DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas man was convicted of murder for his stray gunshot that killed a 9-year-old boy eating ice cream on his great-grandmother's porch.

Jurors who convicted Kevin D. McFail, 25, on Thursday after one hour of deliberation today began considering his punishment, which could be life in prison.

"I feel like busting out in tunes," said Cory's mother, Michelle Weems, after the verdict. "I hope the neighborhood can rest and babies sleep better knowing he is off the streets."

Cory's death in May 1994 drew wide attention and provoked outrage from some minority leaders, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who visited the family.

McFail said he opened fire in response to shots fired at him in a traffic altercation. Cory was one of six children eating ice cream on the porch about 100 yards away.

Lead prosecutor Janet Ferguson said she hoped the verdict sent a message. "An innocent 9-year-old's life was taken because of (McFail's) direct actions," Ms. Ferguson said. "If anyone should be safe, it should be a child on his great-grandmother's porch eating ice cream."

McFail's attorney, Malcolm Dade, said his client was upset about the verdict because he believed he was acting in self-defense.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 19-month-old girl drowned in a paint bucket filled with water after she wandered out of her grandmother's sight, police say.

Ruby Hernandez was found shortly before 6 p.m. Thursday with her head down in a seven-gallon bucket inside an apartment near downtown. The girl was rushed to Santa Rosa Children's Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

The gray, plastic bucket still displayed a warning from the paint company cautioning against allowing children to play inside it, police said.

"Apparently the child wandered away from the couch," said police Sgt. Larry DeHaven. "Her grandmother thought she was playing outside with the other kids and then she couldn't find her."

The grandmother, who was caring for three or four children at the time, frantically searched for the girl, then found her body, DeHaven said.

It's black, white stripes for prisoners

Black and white is always fashionable, but this year the trend is hitting county jails across the state of Texas.

It seems at least 16 counties, including Gray, have chosen, for various reasons, to return to stripes in the department of inmate apparel. And, these stripes are not pencil-thin stripes. These are loud, thickly-banded black and white stripes on polyester/cotton fabric with an industrial finish — the sort worn by jailbirds in cartoons and old silent films. Many had phased out these uniforms 60 years ago or longer.

Gray County Sheriff Don Copeland rather enjoys the new uniforms, but his choice for the stripes was based on monetary and visibility reasons rather than a glimpse of nostalgia. They are being phased in as the old uniforms wear out.

"These strips are so identifiable there's no doubt who (the prisoners) are," said Copeland. "If we have inmates working out in the community, we should be identifiable."

The decision to return to the "old tyme" striped suits stems from the increasing need of community awareness. Many inmates are currently dressed in either white or orange jumpsuits, which citizens can easily confuse with civilian work crews.

And, after a prisoner in the Denton County Jail, dressed in orange, was able to walk away unnoticed from an outside work crew,

Hart recipient of golf award

by MIRANDA BAILEY

The Tri-State Seniors gathered at the M.K. Auditorium and Civic Center Thursday night for their 63rd annual banquet and honored many individuals, including Warren Hart, winner of the annual Colonel Bogey award.

The Chamber of Commerce gold coats were at the doors to shake hands and meet the arriving crowd. City Commissioner Jeff Andrews welcomed the seniors to town.

"We want you to have a good time and if there's something we can do to improve your time here, we want to know about it."

Pampa's Dick Stowers, 1996-97 president of the association, acted as master of ceremonies while last year's Bogey award winner Donald Riffe, presented

Mary Nelson, women's activities chairperson of 10 years, who recently retired was given a special award.

Then in front of a crowd of about 300 people, Hart was honored with the Bogey award for his contribution to the Tri-State Seniors Golf Association.

Born Oct. 18, 1918, in Caliente, Nev., Hart spent many years as a youth in Miami, Fla. Interested in baseball, Hart later went to Pennsylvania to play semi-pro baseball. However, while in

Texas teachers mostly satisfied

Pay, discipline are concerns

AUSTIN (AP) — They want higher salaries, don't like the statewide student test and are concerned about school discipline. But 70 percent of educators in a survey released Thursday expressed satisfaction with their jobs.

"This distinct contrast suggests that while things are far from perfect, educators are educators by choice. We teach because we love the art of imparting knowledge," said high school teacher Larry Davis, president of the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

The educator group, in conjunction with the University of Texas at Austin Office of Survey Research, surveyed a random sample of its 80,000 members in a questionnaire mailed May 12.

Of 1,200 educators mailed surveys, 51 percent responded. The margin of error is plus or minus four percentage points. Of those responding, 80 percent were classroom teachers. The group also includes administrators and support personnel.

An unexpected finding was the teacher satisfaction rate, said Davis, who teaches math in Connally Independent School District on the outskirts of Waco.

"It is surprising that a lot of teachers now are happy with their working conditions," he said. "In the past, there have been a lot of complaints about working conditions."

Davis said building and renovation in school district, plus a system to give teachers more input in how their campuses are run, may have contributed to their satisfaction.

The survey found 29 percent of educators were very satisfied with their working conditions, and 44 percent somewhat satisfied. Asked for an overall assessment regarding their current job, 24 percent called themselves very satisfied and 46 percent somewhat satisfied.

But they also had concerns about

Salaries, with 54 percent calling themselves either somewhat (36 percent) or very (18 percent) dissatisfied.

CADDO, Okla. — The humidity hangs heavy in the summer air as Daylin Hash circles the corral on a filly he's training for the Stuart Ranch here. It's not at all what Hash grew up with.

"My parents come over and visit sometimes," grins the 1983 Canadian High School graduate, "but we don't see too much of them in the summer."

Here in southeastern Oklahoma, the humidity can take its toll on both horse and rider, but Hash doesn't seem to mind. He's living his dream.

And that's what he does for the Stuart Ranch that's headquartered here.

The ranch, the oldest ranch in Oklahoma under continuous family ownership, was established here in 1868. It was named recipient of the 1995 Best Remuda Award by the American Quarter Horse Association in conjunction with the National Cattlemen's Association. The award is given to the ranch judged to have the best remuda or band of ranch horses.

But Hash earned his spurs in the Texas Panhandle, a place where humidity is a summer thunderstorm or a winter blizzard.

The son of Jim and Davie Hash of Canadian, Daylin started cowboying at the Big Bull Ranch near the Hemphill County seat before moving to Dalhart where he worked at the

Jurors to diocese: 'Please admit your guilt'

DALLAS (AP) — Plaintiffs who accused the Rev. Rudolph Kos of sexually assaulting them are happy for a $119.6 million verdict against the priest and the Roman Catholic Diocese of Dallas.

But more than that, they're hopeful the verdict will trigger change within Catholic churches everywhere.

"I hope that tonight when I go to bed, I can feel safe in my heart that one less person will be abused," said Robert Hultz, one of Kos' accusers. "That next year, this will not happen again. That throughout the country, this will set the standard for what needs to be done."

Said plaintiffs attorney Sylvia Demarest: "I challenge the bishops of the United States of America. I challenge the bishop in Rome to make sure that policies and procedures are implemented so that a trial like this is never necessary again. ... This must stop."

Thursday's verdict, after 11 weeks of testimony and 2 1/2 days of deliberations, left little doubt that the 10 women and two men on the state court jury panel intended to send a similar message.

The $101.6 million in actual damages and $18 million in punitive damages was the Pennsylvania he was introduced to golf which according to Riffe, "Not only became his sport, but his life."

During World War II, Hart was able to spend some time stateside playing golf. After the war, he became a club professional. He moved to Pampa and became the golf pro at the Pampa Country Club as well as the head grounds keeper.

"A lot of those elms I hit on the course he probably planted or oversaw the planting of," Riffe said.

Riffe said that Hart was instrumental in getting the Senior Tri-State tournament moved to Pampa and he has received many honors in the last years including the 1980 Golf Pro of Northwest Texas PGA award.

Upon receiving his award, Hart said, "I was told I had to make a speech, but it had to be a short one. So, Mr. Stowers, I am going to turn it back over to you."

The crowd roared with laughter. In addition, Bill Clemmons from Fritch was introduced as the new president of the association. He concluded the banquet by asking the crowd if they had a good time in Pampa and told them to come back next year and have a better time.

largest-ever verdict rendered in a priest molestation case.

In a statement from the jury read by state District Judge Anne Ashby, the panel encouraged the church to acknowledge its part in the Kos tragedy.

"Please admit your guilt and allow these young men to get on with their lives," the statement said.

The jury determined in a 33-item questionnaire that the diocese was grossly negligent and concealed information in its handling of sexual abuse complaints lodged against Kos.

Diocesan officials lied about Kos, inflicted emotional distress on the plaintiffs, committed fraud and conspired a cover-up, jurors determined.

Church officials did not deny the molestation charges against Kos but said the diocese was not negligent.

STRIPES

Denton and several other counties began purchasing the striped uniforms, said Denton County Sheriff Sheldon Lucas.

In fact, in the past 17 months at least 16 Texas counties and one city took up — Richardson — have decked out all or some of their inmates in the eye-catching uniforms, sometimes with matching visorless caps.

The reasons for bringing back striped outfits vary across the counties that have adopted the uniforms. Some found white uniforms too hard to clean and the ultra-bright orange ones were too similar to safety jumpsuits worn by utility workers.

Some counties share the motive of the Arizona sheriff who dresses inmates in pink — humiliation.

In the case of Washington County Jail in Brenham, the return of striped uniforms was for old time's sake.

"I did it the first of last month mainly I think, out of nostalgia," said Ed Eddie Eppler, 55, a ranch manager turned jail administrator. "I came from the old school and I think the inmate has to appear that he is incarcerated."

"Inmates say it's humiliating," he added. "And if they do, then they shouldn't break the law."

Clarence Lee, a 24-year-old trusty who works in the Denton County Jail kitchen, agrees that the stripes are degrading.

"It makes you feel bad, especially when you go to visitation and see your girlfriend," he said.

Yet Lee was the exception, in a half-dozen interviews of Denton inmates.

"People notice you in stripes more. People honk and they wave, even a few on bicycles," said Robin Diamond, 21, a trusty who has done road crew work.

Some inmates said the outfits remind them of comical convicts in old films.

At the Williamson County Jail in Georgetown, jailer Eric

McConaughy expects inmates to be startled by the stripes.

"They're usually shocked," he said. "They want to know why and I just tell them we're an old-fashioned county so we're going back to old-fashioned things. I'd like to bring back the ball and chain, but I don't think my boss will let me."

Stripes were first brought back by a Florida sheriff who reintroduced chain gangs. Since then, about 100 counties around the country have gone to stripes.

Navarro County has uniforms of four colors but no stripes.

"We're considering them," said Sgt. John Ross, 31, a jail supervisor at the jail in Corsicana. "Right now we're using green for felons, blue for misdemeanors, orange for high risk, and white for trusties. If you have an escape, stripes would be more obvious — make them stick out more."

Told that 16 other counties had adopted stripes, Ross said, "Damn, I got to get my butt in gear."

Police informant killings rare in Texas Rio Grande Valley used to drug-related murders

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — In the Rio Grande Valley, stories of drug-related killings appear on the evening news almost as regularly as the weather report.

Tales of bullet-riddled bodies being discovered in car trunks or floating in irrigation canals are hardly shocking in this booming narcotics corridor on the Mexico border.

But those killings generally are the result of drug transactions gone bad, authorities say. Less common, and more disturbing, is the murder of a witness or informant whose testimony may be vital to nailing traffickers and their henchmen.

Once such case is grabbing headlines this week after the battered body of a key witness in a federal drug trial turned up across the border in Reynosa, Mexico.

Some say the informant's slaying, although rare, is another sign that the drug trade is growing ever more violent.

"It's a very brutal atmosphere," said Mavis Dezulovich, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Marshal's Service, which runs the federal witness protection program. "Just look at what you're dealing with."

Although U.S. authorities have not confirmed that the informant was killed because of his impending testimony, drug agents admit they are concerned the slaying could scare off other potential witnesses.

"It doesn't help us," said Alonzo Pena, chief of the U.S.

Customs Service office in Brownsville, who estimates that the majority of his agents' drug cases are developed with informants.

"There are always threats, but it's very rare that an informant has harm done to him," Pena said. "When an event like this takes place, it doesn't enhance our position in cultivating informants."

On Tuesday, the body of Hector Salinas Guerra, 42, was found in a grassy lot near a school in Reynosa, his arms and legs bound with tape. His head was indented with a deep groove, possibly caused by a pistol or bat, and his body had been pummeled, resulting in multiple fractures, Mexican police said.

A plastic bag, which police believe may have been used to suffocate Salinas, lay near his body, along with his beeper. The discovery came just days after Salinas was abducted from his family's secondhand clothing store in south McAllen.

Around 8:30 p.m. Friday, as the sun was beginning to set, four men in clothing bearing Mexican police insignias forced Salinas at gunpoint into a truck and sped off, witnesses told police.

Authorities said the abductors may have been posing as Mexican police officers. Police on both sides of the border, as well as the FBI, are investigating the case.

"We're looking at all possible motives that might have been involved," FBI spokesman John De Leon said.

Salinas was scheduled to testify this week in the federal drug trial of seven men accused of smuggling about 3,000 pounds of marijuana across the border.

He was a key player in a sting operation that helped bring down the smuggling ring, authorities said. He agreed to help prosecutors after drug agents found several hundred pounds of marijuana in the back of his clothing store in April.

"It's possible he was kidnapped and killed to prevent him from testifying. But if he were involved in the drug trade, it could have been retaliation for previous actions," said Barry Abbott, who heads the McAllen office of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

The same day Salinas' body was found, his son testified in his place.

Hector Hugo Salinas told jurors that he worked with his father in repackaging and storing marijuana shipments. Since December, five of the seven defendants helped run the operation in the back of his father's store, the younger Salinas testified.

Jurors never learned about Salinas' slaying and prosecutors have declined to comment until the trial is over. The case went to the jury Thursday.

Federal authorities said several agencies, including DEA and Customs, provide protection to witnesses or informants if they ask. Salinas had not requested protection, Abbott said.

Salinas' slaying is one of several suspicious drug-related deaths in the Rio Grande Valley in recent months.

In March, a former sheriff's deputy was found burned to death in his car just hours before he was scheduled to plead guilty to drug-trafficking charges. Authorities initially investigated the death as a homicide, but have since concluded the man accidentally killed himself while trying to fake his death.

Also in March, a man who was scheduled for trial on drug charges was gunned down outside of a laundromat as his wife and daughter watched helplessly. Police investigators have not determined a motive in that slaying.

Band camp

Nearly 500 junior high and high school students attended the 42nd annual Southwestern Oklahoma State University band camp July 11-16 at Weatherford, Okla. The camp is one of Oklahoma's oldest and most successful band camps with students from across the state and five other states participating. Among students attending the camp were: Holly Myers, Douglas Warren, Roger Myers, Chris Shaffer and Justin Myers, all of Pampa.

Southwest earnings up 10% in second quarter

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines said its profits for the second quarter were up 10 percent partially because of a stronger mix of higher-profit traffic and slightly higher fares.

For the three months that ended June 30, the low-cost carrier earned $93.8 million, or 62 cents a share, compared with $85.3 million, or 56 cents per share, for the same year-ago period.

Revenues grew to $956.9 million, a 5 percent increase over last year's quarter figure of $910.3 million.

"This was an exceptionally strong performance considering that 1996's results were not subject to the 10 percent ticket tax while 1997's results were burdened with that tax," chief executive Herbert Kelleher said in a news release.

"Despite the reimposition of the ticket tax, our second quarter 1997 revenue yield per revenue passenger mile of 13 cents exceeded last year's performance by 1 percent due to modestly higher fares and a stronger mix of higher-yielding traffic."

Kelleher said the third quarter outlook looked good.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Dallas Morning News on GOP revolt
From afar, the House Republican uprising appears an insider's game. But the failed coup to overthrow Newt Gingrich as House speaker does carry a larger importance. Congress needs to fine-tune legislation to balance the budget and cut taxes by Aug. 1. A divided Republican leadership could undermine that possibility.

The uprising involved some junior House Republicans who are disenchanted with Mr. Gingrich's leadership. Some Republican revolutionaries consider him too willing to compromise, while others have questioned Mr. Gingrich's standing after he encountered ethics problems.

Indeed, the speaker's hand was weakened after his own House reprimanded him this winter for ethical lapses. Afterward, the once-omnipotent GOP leader seemed as difficult to find as Waldo. The House appeared to largely drift along without an attentive captain.

But working out agreements with opponents, as Mr. Gingrich did on a disaster relief bill, hardly constitutes grounds for an overthrow. Aren't congressional chieftains supposed to define their principles, and then seek common ground with others as they build consensus around a bill?

Progress has been made on the budget and tax bills because both Democrats and Republicans have put aside some priorities. Republicans originally wanted a deeper tax cut. And Democrats did not want to make many Medicare changes.

Fortunately, enough Democrats and Republicans have come together to get Americans close to a balanced budget for the first time since 1969. It would be a shame, if not horribly ironic, for internal GOP politics to upend the budget pact. Republicans have pushed hard for a balanced budget since coming to power in 1994.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, an Irving Republican, could help matters here by working with Speaker Gingrich in resolving the budget and tax disagreements that still separate Democrats and Republicans. Mr. Armey swears he did not participate in the uprising, although conflicting reports surround what he knew about the insurrection. Putting new focus on completing a budget pact would allow him to heal some party wounds and signal that Republicans are intent on governing. That, after all, transcends the intrigue of internal puteshes.

Abilene Reporter-News on media and Senate hearings.

Critics from the left and right have chastised the news media for neglecting the Senate hearings into campaign finance irregularities.

The common argument seems to be that the lack of media attention, especially from national TV networks, has rendered the hearings irrelevant to the public.

Perhaps the networks should be providing better coverage, but attacking the media's response to the hearings misses the point. Regardless what the media do, what counts is what Republican Sen. Fred Thompson's committee does.

It is this whole exercise is designed as nothing more than a media event — a superficial exercise in public relations to make it look as though politicians are finally cleaning up their act — then it's a waste of time, anyway. And if it accomplishes anything substantial, then the media will be forced to report it, whether they want to or not.

At any rate, the hearings shouldn't be about playing to the camera any more than it should have been during the O.J. Simpson murder trial.

The so-called "entertainment value" or drama of such government hearings is often raised by the level of heated partisan rhetoric they produce. Though there has been ample and disturbing evidence already presented of foreign contributions to recent Democratic presidential campaigns, Republicans are somewhat hampered in generating the requisite verbal indignation against the GOP's own acceptance of foreign money.

It is no defense for Democrats to say the Republicans did it, too, any more than it'll get you out of a speeding ticket to ask the policeman why he's not stopping everyone else. Pointing the finger at the other side will not deflect the criticism Democrats have committed on this one. Nor will it help Republicans to say the Democrats have been worse.

Wrong is wrong, and it's time both sides own up to it. The involvement of foreign governments in American elections is despicable and must be stopped.

But there's one all these hearing are, or should be, about. They're about the exaggerated role money now plays in political campaigns and governance. Everybody says it's a shame, but no one knows what to do about it. And expecting those who have risen to their present positions to dismantle the very system that has enabled them to get where they are is too idealistic, perhaps, even for Jimmy Stewart in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Quick-fix solutions aren't there. What are we supposed to do, restrict campaign spending? That stifles the right to free speech of those who contribute to a candidate's campaign because they see that candidate as speaking for them. Do we allow unlimited contributions but require full disclosure? That hardly takes the money out of play. Do we substitute free TV time for paid commercials? That won't make voters watch instead of tuning in to football games.

What we need can be simply stated. We need national candidates and officeholders with enough moral integrity not to cross the line even without laws to punish them if they do. With Jimmy Stewart gone now, can his understudies step up to that role?

El Paso Times on bilingual education.

Children should be encouraged to learn a second language. In the Southwest and along the U.S.-Mexico border, Spanish should be a requirement. The same could be said of the French language near the Northeast border with Canada. The North American Free Trade Agreement and the new global economy demand a bilingual, bicultural education for people to succeed in the job market.

Congress emphasized the goal ... when an appropriations committee voted to increase funding for bilingual education programs ...

While learning English is an imperative for living in the United States, multilingual fluency is becoming increasingly common, not to mention practical.

Saying goodbye isn't easy

Good-bye is often said, but few people ever think of the finality of the word. It is also said that each time a door is closed another one is opened.

Throughout my life I have said good-bye many times and so closed many doors to see another open.

The first good-bye I can really remember was in 1968. I had to say good-bye to my best friend, a Chow-Chow named Red who was shot to death by a vicious man who wanted to inflict pain. I've forgotten his name and what he looked like, but Red will live forever in my mind as the best friend I ever hoped to have.

In 1973 I said good-bye for the last time to my father. The final battle was fought between my parents and he closed the door as he left. To him I can only say I am sorry he never got to know the person his youngest daughter grew up to be.

I said good-bye to my high school in 1978 and the first real good-bye to my mother shortly thereafter. Through all the years and miles that separated us, she never gave up on me and I always knew she would be there. The day I say my final farewell to this great lady will truly break my heart. I can not imagine what door this will open. I said good-bye to my freedom in the fall of 1982

Dianna F. Dandridge
Pampa News staff writer

when my oldest child was born. There's nothing in the world to bring so much joy, strife and lack of freedom than a young child growing into her teen age years. I think I will welcome the good-bye when she is finally off to college and the other two are looking to leave the nest.

I cried in 1991 when the judge signed the divorce papers that said a very legal good-bye to my marriage. But even with this a door was opened and I stepped through.

I put myself through college, with three kids in tow and finally said good by to Texas Tech in December 1994, and so began my professional career. The following year I had to say good-bye to my old yellow car. It was a 1985 Chevy Cavalier with 314,000 miles on it. It finally spent more time in the mechanics repair shop than being driven. With my growing family I needed a bigger car and was able to get a mini van and go on my way.

My next major goodbye came when I had to say good-bye to my very best human friend, Scott and I had grown almost inseparable in only a few short months and I said goodbye as he drove away to marry his longtime sweetheart Anastasia. A beautiful girl and a lucky guy for whom I will always have space in my heart.

Now it's time for another door to close as I say my final farewell to the friends and people I have met in Pampa.

As a single mom I have to go where I can do the best for my family. Because I can't possibly contact everyone who has helped and befriended us since we arrived I hope this column will serve as goodbye to all.

Another door is open to me; one that will lead to better things. Wish me well and welcome the newcomers the way you have welcomed me. I will remember the people, the characters, and the town with fondness and no regrets. Good-bye Pampa.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 25, the 206th day of 1997. There are 159 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 25, 1956, 51 people died when the Italian liner Andrea Doria sank after colliding with the Swedish ship Stockholm off the New England coast.

On this date:
In 1593, France's King Henry IV converted from Protestantism to Roman Catholicism.

In 1866, Ulysses S. Grant was named General of the Army, the first officer to hold the rank.

In 1868, Congress passed an act creating the Wyoming Territory.

In 1909, French aviator Louis Bleriot flew across the English Channel in a monoplane, traveling from Calais to Dover in 37 minutes.

In 1943, Benito Mussolini was dismissed as premier of Italy by King Victor Emmanuel III and placed under arrest. Mussolini was later rescued by the Nazis and reasserted his authority.

In 1946, the United States detonated an atomic bomb at Bikini.

Illegals' kids get a free pass

Barbara Boxer, California's Democratic junior senator, was in San Diego recently, taking time to chide local congressman Brian Bilbray for proposing legislation on Capitol Hill that would deny automatic U.S. citizenship to newborn babies of illegal aliens.

In a testy speech, even for her, Boxer acidly remarked, "I find the story extremely interesting ... that congressman Bilbray's mom did come here so he'd be a citizen. I'm sure he's very happy."

Boxer insinuates that Bilbray is hypocritical. That he benefited from the 14th Amendment guarantee of citizenship for "all persons born or naturalized in the United States." That he wants to deny the same citizenship "right" to babies born on U.S. soil to illegal alien parents.

But Bilbray would have been a U.S. citizen whether his mom, Mavis, bore him in the United States, in her native Austria or at the American naval base on Guam (where she resided at the time). Her husband was an American serviceman. And she was a naturalized American citizen.

There is absolutely no comparison between what Mavis Bilbray did, when she was two months pregnant with the future U.S. congressman, and what roughly 100,000 illegal aliens do year by year, when they spirit across the U.S. border and have their babies in San Diego maternity wards at California taxpayer expense.

If there is any hypocrite on the illegal immigration issue, it's Boxer. "We need to fix it at the border," she said. "We need to fix it at the workplace." But then she adds, "I wasn't for fixing it, by the way, at the hospital or in the classroom."

So what the senator is saying is that, as long as foreign nationals stay on their side of the U.S. border, they have no right to Yankee largess. But if they manage to steal across the U.S. border as more than one million do each year then they get a free pass.

Joseph Perkins

Joseph Perkins is a columnist for the San Diego Union-Tribune and a commentator for MSNBC.

They are entitled to free hospitalization, free education, free welfare benefits, all courtesy of state and federal taxpayers. Moreover, if illegal aliens have babies in a U.S. maternity ward, those babies are designated American citizens.

Boxer says that her views on illegal alien births are rooted in American tradition. "Maybe I'm old-fashioned," she said, "but I think, if you're born here, you're an American."

But while that has been the rule since the 14th amendment was ratified in 1868, the United States does make exceptions. For instance, the American-born babies of foreign diplomats do not become U.S. citizens. Instead, they are citizens of the countries from which their diplomat parents came. The rationale being that the primary loyalty of an American citizen must necessarily be to the United States rather than a foreign nation.

A similar exception ought to be made for the offspring of illegal aliens. Their parents have no allegiance to the United States and have arrived in this country through illegal — felonious — means. Neither illegal alien parents, nor their babies, have done anything to merit American citizenship.

Moreover, constitutional scholars say that neither Congress nor the state legislatures intended for the 14th Amendment to apply to the children of illegal aliens. That's because, when the amendment was originally proposed 130-some years ago, the United States had a de facto "open border" policy. There was no illegal immigration to speak of.

The Reconstruction Era amendment was specifically written for the benefit of former slaves, most of whom were third- and fourth-generation residents of this country, who were brought to this country against their will, who found themselves disenfranchised in their new homeland.

The emancipated slaves earned their American citizenship by virtue of their longevity in this country and their uncompensated labors. The 14th Amendment was passed to right a past wrong — the denial of citizenship to native-born blacks — not to reward a future wrong — stealing across the U.S. border to have a baby.

Boxer argues that Bilbray's bill, the Citizenship Reform Act, would unfairly punish the children of illegal aliens. But it hardly seems unfair to say that if a child is born to a mother who is neither an American citizen nor legal resident of this country, that her newborn should be a citizen of her nation of origin.

In fact, that's how most nations of the world determine their citizenship. If an American citizen has a baby in Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy or Japan, that baby is an American. Would Boxer suggest that such foreign-born American babies are being unfairly punished?

It remains to be seen if Rep. Bilbray's bill even makes it out of committee, much less to the House floor. But whether it does or not, he deserves credit, not attack, for raising the serious constitutional question of whether the 14th Amendment needs to be reinterpreted.

Complexification is a D.C. specialty

Conspiracy theories are not my cup of tea, but I have to say the timing of this mission to Mars strikes me as suspicious.

Here we are, watching this cute little rover gizmo creep around and sniff rocks while the sanctimonious frauds on Capitol Hill are handing out tax goodies to friends and contributors.

I'm telling you, the Pathfinder probe is a deliberate diversion. If we the people ever acquired a true understanding of the abominable manner in which our esteemed leaders gum up governance with tax laws, it might spark an uprising that would make the American Revolution look like a tea party.

Four years ago, we elected a bunch of chest-thumping Republicans who promised to get government out of our lives. Last year, we were pounded by politicians peddling flat-tax plans. For all the sweet talk and jawboning, what did we get?

A House tax bill that runs 460 pages, not including ancillary material, that's what. A Senate version that runs 662 pages, that's what. An incredibly complex pastiche of credits, deductions, exemptions, phase-outs, preferences and restrictions most designed to help friends and fat cats, or to engineer social change, or to force the weary taxpayer into making economic decisions that he otherwise wouldn't even consider.

A provision pushed through by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, rewards whaling captains with a charitable deduction for sharing meat, skin and blubber with North Slope natives.

Joseph Spear

A clause sponsored by Sen. Jim Jeffords, R-Vt., and by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., lowers the taxes paid by hard-cider distillers from 58 cents a gallon to 22.6 cents a gallon.

Another Jeffords insertion protects the earned income credit awarded to low income farmers who incur capital gains from the sale of aging cows and draft horses.

There are more, many more, special provisions — about 300, in fact. Excise taxes on diesel fuel sold to luxury boaters would be cut. Planes carrying skydivers would be exempt from ticket taxes. Archery dealers would be relieved of an excise tax. A small number of wealthy taxpayers would get a break on certain kinds of trust funds. There are breaks for truck drivers, airline pilots and people who get free rides on corporate jets. There is even an export tax credit that would benefit software manufacturers, including Microsoft. What the hell, this is America. Bill Gates deserves a break, too.

The current tax code, by the estimate of Heritage Foundation economist Daniel J. Mitchell, consists of 17,000 pages of rules, requires 480 different forms, and generates enough paperwork each year to circle the earth 36 times. And now, the luminaries of Capitol Hill are complexifying it even more. It is the most repulsive recurring spectacle in the public process, not to mention a pitiful waste of resources.

We could fix it so fast with a simplified income tax system. A number of alternatives have been discussed in recent years, but I prefer a flat tax that would provide generous allowances to protect the poor, then assess remaining income at a flat rate. There would be no other deductions. Charitable interests would have to compete for alms in the marketplace. Businesses would pay a flat rate on all income after expenses.

A flat tax would get these greasy pools out of our lives, or at least severely limit their interference. It would purge Washington of lobbyists, clean up politics and save millions of trees every year. It would be fair and efficient. It would be simple. It would encourage savings and investments, spurring the economy to unprecedented levels. Indeed, one Harvard economist, Dale Jorgenson, has predicted that a flat tax would trigger a $2 trillion increase in national wealth.

Best of all, with no tax breaks to bestow on their pals, Congress would be compelled to recess around Independence Day.

Now you know why they talk the flat tax but never walk it.

Suicide victim's family tells story of alleged sexual abuse by priest

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Jay Lemberger wasn't in court to tell his story of abuse at the hands of the Rev. Rudy Kos, but jurors heard his mother detail the allegations from the witness stand.

On Thursday, the Dallas jury found that sexual abuse by Kos and the Roman Catholic Diocese of Dallas' negligence were the "proximate cause" of Lemberger's suicide at the age of 21.

"He was murdered by the Dallas Diocese because they let Father Rudy Kos into their little regime, and he got away with it," said Pat Lemberger of Nacogdoches, Jay's father, after hearing the diocese ordered to pay nearly $120 million for allowing a priest to molest altar boys and then conspiring to cover it up.

The Lemberger family alone was awarded $18 million in actual damages awarded and $3 million in punitive damages.

When Jay Lemberger fatally shot himself in a Colorado park in 1992, his family and friends were left to wonder why. During the past three months, testimony in the civil case answered some of those questions.

"This put so many pieces of the puzzle together," said Nancy Lemberger, Jay's mother. "Up until now, we were clueless. Nothing made sense."

Last month, Mrs. Lemberger told jurors that she considered Kos to be her son's best friend and a needed role model because of her husband's frequent business travel.

The former altar boy discussed theology with Kos and considered becoming a priest, once dressing up for Halloween in priest's clothing, she said.

But, the mother said, the family didn't suspect he had been sexually abused until after his death. When Jay committed suicide, it was Kos, the family friend and priest, who was called on to conduct the funeral.

While the Lembergers knew something was wrong with their son — he'd been diagnosed as manic depressive and was being treated by a Nacogdoches psychiatrist — they had no idea of the deep secrets he was keeping.

About six months after her brother's death, Tami Sturtz saw an article where young men had come forward with allegations that Kos had molested them when they were altar boys.

"When I saw that news clip, I just knew that had to have happened to my brother," said Ms. Sturtz. She admires the courage of the young men who testified about what happened to them behind the closed doors of the church rectory.

"They had to stand up there and tell some of the most intimate and disgusting details of what happened to a room full of people they didn't know," she said. "I'm proud of each of them. My brother can't speak now, and they had the voice my brother didn't have: the courage for."

Former cadet Zamora's lawyers seek separate trials

FORT WORTH (AP) — Attorneys for a former Naval Academy midshipman accused of killing a romantic rival are opposing a prosecutor's request to have her tried along with her one-time fiancé and co-defendant.

Lawyers for capital murder defendant Diane Zamora on Thursday filed papers opposing the state's motion to have a joint trial for Ms. Zamora and David Graham, a former Air Force Academy cadet.

"It is our opinion that the defenses of Ms. Zamora and David Graham are antagonistic towards each other," Ms. Zamora's attorney, Elizabeth Berry, told Dallas-Fort Worth radio station KRLD.

"By trying them together, that would put Diane in a position where she would not only be defending herself against the state, the prosecutors, she'd also have to be defending herself against claims made by David Graham, which we contend are false."

The 19-year-old ex-military academy cadets are accused in the December 1995 shooting and beating death of 16-year-old Adrienne Jones of Mansfield. Police say Ms. Zamora, whose trial is set for late September, was furious that Graham and Ms. Jones had a one-time fling.

Lead prosecutor Mike Parrish filed a motion last month asking state District Judge Joe Drago to join two cases because doing so would "insure a fair trial for all the parties."

By joining the two cases, Parrish has said, statements by the accused against each other can be admitted in the trial. According to his request, jurors would be instructed that a statement by one of the defendants cannot be used against the other.

Ms. Zamora and Graham have been in Tarrant County Jail since shortly after their arrests in September and face life sentences if convicted. The couple's gestures of love for each other have been followed closely by observers since their arrests.

Recent reports indicate their romance appears to have waned because they stopped corresponding more than two months ago.

Group blasts Legislature for failing to toughen laws

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Legislature failed, again, to toughen key drunken driving laws and motorists are dying as a result, the group Mothers Against Drunk Driving says.

MADD officials referred to a new National Highway Traffic Safety Administration analysis, which says that Texas led the nation in both the number and percentage of fatalities that involved alcohol in 1996.

During their 1997 session, Texas legislators rejected bills to lower the legal blood alcohol level, allow police to set up "sobriety checkpoints" to get drunks off the road, and ban open alcohol containers from cars and trucks.

"The Legislature has been quite willing to punish drunk drivers after they have hurt or killed somebody and legislators don't hesitate to compensate the victims of crimes, including drunk driving," Bill Lewis, MADD's public policy liaison, said Thursday.

"What the Legislature has been unwilling to do is pass smart laws, such as lowering the legal level of intoxication ... and providing guidelines for sobriety checkpoints, that will stop drunk driving tragedies before they happen," he said.

Alcohol was involved in more than 53 percent of traffic fatalities in Texas last year, according to the federal traffic safety agency. The national average was 41 percent.

In California, which has a considerably larger population than Texas, alcohol was reported as a factor in slightly more than 40 percent of traffic deaths. Florida reported alcohol involvement in 37 percent of traffic fatalities.

Lewis said both California and Florida police use sobriety checkpoints to get drunks off the roads. Texas lawmen cannot.

"The Legislature has repeatedly failed to provide guidelines required by the courts to ensure that the checkpoints will not violate our constitutional protections against unreasonable searches," he said.

"The Legislature's failure to act has kept Texas law enforcement agencies from using sobriety checkpoints, one of the most potent weapons against drunk driving," he said.

Also rejected by lawmakers this year were bills to lower the state's legal blood-alcohol limit from 0.10 to 0.08. Fifteen states, including California and Florida, have that lower limit, Lewis said.

While Texans appreciate tough treatment of drunken drivers, he said, "What crime victims would really appreciate is not being the victim of a crime in the first place."

RELIGION

REFLECTIONS ON RELIGION

The minister's musings...

Young adults drawn to youth led churches

GEORGETOWN, Ky. (AP) — The sign behind the pulpit reads "Passion in Prayer," and the enthusiastic faces filling Trinity Assembly of God's all-youth worship service are living the words.

There is no dress code. A passion for God and for life is the only protocol, and the growing number of teen-agers who flock here and to a few other Generation X-oriented churches across the country say that freedom to worship in their own way has turned their lives around.

"In your traditional church service, they sit a long time, they sing a couple of hymns and they don't get real loud. Here, we don't hold back," said Tina McDonald, 17, barely audible above the wail of an electric guitar on a recent Sunday at Trinity.

In the gymnasium-turned-youth-worship-hall, 70 teen-agers sing, hugging one another and swaying to the rhythm. Their words have been in hymnals for centuries, but the music is closer to Smashing Pumpkins than Handel.

This is nothing like their parents' worship service in the church a few yards down the hill, and many of the teens say they wouldn't be here if it was.

Today's youth are searching for something to believe in, and many are finding it in religion, Trinity youth pastor Michael White said.

In his ministry training in Indiana, Ohio and Virginia, White, 28, dealt with youngsters aching for acceptance and often finding it in street gangs and cults. They needed something to believe in, something that wasn't forced on them by the adult world, he said.

White put religion's morality lessons in teen language and control in their hands, and the teen-agers took it from there. In less than two years, his congregation in the town of 12,000 went from an average of 15 teens to more than 100.

Trinity's Sunday morning and Wednesday night youth services became so popular and so loud earlier this year that a neighbor complained, and the county, in response, required the church to sound-proof its youth hall. The teens say it hasn't changed the way they worship and instead has increased attendance.

"When kids hear there's a church without adults, where they can pretty much do what they want, they want to see it," McDonald said. "They want to be part of it."

In a Waco, Texas, church 900 miles from Trinity, Chris Seay sits on a stool before his congregation, casually discussing the weeks' events, their implications and how Christ would have responded.

Most of his congregation at University Baptist is under 30, putting them among the first generation of Americans in which the majority has no church affiliation, Seay said. Yet despite the national trend of young adults shying away from religion, University Baptist has grown from a handful of Baylor University students two years ago to more than 2,500 members.

"The message hasn't changed," he said. "But the way it's delivered, the way our people relate to one another, is very different than churches of the past."

Like White, Seay avoids lecturing and staid routine. His congregation is more comfortable with a storytelling approach to ministry and to the music, which "has more of a Counting Crows, Dave Matthews kind of sound," he said.

Church services like White's and Seay's are rare, say youth ministry leaders for the country's major religions. But they say more churches are opening their ears to what teens and young adults have to say and trusting them to keep the faith.

"They're not looking for glorified religion," said the Rev. D. Edward Williams of First Baptist Church of Wheaton, Md., near Washington, D.C. "They want the nuts and bolts. They're not closed on the subject of religion, but they want to see some hard and fast fruit, they want to make a difference, and they're willing to put in the labor."

VBS at First United Methodist

"Celebrate Jesus" will be the theme of this year's vacation Bible school at First United Methodist Church. Classes for ages 3 through grade 6 will be from 9:15-11:45 a.m. July 28-31. The participants will celebrate Jesus and his teachings, Bible school directors Stephanie Kelly and Connie Nicklas said.

Everyone is invited to register. For more information, stop by the church office or call 669-7411.

Zion Lutheran Church is planning its VBS Aug. 4-8, from 9 a.m. until noon under the theme of "Let's Follow Jesus." The theme will be presented as the children, ages 3 through fourth grade, ride on an imaginary express train.

A variety of activities including worship, crafts, recreation and Bible study is scheduled. A limited number of spaces is available for each age group. To sign up, starting Monday, call 669-2774.

Craft Bazaar set for Aug. 16

A Craft Bazaar is set from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Aug. 16, at Church of the Nazarene. The event in the Family Life Center at Buckler and West, will benefit the Children's Ministry.

Crafters who would like to reserve a booth are asked to call Sharon Williams at 669-0176.

As a minister who is a full-time chaplain within the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Institutional Division, I am very thankful for the support of Pampa and the surrounding communities. This has come in the form of many volunteers coming to our units on their own free time to contribute to the lives of our inmates. It is very fulfilling to see an inmate make a change in attitude, way of life, relationship with God and begin to build solid character. If there ever was an environment that will "bring out the real you" it is prison. It seems to do it to inmates, officers, staff, even the chaplain! In the same way it seems to be a fertile soil for the good news.

That's why I sometimes wonder when I hear critical remarks like, "It's just jailhouse religion." I think what is meant is that it's phony; they got to prison and they can't take it so now they are crying out to God. Yet the same person will be told they have cancer tomorrow and see how they now pray! See life change while incarcerated. When they are released there are many obstacles for them to overcome to make it. Lack of education, employment, control of substance abuse, etc.

The challenge to the Church of Jesus Christ is to engage this great need and to help meet this need. In doing so, we reduce recidivism, save tax dollars and prevent more people from becoming victimized. We also demonstrate the very heart of christianity in helping another to be restored to a place of worth, value and dignity. When asked what the greatest commandment was Jesus said, "The most important one is this: Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one. Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength. The second is this: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.'" (Mark 12:29-32) It's kind of funny, but I guess we could say in light of that verse that all else is "jailhouse religion."

how they now attend church! I guess we are all guilty of "jailhouse religion" at times. Personal injury or crisis always seems to help us see where our real priorities should be.

Isn't that a good side to our crisis, pain and problems? The psalmist said, "before I was afflicted I went astray." Our affliction, whether it is of our own making or not, gets attention! The prisons system attempts to get inmate's attention! Many convicts realize where their priorities should be and attempt

Church presents surprise $10,000 scholarship to former minister's son

Sixteen years ago this month, a senseless tragedy ended the life of a young minister, leaving behind his wife and two-year-old son.

It was July 4, 1981, and Michael Brown, youth minister at First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) of Pampa, had spent the weekend at Lake Greenbelt in Clarendon.

He was on his way back to Pampa at about 6 a.m. because he was scheduled to preach that Sunday morning.

Brown apparently went to sleep at the wheel and lost control of his car. He died in the wreck that followed.

Stunned by the accident, members of First Christian Church struggled to find some way to help their youth minister's young family - his wife Cheri and his son and namesake, Michael.

The Michael C. Brown Scholarship Fund was established as a result. Sixteen years later, Michael C. Brown stood in the sanctuary of the church where his father served and received the $10,000 scholarship, the congregation's gift of love in memory of his father.

Brown, now 18, graduated this spring from high school. He plans to attend Galveston College for two years before transferring to the University of Texas at Austin and pursue a degree in architecture.

Shortly after the senior Brown's death, Cheri and little Michael moved to Galveston where she raised her son alone until her remarriage in 1992.

"Early last year I sat down and explained to him about his educational fund that he'll get when he graduated," Cheri Brown Garcia said. "I told him it is from people who loved him and his daddy that much."

Her son's response was "Cool!", she said, laughing.

"I realize how very fortunate we are, especially when I have friends trying so hard to get grants and scholarships for their children," she added.

The $10,000 scholarship is the culmination of 16 years of individual gifts from the First Christian Church congregation.

Man's Morning Routine Gets Full Exposure On Videotape

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single male in my late 20s. I live in a tree-lined subdivision that borders on a common grounds wooded area with a running path. My bathroom has two windows, each one foot wide and six feet high. Since the bathroom faces the wooded area, I never felt it was important to close the blinds while getting dressed in the morning.

The other day I found a videotape in my mailbox, along with a short, nonthreatening note, apparently from one of my neighbors. It read, "Thanks for the show ... and for giving me a reason to get up on time every morning to run. I'm not asking you to stop; I just thought you'd like to know how easy it is to see you in the morning when it's dark out. See you tomorrow? Ha ha."

Abby, my problem isn't the embarrassment of someone seeing me in the nude; it goes beyond that. The video was 27 minutes long. It started the moment I turned on my bathroom light, which means this neighbor sat outside waiting for me, and must have been just inches away from my window, as you rarely see the vertical blinds. The video covers my whole morning routine, from going to the bathroom, brushing my teeth, shaving and 15 minutes in the shower. This was far from a video that was shot from a distance. There were close-ups that filled the television screen.

I am very uncomfortable and worried about security, and what my neighbor could do with a copy of the tape. I'm a new homeowner here and don't want to get talked about around the neighborhood.

Abby, what should I do?

IN LIVING COLOR IN ROYAL OAK, MICH.

DEAR IN LIVING COLOR: CLOSE THE BLINDS!

DEAR ABBY: Since I retired, I've become my wife's prisoner. If I want to explore a hardware store, watch a stock ticker, go fishing or play golf, I am called "selfish" and "inconsiderate." She also gets upset if I don't want to follow her around the shopping mall. (I do plenty of that, by the way.)

I am 67, and my wife is 63. We both drive and each have our own car, so it's not like she's tied to the house.

Am I wrong to want some "space" sometimes?

CAPTIVE HUSBAND IN COLORADO

DEAR CAPTIVE: Every couple benefits from some time alone. It gives them more to talk about when they are together. As long as you devote a portion of the day exclusively to your wife and her needs, she should have no objection if you go off by yourself occasionally.

Books are available at the library on how to handle retirement. Check some out and educate yourself.

DEAR ABBY: There is absolutely no way that I can believe that an 11-year-old boy wrote that whiny letter. It is entirely possible that he is being hassled over having two dads, but I just don't buy that an 11-year-old is/was this articulate! I have an 11-year-old, and I've worked with fifth- and sixth-graders for years.

I think one of his "dads" wrote the letter, and the son copied it and sent it to you. Personally, Abby, I think you've been snookered.

MELISSA IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR MELISSA: You could be right, and if I have been snookered, it wouldn't be the first time.

Horoscope

Sunday, July 27, 1997

Be amenable to making adjustments to fulfill your ambitions in the year ahead. More changes than usual are probable, and if you flow with events, you'll benefit from their momentum.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends can be relied upon to help you plug up holes today, but you'd be wise not to depend too heavily upon people you know only on a business level. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758 Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are apt to be very resourceful today in overcoming problems that affect your work or career. However, don't boast about your virtues.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you allow your intuition to guide you today when dealing with others, you're capable of working out a procedure where both will equally benefit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Chance weighs in your favor today, but the other factors involved could make opportune situations questionable. Be mentally alert to make revisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) When making decisions today, remember that knowing what to do is only half the battle; carrying out the ideas is the other half.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Shoot from the hip today! If given a chance to partake in something opportune, too much pondering could give others the chance to beat you to it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might not be personally lucky today, but if you associate with someone who is, some of his or her fortunate vibes could rub off on you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Commitments made to loved ones must be put above all other considerations today. Should you default, you could leave a disappointing scar in your wake.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be optimistic in all of your endeavors today, but keep your hope within practical parameters. Excessive expectations could nourish costly errors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though your judgment might not be up-to-par today in career or financial matters, events may work out in ways that enhance your positions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Yield to your charitable inclinations at this time. Today you might give a little more, but tomorrow you could be on the receiving end.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Situations should run smoothly for you today if you deal only with those who are directly connected with your affairs. Keep outsiders out!

Duenkel leads senior tourney by four

Notebook

GOLF

PAMPA — The Pampa News Gray County Tournament at Hidden Hills has been switched to Aug. 23-24.

The tournament was previously scheduled for this weekend, but a conflict forced the date to be changed, said Hidden Hills pro David Teichmann.

The tournament is open golfers from ages 18 on up throughout the Gray County area.

For more information, call 669-5866.

FORT WORTH — Ben Hogan, the stone-faced man in the white hat who survived a crippling car crash to become one of the greatest golfers ever, died today. He was 84.

Hogan, who had colon cancer surgery two years ago and Alzheimer's disease, died at home in Fort Worth, Texas, said his secretary Pat Martin.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — There will be a Harvester Booster Club meeting at 7 p.m. July 28 in the Ready Room at Valhalla.

Parents of freshmen, junior varsity and varsity players are urged to attend. Call 669-0780 or 665-6082 if more information is needed.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball owners, while still losing money, are losing a lot less than they did in the immediate aftermath of the 1994-95 strike.

The 28 teams lost approximately $185 million last year, the first full season after the strike, according to data obtained by The Associated Press. That raised the losses to $875 million over a three-year period.

But the 1996 bottom line was the best since before the 232-day player strike, with last year's loss nearly half that of the 1995 season.

In 1993, the last full season before the strike, the teams combined for an operating profit of $36 million on record operating revenue of $1.87 billion. The following year, when the World Series was wiped out for the first time since 1904, the teams had an operating loss of $363.8 million on revenue of $1.21 billion.

DALLAS (AP) — All-Star catcher Ivan Rodriguez is considering a $38 million deal that would keep him with the Texas Rangers for at least five years, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

President and general manager Tom Schieffer made the offer Thursday to agent Jeff Moorad, who represents Rodriguez, the News said.

The catcher had been asking for $44 million, so he and Moorad are expected to discuss the deal this weekend, the newspaper said.

"We have made progress toward a long-term agreement, but an agreement is not imminent," Moorad said.

BASKETBALL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tim Duncan is wasting no time getting in uniform after signing a three-year, $10.2 million contract with the San Antonio Spurs.

The top overall pick in the NBA draft planned to practice today with the Spurs in Salt Lake City, where some of the team and the team's coaching staff are taking part in the Rocky Mountain Revue, an NBA summer league.

The Spurs and the Philadelphia 76ers have combined to field a team and will play five games at the Delta Center.

"Any competitive experience is good for our players," coach Gregg Popovich said. "It will be Tim's introduction to NBA-style play and rules."

PAMPA — Pampa's Eddie Duenkel caught fire in the second round Thursday to take a four-stroke lead into the final round of the Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

Duenkel — who was tied with fellow Pampan Carroll Langley at 72 at the end of Wednesday's first round — strung together five birdies Thursday to finish with a one-under par 70 and a two-day total of 142.

"I started with a bogey on No. 1, but I was able to putt well and hit some really good shots," Duenkel said. He had two bogeys and one double-bogey in the round. Langley dropped four strokes back at 146 with a three-over par 74 on Thursday. He still holds down second place.

Two Lubbock players, E.C. Roark and Tommy Wilson, are tied with Amarillo's Doug Barron for third at 148. Both Barron and Roark had second-round 72's after the pair shot 76's in the opening round. Roark had a 33 on yesterday's front nine.

After a 36 at the turn, Duenkel put together birdies on No. 10, 13 and 18 for a 34 on the back nine. His only bogey on the back nine came on No. 16.

Langley ran into early problems with bogies on No. 2 and 3, but was still leading Duenkel by one stroke until a double bogey on No. 6. Langley had four pars and a birdie on the next five holes before a bogey on No. 12 put him three strokes behind.

The final round of the 36-hole tournament will be played today.

Courtney Cowden of Midland hits a shot out of a bunker during Thursday's second round.

Rangers fall to White Sox on Ventura's hit

CHICAGO (AP) — During long hours of rehabilitation, when depression would sometimes join pain and monotony, Robin Ventura would look ahead to the day he would rejoin the Chicago White Sox.

Just to put on a uniform would be a treat. To be in a major league lineup would be something he'd savor. He promised himself, after a grotesque ankle injury threatened his career, that he would have fun.

No way, however, could Ventura have scripted a more dramatic return to the big leagues than the one he enjoyed — the one he orchestrated — Thursday night.

He received ovations from fans and handshakes and back pats from umpires and adversaries alike.

And then he delivered a game-winning double in the eighth inning, his first hit of the season, to give the White Sox a 2-1 win over the Texas Rangers.

"I definitely think this is one I'll remember," Ventura said after tossing his cap into the stands in a rare display of emotion as he was congratulated by jubilant teammates.

"Just to be able to play again when you get something taken away you love to do and to be able to come back and do it before they expect you to do it special," he said. "It was just enjoyable to be on the field and contribute."

Ventura received a loud standing ovation when he came to bat in the first inning and waved to the crowd before stepping into the box.

Ventura got a pat on the back from third base umpire Rich Garcia when he took his position to start the game, along with a handshake from Rangers third base coach Jerry Narron.

When Ventura batted in the first inning, he got a handshake from Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez.

During the game, a plane flew over Comiskey Park with a banner that read: "Welcome Back Robin. Guillen Family."

White Sox shortstop Ozzie Guillen, who once went through a lengthy rehabilitation for a knee injury, is among Ventura's best friends.

"I'm just really happy for him that he can come back and play and keep his career," Guillen said.

Before the game, Ventura said he did not think that his March 21 injury would finish him.

"I never reflected that it was the end, even though it possibly could have been. It was just mentally better for me trying to rehab, to walk, to run and then see if could play," Ventura said.

Ventura, who had missed the entire season after fracturing and dislocating his right ankle in a spring training slide, was 0-for-3 when he came to bat against Ken Hill with a runner on second and two outs.

The former All-Star third baseman drove the first pitch to the wall in left center, scoring Dave Martinez, breaking a 1-1 tie and sending an enthusiastic crowd of 25,899 at Comiskey Park into a tizzy.

Ventura, never known for his speed, lumbered into second base and then raised his fist to acknowledge the cheers.

"Very fitting. It's all you could ask for in your first game back," teammate Frank Thomas said.

"You kind of got choked up a little. It was a big moment," Chicago White Sox manager Terry Bevington said.

Martinez walked to start the bottom of the eighth and moved up on Guillen's sacrifice off Hill (5-8). Ray Durham popped out before Ventura delivered.

Ventura had 34 home runs and 105 RBIs last season. His replacement, Chris Snopce, hit .223 with five homers and 35 RBIs.

The win moved the White Sox within 3 1/2 games of Cleveland in the AL Central. They're hoping now Ventura can supply the spark that's been missing most of the season.

Soccer donations coming in

PAMPA — Donations continue coming in to help pay for the construction of two new Pampa High School soccer fields near Travis Elementary School.

"It's increasing everyday. We're up to $2,700 in cash now," said PHS boys' soccer coach Warren Cottle.

The cost of the land, which is owned by the school district, is estimated at $35,000.

The latest contributors are Bevo Berry and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watson.

Berry has donated $2,000 for dirtwork and leveling of the fields. Mr. and Mrs. Watson have pledged $1,000, said Cottle. Cottle hopes to have the fields ready for the 1998 soccer season.

The fields will be regulation size — 75 yards wide by 120 yards long.

Both high school boys' and girls' teams have been using the Harvester Stadium and practice football fields for its matches.

"Things are looking good," Cottle said. "Just when I think the donations have slowed down, here they come again."

Persons who would like to make donations can contact Cottle at 665-3333.

Cowboys looking for Bjornson to take Novacek's place

AUSTIN (AP) — Eric Bjornson ran a 15-yard out pattern, froze the strong safety with a nifty sideline move and caught a perfect pass from Troy Aikman just before stepping out of bounds.

"Does that play look familiar?" asked Dallas Cowboys scouting director Larry Lacey. "That's the Jay Novacek play, the one we couldn't run last year."

With the now retired Novacek missing all of last season with back troubles, the Cowboys had to depend on Bjornson as their go-to third down receiver.

The only problem was Bjornson nursed two sprained ankles through the season. Although he caught 55 passes for 441 yards and three touchdowns, it still wasn't what the Cowboys needed on offense.

"I wasn't very smart last year," Bjornson said. "I tried to come back too soon with my injuries. I just never got better."

Ever see a man try to run on two sprained ankles?

"It was kind of pitiful," Bjornson said. "But I didn't want to let the team down. I gave it my best shot."

Bjornson has looked sensational in training camp as he competes with first round draft pick David LaFleur, who is more of a blocker than a route runner.

"I'm still not quite 100 percent on my ankles but they are getting better," Bjornson said. "I came into camp 20 pounds lighter and that seems to help. Coach (Barry Switzer) said he wanted me to get lighter and quicker and I can tell the difference. I was too heavy last year."

Bjornson is down to 210 pounds and that could hurt his blocking, although he says "it doesn't matter if you're 280 or 210 when you take on a linebacker. It's all technique anyway."

Bjornson said the fact the Cowboys took a tight end as their top draft pick may have served as a spur for him.

"It got my attention," Bjornson said. "I still think I will be the receiving tight end. I think I'll be there in the passing situations. It would be unfair to expect David to come in and produce immediately."

Bjornson said what he likes is the retooled Cowboys offense.

"Jack Riley came in at quarterback coach and he and (offensive coordinator) Ernie Zampese have added some new wrinkles," Bjornson said. "I've noticed a lot of plays are designed to isolate the tight end. I think that's beautiful."

The offense has looked so good that Bjornson said he fully expects the Cowboys to make another Super-Bowl run.

"Two years ago after we had won the Super Bowl I think it was only human nature that we got complacent," Bjornson said. "Now, we want it back. We want what is ours back. We've got a lot of fire heading into this season."

Switzer said he hopes this is a breakthrough year for Bjornson, who played quarterback and wide receiver at the University of Washington.

"I sense some positive changes in him," Switzer said. "He's much more intense now. If he's healthy, he could have a tremendous year."

Bjornson said he would like to become another Novacek.

"This is only my third year to play the position so I'm still a little inexperienced," Bjornson said. "Novacek set a tough standard on how the position is to be played. I'm glad I played behind and learned a lot from him."

Cook accused of killing waitress over poached eggs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Their relationship had been contentious for years — so stormy that all it took to bring it to a violent end was a plate of poached eggs.

Hashiem Zayed, a cook, and Helen Menicou had worked together at the Pine Crest Diner for more than 20 fractious years. It came to a head when Ms. Menicou — a waitress and day manager — berated Zayed in front of co-workers and customers for making poached eggs, which wasn't on the menu.

The next day, police said, Zayed shot her to death.

"He says he just lost it," homicide inspector Armand Gordon said. "She apparently had embarrassed him in front of the employees and customers before."

Nobody else was hurt in the shooting Thursday. Four other employees and one customer were in the 24-hour diner at the time.

After the shooting, Zayed told the cashier to call police while he waited outside, the gun in his pocket, witnesses said. When officers arrived, he put the gun on the patrol car's hood and his hands in the air.

Zayed told police he was so angry after Wednesday's argument that he couldn't sleep, Gordon said. When he arrived at work, he confronted Ms.

Menicou and she again berated him publicly.

He fired once at Ms. Menicou, who was seated about three feet away at the end of the counter, then followed her as she ran behind the counter and shot her about four more times, Gordon said.

Zayed, 59, was held on a murder charge pending arraignment.

Ms. Menicou, 47, had worked at the diner for 22 years.

"He was having a bad day," Gordon said. "He claims that he's had problems with her over the years. Maybe this was the straw that broke the camel's back."

Odds and ends

"Outrageous" ad gets the boot

BOSTON (AP) — Offensive is not an option in Boston. An award-winning advertisement featuring an apparently nude woman holding a piece of dirty laundry at arm's length was kicked off buses and subway trains in the Boston area.

"Outrageous and offensive to women," was the way state Transportation Secretary Patrick Moynihan described the ads he banned. The ban, reported Thursday by the Boston Herald, was one of his last official acts as general manager of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

The photo of the young woman seated with her legs drawn up to her chest appears under a line reading: "Unfortunately, nudity is not an option."

The ad, which won an Effie award, is for Surf detergent, made by Lever Brothers Co. The ads were created by the New York advertising agency Ogilvy & Mather after consumers told Lever that ads suggesting women were fulfilled by doing laundry were offensive.

The ads have run on public transportation vehicles in eight other cities.

"It's strictly a Boston phenomenon," said Frank Schmidt, an account supervisor at Ogilvy & Mather.

Dog Lucky aptly named

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Lucky is one lucky dog. The 14-year-old terrier mix was not breathing when firefighters rescued him from a burning house Wednesday. But paramedics used an oxygen mask to pump clean air into Lucky's lungs.

Paramedic Don Larson said a dog's airway is similar to a human's. So they took what they had learned about humans and applied it to the dog.

It worked. Lucky was resting comfortably on Thursday at an animal hospital.

No one in the house was hurt, and damage was estimated at $5,000.

Officers say commercial "irritating"

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — "I love this job," a state trooper says in a TV commercial that shows him just having taken a motorist's bag of food during a traffic stop.

The 30-second spots may have been meant as a lighthearted sales pitch for Long John Silver's restaurants, but they rubbed some officers wrong.

"It's humorous at first, but then it gets to be like a hemorrhoid — very irritating," Larry Bertao, president of the Fresno Police Officers Association, said Wednesday.

"Especially, because they show the officer taking something under the color of authority," he added of the spots, in which the officer's misdeed is caught on video by his car's own security camera. "That's a felony and about the worst possible one for an officer."

Bruce Hinton, spokesman for the Lexington, Ky.-based restaurant chain, said the ads were meant to sell "Grab and Go" sandwiches and meant no disrespect to law enforcement.

"I think they made much ado about nothing," he said of officers who took offense at the spots, which aired in Fresno and four other U.S. cities.

Mob history with your antipasto?

NEW YORK (AP) — A little mob history with your antipasto, commissioner?

Police Commissioner Howard Safir apparently was unaware that the restaurant in Little Italy where he dined Wednesday night was a favorite hangout of John Gotti, the former Gambino crime family boss.

The restaurant reportedly had been declared off-limits by the New York Police Department. Someone spotted Safir at the restaurant and called the Daily News, which sent a reporter and photographer.

The News said the commissioner and about 20 colleagues spent nearly two hours at the restaurant that is under a Police Department ban because it has "a potential for members of the service to engage in corrupt practices or misconduct."
