If he makes a run for it and gets beaten his status in the house will revert to that of a newly-elected congressman.

When he became floor leader he automatically gave up his committee assignments and seniority and he would have to start all over again at the bottom of the heap.

Rep. John McCormack of Massachusetts is gaining in strength steadily as a candidate for the majority leadership. His election would answer the insistence of northern and western congressmen that all of the leadership shall not go to the south.

During the off-season McCormack has been active as chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee which has been holding hearings in key cities all over the country.

Back on Nov. 20 this column tipped you the Rayburn-McCormack ticket was a good bet. It's a better one today—although, like horse racing, it's not a sure thing.

Notes A demand is being revived that the U. S. census bureau make a nationwide unemployment count in 1935. It comes mainly from social workers who want the data, and has support from politicians who could get some patronage thereby.

Such a venture would be, in effect, a modified decennial census and would give about 100,000 temporary employment. A bill ordering it is expected to be introduced early in the coming session of congress.

Last session a bill was in for an unemployment census, to have been taken starting this past Nov. 15. Howls were raised against it on the ground that New Dealers were trying to get their hands on 100,000 new jobs for distribution at election time.

Accurate figures on unemployment were last gathered as of April 19, 1930. Agencies which have since estimated it periodically have never agreed. One value of an official census would be to show which of the estimating agencies was nearest accurate and furnish them with a reliable basis for future operations. Unemployment being as fluctuating as it is the census bureau could only report again how many were out of work on a given date.

If unemployment insurance is adopted nationally the government must have an automatically constant and reliable check on the employment situation.

In the interim there is the third for knowledge and those 100,000 jobs to be considered.

Costs Members of the Senate campaign expenditures committee say they expect Dennis Chavez, Senator Cutting's rival, to demand an inquiry into the election in New Mexico. After long delay in returns Cutting's lead over Chavez is assured by not less than 1200 and may reach 1800 votes, after having been reported at only 300.

Progressive senators will insist that democratic campaign expenditures in New Mexico be investigated also if the committee heeds Chavez's demand. They charge that unusual relief funds were poured into New Mexico to aid Chavez.

The law limits a senatorial candidate's expenditures to $10,000, plus 3 cents for each vote cast for that office at the preceding election. Traveling, telephone, telegrams and printing expenses are not counted.

Notes Secretary Morgenthau is helping to hold down extravagant relief projects. The Tennessee Valley Authority act moves steadily toward its supreme court test. Bonuses in the house are reminded of their pledge to support FDR's program. Progressives are keeping their congress plans dark. Salaries and bonuses of corporation executives are soon to be reported to congress.

NEW YORK Balance New Yorkers in close touch with Washington believe the next few weeks will be extremely important in shaping the future course of the New Deal.

Some of them go beyond that to predict that Mr. Roosevelt's decisions on policy between now and January will go far toward outlining American political trends for years to come. It isn't that they expect any sensational developments in December—but they are convinced the president has reached a road fork which will compel him to move more definitely to the right or left.

At present the administration is maintaining a skilful balance between conservatives and radicals. On one side the goodwill gestures between government and business, revision of the NRA, the lowering of relief wages, talk of curtailing federal expenditures and other concessions give evidence of strongly conservative tendencies. But against these you have the Hopkins work relief plan, the Biddle appointment to the National Labor Board, threatened prosecution of the Houde case, refusal to stabilize the dollar definitely and other signs that the leftist influence in the administration is still alive and kicking.

Tip-Off— This on-the-fence stuff pleases neither camp. Both are turning on every ounce of pressure to tip the scales their way. The Ickes-Moffett housing argument cut much deeper than most people realize. It symbolizes an issue of the utmost importance. FDR's apparent intention to carry on Moffett's housing setup for those who can afford to build their own homes and Ickes' for those who can't settle nothing. Conservatives privately and fervently insist that the Ickes plan must be scrapped or sharply contracted to prove the government's good faith toward private enterprise. They are not yet ready to concede defeat on this issue despite the president's attitude. Liberals are just as insistent that it must despite the president's attitude. Liberals are just as insistent that it must not only be continued but expanded. Drifting along in the status quo will only irritate both sides.

The situation is complicated by a stalemate between groups of the president's advisers. Ickes, Miss Perkins, Morgenthau and Tugwell are all for bigger and better spending. Moffett, Roper and others—including ex-brother Trustor Ray Moley—want Uncle Sam to pull in his horns. Richberg leans toward the latter although he is trying hard to stay in the middle.

The split has grown so wide that the disputants have given up trying to settle the argument among themselves. Nor can coordinator Richberg bridge the split. That puts it squarely up to FDR himself. It isn't far-fetched to say that the president's final decision on how much shall be spent next year for public works will be vital and reliable tipoff on where the New Deal goes from here. New York expects a conservative victory.

Line-Up— On this premise New York analysts look for a fundamental change in political battle lines. They don't figure the question of a liberal democratic party versus a conservative G. O. P. will be important. Some even prophesy loss as early as 1940 the major contest will be fought between the democrats as "liberal conservatives" and a new radical party formed on the nucleus of LaFollette's progressives and the Farmer-Laborites.

Weather— A close student of security market conditions is firmly convinced that—taking the political and economic picture as it stands today—prices of sound securities are all close to the bottom. Most of his informed friends agree with him. But a keen critic points out that the judgment of Wall Street's smartest calculators is usually defective in one important respect. They almost invariably regard New York sentiment as typical of the whole nation's views. He remarks that their appraisals would be sounder if they were provided with a political weather-map—charted like that put out by the department of agriculture—which would clearly indicate differences in sectional conditions.

Mum— Cautious Wall Street lawyers have thought up a new worry for their corporate clients. By examining the Securities Act with a microscope they've discovered that any officer or director who expresses an opinion about his company's financial status—unless it is based on facts contained in an audited and published report—is taking an awful chance. It appears that he can be sued for damages if (a) his statement later turns out to be inaccurate or (b) if he doesn't broadcast it to all his concern's security holders at the same time.

Residence— Insiders call New York City's new inheritance tax the height of hope. They remark that people whose estates are worth taxing usually maintain more than one residence and can easily shift their official domiciles elsewhere if it's going to cost them money to call themselves New Yorkers. And there isn't a thing the city can do about it.

This question of residence has its business angles too. Several years ago New York investment trust was bought by another which had headquarters elsewhere and thought it was paying New York state taxes. But it kept up a small local office and inadvertently forgot to have its name taken out of the telephone book. One day a state tax official called up—without revealing his identity—and asked if he was speaking to the office of the Blank Corporation. He was incautiously told that he was. Two days later a tax bill arrived for $87,000. The company fought it in the courts and was over-ruled on the ground that the state had proof of local residence.

That's probably the most expensive phone call on record. The phone company was kept busy soon after delisting high-sounding corporate titles.

Money— A New York leader just returned from Europe gives a new slant on old bloc problems. He says that France and her monetary allies would devalue in a moment if they were sure the dollar is going to stay put at its present level. They're scared to take the plunge and establish a new parity for their currencies while there's a chance we might depreciate our own money further and leave them again at a disadvantage. They've been angling unofficially but earnestly for a commitment to this effect from our government—but with no success.

The informed do not interpret our refusal to promise as necessarily implying another dose of domestic monetary medicine. They do believe that Mr. Roosevelt will insist on keeping a free hand regardless of Europe's wishes until all the leading nations are willing to talk currency turkey on terms acceptable to Uncle Sam (they aren't yet)—and until the new congress proves to be safely under control.

Most of the capital fleeing the old bloc countries is going to London—not New York. This makes it a trifle awkward for our English friends. They are compelled to buy dollars with their precious stabilization fund in order to keep the pound from kiting to the skies—which makes them as happy as a bridge player at a "mooche" party. Experts say that Britain's monetary tightrope act is bringing her closer to our tent all the time.

Inflation— That Philadelphia radio station vote which favored Father Coughlin over the New York Philharmonic orchestra by the fateful margin of 16 to 1 gave Wall Street the chills in a big way. The Radio Priest wasn't far wrong when he charged that large financial interests had encouraged the test in hopes of getting him off the air in a tentative test of the air in that territory. It was a shocking surprise to learn that so many people were interested in Coughlin's ideas on central banking and inflation.

But the anguish was somewhat assuaged by news that dollar doctor Thomas, Wheeler and McCarran can't seem to get together on the inflationary prescription. Commentators are sure the money chest-ild may yet be saved if this disagreement persists.

Financial New York will be happy to do what it can to promote the split. There's even talk in some quarters of lending indirect aid and comfort to Wheeler's plan for silver. This is regarded as the least objectionable of the heresies in prospect and the theory is that its success might kill off more dangerous alternatives.

Japan— Insiders learn that the decline in Japanese silk trade—due chiefly to natural causes rather than a deliberate buyers' strike—is causing the Empire no end of grief. The less silk Japan sells the less raw materials she can buy. Her commercial credit abroad has created almost entirely by exports.

Don't be surprised if the yen is depreciated still further in an effort to jazz up declining trade. Experts doubt that this solution would do Japan any permanent good. They point out that any increase in the physical volume of exports would be largely offset by a shrinkage in the purchasing power of goods sold abroad.

The impression prevails in informed quarters that Japan's aggressive trade policy is beginning to boomarang. New Yorkers who know their Far East predict that Japan will be much more amenable to reason on trade and monetary matters within six months.

PURCHASES BLUE MOON

L. E. Stagner has purchased the Blue Moon Cafe, 2111 South Scurry street, from Jack Potter, and has assumed management effective Tuesday. Mr. Stagner announces refitting the cafe, and making other improvements.

Oil Administrator Ickes isn't over-popular with producers but they privately figure they have drawn his teeth. His threat to take over the industry causes more amusement than alarm. The vitriolic attack on Ickes by J. Edward Jones—ranking dealer in oil royalties—was not inspired or backed by any of the big oil companies.

Normally the directors of the Petroleum Institute make a declaration of policy as soon as they are elected. This year they withheld action until after Ickes had spoken his piece. Before that sentiment was about 50-50 as to extension of federal control but after the secretary had "pulled a General Johnson" it shifted to 3 to 1 against.

The inter-state compact idea officially advocated by the industry is described by insiders as a straw man. It's supposed to provide a tonic of debate—but no practical action—for the next year and thereby stall off further federal encroachment. By the time nature will have taken care of most of the hot oil problem—which is the chief excuse for regulation—and the industry hoper to regain complete independence.

Annoyed— Many New York brokers are annoyed at the stock exchange's refusal to issue an official list of "approved low quotations" on which to base margin computations. Instead it sanctions two services which compel the brokers to shell out for the figures they have to have. Thirteen other exchanges provide their members with such a list gratis.

One disgruntled Wall Streeter comments: "I think I'll start a collection for an engraved scroll to tell the world we all think the Securities and Exchange commission is swell. Maybe then Whitney wouldn't feel he had to spend his time making eyes at Joe Kennedy and could pay some attention to us."

Sidelights— U. S. Steel will spend $38,000,000 for plant improvements in 1935 instead of $18,000,000 as originally planned. That's cooperation. Auto dealers are hepped up by the new model samples big manufacturers have been showing.

CLEVELAND EXPOSITION TO PAY TRIBUTE TO STEEL

CLEVELAND (UP)—Cleveland will pay tribute to her basic industry—iron and steel—during the Cleveland exposition, Dec. 29 through Jan. 6.

By-product ovens in Cleveland can produce 2,378,000 net tons of coke alone each year, while the city's steel works have a capacity of 2,641,000 tons of ingots per year. F. J. Andre, president of the exposition's executive committee, pointed out in announcing the event.

He said more steel wire is produced here than in any other United States city. "Cleveland is the center of the world's greatest steel and iron area and it is fitting that the story of the city progress as depicted by the exposition, should be interwoven with the romantic story of steel," Andre said.

Placing second and third with two car loads of feeder calves at the American Royal Live Stock Show has confirmed Clyde McElroy of Randall county in the practice of creep feeding. About 22 worth of cottonseed cake was creep-fed to each of the calves, and they brought $9 a head more than they otherwise would have brought on the market, not to mention the premium money.

The Green Lake Home Demonstration Club in Calhoun county believes in "lamps trimmed and burning" and already has money in the bank to pay the expenses of delegates to the 1935 Farmers' Short Course at A. & M. College. When "hog killing time" comes they plan to make tamales from the heads and sell them to swell the fund.

A calf fed by Damon Davis of the Heat 4-H Club for boys in Menard county has set a record for that county by gaining 265 pounds in 60 days, an average daily gain of 3.4 pounds.

World's Largest Telescope To Be Erected On Plateau Instead Of Mountain Peak

By E. H. TIPTON
PASADENA, Cal. (UP)—The 200-inch mirror, world's largest telescope which will provide the human race with an "eye" to see objects 400 million light years away, will be placed on a plateau and not atop a mountain peak as are many of the great instruments now in use.

Selection of the site 45 miles north of San Diego followed exhaustive tests of atmospheric conditions and the examination of many proposed locations.

Elevation Is 5,500 Feet

Crews are building a road to the 160-acre tract which lies at an elevation of 5,500 feet on the slopes of Palomar mountain. The mountain reaches a peak several hundred feet higher up.

It may be four or five years before the giant reflecting disk measuring 17 feet in diameter and cast at Corning, N. Y., is ready to penetrate into the far reaches of space, but astronomers already are speculating on what it will do.

Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson observatory, who will supervise the grinding of the mirror at the California Institute of Technology, estimates it will disclose objects so distant that light traveling 6,000 billion miles a year would require 400 million years to reach the earth.

To Bring Moon "Closer"

"This mammoth telescope," said Frederick G. Leonard of the University of California at Los Angeles, "may be expected to show about as many stars in the heavens as there are people on earth." He said only about 6,000 stars are visible to the naked eye.

It should bring the moon which is roughly 240,000 miles away, he said, to "such close proximity it would be possible to distinguish large buildings." He did not say, however, he expected buildings would be found on the moon.

Dr. Edwin F. Hubble, authority on nebulae, also termed "Island Universes", great star systems like the Milky Way, has concluded from

Builders Urge Auto Taxes For Good Roads

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Gasoline tax and motor vehicles license fees should be returned to state road building funds instead of being used for emergency relief and other purposes, the American Road Builders' Association will advocate at its 32d Annual convention and Highway Exhibit here Jan. 22 to 25.

Highway officials claim that various states now are diverting about $200,000,000 a year from these sources to other uses. If this program is continued, they say, road improvements will be jeopardized and ultimately many states will be unable to participate in Federal appropriations for highways.

Chief subjects on the convention calendar include continuation of an adequate highway program; use of highway revenues for highway purposes only; and continuation of Federal appropriations for highways.

Approximately 5,000 of the country's outstanding highway officials, engineers, contractors and manufacturers are expected to attend the session.

A featured exhibit will be the latest developments in equipment and materials.

Captain H. C. Whitehurst, President of the Association, said the convention will be of special importance in that the theme will include formation of the "future highway policy, which is regarded as a prominent factor in the national recovery program."

A.A.U. Pro Rule May Be Revised

MIAMI, (UP)—The barrier "once a pro always a pro," which has tripped some of the best high jumpers in American athletics, may be voted off the field of sport at the approaching Amateur Athletic Union national convention here Dec. 7-8.

According to J. B. Lemon, general chairman of the convention committee and secretary of the Seaboard Association of the A. A. U., a resolution which would permit pillow-muscled pro wrestlers to skip amateurishly on the basketball court, and even allow the big shots of the fistie game to sport the Stars-and-Stripes Olympic shield, will be presented to the delegates meeting at the Miami Biltmore here. An attendance of more than 300 moguls of American sport, representing all sections of the country, is anticipated.

The spectacle of Max Baer putting the shot in the 1936 Olympics, Johnny Weismuller playing ice hockey for the A. A. U., or Dixie Dean battling for the A. A. U. basketball crown will float before the delegates, imagination when the revolutionary plan comes up. If the delegates like it, there will be no repetition of the incident recalled by Dan Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., when Paul and Lloyd swept up with the elite of the nation.

Boys had broken through the boarded windows and doors, exploring the decaying mansion. Storms from the lake were howling through the great halls. Youngsters of the neighborhood whispered of ghosts. Vandals had begun their work.

In a few weeks, professional crews will have lowered every timber of the old homestead.

Wants, Big Poison and Little Poison of the Pittsburgh Pirates outfield, were stopped from carrying out their plans to play A. A. U. basketball in the Midwest during the off-season.

The suggested remedy is to confine the status of professionalism to the sport in which it is incurred. Any athletes could then compete professionally in one or more sports and still retain his amateur standing in all the others.

Mark Hanna Home Razed

CLEVELAND, (UP)—The old home of the late Senator Marcus A. (Mark) Hanna, where Presidents William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt once visited, is being leveled.

Workers are razing it, timber by timber, because vandals and time would wreck it if it were not respectably done now.

The great mansion overlooked Lake Erie. When it was built it was out in the country, "to the west of town."

In 1896, McKinley stood on the front porch and was cheered by citizens shouting about the "full dinner pail" and the "gold dollar."

In 1903, Theodore Roosevelt and his daughter, Alice, were there for the wedding of Senator Hanna's daughter, Ruth, to Medill McCormick, of the Chicago family that made reapers and harvesters.

Only a year later, Mark Hanna died. His widow took some of the magnificent furnishings to her home in Washington. His daughter took others to her Chicago home.

For years now the grounds have grown up in weeds that choked the curving drive where carriages once

New Lyric To Open Wednesday 7 P.M.

NEW LYRIC WILL OPEN HERE WEDNESDAY

The new Lyric theatre, located in the same building, though remodeled and refurnished throughout, where the old Lyric theatre, which began operation here in June, 1913, and continued until latter part of 1923, will be formally opened here Wednesday evening, December 5th, at 7 p. m. With the opening of this new theatre, Big Spring can boast of three excellent theatres, properties of the R. & R. chain. Manager J. Y. Robb said there would be no dedication ceremonies, and the theatre would be formally opened at 7 o'clock Wednesday night, and continue to show the feature opening film, "Kansas City Princess" through to 11:30 p. m. H. B. Robb and

E. H. Rowley of the R&R theatres, of Dallas, are expected to arrive in Big Spring some time Wednesday morning, to be present at the opening.

Three Modern R&R Theatres In Big Spring

Formal Opening To Present Feature Picture, 'Kansas City Princess'

When the new Lyric theatre formally opens for business Wednesday evening, December 5th, at 7 o'clock, Big Spring can boast of three excellent theatres, all the properties of the R&R Theatres, Inc. The new Lyric will be located in the building where the old Lyric, opened in June, 1913, began operation and continued until latter part of 1923.

The other theatres operated by R&R in Big Spring are the famous Ritz, truly "West Texas' Finest Theatre," which was opened to the public on October 29, 1928; the R&R Queen, which began operation on November 15, 1924. All three theatres are sound-equipped, containing the expensive equipment necessary for presentation of the picture industry's latest and greatest production.

When I. J. Robb and his family came to Big Spring to open the original Lyric they sold their interests in New Mexico and concentrated their efforts here. They were not long in expanding, however. When the Santa Fe built through Sweetwater an airroad was opened, and later a theatre. Today they operate the Queen, Lyric and Palace, which are the only theatres in Sweetwater.

San Angelo was the next town they entered. The first venture there was a roof garden show atop a two-story building. Today R&R theatres in San Angelo number six.

It was in San Angelo that Ed Rowley became associated with the Robbs and eventually the concern came to be Robb & Rowley later E. H. Rowley and Mr. Rowley later went to Abilene and operated the theatres there. J. Y. Robb had charge of the San Angelo houses for three years prior to 1917 when he went into the army. It was at that time Rowley entered the business. Abilene, San Angelo and Hillsboro interests of the concern were sold soon after the war. Later, however, the San Angelo and Abilene properties were bought back.

The Robb theatres here have had no less than a dozen competitors in twenty-five years. None has been bought out by the Robbs and none are operating today.

The Big Spring Amusement company operate the late theatres. Its parent corporation is the R&R Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Dallas.

Both Mr. H. B. Robb and Mr. Rowley are expected to be present at the formal opening of the new Lyric here Wednesday evening. Other officials of the corporation are also expected to attend.

There will be no dedication ceremonies. The new show will open its doors at 7 o'clock and continue to show the feature opening film, "Kansas City Princess" until 11:30 p. m.

R. & R. Theatres Have Faith In Growth Of City

J. M. Morgan Got Contract On New Lyric

Helped In Building On Old Lyric Structure 21 Years Ago

J. M. Morgan of the Morgan Construction company of Big Spring was awarded the contract for remodeling the old Lyric theatre building. Mr. Morgan said he was one of the men who helped to build the old Lyric theatre some twenty-one years ago.

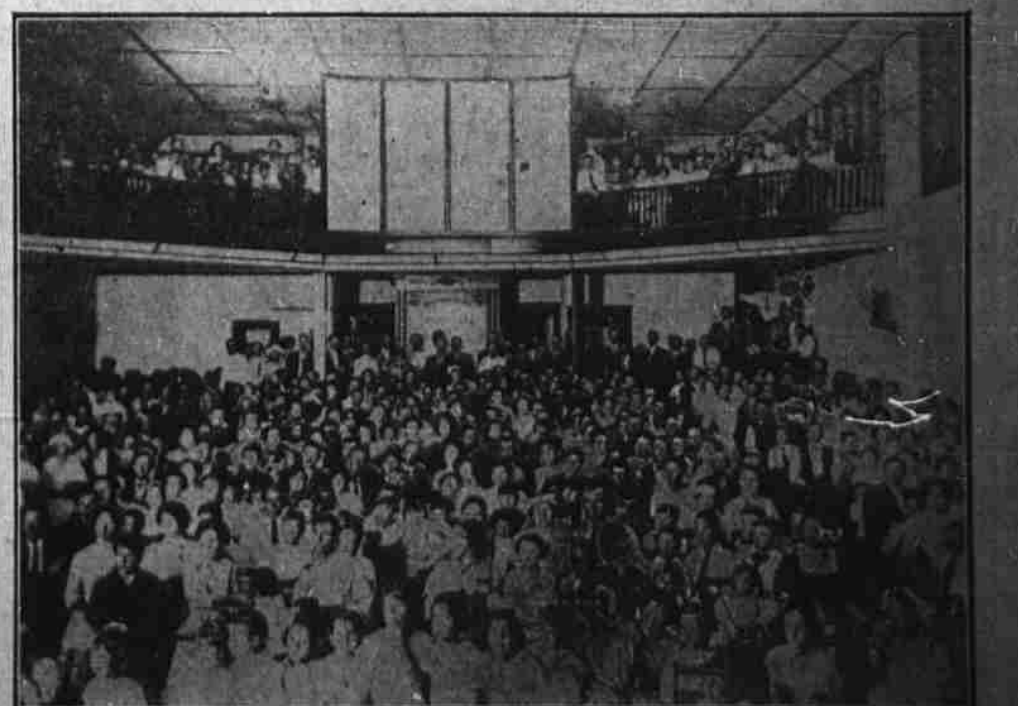

"I have seen the Robb interests grow from the small theatre to the present day modern theatre, and I want to express my appreciation to the Robb family, whose parents I have known a long time," Mr. Morgan said he worked with C.

"Faith in the present and future of Big Spring prompted the management of the R&R Theatres to remodel the old Lyric building, preparatory to the opening of the new Lyric," said J. Y. Robb, popular manager of the R&R Theatres in Big Spring.

"We believe that Big Spring is growing and will continue to grow, and it is our desire to give this city the best of the way of theatre and productions for them. That is the reason we have built the new Lyric. It shall be our aim at all times to give the best in picture entertainment from time to time, not only a our new theatre, but at the Queen and the Ritz, Mr. Robb said.

E. Talbot, B. A. Reagan and C. E. Shive, all three of whom assisted in remodeling the present new Lyric, on the old Lyric building. Mr. Morgan said it was possible to push this work to completion through the perfect plans as drawn by W. Scott Dunne, architect, of Dallas.

Crowd At Opening Of Old Lyric In 1913

(By O. R. F.) On June 14, 1913 when Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Morgan decided to go to the opening show of the Lyric theatre, little did they dream that their faces along with those of many other Big Spring people, would be preserved for the future. Other Big Spring citizens still living here who saw that show were Bob Cook and Frank Pollock. They, too, are in the picture.

Publicity Expert Plans Road Shows For R&R Chain

L. H. Grandjean, specialist in motion picture theatre advertising, is director of advertising and publicity, also director of road shows, of R. & R. Theatres. Grandjean is a native Louisianian, a Texan by adoption. His first pay was earned as an usher in the old French Opera House in New Orleans and he has been wedded to things theatrical ever since.

Mr. Grandjean was a commercial artist when in 1914 he accepted the post of assistant manager in charge of exploitation at Theatre Louisiana, Baton Rouge. In 1916 he returned to his home city, New Orleans, as exploitation manager of the famous Triangle Theatre, and later of Liberty Theatre, under the same management. When the Liberty was acquired by Saenger Amusement Company, Grandjean became publicity director of the Saenger circuit, a position held until 1922 when a call from New York was heeded and the publicity took the post of editorial director with American Releasing Corporation. In 1925 Mr. Grandjean again returned home to accept the management of the Saenger-St. Charles Players, a noted stock company operated by Saenger Theatres, Inc., in the famous old St. Charles Theatre. The Saenger Company sent him to Dallas in 1928 to join the organization of Dent Theatres.

In August, 1931, Mr. Grandjean became advertising and publicity director of R. & R. Theatres, the position he now holds. Recently he has specialized in building special programs which have gained considerable prestige as R. & R. Road Shows. These special entertainment treats have been monthly visitors in theatres of the R. & R. circuit.

Tamsitt & McGinnis Do Sheet Metal Work

Tamsitt & McGinnis of Big Spring was successful bidder for the sheet metal work on the new Lyric, and have recently completed this job in excellent shape. The front awning, containing much artistic work, as well as in the lobby, required days to finish.

Robb & Rowley Partnership Is Formed In Angelo

The opening of the new and beautiful Lyric theatre Wednesday night will be an event of greater significance to this community when it is viewed in the light of fulfillment of a promise—perhaps not a promise uttered in so many words but the promise of a policy. And that the policy of Robb and Rowley Theatres or, perhaps, better known, R&R Theatres.

The new Lyric theatre—as is the Ritz and Queen, is the property of the Big Spring Amusement company, a subsidiary of the R&R Theatres. The various units comprising R&R Theatres are operated under one and the same policy—a policy which is epitomized in the firm's slogan: "The Best of Today Is Not Good Enough for Tomorrow."

An example of how this slogan is lived up to is to be found in the manner in which the theatres of R&R circuit have evolved gradually from the narrow show stages of the nickelodeon era to the modern show places of today.

Partnership Formed R&R Theatres had its inception in a partnership formed in San Angelo. There Harold B. Robb was operating the Lyric theatre and Roof Garden as half-owner of the enterprise. Edward H. Rowley, then a railroad clerk, with a flair for the show business, bought the other half of the business from Mr. Robb's partner in 1916—and the two R's combined their initials into a firm name and their talents and resources into the development of a chain of theatres. The thought back of the idea of chain theatre operation was service to the community. For booking power would command the finest pictures at earliest dates. It was not sufficient that the finest and best pictures be booked; these pictures must be available to R&R theatres on release dates or immediately thereafter if each community were to be served in a manner that would arouse civic pride in these theatres as community institutions. For it had been the practice to release pictures to the larger cities first, then to filter them through to the smaller communities.

With this ideal of service the R. & R. circuit grew—not by leaps and bounds but safely, sanely, solidly. And from its modest beginning in San Angelo in 1916 the company counts in its operations today 60 theatres in 18 towns in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Three of these theatres are operated in Big Spring. Others in Texas are in San Angelo, Del Rio, Sweetwater, Laredo, Corpus Christi, Palestine, Sherman Hillsboro, Waco, McKinney, Whitehouse, Dallas and Oak Cliff; in Oklahoma, Muskogee, McAlester and Durant; in Arkansas, Little Rock.

Clever Comedy Features Joan Blondell Here

Manager Robb Secures Excellent Feature Picture For Opening

Manager J. Y. Robb has secured the picture "Kansas City Princess" as the opening production for the new Lyric, to be shown Wednesday evening, December 5th. Following is a synopsis of the story: Clever comedy, hilarious situations, sparkling dialogue, and Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert and Robert Armstrong — that's "Kansas City Princess," one of the most scintillatingly funny farce comedies of the season, and surely one of the most capably acted.

Joan and Glenda are two Kansas City manicurists. Joan, taking the part of Rosie, is half in love with Dynamite, a young gangster, while Glenda, as Marie, is a self-avowed chiseler, "on the make" and out to get as much as she can.

Dynamite gives Rosie a big diamond engagement ring and goes to St. Louis to do one last big job before turning straight. While he is away, Rosie flirts with Jimmy the Dude, who steals the ring.

Knowing Dynamite, Rosie and Marie decide to beat it for New York, getting on a convention train as "outdoor girls."

Dynamite, returning unexpectedly, boards a plane for New York and is at the train when they arrive. They elude him by leaping into a taxicab with two Zanesville aldermen who are en route to Paris to meet their wives.

The Zanesville lads invite the girls to get on the boat with them, but Dynamite follows, stowing away in a lifeboat while the girls chisel passage fares from their aldermanic boy-friends.

Ashercraft, Jr., is a multi-millionaire whose wife has been in Paris for years, ostensibly for her nerves. Hugh Herbert portrays the eccentric.

France's Premier Flandin, Air-Minded And Youthful, Can Pilot His Own Plane

By ALEXANDER H. UHL
PARIS (UP)—Keeping up with the modern pace, France, in Pierre-Etienne Flandin, has the most air-minded premier in her history and now has two cabinet members who can fly their own planes. These are Flandin and General Denain, the air minister.

A licensed pilot in 1912 at the age of 23, Flandin was a war aviator in 1914, participating in the French operations on the Yser. He still holds his license and is an officer in the air reserve.

He's a Sportsman
All through his political life he has been an ardent champion of the development of French aviation and has served on numerous international air committees as well as being president of the Aero club in 1920.

An enthusiastic sportsman, he drives his own car and likes to play tennis with his wife and children.
Not only is he the tallest man in his cabinet—he stands almost 6 feet 6 inches—but he is the youngest member and one of the youngest premiers in the history of the third republic.

Only one premier was younger—Leon Gambetta, hero of the war of 1870, who became head of the government at 43. Only two other premiers ranked in youth with Flandin: Maurice Rouvier in 1887 and Camille Cautemps in 1930; all reaching this political pinnacle at 45, Flandin's age.

Silk Hats Scarce
The new cabinet is not the "talk hat" model. Most of the members wear fedoras, though Flandin and his minister of marine, Francois Pietri, are partial to derbies.

At least three of the minister are noted for their sartorial eccentricities. Louis Marin, minister of state, always wears a flowing silk tie and in winter wraps a huge woollen muffler around his neck outside of his overcoat. Pierre Laval, the foreign minister, is noted for his invariable white tie.

George Mandel, minister of posts and telegraphs, wears a high, old-fashioned choker collar with sharp wing that is the delight of caricaturists, Pietri and Henry Roy, minister of public works, also go in for wing collars but of less imposing heights.

All of the ministers except Mandel have mustaches while there is only one beard, that of Senator Emile Cautemps, minister of agriculture. About half the cabinet is bald with Flandin leading the way, while the rest have fairly good crops of hair.

All types of smokers are represented: Flandin goes in for cigars, Herriot has a huge assortment of pipes and Laval smokes cigarettes.

Partial To Derby

Premier Pierre Flandin of France, an enthusiastic sportsman and aviator, prefers a derby. The new cabinet is not on the "silk hat" model.

street and the nearer the railroad one approached the bigger the crowds there. The Colic Hotel stood on the corner now occupied by the Douglas hotel, but Third street was not then a continental highway.

After the Lyric was closed, to remain for five years a ghostly shadow crowded in between business houses, the days of its thrilling pictures were forgotten as many of the stars of those days were forgotten.

It came to life as a bowling parlor, but could not entirely rid itself of the haunts of such once-famous beauties as Marguerite Clark and such leading men as Lou Tellegen.

When it opens again the names blazed across its front will be names entirely new to those who attended it last. Within five years many stars come and go. Some of the screen's best loved actors and actresses were not even born when the old Lyric first opened. Few of those then starring have survived the change of years and the effect of the talkies.

When those who have survived—say the Barrymores—appear again on the Lyric screen, what will the old building think of herself? She will probably think that it is now more than right for her face to be made young as some of the faces of movie stars are kept young by the skilful hands of man.

Ashcraft fears his wife is in love with a Russian, Dr. Plinkoff and engages a French detective, Duryea, to find out if he is being double-crossed.

A series of riotous incidents on board the vessel ensues. The girls are all tangled up with the aldermen, Ashcraft and Dynamite, who is looking for revenge. Duryea, in league with Plinkoff, decides to frame Ashcraft so his wife can get a divorce and a lot of alimony, and arranges a plot. Marie, thinking she is going to frame the Russian, slips into Ashcraft's room, and is locked in. Duryea brings Mrs. Ashcraft in to obtain evidence of her husband's perfidy. Dynamite, seeing his employer is being double-crossed, attacks the detective, but Duryea kicks him, and knocks him out.

Mrs. Ashcraft breaks in, and gets the goods on her husband who finds that Marie's arms are worth the million his wife will cost him. Marie finds Dynamite, brings him back to consciousness and consoles him in a fond embrace.

TEXAS TOPICS

By Raymond Brooks

Texas has in store the revolutionary possibility of clipping 30 to 50 days from its four-month regular session in 1935, and from $130,000 to $250,000 off its cost.

There has been no official promise or claim that the session will be speeded up, or that the legislature has run out of new laws to pass; but the intimation has been heard in state capitol corridors that a compact administrative program may be submitted, which can either be enacted or killed within a few days; and that the general appropriations bill, "pre-approved" by the incoming governor, by his budget recommendations as to what he would accept, or what veto, will be ready for what is termed legislative deliberation early in the session.

Suggestion that the lawmakers might give back part of the four-month time to the taxpayers has come from some of those who believed a revulsion of taxpayer sentiment might send to the voters the question of returning to the former 60-day session and perhaps even the former $5 per diem of members.

Texas has had more 30-day special sessions since it adopted the four-month regular session six years ago, than it did back in the 60-day regular-session times.

There really is no limit on the duration of the regular session, except that after 120 days, the pay of members is restricted by the constitution to $5 a day. But that $5 is the former constitutional limit for regular and special sessions. When the period of the regular session was doubled, the pay of the 182 members also was doubled, so that session expenses were almost quadrupled at once.

It is well-known there will be no "kingfish" or dictator tactics in the incoming executive administration; but the incoming governor will have a restricted set of definite legislative recommendations, and will lay them before the lawmakers early in the session. His program, which bears the approval of the democratic party of Texas, expressed by its convention and its platform, will in itself tend to free the legislative of restrictive influences which have dragged out the consideration of measures in endless outside lobbying and inside filibustering.

A new set of representatives, fresh from the people, with 60-odd first-terms in the house, and with nine new senators, is expected to bring up a viewpoint of the voter's will, and to express such trend as there has been in the voter-taxpayer's attitude toward government, government expenses, economics and long sessions.

If the theory that the public has tired of too much legislature, and too much legislative expense, the short session may result.

SHOE IN ROAD LEADS TO BODY OF HIT-SKIP VICTIM

FINDLAY, O. (UP)—A stray shoe on the highway, among some bits of shattered glass, led to the discovery of the body of Mrs. Myrtle Hiser, 36, mother of five children, in a ditch south of Arlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stroupe saw a woman's shoe on the road as they drove up to the home of a relative at 7 p. m. The shoe was still on the highway when they returned at 11. Stroupe investigated and found the woman's body, apparently the victim of a hit-skip motorist.

Under The Dome

At Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN, (UP)—Gov. Elect James V. Allred isn't saying so, but do not be surprised if there is a paragraph in his first message to the legislature saying: "There seems to be no necessity for continuing a session of the state legislature through the entire 120 days. I think the people would appreciate a much shorter session."

The new governor may also point out that the original purpose of a session of 120 days—division into periods—has been ignored.

Louisiana sessions of less than a week's duration are being commented upon at Austin in contrast with special sessions of the Texas legislature. It seems impossible to end a special session in Texas in less than 30 days.

The question of legislative pay, likely, will get no recommendation from the governor. Some members, however, agree with Rep. Elect J. J. Olsen of Yoakum that the legislators should return to $5 a day.

Gov. Paul McNutt of Indiana, who will be a Galveston visitor this week, may be addressed as Vice-president McNutt soon. He is being mentioned as a likely running mate for President Roosevelt if Vice-president John Garner does not choose to run again. Indiana has furnished numerous vice-presidents.

John T. Smith of Austin, editor of the Texas Tax Journal, popped right out with an endorsement of the El Paso Herald-Post's proposal that Texas adopt a new constitution in its centennial year. A second thought, prompted by a question, put Smith in doubt about its wisdom. The question, asked here frequently, is:

"Would a constitutional convention made up of elected delegates be likely to frame a basic law more acceptable to the people than the laws the legislature turns out, and about which they complain?"

Delving into past constitutional conventions reveals some surprising things. It shows that such conventions considered many of the things that have been advocated recently as though they were novel. One constitutional convention increased the governor's salary. Later it was put back to $4,000 a year and efforts to increase it by amendment have failed repeatedly. One convention had before it virtually the same plan for a centralized government with governor-appointed officials, which was advocated by Governors Dan Moody and Ross Sterling. A four-year term for officials was also advocated.

Division of Texas was before one of the constitutional conventions for lengthy consideration. Three

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

(Associated Press Science Editor)

NEW YORK, (AP)—Scientifically the speed limit of automobiles is in slight and proves to be something mythical. It is the point where cars try to turn themselves into airplanes and start leaving the ground in kangaroo hops. Theoretically this is saying there is no speed limit.

Such cars would be merely the realization of the engineering dreams of driving something that will also fly. But the tendency to fly is no theory. It is already a practical engineering problem.

Auto Tail Like Plane's When Sir Malcolm Campbell goes to Daytona Beach, Fla., probably in February, to better his present world's speed record of 272.103 miles an hour, he will again drive a car with a tail suggestive of a plane. In the tail will be several tons of lead.

The weight will help keep the car on the ground. At the record speed, even a streamlined car has something like a vacuum at its rear. The tail adds steadiness in this thin air. Even the tires try to fly in the wrong way. If too heavy they rip from their rims.

Automobile engineers will face this flying problem squarely in passenger cars as soon as they begin to put streamlining underneath the body. Most of the air drag now that holds autos back lies between the bottom of the car and the ground.

Now The Streamlined Train Eleven American railroads building streamlined trains this fall show how quickly commercial autos are going to need more speed.

One of these trains is in regular operation, the Burlington Zephyr between Kansas City and Lincoln, Neb.

states were proposed. One would have been east of the Trinity river; one between the Trinity and the Colorado river, and the other west of the Colorado.

Need of a college thesis led to an investigation by S. S. McKay, who had assembled a record of constitutional conventions and other trends. Later the thesis was found so valuable it was published.

Secession, naturally, was the motive power of the convention of 1861. Those of 1865 and 1869 grew out of defeat of the Confederate Army. The 1885 convention had its stiffest argument over how far it should go in nullifying secession. Abolition of slavery and repudiation of war debts were other leading topics.

The last constitutional convention was in 1875. It was in session 92 days when it was discovered that the $300,000 appropriated for it had been expended. The 1875 convention was remarkable in having as one of its delegates a delegate to the 1845 convention—H. N. Darnell of Tarrant county. There is no living survivor of the 1875 convention who might sit in a new one.

Six members of the 44th Texas legislature will be law students as well as law makers. They are attending the law school of the University of Texas. Reps. John W. Fain of Weatherford and J. K. Wells of Corsicana, return to the next session. New law student-legislators are George A. Davidson, (ex) jr., of Eastland; George M. Newton of Cameron; Ed S. Keefe of Frankston and Eugene Worley of Shamrock.

U. S. PLANS TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP OF WESTERN STATES IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UP)—A comprehensive topographical and geological survey of western states as a basis for national planning is being urged by Harold B. Shepard, chairman of the northeastern Idaho planning board.

In letters to chambers of commerce of leading cities and to Idaho legislative officials, Shepard declared the work not only would give a permanent basis for development of natural resources, but would facilitate work of district, state and national planning in highway construction, power and water development, land development and population planning.

Shepard urged that the survey be conducted by the United States Geological Survey, with federal money appropriated for the purpose.

Gold In Chicken's Claw SITKA, Alaska (UP)—Millions of dollars' worth of gold has been shipped from Alaska to Seattle. Some of it apparently is going back. As Mrs. Josephine Brojack dressed a chicken shipped from Seattle, she found in its claw a gold nugget worth $2.50.

The fast strides made in modern transportation are indicated by the streamlined train above which shattered the American transcontinental mark as it whizzed across the country recently, and its 1879 "ancestor." Sir Malcolm Campbell's world record 272-mile-an-hour speedster. To keep this super-racer on the ground at terrific speeds, it is necessary to weight its airplane-like tail with lead.

The Union Pacific used one of its two streamlined trains to set its new transcontinental rail record of 56 hours, 55 minutes. Other roads with trains now building are the Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Union Pacific, Boston and Maine, Gulf, Mobile and Northern, New Haven, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Atchafalaya, Topeka and Santa Fe.

Engine At Each End One of the New Haven's new streamliners will have an engine in each end. This will save the necessity of turning the entire train around. It is designed for a short run between Boston and the New England south shore. Its horsepower will be the average 500 to 600, but split between two engines, one pulling while the other pushes.

New Sea Speed Seen On the water the Bremen has just set a crossing record from Cherbourg to New York of four days, 15 hours and 27 minutes. The Rex holds the speed ribbon at 28.92 knots. But the new Normandie and the Queen Mary, superliners now building in France and England, are expected to sweep all ocean records.

The Political Anvil

Allan Shivers, young Port Arthur lawyer, won a notable victory in being elected to the state senate. He will begin his first public office Jan. 8.

His election was of state-wide import. He will come to the senate, one of its youngest members, just as Texas inaugurates a young governor and a young lieutenant governor. He will find several young men of outstanding ability in the senate, such as Hopkins, Redditt, Collier, Pace, Poage, Woodruff and others.

Shivers' leadership among labor forces in a highly industrial county carried him to victory. It assures him unusual recognition as a new member in the senate. Shivers will be made a member of the committee on labor. He has a good chance, even though a "freshman" in the senate, of being vice-chairman of this extremely important committee and there is even a possibility that the state-wide importance of his election might cause him to be elevated to the chairmanship of this committee.

Reports at the state capitol say a former senator, Steve M. King of Beaumont, is the outstanding prospect for appointment by President Roosevelt as U. S. district attorney for his district. Ben. King came to the Texas state house as the result of a special election called while the Ferguson impeachment case was pending. An election was called on five days' notice, instead of the usual 30. The citizens of the Beaumont district accepted the challenge and induced King to run against the "anointed" person, and King won. He served only a short time, voluntarily retiring. He is a outstanding lawyer, known not only in East Texas, but throughout the state, and his friends say he will reflect credit upon a democratic administration, when placed in this tremendously important federal office.

Many in Texas talk of an old-age pension plan, and few question the merit of remedying the outstanding social deficiency of present government. But Texas will have to do much better in paying the bill than it has done for its old Confederate veterans. The Confederate pensions are being paid only up to early 1932—18 months behind the issuance of warrants and out of the generosity of the highway fund, are being bought up only to within six months of issuance.

The state is doing a severe injustice to the Confederate veterans and widows and its first thought, in financial matters, ought to be to meet a fundamental obligation in fact as well as in ponderous legal verbiage on the statute books.

Evidences of teamwork between the governor's office and the attorney general's department in the new administration have been given by both incoming state officials.

William McCraw, who will become attorney general, appointed Scott Galinas and Pat M. Neff Jr., members of the present attorney general's staff.

Gov. Elect Allred, finding a vacancy in his office now, appointed Tom D. Rowell Jr., one of those whom McCraw will bring into office, to fill out the term, saying it was done as a measure of cooperation with the incoming administration, and to permit Rowell to get familiar with the work.

There are many matters calling for close cooperation between the governor and attorney general. In many past instances, that cooperation has been lacking; but early indications point to a reapproachment for the coming term.

It will be with a practical hand that Lieut. Gov. Walker E. Woodul grasps the gavel to preside over the senate in January. He has served two terms as senator; has been president pro tem of the body, and has occupied the chair many times.

He is good-natured, but has a caustic wit, and holds a tight rein over dilatory tactics and the tendency of senators to get proceedings out of control. He will dispatch business; but will keep the friendship of his old colleagues and of the new members.

Robert Lee Bobbitt, former attorney general, will occupy a position of unique influence and leadership in the incoming administration of his friend, James V. Allred. Mr. Allred once defeated him for attorney general, but when Allred ran for governor, Bobbitt was on the stump, vigorously campaigning for him.

If Mr. Bobbitt wants any state office, it is a safe guess that he will get it; but the probabilities are that he, with a heavy law practice, and with the satisfaction of having held the second highest state office, will remain in private life, rather than taking another state office other than that which he holds as a member of one of the college boards of regents.

The state is in for one merger of official agencies... the state parks board and the landmark and historical commission. The parks board has been directed to beautify and improve and mark historical spots over the state, but was given no money with which to do it. The landmark commission formerly was given small amount for specific undertakings, such as utility to mark the graves of early Texas statesmen and soldiers, or to remove bodies of famous early Texans to the State cemetery in Austin.

STEERS BOAST WELL BALANCED SQUAD

Line Light But Shows Lots Of Fight

Schoolboy teams of the Inter-scholastic League swing into the big-league stage of the grid play-off this week. Of chief interest to fans in this section of West Texas will be the El Paso-Big Spring game at El Paso Saturday afternoon, and comparative scores and other data indicates the teams about on par.

This marks Obie Bristow's fourth and last year as head coach here. In many ways the present edition is his best, but he had a powerful aggregation in 1931 that should have won far in the state race.

Profits By Experience
 Having profited considerably by experience, Obie has moulded a fine all-around team this year that, if handled right, can and will go a long way in the state race. The club is fairly well balanced both in the line and backfield.

One of the greatest handicaps is a rather light line, but this is partially offset by a hard fighting crew of youngsters that don't know what the word quit means. Then, for the first time since he has been in the coaching game, Obie has a nice supply of reserves capable of filling the breach when regulars fall to deliver. That is a great asset in itself.

Bob Consistent Fighter
 In Bob Flowers, captain, Bristow has his most consistent player. Bob is playing his fourth year of high school football, and has the recognition of being the only player to serve as captain for two years. A steady all-district performer at a wing position last year, he has gained the same honor as a backfield man this season.

Although not exceptionally heavy, Bob shines as a blocking back and defensive player. Seldom does he tote the leather himself. Quiet and unassuming, he inspires the confidence of his teammates through his unusual competitive spirit.

Leading Scorers
 Big Spring boasts the district's two leading scorers in Ole Cordill and Leo (Buckett) Hare. Cordill has amassed a total of eighty-nine points and Hare sixty-seven.

The average weight of the Eovine is about 155 pounds, not very heavy. The secondary is always a lot heavier than the forward will expect when Neel is in the game. Neel, the team midget, is a sparkplug and inspiration to the rest of the club.

This year's team is the first district champion that Big Spring has ever had. Its record shows eight wins and one loss, with a total of 721 points to opponents' 45. In the thirty-nine games played by Bristow-coached teams to date, the Steers have scored an average of 22 points to their opponents' six points per game, and have amassed a total of 898 points to their opponents' 210.

Out at Steer stadium the Big Spring coaching staff, composed of enough—there's nothing but common sense behind them, and they will cost nothing, in either time or money, to follow. And they may be the means of saving the lives of loved ones.

SUCCESS COMPLICATES LIFE FOR COACH THORNHILL

By JAMES E. HESTON (Associated Press Sports Writer)

When Stanford University was chosen to represent the West in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, New Year's Day, Coach Tiny Thornhill of the Indians was placed in a difficult position.

For never before in the history of the Rose Bowl were there so many "naturals" available; and never before were there so many personal angles to consider.

Two years ago, Pop Warner finished a brilliant career at Stanford and moved East to coach at Temple. There were cries at the time that Pop would never come back; that his system had failed and his future was behind him.

The system, claimed the critics, was failing because the "smart" coaches had built a defense that would stop it. His future was not bright, because Temple had never been noted for its ability to attract outstanding athletes. The move from the coast to Philadelphia, then, was thought of as the beginning of the end for this famous old gentleman who has contributed as much if not more to the game than any other coach in the business.

So, It's Finished, Huh?
 But in the football season just passed, Pop Warner has conjured a Temple team which has gone undefeated through a difficult schedule and been tied only once—by Indiana. So that Tiny Thornhill finds himself confronted with the possibility of having to consider as an opponent the man who taught him the game of football.

Tiny Thornhill was Warner's assistant at Stanford, and of all the disciples the "old man" has, none is more loyal and devoted than the gentle Thornhill.

But this is only one of several complications that confront Thornhill. In his undergraduate days at Pittsburgh "Tiny" played for Warner alongside a youngster named Sutherland, a Pitt, indefatigable boy who played regular end and played it well though he weighed about half as much as good ends were supposed to weigh in those days. This boy Sutherland is Jack Sutherland, now coach of the University of Pittsburgh, who turned out the greatest team this year in the modern history of the Panthers.

Pop Bernie Bierman, Minnesota's brilliant young coach, is willing to admit that his mighty Panthers were fortunate to win from Sutherland's team in the last quarter of the early-season game, which still stands out as the best football struggle of the past campaign.

Leading by a touchdown into the last period, Pitt was victim of two perfectly executed plays that lost the game. This defeat is the only black mark on the Pittsburgh record.

California's Favorite
 With Bierman's team eliminated because of the Big Ten Rule which states that no conference team may play a post-season game competition No. 3 is furnished by the Coliseum State of Alabama, which will clash around in the Rose Bowl at the start of the New Year or know the reason why. Boasting two men on the Associated Press All-America team, Carl Will Lee, tackle and Don Hutson, end, Alabama is the people's choice in California.

And last and certainly not least is Columbia, coached by the indomitable Lou Little, who led the Lions to a one touchdown victory over Stanford last year in one of the most stunning football upsets of the past few years.

With only Bill Corbus, place-kicking guard, missing from last year's first team, Stanford would like to prove that Columbia's victory was a fluke to be blamed on the mud and rain of the bowl—and on over-confidence. If Columbia was a logical choice last year—and their victory over the Indians seems to indicate that they were—they certainly are again this year, for they have only a defeat at the hands of Navy against them. Last year, they proved that a defeat did not learn them from playing excellent football.

So this is Tiny Thornhill's problem—to choose a team from the list of logical contenders, which includes his former coach, his former teammate, his former conqueror, a former Stanford head coach, and a team which has been successful three times out of three in the Rose Bowl game.

A Powerhouse

KLINE

George "Dutch" Kline, junior from Gregory, Texas, has been one of the powerhouses in the T.C.U. backfield all season. Most of the time he has been in the starting line-up, and in all of the Frogs' games he has carried the leather, blocked and tackled with the best of them. He will be at the left halfback position when the Frogs take the field against Santa Clara in Fort Worth Saturday.

California because of its great record in the Tournament of Roses games. Three times before, the Tide has swept through the New Year's Day classic without defeat, and with the South claiming that the 1934 edition of the Wave is the greatest in history, Californians are naturally anxious to see what can be done about bringing them back.

The fourth complication is furnished by Andy Kerr's Red Raiders of Colgate in general and by Andy himself in particular. Kerr was head football coach at Stanford for a time, coming to the Coast to prepare the way for Pop Warner. Then he stayed on after Warner's appointment to the head coaching position and coached the Indians' basketball team. With the Red Raiders being hailed as one of the East's finest teams and certainly the most exciting team in the country, there are many who think Colgate and no other should get the call.

Ab, Sweet Revenge!
 And last and certainly not least is Columbia, coached by the indomitable Lou Little, who led the Lions to a one touchdown victory

HOUSING RESULTS
 The government's great housing campaign is beginning to show results.

Construction touched bottom in 1933, then, during an average four weeks, only $18,000,000 was spent, as compared with $59,000,000 during a similar period in 1931. The new campaign started in the middle of August, and in the four weeks following $19,000,000 was spent. In the four weeks ending October 12, $39,000,000 went into homes, and $36,000,000 was spent during the four weeks which closed on November 10.

It is estimated that more than 1,000,000 homes, involving an expenditure of $8,000,000,000, would have been built had there been no depression.

FOR A SAFE HOLIDAY SEASON
 The Holiday Season is designed to bring joy and happiness—but it likewise brings with it a vast amount of preventable misery, because of the accident toll. The gravity of the problem is magnified by the fact that a large percentage of holiday accidents involve children. Hundreds of them are killed and thousands are needlessly injured every December.

Here are a few rules, issued by the National Safety Council, to help pass a safe and happy Christmas Season:

Don't permit children to play in the streets—the old practice of hitching sleds to automobiles is especially hazardous.

Be extremely cautious in the matter of ice-skating—ice must be at least four inches thick before it can be trusted to sustain a large group.

Winter brings special automobile hazards, such as ice and snow, poor visibility and soft highway shoulders. Remember them—and drive accordingly.

Don't use candles on your Christmas tree—don't put it near a stove—don't use inflammable trimmings—don't permit it to dry out in the house after Christmas—don't fail to anchor it firmly—don't use light bulbs of greater strength than ones firefly candlepower.

These little hints are simple

CHAPTER TWO
SEYMOUR'S LETTER

I shook my head. "It's frightfully kind of you," I broke in. "You've been an absolute brick all through, and I can never begin to thank you sufficiently for a quarter of what you've done." I paused. "All the same," I added, "if you won't think me ungrateful I'd rather be alone for the next few hours. I want to get things straight in my own mind."

"Why, of course," Mr. Cresswell seated himself beside me. "You do exactly as you please, my boy. If you feel you would be better by yourself, well and good. Don't try to think too much, however. Look on it all as a wretched mistake that's finished and done with, and tomorrow or the next day, when you are quite yourself again, you must come along to lunch with me and we'll have a good long talk."

I stared at him for a moment in silence. "Do you believe that people will agree with the verdict?" I asked.

"Certainly I do; at least ninety-nine out of a hundred. There are always a few fools about who like to flatter themselves that they know better than the jury, but you can take it from me that every sensible man who has followed the case will be absolutely convinced of your innocence. That reminds me—he put his hand in his breast pocket—I've got a note for you here from your cousin."

"What—Seymour?" I inquired.

He nodded. "It was sent round to my office this morning with a covering letter. He expressed a wish that it should be handed to you before you left the court."

"Do you believe people will agree with the verdict?" I asked

I slit open the envelope with a certain curiosity. Even in the midst of my own troubles I had found news of your acquittal will bring to your family and friends.

I am extremely anxious that before you take any steps at all with regard to your future, you should give me the opportunity of offering you my advice and assistance. I shall be at home tomorrow evening from five to seven-thirty, and I trust and hope that you will come straight here directly you are at liberty to do so.

Your affectionate cousin,
Seymour Trench

I folded up the missive and replaced it in its envelope.

"What has he got to say about it all?" I asked.

"Have you seen him or talked to him?"

Mr. Cresswell hesitated. "We had an interview at my office. He wanted to know whether any money would be required in order to provide for your defence, but I assured him that, as far as that side of the matter was concerned, there was no occasion to worry. I need hardly add that he was extremely agitated and—distracted."

"Yes," I said. "I imagine that it must have upset him—quite a lot."

My companion cleared his throat. "To a man of Sir Seymour's temperament and position," he observed, "the shock was naturally a severe one. At the same time I see no reason for doubting that his concern was principally on your account. I am sure he will be prepared to do everything in his power to help and encourage you at this—this difficult juncture."

"Well, we shall see," I remarked. I put the letter in my pocket and rose to my feet.

"Good-bye, Mr. Cresswell," I said. "I'm unutterably grateful to you for all your kindness, but I feel too stupid and dazed to express myself intelligibly just at present. I'll ring you up in the morning, and we'll make an appointment. At the same time I see no reason for doubting that his concern was principally on your account. I am sure he will be prepared to do everything in his power to help and encourage you at this—this difficult juncture."

well. "We should like to avoid any unnecessary fuss or publicity, so if you can see him off quietly as you suggested..."

"Quite easy, sir," chimed in the other. "There's a way out at the bank what we keep special for that purpose." He gave me a touch on the elbow as though from force of habit. "You come along with me, Mr. Trench and I'll see that you ain't interfered with."

Putting on my hat and carrying my coat, I accompanied him down the staircase. On the next landing we turned to the right and negotiating another passage and a second short flight of steps, arrived at a closed door which was evidently our destination. My companion produced a key.

"Follier the street along when you get outside," he said, "and it'll bring you straight into Ludgate Hill." He jerked back the bolt. "Good-bye, sir, and if you'll excuse my saying so, I trust that there ain't no bad feeling. Got my job to do, you see, the same as everyone else."

I offered him my hand. "I think you've been very considerate," I said. "If I'm ever tried for murder again I hope I shall be in your charge."

His face expanded in a broad grin, and giving me a friendly grip, he swung open the door.

The first thing I did when I got outside was to search for a cigaret. It was a wonderful feeling to be at liberty again and for a minute or two I stood motionless on the sidewalk, half-drugged with the novelty of the situation.
