PHS Hall of Fame inductees named

Six former Pampa High School students have been selected as the first inductees into the PHS Hall of Fame.

They will be honored in an induction ceremony at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday in the Pampa High School auditorium.

"It is exciting that our students want to honor the accomplishment of those who have come before them," said Dr. Dawson Orr, Pampa Independent School District superintendent, in announcing the formation of the Harvester Hall of Fame.

"Traditions are those things from our past that we wish to continue in our future, and I think a Hall of Fame is a wonderful way to honor those traditions," he said.

The first six inductees are:

- R.C. (Ray) Wilson, Class of 1921, posthumously receiving recognition because of his unique place in the history and traditions of PHS, the first Harvester football quarterback.
- Dr. Floyd S. Brandt, Class of 1947,

Marlene and Morton Meyerson Centennial Professor of Business Administration, Department of Management, University of Texas at Austin.

- J. David Fatheree, Class of 1954, known for being the City of Pampa and Pampa High School best "cheerleader." He has attended each and every PHS reunion since returning to Pampa in 1960.

- Dr. Jim Bond, Class of 1954, president of Point Loma Nazarene College in San Diego, Calif. (coincidentally, the school colors are green and gold).

- Dr. R. Malcolm Brown Jr., Class of 1957, Professor of Botany, Johnson & Johnson Centennial Chair in Plant Cell Biology, University of Texas at Austin.

- Mary Jane Rose Johnson, Class of 1968, outstanding operatic career including leading roles in the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York City and numerous opera houses all over the world, winner of the first Pavarotti competition.

The Harvester Hall of Fame originated from discussions dating back several years ago.

"Pampa High School has numerous alumni who have gone on to lead very worthy and successful lives," Dr. Orr noted in a letter to the PHS Student Council in January urging its involvement in the creation of the Hall of Fame.

The Student Council and the PHS faculty leadership team were asked to approve the concept and help in its formation, with the PISD Superintendent's Scholar Program organizing and funding the project.

Members of the Student Council and faculty serve on the selection committee, with the superintendent's office handling the organization and paper work.

According to John Kendall, PHS principal, the Hall of Fame will be a project handled by the school administrative offices in conjunction with the PHS Student Council.

"Each year when we go through our files of former PHS graduates, we are thrilled to see the great strides that many of our former students have accomplished," Kendall said. "The formation of the Harvester Hall of Fame will serve as an excellent example and motivation for our student body."

This year's first inductees were selected after nominations were sought and collected.

Criteria for selection include applicants must have graduated from Pampa High School at least 10 years prior to their nomination. The applicant must have made significant contributions and have been successful for a number of years in their chosen field and be an excellent citizen in the community in which they live.

All inductees must have served their school and community in a way deserving of the honor.

For more information on this year's inductees into the Harvester Hall of Fame, see Page 3 in today's edition.

Man arrested for car theft in Alanreed

TUCUMCARI, N.M. - A 35-year-old man who tried to commit suicide near Shamrock last week was in Quay County jail today after being arrested for possession of a van reported stolen from Alanreed.

Florencio San Martin Bustamante, 35, traveling on a Mexican passport, was arrested by New Mexico State Police Sunday after the van he was driving broke down near San Jon, N.M.

Officers said Bustamante was charged with possession of a stolen vehicle and was being held for Gray County authorities.

New Mexico State Trooper Rigo Chavarria said he was called shortly after 8 a.m. Sunday when a tow truck operator became suspicious of the driver of a van that had broken down along Interstate 40.

In questioning Bustamante, Chavarria said, the man told him a friend had lent him the van, but he couldn't remember the name of the friend. Nor could Bustamante remember where he had been.

With the consent of Bustamante, Chavarria searched the van and found a bowling ball, an umbrella and a handicapped card.

Through the registration and insurance card, officers found that the van had been reported stolen in Alanreed.

Texas officials said Bustamante apparently had slashed his wrists late last week while hitchhiking near Shamrock.

Bustamante was treated at Shamrock General Hospital, then escorted to the Wheeler-Gray County line. Officers said Bustamante was last seen Saturday hitchhiking along Interstate 40 in southern Gray County.

New Mexico officers said when confronted and asked why he stole the vehicle, Bustamante replied because no one would give him a ride.

Walter Staten of Alanreed reported his 1990 Chevy Astro van missing between 4:30 a.m. and 6:30 a.m. Sunday. Alanreed residents said two other cars were also reported vandalized early Sunday.

Gray County sheriff's deputies were investigating the theft of the van today.

More rain in forecast for Panhandle area

Rain returned to the forecast this week with cooler weather after a sunny weekend with temperatures pushing 90 degrees.

A light rain was falling across Pampa early this morning under cloudy skies and cool temperatures. It was 51 degrees at 7 a.m. today.

Panhandle had cloudy skies and a light mist at 6 a.m. today. Canadian officials reported a few sprinkles early today in Hemphill County. Wheeler authorities reported thunderstorms about 3 a.m. today with about 0.3 of an inch of moisture overnight.

Amarillo had 51 degrees and showers at 6 a.m. today. Dumas was reporting 48 degrees and showers. Dalhart had 48 degrees and cloudy skies.

It should be cloudy and colder in Pampa today with gusty winds 25 to 30 miles an hour and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high was expected to remain below 60.

Cloudy skies will continue tonight with a 30 percent chance of showers and a low near 50 degrees.

It should be cloudy early Tuesday and tapering off in the afternoon. The high Tuesday should be in the mid 70s. There will, however, be a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms Tuesday. The chance for continued storms will increase to 40 percent Tuesday night with increasing cloudiness and a low of 55 degrees.

Wednesday through Friday should see more thunderstorms with highs from 75 to 85 degrees and lows near 55 degrees.

Elsewhere in the state, according to Associated Press reports, it's the same song, another verse as far as Texas' weather is concerned tonight and Tuesday.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected across most of the state.

The activity is being triggered by a cold front that was moving rapidly southward across the state today. It was located early today along a line through the South Plains and low rolling plains eastward across the state.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were developing before dawn along the front. Some other showers and a few thunderstorms dampened portions of the Panhandle and Permian Basin in West Texas.

Senator kills bill to lower legal blood alcohol limit

AUSTIN (AP) - A bill that would lower the state's legal blood-alcohol limit from .10 percent to .08 percent has been killed, the victim of a parliamentary maneuver by a state senator.

Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, "tagged" the bill Sunday, delaying the measure from consideration by the Senate Criminal Justice Committee for 48 hours.

The tag, which is a tactic any senator can use without justification, effectively killed the bill because the deadline for Senate committees to vote bills out was before midnight Sunday.

Lucio said his district is big into socializing and wouldn't support the bill.

"We brought it down from .12 to .10, and now we are looking at lowering it even more. I have a problem with that," Lucio said. "In the district that I come from, we see a lot of get-togethers, weddings, a lot of gatherings, receptions, et cetera.

"I think that the real problem that we're having with DWIs is not the .05 and .08s, and not even the .10s. The people really causing problems on our highways and streets are the .15 and .12 and higher. I personally want to hear from my district to see if they really would like for me to support this measure. I don't think they do. That's why I reacted the way I did," Lucio said.

In practical terms, the new level would mean the difference between drinking five alcoholic beverages and four over a one-hour period for a 160-pound man, according to sponsors of the bill. For a 120-pound woman, it would mean the difference between four drinks and three.

Local briefs

PAMPA — The Top O' Texas Branch No. 3094 of the National Association of Letter Carriers has reported its final collection in its food drive totaled 8,414 pounds of non-perishable food items.

According to Katrina Bigham, Pampa United Way administrator, more food was collected after the Saturday, May 10, drive. Residents were asked to leave food at their mailboxes for the drive, but others also took food to the Pampa Post Office.

"We had no way of knowing what to expect," Bigham said, adding that the total of food collected for the drive "overwhelmed us."

The food was distributed to Pampa United Way assisted agencies The Salvation Army and Tralee Crisis Center plus Good Samaritan Christian Services Inc.

"We are really thankful and grateful for the support of the people of Pampa," Bigham said.

The registration will be from 6 to 8 p.m. at the east door of Pampa High School. The cost is $10 for the first class and $5 for each additional class.

This year, the classes being offered are arts and crafts, softball, track, computer, gymnastics, cheerleading, golf, soccer and tennis. Each session lasts for one hour, beginning at 8 a.m.

The two sessions will be held June 2-13 and June 16-27. Students signing up for golf, softball, soccer

Registration is on a first-come, first-serve basis, and approximately 15 students will be allowed in each session.

PAMPA — Tornado season is here and residents are urged to have a plan of action in the event that the threat of severe weather strikes the area.

Those without access to safety or storm shelters in the event of a tornado should contact Red Cross of Gray County at 669-7121 for a list of places that can be used as a public shelter.

Citizens are discouraged from contacting the city for this information, as it does not have a list of public shelters and does not supply any public shelters.

Residents should, however, know the closest shelter or safe place to them and be prepared to evacuate to that area, said Ken Hall, the city's emergency management coordinator.

Six former students to be first inductees in PHS Hall of Fame

The first inductees into the Pampa High School Harvester Hall of Fame provide a diversity of career choices and influences upon the school, their community and their career fields.

Inductees include the first Harvester football team quarterback, two professors, the unofficial school and city "cheerleader," a university president and an opera singer.

Selected for the honor of being the first inductees into the Harvester Hall of Fame are:

• R.C. (Ray) Wilson, Class of 1921, posthumously receiving recognition because of his unique place in the history and traditions of PHS, the first Harvester football quarterback.

• Dr. Floyd S. Brandt, Class of 1947, Marlene and Morton Meyerson Centennial Professor of Business Administration, Department of Management, University of Texas at Austin.

• J. David Fatheree, Class of 1954, known for being the City of Pampa and Pampa High School best "cheerleader." He has attended each and every PHS reunion since returning to Pampa in 1960.

• Dr. Jim Bond, Class of 1954, president of Point Loma Nazarene College in San Diego, Calif. (coincidentally, the school colors are green and gold).

• Dr. R. Malcolm Brown Jr., Class of 1957, Professor of Botany, Johnson & Johnson Centennial Chair in Plant Cell Biology, University of Texas at Austin.

• Mary Jane Rose Johnson, Class of 1968, outstanding operatic career including leading roles in the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York City and numerous opera houses all over the world, winner of the first Pavarotti competition.

They will be inducted in a special ceremony Tuesday morning in the Pampa High School auditorium. (See related story, Page 1).

Following is biographical information on each of the inductees:

R.C. (Ray) Wilson

R.C. (Ray) Wilson is a member of the Class of 1921. While at PHS, he served as the quarterback of the first Harvester football team. This team played the first Pampa-Amarillo High game, which began the rivalry that continues to this day.

Wilson suggested green and gold for the school colors, representing wheat — green when growing and gold when ripe.

He also was editor of the first PHS annual, named "The Harvest," representing a gathering of the year's events. He wrote the "Senior History" and the "Senior Prophecy" in the first annual.

The 1971 Harvester yearbook was dedicated to Wilson on the annual's 50th anniversary.

Born in 1901, Wilson was too young to serve in World War I and too old to serve in World War II. However, he served his country well through a lifetime of service to his God, his family and his community.

He was a member of First Christian Church, serving as an elder and as church treasurer for 25 years.

He was the first Gray County auditor. He was appointed in 1929 and served until his retirement in 1972. He was elected twice as president of the Texas County Auditors' Association.

Wilson served on the Pampa ISD Board of Trustees from 1942 through 1949, being president of the board from 1945 through 1948.

He served in many civic activities, much of which was through the Pampa Lions Club, where he had 45 years of perfect attendance.

Dr. Floyd S. Brandt

Dr. Floyd S. Brandt, a member of the Class of 1947, was born Feb. 12, 1930, in Detroit, Mich. He received his primary and secondary education in Pampa schools.

After graduation from PHS, he received an associate of arts degree from Visalia College at Visalia, Calif., in 1949. He received his bachelor of business administration degree in 1951 from Texas Technological College and his master of business administration degree in 1952 from the University of Michigan. He obtained a doctorate in business administration in 1960 at Harvard University.

Honors Brandt has received over the years include an Eastman Kodak Fellowship at Harvard University, the Jack G. Taylor Teaching Excellence Award at the University of Texas in 1967 and 1988; the Beasley Teaching Excellence Award for teaching in the Graduate Business Program-Care Courses in 1987; and the Stanford-Sloan Executive Program as an invited faculty participant in 1967-1968 at Stanford University.

Other honors include the College of Business Foundation Life Time Teaching Excellence Award in 1995 and a College of Business Hall of Fame inductee in 1996.

Brandt also was an Eagle Scout for Troop 14 in Pampa in 1944.

Honorary and professional memberships include the Sigma Iota Epsilon, National Honorary Management Fraternity; Industrial Relations Research Association; Academy of Management Planning; Executives Institute Member; Public Employment Disputes Panel, National Center for Dispute Settlement; American Arbitration Association; and Advisory Business Editor, Texas Handbook, Texas State Historical Association, 1983-1995.

Brandt currently is the Marlene and Morton Meyerson Centennial Professor Emeritus of Business Administration, Department of Management, at the University of Texas in Austin. At UT, he has served as department chairman, assistant to the president, director of analysis and planning, director of the Business Foundations Program and as chairman or member of many faculty committees. In addition, he has consulted with dozens of companies and organizations and is currently serving on four corporate boards and one hospital advisory board.

Over the years, his academic assignments have include West Texas State Teachers College, 1955-56; Harvard Business School, instructor, 1956-59; Northwestern University, assistant professor, 1960-63; University of Texas, professor, 1963-95; and professor emeritus at University of Texas.

He also was a Sloan lecturer at Stanford University in 1967-68; a U.S. delegate OECD International Conference on Management Education in Paris, France, in 1971; and a guest lecturer for a series of lectures on Strategic Planning, I.N.S.E.A.D., at Fontainebleu, France, in 1975.

During his 40-year teaching career, Brandt authored and co-authored 12 books, and worked on several dozen oral business history projects which resulted in 13 publications and 10 monographs. Currently, he is working on two books, one of children's stories and one on hope.

Brandt is married to Norma Pirtle, whom he met when she lived across the alley from the house the Brandts lived in when they moved to Pampa in 1938. That began a 60-year period of friendship and love. After years in school together, the couple wed in December of 1953 at Pampa's First Presbyterian Church during a snowstorm three days after he completed the U.S. Army Field Artillery Officer Candidate School.

They have two children: daughter Mary is a pediatric surgeon on the faculty of the Baylor Medical School in Houston and son Stan is the owner of Brandt Communication Services Co., a communications and cabling company in Houston.

J. David Fatheree

J. David Fatheree is the grandson of Pampa pioneer T.D. Hobart and son of Pampa civic leaders Clyde and Laura Hobart Fatheree. Thus, he is part of a family tradition of service to country, church, school and community.

Fatheree was born in Pampa in 1936 and is a 1954 graduate of Pampa High School. He served two years as a cheerleader, one year as a member of the Student Council and three years as a member of the PHS golf team. He also was in the Latin Club, performed in the senior play and was the golf Class B champion in 1950.

He graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1958 with a degree in business administration. While at OU, Fatheree was an officer of Sigma Chi Fraternity and a member of the U.S. Army ROTC, receiving his second lieutenant's commission. He completed his active military duty at Fort Lee in Virginia in 1959 and then served in the Texas National Guard, where he attained the rank of captain.

In the early 1960s, Fatheree returned to Pampa and entered the insurance business. He has been active in the Pampa United Way for 30 years, serving as chairman of the board from 1974 through 1978, as drive chairman in 1978 and currently is a division chairman.

Other community organizations which Fatheree has served, either as a board member or officer, are The Salvation Army, the Ronald McDonald House, the Pampa Country Club, the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, the Pampa Community Concert Association, the Pampa Sheltered Workshop, the Rotary Club, the First Presbyterian Church and the Boy Scouts of America. He is currently a member of the White Deer Land Museum Foundation's Board of Directors.

Fatheree has twice chaired his own Class of 1954 reunion committees and yearly attends the reunions of other Pampa High School graduating classes. In 1996, the Committee for the Preservation of the Class of 1956 made him an honorary member of their class.

He has been an active promoter of the PHS landscaping project begun by PHS graduates and has worked on committees to honor former Pampa coaches and athletes.

Fatheree and his wife, Mary, live at 1911 Christine, just a few blocks from Pampa High. He and their son, David M. Fatheree, own and operate Fatheree Insurance Agency, which regularly boosts Pampa's athletic teams and school organizations and has run numerous adds in Pampa publications and the radio station supporting and congratulating Harvester teams and activities. David M. was a member of the 1984 state champion Harvester golf team.

The Fatherees have a daughter-in-law, Kristin, and three grandchildren: Taylor, Garrett and Madison.

Dr. Jim Bond

Following graduation from Pampa High School in 1954, Jim Bond pursued formal education in preparation for the Christian ministry. His academic credentials include bachelor of arts, master of divinity and doctor of ministry degrees. He is the recipient of two honorary degrees.

During his ministerial career, Bond has served the Church of the Nazarene in a variety of capacities, including pastor, missionary to Brazil and president of the denomination's international youth organization.

In 1983 Dr. Bond was elected president of Point Loma Nazarene College in San Diego, Calif. Under his leadership, the college has enjoyed outstanding success, including a 40 percent increase in enrollment, completion of a campus master plan and a growing reputation as one of the nation's premier Christian colleges.

Bond also has served on the boards of numerous state and national higher education associations.

Bond is probably best known in Pampa for his athletic accomplishments. He led the Harvesters to two straight undefeated basketball seasons, resulting in state championships in 1953 and 1954. He was named to the basketball All-State Team both years and to the All-American Team.

In recent years, Bond has been inducted into five athletic Halls of Fame, including the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame, the Texas Basketball Hall of Fame, the National High School Athletic Hall of Fame and the NAIA Hall of Fame. Although drafted to play professional basketball, he declined in order to pursue his life's calling.

Bond and his wife, Sally, have two children and six grandchildren.

Earlier this year, Bond was in Pampa to help in the tribute to former Harvester basketball coach Clifton McNeely held Jan. 17 in the McNeely Fieldhouse, named for the coach who took the Pampa basketball team to four state championships, two of them under Bond.

Dr. R. Malcolm Brown Jr.

R. Malcolm Brown Jr. was born Jan. 2, 1939, in Pampa, the son of Clementine and R. Malcolm Brown. His father was a new physician in the town, and his mother, he recalls, was to engage in the "exciting and challenging business of raising three children" — Malcolm, Michael and Mark.

He grew up at 1206 Christine, where he grew gladiolus in his parents' back yard. He also spent many hours practicing the piano under the guidance of Elise Donaldson Waters. He played the piano in the junior high school assemblies.

One of his closest neighbors, was M.E. Lamb, a Pampa High School biology teacher. Her son went to school at an Ivy League college and returned with exciting news about college life back East. He really became interested in science.

Brown's first serious interests were photography and gardening. His father, an excellent photographer, taught him the art of making movies and slides during their summer vacations. Eventually, he learned how to develop and process film and prints.

With a budding curiosity in science, gardening and music, he entered high school in 1953 with perhaps too many interests, he says. His grades suffered and one of his teachers told him he would never make it to college.

Luckily, he came across a very influential teacher, Elizabeth Hurley, who had great patience and taught him how to write and use his creative skills as a photographer and member of the annual staff. He was appointed editor of the Harvester yearbook in 1957 his senior year.

A photo he made of Mary Innon, Pampa's Oil Progress Queen, won him first place in a state contest. He also traveled as a school photographer for Coach Clifton McNeely's basketball team to Austin, where the team won the state championship.

Brown decided he wanted to attend the University of Texas at Austin. He eventually received two degrees from UT-Austin and now has the privilege of teaching and conducting research in this Texas flagship institution.

While in high school, he also became interested in amateur radio, being taught the code and receiving help to pass novice and conditional licenses from Herman Whatley. That single event launched Brown all the more into science.

He built dozens of Heathkits, including a hi-fi system. He worked summers at his father's clinic doing X-rays and laboratory work. With experience in electronics and interests in amateur radio, he decided to build an X-ray machine and enter it in the science fair in Canyon. To his surprise, he won first place with the option to invite a teacher of his choice to attend the National Science Fair in Los Angeles. He chose his chemistry teacher, Elaine Ledbetter.

Brown says the event influenced both his and Mrs. Ledbetter's future lives. She went on to become president of the National Science Teachers Association, and he used his knowledge much later in life to work with cellulose biosynthesis and atomic and molecular imaging with electron microscopes.

Currently, Brown is the Professor of Botany, Johnson & Johnson Centennial Chair in Plant Cell Biology at the University of Texas at Austin.

Mary Jane Rose Johnson

Mary Jane Rose Johnson was born March 22, 1950, in Pampa to Rex R. and Maxine Wheatley Rose. During her years at Pampa High School, from which she graduated in 1968, she was named to the All-State A Capella Choir. She also was selected to Who's Who, was named Basketball Queen and served as a cheerleader for three years. She is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a degree in music. She later obtained a master's degree in music from West Texas State University. While at Texas Tech, Johnson was in the choir and the Madrigal Singing Group and was a member of the Phi Fi Sorority. She also taught music at Amarillo College.

She married David Stith Johnson of Austin in 1971. They reside in Amarillo and have two children, daughter Taylor, 19, and son Greer, 12. Johnson was the winner of the first world-renowned tenor Luciano Pavarotti competition in 1981 and later appeared with him in a televised performance of Musetta in Puccini's La Boheme with the opera company of Philadelphia.

This success came after she had previously won numerous other competitions, including the Post Advanced Division of the National Association of Teachers of Singing Contest at the national convention in Houston in 1978, the Regional Metropolitan Opera Auditions in 1980, the National Metropolitan Opera Semi-Finalist in 1980 and the Aims Summer Vocal Institute Scholarship, also in 1980.

In addition to her voice training, she also has studied Italian, German, French and Spanish.

Other important highlights of her appearances on television include the nationally televised Pavarotti Plus Gala, Live from Lincoln Center, and the CBS Sunday This Morning with Charles Kuralt.

On March 10, 1996, KACV-TV, the PBS station of Amarillo, aired a documentary, also produced by KACV, of Johnson titled Mary Jane Johnson: From the Heart. She has also been interviewed by Texas Monthly and appeared in its August 1996 magazine issue in an article titled "Magic Johnson."

Johnson made her debut on Jan. 27, 1996, at the Metropolitan Opera at Lincoln Center in New York City in the title role of Emilia Mary in Janacek's The Makropoulos Case.

She has sung major roles throughout the world in France, England, Italy, Canada, Japan and Australia, as well as in San Francisco, Washington, Pittsburgh, Houston and Chicago in the United States. She sang again with Pavarotti in May 1996 in Atlantic City, N.J., and has also sung numerous times in Santa Fe, N.M.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Arrogance should have some limits

In 1991, six of the seven justices of the California Supreme Court voted to uphold that state's term-limit constitutional amendment covering legislators and statewide elected officials. The U.S. Supreme Court declined to review that ruling.

Now, that judgment — and the judgment of the millions of California voters who enacted Proposition 130, a term-limit initiative — has been arrogantly swept aside by a single federal judge sitting in Oakland. "Arrogance" is not too strong a word for U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken's recent decision, because it flouted a state judiciary's authority to assess the validity of the state's own fundamental law, and imposed a judge's personal policy biases where there is no clear constitutional imperative.

Judge Wilken took issue with the "life-time ban" provision in Proposition 130, barring politicians from ever returning to a particular office once the prescribed term limit had been served. Yet this very issue had been addressed by the California Supreme Court in its 1991 ruling, and the justices found no violation of the federal Constitution. The U.S. Supreme Court declined to disturb their holding.

In a real sense, then, the matter was settled. But Judge Wilken allowed a second lawsuit — on the same grounds that had already been addressed and settled by the state Supreme Court — to be entered in her court. She could have refused to take the case — and, indeed by not refusing she violated a rule of judicial prudence that says federal courts ought to take pains to show deference to state court findings regarding state constitutions. This rule acknowledges the federalist nature of our political and legal systems, and the fundamental role that states play in the nation's governmental framework.

The delicate balance between state and federal authority — a balance that helps undergird individual liberty by diffusing political power — is not self-enforcing. Ultimately it can be sustained only by the exercise of a mature restraint by federal authorities. Judge Wilken did not prove up to that obligation.

There was certainly no clear constitutional issue mandating her invasion of the state judiciary's prerogatives. Life-time bans within the context of term-limit laws have been countenanced by federal courts in a number of instances. The U.S. Supreme Court, for example, upheld a term-limit law for Georgia's governor that includes a lifetime prohibition on return to office.

In upholding Prop. 130, California's Supreme Court was recognizing common sense as well as legal maxims acknowledged by federal appellate courts and the U.S. Supreme Court. "The fact you have a right to vote, the federal Supreme Court has said, means your right to vote is equal to everybody else's right to vote," Deborah La Fentra, senior attorney for the Pacific Legal Foundation — and a litigant in favor of Prop. 130 — told us. "It doesn't mean you have a right to vote for any particular individual. Or that any individual has an unrestricted right to run for any particular office."

Regulations that impose restrictions on voting or seeking office are hardly unprecedented. There is a distinction only of degree between such prudent restrictions and the determination by California voters that an office holder there should not be allowed to serve more than a set number of terms.

Judge Wilken's ruling is certain to be appealed, and the appellate process could be lengthy. At least she suspended her order until that process is complete, a move that limits the immediate disruptive impact.

Judge Wilken obviously harbors a philosophical opposition to term limits with a lifetime ban; her ruling brands the California measure "extreme." As a voter and a citizen, she has a right to that view. But to translate that personal position into a judicial edict, when there is no clear constitutional warrant for such a ruling, gives more credence, if more were needed, to the view that too many judges see themselves as black-robed legislators.

Jonathan is reasonably tolerant of his younger brother. After all, there are few joys in life than can compare with keeping toys just out of David's reach. Jonathan will climb onto his "excavator" (his favorite toy truck), cry, "Come one, Davey!" and scoot into the dining room. David, game but slower, thumps along trying to keep up. Sometimes, Jonathan stops the truck just as David's fingers are coming within inches of touching it — only to pull away at the last second, plunging David down onto his belly.

Jonathan thinks this is terribly funny.

You wonder, as you raise these children, how much to reprove and when to hold your tongue. That behavior, in an older child or adult, would unquestionably be considered cruel. And though children his age are capable of cruelty, I don't think Jonathan is cruel. (Maybe no mother thinks this of her own child.) He's impish, and frequently heedless, but those are features of his age. I don't want to scold him so often when he plays with David that he decides it isn't worth it.

Besides, he has his generous moments. In the early months of David's life, Jonathan rushed into David's room when he heard crying to give the baby his "blankie" for comfort. This was about on the order of Itzhak Perlman handing a stranger his Stradivarius.

David, of course, idolizes Jonathan, despite the indignities that he suffers at his hands. When Jonathan enters a room, David lights up with delight, waving his arms or clapping his hands.

Mona Charen

Give the two of them a tennis ball, and you will hear squeals you didn't know were on the scale.

I know that it is unrealistic to expect Jonathan's feelings to be as unambiguously positive as David's at this stage. He has kissed David's cheek, saying, "I love you, Davey." On the other hand, he told the baby sitter the other day "I want to hit David." She recommended otherwise and added, "You love David." "I don't want to love David" was the reply.

This is all quite normal and even mild compared with the stories I've heard. A friend whose daughter was three when the new baby arrived related the following remark from her little darling: "Mommy, I would never think of taking a pillow and holding it over the baby's face until he stopped breathing."

Being the parent of two is much more a psychological challenge than being the parent of one. Striving for scrupulous fairness, one errs in one direction and then another. Mark Twain once said, "Nothing looms so large in the world of a child as injustice." I am not one who believes that one mistake made by a parent in the preschool years of a child will damage him for life. But our capacity to hurt feelings is immense. I must keep reminding myself that although Jonathan has adjusted nicely to David's arrival, it cannot help but hurt him to see me exult in baby love. (I don't think David minds when I smother Jon in kisses, but I wouldn't bet on it.) I try to remember what my friend who just received her Ph.D. in psychology recommends: "When you're with both children, be like a camp counselor: cheery, efficient, friendly. Save the adoring kisses for when you're alone with each."

It is also a physical challenge to keep up with the boys. You are constantly going up and down stairs to change diapers, lifting them to the sink to wash faces and hands, scolding them for jumping on the bed, washing their toys when you come in from outside (as I mentioned, Jonathan is into excavators), and chasing after them as they run, swim, jump and ride.

I used to read books, listen to music, go to movies and shop. Now I read about bulldozers, listen to Disney songs, watch Disney videos (1,000 times over) and shop for kids' stuff. I can understand why some moms at home worry that their brains are atrophying. There are days when I think, "Only 15 more years until they go to college," but even when I am at my most exhausted, I know that that day will be, in part, a day of mourning for me.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 19, the 139th day of 1997. There are 226 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 19, 1536, Anne Boleyn, the second wife of England's King Henry VIII, was beheaded after she was convicted of adultery.

On this date:

In 1588, the Spanish Armada set sail for England; it was soundly defeated by the English fleet the following August.

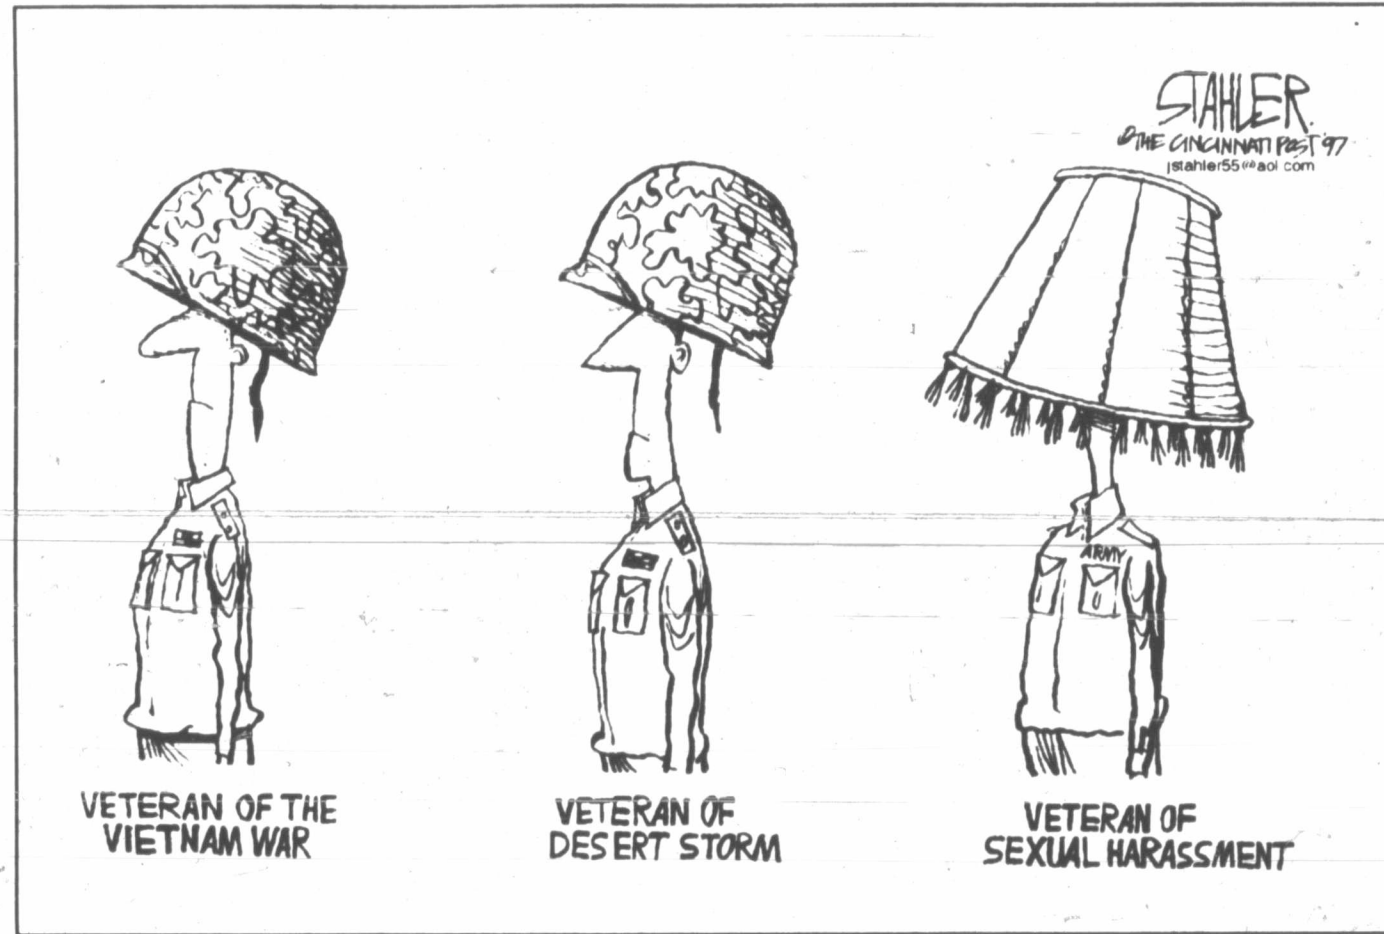

In 1643, delegates from four New England colonies met in Boston to form a confederation.

In 1906, the Federated Boys' Clubs, forerunner of the Boys' Clubs of America, were organized.

In 1921, Congress passed the Emergency Quota Act, which established national quotas for immigrants.

In 1935, T.E. Lawrence, also known as "Lawrence of Arabia," died in England from injuries sustained in a motorcycle crash.

In 1943, in an address to the U.S. Congress, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill pledged his country's full support in the war against Japan.

'Marriage Shock' strikes again

Margaret was feeling overwhelmed. She had planned on a simple, unconventional wedding in her hometown of Chicago. But before long, a Holiday Inn in western Michigan was booked for the event, and Margaret was on her way to her third bridal shower — given by her future in-laws, and attended by people she had never met.

And then there was the big white dress. "I tried not to spend too much money on it," she said. "Because they all basically look alike." Then she paused. "You know, I really wanted to keep things simple, but then I realized that in order to do anything different it's just so much more effort. So you just end up doing things the way everyone else does them because that's the easiest thing to do."

I was reminded of that frantic call — of the way this smart and independent woman felt completely caught in the undertow of her own wedding — as I read Dalma Heyn's new book, Marriage Shock (Villard). The subject of Heyn's fascinating book is marriage, not weddings, but the voices in it sound very much like Margaret's.

Marriage shock, says Heyn, is the feeling that married women get when they suddenly don't feel as free to assert their independence, their sexuality, their creativity, their sense of fun. One woman, for example, always wore funky, sexy clothes to her boyfriend's office Christmas party, and loved to dance with his co-workers. But after they married, she stood primly by her husband's side in a tweed suit, even though he kept asking her why she wasn't dancing. Other women spoke of giving up forms of personal expression — journal writing, professional singing — after walking down the aisle. Still others found themselves acting strangely schoolmarmish; one woman recalls gently scolding the teller of a racy joke, where she once would have laughed.

The ghost of Donna Reed, says Heyn, is still haunting many of America's married women — even women who don't know who Donna Reed is. The culture has so thoroughly absorbed the idea of the Good Wife, that even now women can't quite shake the idea that when they marry their voices should become a little softer, their sexual histories a little tamer, their ambitions a little more restrained. "I monitored my words a little so we would get along really, really well," said one recently married woman. "Now he wanted to get married as much as I did — in fact, he was the one who pushed for it. And yet it was as if there was an understanding that I had got what I wanted and in exchange for getting what I wanted, if I wanted to keep things good between us, I had better toe the mark. You have to understand, no one said this. This is how I was acting; it was as if we agreed on something."

Another woman describes why she started second-guessing her plans to go to medical school: "Any mention of school felt like a direct challenge to my marriage, to marriage itself — no, worse, a challenge of my love for my husband! Like, if you love him, if you love marriage, if you love your home, blah blah, you'll what? You'll shut up! You'll shut up!"

Heyn believes that for many women one result of these inner Donna Reeds is depression, and she makes the point that the rate of depression for married women is three times the rate for single women. Another result is divorce — which, she notes, is usually initiated by the woman.

I don't know if Heyn's theory on why so many Americans are divorcing is correct, but it does make a lot more sense than some of the others going around these days. It seems quite possible that the reason women are leaving their marriages has nothing to do with culture of the '60s or the structure of no-fault divorce laws. Maybe they are leaving because ... they're not happy.

And maybe the solution to the problem is not creating punitive divorce laws or putting everyone's brains back in 1955 (as if that were even possible.) Maybe we should try to figure out how to make marriage a better experience all-around.

"In the past 25 years women have bloomed," writes Heyn. "How can we still be talking about fitting modern wives back into an ancient institution, rather than enlarging an ancient institution to make room for modern wives?"

EEOC mandates are unreasonable

I was on the south lawn of the White House in 1990 when George Bush signed the Americans with Disabilities Act, proclaiming "a new era of equality" for "our fellow citizens with disabilities." I cheered the new law like everyone else.

Some years later, I see its manifestations.

Much of the law fronting the building where I work was paved over to triple the number of handicap parking spaces. And though the spaces have never been close to fully occupied, I nonetheless think it was a good thing to do.

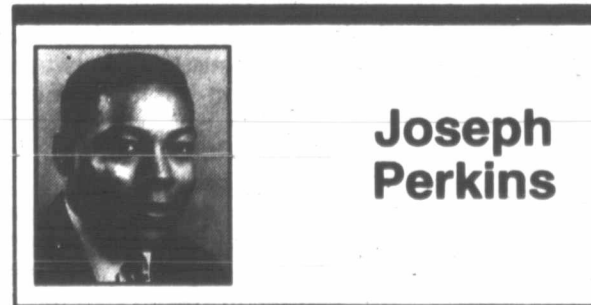

The elevator in the building where I work was retrofitted not so long ago. Among other things, they lowered the elevator buttons below waist level and affixed braille numerals beside them. And though 99% of my co-workers are neither wheelchair bound nor blind, I think that, too, was a good thing to do.

But even those of us who support the spirit of the ADA, who think it is a good thing to reasonably accommodate the special needs of competent, qualified disabled Americans, have to be troubled by some of the law's unintended consequences.

Indeed, when President Bush proudly affixed his signature to the disabled rights legislation, he hardly could have imagined that of all the discrimination complaints filed under the law, most have come not from blind or deaf or wheelchair bound Americans, but from folks claiming back problems (that's right.)

Nor could he have imagined that the definition of disability under the law ("a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of life's activities") would be so broadly interpreted as to include drug and alcohol abusers.

That brings me to the guidelines issued by the

Joseph Perkins

Clinton Equal Employment Opportunity Commission recently that specify how employers are to accommodate workers with mental disabilities. In a fell swoop, the EEOC has all but guaranteed an explosion of discrimination lawsuits by workers claiming all manner of mental health problems.

It would be fine if the government had specified the mental illnesses covered by the ADA. Many, if not most, mental health experts can agree with five — schizophrenia, manic depression, severe depression, obsessive-compulsive disorder and generalized anxiety disorder. All are legitimate, diagnosable mental disorders that can be treated sufficiently to enable an individual to lead a productive work life.

But the EEOC has placed no limitation whatsoever on what may be considered a mental disability. A worker can, for instance, claim a "narcissistic personality disorder," the disability from which court martialed Army drill instructor Delmar Simpson purportedly suffers. Or they can claim a "sex addiction," like Michael Kennedy, who found himself unable to keep his hands off the 14-year-old baby sitter.

If a worker can get some shrink or another to verify that they suffer from one exotic mental condition or another, then employers are required under the EEOC's dictate to make every effort to accommodate them.

So a worker with a narcissistic personality disorder could be entitled to a mirrored office where they can admire themselves all day. Or a worker addicted to sex could be entitled to watch porn films during their coffee breaks.

The EEOC may dismiss these scenarios as absurd or farfetched, but the agency's new rules bring them into the realm of possibility. Indeed, in its guidelines, the EEOC says an employer may, for instance, have to "provide room dividers, partitions or other soundproofing or visual barriers between work spaces" for workers who have problems concentrating because of a mental condition.

It also advises that employers should be understanding of workers who are chronically late, who exercise poor judgment or who display hostility to the boss or fellow workers because those traits "may be linked to mental impairments."

These mandates are not reasonable. They do not merely provide workplace equality for our fellow citizens with mental disabilities. They give the mentally disabled workplace rights and entitlements that are far above those of not only non-disabled workers, but physically disabled workers as well.

The ADA is a well intentioned law that has yielded results that neither Congress nor President Bush envisioned in 1990. Even supporters of the law, like yours truly, recognize that the definition of disability has proven overly broad and that the workplace requirements imposed upon employers have become increasingly unreasonable.

FBI evidence looms in McVeigh case

DENVER (AP) — Prosecutors prepared to wrap up their case this week with FBI laboratory evidence they hope will help show Timothy McVeigh used a fertilizer truck bomb to destroy the Oklahoma City federal building.

FBI chemist Steven Burmeister was expected to tell jurors that he found explosives residue on the T-shirt and faded black jeans McVeigh was wearing when he was arrested 90 minutes after the April 1995 blast.

Testimony was scheduled to resume today after three days off. The trial was in recess Friday so a juror could attend her son's college graduation.

Burmeister also was expected to testify that he found ammonium nitrate crystals on a red-and-yellow fragment of the Ryder truck that carried the bomb. Prosecutors contend the chemical fertilizer was the bomb's main ingredient.

Jurors have already been shown the blue windbreaker, two T-shirts, the black jeans and a pair of black boots McVeigh was wearing when he was arrested on a gun charge during a traffic stop shortly after the bombing.

One shirt had a picture of a tree sprouting scarlet drops of blood and a quote from Thomas Jefferson: "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants."

Defense attorney Stephen Jones has attacked the FBI's handling of evidence, claiming agents reached conclusions that weren't justified and that crucial evidence was contaminated in the laboratory.

A Justice Department report last month criticized parts of the FBI crime lab. The report said a lab supervisor had decided a 4,000-pound ammonium nitrate-fuel oil bomb was used at Oklahoma City based on alleged ingredient purchases by the defendants rather than scientific evidence.

Prosecutors removed four FBI agents criticized for their lab work from their list of witnesses. It was unknown whether U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch would allow Jones to pursue the lab's problems during his defense.

McVeigh, a 29-year-old Gulf War veteran, could be sentenced to death if convicted of murder and conspiracy in the bombing that killed 168 people and wounded 500 in the worst act of terrorism within the United States.

The prosecution is finishing its case after less than a month with a streamlined testimony that has surprised legal observers with its brevity.

In testimony last week, FBI fingerprint expert Louis Hupp said that he found McVeigh's prints on a receipt for one ton of ammonium nitrate fertilizer.

But he also said McVeigh's fingerprints could not be found on the rental agreement for the Ryder truck or on the truck's key. Nor were McVeigh's prints found at the rental agency where a witness said the suspect picked up the truck two days before the blast.

Not that the prosecution's case has been only physical evidence. With pictures in the courtroom and emotional accounts from bombing survivors, the dead have been remembered.

The Pride of Pampa High School Harvester Band performs in an outdoor concert for residents of Coronado Healthcare Center to help them celebrate National Nursing Home Week on Thursday afternoon.

Band, balloons help Coronado Healthcare Center residents mark Nursing Home Week

In celebration of National residents were entertained Nursing Home Week, Thursday afternoon by the Coronado Healthcare Center Pride of Pampa High School Band in an outdoor concert.

Nursing home residents heard instrumentals from the 1930s through the 1960s, conducted by PHS band director Bruce Collins.

Some of the tunes were "Come Home Bill Bailey," "There's a Tavern in the Town," "Moon River," "Nobody's Sweetheart" and "Stars and Stripes Forever."

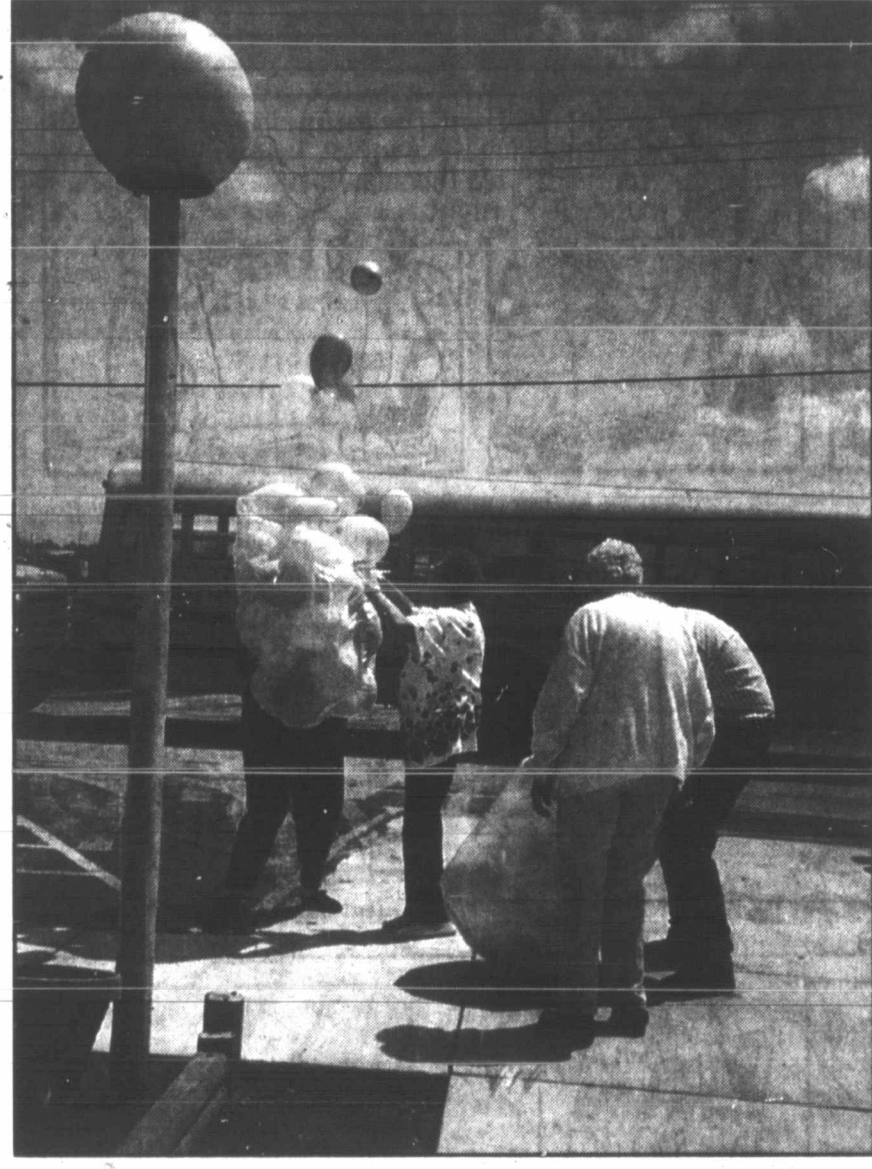

A special request was made from Juanita Wood, who wanted to hear the Pampa High School song, because she and all of her children graduated from PHS, she said. The melody for the school song is based on "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

During the band concert, large bundles of air-filled balloons were released into the air by Pauline Young and Alta Sanders, who live at the nursing home. Each inflated balloon contains resident names.

According to Jeanette Jackson, CHC activities director, the balloons sometimes drift long distances, and those who find one of the balloons with the name of an elderly person are encouraged to write a letter to acknowledge the man or woman in Pampa.

"Last year one of the balloons found its way to Little Rock, Ark., and one of our resident members, Mrs. Jewell Greer, received a letter from an Arkansas family," Jackson said.

Whoever is acknowledged with a letter response, the resident member will be given a plaque, with his or her name on it, to commemorate National Nursing Home Week, Jackson said.

Female pilot demands honorable discharge

MINOT, N.D. (AP) — On the eve of her military trial on charges of adultery and lying, the nation's first female B-52 pilot offered to resign the job she has dedicated her life to rather than face court-martial.

But 1st Lt. Kelly Flinn insisted she would go only if given an honorable discharge, something that is very rare and has not been granted to anyone who has faced court martial in the Air Force during the past three years.

"This was one of the most difficult choices I have had to make," Flinn said in an interview on 60 Minutes Sunday, her voice breaking with emotion.

"I've dedicated my entire life and pursuit of my dreams to flying in the Air Force and it's difficult to walk away from something," she said.

The planned court-martial of Flinn — a rising Air Force star who once was featured in a promotional film — has generated debate about military rules that ban relationships with military subordinates and adultery.

Flinn, who is single, faces trial at Minot Air Force Base on charges of having an affair with a man married to an enlisted woman, and having a relationship with an enlisted man. She is also accused of lying when questioned by investigators.

The Air Force did not respond to her offer to resign, but in an unusual move last week Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall indicated she would consider letting Flinn resign with an honorable discharge if she made the request.

Attorneys plan to present her formal resignation request to the Air Force today. She faces dismissal and up to 9 1/2 years in prison if found guilty in a court-martial scheduled to begin Tuesday.

Flinn, who had a promising Air Force career and once hoped to become an astronaut, said in the Sunday TV interview that her decision to quit didn't come easily.

The 26-year-old pilot said she decided Saturday that resigning was the best way to resolve what has become a bruising battle for both sides.

"I think this will give both myself and the Air Force the opportunity to come to some kind of reconciliation between the two of us and to come to some peaceful agreement," Flinn said.

Flinn said she made a mistake but the punishment does not fit her crime.

The torch was then handed off to Amarillo Police Chief Henry Neal.

Usual deadline: On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraisal value was mailed to you, whichever is later).

Late protests (if you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.) Before the day the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact the appraisal district for more information.

Special deadlines: Change of use (if the appraisal district has informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land) Before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

ARB Changes (if the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed) Before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

OU wins inaugural Big 12 baseball tourney

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — With a strong wind blowing out and both teams out of pitchers, the result was predictable. Texas Tech and Oklahoma got together for a slugfest Sunday night, with Oklahoma winning 19-17 to claim the inaugural Big 12 Tournament title.

Tech used seven pitchers; Oklahoma went through five. The Red Raiders had 19 hits, nine for extra bases; Oklahoma had 21 hits including four triples — three in one inning. "You don't see this in professional baseball. The kids out there tonight were playing for fun and putting it all on the line," said Oklahoma coach Larry Cochell, who led his team back after it lost its first-round game to Texas A&M. The Sooners (39-18) had beaten Oklahoma State earlier Sunday, ending OSU's 16-year run as conference tournament champs.

The tournament title was Oklahoma's first since 1979, when the Sooners played in the Big Eight. It assured them a spot in the NCAA tournament, the pairings of which were to be announced this afternoon.

Texas Tech (46-12) knew before the tournament that it would be playing host to a regional.

Oklahoma came back through the losers' bracket after a first-round loss to Texas A&M. The Sooners had beaten Tech 5-3 on Friday, when both teams still had some fresh pitching arms. Neither had that luxury Sunday night in a game that lasted one minute short of four hours.

Oklahoma trailed 14-8 after five innings and 17-11 after seven. Then the Sooners sent 12 batters to the plate in the eighth, when Tech used five pitchers including second baseman Keith Ginter, who pitched the final 1 1/3 innings.

Two of Oklahoma's runs in the eighth came on a single by pinch hitter Chad Mead. But the Sooners also got two runs on passed balls and scored the go-ahead run when Javier Flores came across on a double steal.

They scored an insurance run in the ninth on an RBI single by Willy Hill.

"This was a great game, a great win and I'm happy for the program, but I can't even remember how we scored in the eighth inning," Cochell said.

Shayne Fisher (1-0) got the victory in relief, and Geoff Geary worked the ninth for his eighth save.

Oklahoma starter Rick Park got through the first inning without much trouble, but then gave up three runs on four hits in the second, and five runs on four more hits in the third.

Tech's big innings were an answer to a quick start by Oklahoma. The Sooners got consecutive, two-out triples from Jose Montenegro, Harold Betts and Derek Wathan to start a four-run second inning.

Hill gave the Sooners their fourth triple two innings later when they scored twice to make the score 8-8.

Texas Tech took the lead again with six runs in the fifth. Ginter drove in two runs with a single, and Shane Langen had a two-run double. The inning also included two hit batsmen and a balk.

After Oklahoma scored twice in the seventh to get within 14-11, Jason Landreth hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the seventh to key a three-run inning.

The run total surpassed the most ever in a Southwest Conference or Big Eight tournament. The record in the SWC was 29 runs in 1980, when Arkansas beat Texas A&M 19-10; the Big Eight record came last year when Oklahoma State beat Iowa State 15-11.

Randall won the opener, 10-3, Friday in the best of three series.

FOOTBALL

DALLAS (AP) — A misdemeanor perjury trial for a former topless dancer accused of fabricating sexual assault allegations against Dallas Cowboys players Erik Williams and Michael Irvin was postponed this morning.

Defense attorneys for Nina Shahravan asked for the continuance. The trial was rescheduled for July 28.

Attorneys made no comment. Prosecutors chose to try Ms. Shahravan on the more serious Class A perjury charge, instead of the Class B charge of making a false police report, because of the stiffer sentence if convicted, Assistant District Attorney Mike Gillett said.

Ms. Shahravan, 24, of Mesquite told police Dec. 30 that the night before she was raped by Williams and an unidentified man at Williams' home while Irvin pointed a gun at her and videotaped the attack.

A day later, Marty Griffin of Dallas-Fort Worth TV station KXAS-TV reported her allegation and police later held a news conference that was widely broadcast.

Ms. Shahravan conceded on Jan. 10 that Irvin was not present and that she willingly had sex with Williams and another man, according to a police affidavit. Police cleared the players later that day.

TENNIS

PARIS (AP) — The WTA and ATP Tour today released the tennis rankings that determine the seedings for the French Open but there is a lot of uncertainty at the top of the list.

Pete Sampras, expected to be top-seeded in the Grand Slam tournament that begins next Monday has lost his only two matches on clay this year.

Martina Hingis, No. 1 on the women's side, hasn't had any clay court matches and is scheduled to return after a knee injury from a horse riding accident April 21.

The organizing committee for the two-week tournament usually goes along with the rankings of the professional tennis associations despite the recent form of many players on clay. The actual draw and the final seedings will be on Friday.

Sampras' tournament victories are mostly on fast surfaces, including the last two Grand Slams — the U.S. and Australian Opens.

However he lost his first matches at the Monte Carlo Open and Italian Open.

On Monday, he had to withdraw from a match in the third set at the World Team Cup against Australia's Mark Philippoussis. Sampras was nursing an injury while training in Paris last week.

Michael Chang, No. 2, is coming off a loss at the Italian Open.

The list goes on. No. 3, Yevgeny Kafelnikov, last year's French Open winner, is struggling after breaking his hand just before the Australian Open. No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic has just returned after breaking his finger.

BASKETBALL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Spurs' dream of Tim Duncan in a San Antonio uniform alongside David Robinson is heading toward reality.

The Spurs won the NBA Draft Lottery held in Secaucus, N.J., on Sunday and rejoiced over the prospect of using the No. 1 draft pick to take Duncan, a 6-foot-10 center from Wake Forest.

"Tim Duncan is the man we are going to look at," said Spurs chairman Peter Holt. "It certainly will give us all a boost."

Texas tops Yanks, 4-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — John Wetteland waited six games to get a shot at the New York Yankees. When the opportunity against his old team arrived, he made it count.

But not — as usual — before making things interesting. The MVP of the World Series for the Yankees last season earned a save in his first appearance against New York, striking out Cecil Fielder with two runners on Sunday to finish the Texas Rangers' 4-2 victory.

The chance came against the teeth of the Yankees' batting order. Wetteland relieved to start the ninth and gave up a leadoff single to Tim Lincecum. Derek Jeter flied out and Bernie Williams struck out, but Tino Martinez walked on four pitches.

"I was trying to be very careful with Tino," Wetteland said of the major leagues' RBI leader.

Fielder came to the plate as the go-ahead run and took the count to 3-2. He said Wetteland threw him three or four consecutive breaking balls, and he expected another with a full count.

But Fielder whiffed on a fastball, "gas, right down the middle, belt high," said Wetteland, who notched his 10th save in 11 chances. He did not pitch in Texas' first five games against New York this year.

Texas manager Johnny Oates said watching Wetteland throw is "like going to the dentist." "It's no fun but when it's over you feel good," he said.

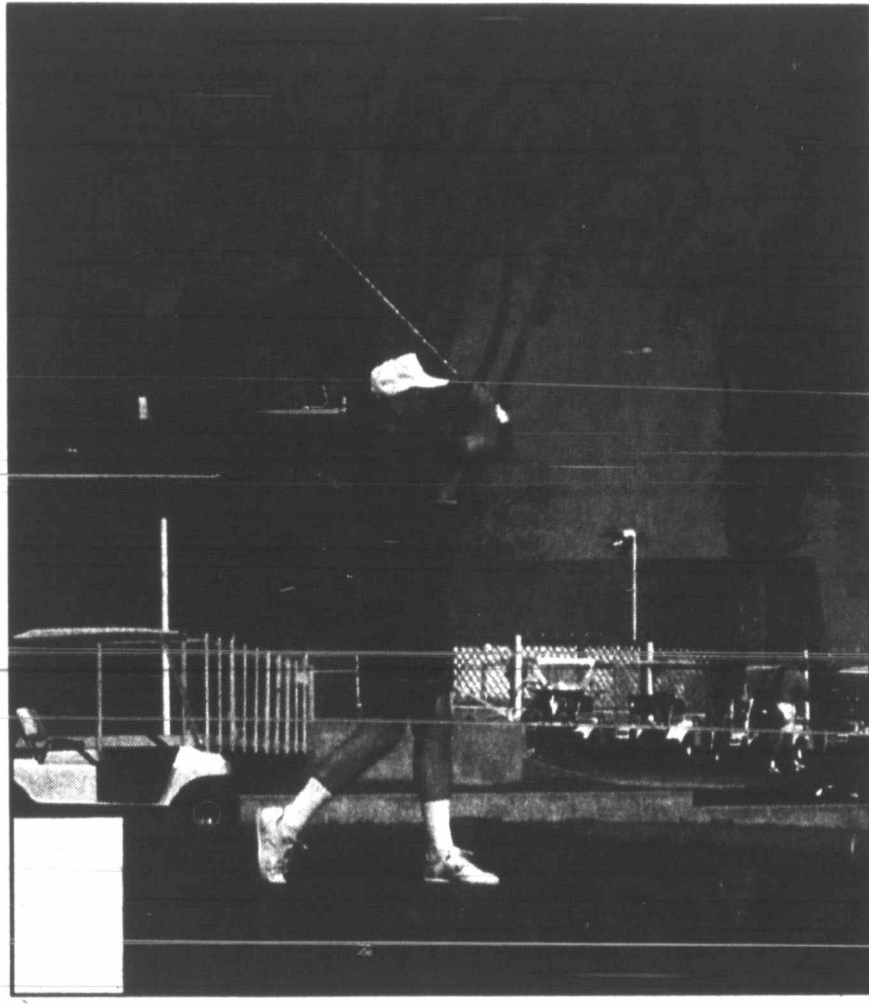

Yankees manager Joe Torre had said his goal for the series was to get out of Texas without facing his ex-stopper.

"You knew it was going to happen sooner or later, and you see him running in," Torre said. "It was strange."

Wetteland acknowledged it was no ordinary appearance.

"There was something special about it," he said. "The legs felt springier than usual. ... You'd like to say it was just another outing but it wasn't. I was waiting six games for this."

"It was fun, at least until I got runners at first and second. It's no walk in the park against those guys."

Indy 500 writes new chapter for Unser family

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Unser is well aware of the dangers at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, a track that claimed the life of his father.

Unser, the fifth member of Indy's most famous racing family to drive the Brickyard's 2 1/2-mile oval, rode an emotional roller coaster on Sunday.

First, he was in next Sunday's Indianapolis 500 despite an engine problem on the final day of time trials. Then he was bumped from the field, only to be reinstated by an Indy Racing League ruling after time trials were complete.

Faced with a possibly embarrassing situation in which seven starters would have qualified at slower speeds than two drivers who were bumped, race officials expanded the field to 35 cars. The decision put Unser and Lyn St. James back into the field.

"It's awesome," said Unser, whose father Jerry, brother of former Indy winners Al and Bobby Unser, was the first family member to run at Indy and died in a crash at the track in 1959.

The 38-year-old Unser wasn't apologizing for being in the race. "I feel like we earned it. We did earn it," Unser said. "The Indy 500's always the Indy 500. The 33 fastest cars will always run here. Beyond that, I'm just real happy they made the decision to let the fastest 33 cars run here. ... I also think it's the fair thing to do."

"That's what this race is about. That's why, I guess, as disappointed as I was about being bumped, it was not because I went too slow," said St. James, who is the only woman in the race for the sixth consecutive year.

The addition of the two cars came because of an IRL rule, which will be discarded starting next year. It promised up to 25 of the usual 33 spots to the season point leaders as a way of encouraging participation in the full series.

But the IRL said Friday there already were enough entrants and that it would abolish the guarantee, which was one of the reasons the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams and many of the top drivers have boycotted Indy.

"I think it's the best thing we ever did was get rid of the rule," said Ron Hemelgarn, the owner of both cars qualified by St. James and Unser. "You're not going to be happy when you've got a car that is the 25th fastest in the field and you get bumped out."

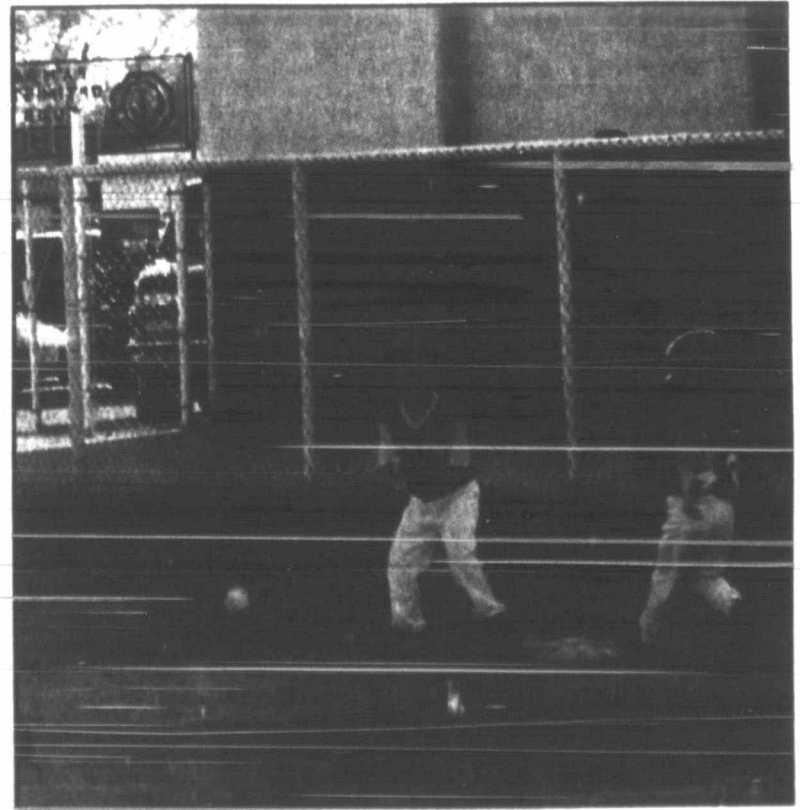

The seven who qualified slower than Unser and St. James had exemptions and already were in the lineup.

"We're all elated," said Unser, the nephew of three-time Indy winner Bobby and four-time champion Al Unser Sr. and cousin of two-time winner Al Unser Jr. "It's kind of like we were in court almost, and justice was served."

"This is not an easy call to make," IRL executive director Leo Mehl said. "I can't tell you this was absolutely the fairest thing, but it was the best thing we knew to do. It's a difficult situation when you see the fastest 33 cars weren't going to start. That can't happen."

"The 33 fastest cars will always run here," Unser said. "Having the 33 fastest cars in the field, that's what is all about. ... Scott Harrington went out there and put his life on the line to be one of the 33 fastest. ... My dad lost his life here. It's a tough place."

Holmes, Boatmen's First capture opening-day wins at Optimist Park

By MATT HUTCHISON
Sports Writer

PAMPA — This past Saturday marked the opening day for Optimist Club baseball with games for every age and classification being played at one time or another during the day. Fans and parents alike braved the summer heat to enjoy barbeque and baseball throughout the day.

Babe Ruth baseball played three games throughout the day, starting it all off with a contest between Holmes and Foto Time.

Holmes dominated the contest throughout, and earned a commanding 16-2 victory over Foto Time before handing the field over to the second game of the triple-header between Boatmen's First and the Lions Club.

Boatmen's came out swinging early, scoring six runs within the first two innings of the contest. Boatmen's sent Brent Coffee across home plate when the Number 5 batter, Craig Stout, was hit by a pitch with the bases juiced. Coffee had reached base earlier on an error by the pitcher.

In the second inning, Boatmen's starting pitcher, Michael Campos, led off the inning with a walk, followed by Jeremy Harper's single.

Coffee then sent the first run of the inning across the plate, capitalizing on a Jeff Warren pitch for an RBI single. But the scoring had just begun as Casey Meharg launched the ball past the outfielders, earning an RBI double that scored Harper. Tim Farris followed with a solid two-bagger of his own that drove in Coffee and Meharg to close out the inning's scoring for Boatmen's.

The Lions Club had trouble hitting off Boatmen's starter Jacob Campos early, going 1-2-3 in the first before finally getting started offensively in the second inning.

Woods claims Byron Nelson title

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Masters. The Byron Nelson. What's next for Tiger Woods?

The Colonial? Perhaps. Especially if he starts playing well.

Woods won his second consecutive tournament Sunday, adding the Nelson to the Masters a month ago, and the most amazing thing about it was that he played nowhere near as well as he did at Augusta.

In fact, Woods played very much like someone who had just taken four weeks off, which he did.

Jonathan Waggoner started the inning off by drawing a walk before eventually scoring due to a balk by the pitcher. Following Waggoner was Kevin Schaub, who pounded out a double to reach base before eventually scoring to complete the Lion Club's two runs of the inning.

As the game progressed, Boatmen's went cold at the plate, scoring only two more runs the remainder of the game. The Lions' aggressive offense paid off later in the game off reliever Antonio Estrada, and made the difference in the game, allowing the Lions Club to squeak by with a 9-8 opening-day victory over Boatmen's.

New fishing equipment stands up to the test at Mexican bass lake

By RAY SASSER
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — When you fish a new Mexican bass lake that's loaded with native fish, it's the perfect opportunity to try new products, new ideas and recycled ideas.

In three days of April fishing at Lake Huites, on Mexico's west coast, I caught well over 200 bass. That's as many fish as I would expect to catch in 20 days of picking my spots on good public lakes in Texas.

When you're handling that many bass, your thumb gets chewed up from putting it in a fish's mouth. A bass has small teeth but repeated exposure to the teeth has the same effect as a file.

That's why a simple, new product that I first saw in March at the B.A.S.S. MegaBucks Tournament at Richland Chambers Lake is so interesting.

Florida bass pro Jim Bitter had the little rubber sleeve that fit snugly over his thumb. It's called a "Lipper-Gripper." A Velcro patch on one side of the sleeve is supposed to lock firmly into the fish's teeth.

While the Velcro certainly provides a good surface for holding onto a fish, there's not enough bonding for the Velcro by itself to hold the weight of even a small bass.

What the Lipper-Gripper does is effectively protect your thumb from the fish's teeth. The Lipper-Gripper's down side is that it's uncomfortable during hot weather.

Lipper-Grippers should be on the market soon from Scientific Bass Products in Phoenix.

Another new product I tested in Mexico was Terminator spinnerbaits. You may have seen the television infomercials for this product. They feature football analyst Terry Bradshaw and bass pro Jimmy Houston.

I'm always leery of products that are sold strictly through infomercials.

Terminator spinnerbaits, however, seem like the real deal.

Jeff Stava, president of Outdoor Innovations, which markets Terminator spinnerbaits, said they're selling them through the infomercials because they don't believe fishermen are ready to pay $8 for a spinnerbait in a retail store.

What makes the Terminator so expensive is the titanium wire (actually a titanium-nickel alloy). Titanium is a naturally occurring metal known for great strength and light weight.

You can bend the wire on a Terminator in a complete circle, and it snaps back to its original position. Huites bass liked the Terminator just fine. I had three of the spinnerbaits with me.

After it had caught several bass, the fish tore a blade off the first Terminator I used and incapacitated it. I cast the second one into a bad spot and a fish took it away from me.

Aside from price, the only concern I have about the Terminator is the titanium wire. If the lure doesn't come perfectly aligned from the factory, it will be impossible to tune. Spinnerbaits are tuned by bending the wire frame.

Houston said he's been fishing the Terminator for about six months and he's convinced the titanium wire will revolutionize spinnerbaits.

"What we've done with spinnerbaits is make the stainless steel wire thinner and thinner to improve the lure's vibration," said Houston. "Unfortunately, thinner wire also makes a spinnerbait less durable. Titanium wire is not unbreakable but it's very tough."

Houston expects Terminator spinnerbaits to show up in retail stores by next spring, probably priced at about $8. He's selling them through his fishing store in Cookson, Okla., for $6.95 apiece.

Anyone planning to fly or otherwise travel extensively with fishing rods has probably shopped for commercial rod cases that cost $50 or more. When I flew to Mexico, I made my own rod case from a four-inch diameter plastic PVC sewer pipe.

I had the pipe cut at the hardware store to fit the length of my fishing rods, then glued threaded sleeves onto either end. A plastic cap screws into the sleeve, effectively sealing the rod case. As insurance against the caps coming off, I wrapped them with duct tape.

Duct tape was also used to secure a nylon strap as a handle to the case. I used pipe insulation to wrap around the rods and protect them from banging into one another inside the case.

Phillies downed Astros, 5-3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Garrett Stephenson was impressive in his Major League debut striking out 12 batters. For an encore on Sunday, he got his first Major League victory.

Stephenson allowed only six hits and one unearned run in seven innings as the Phillies defeated the Houston Astros, 5-3 on Sunday.

He struck out four and did not walk a batter.

In his debut against the Cardinals on May 13, Stephenson (1-0) and had a no-decision in the Phillies' 3-2 victory.

"I'm not worried about strikeouts, but I love not giving up walks, that's huge," said Stephenson, who struck out four and did not walk a batter.

"Just like in my last start, I wanted to keep us in the game and hopefully get a win."

Employee of the Month

(Pampa News photo)

Sgt. Dick Henley, food service manager I, has been selected as Jordan Unit TDCJ Employee of the Month. Henley has been with the Jordan Unit for three years and oversees the 24-hour officers dining room, as well as supervising workers, preparing inventory, providing security and serving as the commissary sergeant. He is a Pampa native and a graduate of Northwestern Oklahoma State University. Henley enjoys working with people and spends his off time coaching football, baseball and basketball, golfing and fishing. He is married with three children and is a member of the Central Baptist Church and the Optimist Club and volunteers with the Tralee Crisis Center.

Japan looks to outsiders to ease population woes

TOZAWAMURA, Japan (AP) — With two young children screaming nearby and a thickset mother-in-law watching her every move, Imelda Hayasaka appears harried.

But the Philippines native is shouldering more than just domestic burdens.

Like 22 other women from poorer Asian countries, she was brought to this mountain village of some 7,000 people to help solve a crisis sweeping rural Japan — the lack of brides.

Tozawamura's dilemma is part of a slow but debilitating exodus from Japan's countryside.

Nationwide, rice fields lie fallow because young people are abandoning farming. Villages are graying faster than the already disconcerting national average. More and more women are opting for single life in the cities over the rigors of married life on the farm.

In villages like Tozawamura, where there are three unmarried men for every single woman, trying to counter depopulation has meant some radical measures for this homogeneous society.

Ten years ago, the local government started to double as a marriage agency for its forlorn bachelors — many in their 40s and 50s — linking them up with women from the Philippines, Thailand, South Korea and other Asian countries.

"This is one of the ways we are trying to help sustain the life of our village," said Haruo Yaguchi, head of Tozawamura's planning department.

Nationwide, there were more than 20,000 marriages between Japanese men and foreign women in 1995, a tenfold increase over 1970, the Ministry of Health and Welfare says.

In the county where Tozawamura is located, the number of foreign women married to farmers jumped to 185 a year from ten a decade ago.

The numbers are still small measured against the overall population. Tozawamura's county, for instance, has 99,000 residents.

But the increasing number of foreign brides is injecting a melting-pot feeling to areas that have traditionally been among Japan's most conservative.

"The Chinese brides have begun teaching kids and housewives here how to make Chinese dumplings," Yaguchi said. "The events have really brought people together."

Not everyone welcomes the international flavor.

"People are grumbling privately that the influx of foreigners is going too far," said Isao Sato, a taxi driver.

Still, community leaders see few options.

A government study conducted in 1992 estimated the population of Japan's farming towns will drop 65 percent over the next 30 years to under nine million.

The median age for farmers, meanwhile, rose to 60 in 1990 from under 42 in 1960. Despite huge agricultural subsidies, only about 1,700 high school or college graduates become full-time farmers every year, less than one-third the number a decade ago.

Those who do stay on are usually first sons, who feel duty bound to carry on the family farm, and they often have trouble finding women willing to take on the burdens of being a farm wife.

A bride is immediately thrust into a pattern of caring for aging in-laws, waking up early to perform daily chores and, most importantly, bearing children.

Many foreign newcomers are in for the added shock that the standard of living in the Japanese countryside — though higher than that in most of Asia — is a far cry from the cosmopolitan affluence of Japan's big cities.

Police charge mother, grandmother with fatal poisoning of five-year-old

NEW YORK (AP) — A five-year-old girl's grandmother and mother are accused of forcing her to swallow a lethal cocktail of ammonia, vinegar, cayenne pepper and olive oil, then putting her body out with the trash.

Grandmother Rosa Wilkerson claims Amy Burney died of natural causes and lay dead for days before they put her out with the garbage in front of their Bronx apartment building.

Police say she was poisoned, possibly as punishment, and were going to sift through garbage at Staten Island's Fresh Kills landfill today in hopes of finding the body.

"She was restrained and her mouth was gagged, and she was intentionally forced to ingest this mixture by both her grandmother and her mother," Deputy Police Commissioner Patrick Kelleher said.

"We don't know exactly why she was forced to ingest the chemicals, whether it was for punishment, or to have some other effect on her," he said.

The mother, Angelic Burney, 25, and Wilkerson, 46, who also goes by the name Rosa Downing, were charged Sunday with second-degree murder after detectives interrogated them for hours Saturday, Kelleher said. Police believe Amy died around April 27.

Sources told the Daily News and Newsday that Wilkerson claimed she forced the girl to drink the poison to exorcise demons from her body. The girl's mouth was taped shut to prevent her from spitting out the poison, the News reported.

Wilkerson told police that she and her daughter believed the little girl was possessed, since she was prone to throwing tantrums, the Daily News reported.

Child protection officials had been monitoring the family since Feb. 27, when one of Amy's teachers reported that she had shown up for school with bruises and scratches on her face.
