Gabriel Kelly's parents, Mark and Carol, were granted a temporary restraining order preventing Lamar from destroying, altering or censoring any records dealing with their son.

Lamar University officials declined to comment, but said they would abide by the order.

Kelly, 17, was found hanging by a lamp cord on April 30 in Brooks-Shivers Hall on the university's Beaumont campus. He was a student at the Academy Leadership in the Humanities, a program offered by the university for gifted and talented high school students.

SAN ANTONIO — Ann Wait wasn't worried about providing medical care for a profoundly disabled infant she adopted through the Air Force eight years ago. She says she was promised the military would always take care of the medical needs.

After being refused service at Wilford Hall Medical Center Wednesday, she says the Air Force has broken its promise and left mother and child to fend for themselves.

Maj. Gen. P.K Carlton, the hospital's commander, acknowledged several cuts were required because of a budget shortfall.

Clinical services for activeduty, retirees and dependents within Wilford Hall's 40-mile area would continue, he said, but medical supplies for nonactive-duty patients will no longer be provided.

Wait and her late husband, a retired Naval officer, adopted 17-month-old baby lanet in 1989. The child, was severely retarded and suffered from cerebral palsy, arthritis and other problems. The baby had been born to an active-duty serviceman and a Filipino mother.

Nation takes time to enjoy Fourth of July

America celebrated the Fourth of July with fish fries in Kentucky, rodeos in Texas, fireworks everywhere and parades galore — including one in California that may be the nation's shortest.

The "World's Shortest Parade" in Aptos, Calif., stretches only three blocks long, but it boasts 150 groups and at least 20,000 spectators crowded in Friday to watch the marchers and Clover

There were much grander spectacles for the nation's 221st birthday.

Beauty queens, sailors and eight drum-and-bugle corps participated in the nation's oldest continuously held Fourth of July parade in Bristol, R.I.

dancers and a trumpet-playing Elvis impersonator.

"I get goose bumps every time," said 72-year-old Clara Pinhero, who's gone to the parade with her family for as ong as she can remember.

In Hollister, Calif., tens of thousands of motorcycle riders rolled into town for a three-day festival marking the 50th anniversary of the riotous biker party that inspired the Marlon Brando movie "The Wild One."

That time again Recycle old telephone directories in Pampa

Clean Pampa, Inc. Executive Director Lora Baggerman says, "It's time again to recycle those phone books."

Fiest Publications, Inc. has recently delivered into Pampa the Fiest Area Phone Directories, and very soon the Pampa Southwestern Bell telephone directories will be hitting our doors, Baggerman says, so Clean Pampa is sponsoring the phone book recycling project with the help of several locations through the business community. These particular businesses will have drop boxes for the old telephone books conveniently located for people to use.

"We have had a lot of interest in recycling phone books this time," Baggerman said. "The first phone book recycling project that Clean Pampa completed last February was very successful, and we are very excited to sponsor this program again."

Baggerman was pleased with the community response when the telephone book collection idea was introduced in February, when so See RECYCLE, Page 2

Historic bison herd get state park home

AUSTIN (AP) — A herd of bison with historic roots is being moved to Caprock Canyons State Park in the Panhandle.

The 40 to 50 bison are part of a herd started by pioneer cattleman Charles Goodnight in 1876 on JA Ranch. Texas Department of Parks and Wildlife officials say they're the purest-blooded bison left in "The JA Bison Herd is a very important part of the heritage of the Texas Panhandle," said Ron George, an official with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Texas Bison Herd project coordinator. West Texas A&M University had petitioned to keep the bison, its official mascot, in the Panhandle. The school bought its first mascot from legendary cattleman Goodnight.

The herd is considered the purest-blooded bison left in North America, according to parks and wildlife officials. They hope to bring the herd closer to genetic purity by selective breeding and culling.

Exchange students get good-bye party at 4 today at library

701 W. BROWN

By SHERRY CROMARTIE Staff Writer

Goodbyes and farewell wishes will be given to Pampa's foreign exchange students, TV Vatnhamar, Änni Kerstan, and Carlos Mayer at the Lovett Memorial Library Auditorium at 4 p.m. today. Refreshments will be served.

There will be local students hosts, along with representatives of the local chapter of the American Field Service, an exchange student agency, sponsoring a "goodbye party" for these students who have attended Pampa High School during the past year.

All Pampa students and the public are invited to attend the reception to meet the students and bid them a safe trip on leaving Pampa. The students will leave on a bus trip to Chicago, before finally starting their airline trips back to their homes. Darlene Birkes is the AFS student/family coordinator and local representative to help oversee the departure plans.

According to Birkes, two of the visiting students have been enrolled in Pampa classes for the entire 1996-1997 senior year, and one joined his local "family" to enter school at the begindents hosted locally, and in August, AFS will welcome two more exchange students: a girl from Germany and a French-Canadian boy.

Anni Kerstan arrived in Pampa August 9, 1996, from Bremen, Germany and has been living with the Rick and Sandy Crosswhite family. She said her home is near North Sea and Hamburg.

"She got here about just before time to enroll in school, and we had about a week to get acquainted and for Anni to get acclimated to Texas. From then on, she's had a whirlwind life living in Pampa," said Sandy Crosswhite.

The Crosswhite family consists of father, Rick Crosswhite, Sandy and their daughter and son; Amanda, who will graduate in May, and Erich, who is a junior at PHS.

"Having Anni here is good for me and our family," said Rick. "It has been good because we've learned the differences Anni's German in our languages and its perception. We've learned how to be careful about how we say things, and in what tone of voice, which may or may not interpret the meaning we intend.

"Some of our bad habits all Texan's have been picked up by Anni, too. Some of the sayings we have are taken for granted that everyone understands them," Sandy said.

"For instance, we are always saying: 'Ya'll, or Yeah, 'We're fixin' to go, or 'fixin' to do... something. In our home we often say 'fixin' to go eat.

> Well, one day I overhead Anni talking on the phone with her sister in Germany and she told her the family was 'fixin' to go eat ...;' then, she said, "Oh, I don't know what it means, but everyone talks that way!"

> Anni has learned much about the United States, and had previously visited with her family a few times on the Florida coast. She said after moving here with the Crosswhites, however, she has learned that it is much different than what she thought, but she really has enjoyed her life

> "I am amazed that there seems to be a car for every student, almost. In Germany it costs about $2,000 to learn to operate a car and earn a driver's license. To do that, one must attend a night school, and it takes about a year to complete the study and qualify for the test, " she said. She said families in Germany seldom have more than two cars, and high school students do not have cars. She is also surprised that there is no public transportation.

Although Annie graduated with the 1996-1997 Pampa seniors class, she explained she will have three more years in advanced high school classes before she will be ready for college.

Anni has followed a regular senior class schedule this year, including being involved with the PHS Drama Club and the school choir. She has been active in Act-I productions and appeared in its most recent stage play, 'God's Favorite."

In her homeland, she was a member of her church choir. At PHS, being a member of the concert choir, she found it a privilege to sing every day. She traveled with the group performing concerts in New York City. Since both Amber and Erich are in the Pride of Pampa band, and their parents were chaperones, Anni was invited to travel with the band on its trip in March, to play at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. These and other trips were exciting to Anni, because the family went together. They sometimes met others at family reunions in Oklahoma City, skiing at Red River, NM, seeing the Grand Canyon at Las Vegas, NV, were on a mission in Branson, and just returned from a vacation in San Diego, CA.

"I've had so many chances to travel and see a lot of the United States that I didn't expect. At my home I was forewarned by the AFS agency people not to expect my host family to travel a lot because it was expensive and usually covered long distances," Anni said.

Anni's parents have called her recently, and they are anxious for her to return, according to Sandy. However, the Crosswhites are not quite ready for her to go.

"She will really be missed when she leaves. She has been incorporated into our own family, our church family, and into our community," she said.

She added, too, that there are two grandchildren, Kelsi and Autumn, ages 5 and 3, who will not understand why their dearest friend has to leave them after Sunday.

Trondur "T.V." Vatnhamar, is a 17 year old from the former Viking country, Faroe Islands between Iceland and Scotland (formerly Denmark), which is now part of the New Republic. His home is on a 15island complex, which is a 22-hour trip by car and ferry from Aberdeen, Scotland. His language is Faroese, a combination of Danish, Nordic and Scandinavian.

"The islands' lifestyle was really quiet until recent ocean oil developments, which greatly changed the pace," said T.V., whose parents each own businesses.

Here, while attending classes with seniors, he has been living with Gary and Sally Henderson, and their two sons, Kevin, a 1997 junior, and Jeff who is away at college "T.V." is a new name given him by his new friends since living Vatnhamar was playing soccer in his homeland before coming to the United States and he was excited about the idea of playing sports here. But, public school rules and restrictions did not allow him to participate due to the fact that, even though he's only 17, while playing soccer in Denmark, he was actually considered a professional; therefore, he could not qualify as an amateur student athlete.

Trondur "T.V." Vatnhamar, AFS foreign exchange student of Faroe Island in Denmark joined the family Gary and Sally Henderson, including Kevin, who is a senior in Pampa High School.

"He was really disappointed that he could not play while going to Pampa High School, and he was pretty unhappy," said Kerstan, his fellow-AFS student friend from Germany. "But, he did get to follow along and was sort of a student coach on the sidelines, and learned about high school football and other sports."

"Young Vatnhamer is a free-spirited boy with an eye for fun. He our town and in PHS," Darlene Birkes added.

"He was very disappointed when U.I.L. disqualified him because of his semi-pro status, but he had played several summers in Copenhagen for a Danish team, which established him as a professional in the U.S.," she said.

If his plans go well, he hopes to return to the U.S. on a soccer scholarship. He hopes to play for the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA).

Carlos Mayer is a senior from Brazil, has been living with the Dean and Agnes Dreher family since December. He said this year's trip to the United States is his first time to be out of his country, and he is really impressed with what he has seen.

"The differences I've seen between my country and here there are more changes in everything," he said.

He explained that in Brazil students attend classes from 7 a.m. to 12:30 mid-day, and then only sometimes in the afternoons, but class also meets on Saturdays. He likes the hours for school here in Pampa, and enjoys the varieties of subjects. His classes were English, economics, U.S. history, keyboarding, and math. He has learned to speak English only since moving to Texas, and claims the country-western songs have helped him learn the words easier.

In Brazil he plays soccer and handball (his favorite sport), which is quite different from the handball game played in the United States. In his home school system, sports come only after school hours, usually starting at 5 p.m., and practice takes about three hours.

"I plan to go to Sau Paulo College in Sau Paulo, which is a big city, about 11 hours away from my home, if my father will let me go that far away again, after being in the U.S.," he said.

"When we met Carlos at AFS orientation, we liked him right off the bat," said Agnes Dreher.

"I like to hear him talk about his country and share information and recipes with us on different foods," she said. He also likes to shop and enjoys going to the grocery stores and other stores ..., especially those that sell athletic clothing and shoes.

"Prices here are so much cheaper here in comparison to my home -Reeboks and Nike shoes are cheap here," Carlos said.

According to Dean, Sr., Carlos appreciates his Pampa home, living in a house on the ground floor, having a yard, enjoying the flowers and and grass. He also likes having a dog. Carlos and Schatzee, the Dreher's Schnauzer, are best

In Brazil he lives on the 15th floor in a high-rise building on an island, looking over the city.

And, as busy as they are as individuals, the Drehers participate in coaching in the Special Olympics. Carlos is fascinated with the fact was involved with other school that handicapped students attend activities, and he has seemed to public schools in Texas, whereas, in enjoy living here for his last year in Brazil they attend private schools.

Foreign oil rules in good ol' U.S.A.

It seems like every few years, America goes through an energy crisis where supply goes down, prices go up, and people get pinched at the pump. It happened last year, and it's likely to happen again in the not too distant future unless we reduce the amount of oil we get from overseas.

It's hard to believe, but America currently imports more than half the oil we use every day. Oil imports constitute the largest part of the nation's trade deficit, and costs the U.S. economy $60 billion each year. It also costs us in jobs and rev-

Over the past 15 years, 500,000 jobs have been lost in the oil and gas industry nationwide. And in Texas, where oil and gas production once provided 28% of state revenue, it now provides only seven percent. The only way we're going to reduce the amount of oil we import from abroad is to increase the amount we pump here at home.

Recently, I introduced legislation that would help us do just that In a nutshell, my legislation would give producers an incentive to open back up inactive oil and gas wells by giving them a federal tax exemption on any profit they might make. The bill is modeled after successful legislation that's been enacted here in Texas, and is another example of Washington taking a lesson in good government from the states.

There are over 900,000 inactive wells nationwide, and over 300,000 in Texas alone. So while the bill won't solve all of our problems, it will at least help us make a dent in it and cut the number of barrels we import from abroad.

Being without one's drawers for several weeks is no fun at all. And if you don't believe it, just ask me. I'll be glad to tell you...I've told everyone else. But just this week, my drawers arrived - my kitchen drawers, that is. And it was nice to get

Naturally, I discovered that when I needed the

- Texas - I thought I'd share something with you that I read recently in The New Yorker magazine. But first, let me preface this by saying I am still mind-boggled by the size of this state. I continue to be in shock when I drive out of town. The wide open spaces are, well, wide. But it is sorta neat to see a different landscape. I do certainly like to see the cattle and horses and hope, when I get my drawers unpacked and things settle down, to get back into horses. I miss riding and, well, even smelling them. They've been a big part of my life.

"It's not something you'd wear to lunch," the socialite Lynn Wyatt says, stopping to smile in front of a display case at Houston's Museum of Fine Arts. She is peering through a lorgnette at the Empress Maria Alexandrova's 1860 brooch, a swirl of diamonds surrounding a door-knob-size sapphire said to be the largest in the world.

And even though the jewels are the same, there's something definitely "Texas" about the exhibit when compared to the first showing in

The difference is in the exhibition labels they've been edited to reflect Texan priorities. In Washington, these bits of explanatory text detailed political intrigues in St. Petersburg, with the diamonds and rubies only as important as the stories behind them, the article said.

But for the Texas audience, what's of more regional importance is played up. It's not Russian history they want to know, it's information how many carats each stone weighs.

According to the curator, "Whatever the bloody history of a particular stone, whether it involves Peter killing his own son or Catherine plotting the Romanovs have been on display in Houston after murder of her husband, Texans want to know how big it is."

After years of procrastination, I finally got around to reading Yale University law Professor Stephen L. Carter's book, Reflections of An Affirmative Action Baby. Carter writes engagingly about race issues like affirmative action, racial stereotypes and the civilrights movement. Particularly interesting was a group of chapters titled "On Being a Black Dissenter."

During the '70s and '80s, Dr. Thomas Sowell and I came under scurrilous attacks for our departures from the conventional wisdom on race by the news media, campus intellectuals and members of the civil-rights establishment. To give a sample of the viciousness of the attacks, Carl Rowan said in his nationally syndicated column: "... Vidkum Quisling, in his collaboration with the Nazis, surely did not do as much damage to the Norwegians as Sowell is doing to the most helpless of black Americans. Sowell is giving aid and comfort to America's

Not long after, a black reporter for the Cleveland Plain Dealer found Rowen's column so compelling that he plagiarized it, simply substituting my name in place of Sowell's, to attack me. Both during and after confirmation hearings, and right up to today, Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas has been called "Uncle Tom," "Oreo" and "race-traitor," and caricatured in cartoons in national publications in most unflattering ways.

Other targets of these attacks have included:

Walter Williams

California State University San Jose Professor Shelby Steele; Robert Woodson, director of the National Center for Neighborhood Enterprises; University of Massachusetts Professor Julius Lester; and many

Carter points out that these attacks and the stifling of dissent is not new among blacks. When W.E.B. Dubois criticized Marcus Garvey's back-to-Africa movement, Garvey dismissed him as "purely and simply a white man's nigger."

Dubois responded in kind, blasting Garvey as "without a doubt the most dangerous enemy of the Negro race in America and the world." There were attacks and counterattacks between Booker T. Washington and DuBois.

Carter adds: "Many a great thinker in our history, from Arna Bontemps to Ida B. Wells to James Weldon urban blight, black kids can read and write as well as Johnson to Paul Robeson, has chafed under the pressure to conform or be ostracized. Black intellectuals had no monopoly on being attacked for straying away from the conventional "wisdom".

In a 1960 speech to the Nation Association of Manufacturers, S.B. Fuller, founder of Fuller Brush, opined, "Even more than racial barriers, it is a lack of understanding of the capitalist system that keeps blacks from making progress." Fuller was echoing Booker T. Washington's argument that racial progress came from having something to sell. For that sin, black leaders led a boycott against Fuller Brush, causing him $8 million in loses and nearly bankrupting him.

Carter says, and I agree: "We as a people should have learned a lesson about the importance of permitting, encouraging, even cherishing, critical thinking. By encouraging open and robust debate about the problems confronting our community, we can march upward toward a better tomorrow. If instead we choose to stifle the voices of dissent, it is hard to see how we will get anyplace at all."

No people, particularly black people, can afford a monopoly on ideas. Only in an unfettered marketplace of ideas will better ideas emerge. And black Americans need, better ideas. After all, who in their right mind can say that, after years and trillions of dollars spent on government programs like urban renewal, Head Start and the War on Poverty, there's no more white kids and poverty has been eliminated?

a 'duck' presiden

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr. is editor in chief of The-American

Throughout the history of this great and gaudy Republic, second term presidents have often become what historians call "lame duck presidents." Our amazing Boy President of 1997 is in danger of becoming merely a "duck president," as in, "Duck - here comes another subpoena," or "Duck - here comes another devastating Supreme Court decision." Now, two in less than a month! Richard Milhous Nixon was our first "duck president." That a second comes so soon suggests that America's politicians are not taking their history very seriously.

Of course, those of us who have fully investigated the Clintons, their lives, their legends, their press releases and all those brushes with the law recognize that the Clintons almost certainly anticipated these last two judicial Waterloos. Winning or losing the cases was not their preeminent objective. Just dragging the criminal investigators now sniffing at their heels into the dense underbrush of the American judicial process was a victory for them.

The Paula Corbin Jones decision of May 27 was, to be sure, a thunderously unanimous judicial decision against fanciful claims by the Clintons to "temporary immunity" for the president against lawsuits originating in matters preceding his presidency. As though the weight of presidential affairs (whoops, an unfortunate choice of words) might allow the president to delay making mortgage payments on his private home, if he had a private home, or delaying paying parking tickets, if he had something to park.

But the Paula Corbin Jones decision was also a "victory" for the Clintons. Former Clinton adviser Dick Morris admitted just that, claiming recently that the Boy President's lawyer, David Kendall, had revealed that by taking the case to the Supreme torate in 1996. Jones' lawyers would be prevented from sending their embarrassing interrogatories, and the press would have nothing to report. The case was frivolous - the court's unanimous decision manifests that, as does Morris' admission. Yet, it was not unimportant.

Even in the Clintons' latest setback at the Supreme Court, they tasted the sweetness of at least a small victory. By claiming attorney-client privilege over documents sought by independent counsel Kenneth Starr, the Clintons impeded Starr's investigation. They also could float their self-serving legal sophistries above the heads of the American people whose knowledge of the law is understandably not that of the bar.

These sophistries could confuse many and intensify the pro-Clinton citizens' sense of grievance for the Martyred Couple.

Then, too, Clinton henchmen, such as James Carville, could point to Starr's tangled maneuverings in the courts and complain of his investigation's expensive duration, his taxpayer financed "partisan fishing expedition." Savor the Clintons' strategy. They confect exaggerated claims of "attorney-client privilege" or "executive privilege," drag these monstrosities into the courts, and then blame Starr for the length of his inquiry.

Unfortunately, this latest setback at the Supreme Court now makes it clear that the court will not be a party to the Clintons' frivoling with the law for-Court, the Clintons hoped to hide it from the elec- ever. It would only have taken four justices to tip seriously. We are entering interesting times.

the court toward taking up the question of White House immunity on this matter of subpoenaed documents. But as Douglas R. Cox observed in the Wall Street Journal following the court's decision to let a lower court decision stand, "it suggests that the Supreme Court gives less weight to the Clinton administration's judgments that a case merits review than it has traditionally afforded the legal arguments of past administrations.

Cox went on to observe that the Clintons' arguments before the court were unusual. "By the tradition of the Supreme Court advocacy ... favors understatement over hyperbole." (Remind me never to appear before the Supreme Court.) The Clintons, to the surprise of many Supreme Court watchers, entered into these proceedings, hyperbolically labeling the independent counsel's positions "irresponsible" and the lower court's decision "extraordinary" and "unprecedented." Allow me to explain the Clintons in this matter.

This is the first American presidency almost wholly populated in its higher levels by former members of high school and college student governments. They have been at play with politics since puberty. For them, politics is all posturing, more so than with any previous collection of pols. Since his earliest days as an apple-polishing student, Boy Clinton has been pursuing office. So has Hillary, and Ira, and Reich, and most of the rest. Most of the offices they have won have been phony, and the real offices they have won have accommodated their phoniness.

America's treatment of the law is different. Particularly at the Supreme Court level, it is taken seriously. Thus, student body President Bill Clinton has lost two in a row. Worse still, it is a little late in the game for the Clintons to start taking the law

Cannibalism mystery solved

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) - An anthropologist has pieced together a tale of Mexican terrorist cannibals in explaining why bones found in ancient New Mexico ruins showed the peaceful Indians. residing there were sacrificed and eaten.

Describing the migrant assailants as cultist "guerrillas," Christy G. Turner II said that "they used a form of terrorism to get the existing population to do what they wanted."

And the northwestern New Mexico civilization's most extensive roads and most complex houses were built after the terrorists

Turner put forward the concept as a way to explain a longstanding mystery: Why human bones found in Chaco Canyon's Anasazi ruins bore telltale marks indicating the peaceful residents had been subjected to cannibalism, mass sacrifice and general brutality when no such activity was found in other Southwestern Indian

Turner, a regents professor at the Arizona State University in Tempe, told his audience at the Museum of Northern Arizona that "it's part of a Mexican ritual to eat people, that possibly goes back

Speaking Tuesday as part of a summer lecture series, Turner said it appeared the migrants came from what now is central Mexico during the period 900-1200 A.D.

Folksy newsman, Charles Kuralt, 62, dies

By LARRY McSHANE Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Kuralt, the folksy CBS newsman who chronicled the offbeat and endearing as he traveled America's highways and byways for his "On The Road" reports, died on the little people. Fourth of July. He was 62.

Kuralt died at New York Hospital from complications from lupus, an inflammatory disease that can affect the skin, joints, kidneys and nervous system. His brother, who runs a bookstore in their native North Carolina, said Kuralt had been ill for a couple of months.

"He was feeling pretty good yesterday, so it's very unexpected," Wallace Kuralt said.

The balding, pudgy Kuralt logged up to 50,000 miles a year inside his motorhome, scouring the country for rarely seen glimpses of Americana.

Kuralt moved quickly from rewrite to on-air correspondent, covering the 1960 presidential campaign before taking over as head of CBS newly established Latin America bureau, and eventually became a roving correspondent.

He did four tours in Vietnam covering the war, and visited "all the tropical trouble stops," he once said. But after bouncing around the world, Kuralt decided in 1967 that he wanted out of hard news and its cutthroat competition. "I was always worried that some NBC man was sneaking behind my back getting better stories," he said later. In 1967, accompanied by a three-man crew, Kuralt began a three-month trial run of "On The Road."

It immediately struck a nerve. Kuralt had found his niche.

Part of Kuralt's appeal was his rumpled everyman look. "I'd rather look like (CBS anchorman Dan) Rather," he once acknowledged. "Of course, who wouldn't?"

In addition to his brother, Kuralt is survived by his wife, Suzanna; two daughters of a previous marriage, Susan Bowers and Lisa White; a sister, Catherine Harris, and three grandsons. Funeral arrangements weren't announced.

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — A couple trying to add a little variety to their love life sure propositioned the wrong guy.

Pamela Burgoyne, 50, was wearing only high heels when she asked the man walking by her motel room to join her and her partner in bed. Inside the room, lying naked on the bed, was Robert Kaprive Jr.,

The man she asked was South Greensburg's Police Chief M.C. "Sonny" Rabasseau. Off duty at the time, he took one look inside the room and left the motel to call police.

When Officer Donald Johnston arrived, he looked in the window and saw the couple having sex, with the blinds open.

Ms. Burgoyne and Kaprive pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct Thursday, and each paid a $300 fine.

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Lou Riggs was sure she heard a voice in her fireplace — and it wasn't Mary Poppins or Santa Claus.

Awakened by a noise in the living room early one morning, she said she "heard someone inside my fireplace saying, 'Hello." Then

She awakened her husband, and they discovered a strange vehicle in the driveway. They called the sheriff's office. Sure enough, there was a man in the chimney. Mike Godsey, co-captain of the rescue squad, said the man dropped

50 feet through a 13-inch opening but became wedged about 4 feet He was able to wiggle out after rescuers removed the damper and spread the damper frame. Charlie Boyd, 21, was arraigned Monday on charges of breaking and entering, burglary and theft.

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) - Some Secret Service agents think they got their man.

Michael Robinson, 24, was charged with credit card fraud, accused of using Jimmy Carter's card to buy $45.27 worth of compact discs.

Robinson got the number while working at a restaurant, said Kenneth Keene, assistant special agent in charge of the Secret Service office in Atlanta.

Keene didn't know whether the former president had eaten at the restaurant. Americus is 10 miles from Carter's hometown of Plains. District Attorney John Parks said Thursday that either Carter or a member of his staff noticed the February CD purchase on the credit card bill and notified the Secret Service. The Secret Service notified Americus police last month and Robinson was arrested Wednesday. He was released on $1,250 bond and could face one to three years in prison if convicted.

of dry migration route for earliest American pioneers

AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - After crossing a land travel from Alaska southward. bridge from their native Asia, the first Americans may have found a wide, dry path leading ever deeper into "a perfect place to live" of forests, meadows and lakes, researchers say.

The pleasant migration corridor didn't last long. Within 2,000 years, it was beneath hundreds of feet of water, and Asia and the Americas again were separated by the frigid wastes of the Bering

In a study being published Friday in the journal Science, Canadian and U.S. researchers say they have clear evidence that a combination of dropping sea level and rising land along part of Canada's western coast created an ideal home and a migration path for people walking to Heiner Josenhans of the Geologic Survey of Canada said the area around what is now Queen Charlotte Island on the Canadian west coast was flat and dry, with forests, open grasslands and clear lakes. With evidence that game existed in the area, he said, "There is no reason that there couldn't have been people as well."

A human skull dating from about 9,800 years ago was found recently on nearby Prince of Wales Island. "That really puts people into this scenario," Josenhans said. "It was a perfect place to

Just how and when people came to live in America has fascinated scientists for decades. It has long been speculated that Asians crossed the Bering Strait on a land bridge, then moved south to establish civilizations in the Americas. Age datthat people lived in the new world about 10,000 years ago, but experts have been unable to find Charlotte Islands.

the precise migration routes of those early people or to confirm that it was physically possible to

One reason, said Josenhans, is North America in that distant time was a place of ice mountains and of land and sea that rose and fell rapidly.

Ice peaks soaring 8,000 feet and glaciers covered much of the land just beyond the shore. Migrants following the coastline would have confronted impassable mountains on one side and the ocean on the other.

The level of the sea dropped around 14,600 years ago to open a narrow, seaside corridor. Also, said Josenhans, the immense weight of the ice actually deformed the land and caused some coastal formations to rise as interior mountains

"It's like what happens on a water bed," said Josenhans. "If you sit on the middle, the edges go up." With 8,000 feet of ice sitting on the coastal range of mountains, "the outer part of the continental shelf actually popped up about 60 meters," or 196 feet, he said.

The result: a beach-side path formed from an elevated part of the continental shelf that was flat and made for easy traveling.

Sea level, however, started rising. Also, the ice burden, due to melting, relaxed on the land, causing some of the dry ground to sink below the waves. Josenhans said the migration corridor may have been closed by about 9,500 years ago.

"It was a narrow corridor," he said. "It lasted about 2,000 years and then shut down. But a lot can happen in human terms in 2,000 years."

The researchers traced the rise and fall of the land by analyzing fossils, soils and muds gathing of tools and other artifacts have confirmed ered from corings taken from beneath inlets, fjords and sea beds on and around the Queen

Increase your home value with upgrades

By the Editors of Consumer Reports Homeowners spent some $70 billion on improvements in 1995 - over and above the billions of dollars they spent on basic maintenance and repairs.

Because you may be living with the financial consequences of costly home-improvement projects for years to come, start by answering two questions: What will the improvement you want to make add to the resale value of your home? And, what's the best way to pay for the job? If you're planning to stay in your home for a while, the most important reason for remodeling is your own comfort and convenience. Remodeling won't allow you to recoup your entire investment, though some projects yield better returns than others. If you do decide to remodel, use the newer homes in your neighborhood as a benchmark, and you're likely to see the best payback for your remodeling investment.

Some upgrades are especially appealing to potential purchasers. Adding a second bathroom to a one-bathroom house, for example, is a big plus. Other cost-effective upgrades include remodeling an aging kitchen and converting a master bedroom into a suite by linking it to a dressing area and a private bath.

According to a recent survey of real-estate agents in 60 cities undertaken by the trade publication Remodeling, those three projects return, as a national average, at least 84 percent of the investment you make in them when the home is sold.

Since even a relatively modest home improvement, such as replacing siding or adding a deck, can cost well over $5,000 paying for remodeling projects out of current income or readily available savings can place a huge strain on your household budget. With sufficient planning and saving, you may be able to finance modest home improvements on your own — new siding, sprucing up kitchen cabinets, replacing old windows, and the like - without resorting to loans.

You may also finance a project by tapping your other investment accounts, say, by selling some mutual-fund holdings. But you should first determine that the combination of additional comfort and home-value appreciation will be worth more to you than the return you could expect by leaving your money where it is.

Borrowing can have distinct advantages - if it's done wisely. Major home improvements are expensive but long-lasting capital investments that can significantly influence the value of your residence. Using loans that can be paid off in installments may be the only way to make remodeling affordable. But avoid unsecured personal loans; at today's average interest rate of about 15 percent, they can be almost as costly as using a credit card.

The best source of collateral you have for a remodeling loan is the equity you've already built up in your home. Interest rates on cans based on home equity are usually the lowest a homeowner can find anywhere. On top of that, most interest you pay on a home-equity loan is tax-deductible, further reducing your cost of borrowing. There are five principal ways to borrow against your home equity:

 Home-equity loans provide you with a lump sum of money at a fixed rate of interest;

 Home-equity lines of credit generally allow you to draw upon your available equity whenever it's needed;

 A cash-out refinancing gallows you to replace your current mortgage with a new, larger one;

• A larger first mortgage can help if you're buying a new home

that's in immediate need of refurbishing;

•Government or special bank loans can also help with some rehabs. Some are limited to borrowers who live in disadvantaged neighborhoods or whose annual income does not exceed the median of their communities. Others area available to anyone.

Remember that any money spent on home improvements adds to the "cost basis" of your home, and thus, reduces the capitalgains tax that may be due when you sell. It's important to keep complete records of your outlays so you can document them in your income-tax return in the year when you sell. Copyright 1997 by Consumers Union, Inc.

Laramore combines innovation, locksmithing

Commuters driving past Coronado Center in Pampa may notice a new blue and white building next to McDonald's. This tiny building exemplifies an innovative idea in locksmithing, the culmination of a three-year dream for local entrepreneur Vic Laramore, owner of Laramore Locksmith.

"I first thought of putting in a drive-up locksmith about three years ago," Laramore explains, adding that the idea originated with a kiosk called "Okay's Keys" located outside the old Sears building in Amarillo.

"When I was a little kid, I remember going to Sears and seeing the old man in the little building. Once in awhile, we'd go over there and get a key from him," he remembers. "I still see a key that was made by him. He stamped his name on every key he made, 'Okav's Kevs.'

In 1994, Laramore saw that a booth used for taking in film for developing was now for sale. It was just the right size for the drive-up key booth he envisioned, he said, so he bought it and stored it on a lot south of Pampa.

Today the freshly-painted booth stands in the Coronado Center parking lot, ready for customers to drive up and get their keys duplicated or locks repaired. Sandy Pendergrass, a long-time Pampa resident and experienced sales clerk, mans the booth Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays through Saturdays. On Wednesdays, Laramore works in the booth between service calls so that Pendergrass can have a day off.

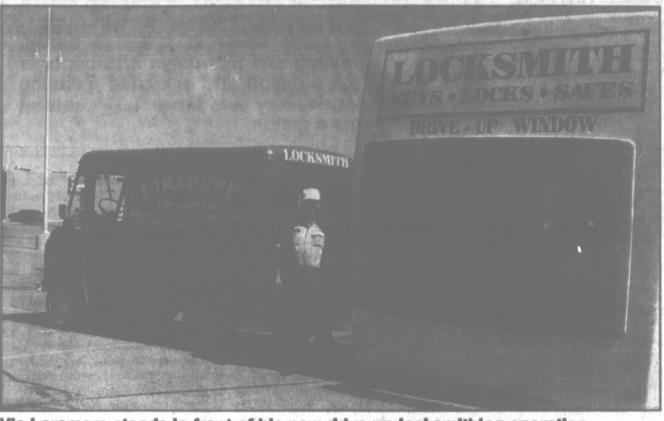

The concept of a drive-up key booth is only one part of the significant changes that are occurring in locksmithing, according to Laramore. "I see locksmithing move more and more toward electronics. It's requiring more experience, equipment and education than it ever has," he said.

Laramore's experience as a locksmith began in 1972. He took mailorder courses and received handsmentors, well-known locksmiths owner of Amarillo Safe & Key.

Water manager takes flood control heat

By CHUCK LINDELL
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — To Don Bardin, shoveling mud away from his Marble Falls home last week, Mark Rose is nothing less than a dam fool, who flooded Bardin's neighborhood through mismanagement, if not stupid- end recreation bans on the Highland Lakes so busi- if flooding is imminent, by telephone and law enforce-

Rose never had stood on Bardin's lawn before Highland Lakes, but this was familiar territory

As general manager of the LCRA, Rose gave the OK to begin opening floodgates on the rain-swollen and swimmers. Highland Lakes, sending water downstream and into several hundred homes recently.

With that decision, Rose the administrator became Rose the human target, bearing the brunt of criticism created when Mansfield Dam was built in 1941 to capwhile tempers ran their hottest.

"I don't expect them to thank me for flooding them," said Rose, who also noted that the only homes damaged were in the flood plain, where high water is a Marble Falls, Buchanan and Inks, all formed by other known possibility.

In his 10 years with the LCRA, which manages the ly through the floodgates and into Lake Travis. "They should not have to go out and explain their actions. That's my job," said Rose, who makes $180,000

Right now, Rose is under considerable pressure to nesses can benefit from the multimillion-dollar Fourth ment.

The pressure to open lakes is perhaps the hardest to deflect because the closures hurt people's livelihood, Rose said. Lake Buchanan was reopened Friday, but the other bans are not likely to be lifted soon.

"What has me spooked is the submerged debris," he said last week while standing on a concrete foundation, Thursday's tour of flood-damaged communities on the all that remained of a waterfront cabin in Kingsland. "A lot of it is going to be just below the surface."

No lake will be reopened until Rose is sure debris and bacteria levels pose no danger to boaters, skiers

Floods are damned-if-you-do, damned-if-you-don't situations for Rose and the LCRA.

The dilemma is linked to the nature of Lake Travis, ture floodwaters that once ravaged Austin and other a Japanese airliner crashes, the CEO steps down.

Downstream homeowners are warned by radio and,

Rose, after making sure the warnings have been sent and water levels justify opening a gate, approves the procedure. From then on, however, he leaves the decisions of opening and closing gates to LCRA's hydrologists and other experts.

Bardin, for one, believes the LCRA was far too slow to open floodgates up and down the six Highland Lakes last week. He blames the inaction for the four feet of water that destroyed most of his belongings when Lake Marble Falls became a surging river.

"If you spread the water out over 85 miles, it's not going to come up 25 feet here," he told Rose. "People need some reassurance right now. I have no confidence in the LCRA. As far as I'm concerned, the LCRA is a four-letter word.'

Bardin then suggested Rose resign, noting that when Rose declined, explaining quietly yet forcefully that he believed the river authority performed well because no homes outside the flood plain were damaged. There were, he also noted, no deaths that weekend despite the worst flood ever recorded on the Llano River, which empties into Lake LBJ, which in turn empties into Lake Marble Falls.

In fact, it would have made no difference if Lake Marble Falls had been completely drained, said Wes Birdwell, hydrology manager for the LCRA.

At the height of the flood, the equivalent of five Lake Marble Falls was moving by Bardin's house every hour. In the end, Lake Marble Falls could have been emptied and filled 30 times, Birdwell said.

"In 12 hours, about 65 billion gallons came through,"

However startling, dry facts and figures don't mean much to families who spent the past week ripping out

Rose expected to catch an earful at town hall meetings Monday in Marble Falls and Tuesday in sland. The same thing happened at meetings after the 1991 floods

"They really let me have it, no question about it, and I'm going to get more this time," he said. "But if I can make a decision that affects their property, they have every right to visit with me and get that off their mind."

Rose already knows the questions: How do we get you fired? Call the board of directors, he'll respond. How do we get the board fired? That will take a call to the governor, who appoints the 15 members to six-year

Before joining the LCRA, Rose was no stranger to contentious situations. He survived the political proving grounds of the Austin City Council, serving two terms from 1983-87 before launching a run for mayor.

Rose dropped out after a five-month campaign to become LCRA's director of administration. He was promoted to second in command six months later, and in 1990 became general manager.

Today, he runs an agency with a $445 million budget and about 1,700 employees. The LCRA operates the Highland Lakes, supplies electricity, water and sewer service and manages 15,300 acres of parks.

By far, its most controversial operations revolve around floodgate openings, which are closely watched from the Gulf of Mexico to the Highland Lakes.

Floodgate use is governed by complex water-volume equations, but the underlying rule is a simple one: Create no floods downstream.

Release too much water from Lake Travis, and downstream cities will flood if heavy storms hit during the water's weeklong trip to the Gulf.

Release too little water, and several hundred Lake Travis homes could get wet, even submerged.

Unfortunately, those homes were built in the "flood pool," the part of Lake Travis designed to fill up and catch upstream flooding. If the LCRA has to decide between flooding those Lake Travis homes or flooding downstream cities, Lake Travis loses every time.

WASHINGTON (AP) Automobile passengers are safer if their cars' air bags deploy from the top of the dashboard instead of the front, two consumer groups contend.

"There are dramatic differences between air bags on (vehicle) models on the road today ... and the difference can save your life," Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety, said Thursday.

Passenger-side air bags that have deployed have killed 40 children and infants and three adults in low-speed accidents those people otherwise should have survived, according to government records. All 43 deaths involved an air bag that deployed horizontally, or directly toward the passenger, Ditlow and Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, said at a news confer-

In contrast, there were no passenger-side deaths with air bags that deployed vertically out of the top of the dashboard, they said. Those air bags punched through the plastic covering and rolled along the windshield before dropping down to cushion

Most Mexicans choose Telmex for long distance calling service

MEXICO CITY (AP) -Mexico has ended the longdistance monopoly of telecommunications giant Telmex, but when given the choice, most chose to stick with what they Almost 56 percent of customers in Mexico's 60 largest cities chose Telmex in a mass ballot over the last six months, Mexico's Federal Telecommunications Commission announced Thursday.

That left Telmex — Telefonos de Mexico SA - with 74 percent of the 6.9 million lines up for grabs in the first round of balloting, because callers who don't cast a ballot remain with Ballots were cast for 4 million lines, 58 percent of the lines up for grabs.

Telmex surrendered its longdistance monopoly in August 1996, and full-fledged competition began in January on a city-by-city basis through the balloting process.

The first round of balloting covered about four-fifths of Mexico's 9 million phone lines. Forty smaller cities and towns will cast ballots in 1998, and the remaining communities in 1999.

Added Chrysler spokesman Mike Aberlich: "There does not appear to be a significant difference" between air bags that deploy vertically and horizontal-

Phil Recht, deputy administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, also cautioned that people too close to an air bag when it deploys can be seriously injured.

The public should not be led into a false conclusion that because they have a vehicle that has a vertically deploying air bag that there's no risk." he said.

The automakers and federal officials also stressed the importance of wearing seat belts and placing children in the back seat whenever possible.

Ditlow commended Honda models — especially the Odyssey

The groups said they did not have a complete list of vertically deploying air bags because the information was not available. They suggested car buyers ask their local dealers.

Chrysler minivans and the GM Geo Metro were singled out for having horizontally deploying air bags. There have been nine air-bag deaths in Chrysler minivans and three in the Geo Metro.

Chrysler officials have said the number of children killed in their minivans is higher because Chrysler has millions of minivans on the road and 65 percent of the minivan market.

Chrysler's Aberlich also said the company has top-mounted air bags that hit the window first before fully deploying in many models including the Plymouth Neon and Dodge Intrepid. Each of those vehicles models has had an air bag death.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -Shawn Estes allowed one hit in 8 2-3 innings, a first-inning single, and tied a career-high with 11 strikeouts as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Colorado Rockies 4-0 Friday

Estes (12-2) allowed only a line-drive single to right by Quinton McCracken with one out in the first. McCracken was caught stealing, and Estes retired the next 22 batters walking Manwaring leading off the ninth. He walked Eric Young with two outs and was relieved by Rod Beck, who got the final out for his NL-leading 28th save.

Estes, making his first start since being chosen to the NL All-Star squad, added an RBI single and lowered his ERA to Jamey Wright (4-5), who was recalled from the minors on Wednesday, allowed three runs on eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Kenny Rogers and Mariano Duncan gained their independence from George Steinbrenner's doghouse in a trade that sent slugger Greg Vaughn back to the American League.

The San Diego Padres solved their awkward leftfield situation by dealing the struggling Vaughn to the New York Yankees for left-hander Rogers and infielder Duncan on Friday night in the second six-player deal between the teams in 2 1/2 months.

The deal is contingent upon Vaughn and Rogers passing physicals today.

The Yankees also get minor league pitchers Kerry Taylor and Chris Clark, and the Padres get minor league pitcher Kevin Henthorne. Rogers, demoted to New York's bullpen, will join San Diego's starting rotation. The Yankees will pay the remaining $950,276 of Rogers' deferred salary for this season.

Rogers and Duncan shook hands with teammates before leaving the Yankees dugout during Friday night's game at Toronto. They go from the World Series champs to a Padres team that will be hardpressed to repeat as NL West champion.

Rogers, who threw a perfect game for Texas in 1994, and Duncan have both been in Steinbrenner's doghouse.

Rogers never got into a groove after leaving the Rangers as a free agent and signing a $20 million, four-year contract with the Yankees in 1996.

Stevens finished one single short of becoming the second Texas player to hit for the cycle as the Rangers beat Oakland 7-6 on Friday night for their third straight victory.

Stevens had a three-run homer to key a five-run third, added an RBI triple in the second, and doubled in the seventh.

"I've never been one hit shy," said Stevens, who grounded out in the fifth. "That's the closest I've ever come. I didn't think about it until after my last at-bat when I realized I only needed a

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) --- Rangers win for the fourth time

Stevens, a former first-round draft choice of the California Angels who played in Japan from 1994-95 before signing a minor league contract with the Rangers last year, has 10 homers and 38 RBIs, both career highs.

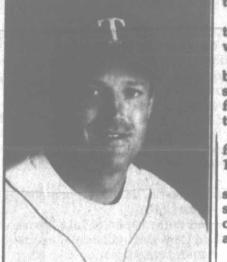

For Stevens, it's been a matter of consistent playing time and having the confidence of his manager.

"It goes hand in hand," Stevens said. "Johnny is showing confidence in me and with some injuries we've had, I've had the opportunity to fill in. It's worked well for me."

Oddibe McDowell is the only Texas player to hit for the cycle, accomplishing the feat against Lee Stevens Cleveland on July 23, 1985.

"Lee has had some big-time hits for us," Oates said. "If he hadn't been hitting well, he wouldn't have gotten the at-bats single. At that point, I just want- he's gotten for us. He's had a ed to win and get the game over year and a half of pretty good baseball for us."

Texas took a 6-2 lead in the third on RBI singles by Rusty Greer and Clark, and Stevens' 10th homer.

Oakland closed to 6-4 in the fifth, getting some help from sloppy fielding. Jason McDonald tripled with one out on a ball that could have been caught by either center, then scored on Scott liner by Mark McGwire that got past Greer for a double.

Greer homered in the bottom half, but Oakland scored twice in the eighth, closing within a run on RBI single by pinch-hitter Mark Bellhorn and Scott Spezio's

HOUSTON (AP) — In the first 32 years of the Astrodome, only seven balls were hit into the upper deck. This week, it's been done twice. "I knew I hit it really well," Willie Greene said with a bit of understatement after his threerun homer led the Cincinnati Reds over the Houston Astros 4-2 Friday night.

Cincinnati, which extended a winning streak to five for the first time in nearly a year, trailed 2-0 in the fourth. Tommy Greene (0-1) walked Curtis Goodwin and Lenny Harris and Willie Greene sent a 1-0 fastball into the upper deck in right field for his 12th homer of the season.

"I couldn't find it, then I finally saw it hit in the upper deck," said Greene, who wasn't aware that his was just the ninth to reach that level.

It was the second upper-deck shot in a five-game span. Cleveland's Manny Ramirez hit an upper-deck shot to left Tuesday night off Blas Minor.

"I knew that ball was in the upper deck the minute Greene hit it," said Houston first baseman Jeff Bagwell, who has never a home run in the Astrodome's top level in seven seasons. "I haven't seen many balls hit that hard over my head, relief, with Shaw getting three you just don't see many balls hit that hard."

Cincinnati is on its best streak since winning six straight last July 22-27. Houston has lost four

"It was a monumental blast," Reds manager Ray Knight said. "I saw Ramirez hit one here earlier this week, I played here three years and I don't remember one except Andre Dawson (in April 1983). Willie has the ability to drive in runs in response to situations. He's beginning to be our clutch guy."

Bret Boone, who entered in a 1for-33 slump, hit a pair of doubles for the Reds.

"Greene came up big, and it's getting to be a habit," Boone said. Mike Morgan (3-5) won for the third time in four decisions, allowing two runs and five hits in five innings. Scott Sullivan and Jeff Shaw finished with hitless outs for his 18th save.

'Greene definitely turned my day around," Morgan said. "I was fortunate to get by the two walks. Our defense is solid and we're starting to score runs so I'm not afraid to pitch."

Tommy Greene, making his second start of the season, allowed three runs and three hits in 4 2-3 innings with four strikeouts and three walks. Craig Biggio doubled and scored on Bill Spiers' single to put Houston ahead in the first. Biggio walked in the third, stole second and third and then scored on Derek Bell's grounder. Boone hit an RBI double in the sixth following singles by Hal

Morris and Joe Oliver. "I'm still not willing to concede this is a .500 ballclub," Houston manager Larry Dierker said after his team dropped to

Leonard takes two-stroke lead at Western Open

Woods lacked intensity and 1994 NCAA champion and 1992 made so few great shots in the U.S. Amateur winner. "I'm in second round of the Western good position to win this one. If I Open that he felt fortunate to go out and play the way I did trail leader Justin Leonard by (Friday), I'll be pretty pleased, only four strokes.

Fellow pros still expect Woods to be a factor before the tournament ends Sunday.

"Tiger's a hell of a player, a phenom," said Billy Andrade, same intensity level," he said. "I one of three players two strokes should have been a few under, behind Leonard after Friday's round at Cog Hill's Dubsdread course.

"But I can't be worried about Tiger Woods because I know he's not worried about me. If he sees my name on the leaderboard, I don't think he goes, 'Oh my God, there's Billy, I've really got to play well now.' That's the way you've got to look at it."

Mike Hulbert, tied with Andrade and Michael Bradley at There are still 36 holes to go, and 7-under, agreed.

"I think everybody's just waiting for him to do something putt on 15, a par-5 that proheroic, which he's done, it seems, every weekend," Hulbert said of in the first two days. History of East Texas coal mines runs deep

Sulphur Springs News-Telegram

COMO, Texas - Paul Lawrence was one cow short while rounding up his herd on his far north pasture in Como six years ago. He could hear its muffled bellows of distress, but a search of the field revealed only grass and trees. And then he found the hole.

The poor old heifer had found an abandoned mine shaft, its weight apparently causing the ground to give in.

"The first cave-in I had over there, it was about probably 70 to 80 foot deep," said the former dairyman. "You could see down there, and you could see the old track."

Few if any people are left who remember the once-thriving coal mine industry of Como, but its honeycomb of tunnels and shafts remain like an Egyptian tomb plundered of its treasure.

But the history behind the old coal mines runs

The first coal in the area was found two miles south of Sulphur Springs in March of 1874, according to local historian June Tuck. Tests at the smelting works in Sulphur Springs later found the lignite to be of superior quality.

However, Ms. Tuck's research found the first mines did not go into operation until the turn of the century, when the Como Lignite Co. sunk its first shaft about a half mile from the city in 1902. Active operations did not actually begin until 1907.
Piecing together accounts from old newspaper stories and aged brochures published by the Chamber of Commerce, Ms. Tuck said by 1910 Como was thriving on the lignite mining indus-

"Miners worked with the aid of open-flame, carbine lamps mounted on their caps," she said. "There was no gas in the mines. Miners worked five and one-half days a week, 10 hours a day. The mine was laid out in blocks with linking tunnels. Miners worked in rooms until the coal supply was exhausted, and then the support timbers that had been used were removed and the room vacated."

"Even though farmers were shipping their goods out on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, it was easily seen what Como produced the most," she explained. "In a period of seven months in 1910, there were shipped out three cars of potatoes, 25 cars of wood, 24 cars of peaches, 33 cars of watermelons and 1,525 cars of lignite."

Hopkins County Judge Joe Minter, raised in uct," Ms. Tuck said. neighboring Pickton, said he remembers the eco"Miners worked" Pickton was an oil town. Como was a coal town. Once the resources started disappearing, the town just crumbled," Minter said.

The town of Como is home to less than 700 people today, while Pickton is a tiny community with only a handful of residents.

"But even in Pickton, when I was a kid, we had a bank, we had at least five stores, an ice house, two or three garages, a blacksmith shop, a cucumber plant. It was really a big place," he said.

Ms. Tuck confirmed that Como once competed in grandeur with Sulphur Springs.

"It was as big as Sulphur Springs was at one

By 1916, Ms. Tuck said, Como was well-known for its lignite operations, with three mines in full production. A year later, five companies owned major mines, the most mechanized owned by the Sanger Bros. of Dallas.

"The power used in developing the mines at Como was steam, generated by the lignite prod-

"There was no gas in the mines. Miners worked five and one-half days a week, 10 hours a day. The mine was laid out in blocks with linking tunnels. Miners worked in rooms until the coal supply was exhausted, and then the support timbers that had been used were removed and the room vacated."

While some of the work was done by local residents, Ms. Tuck said much of the labor was done by workers from Mexico who lived in wooden shanties east of town and in railroad cars along the about as wide as a monster truck tire, marks the

The coal mines flourished for about 30 years. S.R. Hill of Hill and Hill Mining closed the last mine in Como 60 years ago in 1937, when technology caught up.

"The death of the mining in Como was due to natural gas," Ms. Tuck said. "Lignite was being used only for people's heaters and cook stoves."

A few reminders of the coal mine era remain,

A mine cap belonging to S.R. Hill can be found at the Hopkins County Museum. A large metal fan once placed over a shaft to circulate air to workers below still stands on a spread of land off of State Highway 11. Nearby, a vast mountain of dirt and brush, now claimed by fire ants, is an earthen memorial to the forgotten laborers.

"This is the dirt that came up out of the mines," said Judy Caddell, whose taxidermist shop in Como neighbors the mound.

And, of course, there are the mine shafts, still reaching to the surface, like an exhausted diver trying to break the ocean surface.

Access to the mines has been cut off, either by the companies which abandoned operations in the 1930s or land owners like Lawrence, 58, who unwittingly discovered the ground beneath his feet was Swiss cheese scores of feet below.

Lawrence, however, hopes the dangerous reminders offered by the cave-ins will remain

"It's crazy, especially when the real deep one caved in. I think it took 60 or 70 loads of dirt to fill it in," Lawrence said during a tour of his land, standing where a concave, circular patch of land, spot of the cave-in.

It was kind of spooky, ya know? You could see the old mining timbers they used to build it up. "I don't know how many cave-ins I'll have, but I hope I won't have anymore."

Cutting horses led John Mann to raising cattle. Mann first became interested in cutting horses several years ago when he was practicing law in Amarillo.

Mann, now Pampa's district attorney, came accross a cutting horse show one Sunday afternoon in 1987 in Amarillo.

"We just happened to be out, driving around looking for something to do," Mann said. "I saw these trailers and pickups and went in."

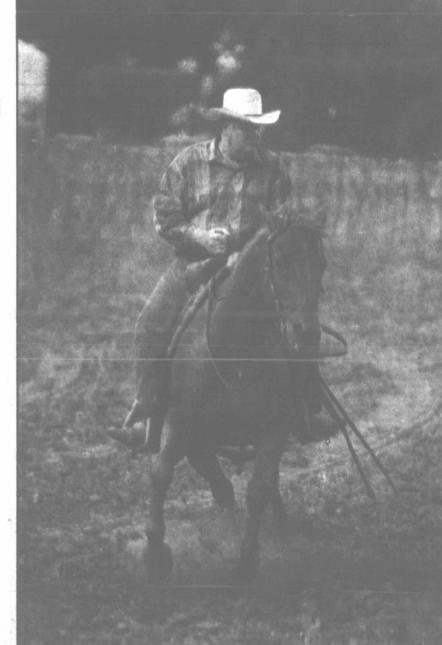

Mann ran into a friend, and they agreed it looked like fun. The next week, the friend called to say an acquaintance from Channing had a cutting horse at an arena in Amarillo and wanted to know if Mann wanted to go try out the horse. "The next Thursday night I went out there," Mann said. Mann bought the horse the following day. It was the first of many that Mann and his wife Doris Taylor have bought, sold and traded. When the couple moved to a ranch in rural Wheeler County, among the improvements they made were a barn with tack room, stalls and indoor arena and a round pen lined with 5500 cedar posts.

"Each one put there by hand," Mann said. His wife has taken over much of the cutting horse business. The horse facility provides a home-on-the-road for trainers traveling through with 20 or 30 horses on their way to and from shows. The couple also works with their own hors-

Remember tried and true methods when canning! Tomatoes, salsas, jalapenos, home canners just do not have the equipment for processing or apricots, jellies, jams, and even cactus are a few of the favorite of home canners of produce. And don't forget those all time favorites - corn peas and green beans. Home canning of fresh produce can be a fruitful activity, but unless safe food preservation methods are used, the results can be less than satisfactory and healthy.

The basics include an explanation of the two canning methods. For most fruit products jams, jellies and pickles - the boiling water canner method can be used. Boiling water canning employs the use of a large pot that has a lid and a rack to hold canning jars. The rack is used to hold jars off the bottom of the container. The container must be large enough to cover the jars with at least two inches of boiling water so that the jars are completely immersed in boiling water.

The method is also used for quick canning tomatoes and products acidified with vinegar such as quick pickles and salsas. Current recommendations are that tomato products be acidified with an acid source so that newer tomato varieties have enough acid to be safe when canned by this method.

Categories of vegetables and fruits which have low acid content must be canned using a pressure canner. Because bacteria that survive in this low acid environment must be destroyed by extremely high heat (above boiling temperatures), the pressure canner, which reaches 214°F. must be used. The dial gauges on the dial-type pressure canners should be tested yearly. This can be done in the Extension office free or charge. Many questions are asked as to why home canners cannot produce safely the same products as some commercial manufacturers can produce. Most the commercial preservatives to use to make products shelftable.

Creativity is not a good idea for home canned products. Only tested formulations and processing recommendations should be used. You may contact the Extension office to receive recommended recipes and instructions for your home canned products.

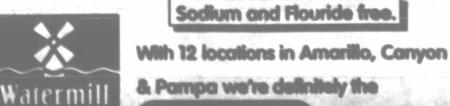

Store home canned products in a clean, cool, dark, dry place if possible. Avoid storing jars in an area that will be below 32°F. or above 90°R Under proper storage conditions of 50-70° F., products should maintain best quality for up to one year.

For more information on home canning, contact your Gray county office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Thrips and boll weevils are trying the patience of Central and West Texas cotton farmers.

The thrip problem is a combination of the weather and other factors," Nancy Roe of Stephenville, a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said of the tiny, juice-sucking insects. 'It may depend on the fall weather more than anything.

Extension agent Dale Mott of Williamson County said boll weevils have been a big problem in pests, it could be a real tough year," he said.

Mott said the longer it takes to treat the boll weevils, the more chance there is to have outbreaks of Extension entomologist Emory Boring of Vernon said the cotton crop is struggling due to high winds and damage from thrips and boll weevils.

"Boll weevils have moved into some fields that are now squaring, but most fields have been treated and will not have too much damage," Boring

According to Boring the only heavy damage occurred in several untreated research plots.

according to the state Department of Agriculture. What growers need is more sunny, warm weather, which is what exactly is forecast.

But strawberry-lovers who like to pick their own better expect to pay more. Sideman said he expects to charge an extra nickel or dime a pound. "The late season means extra work," he said.

"And we haven't gone up on our price for four or five years."

Science, fun and games mean big news for producers, tough luck for cotton pests

SHAFTER, Calif. (AP) — Farm research is more than looking for a higher-yielding seed or building a better bugtrap.

Experiments at the U.S. Agriculture Department's Shafter research station in the heart of California's cotton country range from space-age stuff to equipment using such common devices as leaf blowers and bicycle wheels.

Scientists even play around with launchers — the kind that flips clay pigeons into the air for trapshooters to blast beneficial bugs into cotton

The live bugs are put in discs that look like clay pigeons but really are made of limestone, a biodegradable material. Compressed manure or peat moss also could be used to make the discs, says Lyle Carter at the Shafter station.

As the launcher is moved down a row of cotton plants, one limestone disc after another is sent soaring, scattering the discs widely along the ground.

When the temperature is right, the good bugs leave the limestone in search of bad bugs to devour.

Being thrown out with cannon-like force does not seem to bother the insects. "They're tougher than us," Carter says. "We've never killed a single beneficial" bug.

The bicycle wheels are part of another mechanical experiment Carter is conducting to find ways to get beneficial bugs into cotton fields airly cheaply.

"The use of biologicals is limited in cotton," Carter says. "They're usually used with high-value crops like vegetables and orchards. So we're working on a mechanical approach for applications."

Leaf blowers will not provide any research breakthroughs. But some Shafter scientists are reversing the force of the blowers to suck up bugs from plants so the number of pests can be counted and analyzed.

The Shafter station is one of four farm areas in the nation where remote sensing is being studied. That sounds space age and definitely will be when the effort is linked to satellites in a few years.

Already, aircraft are flying over and taking images of the Kern County fields managed by USDA and the University of California. Those images tell experts what is happening on the land better than farmers can by eyeballing fields from the ground, says Steve Maas, another USDA researcher.

"Remote sensing is just another type of scouting," Maas explains. With a crop like cotton that is intensively managed, you have to go out and know what is happening.

Infrared pictures have been around for several years, but remote sensing technology provides higher resolutions, Maas Researchers collect data from a large area by airplane in a short time, then do computer enhancement imagery. "They learn things you wouldn't notice just driving by," Maas

The current research is focused on learning "what kind of things of interest to agriculture can they see in this imagery," he adds.

Woman Who Wants Piano Back Strikes Sour Note With Sister

sister called and offered me her plano. She told me none of her children wanted it, she was moving, and there was no room for it in her new place. Since I love to play the piano and am quite good at it, I said yes immediately.

I have moved twice since I have had the piano. It is very heavy, and the second time I moved, I had to pay a piano mover to move it. In October of '95, my mother passed away. Then in December of '96, my other sister passed away, and I've been sick for quite a while myself.

Last February, the sister who gave me the piano called out of the blue and told me she wanted her piano back because her granddaughter was taking piano lessons and needed it so she could practice. I hadn't heard from her for quite a while, and it upset me that she had called not to inquire about my health, but to ask me to return something she had given me seven years ago.

She insists that she told me seven years ago that she was giving me the piano with the stipulation that if one of her children or grandchildren should decide some time in the future that they wanted to play, I would return it. My feeling is that it was inconsiderate of her to ask for the płano back, when she knew I was sick and depressed, regardless of any stipulation under which she might have given it to me. I explained to her that due to chronic fatigue and depression, I haven't been able to keep my house in order and that she could have someone come for the piano after I am well enough to straighten up my

By JOAN TREADWAY The Times Picayune

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The air was fresh after a spring rain on the day, eight years ago, that Albert Baker spotted the old green suitcase. It had been tossed, closed but unlocked, into a patch of muddy grass.

Baker, then foreman of a maintenance crew, was curious. He went over, opened the suitcase and under some old clothes discovered a pile of photographs, which camp? discolored with age.

But suddenly the good times and high jinks gave way to shots that were nothing short of horrific: hundreds of emaciated corpses stacked on the ground like cordwood, teams of civilians digging trenches for mass burials as soldiers stood by.

More eerie for being so informal, they were snapshots of the Holocaust taken by an unknown soldier at an as yet unidentified Nazi death camp.

"I knew immediately what it was about. I knew this was a piece of history," said Baker, a Corps veteran who remembers studying World War II during high school.

Baker, now 42 and a warehouse worker, held on to the photo-February gave him an answer.

In their gruesome detail, the photographs are comparable in quality to those in the Holocaust museums in Washington, D.C., and in Israel, Thorne-Thomsen

But who shot them? And at

To answer the first question, As he flipped through them, he the institute has taken to the Internet in search of leads on the probable photographer, the soldier who appears most frequently in the GI group shots. Meanwhile, historians and other experts are studying the images for clues to the camp's location.

Thorne-Thomsen, remembering Dachau, said he can empathize with a soldier who chose to suppress such a memory by tucking away the snapshots and trying to forget them.

Lawrence Powell, a Tulane specialist in Holocaust history and a member of the institute's board, said the photographs of civilians doing the burial work under the eye of American soldiers suggest the camp was in Germany.

Having visited the sites of con-New Orleans native and Marine centration camps, Powell suspects that the one in the pictures was a subcamp, a satellite labor probably camp, Ravensbrueck camp near Berlin.

One reason is that the snapgraphic stash, uncertain what to shots show the camp to be next to do with it. The television broad- a town, whereas larger camps cast of Schindler's List last were usually more isolated, he

Hall of fame to honor state DPS officers

Austin - The troopers of the Texas highway Patrol have dili-gently served Texans for decades, helping stranded motorists, arresting drunk drivers, confiscating drugs and apprehending fugitives. Highway patrol officers often risk their lives to ensure the continued safety of Texas citizens both on the roads and in the communities. Seventy-three troopers have sacrificed their lives in the line of duty throughout DPS history. In appreciation of their dangerous work, the Texas Highway Patrol Association is in the process of building its Hall of Fame and Museum. The museum, which will honor the Highway Patrol's history and highlight its current activities, is scheduled to open in the spring of 1998. It will be located in the heart of San Antonio's tourism district at 611 South Presa Street, close to the Alamo, another monument commemorating Texas heroes.

THPA is completing renova-tions to the site, and planning to unveil the museum at a Ribbon Cutting Ceremony next May.

"In every phase of the museum's development, it should function as a bridge between citizens and law enforcement," said Trooper IV Mark Lockridge, chairman of the project and member of the THPA Board of Directors. "I envision the museum educating citizens about the importance of respect for the safety of all people."

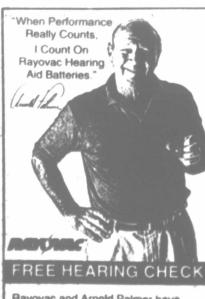

The museum's staff is presently creating the Hall of Honor, the museum's exhibit which will honor those officers killed while on duty. This section of the museum will be a monument to these officers; it will describe their lives and memorialize their deaths. The museum's other exhibits will feature how the highway patrol has incorporated technology into their work and describe the active role troopers play in their communities.

"This museum will offer some the old and some of the nev There'll be historic artifacts as well as the latest in technology," said Les Strawn, THPA board

"We want to offer a learning environment," Lockridge said, "Things that are hands-on, things you can go up and touch, move something, hit a button, get a message."

One such hands-on example is a virtual reality simulator that would allow guests to step into troopers' shoes, to see what they see on duty and face the same quick decisions made by officers every day. Support for the idea of a facility honoring the Department of Public Safety and its troopers has been around since the 1970's, especially for those who have given their lives in the line of duty. It is only recently, however, when the Texas Highway Patrol Association was formed in 1990, that a group actually began making this great idea a reality.

If you are a relative of a high-way patrol officer killed in the line of duty or if you have any items related to the highway patrol you'd like to contribute to the museum, we want to hear from you. Please contact Cisco Mendoza, Texas Highway Patrol Association, 8906 Wall Street, Suite 402, Austin, Texas 78754 or by telephone at 800-245-8598, ext. 111.
