PAMPA — Vehicle bids from two suppliers were accepted this week by the city commission. Five Chevrolet pickup trucks, for use in the recreation, parks, and animal control departments as well as a utility truck are being bought from Culberson Stowers for $114,451.50. Two 4X4 Ford pickups for the engineering and street department will be purchased from West Texas Ford for $37,150. Robert Knowles originally submitted a proposal but requested it be allowed to withdraw because the company failed to include the power package group in its bid.

The jackpot was worth an estimated $4 million.

The numbers drawn Wednesday night from a field of 50 were: 29-31-33-34-36-39.

Saturday night's drawing will be worth an estimated $8 million.

Prairie village resident explains debris concerns

Dumpsters, trash and sewer drainage problems plague other Pampa residential areas

Portable toilets on a Thut Street lot and dumpsters stockpiled for repair, also in Ward No. 4, have drawn the ire of at least one neighborhood resident who complained this week to Pampa City Commissioners about these and other problems in the area.

Scores of dumpsters, portable toilets stockpiled on a lot and the city's dumping of street sweeper contents and limbs were some of the objects of complaint of a Ward No. 4 resident who appeared before Pampa's city commission.

"Nickelberry said the dumpsters, toilets and debris are 'very distracting.'"

Willie Nickelberry, 1104 Neel Road, addressed the commission Tuesday saying his Prairie Village neighborhood was also the site of "drainage and sewer problems."

City Manager Bob Eskridge told Nickelberry the drainage problems are being addressed through a study under way now. The study, which he said will identify what needs to be corrected to facilitate drainage, is funded in the current budget.

Nickelberry said the dumpsters, toilets

Applications now available to local agencies that need United Way funds

United Way is giving applications for 501 (c) 3 non-profit organizations to be included in the budget allocations process for next year.

Organizations may pick up applications at 200 N. Ballard, Suite 105, or call 669-1001 for more information on the process, said Katrina Bigham, United Way executive director.

Deadline for picking up the applications is Monday, Feb. 16. Those accepted into the budget allocations process will need to pick up another set of forms to be completed for the process.

Bigham said there are 10 criteria most commonly used by United Ways to determine funding eligibility of local agencies. The guidelines are broadly stated to provide the maximum opportunity for United Ways to review them in a manner that will best serve the interests of the respective communities.

Each criteria, listed below, is followed by a brief explanation which describes issues and implications surrounding their implementation.

1. Be Incorporated, Not-For-Profit and IRS Tax Exempt

Agencies receiving United Way dollars must be not-for-profit organizations that have been declared tax exempt by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) or have a 501 (c) (3) purpose. The United Way has the responsibility to verify that the recipient organization has been ruled tax exempt by the Internal Revenue Service. Evidence with state charitable regulations should be provided, where applicable. A copy of the agency's by-laws should also be provided to the United Way.

2. Offers Human Service Programs
The United Way of America Service Identification Systems defines various human services and programs that may qualify for funding. Many communities may limit "human service programs" to specifically health, welfare, and youth guidance programs. United Way funded agencies should meet the tests of accessibility (e.g., location of the facility) and availability (e.g., frequency and times of operation). The entity applying must be in service for two full years.

Simulated chemical spill set for summer

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

Expect to see wrecks and people sick with empty chlorine bottles lying around Pampa and Gray County this summer — at least a simulation of that scenario.

The Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee (CAER) is planning a training exercise that would simulate a chemical spill.

The exercise is to train personnel in emergency response. No final dates are set, but Ken Hall, the chair of the committee, hopes to conduct the exercise in June in conjunction with an exercise by Potter and Randall County emergency planners.

To make the exercise more realistic, Hall is hoping to have empty chlorine bottles at the "scene" along with a wrecked vehicle. Columbia Medical Center has expressed interest in participating.

He also said that the new sirens might be included in the drill, but had to report that they will not be up by the beginning of tornado season.

Hall had hoped to have them up 90 days after the contract was signed, but the company doing the installation said 130 days was the soonest the work would be done in June or July.

Nickelberry says it's his understanding the dumpsters are being repaired at that location but said such a large collection could pose a health hazard. He worries that children could

UNITED WAY,

3. Provides Community Service Based On Documented Need(s)

The agency/program should address itself to an identifiable current need, demand, or problem in the community. Services which are supported by voluntary dollars should be clearly defined and their impact documented by the organization. They should be offered to a target population or geographic local not presently served by existing programs.

4. Non-Discriminatory

Discrimination by race, creed, color, sex, age or religion should be prohibited in programs, service, staffing and volunteer areas. A written affirmative action plan for employment of staff would reinforce compliance with the Equal Employment Opportunity Act 1972.

5. Has An Active, Rotating, Volunteer Leadership That Represents The Diverse Elements Of The Community

The agency's board of directors of governing body should consist of volunteers who participate in the policy-making processes, represent the diverse elements of the community, periodically rotate off the board and meet, at least, quarterly. Members of the volunteer structure should not receive financial remuneration from the program (s) or service (s) they oversee.

6. Has Sound Financial And Program Management

Demonstrated ability to manage the finances of the programs/services in accordance with generally accepted accounting procedures. The organization should provide copy of its annual audit using an independent certified public accountant or accounting firm, where feasible. A determination should be made as to the convincing likelihood that the organization can or will meet its stated program objectives.

Financial And Program Information

If the above guidelines are satisfied, the United Way may be reasonable assured that the applying organization is eligible for voluntary support. Eligibility determination does not necessarily result in United Way funding. The amount of available dollars, the urgency of existing needs, and other key variables are important to the United Way budget allocation process and the final funding decision. Many united Ways require additional information from agencies as conditions for funding. These conditions are unique to the United Way funding relationship and are often included in formalized agreements. Examples of common agreement conditions are listed below:

7. Agrees To Support and Cooperate With The United Way In The Following Areas:

1. Fund raising
 2. Planning
 3. Communications
 4. Allocations
- United Ways' relationships with agencies should be one of partnership rather than one of ownership. This relationship evolves around four primary areas: raising voluntary contributions, planning for the needs of the total community, communicating their services to the public, and allocating the funds through an equitable and effective budget allocation process.

8. Agrees To Provide Timely

Agencies must obtain prior approval from the United Way regarding their capital and supplemental fund raising needs.

Efforts by agencies to develop sources of income should be carried out in such a manner as to assure that:

9. Agrees To Inform And Seek Approval From The United Way For All Significant Program/Staff Expansion Or Reduction

The United Way should not be expected to assume financial responsibility for any expansion or discontinuation of the agency's operations or facilities without prior approval and discussion of how this action will affect the agency's allocations, if at all.

10. Agrees To Obtain Prior Approval From The United Way Before Engaging In Any Supplemental Fund raising Effort

Agencies must obtain prior approval from the United Way regarding their capital and supplemental fund raising needs. Efforts by agencies to develop sources of income should be carried out in such a manner as to assure that:

"The United Way giving base in the community will not be adversely affected."

"Agency financing efforts are consistent with mutually agreed upon policies between the United Way and the agency."

"The United Way is fully informed and supports, in advance, special financing efforts undertaken by the agency."

Lewinsky's mother returns for third day of testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Monica Lewinsky awaits her turn before the grand jury, her mother is ready for more "emotionally draining" testimony on what she may know about her daughter's alleged sexual affair with President Clinton.

Before the grand jury resumed today, The New York Times reported that prosecutors had issued subpoenas for members of the Secret Service, setting up a showdown with the Clinton administration over what, if anything, the historically closed-mouthed agents should be compelled to reveal about the president's actions.

The newspaper said in today's editions that Attorney General Janet Reno and Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin had not decided yet whether to seek to quash the subpoenas in court. There was no indication in the story whether the subpoenas sought testimony from current agents, former agents or employees, or just documents. The Secret Service is part of the Treasury Department, which has vowed to fight any move to compel agents' testimony.

As she left the federal courthouse on Wednesday, Marcia Lewis appeared shaken and red-eyed after several hours of testimony before the grand jury. A courthouse nurse was summoned to the grand jury room to briefly attend to her as the session was breaking up.

Her attorney said his client was expected to return for a third day of testimony today at a court house jammed with reporters. Despite the continuing media frenzy, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton predicted Wednesday that interest in the story would dwindle over time.

Earlier, it had appeared that Ms. Lewinsky, 24, would be summoned to the grand jury this week by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr. But her mother's marathon appearance has delayed Ms. Lewinsky's much-anticipated testimony.

William Ginsburg, Ms. Lewinsky's lawyer, said there had been "no negotiations, no contacts" with Starr on granting his client immunity from prosecution in return for her testimony. He joked that Starr "never calls... never writes."

Ginsburg said he had no scheduled day for his client's testimony, and he would not say when he and the former White House intern would return to Washington from Los Angeles.

Ginsburg said he would file a motion to enforce an immunity agreement that he contends was reached with Starr's office.

"We still have a cordial relationship," Ginsburg told reporters in Los Angeles. "I still respect them as lawyers."

Ms. Lewis was on the verge of tears as she walked out of the U.S. Courthouse after being questioned for much of the day Wednesday. She was instructed to return.

"It's an ordeal no one should have to go through," said Ms. Lewis' lawyer, Billy Martin.

"She was unable to complete her testimony, and her obligation to testify continues," Martin said later in a statement. "As you can imagine, this is a very emotionally draining and difficult time for my client, Marcia Lewis. No mother should ever be forced by federal prosecutors to testify against their child."

Clinton's chief defender, the first lady, predicted the allegations about her husband would fade into insignificance.

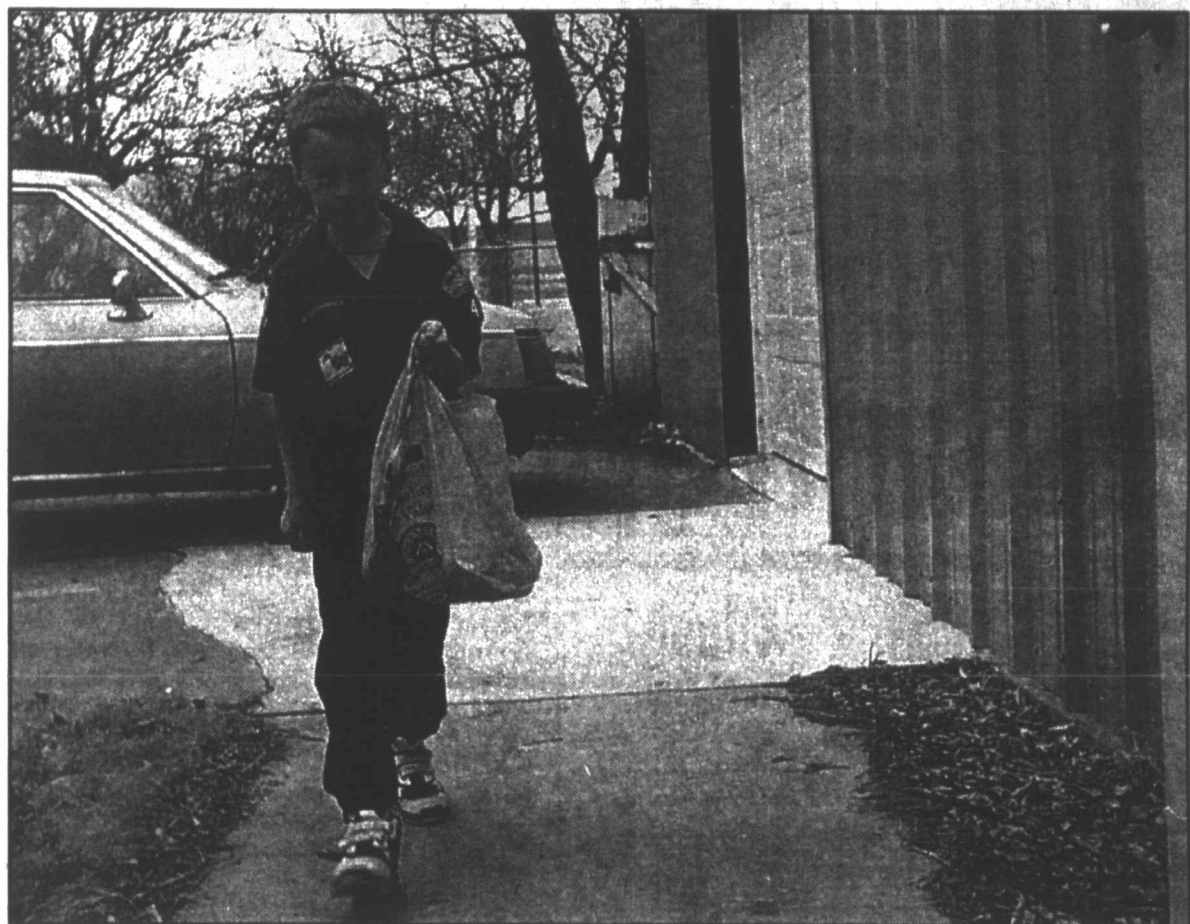

"I don't anticipate that this will evaporate, but I anticipate that it will slowly dissipate over time by the weight of its own insubstantiality," Mrs. Clinton told reporters.

"Americans are smart, fair-minded, savvy," said Mrs. Clinton, "and I think they see things for what they are, draw their own conclusions and know the evidence of their own experience."

House Republicans, meanwhile, were hiring more lawyers who could be shifted to work on possible impeachment proceedings if Starr sent the House Judiciary Committee evidence incriminating the president. House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., have discussed increasing financing for the panel by as much as 20 percent to accommodate the new hires, according to Republican leadership aides who spoke on condition of anonymity.

GOP leaders also have discussed dipping into a $4.4 million fund to help pay for impeachment proceedings, the aides said. The fund was set up to cover unexpected investigative costs.

Attorney General Janet Reno asks special prosecutor probe of Babbitt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Janet Reno wants a special prosecutor to examine whether Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt lied to Congress about an Indian casino dispute, but she urged that the investigation not expand into a broader inquiry into campaign finance abuses.

Several Republican lawmakers predicted, however, that the Babbitt investigation could open the door to an examination of "the larger picture" of Democratic fund raising during the 1996 election.

It is the first time a special prosecutor has been named in connection with the fund-raising controversy that has been the subject of congressional hearings and a Justice Department investigation.

Reno requested the limited independent counsel investigation Wednesday after concluding that Babbitt "may have testified falsely" before Congress about allegations that a senior White House official may have pressured him into rejecting a Wisconsin casino license in 1995. Indian tribes opposing the casino later contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Democratic Party.

Babbitt has denied misleading Congress or that the casino decision was influenced by campaign contributions. He has said it was made by career Interior officials without White House influence.

A special court must decide whether to name the independent prosecutor and outline the scope of the investigation.

Republicans have argued that the casino investigation was intertwined with a broader investigation by the Justice Department into Democratic fund raising because rival Indian tribes opposed to the casino in Hudson, Wis., lobbied the White House and in 1996 gave at least $286,000 to the Democratic Party.

Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, applauded Reno's decision. "It permits an examination of the larger picture of political contributions and contacts that make the (casino) decision suspicious," he said.

Reno made clear in her request that the special prosecutor should limit the investigation to the casino issue, even though she left open the possibility of a broader probe. She acknowledged in some cases the counsel "may encounter witnesses or subjects" involved in the broader fund-raising investigation and in such cases should coordinate with her department.

Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., chairman of the House committee investigating campaign finance abuses, said he regretted that Reno "focused her opinion so heavily" on the perjury issue, although he said she also "has left the door partially open to a broader investigation of the (casino) decision itself."

TPMHA offers parenting class

AMARILLO — BACK IN CONTROL, a parenting class for parents of the adolescent, is being offered by the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority Child and Adolescent Services from 8:15 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, February 21 at First Presbyterian Church, 1100 Harrison, Amarillo. The BACK IN CONTROL curriculum is written by Gregory Bodenhamer, a former probation officer. He is a nationally renowned expert on parenting difficult children. Staff instructors are Gene Ann Grant, BBA, and Janet Byars, LPC.

In the last 20 years, many parents have been by the BACK IN CONTROL program. "The techniques offered work in as little as a few weeks. The curriculum covers a wide range of problems—whether a teen is simply ignoring household rules, or perhaps lying or stealing to more harmful problems, such as drug or alcohol abuse or unsafe sexual activities. The course points out errors parents most frequently make, and provides tested solutions to averting immediate danger and preventing it from happening again. By following this program, parents will be in control of the adolescent and will create a loving, caring, and mutually respectful relationship along the way," states Gene Ann Grant, Family and Community Education director. "This seven hour class is for parents, grandparents, and professionals—anyone who either works with adolescents or has them in the home," continued Grant.

Cost of the class is $5 and the book for the course is $10. Child care is unavailable. Preregistration is required. All classes are open to the public. Call (806) 354-2191 to register.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Government is not getting any smaller

Is the era of big government really over? President Clinton made that claim when he said in his State of the Union Address that "we have the smallest government in 35 years." But is this really true? Is big government really a thing of the past? After looking at the President's budget proposal for next year, I'd have to say it is not.

If we look at how much of our national output the federal government consumes, it is now at the highest level since 1945, and the third highest ever.

If we look at the tax burden being placed on the American people, it is now at the highest level it's ever been, with nearly 40 percent of the typical family's income going to pay taxes.

If we look at how much the government will spend, it is now at the highest level ever, and will grow even more if the President's proposal to create 89 new federal programs at a cost of $150 billion dollars goes through.

The truth is, the only part of the federal government that's getting any smaller is our national defense. Defense spending has been going down for 13 straight years and — when measured as part of our Gross National Product — is at its lowest level since before World War II.

Now, what does all this mean for you and me? In a nutshell, it means we're less free and less secure, because the federal government is too big and is exercising too much control over our lives.

It also means that the era of big government is far from over, and that we've got to keep working for a smaller and smarter government that trusts the American people more than federal bureaucrats to solve the problems which face us as a nation.

Must we send troops to Iraq?

At a dinner in Los Angeles recently, Lady Thatcher was asked what the United States ought to do about Iraq. She replied firmly that Saddam Hussein could not be allowed to get away with defying the terms of the inspection agreement he signed at the end of the Gulf War, and that accordingly, military force ought to be applied if necessary. She added, wryly, that she regretted that her own tenure as prime minister had ended before the Gulf War began, because when it was over she would have "sorted out Saddam Hussein."

When asked whether her call for military action was confined to air power, or included ground forces as well, she responded that it included whatever it took. There is no point, she insisted, on half measures.

This is a fact that the Clinton administration has been extremely reluctant to recognize. It now seems ready to inflict military damage on Iraq through the use of air power, and we can assume that this time it won't be confined to the "pinpricks" we have inflicted previously. But nobody seriously supposes that air power, in any quantity, can eliminate entirely whatever nuclear, chemical, or biological weapons Saddam has managed to conceal, let alone bring the regime to its knees.

For that, only ground troops will suffice. It may be true, as some students of Iraq contend, that its ground forces today are a mere shadow of the Iraqi army that was so resoundingly defeated in the Gulf War. But it is equally true that the United States today cannot put in the field anything like the powerful army that Gen. Schwarzkopf commanded in 1990 repeated cuts in the defense budget have seen to that. Nor, even if Britain contributes a token force, can we expect anything like the assistance we received last time from our other European allies and the friendly Arab states.

Finally, it must be remembered that if we commit almost our entire available ground forces to a renewed war against Iraq, we will simply be inviting North Korea to launch its long-threatened invasion of South Korea while we are least able to respond effectively.

How did we get into this mess? I have never subscribed to the theory that it's all George Bush's fault — that he ought to have ordered Schwarzkopf to proceed to Baghdad, oust Saddam, and install a friendly Iraqi government. If Bush had pushed northward into Iraq, the congressional Democrats would have denounced the move and blamed Bush noisily for every body bag that came home. The domestic consensus, let alone the international coalition, that supported the war would have collapsed, with incalculable consequences.

Yet it is true that Saddam Hussein, playing what is fundamentally a weak hand, has managed to hang on to power, develop a stockpile of illegal but lethal weapons, and even produce fissures in the diplomatic coalition arrayed against him. So where do we go from here? Assume that Mr. Clinton orders air attacks. If he does, they will temporarily alter the correlation of forces in our favor; but they assuredly will not do the job that cries out to be done: oust Saddam, or at the very least change his behavior for the better. In the long run, therefore, the upshot will be a weakening of America's prestige and influence in the whole Middle Eastern region. Every nation in the area, from Syria to Iran, will conclude that America's measure has been taken, and has proven inadequate.

In itself, this will not be fatal. As the world's only superpower, the United States can afford to look pitiful now and then and still be confident that its wishes will not, in most cases, be lightly disregarded. But we will have lost, for the time being, control of events in the Middle East.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1998. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 12, 1809, Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the United States, was born in present-day Larue County, Ky.

On this date:

In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who had claimed the throne of England for nine days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1733, English colonists led by James Oglethorpe founded Savannah, Ga.

In 1870, women in the Utah Territory gained the right to vote.

In 1892, President Lincoln's birthday was declared a national holiday.

In 1907, more than 300 people died when the steamer Larchmont collided with a schooner off New England's Block Island.

In 1909, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was founded.

In 1915, the cornerstone for the Lincoln Memorial was laid in Washington, D.C.

In 1924, George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" premiered in New York City.

In 1940, the radio play "The Adventures of Superman" debuted on the Mutual network with Bud Collyer as the Man of Steel.

In 1968, "Soul on Ice" by Eldridge Cleaver was first published.

In 1973, the first release of American prisoners of war from the Vietnam conflict took place.

Ten years ago: The Pentagon charged that two Soviet Navy vessels deliberately bumped two U.S. warships in the Black-Sea as the American vessels sailed through waters claimed by the Soviet Union. Alexander M. Haig dropped out of the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Five years ago: In a crime that shocked Britons, two 10-year-old boys lured 2-year-old James Bulger from his mother at a shopping mall in Liverpool, England, then beat him to death.

Starr Chamber is now in session ...

Well, we've come a long way since Whitewater, haven't we?

You remember Whitewater. The alleged land swindle which has commanded the attention of an independent counsel for three-and-a-half years and devoured $34 million of the public's money.

Perhaps your memory of it is a little dim because the official investigation no longer has much to do with a real-estate scam. It is now a steamy probe of sexual peccadillos that threatens to bring down the president of the United States.

How did we get to this point? Politics and puritanism, dear readers. We dilled and dallied while the fanatics and the wowsers took over the country, and now we are paying the price.

I do not wish for a moment to excuse the holes in Bill Clinton's character. But I will remind you that he twice asked the American people for their judgment, and they twice decided that his talents outweighed their misgivings about his make-up.

I do wish to declare, for the fifth time since 1994, that Kenneth Starr is a dangerous and a scary man. And the fierce and cold-blooded manner in which he has pursued the investigation of Bill Clinton's alleged dalliance with a White House intern has done nothing but reinforce my concerns.

Take it from the top: In the summer of 1994, a respected Republican prosecutor named Robert Fiske was probing the Whitewater affair but was coming up with findings that disappointed the zealots who want Clinton's scalp. Republican Sens. Jesse Helms and Lauch Faircloth of North Carolina lunched with David Sentelle, a Helms crony who also happens to be the judge who chairs the panel which appoints special counsels, and presto, Fiske was sacked and Starr was appointed.

Joseph

It had nothing to do with Starr's expertise. It had everything to do with Starr's politics. He once worked in the Reagan Justice Department. He is a conservative ideologue. He eagerly supported the Paula Jones lawsuit against Clinton.

In his private practice, he continues to represent several of Clinton's enemies and opponents. He spoke at Pat Robertson's Regent University law school. He announced his intention to head up a school at Pepperdine University that is heavily bankrolled by right-wing moneybags Richard Mellon Scaife.

In the Whitewater investigation, Starr obtained the cooperation of convicted con man David Hale and threatened James McDougal, a former Clinton business partner who suffers from arteriosclerosis and manic depression, with 84 years in jail unless he also cooperated. Starr tried the same tactic with McDougal's wife Susan, but she resisted and was tossed in the cooler on contempt and remains there to this day.

If it happened in China, we would call it human-rights abuse. In America, it's a legitimate investigative technique.

Last summer, Kenneth Starr the preacher's son and former Bible salesman apparently decided that Clinton's morality is also within his purview, and he began peeping into the boudoirs of women who had purportedly bedded his prey. And now, of course, Starr has informed the world that Clinton may have messed around with 21-year-old (now 24) Monica Lewinsky.

Did you pay attention to the way in which Starr obtained his evidence? A "friend" of Lewinsky's gave him tapes of their conversations. Starr wired the "friend" and recorded two more meetings. A passel of prosecutors and FBI men busted the terrified former intern and, according to her lawyer, threatened to prosecute her if she didn't cooperate. One thing they wanted her to do was put on a body mike and sting the president.

Can you believe that? In what is essentially a political investigation, this sorry excuse for an independent counsel wanted to wire a frightened girl to trick the president. As if there were no difference between a rendezvous and a drug deal. As if Bill Clinton was John Gotti or Vincent "The Chin" Gigante.

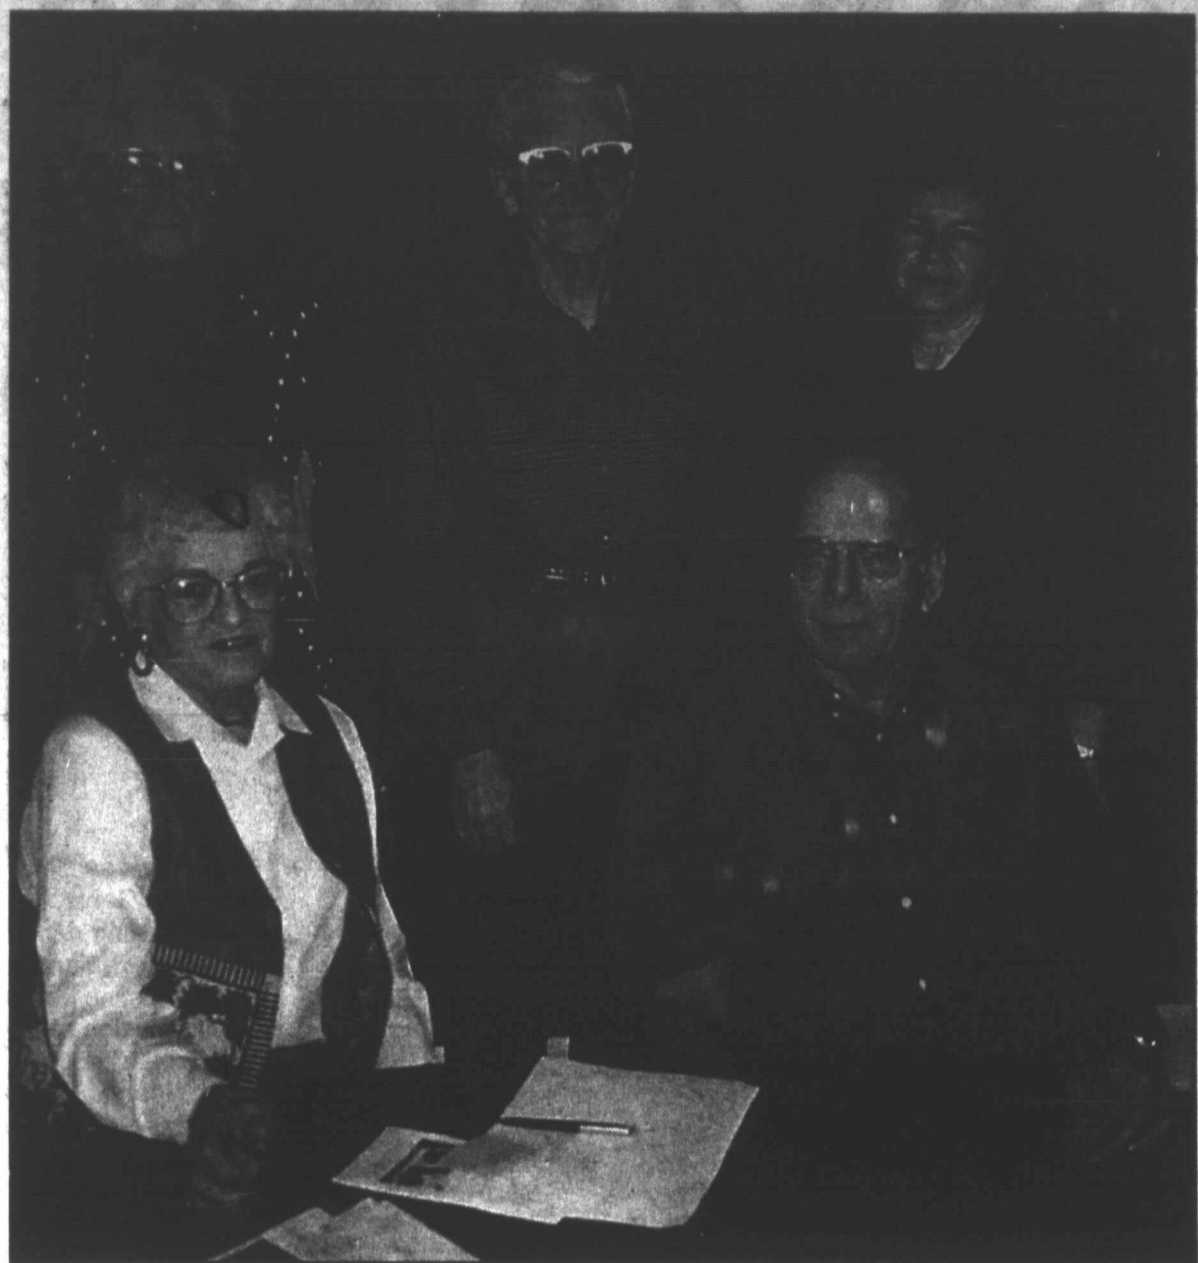

Welcome to the world of puritans and zealots.

Today marks 25th anniversary of release of first American POWs from Vietnamese prison

WASHINGTON (AP) — The gates at Hanoi's infamous Hoa Lo prison swung open 25 years ago today, disgorging the first wave of U.S. prisoners of war who had been tortured and starved behind its walls in retaliation for battling the communist regime in Vietnam.

Among the 135 or so Americans taking their first step toward freedom that day was Col. Sam Johnson of Texas, a decorated Air Force combat pilot whose F-4 Phantom had been shot down over North Vietnam nearly seven years earlier.

Johnson, now a Republican congressman from suburban Dallas, was among the celebrated "Alcatraz 11," who were singled out for especially brutal treatment because of their uncommon resistance. The Alcatraz alumni include former U.S. Sen. Jeremiah Denton and retired Adm. James Stockdale, who was Ross Perot's running mate in 1992.

A nation badly divided over Vietnam celebrated when its POWs returned home.

"It was a joyous time," retired Navy Capt. James Mulligan of Virginia Beach, Va., also a survivor of Alcatraz's solitary confinement and leg irons, said in an interview this week. "It was for us a magnificent experience to come home to a free country and be acclaimed like that."

Today, the U.S. House of Representatives pays tribute to Johnson, his fellow POWs and the more than 2,000 American soldiers who remain unaccounted for from the war. A resolution offered by the Republican leadership praises "these patriots for their courage and exemplary service."

In his 1992 autobiography, "Captive Warriors," Johnson recalled Feb. 12, 1973, when buses arrived at the prison sarcastically dubbed the Hanoi Hilton by its inmates and drove them to the airport where U.S. planes would arrive to fly them to their long-awaited freedom.

"We had neither heart nor energy for celebration, and so the only sounds that emanated from us were the sounds of long-held breaths finally exhaled along with a few soft, almost muffled sobs," Johnson wrote.

Twenty-five years later, the laconic Texan says his ordeal taught him above all that "It's okay to be in the greatest country in the world."

"And I tell you what, every time I leave the country, I think about it because ... those who have never duty, sir," Mulligan said. "That was a very, very emotional experience because he had not talked to or directly been with an American for three full years. I'll never forget that."

The surviving Alcatraz members, who meet periodically, are planning to attend a 25th anniversary reunion in Dallas in May along with other POWs.

While four of the 10 Alcatraz alumni who survived their imprisonment later tried their hand at politics — as did POWs John McCain, now a U.S. senator from Arizona, and Pete Peterson, the first U.S. ambassador to postwar Vietnam — Mulligan recalls little discussion of politics then.

"What we were doing was just to stay alive, day by day," he said. Johnson, for his part, says the men, fed up by U.S. policy in Vietnam, did discuss political activism. "You can gripe or you can get involved," he explained.

Mulligan, whose son is married to Johnson's daughter, believes Johnson's traumatic experience made him a better congressman. "He's got moral character and integrity going for him," he said. "Sam Johnson could be the greatest congressman in the world and he would be one-tenth of what he was in Hanoi. He really rose to it. It was a different type of challenge, a survival challenge, a test of character. Congress is a piece of cake."

Johnson, who bears the scars and limited hand mobility from bones that were mangled time and again during his plane crash and imprisonment, keeps a memento of his ordeal.

Stashed in a bookcase at his Plano home is the rusted enamel cup that was his most constant prison companion — both as drinking vessel and loudspeaker to amplify the tapping sounds that allowed the cellmates to communicate with each other furtively.

Twenty-five years later, the laconic Texan says his ordeal taught him above all that "It's okay to be in the greatest country in the world."

had their freedom denied don't really know what we have here," he said this week. "In spite of the problems we muddle through, it's still the greatest place in the world to live. And I think about that every day."

For wife Shirley, who didn't receive confirmation that Johnson was alive for two years after his capture, today is "a day of thanksgiving for both of us."

"It's not really a day that we have celebrated," she said. "But I know the guys will call each other, just say 'Happy Birthday' or 'Welcome Home.'"

The bonds between the Alcatraz gang "are stronger than any of us," said Mulligan. "You can't untether those ties."

A crucial link was forged when the emaciated POWs went on a hunger strike to spring Johnson from solitary confinement. Three days into the rebellion, the Vietnamese relented and led the Texan to the cell shared by Mulligan and Denton. He walked into the room "stood at attention with tears in his eyes and said 'Lt. Local officials reject plan to save threatened beach town homes

OCEANSIDE, Ore. (AP) — Local officials rejected an emergency plan to save dozens of luxury townhouses by building a rock barrier against a crumbling cliff, choosing to protect beaches instead of homes.

With an almost-certain disaster looming, the Tillamook County decision on Wednesday was a devastating blow to homeowners but an affirmation of Oregon's strict laws aimed at keeping the beaches public, open and natural.

"Some of these homes are going to go down, no doubt about it," said Commissioner Jerry Dove. "But we have to follow the letter of the law."

Citing concerns that the 30,000 cubic yards of rock would just shift erosion elsewhere, the three commissioners voted unanimously not to ask Gov. John Kitzhaber to declare an emergency and sidestep state law.

Stunned homeowners in the exclusive, gated Capes complex, where units cost up to $400,000, planned to personally take their case to the governor today. Among the residents who will make the plea is former U.S. Sen. Mark Hatfield.

Reached at a campaign stop in Portland, Kitzhaber said he was not inclined to intervene.

"It doesn't mean I'm not sympathetic," he said. "But if you do it there, then you have to do it for everyone else. I think that would destroy the integrity of our beach law, which is part of the state's heritage."

Oregon has long prided itself on its dedication to its rugged beaches. State laws make it difficult for beachfront homes built after 1977 to build rock fortifications, or riprap, as protection.

County authorities last week ordered the evacuation of 32 of the Capes townhomes closest to the crumbling, 170-foot-tall cliff after geologists said they could go crashing into the surf at any time.

Many locals said they warned Capes developers when the project was first proposed in the 1980s that it was built on the local garbage dump and a sand dune that was known for shifting. But Franklin Piacentini, the project's developer, said county officials "inspected and approved everything we did."

Geologists believe the erosion began during the storms of 1996. When the high tides of El Nino moved in this year, it only compounded the problem. As the base of the dune eroded, a 2-inch fissure opened up near the top of the bluff and quickly grew into an 8-foot gash.

One evacuated resident, Lora Crawford, spent Wednesday afternoon packing up her belongings from her three-bedroom unit, which is about 10 feet from the ragged edge of the cliff.

"It makes me very sad," she said, "I don't feel safe having my family in here. The reality is, we're probably not coming back."

Many Capes residents, including Crawford, were unable to get insurance for homes that close to the surf.

Coastal residents who live outside the Capes were concerned that protecting the coast for a privileged few would move the erosion to their beachfronts.

"I'm incredibly proud of my commissioners," said Kathie Norris of the Oceanside Neighborhood Association. "They made the right decision for the entire state."

Faculty Talent Show raises money for Student Council

By Amanda Potter

Tell me what you want... what you really, really want...

Audience members of the Pampa High School Faculty Talent Show may not have wanted to see men in drag, but that's exactly what they got. The Spice Girls, AKA Mr. Roger Reyna, Mr. Matthew Gantz, Mr. Charles King and Mr. Ben Rapstine, entertained the audience with their rendition of the popular song, Wanna Be.

"It was pretty cool to watch Mr. Gantz act like a fool, waving his fat around." Junior Jeremy Wright

The first-annual talent show, more appropriately known as "The Faculty Follies," was presented at 7 p.m. Feb. 6 in the high school auditorium. The show benefited the Student Council.

Acts ranged from serious singing and piano-playing to wild and crazy skits, such as "The Doctor's Office" and "The Spartan Cheerleaders."

Even though snow had fallen earlier that day, community members and students came out to see the teachers at their best (or worst).

"It was pretty cool to watch Mr. Gantz act like a fool, waving his fat around," junior Jeremy Wright said.

Faculty members donated their time to perform in the show. According to the "performers," a good time was had by all.

"I loved it. The best thing about it was getting to be someone other than yourself," Mrs. Kay Kibbe, English teacher, said.

The hardest part for most of the teachers was performing in an unfamiliar situation.

"I am used to playing on a piano," Mrs. Sarita Reeve, English teacher, said. "Playing on a keyboard made me nervous!"

For most faculty members, however, performing on stage was just an extension of what they do everyday... teach.

"Being on stage gives me a magic feeling because everyone is watching you," Mr. Roger Reyna, Spanish teacher, said.

The show was a money-making success for the Student Council, which raised $578 for the night.

"The talent show was a great success," Mrs. Sherry Seabourn, Student Council sponsor, said. "We are already looking forward to next year."

But the question remains... can next year's acts outperform the Spice Girls?

"Mr. Reyna is too sexy in a dress," senior Nick Smiles said. "Seriously, though, the whole show was really cool."

MIPT law nabs 5 violators so far; school officials see results

By Matt Hutchison

The new Minor In Possession of Tobacco law has been officially in effect since Jan. 1, and according to officials, the law has forced a reduction in teenage smoking.

The law states that any minor in possession of a tobacco product will be assessed a fine not to exceed $250. In addition, if a minor is convicted for an offense, the court shall suspend execution of the sentence and shall require the defendant to attend a tobacco awareness program. The law also institutes stiffer penalties for stores that sell tobacco products to minors.

According to Officer Fred Courtney, student resource officer, the law has had an impact on students.

"I've seen less smoking around school grounds, with the exception of the 18 year olds," he said.

Officer Courtney said that so far, five citations have been issued at the school.

Students disagree on the effectiveness of the new law.

"I hope that it will cut down greatly the number of teens wrecking their healthy bodies by using tobacco," sophomore Greg Hartman said.

"I feel that using tobacco is the biggest mistake one can make concerning his or her health."

Some students feel the law will not have much of an effect on nicotine-addicted teens.

"Even though this new law has passed, teenagers are still going to get tobacco from a different source," sophomore Celeste Arreola. "This law will have no effect on teenagers."

The effort by the Texas Legislature is part of a nationwide effort to curtail cigarette smoking, especially in the teen market. Recently, a California lawsuit against tobacco manufacturers opened a flood of secret industry papers. Many of them seem to show that the second-largest U.S. cigarette maker is scheming to lure smokers as young as 14.

The 81 internal documents from R.J. Reynolds indicate the company was trying to "increase its share penetration among the 14-24 age group" in 1975. One year later, a 10-year planning forecast prepared for the board of directors and stamped RJR SECRET noted that 14-18-year-olds were "an increasing segment of the smoking population" and proposed a brand aimed at them.

Most students, however, do not think advertising has much of an affect on the teen market. Most feel the urge to smoke comes from more of a local source.

"I don't think ad campaigns such as "Joe Camel" have any affect on teens," junior Boyd Yates said. "I'm not one to go out and say, 'Oh, look, it's Joe Camel. I think I'll have a smoke.' It's more an issue of peer pressure than ad campaigns."

MIPT law at a glance...

*The law targets minors in possession of a tobacco product.

*Citations are issued and lawbreakers are assessed a fine not to exceed $250. Those convicted may also have to attend tobacco awareness programs and community service.

*Five citations have been issued on high school property.

Girlfriend Questions Ex-Wife's Presence at Family Gatherings

DEAR ABBY: I am living with a guy (I'll call him Ron) who has an ex-wife and three kids. Whenever there is a family reunion or any kind of family gathering, Ron's ex-wife is invited. I do not like this woman and feel very uncomfortable around her.

Abby, since they have been divorced for nearly five years, she is no longer a part of Ron's family. I realize she's the mother of his children and they are a part of the family, but she is not. I am divorced myself. The only thing my ex and I have in common is our son, and I never get invited to his family affairs, nor do I even think about going.

What do you think about this?
HAD IT WITH FAMILY AFFAIRS

DEAR HAD IT: Apparently Ron's ex-wife has maintained a friendlier relationship with her former family than you have with yours. Therefore, if you are going to attend reunions and other family gatherings with your live-in guy, you had better learn to tolerate her presence.

Canyon won the A team game by a score of 47-44.

Pampa's A team was 4-8 in district play and 6-14 for the season.

SOCCER

PAMPA — Pampa High soccer teams will attempt to climb up the standings ladder when they host Canyon at 12 noon Saturday in a District 5 doubleheader.

In both boys' and girls' divisions, there's a three-way tie for third between Pampa, Canyon and Borger, all with 1-2 district records.

Caprock is atop the boys' standings with a 3-1 record. Randall (3-0) is the girls' leader.

GENERAL

AMARILLO — A Make-A-Wish hockey match between the Amarillo Rattlers and San Angelo will be held Sunday, Feb. 22 at the Civic Center. Money raised from the match will be used to grant wishes for special kids.

There will be an auction involving an autographed jersey, Dallas player hockey stick and a date with three Rattlers. Huck-A-Pucks will be selling for one dollar. Fans are urged to bring a $5.00 bill with their name on it.

The bills will be dumped on center ice and three names will be drawn with each person winning $500.

Harvesters take on Caprock in final tilt

PAMPA — Pampa will miss out on the playoffs for the second year in a row, but the Harvesters can still finish the 1997-98 basketball season with a flourish.

The Harvesters will be going for their third win in a row when they travel to Amarillo Caprock for the season finale at 7:30 Friday night.

With four players scoring in double figures, the Harvesters rolled by Dumas, 77-48, Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa's record is 3-8 in District 1-4A and 10-19 for the season. The win put Pampa in a three-way tie with Dumas and Canyon for fifth place in the district standings.

Pampa is gaining some revenge on the way out. The Harvesters avenged earlier losses to Canyon and Dumas in their last two outings. They're hoping that trend continues against Caprock, which beat Pampa, 55-48, in the first meeting.

Caprock toppled Borger in double overtime, 48-44, to wrap up the third-place playoff spot with a 6-5 record. Randall and Hereford have already clinched playoff berths.

Against Dumas, the Harvesters outscored Dumas 18-5 in the second quarter and never looked back. Shawn Young led Pampa's scoring attack with 18 points while Jeremy Silva had 15 and Lynn Brown and Zane Powers 11 each.

Garrett Barton 10 to lead Higgins. Fort Elliott has an overall record of 18-9.

Fort Elliott also won the girls' game, 57-51.

Amber Estes had 18 points and Amanda Shields 14 for Fort Elliott.

Stephanie Smith also had 18 points for Higgins.

Gailey new Cowboys' coach?

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers offensive coordinator Chan Gailey was expected to be named the new head coach of the Dallas Cowboys today.

A news conference was scheduled for 1:30 p.m. at the team's headquarters, presumably to announce that Gailey, a late entry in the race to replace Barry Switzer, will become only the fourth head coach in team history.

He's taking over one of the highest-profile jobs in professional sports, which also means high expectations. Predecessors Switzer, Jimmy Johnson and Tom Landry each won at least one Super Bowl.

Gailey, however, has been to four Super Bowls in his 10 years as an NFL assistant — three with Denver and one with Pittsburgh. Overall, the 46-year-old Gailey has been a coach for 22 years.

Gailey does have one thing in common with the first three Cowboys coaches: no previous NFL head coaching experience. Gailey has only been a head coach for two seasons at Troy State, one season at Samford University and for two seasons with the World League's Birmingham Fire.

The hiring ends a 34-day search by Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, an eternity compared to his previous two head coaching moves. Jones fired Landry and hired Johnson the same day he bought the team in February 1989, then needed about 24 hours to replace Johnson with Switzer in March 1994.

Winter Games turn to watery games

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — The Winter Games turned into watery games today, as driving rain and high winds left athletes and spectators soggy, forced more skiing postponements and sent an icy river flowing down the bobsled run.

For a Canadian snowboarder, the games turned golden again.

On a day when miserable weather once more played havoc with the Nagano Olympics, Ross Rebagliati reclaimed the gold medal stripped from him because he tested positive for marijuana.

Teammates and fellow boarders had appealed for return of the medal, which Rebagliati actually kept in his pocket while awaiting a decision. Fellow Canadian snowboarder Michael Michalchuk even unfurled a homemade sign printed on a restaurant napkin as he finished his halfpipe run today — "Ross is the champion. Give him the gold back," it read.

In the end it was a legal technicality that carried the day for the 26-year-old Rebagliati before an international appeals board.

Heavy snows that have plagued the glamour Alpine skiing events gave way to thunderstorms that boomed through the mountains and turned the village of Hakuba into a slushy, watery mess. Outside a hotel where the U.S. ski team was staying, at least 2 feet of water covered the access road.

Rivers of water streamed down the bobsled run, forcing cancellation of today's second practice. Cross-country skiers slogged on, with Norway's Bjorn Dahlie becoming the first man to win six Winter Olympics gold medals and Russia's Larissa Lazutina the first double gold winner of Nagano.

bronze medals, doubling the American medal take through five days of competition. And men's figure skating got under way with a short program that primed Russia's Ilya Kulik, Canada's Elvis Stojko and Todd Eldredge of the United States for a Saturday skate for the gold.

With above-freezing temperatures and winds gusting to 37 mph, forecasters had a field day. First they issued a gale warning, then a thaw warning and, finally, an avalanche warning for the Happono course in the mountains surrounding Nagano.

The men's downhill race was wiped out for the third time in five days, and the men's downhill portion of the combined had to be postponed too.

With nine Alpine events still to be run and 10 days left in the games, officials were forced to schedule doubleheaders.

"As long as the Olympic flame is burning, we can reschedule races," said Gian Franco Kasper, secretary general of the international ski federation. "We will do our best to avoid any cancellation."

The men's downhill, men's combined downhill and the two women's downhill training runs — all called off today — were rescheduled for Friday. The men's super-G, originally scheduled for Friday, was pushed back to Saturday, where it will be the first half of a skiing twinbill that includes the women's downhill.

So far, America's Picabo Street has won all the Alpine skiing gold medals awarded in these games — one. She took that Wednesday, when a rare day of sunshine allowed the women's super-G to take place.

"We watched it turn from clear to cloudy to snowing a little bit to blizzard to fog to rain," Street said today. "We could have gone out there and fished for polliwogs."

FIGURE SKATING: It wasn't the most inspired skating, but the men's short program did what it was supposed to — set up a battle of the Big Three going into Saturday's free skate that will determine the gold. Kulik was in the lead despite an almost indifferent performance that placed him first with four judges, while Stojko was second and Eldredge third. Eldredge, the five-time U.S. champion seemed to enjoy himself, but admitted "I screwed up the footwork, got a little off-balance."

The scoring is so close among the top three skaters in the world that whoever wins the free skate Saturday will win the gold.

"I'm looking forward to a battle," Kulik said. "All the guys are so good."

DRUGS: The Committee for the Arbitration of Sport, an independent appeal panel that has overturned International Olympic Committee drug sanctions before, did it again by reinstating Rebagliati's medal. The committee bypassed the issue of recreational drug use, ruling merely that there was no specific agreement between the IOC and international skiing officials regarding the drug. Rebagliati had appealed being stripped of the medal, saying he was merely exposed to marijuana smoke and did not smoke it himself recently.

CROSS-COUNTRY: Dahlie, undisputed Olympic king of cross country, bounced back from a horrendous showing in Monday's 30-kilometer race to win the 10K classical.

Martin can ride cart, court says

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — When Casey Martin sued the PGA Tour for a chance to ride a cart while playing the pro golf tour, he had only himself and his painful right leg in mind.

After his federal court victory Wednesday — the first time the Americans with Disabilities Act was invoked for competition in a major sport — Martin said he wants to be an inspiration for others with handicaps.

"I was doing this selfishly," Martin said. "I realized if I win, that would open the way. That's something to feel good about. I'd like to be a role model. Hopefully, I'll do a good job."

The Nike Tour rookie asked for a cart to accommodate his rare circulatory disorder that makes it painful and even dangerous to walk. His doctors say too much stress on his withered right leg could cause it to break, which could force amputation.

"I hope five to 10 years from now, if I'm still able to play golf, the PGA will lean back and scratch their heads and say, 'Why did we fight this guy?'" he said.

Martin's case caused a national debate over the rights of the disabled to compete in professional sports, and generated an outpouring of public sympathy, an endorsement from Bob Dole, and book and movie offers.

Sporting a Nike golf shirt that he donned after leaving court, the 25-year-old Stanford grad and former teammate of Tiger Woods said he would have lunch today with Nike chairman Phil Knight, who bucked the PGA Tour, and signed Martin to be part of the company's new ad campaign, "I Can."

The PGA Tour, which said it will appeal U.S. Magistrate Thomas Coffin's decision to the 9th District Court in San Francisco, will provide Martin with a cart March 5-8 in the Nike Tour's Greater Austin Open in Texas.

"The PGA Tour is disappointed with the court's decision," PGA Tour commissioner Tim Finchem said. "As we have said from the outset of this lawsuit, we believe firmly in the basic premise of any sport, that one set of rules must be applied equally to all competitors."

"We also disagree with the judge's prior ruling that PGA Tour competitions are places of public accommodation. In our view, the area inside the ropes at a PGA Tour event is no different than the playing field in any other professional sport, and is not therefore a place of public accommodation. The PGA Tour believes that the ADA was not designed or intended to apply to competitors in professional sporting events, including professional tournament golf."

Coffin faulted the tour for failing to consider Martin's individual medical condition. During the six-day trial, tour lawyers instead emphasized principles of fair competition, arguing a cart would give Martin an advantage and remove the fundamentals of athleticism and stamina that walking gives the game at its highest levels.

The judge acknowledged that the walking-only rule was "substantive," but said the PGA Tour failed to prove that waiving the rule for Martin alone would fundamentally alter competition.

As for the argument that walking the course is a test of stamina, Coffin said walking 18 holes over a period of five hours is "not significantly taxing" for an able-bodied person.

"The fatigue level from his condition is easily greater than of an able-bodied person walking the same course," Coffin said.

PGA Tour stars say they see trouble ahead. Fred Couples, with a chronically sore back, said it's "much easier to play golf riding a cart. 'I don't understand how anyone can say, in golf, you don't expend any energy playing it,'" said Couples, in Honolulu for the Hawaiian Open. "That's the biggest farce in the world. That's the only thing that irritates me about this."

Added Paul Azinger, "Why is it for only one guy? If a guy really needs a cart to get around, then there are a lot of other guys that could use a golf cart as well."

"I guess some of the questions some of the players have had, but not me, is does he take a wheelchair from the 18th green to his car?" Martin said he hopes to live up to the public's expectations of him now, and doesn't want to be treated as an outcast.

"The public has spoken, the courts have spoken, you'd think they'd get it."

Top-scorer Nailon finds his focus with Horned Frogs

FORT WORTH, Texas — Some afternoons while walking across the TCU campus, Lee Nailon finds himself the center attraction. Everyone seems to know his name.

Being 6-foot-9 and a star on the Horned Frogs' basketball team has that effect.

Nailon, a self-described introvert, responds to each greeting with a smile and wave of the hand or nod of his head.

As for conversation, that's reserved only for those within his inner circle — family, teammates, coaches, a few select friends and some professors and administrators he has encountered during his two semesters on campus.

"Away from the court, I'm really just a quiet guy," said the soft-spoken Nailon. "I usually walk to class alone, and in the cafeteria, I eat by myself."

"I've never really been a talkative guy. I just sit back and soak it all in. I really think the best way I communicate with people is to listen."

As TCU's leading scorer, Nailon has had few uneasy moments on the court. Away from basketball, though, things have sometimes been more uncertain.

A wayward slip as a teenager in South Bend, Ind., earned him a trip to Austin for a little disciplinary one-on-one with his uncle. He also took a back-and-forth route between junior colleges over a three-year period.

But the latest off-the-court situation Nailon faced involved him pleading no contest Jan. 14 to misdemeanor assault charges for choking and assaulting his girlfriend, Marti Dashawn Bell.

Nailon has overcome each situation by focusing on his love of basketball and with a little help from the stern hand of people central to his life.

"Lee has never been some bad kid or out-of-control person," said Tom DeBaets, who coached Nailon at Clay High School in South Bend. "He's just sometimes not always made the smartest decision."

The altercation in the dorm last month could have cost Nailon his scholarship and a promising basketball career. From the university, Nailon received a one-game suspension. From the judicial system, he received a one-year deferred sentence and was ordered to attend anger control counseling, as well as pay $165 in court costs. The whole ordeal will be erased from his record in a year as long as he complies with the sentence.

Nailon said he is not comfortable with the public perception of him as an abuser. Despite his plea, which allowed him to avoid a longer suspension from the team if the investigation into the charges had been lengthy, Nailon still disputes Bell's account of the incident.

"That was definitely one of the more frustrating times of my life," said Nailon, who refused two interview requests by the 'Star-Telegram once the allegations became public.

PTA councils to present 11th annual two track parenting workshops

AMARILLO — Pre-registration deadline is Feb. 23 for Amarillo's 11th annual "Parenting: The Underdeveloped Skill" workshops. Workshop sponsors are the Amarillo and Canyon PTA councils, and educators from the Amarillo Independent School District and the Canyon Independent School District.

The conference will have two tracks: a Spanish-language track from 6-8:30 p.m. on March 3 at Region-16 Education Service Center, 1601 S. Cleveland, and the English-language track from 8 a.m.-8:30 p.m. on March 5 at First Baptist Church, at 13th and Tyler.

Entering its 11th year of effective parenting, the 1998 English seminar will present 84 local and state professionals who will discuss 60 issues crucial to concerned parents. Included among the timely topics to be addressed are: "Gangs 247/365," presented by Steve Powers, corporal, Amarillo Police Department, crime analyst/gang intelligence officer; "The New Graduation Plans," presented by Marie Mote, director of Secondary Programs, Canyon ISD; "Take Time for Kids," presented by Jere Rolf, B.S.N., C.P.N.P., child health consultant, Texas Department of Health, Austin; and "Introduction to the Internet," presented by Eric Spellman, director of Training, ARNet, Inc.

Cost for the all-day March 5 seminar is $5, which includes a barbecue lunch catered by Country Barn Bar-B-Q and Steakhouse and optional continuing education units from Amarillo College. Cost for the evening seminar is $2. Registered participants also will have an opportunity to win two free airline tickets to anywhere Southwest Airlines flies courtesy of Southwest Airlines.

On-site registration will be accepted on a space-available basis for $10 when workshop doors open at 8: a.m. on March 5. Advance registration is advised due to limited seating. For pre-registration information call: Pinkie Porcher, event chairman, (806) 358-1757; or steering committee members Kathy Baldwin, (806) 352-3724; or Pam Miller, AISD, (806) 354-4357.

The four sessions scheduled to be presented for Spanish speaking parents include the following: "Ideas for Developing Reading Skills in the Home" presented by Laura Ramos, DLL Teacher Leader, Amarillo ISD; "When Love Hurts" presented by Rosie Escamilla, case worker, Children's Cottage, and David Almager, crisis interventionist, Family Support Services; "How to Build a Safe Kid," presented by the Amarillo Police Department; and "Changes in Immigration Laws" presented by Lydia Hernandez, Immigration Counselor, Catholic Family Services, Inc.

Cost for the Spanish-language evening workshops will be underwritten by Amarillo National Bank. Adult and student volunteers will provide free child care for infants and children to age 11. Door prizes and refreshments will be available.

On-site registration for the Spanish-language seminar begins at 6 p.m. on March 3. For registration information on the Spanish parenting workshops, call Marie Maestas, Star Program, Amarillo College, (806) 371-8027 or Sylvia Hughes, Bil/ESL Facilitator, AISD, (806) 371-6009.

Open house to feature award-winning collection

Carousel Expressions will host an open house featuring the award-winning Seraphim Classics Collection from 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Feb. 14 at Carousel Expressions, 1600 N. Hobart. Limited Edition Seraphim Classics Event Angel, "Monica - Under Love's Wing" will be available during the event.

"Monica" sits atop a cloud and radiates the classic beauty and elegance that has become the hallmark of the Renaissance-inspired collection. Her translucent wings, delicately tinted, seem to shelter the figure as she comforts the dove resting on her hand.

The Seraphim Classics Collection is based on artwork and sculpture from Renaissance masters, as well as classical angel art from throughout history. The project was launched in the early 1990s with the formation of Seraphim Studios, dedicated to creating a collection of "the most beautiful angels on earth." The result is the Seraphim Classics Collection, now recognized as the Number One Angel Collectible in America.

For the second year, Roman is dedicating the exclusive event angel to the good works and caring spirit of The Sunshine Foundation, a not-for-profit organization that grants wishes to critically and terminally ill children. Recognized as "the original Dream Makers," the foundation was established more than 30 years ago by Bill Sample, who remains at the helm of the organization. As a result of the 1996-97 Seraphim Classics Event Program, Roman donated a total of $50,000 to The Sunshine Foundation. The money was designated to provide dream trips for children and their families.

Those attending the open house will have the opportunity to learn more about The Seraphim Classics Collectors Club. Its charter year commenced Jan. 1, 1998. The club is in response to both dealers and collectors expressing a desire to have a collectors' organization. The new club will focus on the premise that helping others is the highest calling for its members.

Claudia Bowden, a representative of the company from Dallas, will be on hand at the open house.
