GORMAN, (AP) -- Like a growing number of peanut farmers, Dickie Norris is abandoning the oak trees and gentle slopes of northcentral Texas, traditionally the state's most prolific peanut land, for the flat and treeless West Texas plain between Lubbock and

'It was a pretty big move, I'll tell you," said Norris, who's spent most of his 40 years in Texas' peanut-growing heartland. "I have a wife and three kids and a pretty nice place down there that's paid for. But there's no future in central Texas for peanut growers. It's over.'

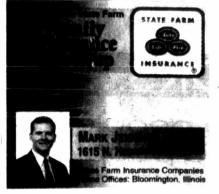

Peanuts are among the few field crops still tightly controlled by government quotas and price supports. So-1995 legislation when allowed farmers to lease or sell federal production quotas, they found plenty of eager takers out west.

The state produced a record 400 tons of peanuts in 1997, second only to Georgia, and two-thirds of that came from the stark High Plains near the New Mexico border.

It gave evidence of a distinct westward shift of the industry's center from the historically peanut-oriented area from Abilene southeast to Waco, where a dry summer left fields sere and unproductive.

A total of 16 area residents filed for elected candidate positions in the Gray County March, 1998 primary. The County Clerk's Office received the remaining applications Friday night.

Democrats, GOP spar over fixing Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) -- White House officials and a Republican leader are at odds over how to start the search for a financial fix for Social Security as the giant baby boom generation begins retiring in the next century.

Budget director Franklin Raines and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said Sunday that the Clinton administration want the problem addressed as soon as possible.

Effectively, what that means is it has to be done in the next two years," Raines said on NBC's 'Meet the Press.

"Once you get into the presidential election, a season after that, we won't probably see any legislation. But do not wait for a proposed solution from President Clinton. He plans instead to talk with Congress' Republican leaders on developing a bipartisan solution, Raines said

We need a bipartisan agreement to move forward on this," Raines said. "We can't do it by the president alone or Democrats can't do it alone. It has to be bipartisan.'

But House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said Clinton should go first.

The president needs to exert leadership on this," Armey said on CNN's "Late Edition." "He needs to go forward on it. And we're anxious to see him make a proposal.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, suggested establishing a commission to study all retirement plans, including Social Security and private pen-

Democrats and Republicans also sparred over the best way to handle a possible future surplus in the federal budget.

While GOP lawmakers called for tax cuts, most notably the marriage penalty, administration officials cautioned against steps that would raise the deficit.

Rubin said on CBS' "Face the Nation:" "If people propose tax cuts, I think it is very fair to ask them how they're going to pay for those tax cuts, with which specifics, and what effect those tax cuts are going to have on middle-income people and working people, and what effect they think those tax cuts are going to have on the overriding objective of maintaining our fiscal discipline."

Clinton will offer some tax breaks in his budget for the 1999 fiscal year, but they will be modest, Rubin told CNN.

He said the plan includes a break to middle-income people for day care expenses and energy conservation costs.

Singing cowboy poet Buck Ramsey, 59, dies

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) -- Singing cowboy Buck Ramsey has diedat the age of 59.

Ramsey, a poet, musician, and singer who chronicled cowboy life in his works, died early Saturday at his Amarillo home. Services will be Tuesday.

He won several awards for his prose, poetry, and music, among them the Golden Spur Award from the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

Cause of death had not been determined, but Ramsey had been hospitalized in December with some internal pain.

He spent more than half his life confined to a wheelchair. In 1961, when Ramsey was working for the Coldwater Cattle Company, a shank bit broke on his horse's bridle, causing him to fall beneath his horse. He suffered a severe back injury that left him paralyzed from the waist down for the past 36 years. From his wheelchair, Ramsey went on to win numerous awards for his music, poetry and other writing.

We've lost one of our best," Pat Henry, president of the Southwest Cowboy Poets Association, said. "We've all known Buck a long, long time, and we're sure going to miss him.

Henry said his group's next monthly breakfast would feature a program of testimonials on Ramsey and readings of his poetry.

Buck was a wonderful person, a wonderful writer and a wonderful performer," added Perryton rancher and author John Erickson. "I was listening to some of his music just last night. He was preserving a tradition he knew and cared Fiddler Frankie McWhorter, who was planning to join Ramsey in several upcoming recording sessions for the Smithsonian, said Ramsey and his efforts to preserve traditional cowboy music would be missed.

Wife faces third murder trial

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA Associated Press Writer

LOS FRESNOS, Texas (AP) --Sometime around 2 a.m. on Sept. 16, 1987, Susan Mowbray was aroused by a noise.

She had stayed up watching Johnny Carson and David Letterman; her husband, Bill, had moved to her accustomed side of the bed, so she could be closer to the television.

Finally, she went to sleep -- but then the noise awakened her. She said she saw her husband's elbow in the air, reached out to touch him and heard an explo-

"I knew there was a gun," she would tell sheriff's deputies later that night. "I groped and grabbed the gun. ... I had been living with this fear for three years.

In the darkness, she said, she walked around to her husband's side of the bed and knelt down. Blood seeped from his head onto the pillow and sheets. She placed the gun in the pool of blood, downstairs and called Luke Fruia, the manager of her husband's Cadillac dealership.

"Luke, he did it," she cried. `He shot himself."

Eight months later, Susie Mowbray was convicted of shooting her husband as he slept. The motive? To collect $1.8 million in insurance money. She was sentenced to life in prison.

In May, after nine years in prison, she was set free. An appeals court granted her a new trial, ruling prosecutors suppressed blood evidence that contradicted their murder scenario. But her freedom may be tem-

1987, the 49-year-old Mrs. Mowbray is scheduled to be tried once again in the slaying of her husband.

"I have to trust that at some point, everyone will see that this was a horrible family tragedy and a horrible mistake was made," she said.

"It's time for us to put this behind us and everyone go on with their lives. It's been 10 years. That's enough."

But Bill Mowbray's family and prosecutors want to prove once and for all that Mrs. Mowbray is a cold-blooded murderer.

She belongs in jail, and she belongs there for the rest of her life," said Kristin Mowbray, Bill Mowbray's daughter from died from a suicide, not a homianother marriage.

Mrs. Mowbray's new attorneys plan to focus their case on blood evidence that prosecutors withheld the first time around. Their star witness will be blood-spatter expert Herbert MacDonell.

Christmas outside prison since cutors prior to the first trial to examine Mrs. Mowbray's nightgown. He told them he found no blood and that it was "very unlikely" the garment was near the wound at the time of the shooting "or it was protected from spatter."

But MacDonell never testified. Instead, the state hired another expert who testified that microscopic blood-spatter was found on the gown.

Texans talk about trade

The Texas Department of Economic Development reports that foreign trade plays a vital role in the Texas economy - a larger role, in fact, than it does in any other state except California. Trade is high on our state's list of priorities.

Last August, I sent out my annual questionnaire. One of the questions I asked Texans in that column was about trade: Since NAFTA was implemented in 1993, there has been a dramatic increase in jobs and export growth in Texas and the United States. What are your views on expanding NAFTA to include Chile and the rest of Latin America?"

Your answers ran the gamut from enthusiastic support to opposition. A majority of Texans were skeptical about the benefits of NAFTA.

From Flower Mound: "I am a supporter of free trade. The facts are in: the Ross Perot 'sucking sound' was never heard. Expansion of NAFTA to Chile and all Latin America is very important. It will improve our economic activity and raise Latin American living standards, which will in turn provide markets for more of our products."

From Wharton: "I believe we should wait a number of years before extending NAFTA to Latin America. Although there has been a dramatic growth in the number of jobs and in exports since NAFTA began, I am not convinced NAFTA had anything to do with it. This growth probably is a continuation of the growth that began in the 1980s.

From Mesquite: "I don't know if it's necessary for Chile to join NAFTA. We already are receiving a great amount of goods (especially food products, fruit and such) from Chile and other Latin American countries.

From Farmers Branch: "If NAFTA is so wonderful, why do the other member countries sell us more than we sell them, allowing them to enjoy a trade surplus with us? Instead of expanding it, keep some basic jobs in the United States. Trade agreements should be good for workers and good for voters."

From San Marcos: "I believe NAFTA has created jobs and increased exports, but not to the extent some claim. Maybe not enough effort has been put forth to maximize the potential

From Houston: "NAFTA should be canceled if Mexico cannot control the flow of drugs into the United States.

From San Antonio: "NAFTA will allow our Texas highways to be destroyed by Mexican trucks. I wonder if the limited number of people who benefit from it is worth the price other Texans have to pay for it.'

From Highland Park: "Since NAFTA, a lot of the lower-paying jobs are going to Mexico and overseas. This only increases the amount we must spend on welfare to support those who have lost their jobs. Meanwhile, we let anyone who wants come live in our country and compete with those on welfare for what jobs there are left here. None of this is fair to American workers. It doesn't make a lot of sense for taxpayers, either."

From Brady: "We have to have NAFTA, and expand it, in order to compete with the European economic trading bloc." I have to admit I am a supporter of free trade, one of those believers who still thinks a rising tide lifts all boats.

Since the inception of the North American Free Trade Agreement, Texas has created more jobs than any other state in the nation. I believe NAFTA has been good for Texas and will continue to be good for us well into the future.

The anti-white political party?

Is the Democratic Party in danger of becoming identified as the anti-white party in American politics?

Of course, the Democrats want all the votes they can lay their hands on, and are not in the least averse to white voters. But, as we are constantly being reminded, in politics the perception is the reality, and in the past quarter-century the Democrats have cultivated various nonwhite minorities so diligently and so successfully that their identification with the best interests of white Americans may be open to chal-

Bear in mind that no Democratic presidential candidate since Lyndon Johnson in 1964 has won a majority of the white vote. This didn't matter, however, if enough non-white voters backed the Democrat to put him over the top. And the Democrats have worked with impressive energy to make sure that enough of them the Democrats was, of course, the blacks. After many decades of loyalty to the Republican Party because "Lincoln freed the slaves," the blacks moved massively into the Democratic Party as early as the New Deal, and have stayed there ever since in understandable gratitude for decisive Democratic support on civil Black voters' support for Democratic presidential candidates now typically runs above and sometimes well above – 90 percent. But the the state and federal governments' use of race applicants in college admissions. The coalition Democrats have also been commendably alert preferences (deceptively miscalled "affirmative" of minorities that now sustains the Democratic in wooing the Hispanic voters who have

And recently they have shown signs of wanting to add the smaller but fast growing bloc of Asian voters to their husky coalition. (On Crossfire not long ago, former California charging Asians with campaign finance improprieties and opposing President Clinton's nomination of Bill Lann Lee, a Chinese-American, to be assistant attorney general for civil rights.)

The trouble is, of course, that any action begets an equal and opposition reaction, and some white voters are beginning to suspect that they are getting the short end of the Democratic cants over whites in admissions to state colleges and in the awarding of state contracts. The courts have made it clear that this is unconstitutional in the vast majority of cases, but the Democratic Party seems too much in thrall to its minority constituencies to give white applicants an even break.

Then too, the spokesmen for various minorities which are aligned, or which they are seeking to align, with the Democratic Party haven't always been very helpful. For example, Professor L. Ling-chi Wang of Berkeley recently called on his fellow Asian-Americans to join with others" in a multiracial coalition "to defeat the forces of reaction." The "others," it was easy to deduce, were blacks and Hispanics, while "the forces of reaction" were

In their more cheerful moments, some Democratic strategists find this scenario not Democratic chairman Bill Press suavely imputaltogether unappealing. They point out that at The first minority bloc to throw in its lot with ed anti-Asian racism to the Republicans for some time in the not-too-distant future, if current population trends and immigration rates continue, the present white majority in the United States will itself become a minority. Why, at that point, should the Democratic Party care if it has a reputation as "anti-white"?

But beware the breezy assumption that America's minorities will always prefer each others' company to that of the whites. Many Asian-Americans already know that they are the chief victims of race preferences for black agtion") to favor less-qualified minority appli-

Liberals have no respect for the truth

How would you react if you discovered that conspiracy theorists, or atheists, or rightwingers were getting their political opinions printed as fact in encyclopedias and school textbooks? What if you picked up an encyclopedia, say, Britannica or Collier's, or your child's history textbook, and found references to Franklin Koosevelt as the president "who turned the other way while the Soviet Union enslaved Eastern Europe"? You'd be outraged, and justifiably so.

Reference works are supposed to be the last refuge of objectivity, and if you can't go there for the unvarnished facts, you can't go anywhere. Anyone arrogant enough to step over truth or for other people's - even children's right to have access to it.

That's why I want to alert you to the fact that liberals are destroying your ability to get the straight facts from reference material. For years you've listened to conservatives warn that if liberals were arrogant enough to insert their political bias into the reporting of supposedly "straight" news, they wouldn't stop

Well, we were right. For years now, liberals by virtue of their political domination of academic circles in America - have been marching through the reference section of your library and the textbook publishing houses and inserting their political opinions simply as "the facts." Since so few people read their children's textbooks or do research in their spare time, the liberals are getting away with it.

Edwin Feulner

Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation.

Examples are numerous. As my friend Brent Bozell of the Media Research Center pointed out in a column recently, all you have to do is look up someone liberals hate, Ronald Reagan, on every item on Collier's "evil cuts" list rise this line reveals a dangerous lack of respect for in the encyclopedia: "Reagan persuaded Congress to enact a series of tax rate cuts that mainly benefited upper-income taxpayers. To offset some of the revenue losses, he obtained severe cuts in spending for 'social' items, including Social Security, job training, college loan guarantees, aid to cities, food subsidies and medical care for the poor, disability payments for the handicapped, day-care centers for children, and geriatric centers." Gee - did Reagan have horns and a pointy tail too?

If you think the passage above, straight out of Collier's Encyclopedia, is pretty much on the mark, you've been reading biased liberal newspapers too long. Revenue losses caused by the Reagan tax cuts? There were no such loss-In fact, government revenue increased when taxes were cut, just like Reagan said they would. Why? Because the tax cuts left more money for the economy to work with, producing more wealth, and therefore more tax revenues. If you don't believe me, check the Statistical Abstract (a reference work liberals haven't ambushed yet), and you'll find that in the years following the tax cut, government revenues from individual income taxes increased from $286 billion in 1981 to $349 billion in 1986.

Did Reagan cut the social safety net to offset those non-existent revenue losses? If so, how did Social Security spending increase from $118.5 billion in 1980 to $287.5 billion in 1992? Why did spending on food stamps go from $9.1 billion to $21.8 billion? Why did spending on Reagan's watch?

Lies - flat out lies. Liberals have become so used to not being held accountable for what they say and write that they don't even check the facts anymore. Why should they? For example, A History of US is a history textbook series published by none other than Oxford University Press. It reports to its young readers (does your child use this book in school?) that on Reagan's watch, the federal budget deficit rose from $58 billion to $2.3 trillion. An obvious error, right? She must have been wearing her glasses backward. No deficit has ever come near such a colossal figure. The correct number is $155.2 billion. Nonetheless, the $2.3 trillion figure appeared in a subsequent "revised" version of the book's chapter on Reagan.

This is what happens when people care more about politics than they do about the truth. And liberals care more about politics.

Folic acid reduces the risk of neural tube birth defects such as an encephaly and spina bifida when it is consumed in adequate amounts by women before pregnancy and around the time of daily by:

"The catch is that these defects can occur in an embryo before a woman realizes she's pregnant," said Mark Canfield, director, TDH Birth Defects Monitoring Division. "That's why it's important that all women of childbearing age get enough folic acid every day."
January is National Birth Defects Prevention Month, and health officials urge prospective parents to be aware of ways to prevent birth

TDH officials say that the FDA-required amount alone will not be enough to significantly reduce birth defects. Research has shown that 400 micrograms daily is needed to prevent neural tube birth defects. TDH and the federal Centers for Disease Control and

AUSTIN — A baby with a life-threatening neural tube defect is born in Texas each day, and thousands are born in the U.S. each year Texas Department of Health officials say a new federal Food and Drug Administration requirement for a B vitamin in grain products may help change that, but it's not enough.

On Jan. 1, American consumers will begin seeing enriched grain products with added folic acid as the new FDA requirement goes into effect. U.S. food manufacturers will be required to add up to 140 micrograms of the B vitamin per pound of product, including percent, according to recent studies published in the British medical

The number has dropped from 25 cases per 10,000 births in 1991 in Cameron County to less than five per 10,000 births. Kids Q&A Q: What is inflammatory bowel disease?

A: Inflammatory bowel disease is a chronic illness of the gastrointestinal tract. There are two types: Crohns disease, which affects the whole gastrointestinal tract and has no known cure, and ulcerative colitis, which affects the large bowel and can only be cured by removing the colon. Inflammatory bowel disease can be mistaken as many other medical problems in children, such as growth failure. Some may be stricken with rheumatoid arthritis, liver disease, gall bladder or eye disease. Victims can suffer from frequent bouts with diarrhea, abdominal pain and rectal Symptoms are more severe and the mortality rate is highest in younger children. Parents should also talk to pediatricians about inflammatory bowel disease when children are being treated for chronic diarrhea, constant stomach aches, arthritis or other ailments.

Q: Does formula interfere with the absorption of iron in an infant's diet?

A: Formula contains large amounts of iron. The large anlount of iron is adjusted precisely to allow appropriate iron absorption in the presence of calcium and other formula components. Therefore, it is highly unlikely that formula would reduce the absorption of iron from other foods. However, studies have shown cow's milk, with its high levels of calcium, seems to interfere with the absorption of iron from iron-supplemented

Iron and calcium enter the body using the same pathways. When there is a large amount of calcium, as in cow's milk, the calcium bumps the iron out of the pathways resulting in less absorption.

Q: How much is too much sugar for children?

A: Although children burn extra calories received from sugar during daily activities, some may eventually end up overweight if they consume a high-calorie diet on a daily basis. Children who are overweight face an increased risk of high blood pressure, high cholesterol and heart disease

Dental problems such as tooth decay and unhealthy gums can be reduced by limiting the amount of sugar.

Here are some ways parents can limit sugar in children's diets: —Use two-thirds to three-fourths of the sugar called for in recipes.

—Add raisins or other dried fruits to cookie dough instead of chocolate chips or candy.

-Substitute bagels for doughnuts or muffins.

—Offer unsweetened fruit juices instead of soft drinks loaded with sugar.

—Make a deal with children to limit candy to once or twice a week.

There is a place for sugar in children's diets, but moderation is the key.

Q: Does caffeine affect breast milk?

A: Researchers recommend that nursing moms limit their intake of coffee and other caffeine-rich beverages to 1-2 cups a day. Studies indicate the iron status of milk, and ultimately the infant's iron levels, might be adversely affected when breastfeeding mothers drink large quantities of regular coffee. Caffeine is also found in some soft drinks and several over-the-counter medications.

New drug may help patients with Lou Gehrig's disease

HOUSTON - Myotrophin, an experimental drug for Lou Gehrig's disease, appears to slow the disease's symptom progression. Results of a nine-month study involving 266 patients at eight North American medical centers were reported in a recent issue of the journal Neurology.

"Patients taking a high dose of the medication progressed 26 percent slower than patients on the placebo or inactive drug," said Dr. Eugene Lai, a neurologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston and lead author of the journal article. "They also experienced a slower decline in quality of life."

Lou Gehrig's disease, also called amyotrophic lateral sclerosis or ALS, involves the progressive breakdown of motor neurons, the nerve cells that control muscular activity. It causes severe muscle weakness, difficulty in speaking, swallowing and breathing and ulti-

"To ALS patients, slowing progression can mean maintaining arm and leg strength longer, delaying the onset of speech problems and prolonging mobility and independence," said Dr. Stanley Appel, director of the MDA/ALS Clinic at Baylor and The Methodist Hospital and Baylor chairman of neurology.

The study drug, Myotrophin or recombinant human insulin-like growth factor is a man-made form of the natural protein insulin-like growth factor-I. This protein is important for normal human growth

"The growth factor may act in a variety of ways on the motor neuron, nerve and skeletal muscle. It has the ability to induce nerve sprouting and growth and to promote nerve cell survival," Appel said. "These actions are important to ALS patients."

The medication was given twice daily as a shallow injection under the skin, and participants received either a low dose, a high dose or a

Patients were evaluated monthly using the Appel ALS rating scale to assess speech and swallowing, respiratory function, arm and leg muscle strength and arm and leg function. The Sickness Impact Profile measured participants' perceptions of their quality of life, including psychological well-being, daily living and disability.

"The drug proved to be well tolerated and simple for patients to administer," Lai said.

Treatment-related side-effects were relatively mild and included injection-site inflammation, hair change, knee pain and facial swelling. Less than five percent of the patients left the study due to Myotrophin currently is under review and pending marketing approval by the Food and Drug Administration.

Gene yields clues to sleep cycle

HOUSTON - A second gene that helps regulate the body's wake-sleep cycle has been identified by scientists at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. This finding yields more clues to how light affects the body's biological-clock genes.

The second gene complements, but does not duplicate, the function of another gene identified earlier this year by the same group of researchers. The finding gives drug researchers another clue for finding better treatments for jet lag and other sleep problems and for regulating hormone secretion and other body functions that occur during a 24hour cycle.

The two genes on which we've reported are involved with circadian rhythms, but they 'wake up' or turn on at dif-ferent times," said Dr. Cheng Chi Lee, one of the lead investigators for the study reported in a recent issue of the journal Cell.

Grandma Thinks Teachers Could Lighten Girl's Load

DEAR ABBY: My granddaughter, at the age of 14, is seeing a chiropractor because of back problems caused by the backpack she carries to school five days a week.

Her teachers require her to have a three-ring binder for each class, no exceptions. Abby, this school has no lockers, and each child is expected to carry the pack home each night and return it to school the next day.

Twenty pounds and up is too nuch for an adult to carry, let alone a growing child. A newspaper article said children in France are fighting the same problem and that it has become a national disgrace. What are teachers thinking of?

As yet, I haven't seen a backpack with wheels, so I may have to get my granddaughter a luggage cart to save her back. Any comments?

AN OUTRAGED GRANDPARENT IN BOULDER, COLO.

DEAR OUTRAGED GRAND-PARENT: Backpacks distribute weight more evenly than the old book bags we carried in school, but I agree that 20 pounds is a heavy weight.

Many college students, who have even larger books, often strap their books and documents onto portable luggage carriers for easy transport. At age 14, your granddaughter may not want to be different from her friends who still use backpacks, but wheels would

DEAR ABBY: It is unfortunate that "Dumbfounded in Foxboro, N.C." was suspected of shoplifting, detained and questioned. It is even more unfortunate that he felt humiliated and will no longer shop in that store again.

The security officer acted discreetly by asking "Dumbfounded" to follow her. When she realized her mistake, she apologized. Why didn't "Dumbfounded" think, "At least I know this store is trying to hold people accountable and not permit shoplifters to get away with theft which causes retail prices to rise)"?

Abby, the security officer made a mistake for which she apologized. An apology should be sufficient.

PHILADEPHIA — The injury was painful enough, but the timing of the broken leg sustained by Philadelphia Flyers rookie Vaclav Prospal in Saturday night's 7-2 win at Ottawa made it hurt even more.

Prospal, who suffered a fractured fibula in his left leg in a collision with Senators defenseman Lance Pitlick, not only will be out of the Flyers' lineup for a long line time, he will miss playing for his native Czech Republic in next month's Olympics.

It's the second time in eight months the forwardd has suffered this type of injury. Last April 30, Prospal was skating in practice when he was slashed by a teammate and suffered a broken bone in his left wrist. He missed the rest of the playoffs. Now he won't be able to play in the first Olympics involving NHL players. "I was thinking I had a great chance to go to Japan, and now I'm not going to go," Prospal said. This is even worse than it was last year in the play-

UCLA's Bruins are kings of Lone Star state

DALLAS (AP) -- UCLA couldn't be national champions, but the Bruins were more than happy to rule the state of Texas.

UCLA overcame a 16-point deficit Thursday to beat Texas A&M 29-23 in the Cotton Bowl for its 10th straight win, a string that began with a 66-3 pounding of Texas and also included a 66-10 drubbing of Houston.

The 10-2 record and seasonending momentum could move UCLA from No. 5 even higher when the season-ending poll is released Saturday morning. However, there's practically no chance of reaching No. 1.

So, the Bruins settled for calling themselves Texas State

They even had T-shirts printed up that said exactly that, with the words written in the school colors of the three teams they beat.

That consolation prize was a pretty special one for coach Bob Toledoand star running back Skip Hicks. Toledo was fired as A&M offensive coordinator after the 1994 Cotton Bowl, while Hicks is a Texas native who spurned his home state's major colleges.

"Being able to beat three top Texas schools is a great accomplishment for our program," said Hicks, who ran for 140 yards and had another 53 receiving, including a 41-yard touchdown grab. "I'm just glad to be a part of it."

Toledo had been downplaying the revenge angle for weeks, while Aggies coach R.C. Slocum called it the biggest mistake of his career.

Still, the Bruins knew Toledo wanted to get back at his old Deep down inside, he wanted to win more than anything," Hickssaid. "I'm just proud and glad to have done it for him.'

For much of the game, it didn't look like UCLA was going to do it.

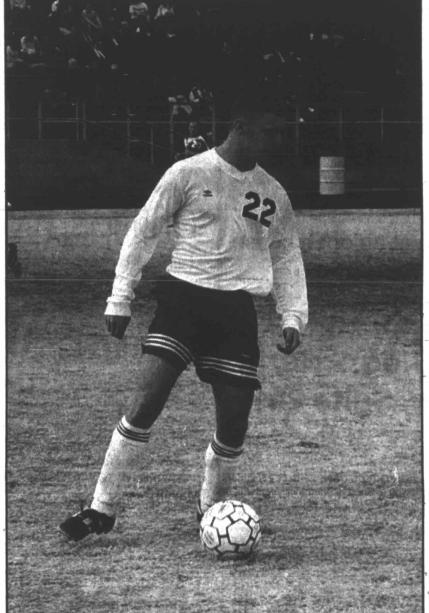

The Aggies were up 16-0 until the Bruins scored a touchdown with two seconds left in the first half. UCLA got within 16-14 early in the third quarter only to have A&M go back ahead 23-14. The Bruins then scored two more touchdowns to wrap up the biggest Cotton Bowl comeback since Joe Montana led Notre Dame to a 35-34 victory over Houston in 1979.

"There was not a lot said (when they were down 16-0)," said quarterback Cade McNown, the game's offensive MVP. `I didn'thave to give any speeches. Nobody did. Talk is cheap in a situationlike that. You knew what we had to do and we did it.'

A&M ended the year 9-4, with losses in its last two games.

The Aggies made a good stand Thursday after being blown out 54-15 by Nebraska in the Big 12 title game.

Iverson scored 31 points, hit 10 of 11 free throws and had 11 assists in 47 minutes as the Sixers handed the Lakers their first loss of the season with O'Neal in the lineup. They were 9-0 with their big man.

He was great the whole game," Sixers coach Larry Brown said of Iverson. "He's had some great games, but under the circumstancés as good as a point guard can play. He might have topped it though

"I don't think we really cammentally prepared," O'Neal said. We have to be prepared for every team. Rather than talking about it, we just need to go out and excuses.

Jim Jackson added 28 points and Theo Ratliff had 20 points and 10 rebounds for the Sixers, who had lost nine of their previous 11, including a 90-73 defeat at Seattle on Friday.

Seattle just kind of toyed with us," Brown said. "Then to come in and play a team like this, where we don't have depth and size, we're worried about foul trouble, and then we played great. I don't know if t gets any better than that."

Jackson picked up his fifth foul about three minutes into the fourth quarter, but he came back at 5:46 and hit 6-of-6 free throws down the stretch.

Jackson called it a ``near-perfect" game, adding that "if it was a perfect game, we never would have lost the lead.'

The Sixers closed the game with a 23-10 run. Iverson and Jackson scored 19 of the team's final 23

"We played a solid game, but the most important thing is we kept our poise at the end, Iverson said. `Even when we got down, everybody executed and we felt like we still had a legitimate shot to win the game.

Philadelphia then had a 9-0 run to take the lead before O'Neal scored with 1:48 remaining to make it 99-99. It would be the last time the game was tied.

Iverson, a 67 percent free throw shooter, hit four straight free throws as the 76ers took the lead for good. He finished 10-of-11 at the line. "It's a big victory because

At Sacramento, Mitch Richmond scored 11 of his 23 points in a lopsided first quarter and Sacramento went on to lead by 30 in the second quarter.

Sacramento centers Michael Stewart and Olden Polynice dominated the middle. Stewart had 10 points, nine rebounds and points and nine boards. Hornets center Vlade Divac was held to 2 points on 1-for-4 shooting.

Tennessee tops women's poll Viking funeral fueled by errors

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER AP Sports Writer

Tennessee held its familiar place atop The Associated Press women'sbasketball poll today. A notso-familiar face, Utah, gained a spot near the other end of the Top 25.

Unbeaten Utah made the poll for the first time in history, breaking in at No. 22, and Tulane returned to the rankings at 24th after a two-week absence. There were several other changes up anddown the list, but Tennessee remained unanimous at No. 1 after decisively answering two more challenges.

Playing for the first time in almost two weeks, the Lady Vols beat Arkansas by 30 and Connecticut by 15 and received all 38 first-place votes from a national media panel. That gave Tennessee (15-0) 950 total points -- 38 more than No. 2 Old

Old Dominion (10-0) was second for the seventh straight week, the same span that Tennessee has been unanimous. Tennessee, winner of the last two NCAA championships, has been No. 1 all sea-

Connecticut (12-1) remained third with 850 points despite the loss to Tennessee, its first during the regular season in 53 games. Louisiana Tech (10-2) stayed at No. 4 with 842 points.

Texas Tech climbed two places to fifth and was followed by Vanderbilt, Washington, North Carolina, Virginia and Arizona. North Carolina fell three places after losing its ACC opener to Clemson.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) --Thanks to a mistake filled one-minute span late in the second quarter, the Minnesota Vikings trailed the San Francisco 49ers 21-7 at halftime of their divisional playoff game.

Disappointing? Sure, but the Vikings had been down before. They were, after all, just seven days removed from their unbelievable 16-point comeback against the New York Giants, the fourth time this season Minnesota had won in the final seconds.

Sowhen Robert Smith opened the third quarter with an 8-yard runthe Vikings seemed to have some life. Four plays later it was clear they probably did not.

Smith was thrown for a 1yard loss on second down, and then receiver Jake Reed, Pro Bowl tackle Todd Steussie and guard David Dixon committed false start penalties on consecutive plays. That sequence was the lowlight of an afternoon filled with mistakes as the Vikings lost their divisional playoff game 38-22 on Saturday.

"When you win four games when you have to come from behind to do it, that means you have a courageous team," said Dennis Green, who may have coached his last game with Minnesota. "I just think we need to be a little bit bet-

Smarter, too.

Needing a near-perfect game to upset the 49ers, Minnesota committed 12 penalties, many of them simply mental mistakes at terrible times, and gave San Francisco a momentum-turning touchdown late in the first

The avalanche of errors started with Minnesota's first offensive play, when defensive end Roy Barker, a former Viking, blew past tackle Korey Stringer for a sack. That drive ended with Mitch Berger's 12-yard punt and set up San Francisco's first touchdown.

The Vikings were down 24-7 early in the third quarter before they finally had an offensive series without a penalty or another costly mis-

"We can't afford to make mistakes in a game like this, big or

Stringer said. "It's just frustrating and disappointing."

The play that turned the game was Ken Norton's 23yard interception return for a 21-7 lead with 5:41 left in the second quarter, just twoplays after the 49ers had gone up 14-7 with help from a pass interference penalty.
