FORT WORTH (AP) -- A 19-year-old man has been convicted of capital murder in the driveway robbery and slaying of an east Fort Worth man.

Jurors deliberated little more than an hour Friday before convicting Eddie C. Johnson in the slaying of 42-year-old Jeffrey Doolittle. Johnson can be sentenced to death when the punishment phase begins Monday.

Johnson is one of three men who police say are responsible for a string of driveway robberies in which victims were followed home from retail stores and fast-food restaurants and then robbed in their driveways.

According to testimony, ambushed Johnson Doolittle as he was getting out of his car. Doolittle hit Johnson in the head with a sack and was trying to run. into his garage when he was shot and killed March 6, 1996.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The last member of a Texas family that distributed marijuana in Delaware has pleaded guilty to federal drug charges and extortion for threatening someone who owed the clan money Albert J. Reid III, 33, of Dale, Texas, pleaded guilty Thursday. He faces 80 years behind bars and has agreed to forfeit $500,000 in drug profits.

He and his parents were caught after an investigation by Delaware State Police and U.S. Internal Revenue Service.

His father, Albert Reid Jr., 60, pleaded guilty in July to conspiracy to distribute marijuana, money laundering and tax evasion and faces 65 years in prison.

Mary Reid, 59, also pleaded guilty in July to a single count of tax evasion for failing to pay taxes in 1995 and faces five years in prison.

All three are to be sentenced in September.

Federal prosecutors said the Reids were involved in the ring that supplied marijuana to dealers in Kent and Sussex counties from March 1993 until February.

succeed any time soon, the foundation is asking reagents to throw a few more dollars their way. In the past, Clarendon College paid $30,000 for the original set of architectural plans, which was for a $4.6 million complex. The foundation dropped the costs to $1.5 million by constructing the new facility in phases.

Other community members explained the growth of Clarendon College in the Pampa location and the future possibilities in the area.

The Pampa branch began holding classes at Pampa High School in the fall of 1974, said Waters, the first dean.

"Because of the demand in the fall of 1978, we put up our shingle 'Clarendon College - Pampa Center' and the campus was established," he said.

The move from the high school to the then-vacant elementary school was a much more involved process. Waters recalled scrubbing floors and moving furniture before classes could begin. In addition, the student body was older; over 1,000 people were taking course work that ranged from real estate to EMT and even welding. Academic students were in the minority then, he said, and the most popular course of study was secretarial sci-

"We had no typewriters or calculators, so we had a meeting with possible donors and raised $30,000 to provide them," recalled Waters.

County Judge Richard Peet, who has been teaching government since the second semester at the Pampa branch spoke of the current shift towards younger students. 'More are staying home to work while taking courses," said Peet, adding that his three sons attend classes at the Pampa center every summer while on their summer break. City Manager Bob Eskridge, who has two children attending college, added, "Students today want a campus facility, a campus setting. Pampa

A renewed interest in academic and vocational training is needed for economic development," said Lane.

Hantavirus case is second found

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — A 27-year-old Taos County man has been diagnosed with hantavirus pulmonary syndrome, state health officials say.

The case was confirmed by testing done at the University of New Mexico's Health Sciences Center. He was transferred to a hospital in Albuquerque and was expected to survive.

Public health officials in Taos County have been notified. An investigation is expected to be conducted at his home, the officials said Friday.

It was New Mexico's second case of hantavirus diagnosed this

In May, a 62-year-old man living in San Juan County was hospitalized in Albuquerque after catching the virus. He recovered.

Hantavirus was identified for the first time in 1993 during an outbreak in the Four Corners area of New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Arizona. Eleven people died in the initial outbreak from the disease that is believed to be transmitted through airborne specks

The last fatalities in New Mexico from HPS occurred in 1994. when two of the four individuals diagnosed with the disease that vear died

The virus is excreted in rodent urine and feces, particularly by deer mice. The state Department of Health said rodent studies have found deer mice positive for hantavirus throughout the state. Early symptoms include a fever and muscle aches, possibly with chills, headaches, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal pain and cough. There have been 30 cases of HPS in New Mexico since 1993, with 14 deaths. Nationwide, there have been 162 cases with 76 deaths.

Most recently, on July 8, a 23-year-old North Seattle man died from a strain of hantavirus, according to the Seattle-King County Health Department.

Health officials say the best preventive measure is for humans to avoid contact with mice and other rodents. Other suggestions include airing out closed up buildings before entering them; sealing up homes and cabins so mice can't get in; trapping mice until they are eliminated and cleaning up nests and droppings with disinfectant.

A University of New Mexico researcher received a five-year $1.35 million grant from the National Institutes of Health in May. Dr. Brian Hjelle said he believes his is the only study currently being done in search of a vaccine for the hantavirus strain prevalent in the Americas.

Making OSHA more practical

Calvin Coolidge once said, "The business of the American people is business." Therefore, our government should be working with business not against it. Nowhere does this ring truer than in current debate over reforming the Occupational Health and Safety Administration.

As a former small business owner, and having spoken with literally thousands of employers and employees throughout Texas, I am convinced employers and workers alike would benefit if OSHA functioned in a way that helped establish workable safety standards and enforced those standards fairly and reasonably.

Rather than look to OSHA as a partner in safety, many employers I know fear the agency and its random inspections that turn their work sites upside down. We need to put behind us the days of Byzantine regulations and "gotcha" enforcement practices. We must recast OSHA into a modern, effective partner in the rapidly evolving American workplace.

The fundamental, statutory flaw in OSHA is that current law does not require the agency to consider the feasibility and unintended consequences of its regulatory actions. Nor does current law provide the agency with any incentive to do so.

I have a bill before the Senate, the Occupational Safety and Health Reform Act, to transform OSHA from an agency based on fear to one based on cooperation, from an agency of arbitrary procedures to one focused on common sense.

Key elements of my bill would: Require OSHA to consider the feasibility of the requirements it seeks to impose on employers before promulgating any new

• Require OSHA to weigh the costs and the expected benefits of new regulations and articulate the results each regulation

• Require OSHA to determine whether it has chosen the most cost-effective means of meeting those goals.

On the enforcement side of the equation, my bill would allow and encourage employers to take their own steps to improve health and safety, as well as to utilize government approved safety consultants to help them improve the workplace. Employers who demonstrate this commitment through low injury rates would be exempt from some of the more unfair and burdensome

Make no mistake: I realize that there are employers out there for whom safety is not a priority. To them, I say: Beware. My bill will free OSHA to concentrate its resources and enforcement efforts on those employers who willfully disregard workplace safety and health.

But the vast majority of employers want to do right by their employees. They should have the ability to work on meeting health and safety objectives in a way that makes the most sense for their company. For this wast majority of American businesses, we're trying to send relief

THE PAMPA NEWS Her memory shines bright

I hated to hear that they buried Mrs. Burkett not too

But it certainly wasn't before she made her mark as-only she could - on family, friends and everyone and everything she touched.

As a youngster - especially when she kept us in Sunday School class longer than anyone else in the whole church - I didn't fully appreciate her. I was too

And sometimes when she filled in for my mother as pianist at the small Bassett, Ark., Presbyterian Church she'd get off time or hit a sour note or two. That usually sparked a giggle from the juvenile set though now I wonder why since none of us could - or can now to my knowledge - play a musical instrument.

But fortunately I caught on to the fact she was truly special in time to appreciate her wisdom, her way of living and her devotion to God and mankind. Her death has caused me to pause to appreciate her gifts

In my late high school years, during college and afterwards I would sometimes top by her house to visit a bit. Sometimes I would be on horseback and

And often I'd spot her in the cemetery doing some cleaning up. Sometimes I'd stop there, too, and we'd talk. I always learned something - about history or life when I did.

I can remember the animation in both her hands and in her face as she used descriptive language backed up by accurate information - to describe some-

I also remember how she began, in a stoic way, to tell me one of her daughters had been stricken with composure. But it was composure she quickly struggled to regain as she lifted her head from her hands and held it high though I knew her heart was heavy. Thought to be a bit eccentric by some (including me at times, I confess), Mrs. Burkett, who was 96 when she died, really was a woman ahead of her time. When few Arkansas women went to college anywhere, she did and graduated from Wellesley - a college now even more well known as the alma mater of another smart Arkansas woman - First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. But closer to Mrs. Burkett's home not far from the Pecan Point bend in the Mississippi River, she was also a staunch member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and very proud of her Southern heritage.

I can't recall the name of the UDC chapter but she and my grandmother - a "real" daughter of the Confederacy - were members of the same group. My grandmother was as devoted a Baptist as Mrs. Burkett was Presbyterian and the faith of both spilled over into their UDC activities.

While I can't remember any one specific thing that really stands out about something Mrs. Burkett taught Alzheimers. It was the only time I saw her lose her me in Sunday School, I do vividly remember learning one lesson from her.

wetlands that were across the blacktop road from her huge, white-columned plantation home

And that was not to shoot my .22-rifle again into the

She didn't want the wildlife there disturbed and she came out the front door hollering loud enough to let me know it. I didn't understand then...but do now. But whether I "understood" or not at the time, you can bet I never fired that gun again on or near her land.

She loved nature and the outdoors and her home had a large, tree-dotted yard that proved it. She often wore what some called "funny clothes" while she spent many hours outside.

And some folks laughed when she traded for a new black Chrysler and converted her old black one - by removing the trunk lid – into a pickup "truck" of sorts. For you see, Mrs. Burkett liked to haul things in her "truck." And evidence of that could often be seen at the Bassett Cemetery where she worked to keep the grounds clean, supervised mowing and where she picked up sticks and other debris to haul away. That cemetery is the same one where my daddy, grandmother and grandfather are buried. It's a "country" cemetery filled with lots of names familiar to me. The cemetery sits just outside Bassett - population 199 - and it is divided by mostly a dirt road. There's no such thing as the guaranteed perpetual care many fancy, modern cemeteries with mow-over, all-alike markers advertise as a big selling point.

The cemetery doesn't need that. It never did and hopefully it never will.

After all, it had something better - Mrs. Burkett's love and care. And though I am saddened by her death, I smile when I think about the location of her final resting place. I'll always believe her spirit will check in every now and then to make sure those left behind are keeping things well tended there.

Today in history

By The Associated Press Today is Sunday, July 27, the 208th day of 1997. There are 157 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On July 27, 1953, the Korean War armistice was signed at Panmunjom, ending three years of fighting.

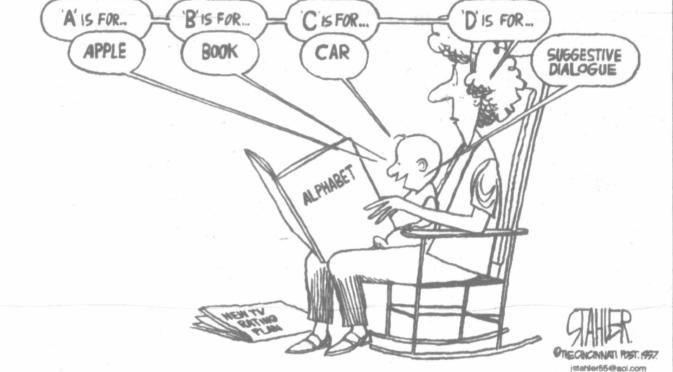

On this date: In 1694, the Bank of England received a royal charter as a commercial institution. In 1789, Congress established the Department of Foreign Affairs, the forerunner of the Department of

In 1861, Union Gen. George B. McClellan was put in command of the Army of the Potomac.

In 1866, after two failures, Cyrus W. Field succeeded in laying the first underwater telegraph cable between North America and

In 1909, Orville Wright tested the U.S. Army's first airplane, flying himself and a passenger for I hou and 12 minutes.

What shall we worry about now?

It seems to be a law of nature that people must have something to worry about. In times of war, and perhaps in periods of severe economic hardship, reality itself provides the necessary subject matter. But in a "weak piping time of peace" like today, or when the economy is robust (again, like today), the human psyche apparently cannot rest until it has found something to worry about. That is the amused perception underlying the old Jewish joke about the man who wired his cousin, "Start worrying now; let-

It is the media, of course, who feed this need to worry, and their chief source of new fears is science. This isn't always science's fault (though lots of individual scientists haven't been above exploiting it). Scientists, at least allegedly, know more than most of us, because they study things that can't been seen. smelled, or otherwise perceived by the average per-

Thus, in the last 20 years alone, the media have participated in major efforts to scare the wits out of us over a new ice age, nuclear winter, global warming, the greenhouse effect, and the ozone hole - to mention only fears involving the planetary climate. Peer just a little deeper into space and we are told that it is quite likely that some asteroid or comet not vet visible is on a collision course with the Earth, and that its impact could easily exceed that of the object that hit Yucatan 65 million years ago and wiped out the dinosaurs all over the globe.

William Rusher William A. Rusher is a

Distinguished Fellow of the Claremont Institute for the Study of Statesmanship and Political Philosophy.

But without much doubt the biggest cornucopia of terrors yet found and mined by the media involves foods and other substances that allegedly endanger our health. These are the subject of a report just published by the American Council on Science and Health in New York, and it belongs on every library shelf dedicated to the follies of mankind.

Prepared by Adam J. Lieberman and edited by Cindy F. Kleiman, it is entitled Facts Versus Fears: A Review of the 20 Greatest Unfounded Health Scares of Recent Times. One by one it guides the reader through the most hysterical health fits of the past 40 years. Starting with the great "Cranberry Scare" of 1959, it coolly describes and dismisses such majestic panics as those over DDT (beginning in 1962), cyclamates (1969), DES in beef (1972), Red Dye Number 2 (1976), saccharin (1977), Love Canal (1978), Times Beach (1982), and Alar (1989).

The public uproar over each of these "dangers" recalls H.L. Mencken's dry reminder that during the Spanish-American War Massachusetts moved the gold reserves of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston inland to protect them from a Spanish attack.

Lieberman, in a short introduction, notes various "themes and patterns" in the successive health

For one thing, laboratory tests of mice given huge doses of a substance are indiscriminately extrapolated to humans, on the theory that if the mice got cancer, so will humans who ingest much tinier amounts. This violates "the basic principle of toxicology," namely, that "The dose makes the poison."

For another, the fear-mongers favor the "precautionary principle," which asserts that, in cases where possible serious or irreversible environmental damage is alleged, "lack of full scientific certainty shall not be used as a reason for postponing cost-effective measures to prevent degradation." The trouble is that next to no evidence can properly be considered "lack of frill scientific certainty.

The introduction rightly says that this report "shows just how the American public has been manipulated repeatedly by certain segments of the media, by a handful of scientists outside the scientific mainstream, and by a larger coterie of activists and government regulators, all of whom have frightened the public over hypothetical risks."

The trouble with school vouchers

Advocates of publicly financed vouchers for religious schools took heart when the Supreme Court on June 23 reversed one of its own precedents. The Court ruled that it does not violate the Constitution to send public school teachers - paid by taxpayers' money - into parochial schools to teach remedial classes to disadvantaged children.

In dissent, Justice David Souter warned that the decision would lead to "direct state aid to religious institutions on an unparalleled scale." But Mark Chopko, general counsel for the United States Catholic Conference, jubilantly said that the Court majority had now provided states with a "blueprint" for vouchers to sectarian schools.

His celebration, however, is decidedly premature, as is particularly illustrated by the arduous journey of school vouchers in Wisconsin.

With greater education and poverty problems than any other school district in Wisconsin, Milwaukee, starting in 1990, permitted any public school student to attend any non-sectarian school in the city at public expense.

Then in 1995, the state legislature and governor Tommy Thompson expanded the Milwaukee Parental Choice Program to include the use of state vouchers in religious schools. But any pupil can be exempt from a school's religious activity if the parent requests it.

Lawsuits were brought challenging the constitu-tionality of using public funds for sectarian schools. Among the plaintiffs were the American Civil Liberties Union, Americans United for Separation of Church and State, the Milwaukee Teachers' Education Association and the NAACP.

The consolidated case has been up and down the Wisconsin courts (the state Supreme Court tied 3-3), and so far the most influential decision has been made by Judge Paul Higginbotham of the Dane County Circuit Court in Madison. Higginbotham had based his decision on the state Constitution, but his findings have considerable relevance for the Establishment Clause in the federal Constitution. (No state or federal government can aid one or all religions, or prefer one religion over another.)

In his decision, the judge noted that the partici-pating religious schools in the Milwaukee voucher plan "announced forthrightly that their mission is religious and that religious doctrine will be instilled in their students" (except for those opting out of religious instruction - but religion still permeates all the classrooms in those schools).

The judge presented a long list of these participating schools - with direct quotes from them. For consequence is to serve and support religious instiexample, "The continuing purpose of St. Matthew Evangelical Lutheran Church and School is to go and tell the pure gospel of Jesus Christ for the conversion of unbelievers .

Said Christ Lutheran Church: "A prospective church will be considered a mission project." And schools. Nor should it.

SO it went down the line of schools eager to share their saving grace with voucher students. Judge Higginbotham declared that this voucher program violates the section of the state Constitution that prohibits "compelled support of religion." Furthermore, he said, the Wisconsin Constitution makes clear that no funds can "be drawn from the treasury for the benefit of religious Higginbotham went on to emphasize that "perhaps the most offensive part of this voucher plan is that it compels Wisconsin citizens of varying faiths to support schools with their tax dollars that proselytize students and attempt to inculcate them with beliefs contrary to their own. We do not object to the existence of parochial schools or their attempts to spread their beliefs through their schools. They just cannot do it with state tax dollars.

Voucher supporters often make the point, however, that it is the parents who receive the public voucher money and then decide to give it to the school. Therefore, they say, there is no direct public aid to a religious institution. But in 1973, the Supreme Court, in Sloan vs. Lemon, said that no matter how these state arrangements to religious schools are designed, 'the State has singled out a class of its citizens for a special economic benefit ... At bottom, its intended tutions." That "violates the constitutional mandate against the 'sponsorship' or 'financial support' of religion or religious institutions.'

Unless the Supreme Court has decided to entirely discard the Establishment Clause, the time has student whose parents are not members of a not yet come for the state to support religious tech visio and i Alt woul offici their Brow Α McA stret Islan Cour the 1

"How could they?" 22-year-old Autumn Jackson asked her attorney, Robert Baum, after the verdict.

She broke down in tears when the federal jury came back with its guilty verdict on its third day of deliberations. Ms. Jackson was convicted of extortion, conspiracy and crossing state lines to commit a crime. She could get up to 12 years in prison and $750,000 in fines at sentencing Oct. 22.

The lawyer described Ms. Jackson as "just devas-

Co-defendant Jose Medina, 51, was convicted on the same charges. A third defendant, Boris Sabas, 42, was found guilty of conspiracy and crossing state lines but was acquitted of extortion.

In a statement, Cosby's lawyer Jack Schmitt said: jurors who rendered a just verdict."

The trial pitted one of America's most popular and richest personalities against a college dropout who insisted she's his daughter from a long-ago affair.

Cosby admitted having an affair with Ms. Jackson's mother but said he does not believe the young woman is his daughter. He refused to take a blood test.

Ms. Jackson's lawyer had argued that she was engaged in a lawful negotiation for what she believed was rightfully hers as Cosby's daughter. Jurors insisted that they heeded Judge Barbara now." Jones' warning that the question of whether Cosby

He said he told his wife, Camille, about the affair 17 years ago, but worried about publicity because he was still building on a successful career emphasizing family values. Cosby was hugely popular as the father of a prosperous family in the top-rated TV show of the 1980s, and had written the best-selling book "Fatherhood."

The defendants were accused of hatching their "The Cosbys appreciate the efforts of the prosecu-tors who brought this case and the efforts of the produce a children's television show with an amaeuf crew that included Ms. Jackson and Sabas.

Prosecutors buttressed their case with piles of documents, letters and tapes. The evidence, they said, showed that Ms. Jackson — with Medina's coaching and Sabas' knowledge - conducted an escalating campaign of threats.

The scheme included coaxing the Globe supermarket tabloid into buying her story, then faxing copies of the proposed $25,000 deal to Cosby's lawyer. Despite the lawyer's earlier warning she was committing extortion, Ms. Jackson included a note, saying, "I need monies and I need monies

Learn to manage time

I would I could stand on a busy corner, hat in hand, and beg people to throw me their wasted hours. - Bernard Berenson

What would you do if I promised you a one-week vacation if you could get three week's work done in two weeks? Could you do it? How would you do it?

Think about the concept. Most of us accomplish a fairly set amount of work each week. Of course, some weeks are more productive than others, and some people can do more as well.

Would it matter if everyone had the incentive of a vacation for the time you could save? Would that concept change American business? Would U.S. productivity increase? Could we really manage our time more effectively and efficiently?

Controlling events Frankly, I'm not certain we can manage time. I do believe we can control some of the events that consume time. Here are some tips for getting more accomplished.

• First, determine exactly what is to be done. Use a "to do" list with dates and times. Focus on the desired outcome, not the activity. Your goal is results. Remember, though you have all the time there is, you'll never have time for everything.

 Next, plan and prioritize your events. You must focus your efforts on the most critical and important tasks. Tackle the toughest projects first. Put all of your energy into them. You'll often find these tasks don't take as much time as you first thought.

Don't put them off. Procrastination is a vicious enemy. It leads to stress and pain. When we delay action, we become anxious. We lose our focus and often lose sleep as well. There is only one cure for procrastination- a strong dose of "do it now."

Give yourself incentive. We work for only two reasons, to gain a reward, or to avoid a penalty. I get more accomplished when I promise myself a reward. For example, when I'm writing columns, I promise myself a motorcycle ride if I finish writing by

If I don't finish, I don't ride. However, with the incentive, I often get my work done and enjoy a relaxing ride. Often, I come back so refreshed I tackle another project.

•Eliminate distractions and time wasters. Telephones, pagers, drop-in visitors, meetings and other interruptions can ruin the best laid plans. Schedule uninterruptible time for critical tasks.

Keep visits and phone calls short. You can usually end a phone call by telling the caller you know he or she is busy and you need to get back to work yourself. Make sure all meetings have a preset agenda and stick to it. Don't let others control your events.

•Stay focused on one project at a time. It is so easy to become distracted. When I'm doing paperwork I clear my desk so I won't see other work that needs my attention. If I'm doing my quarterly tax returns, that will be the only file on my desk. When I finish, I put it away and select the next project from my prioritized list.

 Some tasks are best left undone. I believe in keeping promises, but sometimes we shouldn't promise. Learn to say no. I could speak 200 days per year if I accepted all offers. For my personal, mental and physical well being I have to say no.

You must determine what tasks are essential to your business or job. Eliminate the non-essentials. You will have more time to accomplish your important projects.

Tomorrow, you'll get another 24 hours to use. Use them carefully. Plan, prioritize, stay focused and use the time you save to do something you really enjoy. It works for me.

MONROVIA, Calif. (AP) - On their first date, the woman he met through the dating service grabbed him, threw him down on the floor and "wanted to get right down to busi-

Brent Little politely disentangled himself and left. But it wasn't easy - even for a conservative Baptist pastor.

"I'm a very sexual person myself and it's a tough row to hoe to maintain celibacy, especially when you have women in some cases who are very willing," Little says, from his office at Calvary Baptist Church.

For anyone who thinks it's difficult being single in the '90s, just consider the plight of the unattached minister.

Going back to the nation's founding and continuing through the 1950s, single clergy almost always men — had it pretty good.

In a highly respected profession, a single minister would be one of the community's most eligible bachelors. Mothers would linger with their daughters at the church substantial burdens for many, and have even door after services, and well-meaning parishioners would seek to move marital matters along with suggestions of relatives and friends.

Today, greater awareness of sexual harassment issues and the unequal power in a relationship between someone viewed as God's representative and a member of the flock prevent many clergy from seeking potential mates inside the churches where they spend their love life. Sixty-one percent of the most of their time.

And while a cultural revolution has forced their chances of finding love. many pastors to accept premarital sex among church members, their congregations still expect them to adhere to a higher moral standard.

To make matters worse, the pedestal they once were on has been kicked away, too. In today's singles scene, clergy are likely to be stereotyped as straight-laced dweebs out of touch with real life.

"Women, whether consciously or subconsciously, carry lists of people they want to meet," says the Rev. Mark Rasbach, pastor of Hope Lutheran Church in Hollywood. "Ministers are not on that list in L.A."

With more pressing issues from declining memberships to sexual abuse to worry about, the dating problems of single ministers are and one of the authors of the ministry study. not a priority for any religious group. Most "I think there is an emerging consensus you denominations, for example, are still far istry puts on families. Yet the special issues faced by single clergy searching for intimate relationships pose forced some to look for other lines of work.

In a 1993-94 study of single ministers, the Hartford Seminary in Connecticut found that says. "I'd better live that." most single clergy viewed their profession as an obstacle to a romantic relationship.

In the seminary's national survey of 710 women and 142 men, only 9 percent of female clergy and 22 percent of male clergy said being a minister had a positive effect on women and 46 percent of the men said it hurt

The universal concern of singles seeking romance — finding the right partner — can be much greater for the typical minister, who not only is on call seven days a week at the office, but is discouraged from forming romantic alliances within the church.

Breakups can be messy for the whole congregation. And as with psychologists and other counselors, many consider it inappropriate for pastors — given their position of authority — to become romantically involved with members of their churches.

"The power dynamics and the sexual harassment questions have made people area more and more careful," says Barbara Brown Zikmund, president of Hartford Seminary cannot be both the pastor of someone and their intimate."

The Rev. Robin Lyn Valdez of First Presbyterian Church in Lewisville, Texas, says that though opportunities have been there, she decided not to date men within the

"The fact remains, you're still their pastor," she says.

Getting away from the office, however, is particularly difficult for single clergy. Congregations may understand that married ministers need to spend time with their families, but do not often view single ministers as needing the same amount of personal time. And because of their clerical status, some options for other singles are closed to them. Where do you go to date? Do you go to the bars, the nightclubs, to hang out?" Little asks. "Personally, I don't enjoy that kind of scene. While they think about sex, it, too, is offlimits in most churches.

In choosing not to engage in premarital sex, Valdez says she also is thinking of the youth in her churches.

"If I'm to be a role model to them and be an example, I've got to be an example," she

Away from the larger cities, the problems can be even greater.

With typical congregations looking for a married minister with children to immediately fill up church schools, single ministers again, especially women — often find themselves in smaller rural congregations where they are less likely to meet other professional people who share their interests.

viewed in the Hartford study.

Those men they do meet often are intimidated by the idea of a woman pastor, clergywomen report.

It's either they run for the hills or they want you to be their counselor," Valdez says. It may not be much consolation, but it's not

"Men usually have one or two responses:

a lot easier for clergymen in the Los Angeles

"I've ended up in counseling sessions right off the bat with many," Rasbach says of the women he's dated. "What happens in many instances is they share too much. And you don't see them again."

The Rev. Robin Valdez, pastor of the First "I have made friends with women in the Presbyterian Church in the Dallas suburb of parish, which is nice, but I want more than a Lewisville, poses in the church sanctuary. As a single celibate life and all my social life within the person, Valdez decided it would be improper to date congregation," says one clergywoman intermen within the church where she is pastor.

WHEELER Travis Stevens of Wheeler will be participating in Southwestern Bell All-Star High School Football Game on Tuesday night at Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

Stevens, a quarterback and cornerback, helped guide Wheeler to a 10-4 record and a spot in the Class 1A semifinals this past year. Stevens, who graduated this past spring, totaled nearly 1,900 yards of offense. He rushed for 958 yards and threw for 938 yards.

Stevens capped off his high school career by winning the Class 1A pole vault at the state meet in Austin.

Two other Amarillo-area athletes were also selected to play in the all-star contest. They are Andy Kendrick of Friona and Scott Anderson of Caprock. Kendrick, a running back, scored 21 touchdowns as Friona reached the Class 3A semifinals this past season. Anderson was an outstanding two-way player at tailback and safety for the Longhorns.

The all-star game kicks off at 7:30 p.m.

GENERAL

AMARILLO - Since 1978. thousands of Texans all across the state have come to dozens of Texas Gun and Knife Shows to see the best in collectible guns, knives and accessories, presented by the Texas Gun and Knife Association. On August 2nd and 3rd, the association will present their second Amarillo Gun, Knife & Outdoor Sport Show for 1997

Collectors and exhibitors from throughout the Amarillo area will be on hand to buy, sell, and trade some of the most extraordinary guns, knives and accessories ever made. "These items you simply can't find every day," explains Don Hill, president of the association. " And even if you could, you certainly couldn't find them all together in one place at one time like this.'

Hill expects a large number of exhibitors to be on hand at the upcoming show, and he himself will be available to visit the public during the event.

As in every Texas Gun & Knife Show, guns and knives are just part of the picture at the Amarillo show. There will also be a great selection of outdoor sport items, wildlife art, historical artifacts, "Texana" items, and Native American and military memorabilia, and for the ladies, superior displays of excellently priced gold and silver jewelry.

The Amarillo Gun, Knife & Outdoor Sport Show will take place Saturday, August 2nd, from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. and Sunday, August 3rd, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. The public is invited to come in to buy, sell, trade or just browse, and people are welcome to bring their own guns for sale or trade.

BASKETBALL

BORGER - Frank Phillips College Lady Plainsmen Baketball Team signed Stacy Simmons. Simmons is a 5'6" combo guard from West Oso High School in Corpus Christi, Texas. She averaged 16 points, 5.7 rebounds, 5.7 assists and 3.6 steals per game her senior year. During both her junior and senior years, she was named First Team All-District, Corpus Christi All-Metro, All-South Texas and TABC All-Region. She was also selected 2nd Team All-State by Texas Basketball magazine and selected to play in the TABC All-Star game her senior year.

Simmons will play the point and 2 guard spot for the Lady Plainsmen. Coach Meyer says, "She is a good ball handler and passer, and can shoot the three or penetrate."

Duenkel claims Tri-State championship

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

PAMPA - The final 18 holes wasn't Eddie Duenkel's best round of the tournament, but it was good enough for a five-stroke victory Friday in the Tri-State Senior Golf Association Tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

Duenkel shot 75 in the last round to go with a one-under par 70 and one-over par 72 to compile a 217 total. Texas Tech golf coach Tommy Wilson was second at 222.

"I shot pretty well the first two days, but my putter kind of developed the yips. If you're three or four-putting every green, you're not going to have a good score. It doesn't matter how well you're driving the ball. You've got to hit those putts," Duenkel said.

Duenkel is only the second Pampa golfer to ever win the Tri-State title. Elmer Wilson, the defending champion, also won. in 1994.

"Years ago I remember the younger guys, who couldn't play at that time, would come out and watch these seniors," he said. "I really appreciate what they've done for Pampa. The tournament has been good for this area.

This is Duenkel's third year to finished ninth last year.

Wilson, entered in his first Tri-State, had three rounds of 74.

"There were four holes I was never able to figure out. I know if you get to aggressive in some places it'll get you in trouble," Wilson said. "The greens were

Sam Snead and lack Nicklaus surpassed Ben Hogan's 63 career victories. Nicklaus and Walter Hagen won more than his nine major professional championships.

But no one surpassed Hogan, who died Friday at the age of 84, in his dedication to the game or the purity with which he struck the ball.

He was the most feared player of his time, and somehow played his best golf after the 1949 car crash that shattered his legs so he never walked without pain again.

"I never saw anybody who was as determined to make a good golfer, who worked as hard and long as Ben did," said Byron Nelson, the golfing great who knew Hogan for more than 70

Playing a limited schedule because of his legs, Hogan had perhaps the greatest year ever by a professional golfer in 1953 when he played in six tournaments and won five of them, including the Masters, the U.S. Open and the British Open — the only player to win all three in the same year.

But his legs couldn't hold up for the more than 200 holes of match play Hogan would have needed to win the PGA Championship, and he did not even try for the neverachieved grand slam.

"Golf has lost, in my opinion, the best shotmaker the game has ever of your brain. seen," Nicklaus said in British Columbia, where he was playing a pro-am event. "We will all miss him very much."

Hogan, who had colon cancer surgery two years ago and Alzheimer's disease, died at his home in Fort Worth, Texas, according to his secretary, Pat Martin. Nelson said Hogan had a major stroke on Thursday.

They called the tiny man in the white cap "Bantam Ben" because of his size. In Scotland, he was "The Wee Ice Mon" because of his steely demeanor. To players, he was "The Hawk" because of the way he studied a course.

But to everyone else who fol-played the game like Mr. Hogan and no human has ever come as perfectly as he did.

"Ben Hogan defined the inner will that lives within us," he said. "The Hawk's shadow will be felt upon the game forever."

Hogan's strong-willed concentration, endless devotion to practice and careful way with words created the image of a cold, hard

'You didn't have a casual conversation with Ben," said former PGA Tour commissioner Deane Beman, who had known Hogan since 1953. "He looked you in the pupil of your eye right to the back

Those closest to Hogan — and there were few — told of a man played after the accident. with a kind heart and a keen sense

Hogan, his wife of 62 years, told The Associated Press in a 1995 interview. "And a warm person. He wasn't the machine everyone thought. He just worked harder."

It was her life that Hogan saved in that 1949 crash when he threw slammed head-on into a bus. It steering wheel.

Cooper sets another scoring record

Born to a hard-scrabble life in lowed golf, there was only one rural Dublin, Texas, on Aug. 13, way to describe Ben Hogan: per- 1912, William Ben Hogan was 9 years old and in the room when Two-time Masters champion his blacksmith father, Chester, Ben Crenshaw said: "No one ever committed suicide with a .45-caliber pistol.

Shortly after, his mother, Clara, close to controlling the golf ball as moved the family to Fort Worth and Hogan discovered golf as a caddie at Glen Garden Country Club where, at age 15, he lost the caddie championship in a playoff to another boy his age - Byron

Hogan turned pro when he was 17, joined the tour full time at 19 in 1931 and neared bankruptcy several times until he won his first tournament at the Hershey Four-

Hogan's obsessive drive to master the game took time to bear fruit. After years of fighting a severe right-to-left hook, Hogan changed to a controlled left-toright game. He started winning regularly at age 28 and at 33 emerged as the greatest player in the world.

From the time of his discharge from the Army in August 1945 until the head-on car crash on Feb. 2, 1949, Hogan won an astounding 37 tournaments, including two PGA Championships and a U.S.

Beginning with his breakthrough major at the 1946 PGA Championship and ending with his British Open triumph at Carnoustie in 1953, Hogan played in 16 major championships and won nine. He won six of the first nine majors he

A mere 16 months after the accident, Hogan won the U.S. Open. "You know, I always thought he He finished the grueling 36-hole was a handsome man," Valerie final day at Merion with his legs, bandaged from ankle to thigh, throbbing in pain, then won a playoff with Lloyd Mangrum and George Fazio the next day.

In his rare post-accident tournament appearances, other players would stop what they were doing himself across her lap as their car to watch Hogan hit balls. It was said that his ball striking was so also saved Hogan's life, since he pure, a pro could turn his back would have been impaled by the and tell Hogan's hits by the sharp, cracking sound they made.

Jeff Bagwell. Darryl Kile survived two rough early innings to get his seventh straight decision as Bagwell's fifth-inning homer rallied the Houston Astros past the Montreal Expos 5-2 Friday night for their seventh straight victory.

The Astros perked up when Juden (11-4) hit two batters, especially when he plunked Chuck Carr with two out in the fifth inning and the score tied at 2-2.

Carr shouted at Juden as he went to first base, and Bagwell got even with his 27th homer over the center-field fence.

"Something old. Something new. Something Borrowed. Something Blue."

What's most interesting about this expression is the fact that "something old" and "something borrowed" could be one in the same. At least it is where antiques are concerned. For being a small town of about 20,000, Pampa has more antiques than you'd expect. Many of the antique pepper shakers, teapots, cups and saucers, you name stores sit snugly on street corners, or stay hidden behind more "recent" retailers, while others almost blend in with their surroundings. But whether you itage, for example, mammy salt and pepper shakers see them or not, they are here.

What makes antiques so special? So popular? Collection. Dolores Spurier, owner of The Cottage Collection said it ties people to the past.

"It's what they remember from when they were kids," she said.

Carolyn Copeland from The Collector's Corner agreed. are several to choose from.

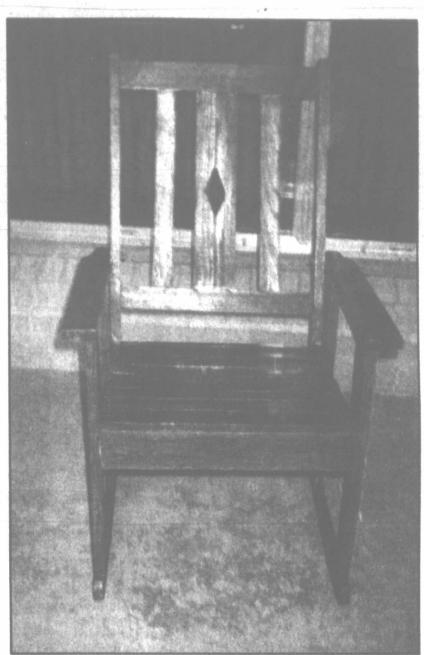

"It's memories - I think antiques connect people with the past. . . they remember what grandma had." However, antiques may have more than just sentimental value.

"Antiques have always been popular. But it doesn't mean everybody's gonna like them. People might want to accent their houses with them. That's what I do. I don't want a house with just antiques, nobody does," Copeland said.

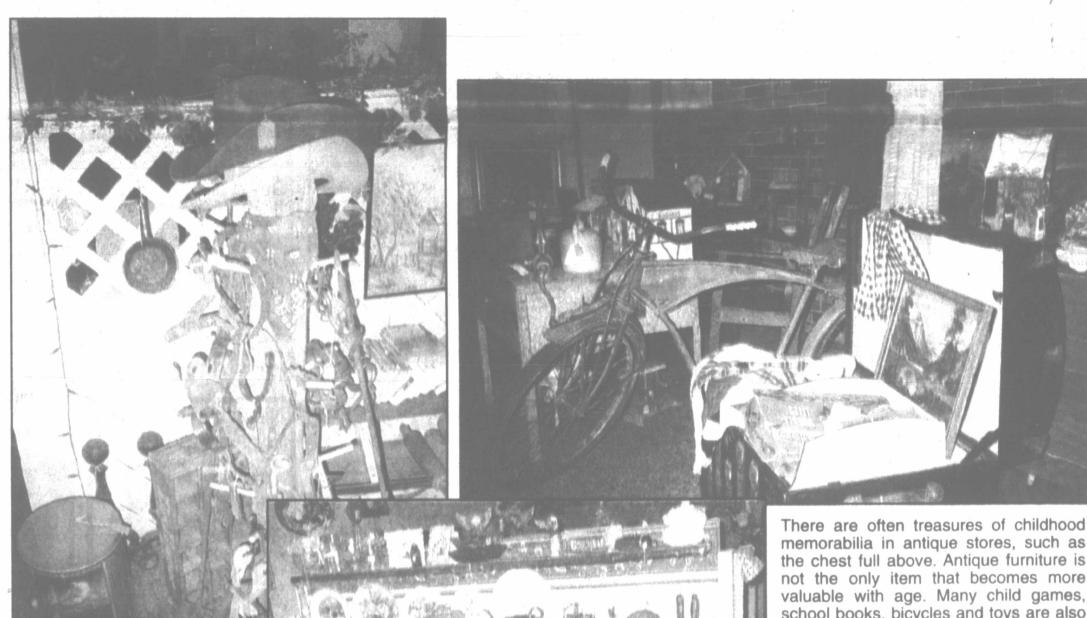

The collectability of certain kinds of antiques attract a large portion of the antiquing public. Depression glass, crocks, salt and it, it's probably collected. Right now, anything having to do with black herare popular, said Gayle Brown of the Cottage

So whether you're out to bring history alive, looking for the perfect gift, searching for that thing grandma used to have or if just you collect things (or want to collect things) consider antiques. You'll find there

Rocking chairs are a favorite, but antique rocking chairs are a find! Those who relish shopping for antiquities can definitely appreciate the wood grain and dark stain of this chair. Needless to say, this item did not last long and was soon on its way to a new home.

memorabilia in antique stores, such as the chest full above. Antique furniture is not the only item that becomes more valuable with age. Many child games, school books, bicycles and toys are also very valuable. However, most antique shoppers don't just look for valuable items, many also collect other various antiques, such as the western collectables (far left) and kitchen wares. These items were found a the Cottage Collection in Pampa.

Suggestions above addressed conditions relating to abdominal surgery. If other types of surgery are anticipated, consult your doctor regarding temporary reduced mobility or incapacitation. For example, shoulder or arm surgery limits ability to wear clothing that goes on over the head. Garments that open down the front or stretch enough to go over the arm without inserting it into the sleeve may be needed temporarily.

For women, jumpers that open at the shoulder or down the entire side may be easier to get into than over-the-head garments. DEAR ABBY: You responded to "Worried in Texas," a 12-year-old boy who was concerned about how to avoid getting into a fight at school. that he should sign up for self-defense

Although it's important for the boy to have confidence in his ability to defend himself, your advice reflects traditional thinking that does little to address the problem of fighting at school. It is important for the boy to realize that he has other options.

Your sage advice is read by millions daily. Therefore you are in a unique position to help shape societal changes that could lead to an emphasis on nonviolence. Schools can play a vital role in teaching students alternative methods to address the age-old problem of bullies and fighting. Schools must provide a safe, caring environment if we expect effective learning to take place. It is a primary concern for parents and educators.

There are now thousands of schools across this nation where effective conflict resolution training and peer mediation programs have been successfully implemented. Students in elementary and secondary schools have been trained in dispute resolution skills. Such training empowers them to resolve problems peacefully and to assist their peers to do the same. Children and young adults are open to learning new skills, which can then effect positive change in their communities when they apply those

Vermont couple answers the call

BRANDON, Vt. (AP) - There are 3,500 people in Brandon, but sometimes it seems like Bob and Joan Thomas are the only ones who answer the phone.

On a walf of their bedroom, at the foot of their bed, 28 phones ring day and night. There are calls for local lawyers, undertakers, plumbers, veterinarians and doctors, for the police, rescue and fire departments. There are calls from people who just plain want to call.

"The old-timers still call us for the time or the weather," Bob says. For 35 years, the Thomases have run an answering service from their home. Nothing high-tech - most of the phones are black rotary models ("We don't have to dial out, so it doesn't matter," Bob says).

This is not a business for those with jangly nerves. The phones ring and ring and ring, and the Thomases are constantly running to answer. "It can take me six trips to the kitchen to get something done," Joan

With so many black phones so close together, it's hard to tell which one is shrilling. 'You just put your hand on it to see which one is vibrating," Bob says.

When the workday starts, staff at local offices call to tell the Thomases they'll answer their own phones for the next few hours. During those downtimes, they turn off the ringers on those extensions. At the end of the day, the staff call to say they're leaving, and the Thomases turn the ringers back on.

They take messages, direct callers to the proper place, and try to be helpful, calling their customers at home if necessary.

The Thomases have mastered the art of answering two phones at once and sounding tranquil as they ask each to wait so they can grab a

The Thomases started the answering service as a way for Joan to stay nome with their son and daughter. When Bob, now 66, retired from working as a contractor a few years ago, he joined his wife in the busi-

Now the Thomases appear to know by instinct when to leap up for which phone. From a tidy glassed-in porch next to the bedroom, they can sip drinks and watch the hummingbirds at the feeders outside without flinching as the phones erupt. As Bob shows a visitor a family photo, Joan runs into the other room to answer a doctor's phone. When Joan is occupied with two callers, Bob calmly reaches a third on

And when the phones ring in the middle of the night — as they do about six out of seven nights — Bob answers them. He's acquired the ability to go straight back to sleep.

Lawmakers find breakfast cereals are a little cheaper

WASHINGTON (AP) - Breakfast cereal prices dropped by 6 percent last year, two lawmakers say in a new report.

For years cereal prices had been rising faster than the rate of inflation, Democratic Reps. Sam Gejdenson of Connecticut and Charles E. Schumer of New York said Thursday in releasing their third annual report on cereals' cost.

But the four largest cereal makers — Kellogg, General Mills, Post and Quaker - all announced price cuts last year. "It is the first time we have seen, in the cereal industry, actual price competition," Gejdenson said. But the price reductions were not all that they seemed, the lawmakers said. Though the companies announced an average 16 percent price cut, only Post reduced the price of all of its cereals. Because the other companies limited their cuts to selected brands, cereal prices overall fell by just 6 percent.

In addition, all of the companies reduced the number of price-cutting coupons they distributed. The companies say they use fewer coupons because American shoppers do not redeem them.

General Mills recently announced it was raising prices about 8 cents a box. Spokesman David Dix said the increase is less than the rise in the cost of making the cereals.

A lot of beef was grilled over the Fourth of July weekend, according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

Producers can recoup losses of livestock

Cattle producers will benefit from the $700 million livestock indemnity and rural aid programs included in disaster relief legislation, approved by Congress and signed into law by President Clinton, said Bill Nice, Morrison, Ill., chairman of Agriculture Committee for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

"These relief programs, targeted specifically at livestock producers, will help the cattle industry rebuild from the significant losses caused by the harsh weather this spring and winter," Nice said.

The indemnity program will compensate producers for livestock lost in the disaster areas of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Minnesota.

Compensation is available up to $200 per cow, $250 per bull and $90 per yearling calf. The package includes another $77 million in emergency funds to help producers rebuild fences, corrals and washed-out roads and to clean fields of debris. The package also includes $60 million in direct emergency loans for producers, $50 million in guaranteed operating loans and $15 million to purchase floodplain easements on frequently-flooded lands. Another $500 million is designated for community development block grants, which will aid in rebuilding the rural communities throughout the area.

"This package will not only provide critical relief, it also. shows how we can all come together in times of need. Individual producers, state associations, congressional staff and NCBA, among others, all contributed to this joint relief effort," Nice said.

Producers may contact their local Farm Service Agency office for more information about the relief programs.

Cover crops reduce need for pesticides

WINTERS, Calif. (AP) — In the old days, a grower was considered messy or lazy for letting weeds sprout in an orchard. But many farmers now grow carpets of grass around their trees to reduce erosion, provide a home for good bugs and improve the soil. Cover crops have become a common part of efforts — known as integrated pest management to reduce use of sprays or organic methods to elim-"A cover crop is one of the cornerstones because it does so many good things for the farmer," consultant Fred Thomas said during a recent tour of walnut orchards in northern California's Yolo County. tems. "With a biological system, the soil doesn't crust. It's alive, it's wet. Cover crops often consist of vetch — leafy plants grown for fodder or green manure. They become a habitat for beneficial insects, which means good bugs like to live in cover crops and eat bad bugs that damage the farmer's crop.

Thomas said cover crops also help the orchard by nitrogen. reducing erosion and dust, holding water and nutrients and providing nitrogen the trees need.

Walnut grower Craig McNamara is excited that nitrogen from his cover crop has let him cut use of synthetic fertilizers in half.

"When you think of thousands of years that we've been involved with agriculture, it's a small most nut growers, taking on a cover crop," said amount of time, since the 1950s and '60s, that we've been utilizing chemicals," McNamara said.

Thomas said research shows that land where cover crops are planted has twice as much wildlife as bare ground. "It may not be the wildlife you like," he added. "It may be a gopher."

But there are even biological ways to get rid of gophers to avoid fumigating their underground tunnels with poison.

A group of growers, scientists and reporters stepped gingerly around a gopher snake in their path as they looked over an orchard owned by Mariani Nut Co. The snake, true to its name, was looking for a gopher to gobble.

The Mariani family runs the world's largest independent nut-processing operation and have devoted 200 acres of walnuts to reduced pesticide strategies called "biologically integrated orchard sys-

'We're interested in exploring environmentally friendly practices for our crop and production that also will be economical," said Martin Mariani.

He finds several positives and a couple of negatives in growing cover crops. On the plus side, he said, the vetch "gives the orchard a nice floor" as well as providing insect habitat, erosion control and

"The negative of a cover crop is more humidity in the orchard," which encourages some damaging pests, Mariani said. In addition, bare earth actually is warmer than the cover crop in spring, when frost can damage the budding walnuts.

"This is a really different approach to farming for Karminder Aulakh, who coordinates the biological orchard system for the Community Alliance with Family Farmers.

"If you're not a row-crop person, you may not be experienced in that. No two farms are going to look

Rep. Gonzalez hospitalized

WASHINGTON (AP) Texas Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez remained hospitalized Friday, a day after experiencing fatigue and congestion.

The 81-year-old San Antonio Democrat was under care at the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md. A statement issued by Gonzalez's office said he was undergoing "a series of routine tests" at the recommendation of the attending physician of the House.

Gonzalez consulted the House physician Thursday "after experiencing fatigue and congestion," the statement said.

spokeswoman Gonzalez Stefanie Mullin said her boss was taking antibiotics. "He is in good spirits," she said Friday. No release date has been scheduled, she said.

Gonzalez is senior Democrat on the House Banking Committee and former chairman of the panel.

eople without A/C find ways to beat the heat

LAS MILPAS, Texas — Ramona Casas describes air conditioning as a dream.

Casas is one many residents in the Las Milpas colonia who do not have air conditioning. They have more important things to worry about just to survive.

The residents of Casa Juliana, a community south of Alamo that finds ways to live more simply, do not consider air conditioning a necessity. They designed their homes to provide ventilation.

With the Rio Grande Valley temperatures averaging in the 90s in July, many residents find air conditioning as essential as air. But the environmentalists at Casa Juliana prefer to not have air conditioning.

As for those who simply cannot afford the high costs of air conditioning — they have found ways to cope without it, they say.

"We never have air conditioning," said Las Milpas resident Veronica Avila. "It's not necessary. They (my family) can survive without air conditioning."

It gets so hot that the family takes baths throughout the day. They even bathe Piggy, the family's guinea pig.

"Sometimes he gets hot, too," Avila said, laughing.

And the family has other creative ways to keep cool. They have four fans, three of which are in the children's bedroom. They drink plenty of water, soda pop and Kool-Aid, and take frequent trips to the swimming pool.

Another resident at Las Milpas, Ethelvina Herrera, has to struggle without air conditioning. Her one-room house, of white cement blocks and a cement floor, has one fan. She uses sheets to drape the large windows to block sun.

Herrera and her three children use the water hose to take showers. They throw water on the floor so their home will be cooler. The children go swimming in a canal. Sometimes, they escape to the mall or other stores to cool down. Still, they sometimes get headaches from the heat.

Both families see air conditioning as a luxury. They have other things they need more than a cooling unit. Avila and her husband are unemployed: They both would prefer to have jobs

Herrera, a housekeeper, does not own a car. They have to walk to the grocery store two blocks away to get water and soft drinks. Sometimes, the walk is so hot they just stay home.

Herrera has gone for years without air conditioning, and she'll continue to go on without

"She's a survivor," Casas said. As for the residents of Casa Juliana, they might not have air conditioning, but that's just the way they want it.

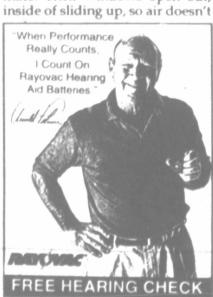

Casa Juliana is specifically designed not to use any artificial means of cooling. Instead, the home is arranged to get good ventilation with the use of windows and vines.

"I'm glad that we don't have it," said Andy McDonald, a native New Yorker who never used air conditioning. Residents leave the windows open in the 25-year-old house. Long vines shade the home on the south side, where the sun hits. The home was built with windows on the south and north sides, so the southeast wind can blow right through.

The residents also dress for the weather while they're inside. They have a fan in an office that does not get good ventilation and in a downstairs classroom.

Two smaller houses in the back of the main house, which serve as bedrooms, were built for the climate. Their windows open out,
