M.K. Brown Foundation presents $600,000 challenge matching grant

By DARLENE BIRKES
For The News

The M.K. Brown Foundation will make a challenge matching grant of $600,000 to the Pampa Center Foundation on a two-fold condition, announced Bill Waters, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the M.K. Brown Foundation. Waters spoke at a meeting Wednesday to kick off the last phase of the fund drive for a college building in Pampa.

The conditions set by the Brown Foundation trustees are that the Pampa Center Foundation must raise $600,000 in new money or collectable pledges of new money from others and award the contract for construction of the Pampa facility by no later than Dec. 31, 1998.

In promoting the challenge, Waters went on to question if anyone realized the difference Frank Phillips College in Borger, Wayland College in Plainview and even Texas Tech in Lubbock had made to those towns. He summarized previous attempts to have a junior college in Pampa during his more than 60 years as a Pampa and Gray With the establishment of average Pampa enrollment of County resident. The depression, WWII and then a state ruling that prevented additional units of higher learning to avoid proliferation had kept Pampans from realizing the junior college dream, he said.

areas of service responsibility for existing colleges by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, Gray County was included in the Clarendon College area. Clarendon College began servicing Pampa in 1974. The 400 students per semester exceeds the Clarendon campus enrollment, but the Pampa facility, an old elementary school, is severely outdated and inadequate.

Because of costs, the original plans for a new building of 54,000 square feet have been cut in half to begin the first building phase. The donation of land by Dr. Ray Hampton and family, the pledges and other donations currently total over $1.2 million — still short of the estimated need of over $2.2 million.

Waters named Pampa people who had vision — such community builders as M.K. Brown, Henry and Fannie Lovett, the MCarley family, David and Nona Payne, Inez Carter and Ruth Ann Holland.

"No other community of comparable size has been treated to such largesse — not Plainview, not Hereford, not Dumas, not Borger," said Waters. He believes the vision and dream is still here and he emphasized in his challenge to "catch the vision ... I don't see how we can afford to fail."

Donations and pledges can be made Pampa Center Foundation, 900 N. Frost, Pampa, 79065. Donations are tax deductible. Inquiries can be made by calling 665-8801.

PAMPA — Applications for enrollment in the 1998-99 Pampa Independent School District Pre-School Program will be taken Wednesday, May 20, from 8 to 11 a.m. for students (A-M) and from 12-3 p.m. for students (N-Z) at Lamar Elementary, 1234 Nelson. Children must be 4-years-old on or before Sept. 1, 1998.

Qualifiers for the program include: families who meet income guidelines, are on public assistance, have children with a documented disability, foster children, children who qualify for free or reduced lunch, children who do not speak English, and those who are homeless.

Children are enrolled based on need, not on a first-come-first-serve basis. Parents must bring the child's birth certificate, immunization record, social security number, proof of public assistance and documentation of disability, if applicable. If parents have a health insurance card or CCMS documentation, these will need to be presented with the application.

- James McManamon, 87, professor and father of a Pampa resident.
- Mary Allean Dacus, 94, beauty salon owner.
- Velma L. Little, 85, teacher and aunt of a Canadian resident.
- Ida Scott, 87, homemaker and mother to Clarendon and Skellytown residents.

WWII veteran offers students history lesson

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Staff Writer

Pampa Middle School students gathered in the library Monday afternoon to receive a history lesson without cracking open one book.

World War II veteran and curator of the Freedom Museum, Mike Porter, spent almost a half an hour with students providing a small piece of his wartime experience. It took some time, but soon enough the room full of students became intrigued with the retired air corps pilot.

Porter's lively personality and colorful tale adapted the horrors of a fifty-year-old war to a level suitable for 11 and 12-year-olds.

"How many of you are A students in history?" Porter began as the students settled in. "How many of you are B students in history? How about C students? Now you're in my class," he mused with the children.

Beginning with the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Porter began to unravel his story and his travels to Italy and North Africa.

The story did not end before Mr. Porter explained about retrieving his good friend and the best man at his wedding, from a POW camp.

"He didn't have a decent meal for eight months," Porter said. "He tried to eat leather while he was there ... take a piece off the top of your shoe and try chewing that!"

Students were given an opportunity to question Porter before dismissing.

"Were you a foot soldier?" one student asked.

"Yes!" Porter responded proudly.

He quickly answered all the questions there was time for and the children were on their way back to class with an exciting, real life history lesson under their belts, compliments of Mike Porter.

Fast-moving storms cause minor injuries, spawn twisters

DALLAS (AP) — Fast-moving storms have caused injuries and extensive damage at a lakeside park, destroying buildings and cutting power, while residents elsewhere in North and West Texas endured twisters and large hail.

Several people at Bay Landing, a private campground near Runaway Bay, received minor weather-related injuries Friday. A deputy said the park was extensively damaged, according to a Jack County Sheriff's dispatcher.

Six mobile homes were overturned at Runaway Bay Mobile Home Park near Bridgeports. No injuries were reported there.

A tornado near Rule in Haskell County damaged an electric substation and downed utility poles. Other buildings were also damaged.

A piece of post-war history was knocked down in Rule when winds toppled the Tower Drive-in screen at Texas' oldest continuously running outdoor theater.

High winds caused more damage near Aspermont in Stonewall County, with electric lines also toppled.

Power was cut to the Denton See TWISTERS, page 2

Retired doctor and wife still missing

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A week ago, Dr. Edward Martin of Abilene picked up his wife, Elsie, from the Windcrest Alzheimer Care Center, as he always did.

The retired doctor and his wife of nearly 50 years ate dinner that Saturday night at Luby's Cafeteria. They paid for their meal with a credit card and left.

Family and police have been looking for them ever since.

"We don't know what to think," Louise Kreis, the Martins' daughter, told the Abilene Reporter-News. "He usually tells one of us when he goes somewhere."

Police have received several phone calls about the husband and wife, both age 79, but have few solid leads.

Mrs. Martin suffers from Alzheimer's disease. Her husband, who has serious hearing problems, also has suffered from memory loss lately.

"It's quite believable they could have become disoriented and gotten lost," said Sue Davis, executive director of the West Central Texas Alzheimer's Association.

Linda Morrison, administrator at the Windcrest center where Mrs. Martin has received medical treatment for Alzheimer's, said Martin has visited his wife daily.

"That particular Saturday night, he didn't bring her back nor did he take her to the house," Ms. Morrison said.

"What worries me is that they are both very vulnerable out there to people who might try to exploit them, especially when no one knows where they are."

Martin, an internist and cardiologist who co-founded the Abilene Diagnostic Clinic in 1969, retired two years ago, said Dr. Zane Travis, a close friend.

"Dr. Martin is a brilliant man," said Travis, the other co-founder of the 38-doctor diagnostic clinic. "He would treat the poorest man in town the same as he would treat a bank president. He is a physician of the old school."

The Martins both have gray hair and hazel eyes. Edward Martin stands 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs about 190 pounds. Elise Martin is 5-foot-1 and weighs about 80 pounds.

county sheriff's office as the National Weather Service reported a tornado-producing thunderstorm moving into the county.

Some power poles blocked roads in Denton. Hail up to walnut-size fell just before 9 p.m., with two additional waves of hail of marble and pea size. A store in Little Elm, east of Denton, lost its roof.

The front of a gasoline station near Highland Village damaged vehicles when the structure was toppled by winds. A barn was destroyed near Sanger and a tractor-trailer rig overturned in high winds west of Fort Worth.

Downed electric lines blocked traffic on parts of Interstate 35 near Lake Dallas.

Fans watching the Indians-Rangers game at The Ballpark in Arlington were moved from the stadium's upper deck when hail threatened.

To the west, a twister was spotted earlier by Olton firefighters.

Baseball-size hail and winds up to 80 mph accompanied the storms generated by a slow-moving cool front. Some building damage and downed power lines have been reported to Wise County law officers.

Tornado warnings were also issued for Fort Worth, Decatur and Bridgeport in Wise County, Mineral Wells in Palo Pinto County as well as Stephens, Concho, Nolan, Dickens, Briscoe, Hall, King, Taylor, Parker, McCulloch and Throckmorton counties.

Thunderstorms produced hail up to baseball size at Murray in Young County just after 8 p.m. There were multiple reports of golfball-size hail in the Panhandle and West Texas.

World's most diverse seahorse exhibit opens

CHICAGO (AP) — Imagine a world where males get pregnant, dance every morning with their partners during pregnancy and go through convulsing contractions to give birth. Oh, and they're loyal to their mates for life.

So it is for seahorses, where males are the ones who should be celebrating Mothers' Day.

Instead, the tiny, mystical stars of fairy tales and myths are the ones being celebrated at what is billed as the world's most diverse exhibit of seahorses and their kin, opening today at Chicago's Shedd Aquarium.

Nearly 100 specimens are on display, some 20 species in all, at the "Seahorse Symphony" exhibit. The Chicago Symphony Orchestra has even created a 10-movement symphony titled "Seahorse Serenade."

Why such a fuss about seahorses? "They're just captivating, they're bizarre, they're beautiful, they're unreal looking," crowed James Anderson, Shedd's assistant curator of fishes. "These are really cool animals."

And one that may be on the decline." Seahorses live in nearly every ocean, and at least 40 nations, including the United States, are involved in seahorse trade. The creatures are ground up for use in traditional Asian medicine as treatments for ailments ranging from infertility to baldness; bronzed over and marketed as souvenir trinkets, and sold as pets for home aquariums.

The international trade takes more than 20 million seahorses each year, said McGill University biologist Amanda Vincent, a seahorse expert.

"Seahorses and their relatives ... are gorgeous in and of themselves and are threatened," she said. "They have as much right to be the center of our attention as tigers or lions and rhinos."

Reagan was absolutely right

In times of peace and prosperity, it is difficult to focus people's minds on seemingly distant threats or dangers. For a few brief hours last month, we thought we had detected a potentially catastrophic meteor heading Earth's way, but that turned out to be a false alarm. Had our meteoric menace been real, it would certainly have given a boost to space-based defense funding. But now, we've returned to our sleepy complacency.

There are other dangers out there. They don't grab headlines like an intergalactic stalker, but they could threaten huge numbers of Americans with nuclear, chemical and biological death.

Most Americans are under the comforting misimpression that the United States already has the means to defend itself against ballistic missiles. When Gen. Charles Horner, former head of U.S. Space Command, took visitors on tours of Cheyenne Mountain in Colorado, most were surprised to learn that the United States has the capacity to detect a missile launched at our country but absolutely no ability to stop it. Our only option is that of retaliation.

When President Ronald Reagan proposed an anti-missile defense system to protect the American population in the 1980s, he was met with disdain and furious opposition from the Democratic Party and the opinion elites. His idea was scorned as needlessly provocative as well as technically impossible. What Reagan called the Strategic Defense Initiative was immediately caricatured and dismissed as "Star Wars."

When the Soviet empire collapsed in the early 1990s, the Bush administration scaled back funding for anti-missile defenses, focusing only on battlefield systems such as the Patriot missile, which was deployed (rather unsuccessfully, as it turns out) against Iraqi Scuds in the Gulf War.

But while the Soviet Union is gone, the threat from missile attack is not. As former CIA Director R. James Woolsey put it on a videotape distributed by the Center for Security Policy, "It's as if we'd been in a 45-year struggle with a dragon. We have killed the dragon and now find ourselves in a jungle full of poisonous snakes. In a way, the dragon was easier to keep track of."

We continue to stand naked before missiles launched by any aggressor, as well as those launched accidentally. And we do so as a matter of national policy.

Since the signing of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty in 1972, it has been official U.S. policy not to defend our population against missile attack. The doctrine of Mutual Assured Destruction was our shield.

Whatever the merits of that approach during the Cold War (Reagan found it immoral), we are now living by a treaty signed with a nation that no longer exists.

Moreover, as a front-page story in The Washington Post makes clear, the investment in missile defense technologies has taken us seven-eighths of the way down the road to a deployable system. We need only to finish the job. "There are no more scientific unknowns from this point," Shell Wald, a Raytheon weapons specialist, told The Washington Post. "It's just a matter of straight engineering. We are so close. I could taste it. It's no longer a question of if, but when."

When, though, is a political question, not a military or technological one. The Clinton administration would prefer to rely on arms-control agreements, like the Chemical Weapons Treaty, and limits on technology transfers. (Though the recent decision by the president to approve the transfer of missile guidance technology to China, against the advice of the Pentagon, would seem to vitiate that claim.)

Treaties have never inhibited aggressors in the past and will not do so in the future. By not moving forward on missile defense, we are wasting the billions already invested and failing the American people.

Grim reaping: Cutting capital gains tax

The novelist Thomas Mann once wrote that, "A man's dying is more the survivors' affair than his own." Without a doubt, the death of a spouse is one of life's most painful occasions.

As a matter of simple human dignity, the government shouldn't be standing in the shadows making the experience even more unpleasant.

Unfortunately, our tax law does just that. Under the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, Congress changed the law to exclude most people from the need to pay capital gains taxes when they sell their houses.

Specifically, the new act exempts up to $250,000 for single individuals and $500,000 for married couples on the gain realized from the sale of a home. For instance, if you paid $85,000 for your house and sold it for $114,000, no capital gains would be owed on the sale.

The act was a substantial achievement of the 105th Congress, because the old law imposed capital gains taxes on the profitable sale of any home no matter how humble, gouging people of modest means. This change in the tax code benefited a great number of middle class families as well.

But what about an individual who is suddenly widowed? Many mature couples who bought their houses in the 1970s, or earlier, have watched the value of their homes skyrocket. Many of these same people are retired and are now living on fixed incomes - vastly disproportionate to the value of their homes purchased decades ago. This is an issue that is especially important to couples who have been required to move several times over the course of their careers, something that is more common today than before. Under current law, a widowed individual, regardless of means, would be held to the single capital gains exemption.

In April, I introduced a bill that would provide a $500,000 exclusion from the capital gains tax on the sale of a home by a surviving spouse. It would allow the full $500,000 of exclusion for a widow or widower who has not remarried and would have otherwise qualified for the full exclusion.

Without such an adjustment to the tax law, many would feel pressured to sell their homes during the same year their spouse died, in order to qualify for the $500,000-per-couple exemption.

My bill would allow older widows and widowers to remain in their homes without feeling obliged to sell in order to avoid the higher capital gains tax.

At a difficult time in people's lives, they shouldn't have to fear an uncertain future. They should be able keep a familiar roof over their heads without having to worry about the tax consequences. As far as I'm concerned, this bill is a matter of fair play.

It also would simplify tax reporting because there will be no need for a survivor to try to measure the market value of their home at the time of a spouse's death. In fact, there would be no need at all to determine the market value, as long as the gain remains less than $500,000.

Why should a surviving spouse, who was married for decades, be penalized because their spouse has died? We can do little to assuage their grief. But we can refrain from causing them more.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
 Today is Sunday, May 10, the 130th day of 1998. There are 235 days left in the year. This is Mother's Day.
Today's Highlight in History:
 On May 10, 1908, the first Mother's Day observance took place during church services in Grafton, W.V., and Philadelphia.
 On this date:
 In 1774, Louis XVI ascended the throne of France.
 In 1775, Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain Boys captured the British-held fortress at Ticonderoga, N.Y.

 In 1818, American patriot Paul Revere died in Boston.
 In 1865, Union forces captured Confederate President Jefferson Davis in Irwinville, Ga.
 In 1869, a golden spike was driven at Promontory, Utah, marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad in the United States.
 In 1924, J. Edgar Hoover was given the job of FBI director.
 In 1933, the Nazis staged massive public book burnings in Germany.
 In 1941, Adolf Hitler's deputy,

Rudolf Hess, parachuted into Scotland on what he claimed was a peace mission. (Hess ended up serving a life sentence at Spandau prison until 1987, when it was announced that he had committed suicide.)
 In 1968, preliminary Vietnam peace talks began in Paris.
 In 1978, Britain's Princess Margaret and the Earl of Snowdon announced they were divorcing after 18 years of marriage.
 Ten years ago: An eight-day strike by workers at the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk, Poland, ended without an agreement.
 French President Francois Mitterrand named Socialist Michel Rocard to be premier following Mitterrand's decisive victory in France's presidential election.
 Five years ago: Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee visited the Norfolk Naval Base in Virginia for a hearing on the issue of homosexuals in the military; most of the sailors said they favored keeping the ban on gays.
 At least 188 workers were killed in a doll factory fire in Bangkok, Thailand.

Gore is stooge for smart people

Global warming is OK by me. I've always wanted beachfront property but could never afford it. If the environmental yahoos and Chicken Littles are right, the beach will come to me.

Unfortunately for my dream of sitting on the front porch and wiggling my toes in the surf, they aren't right. Since when has the dull prince from D.C., Al Gore, ever been right about anything?

Al Gore would be far more dangerous in the White House than the current occupant, who is a rake and a rounder but not really serious about government, even the bad government his wife advocates. But Gore? Gore is very serious. He's a Jesuit without a Jesus.

Beware of men with no sense of humor and doubly beware of men who try to fake it by reading jokes some staffer has supplied them. Gore has said explicitly that he wants to elevate environmental problems his screwball version of them - to the status of war.

And what, pray tell, is the purpose of that? War is always the excuse for the central government to increase its powers and to strip its citizens of their rights and liberties. Our rights and liberties are already in tatters, and if the government strips away any more, we'll be buff naked and likely to be thought "naturists." That's a crime in some jurisdictions. I don't know why it should be a crime to take off your clothes, but it is.

Charley Reese
 Syndicated columnist

Don't you go thinking I'm one of those nudists, though. I'm way too bashful for that fast crowd, and I've never liked volleyball even with my clothes on. Besides, sunburn is bad enough on your arms and back.

The dull prince has decreed that global warming is a certainty. It's not. He has said it threatens our very civilization. It does not. There is no scientific consensus that abnormal global warming is taking place or that, should an increase in average temperatures occur, it would cause any harm.

The global temperature has fluctuated a good bit over the eons (remember the Ice Ages?), and according to Thomas Gale Moore, in his new book, "Climate of Fear: Why We Shouldn't Worry About Global Warming," mankind has thrived during the warming periods and generally shriveled during the colder periods.

That makes sense. You don't see folks migrating up to the poles and pushing aside the polar bears and penguins. You see 'em hanging close to the equator, so to speak, where it's warm.

The question of global warming is a climatological question. When you hear the heated rhetoric of political demagoguery and extremism being applied to scientific questions you should be warned that predators slobbering for power are on the prowl. If you lose your liberty, you will lose your prosperity because liberty is the cause, not the effect, of prosperity. And, trust me, prosperity for great numbers of folks is impossible without fossil fuel energy and plenty of it.

Of course, for folks of my generation who now have longer pasts than they do futures, it's not a big problem. We've got enough stashed away to keep us in bourbon, barbecue and bullets for as long as we will need any of those things.

It's you folks with long futures who had better get your heads out of your TV sets, drop your brains into drive and straighten out this political mess. If you don't, you're going to end up with miserable lives.

War and poverty are the norm in human existence. Peace and prosperity are the exception. My generation, with our Celtic luck, have probably used up all the peace and prosperity that normally occurs in a 500 year period.

So odds are against you, even without people like Gore whose ambition far exceeds their common sense.

Gore's inbred self-righteousness makes him a perfect stooge for smart people who know how to play the power game from behind the scenes. Forget global warming; put his lust for office in the Deepfreeze.

84-year-old roper nominated for award

By KERRI GINIS
The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas — It may take 84-year-old Roy "Tuffy" Overturf a little longer to get around these days, but he can still rope a calf in under 20 seconds.

Overturf's age hasn't stopped him from saddling up his favorite horse, Jolly Freckles, and roping one of the eight calves in the small dirt arena behind his north Odessa home.

"My arthritis hurts me a little bit more, but I'm gonna keep doing this as long as I can," said Overturf, a self-described "old cowboy" in boots, Wranglers and a roping championship belt buckle.

He rides every day and practices his roping on sawhorses located in his backyard amidst the rows of horse and calf stables. "I do it every day. We just play sometimes," he said.

Because of Overturf's active lifestyle, he was nominated for the 1998 Ageless Hero award given by the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association. The award recognizes the vitality and promise in senior citizens.

Overturf and Odessa attorney Marc May, who nominated Overturf for the award, will attend an awards banquet Monday in Chicago. Former President George Bush will attend.

May said he nominated Overturf because of his desire to remain active, despite his age.

"It's amazing to me that he can even climb on a horse at his age, nevertheless do what he does," May said. "He's just a fine guy to be around."

May said Tuffy has helped him improve upon his roping skills and has been a good friend for the past three years.

"He's taught me a lot," he said. "Anyone in Odessa who knows anything about roping knows Tuffy."

A modest Overturf does not feel he is deserving of any recognition.

"It's all right," he said. "I have roped a lot of calves in my life."

The award banquet coincides with the airing of a PBS documentary "Ageless Heroes," which will highlight eight older Americans who redefine what it means to grow old.

Overturf's active regime may surprise some, but Overturf says he is just doing what he's done for the past 60 years.

Calf-roping started out as something to fill time for Overturf and his oil-field buddies, who eventually formed a roping club in Penwell.

But soon enough, he was entering competitions and dragging his wife of 63 years, Gussie, and their two sons to tournaments in Oklahoma, New Mexico and other Texas cities.

"You're gonna get tired of doing that, but I enjoyed it as much as everything else we ever did," said Gussie Overturf.

Over the years, Overturf has won numerous items in roping contests including three saddles, boots, blankets and trophies in addition to prize money.

He is now a member of the National Old Timers Calf Roping Association, where he competes with about 300 other members.

Because his wife was ill the past year, Overturf took a break from competition, but he did watch some of the younger calf-roping competitions.

He said there are some differences from the old-timers' competitions. Overturf said the calves used are smaller and they are not let out as far before they are roped.

Calf-roping has become a family tradition. His sons and grandchildren are now competing themselves.

Overturf said he doesn't have any tips for successful calf-roping, just lots of practice.

"The horse is 85 to 90 percent of the deal. But it is done by experience. Just by getting out there and doing it," he said.

And Overturf hopes he can keep getting out there and doing it for a long time to come.

"As long as I'm able, I'll do it," he said.

GOP congressman under fire for handling of Clinton investigation

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Burton had some advice for himself when he took over the House investigation into President Clinton's campaign finances more than a year ago: Don't throw any bombs, lose the "pit bull" reputation.

"Give me a chance," the Republican congressman said then, "and if I don't do what I say, then you can really cut me up."

Well, the knives are out. With his aggressive pursuit of the president, Burton has become a favorite whipping boy for the Democrats. Even some Republicans are piling on, calling his tactics counterproductive.

Mistakes were made, the eight-term Indiana congressman acknowledges.

Most recently, there was his committee's release of excerpted prison conversations by Whitewater figure Webster Hubbell. Burton was forced to fire his top investigator this week after being criticized for failing initially to release some portions favorable to the Clintons.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich called the whole episode embarrassing.

Burton's reference last month to Clinton as a "scumbag" prompted another outcry. The 59-year-old congressman admitted to a poor choice of words but didn't back off, saying he doesn't believe Clinton is "a man of integrity."

Burton's supporters say it is only natural for him to fight back after a steady stream of attacks from Democrats going all out to distract people from presidential misconduct.

"Dan did have the image of being sort of a pit bull, but he's done remarkably well at restraining it most of the time," says former Rep. William Clinger, whom Burton replaced as chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee 16 months ago. "I suspect I would be equally ticked off at this stage of the game if I were in that seat."

Burton's younger brother says, "It's just Dan's nature to come out fighting" when challenged.

"If he thinks he's right, he'll fight to the death," said Woody Burton, a state legislator in Indiana who talks to his brother almost every night.

The younger Burton said his brother's doggedness has its root in their ragtag upbringing under an abusive father who moved the family to 38 states before their mother finally left him. Thirteen-year-old Dan, baby-sitting his younger brother and sister one day, later faced down his father with a shotgun when he showed up on the doorstep.

"Dan did have the image of being sort of a pit bull, but he's done remarkably well at restraining it most of the time," says former Rep. William Clinger, whom Burton replaced as chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee 16 months ago. "I suspect I would be equally ticked off at this stage of the game if I were in that seat."

"A lot of people looked down on us because of my real dad," says Woody Burton. "A lot of people would make comments like we were lowlifes and we'd never amount to anything. I think that made Dan an achiever."

Burton's Democratic critics say he has gone far beyond being a determined investigator to pursuing the president without regard for fairness.

Clinton supporter James Carville on Friday called Burton a "nut case" who was "shooting watermelons in his backyard."

That was a reference to the re-enactment of Vince Foster's death that Burton staged at his home (reportedly using a melon) to determine whether the White House attorney had really committed suicide.

Mike Harmless, executive director of the Indiana Democratic Party, says people are seeing "the real Dan Burton" now after a short-lived effort to project a more measured image.

He added: "This is the same Congressman Burton who called for dropping nuclear weapons on Iraq."

Burton did suggest using nuclear weapons as a last resort in 1991 before the United States sent in ground forces to dislodge Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

His White House investigation has led him to take on everyone from Hillary Rodham Clinton and Chelsea (for the cost of their 1994 trip to the Olympics in Norway) to Socks the cat (for the cost of answering his White House mail.)

Through it all, Burton has styled himself as a truth-seeker determined to push forward despite stalling and stonewalling.

"We just don't give up," says his brother. "Dan's not going to back down."

Snoopers sought record number of wiretap orders in '97

WASHINGTON (AP) — Law enforcement agents sought a record number of court orders last year to allow them to secretly listen in on more than 2 million private conversations, a government wiretap report shows.

The 1,186 wiretap requests approved by federal and state judges in 1997 marked a 3 percent increase over 1996 and surpassed the 1,154 logged in 1994. The total is believed to be the highest since Congress in 1968 started requiring the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts to compile such records.

As in past years, the bulk of the wiretap requests — 73 percent — were spurred by narcotics investigations. Crimes otherwise most often cited included gambling and racketeering.

The telephone wiretap was the most common device used but other surveillance tools were authorized as well.

Investigators actually installed 1,094 wiretaps, and each intercepted an average of 2,081 conversations — a total of 2.27 million. Only in 1994 were more conversations — 2.35 million — subjected to reported government snooping.

Federal judges authorized 569 wiretaps, state judges 617. The most orders were issued in New York (304), New Jersey (70) and Florida (57). California, the nation's most populous state, ranked fifth with 29 authorized requests. Pennsylvania was fourth with 42.

In all, 23 of the 42 states in which courts can authorize wiretapping reported at least one such authorization last year.

Under federal law, prosecutors who apply for court permission to install wiretaps are required to submit reports unless a court order is issued with the consent of one of the parties whose conversations are to be intercepted.

Financier gets 10 years for $10 million swindle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A financial adviser who bilked investors out of more than $10 million was sentenced to 10 years and a month in federal prison.

U.S. District Court Judge Fern Smith said Thursday that British embezzler Donald M. Bickerstaff didn't care about his victims' loss, only his personal gain.

She read statements from victims including a 75-year-old woman, blinded by diabetes and living with a dying husband, who said she fears being forced out of her home after Bickerstaff took $327,000, "every penny my husband and I saved our entire lives."

Smith ordered Bickerstaff to repay his 70 victims. Authorities have recovered about $900,000 in assets, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Crowe said.

Fuhrman names Kennedy nephew in 1975 slaying

By DENISE LAVOIE
Associated Press Writer

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — A new book by former Los Angeles Detective Mark Fuhrman on the unsolved 1975 slaying of a 15-year-old girl in Greenwich names a nephew of Robert and Ethel Kennedy as the killer.

In "Murder in Greenwich," Fuhrman suggests that deference to a powerful family led police and prosecutors to bungle the case.

The book, which won't hit store shelves until next week, is already drawing scathing criticism from many of its targets.

"Fuhrman has the luxury of not having to back up anything he says so he can name anybody he wants and he can say anything he wants in that book," said Frank Garr, a state investigator and former Greenwich detective who has worked on the case since 1976. He said the book is "loaded with inaccuracies."

Martha Moxley was beaten to death with a golf club on Oct. 30, 1975, on the grounds of her family's mansion in Greenwich. In his book, Fuhrman says he believes Michael Skakel killed Martha.

Skakel, who was 15 at the time of the murder, is the son of Rushton Skakel, Ethel Kennedy's brother. The Skakel family lived near the Moxleys in Belle Haven, an exclusive gated community.

Investigators said from the beginning they considered both Michael Skakel and his older brother, Thomas, then 17, as suspects. Both Skakel boys were known to be romantically interested in Martha.

Michael Skakel could not be reached for comment. No telephone listing could be found for Skakel in Cohasset, Mass., where he lived most recently.

Tom Sheridan, an attorney who represented Michael Skakel in the Moxley case, did not return calls from The Associated Press. Emanuel Margolis, an attorney for the Skakel family, also did not return a call.

Michael Mone, a lawyer who represented Skakel when he spoke to prosecutors last year about his cousin Michael Kennedy and Kennedy's alleged affair with a teen-age baby sitter, refused to comment on Fuhrman's allegations.

Fuhrman theorizes that Michael Skakel flew into a jealous rage the night of the murder after seeing his older brother kissing Martha. Fuhrman claims Michael Skakel once confessed to killing Martha in a group therapy session, then quickly recanted.

Fuhrman, the detective who found the bloody glove in the O.J. Simpson case, pleaded no contest to perjury after being accused during the Simpson trial about lying about his use of the word "nigger." Simpson's lawyers portrayed Fuhrman as a racist and argued that he planted the glove.

In the book, published by Cliff Street Books, a division of HarperCollins, Fuhrman slams Greenwich police and prosecutors, saying they did not aggressively pursue the Skakels as suspects because of the family's wealth and connection to the Kennedys.

Fuhrman cites the police department's failure to get a search warrant for the Skakel house, even though the golf club used to kill Martha belonged to the Skakel family.

"They were intimidated by money. They did not want to intrude on this family," Fuhrman said in an interview Friday.

"I can find very little they did correctly (in the investigation)," he said. "I don't want to be smug or arrogant about this, but I obviously know much more than they do."

Greenwich Police Chief Peter Robbins said of Fuhrman: "His real intent was to make money. I don't think he was necessarily attempting to solve a crime."

Cocoa futures slip as rain falls

Cocoa futures prices fell Friday on the Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange in New York after meteorologists reported above-average rainfall fell in Ivory Coast at the end of April, providing needed moisture to parched trees.

On other markets, grain and soybean futures slumped as beneficial weather returned to growing regions, while orange juice futures rose.

Cocoa futures slumped after Ivory Coast meteorologists said ample rainfall was received in Daloa and Gagnoa, two of the largest growing regions for the important Ivory Coast cocoa crop.

The weather figures suggest that after a period of severe dryness, good conditions are returning in time for the development of the main crop. Pods soon will begin setting on the trees, and they need cooler, wetter weather to regain leaf cover and allow the flowers to develop into pods and grow. Harvesting begins in October.

Cocoa prices have remained strong amid heavy buying from chocolate makers and indications production this year in Ivory Coast and Ghana, which provide for 55 percent of the world's total, will be below expectations.

Cocoa for July delivery fell $13, or 0.8 percent, to $1,709 a ton. The May contract fell $33 to $1,692 a ton.

Grain and soybean futures fell sharply on the Chicago Board of Trade amid expectations clearer skies will prevail this weekend in the Midwest instead of widespread rains.

Drier weather would help farmers east of the Mississippi return to sowing corn and soybeans. Mid-range weather models also showed a drying trend next week that could allow farmers to rapidly catch up planting.

Wheat futures fell to profit-taking on the drier forecasts. The dry weather reduces the risk of disease in spring wheat-growing regions.

July wheat fell 3 3/4 cents to $3.12 1/4 a bushel; July corn fell 3 3/4 cents to $2.55 3/4 a bushel; July soybeans fell 5 3/4 cents to $6.52 a bushel.

Frozen, concentrated orange juice futures rose 1.3 percent in light trading in continued reaction to Brazil's announcement its crop will be smaller than expected because of bad weather and pest infestations.

The Brazilian Association of Citrus Exporters estimated earlier in the week that producers will harvest 298 million boxes of oranges, weighing 90 pounds each, in the 1998-99 crop year, down 8.3 percent from its January forecast and 30 percent from last year.

Brazilian orange trees have suffered from unusually warm temperatures and heavy rains. Citrus canker, a disease that decays bark and woody tissues, also spread this year.

July frozen concentrated orange juice rose 1.5 cents to $1.15 1/4 a pound on the New York Cotton Exchange. The July contract finished 6.5 percent higher for the week.

Cowboy cooking runs in the family..

By HANABA MUNN NOACK
Wichita Falls Times Record News

CROWELL, Texas — When pastures turn green, patches and stretches of wildflowers bloom and mesquites leaf out, cowboys start rounding up cattle and chuckwagon cooks come into their own. Skipper Shepherd is one of them. Like his grandfather before him, he knows how to feed working cowboys when it's spring roundup time.

"When he got so old he couldn't cowboy, he went to cooking," Shepherd said of his grandfather, Dick Shepherd.

Skipper Shepherd even has his grandfather's old wagon, a 19th-century relic of Matador Land & Cattle Co., painted green. It was originally used to haul bed rolls, Shepherd said. He added a chuck box and boot to turn it into a chuckwagon - the ranch term for a wagon to haul food supplies and cooking equipment up the trail or from camp to camp.

Shepherd, who works for the Triangle Ranch between Crowell and Paducah, prepares cuisine for the cowboys wherever their work takes them - spring and fall.

"We follow the cowboys," he said. "This fall, we were out here eight weeks."

Traditional early-morning fare is bacon or sausage, eggs, sausage gravy and fried biscuits and coffee boiled over a campfire.

For working cowboys, breakfast comes before the rosy dawn. On a clear morning last week, the Triangle crew ate in a tarp shelter strung with incandescent lights while a crescent moon crowded by two stars shone from the dark sky above.

The cowboys seem to do well on his grub.

"Nobody's got sick or died," said one of the Triangle bunch.

"Hadn't died anyway," quipped another.

Matt Swan, ranch manager, waxed serious and called Shepherd "an awfully good cook."

Shepherd knows what's on the preferred ranch menu.

"These boys here, they eat beans," he said. "I guess they'd eat beans three times a day."

He also knows what goes with beans — meat. On the Triangle, he had slow-cooked a beef shoulder clod all night in a barbecue pit. He prefers the cut to brisket.

"If we've got time, we bury that meat," he said.

Time is an important factor in his job - especially at remote locations where he has to haul in water and cook everything over a mesquite stump fire. At those camps, he works by lantern light in the darkness of early morning and late evenings.

"A lot of places we go, we don't have electricity," he said.

But he has plenty of lanterns.

Not many ranches are as traditional as the Triangle, Shepherd said. "There're not too many of these old wagons left around," he said. His was made by the Rock Island Wagon Co.

"It still says it on the back axle," he said. "You can see it real good."

Woman fascinated by the stories behind the tombstones

By STEVE MAYO
The Galveston County Daily News

GALVESTON, Texas — The Cemetery Lady will pick a mortuary record over a novel any day.

"They're more interesting," said Linda McBee, who has spent the past 10 years or so combing the island's cemeteries, piecing together the stories of the dead. Stories of a mother poisoning her children, a lover's quarrel and a story about a dead man finding his way home after he had been buried.

The man was an actor, McBee said. He was here for a performance and died in a hotel. His body was buried at Lakeview Cemetery in the 5700 block of Avenue T12. A flood pushed the man's casket to the surface and it floated away — "all the way to Nova Scotia where he was born," McBee said.

"People say it couldn't be," she said. "But I talked with a man that I knew who sailed along that route and he said the currents could very well have pushed that casket to Nova Scotia."

McBee admits that she has to do some guesswork based on what she finds in mortuary records. That's what she did when she came across a family in which five children died in the same year. McBee said from looking at mortuary records at Rosenberg Library, she saw that the mother had a miscarriage with her firstborn.

"I don't know for sure, but I guessed that this woman was going through 'depression,'" McBee said.

During one of her hundreds of trips to the library, McBee came across a record in which a man and a woman had died from gunshot wounds on the same day. With the help of one of the researchers at the library, McBee was able to find a newspaper article that chronicled their story.

"The couple had gotten into an argument, and the man shot the woman and later shot himself," she said.

McBee said people find her hobby a bit weird. "Some people say I must have been a gravedigger in a past life," she said. "But I find all these people so interesting."

Although some folks don't quite follow what she does, her husband Doug McBee supports her 100 percent. "I didn't understand it at first," said the man who has been married to McBee for 35 years. "But she's got a passion for it. And now I find myself down on my hands and knees helping her clean headstones so that she can read tombstones."

She plans to recover the inscriptions on the graves and write a book, her husband said.

McBee, 57, said her grandchildren also went to cemeteries with her. "My 4-year-old grandson was telling me the other week, 'Nanna we haven't been to the cemetery in a while,'" McBee said. "Now that the weather has gotten a little better, we will be soon."

Supreme Court upholds Austin's development law

AUSTIN (AP) — Strict building guidelines designed to protect water quality in Austin are legal, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Friday.

Austin voters in 1992 approved the Save Our Springs Ordinance. It limits construction and impervious ground coverings in areas that feed Barton Creek, Barton Springs and the Barton Springs Edwards Aquifer.

A group of landowners sued the city in 1994. They claimed the ordinance, placed on the ballot by voter petition, was illegally enacted. They also said it was arbitrary, unreasonable and inefficient.

A trial court in 1994 threw out the ordinance. But the 3rd Court of Appeals in 1996 reversed that decision.

The Supreme Court upheld the 3rd Court's decision on Friday.

"We perceive that the real crux of the (landowners') complaint is that the ordinance unreasonably reduces property values and requires excessive expenditures in order to comply with its provisions," Justice Greg Abbott wrote for the majority of the court.

Justice Craig Enoch wrote a separate opinion concurring with the majority.

"The Texas Supreme Court has embraced clean water, local control and the right of citizens to demand redress from their municipal governments," said Bill Bunch, chief counsel for the Save our Springs Alliance.

Abbott said the court's decision to uphold the ordinance has no bearing on the landowners' ability to challenge the ordinance as unconstitutional interfering with their property rights.

Under state law, property owners can seek damages or purchase of their land if laws or ordinances severely or totally reduce their lands' value.

But such a claim was not part of the case the court decided, Abbott said.

Brigid Shea, SOS executive director, said while the property owners again challenge the law, the Supreme Court has set a very high standard regarding takings by a municipality.

"People sure have a right to seek redress. But the court has established that communities have a very firm right to protect community assets. Water quality is certainly a community asset," Ms. Shea said. "The Supreme Court ruling is pretty final."

Tax rebates show continued economic growth

AUSTIN (AP) — The state comptroller's office Friday returned $236 million in monthly sales tax receipts to Texas cities and counties, a 9 percent jump over the same period a year ago.

Comptroller John Sharp said the taxes collected for 1,092 cities and 118 counties showed the state's economy remaining in good shape.

"The robust growth of the Texas economy still shows no signs of slowing, with higher employment numbers going hand-in-hand with higher consumer spending," Sharp said.

"Year-to-date, (sales tax) rebates to cities and counties are up 10.3 percent over last year," he said.

PAMPA — Hidden Hills Senior Golf Association held a 4-man scramble last week.

Results are as follows:
First place: Bob Swope, Charlie Rand, Howard Buckingham and Charlie Smith, 60.

Second place: Bill King, Bill Washington, Oscar Sargent and Gene Gates, 61.

Third place: Elmer Wilson, Bob Conway and Callan George, 61.

Fourth place: Howard Musgrave, Walden Haynes, Don Riddle and Jim Osborne, 61.

Fifth place: Whitey White, Charles Terrell, Wayne Jones and Harvey Malone, 62.

Sixth place: Leroy Morris, Carl Warner, Calvin Lacy and George Gamblin, 63.

Seventh place: Ted Erickson, Roy Porter, Glen Downs and Ed Langford, 63.

PAMPA — Today, the Pampa High girls' golf team departs for its history-making trip to Austin.

Never before has a Lady Harvesters' golf team advanced as far as the state tournament. Since 1985, Pampa has advanced as far as the regional tournament, but has always fallen short of the state meet.

This year's team is made up of seniors Melissa Gindorf and Shelbie Allison, junior Alison Piersall and sophomores Maggie Cowan and Cortnie Allison. The alternate is sophomore Stefani Harwood.

PAMPA — Jim Maher, 79, of Pampa shot his age at Hidden Hills public golf course on May 5. He had 39-40 for a 79.

BASEBALL

MONTREAL (AP) — Pedro Astacio won for the first time in seven starts at Olympic Stadium as the Colorado Rockies put together a five-run sixth inning Friday night to beat the Montreal Expos 7-5.

Ellis Burks' third-inning homer was the only hit off Montreal starter Dustin Hermanson (3-3) through the first five innings before Colorado got to him in the sixth as both Dante Bichette and Neifi Perez hit two-run doubles.

Astacio (3-4) allowed three runs and seven hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Pampa softball team honored at banquet

Lady Harvesters log outstanding 20-7 record in first official season

PAMPA — Girls' fastpitch softball reached a new level at Pampa High School this year, going from an intramural program to UIL (University Interscholastic League) status. Playing other high schools for the first time, the Lady Harvesters forged an outstanding 20-7 record under the leadership of head coach Rod Porter and assistant coaches Jamie Greene and Kelly Porter. The first official PHS softball team was honored earlier this week with a banquet at First Christian Church.

Porter, an 18-year coaching veteran, praised his team for more than their ability to hit, throw and run.

"We had some quality individuals," Porter said. "Ninty percent of them were on the honor roll and were involved in so many other activities. That's a tribute to their parents. It makes my job so much easier."

Members of the '98 team were seniors Keili Earl and Jamie Reed; juniors Kimberly Clark, Lesley Clark, Lisa Dwight, Lisa Kirkpatrick, Summer Morris, Heather Petty, Jennifer Quintana, Molly Seabourn and Kelsey Yowell; sophomores Cassi Scott and Kristi Walling.

Each player received a certificate of participation and a medal. Earl, one of the two seniors on the team, received softball's first Hustling Harvester Award.

"In some ways every player on this team deserves a little bit of this award," Porter said. Earl played most the season at third base.

"Keili was a very versatile player. She played almost every position and was also a very aggressive hitter," Porter said.

Before the season started, Porter pointed out to team members that they would have to accept not playing for a district championship this season.

"We're not going to be playing for any honors. There would be no all-district. It was going to be a team thing, I told them. Anyway, memories are more important than winning district championships. It's about memories. That's what it's all about," he said.

Porter did set a personal goal of having a 20-win season.

"That was a little selfish of me, but I wanted to win 20 games. Our 20th win came against Borger, which I thought was appropriate," Porter said. "It's something to be proud of. Not many teams at Pampa High School had 20 wins. However, the main thing I wanted was for everybody to have fun, including both the players and coaches."

Porter said a photograph of the 1998 team would be placed in the Pampa High School trophy case.

"You've set a high standard for future teams to follow," Porter added.

Snyder downs Harvesters in opening bi-district tilt

By MATT HUTCHISON
Sports Writer

AMARILLO — Snyder's Clay Berryman is perhaps the best pitcher the Pampa Harvester baseball squad has faced all season long. Allowing only two runs, three hits, and walking a measly two, while striking out a total 16 and earning his 11th victory of the season as Snyder rolled past Pampa with an 1-2 victory in the first game of their three-game bi-district playoff series. The contest was played out at Rebel Field around Tascosa High School.

Pampa sophomore Jesse Francis got the start on the mound for the Harvesters, and went through 4 2/3 innings before being replaced in favor of reliever Jared Prock. Francis allowed nine hits and seven runs during his tenure on the mound, but would have probably allowed less had it not been for four crucial Harvester errors during the first four innings. Prock pitched until the sixth inning, when he was replaced in favor of the young Cody Shepard, who finished out the contest on the mound for Pampa.

Instead of battling their way back from a huge deficit like they did most of the district season, Pampa jumped to a quick lead early but were unable to hold onto it: Designated hitter Brandon Hill produced the game's only Harvester runs with a well hit double smacked in the gap between left-center, driving in Josh Blackmon and Enrique Cabrales.

But that's where the offense stopped for the Harvesters, who saw at least two batters strike out every inning during the rest of the contest.

Snyder, on the other hand, collected 14 hits off of Pampa's three pitchers, led offensively by the man at the plate, Berryman not only pitched a heck of a game, but also went three of four at the plate, including a double and a triple.

The Harvesters, who fall to 11-18 on the season, drew the final playoff spot in District 1-4A after a heated battle for the seed with the Caprock Longhorns. Snyder's record moves to 24-5 on the year. Snyder drew the second playoff berth from District 2-4A. The only other 1-4A team scheduled to play a bi-district round was Dumas, slated to play Levelland in Plainview before rain forced the contest to be postponed. The district's No. 1 seed, the Randall Raiders, earned a bye past the first round of the state playoffs.

Saberhagen, Knoblauch make happy homecomings

Knoblauch, jeered all game by the Metrodome crowd, used his hitting, fielding and running to help the New York Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins 5-1 Friday night.

"I was very calm and relaxed out there," said Knoblauch, who asked for an offseason trade after five straight losing years with the Twins. "I didn't have to tell myself to tone it down out there. I didn't have to calm myself down emotionally."

Saberhagen, who won two Cy Young Awards and a World Series MVP trophy with the Royals, pitched in Kansas City for the first time since being traded away in 1991, and led the Boston Red Sox to a 14-3 victory. "Kansas City has a special place in my heart," Saberhagen said. "It's a little strange making a left turn (into the visiting clubhouse) off the elevator."

In other AL games, Seattle beat Toronto 8-3, Chicago defeated Oakland 5-3, Anaheim downed Detroit 5-3, Texas topped Cleveland 6-3 and Baltimore beat Tampa Bay 8-2.

Saberhagen (5-0) said he got an edge from a fan sitting behind the Boston dugout.

"He kept saying, 'This is your last inning, this is your last inning,' so he got me fired up," Saberhagen said.

At one point, Saberhagen merely pointed. "I said, 'Take a look at the scoreboard. It doesn't matter if I leave now. It's 11-3. You're worried about the wrong thing,'" he said.

Boston got 20 hits, its most since getting 20 against Minnesota on May 19, 1990.

Troy O'Leary hit two homers and Jim Leyritz also connected.

The Red Sox were concerned, however, that shortstop Nomar Garciaparra left the game in the seventh after landing on his right shoulder diving for a grounder. The 1997 AL rookie of the year was taken for X-rays with what manager Jimmy Williams described as a "slight sprain in the right shoulder."

In Minnesota, the Yankees made it eight straight wins and 22 of 24.

Knoblauch went 2-for-5, scored two runs, stole two bases and made a key defensive play at second base. With the score tied at 1, Knoblauch singled with two outs in the seventh, stole second and scored on Derek Jeter's single.

"It was nice to get a couple of hits and a couple of stolen bases," Knoblauch said. "That's nice no matter where you are."

Mariners 8, Blue Jays 3
Ken Griffey hit his 14th home run, tying Colorado's Vinny Castilla for the major league lead, and scored four times as Seattle won at home.

David Segui hit three doubles, tying a Mariners record. Edgar Martinez and Russ Davis also homered for Seattle.

Griffey, who went 3-for-3, hit a 440-foot shot into the Kingdome's third deck in right field. Randy Johnson (3-1) won his third straight decision and beat Toronto for the sixth time in a row. Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer, his 10th, for the Blue Jays.

White Sox 5, Athletics 3

Frank Thomas delivered the biggest hit of the game, jarring the ball loose from catcher Mike Macfarlane in a collision at the plate for the go-ahead run in the eighth inning at Oakland.

The score was tied at 3 when Thomas drew a leadoff walk from Mike Fetters (0-1). With one out, Robin Ventura doubled off the center-field wall and relay home beat Thomas, but he bowled over Macfarlane to score.

Mike Siroka (5-2) pitched a five-hitter as Chicago sent Oakland to its fifth loss in six games.

Orioles 8, Devil Rays 2

Eric Davis homered for the third time in two games and Baltimore scored five times in the seventh inning to overcome a 2-1 deficit at Tampa Bay.

Davis has hit five home runs in his last four starts. Harold Baines' pinch-hit, two-run single put the Orioles ahead in the seventh.

The Devil Rays have lost seven in a row at home and 13 of 16 overall.

Rangers 6, Indians 3

Juan Gonzalez hit an RBI double during a three-run eighth inning — right after the stadium announcer told fans to take cover because of an approaching storm — as Texas stopped Cleveland's six-game winning streak.

Gonzalez leads the majors with 42 RBIs. Lee Stevens homered for the host Rangers, who had lost four in a row.

In the eighth, Rangers officials asked fans to move from open seats when radar detected a big storm with giant hail bearing down on Arlington. The game kept going, and the storm passed to the north of the ballpark.

Reliever Xavier Hernandez (1-0) earned his first win in the majors since Sept. 6, 1996.

Angels 5, Tigers 3

Matt Walbeck hit a three-run double, Darin Erstad homered and Anaheim ended a four-game losing streak by beating visiting Detroit.

Angels reliever Pep Harris protected a 4-3 lead in the seventh inning, retiring Tony Clark on a fly ball and Damion Easley on a grounder to leave the bases loaded.

Cecil Fielder hit his seventh career triple in 4,856 at-bats, and first since 1995 with Detroit.

Astros lose, 4-1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeff Juden is no Kerry Wood, yet he and the Milwaukee bullpen had the Houston Astros flailing at pitches just the same.

"They're an aggressive team, I knew they'd come out swinging at fastballs, so I just mixed it up," Juden said after striking out seven in the Brewers' 4-1 victory on Friday night in which the Brewers handed Houston a bit of ignominious history.

Houston's batters set an NL record for strikeouts in consecutive games with 31.

The Astros, victims of Wood's major league record-tying 20 strikeouts on Wednesday at Wrigley Field, struck out 11 more times, surpassing the NL futility mark for most strikeouts in consecutive nine-inning games.

McGwire is fastest to reach 400

By The Associated Press

Forget about 62. Mark McGwire will hit higher than 400 this season — home runs, that is. McGwire became the 26th — and fastest — player to reach 400 home runs, breaking Babe Ruth's record by connecting in the third inning of the St. Louis Cardinals' 9-2 loss to the New York Mets on Friday night. "When people put my name next to Ruth's name, it still blows me away," McGwire said. "I'm still in awe." In the third inning, McGwire fell behind 0-2 against Rick Reed (3-2) before sending a towering fly that sailed just to the right of the left-field foul pole, his 13th homer this season. "I lost it," McGwire said. "I was looking at the third-base umpire." McGwire, who put St. Louis ahead 2-1, hit his 400 homers in 4,726 at-bats. The previous best was 4,854 by Ruth, who finished with a then-record 714. McGwire's homer broke a tie with Al Kaline for 26th place on the career list. Next up is Duke Snider at 407, but McGwire's age — he's 34 — makes it unlikely he will catch up with Hank Aaron or Ruth. Because of injuries, McGwire didn't top 140 games played from 1992-96, appearing in just 27 in 1993, 47 in 1994 and 104 in 1995. "I'm a living example that you can come back from really bad injuries and you can come back from a bad season," McGwire said. Elsewhere in the NL, it was San Diego 3, Atlanta 2; Cincinnati 5, Pittsburgh 3, in 10 innings; Florida 12, Los Angeles 6; Philadelphia 6, Arizona 4; Colorado 7, Montreal 5; Chicago 5, San Francisco 4 in 14 innings; and Milwaukee 4, Houston 1. New York won its fourth straight and sent the Cardinals to their fourth consecutive loss. St. Louis dropped to 1-7 on a 10-game road trip. After the game, Cardinals manager Tony La Russa held a short team meeting, then met with several players individually in his office, keeping the clubhouse closed for 30 minutes. "We're just in a serious funk right now," McGwire said. Preston Wilson, who made his major league debut Thursday, was 3-for-4 for the second straight night, doubling twice, scoring three times and driving in a run for the Mets.

Chicago grabs 2-1 lead on Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — There was no B.J. Armstrong jumping for joy and yelling at his former teammates as the Chicago Bulls reverted back to being the team of the '90s. "We realize this is a seven-game series and there is no reason to celebrate," Bulls forward Scottie Pippen said after Friday night's 103-89 win over the Charlotte Hornets that gave Chicago a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals. Michael Jordan, who scored 27 points, yielded to Pippen when a reporter asked if Armstrong's antics late in Charlotte's Game 2 upset at the United Center agitated the Bulls. "They came in and won a big game (Wednesday), but it was a smack in our face," Pippen said of Armstrong's dancing and finger-pointing in front of the Chicago bench after one of his clutch shots. "We knew coming in here we wanted to establish a defensive game — and especially stop their bench." Chicago's reserves outscored Charlotte's 29-13, with Armstrong and Dell Curry — the heroes of Game 2 — a combined 1-for-10 for two points. "I thought it was a game in which we played the most serious game of basketball," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "There was an intent with this team right from the start of getting on the airplane and coming to this city." "Taking care of their bench was very important to us because their bench really killed us in the fourth quarter in Chicago." In the only other playoff game Friday night, the Los Angeles Lakers took a 2-1 lead over Seattle with a 119-103 victory. The other conference semifinals resume today with Indiana at New York in the East and Utah at San Antonio in the West. Both visiting teams hold a 2-0 lead. The Hornets, with the fifth-best home mark during the regular season, were trying to send Chicago to its second consecutive playoff loss and its first post-season deficit since 1995.

Wrong day, wrong time for stealing

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Adam Guerra learned a lesson.

If you're going to steal something from a mall, don't do it when park rangers and police are having a meeting there.

A man attempted to leave Foley's at 3:05 p.m. Thursday with five designer shirts he hadn't paid for, police said.

The store's security officers said the man had bundled up the shirts and pulled out a weapon when they tried to detain him. They said he then ran out of the store.

An arrest was made after a foot chase by park rangers and police attending a luncheon honoring peace officers at the mall.

Guerra, 22, of San Antonio was arrested and charged with aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. He was being held in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

"This guy picked the wrong day to go shoplifting," said Sgt. Ernest Celaya, a San Antonio police spokesman.

The price of the shirts ranged from $62.50 to $65.

A. I stand 151 feet above New York Harbor and was a gift from the French to the American people. You can take a ferry and be near my feet on Liberty Island. I have a poem written on my base that says "Give me your tired, your poor..."

B. I am a famous skyscraper 102 stories tall. I was built in 1931 and was the tallest building in the world until 1971. I stand 1,454 feet high and have two observation areas.

C. More than 69 million people used me in 1996 to fly somewhere in the world, and almost 190,000 people travel through me each day. I have four terminals and cover 7,700 acres of land.

D. I am a 19-foot marble memorial to a president. I overlook the Reflecting Pool, the Washington Monument and the U.S. Capitol from where I sit in Washington, D.C.

E. More than 1.4 billion people have crossed me since I opened in 1937. I am 4,200 feet long.

F. I am the tallest building in the world. I stand more than 1,400 feet above Chicago and take up two city blocks. I have 110 floors and about 4.5 million square feet of office and commercial space.

G. I am a stone memorial to four presidents of the United States—George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt—whose heads are about 60 feet high. It took more than six years for a sculptor to carve me.

H. About 6,000 people visit me each day. I am the official home to the Commander In Chief of the United States. I have 132 rooms, 32 bathrooms and seven staircases. It takes 570 gallons of white paint to cover my outside.

I. I was originally established so early settlers could display their harvests. Each year, my outside is covered with a new mural made with thousands of bushels of corn, grain, grasses, oats, straw and wheat.

J. The third president of the United States started designing and building me when he was 26. I am perched on a mountain and overlook the city of Charlottesville, Virginia, and I am featured on the back of the nickel.

K. The Colorado River carved me out of rock and runs through my base. It would take you two days on foot to travel from my top to the base. Five million people visit me each year to see my overwhelming size and colorful landscape.

L. I have 38,765 seats and was the last major league ballpark to add lights. I opened in 1914 at 1060 W. Addison. Natural grass makes up my playing field and ivy grows on my walls.

M. It took 467 cement trucks a month to fill my foundation, which is 30 feet deep and 120 feet wide. I was built for the 1962 Seattle World's Fair and hosted more than 2.3 million people during the fair. I was originally named "The Space Cage."

N. Founded in 1718, I was a Spanish mission during the settlement of San Antonio. About 185 to 190 defenders used me to try to hold off a Mexican army of 5,000 to 6,000 soldiers.

O. I am a 14-acre estate that was the home to the King of Rock & Roll for 20 years. I am one of the most toured homes in America with more than 700,000 visitors each year. I even have a trophy building that includes gold records, awards and stage costumes.

NO WAY BUT HIS WAY

"And whither I go, ye know the way. Thomas saith unto Him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; how know we the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father but by me." (Jn. 14:4-6.) Jesus had been telling His disciples that He was going away. They could not understand why He was going away nor where He was going. In telling them that He was "the way", Jesus was reassuring them that He would show them the way to be where He was.

In Jn. 8:21-24, we read: "He said therefore again unto them, I go away, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sin: whither I go, ye cannot come. The Jews therefore said, Will He kill Himself, that He saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come? And He said unto them, Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world. I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for except ye believe that I am He, ye shall die in your sins." These worldly unbelievers were told plainly that, because of their refusal to believe that He was the Son of God, they would not be where He was.

The maid in Philippi declared, concerning Paul and Silas, "These men are servants of Most High God, who proclaim unto you the way of salvation." (Acts 16:17.) Thus the way of salvation is the gospel of Christ which Paul and the other apostles preached. Philip preached unto the eunuch, Jesus (Acts 8:35.) In preaching "Jesus", he was showing him the way of salvation.

Today, we have the same gospel which the apostles preached. It is still God's power to save those who believe it and obey it (Rom. 1:16; 2 Thess. 1:8.)

-Billy T. Jones.

Scientists: Appetite suppressor found in rodents

NEW YORK (AP) - Scientists have identified another substance in the brains of rats that suppresses appetite, a possible hint toward the development of a new anti-obesity pill.

The discovery sheds light on the mystery of how the previously known hormone leptin helps the brain control appetite.

It's too soon to tell whether the newly identified substance, called CART, will lead to a slim-down pill. But experts called the work a significant step toward understanding the brain's complex machinery for controlling appetite.

The work is presented in a recent issue of the journal Nature by researchers in Denmark, including Dr. Peter Kristensen of Novo Nordisk Inc., which makes pharmaceuticals.

El Progreso

El Progreso Club met April 28 at the Country Club with President Maxine Hawkins presiding. Ten members and a guest were present.

Maedell Lanehart presented a program on the Natchez Pilgrimage, a tour event each March involving 400 ante-bellum homes. The homes, built by wealthy French planters, are reminders of an era of gracious living ending during the Civil War.

Named for the Natchez Indians, the Natchez District above the Mississippi River was colonized by La Salle circa 1700. By 1716, wealthy and aristocratic French families obtained land grants and engaged in planting cotton. In 1763, England gained possession of the district then known as West Florida. Spain took control in 1779 only to lose the district to the United States in 1798.

The next meeting will be a luncheon at 12 noon in the office of Dawkins Energies, Inc., at 808 W. Francis.

Michael Zaslow, defiant in illness, returns to daytime television drama

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Once he started getting sick, Michael Zaslow could find no script that says he gets well. It must have been frightening. Then the actor learned this: Courage is something you have to improvise.

Watch Zaslow in rehearsal. Here, in the Upper West Side studio where ABC's "One Life to Live" originates, he's the one in the wheelchair, gaunt and poker-faced.

He used to play villainous Roger Thorpe on CBS' "Guiding Light." In 1994, he won the Daytime Emmy for best actor. Then a year ago, his health in doubt, he was fired from the show. Ah, life is cheap in the soap-opera world.

Zaslow, 55, is back. "One Life to Live," where in the early 1980s he played charming, mysterious David Rinaldi, has returned him to its fold, for a few episodes at least. Reviving his old character, Zaslow has the respite of a drama that isn't his own. He gets a script to mark and memorize today, then move beyond tomorrow.

Even so, the story line hits awfully close to home. Rinaldi, like Zaslow, has contracted ALS, the neuromuscular affliction better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease. Like the actor who plays him, Rinaldi can no longer speak. From his joystick-operated wheelchair, he types words on his laptop and a synthesizer solemnly voices them.

The scene now being blocked is set in the sun room of Llanview Hospital, where Rinaldi is a patient. It will open Monday's episode ("One Life" airs weekdays at 2 p.m. EDT).

From the script summary: "Dorian stares at David in disbelief and asks what he's doing here. David tells her to go away. Andrew tries to intervene, but Dorian perseveres and asks why David is speaking through a machine. She spoke to him last year and he had some difficulty speaking — but ALS?"

Then long-ago lover Dorian vows to tell daughter Cassie that her father is in Llanview. "No, no, no!" pleads David.

If Rinaldi is mortified that anyone might see him this way, Zaslow is thrilled to be seen. The rehearsal over, just ask him if he's glad to be here, doing what an actor does and made welcome doing it. Even the flat voice of the synthesizer lets Zaslow's feelings sing: "I am delirious."

And it's not some kind of stunt, says cast mate Wortham Krimmer, who plays the Rev. Andrew Carpenter. Zaslow is there not to showcase his own troubles, but to inhabit a character. And he's doing it.

"When he turned around to confront Dorian for the first time, that wasn't Michael Zaslow. That was David Rinaldi. Michael was playing David Rinaldi's life, not his own. The only similarity was the ALS."

Zaslow is making the most of the illness he and David share. "I am so excited to be bringing ALS to the public," he says, already the founder of ZazAngels, an organization dedicated to building awareness of the disease. (Its Web site is www.zazangels.com).

He explains, "I am blessed with my celebrity like Chris Reeve," with whom he says he shares a friendship that predates their respective tragedies. "So I and my family and extended family have ways to raise this disease to eye level."

Zaslow retreats to his dressing room where, with a bit of help, he hobbles to a lounge chair a few steps away. This is Bring Your Daughter to Work Day, and Helena, 12, bursts in and hugs her father's neck. Then she plops into the wheelchair and begins doing homework.

"I've been away from acting for over a year," Zaslow says, "traveling around the country in search of any diagnosis besides the dreaded initials." A few months ago, he learned the dreaded truth. He has ALS which, over time, leaves its victims unable to speak, then move, and, in its final stage, breathe. Suddenly, that seemed to be his governing script.

To the obvious next question, he replies, "Three to five years." Then he types this qualifier: "I know people who live longer and longer. And we are so close to a cure."

Helena is toying with the wheelchair joystick. Inching forward then backward in the dressing room's tight space, she is trying to turn herself around. "She already knows how to drive," says Zaslow. "A stick shift. I taught her."

Up and back, up and back. Helena doesn't seem to be listening. "I am thankful that I got to teach both my daughters to ride a bike," he declares. Calm yet still full of fight, he's a man no one has to script bravery for.

'Innocent, furry creatures' teach children non-violence

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When educator Kelly Campbell goes to work in the morning, she takes along the usual items: crayons, picture books, charts.

And something else — a puppy.

The cuddly young dog is essential to Mrs. Campbell's lesson. In an all too violent world, she tries to teach young children nonviolence.

Stressing that the puppy romping on the kids' laps has body parts and emotions similar to humans', Mrs. Campbell, who works for the Animal Rescue League of Pittsburgh, is part of a growing effort around the nation using pets to try to break a cycle of violence in some children.

"Kids never say, 'What do you want to do today? Let's kill somebody.' They start with something smaller and work their way up. They start with little, innocent, furry creatures," she says.

"I'm trying to make kids aware that violence is wrong, that it hurts the animal and that there's an alternative."

Several studies in recent years have linked childhood abuse of animals with later violence toward people.

Michael Kaufmann of the American Humane Association said that for years severe abuse of animals — "when a cat got doused with gasoline or a horse was shot" — was often considered a childhood prank. Instead, it should be seriously addressed, he said, "because that behavior doesn't go away — it escalates."

Abusing animals appears to be a significant flag of antisocial behavior, according to a 1997 study by Northeastern University and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The three-year study found that people who abused animals were five times more likely than others to have a criminal record and four times more likely to have a record of violent crime.

An FBI study of imprisoned serial sexual murderers found that 36 percent had abused animals during childhood and 46 percent in adolescence.

Frank Ascione, psychology professor at Utah State University, also has linked animal cruelty to violence against people.

"We all go through a developmental phase of not treating animals the way we should," he said. "Most children go through it by preschool age and quit sometime by grade school. But the children who don't stop are the ones that are problematic."

Humane educators are now finding that the best programs target children who have been abused or who have shown tendencies to abuse animals or other children. The programs need to be long-term, Ascione said.

A few programs around the country have pioneered in-depth humane education involving animals.

At seven schools for troubled children in Pennsylvania, Georgia, New Jersey and Massachusetts, the Devereux Foundation, based in Villanova, Pa., has built zoos stocked with small animals. Kids from 9 to 18 spend at least 2 1/2 hours a week with one animal to learn responsibility and nurturing.

Dr. Aaron Katcher, the foundation's consultant who started the zoos in 1990, said most children change immediately when around animals. But he said children need to be in the program at least six months for the behavioral changes to carry over to activities not involving animals.

"We expected many of them to be aggressive, but they weren't. They were very careful and devoted to their animals, arriving early to change bedding and clean cages, for instance," he said. "Within six months ... it improved their behavior."

Katcher said the center has had great success — more than 90 percent — with children younger than 14. But the success rate drops with older children.

"If children are over 14, there are some we can't reach. Some children get streetwise and hardened at that age," he said.

In Brewster N.Y., a treatment center offers a residential and day program for severely abused children ages 6 to 21. The center, Green Chimneys, is on a 150-acre farm with 380 animals, many of which were also abused, neglected or abandoned.

About 140 children at a time learn "how to touch lovingly, how to nurture, how to be responsible" with the help of a team of psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, special education teachers and animal trainers, said the center's Lisette Kubie.

Each dormitory has a resident house dog. "The animal is a bridge, a tool to build trust," Ms. Kubie said.

In Minneapolis, a 12-week program called Minnesota Link, to be launched in September by the American Humane Association, will combine mental health therapists with dog obedience trainers. About 12 youths who have been in trouble will train dogs needing adoption.

"It's backdoor therapy," said psychologist Molly DeTrekkel.

Using animals in humane education was in vogue decades ago but was eclipsed by drug therapy in the past few decades, "when we thought we were going to cure everything, and we didn't," Katcher said.

Katcher and other humane educators say animals do for some children what adults never can: Grab their attention and give them a sense of learning about reality.

"No child ever feels that feeding an animal is unimportant," he said.

In a first-grade class in one of Pittsburgh's poorest neighborhoods, Mrs. Campbell teaches the children how to handle animals, how to take care of them and how to "act like a turtle" if a dog attacks.

Classroom teacher Lauren Carozzi likes what she sees.

"Animals are the No. 1 topic in the world for 6-year-olds, and there's so many things you can teach through them," she says. "If only one or two kids take a little bit away from this, then it was worth it."

Medical examiner orders workers to clean, save needles

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The city medical examiner's office has been illegally reusing disposable needles on cadavers despite the risk of infections and state orders to stop, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today.

Medical examiner employees said office policy requires them to clean and save needles after each autopsy, even though state safety regulators said eight months ago to stop the practice.

Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Boyd Stephens said reusing needles is necessary to save money, but employees told the Chronicle they are concerned for their safety.

Health experts have said needle injuries are particularly dangerous in county autopsy rooms. Medical examiners have to investigate many unnatural deaths, including those of indigent and homeless individuals, drug abusers and others with high rates of diseases such as hepatitis, tuberculosis and AIDS.

Examiners can become infected when they are pricked accidentally with needles used repeatedly on cadavers — even when the needles have been cleaned.

"Bugs don't die when a patient dies, and reusing disposable needles is just a stupid, stupid cost-reduction effort," said Dr. Robyn Gershon, a public health expert at Johns Hopkins University.

In August, the California Occupational Safety and Health Administration cited the office for 10 safety violations. The agency ordered Stephens to shield workers from airborne tuberculosis bacteria with respirators and to protect them from the blood spray caused by circular saws that cut bone.

Stephens agreed last month to correct the violations. But employees say little has changed.

Organic food proponents win major standards victory

By CURT ANDERSON
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a major victory for organic foods proponents, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman today announced that national organic standards will not permit irradiation, genetic engineering or use of sewage sludge as fertilizer.

The department received more than 200,000 comments from the public since December about the proposed standards. The overwhelming majority opposed the three controversial items.

"They neither fit current organic practices nor meet current consumer expectations about organics, as the comments made clear," Glickman said.

When the Agriculture Department proposed the first-ever national standards for organic foods, it took no official position on the so-called "Big Three" provisions. Instead, Glickman wanted to hear from the public about them.

"If organic farmers and consumers reject our national standards, we have failed," Glickman said.

Pro-organic forces marshaled a fax, letter and e-mail campaign to ensure the measures were not included in the final rule. Indeed, only a handful of the comments were in favor of irradiation, genetic engineering and sewage sludge.

"This is not about compromise. This is about integrity," said Michael Sligh, director of the Rural Advancement Foundation International.

The organic industry is growing 20 percent a year as many consumers look for alternatives to conventional agriculture, with its pesticides and factory livestock farms. Many organic farmers feared the initial USDA rule would dilute their strict standards by permitting more conventional practices to be labeled "organic."

Consumers increasingly want a clear choice and Glickman's decision is a step in ensuring the lines aren't blurred, said Katharine DiMatteo, executive director of the Organic Trade Association.

"It's absolutely our commitment to make it a choice and maintain that distinction with organic," DiMatteo said.

The Agriculture Department now plans to propose a revised set of standards later this year. Organic groups have objected to other sections of the first rule, including treatment of livestock control of the list of organic definitions and whether states could impose their own tougher standards.

Glickman said all of that would be reconsidered in the new rule.

"Our task is to stimulate growth of organic agriculture, ensure that consumers have confidence in the products that bear the organic label, and develop export markets for this growing industry," he said.

UT student files hazing suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas freshman is suing Kappa Alpha fraternity and three of its members, alleging they violated the state's anti-hazing law.

Tim Hesselsweet's lawsuit says Kappa Alpha members spat on him, punched him, struck him with sharp sticks and urinated on him during a hazing ritual on Feb. 15.

According to the suit, filed Thursday, fraternity members also cracked his skull and brutalized him.

"We want to get the attention not only of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, but other groups that might be considering engaging in hazing activities," said Bill Whitehurst, Hesselsweet's lawyer.

"You would think people would get the idea, especially in Austin, where we have had so many deaths and serious injuries from hazing, and yet it continues to go on."

He said that his client was told after several days in the hospital that he could not complete the semester with his injuries.

An attorney representing the Kappa Alpha national chapter said it disciplined the fraternity members it identified as being involved in the hazing and is cooperating with the university's investigation.

The Austin fraternity is under two years of alumni supervision imposed by the national chapter. It also is considering ejecting some members and possibly suspending the UT chapter.

"The national fraternity's preliminary investigation has confirmed that a hazing incident did take place, but it is extremely questionable as to whether the hazing incident actually resulted in Mr. Hesselsweet's injuries," the attorney, Jim Ewbank, said.

He said the fraternity has an anti-hazing policy and that Hesselsweet could have slipped on a wet floor and hit his head.

The lawsuit accuses the Kappa Alpha national and local chapter and three members of violating Texas' anti-hazing statute, which defines hazing as making someone drink excessively or endure physical abuse as part of an initiation rite.

Kappa Alpha was placed on probation for about seven months in 1996 after a student turned in a videotape showing a young man bound to a tree in the fraternity's front yard.

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT [BULL/BEAR]

Outlook: Not much has changed since our last update. Export demand remains slow. The weather remains fairly decent. The winter wheat crop is looking pretty good. The funds own record short positions in the futures. These are all negatives to price, yet never forget, common wisdom is not wisdom which will enrich you. What I am saying is much of the bearish news is already discounted in prices which remain stuck around 5 year lows. This fund participation is historic. The funds are "short" a record 80 million bushels (the previous record being around 60 million). This is like a burning cigarette tossed a few yards away from gasoline. If all goes well, the cigarette will never reach the gasoline and burn itself out. If the right conditions develop however (export demand or weather), the market could explode. Time will tell.

Strategy: Hedgers: If you have not hedged or forward sold at this point, I think you need to assume the risk of the marketplace, looking for higher prices down the road. If we do not get decent prices by harvest, at that time we can sell cash and buy call options to maintain ownership.

Traders: Continue to look to buy September Minneapolis, but lower our buy stop to enter the market to 369 3/4 (I still want to buy strength, not weakness). If filled risk to 360. Leave the upside objective open at this time.

CORN [BULL/BEAR]

Outlook: Although there are still wet pockets, the corn planters are now out in force. It appears we will get the crop planted, and this is a year of big acreage. The successful planting of the crop is first hurdle of many to come this growing season. If all goes well, new crop (December) corn futures could be down to 220 by harvest. This is assuming all goes well however, a bold assumption in an El Nino year. I am not predicting a crop failure this year, nobody knows what the ultimate crop will look like. However, the market is looking for 130 bushel average yields, and in previous El Nino years you can throw your trendline yield projections out the window. So let's not get too bearish this market this early in the crop year. Let's see how the crop develops and wait for rallies to be a seller, instead of selling in the hole.

Strategy: Hedgers: We are 10% hedged new crop production at 275 in the December contract. Add another 15% at 280, and 10% at 285.

Traders: Look to buy a "technical breakout" above 269 in the December contract. If filled, risk 10¢ for a 15¢ profit objective.

SOYBEANS [BULL/BEAR]

Outlook: The soybean market appears it could be range-bound in the coming weeks. Soybeans have turned into a "weather market". Basically, without weather problems this year the new crop Novembers could trade down to 575 or lower. I base this number on the record large acreage, not only of soybeans, but competing oilseeds as well. I would think this price would be about the worst case scenario since demand for the products, specifically soybean oil, is very, very good. Record acres only mean record production if the crop is a normal one. Nobody at this point in time can know how the US new crop will ultimately turn out this year. The odds still point to a higher potential than normal weather adversity, at least in some areas of the Mid-West, since this is a strong El Nino year. It is too early to write down soybean prices just yet, and of course weather will be the determining factor for the ultimate new crop price. The unexpected news will most likely be bullish over the coming 4 to 8 weeks.

Strategy: Hedgers: Look for rallies to hedge new crop. I would start with 25% coverage above 640 in the November contract.

Traders: The path of least resistance in the important month of May appears to me to be up. Look to buy July at 635 or lower. Risk 15¢ for a profit objective of 660 or better.

CATTLE [BULL]

Outlook: Last week, I suggested this market is too focused on the day to day cash and is missing the fact that there is a structural change developing in the cattle market. This change will result in higher cash and futures prices down the road, it just will not be in a straight line up. The cash is coming up, just not every day. Last week it was up about two dollars, a far cry from the desperation of the week before. The futures are better believers of the coming bull market in cattle than the day to day cash, since the deferred months continue to remain rock solid. I continue to believe the futures and cash made an important price low last month which will hold for along time to come. The total cattle inventory is estimated at only 99,501,000 head in 1998. This is the first time in 5 years the total inventory will be under 100 million head. Calf numbers and feeder cattle numbers are down sharply, and recently placements into feedlots are running 17 to 20% less than a year ago. All this is happening just as the grilling season begins. By the end of the year I look for futures to be trading in the mid-seventies, or higher.

Strategy: Feeders: Remain un-hedged in June forward at this time looking for higher prices.

Cow/calf operators: We recommend no futures or options hedges at this time. Remain un-hedged anticipating higher prices down the road.

Traders: Look to buy October futures under 6925. Be prepared to risk 200 points for an ultimate objective of 7350.

Sharp endorsed by Bureau

AUSTIN — The board of directors of the Texas Farm Bureau Friends of Agriculture Fund (AGFUND) voted recently to endorse Democrat John Sharp for Lieutenant Governor of Texas. Sharp, currently Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts, is facing Republican Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry in the November general election.

"This is the most difficult political decision this board has ever had to make," said Bob Stallman, president of the TFB and AGFUND. "Both candidates are friends of Texas agriculture and friends of Texas Farm Bureau." Both candidates had been endorsed by AGFUND in previous elections, and the selection ends months of statewide speculation about the endorsement of the political action arm of Texas largest farm and ranch organization.

"The board has spent many hours discussing this selection, and we have determined that, in terms of experience, initiative and creativity, John Sharp deserves to be the next Lt. Governor of Texas," Stallman said.

Stallman, a rice producer from Columbus, said that as AGFUND president, he would strongly support Sharp and make campaign appearances with the candidate.

"No one on the AGFUND board wants to leave the impression that Rick Perry has not been a good Agriculture Commissioner," Stallman said. "However, an exhaustive review of this race has lead us to conclude that John Sharp should be the next Lt. Governor of Texas."

Stallman pointed to Sharp's "innovative approaches to state government," as comptroller. Particularly impressive, he said, was the Texas Performance Review, instrumental in carving more than $8 billion out of state government spending. The Lone Star Card, which automated the state food stamp program and eliminated widespread fraud and abuse, is another part of what Stallman called Sharp's "very impressive resume."

"Farm Bureau is devoted to conservative and bipartisan leadership in state government," the TFB president said. "Clearly, John Sharp has practiced those principles in state government, and we believe he will provide strong leadership as Lt. Governor."

AGFUND is TFB's political action fund. It is a legal entity separate from TFB and may endorse and contribute financially to political candidates. AGFUND is funded only by voluntary contributions from TFB members.

Study aimed at how child workers hurt

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — The federal government is funding a study of how children who work on farms are injured.

The government hopes the survey will produce information that can be used to develop programs for preventing injuries.

The study began last week in the Yakima Valley of Washington state, which was chosen because it has a wide variety of farms and crops.

For the next three years, researchers will track the number of farm-related injuries in the area — from tractor rollovers to chemical burns — among children up to age 18.

The study, expected to cost about $150,000 per year, is being done by the Pacific Northwest Agricultural Safety and Health Center in Seattle. The money comes from a grant by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

The study was prompted by a growing awareness of the high injury rate among children who do farm work, said Bruce Alexander, the University of Washington researcher directing the study.

"Agriculture has long been recognized as one of the most dangerous occupations that we have, and there are a lot of children that end up being exposed" to injury, Alexander said. "Before we can learn how to prevent these childhood injuries, we need to know a lot more about how they happen."

Nationwide, more than 100 farm children are killed each year and thousands more are injured, according to the Agricultural Safety and Health Center.

The injury rate is higher for children than for adults who perform the same tasks, Alexander said. "Children tend to be less experienced and they may be doing tasks that are beyond their abilities, like operating machinery that is not designed for children," he said.

To track injuries, researchers will work with area hospitals, the Yakima Valley Farm Workers clinics and the Yakima Pediatrics Clinic.

Maria Negrete, research coordinator for the project, said she and an assistant will focus on injuries that involve structures and implements — such as falling off a ladder or other farm equipment — and on injuries caused by animals, chemicals or motor vehicles.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas farmers are planting more than enough rice to keep the state's title as the nation's No. 1 rice producer.

Farmers intend to plant 1.38 million acres of rice this year, about 10,000 more acres than last year. The state produced 43 percent of the nation's rice in 1997.

The Arkansas Agricultural Statistics Service says farmers intend to plant 1.158 million acres of long grain rice, 220,000 acres of medium grain rice and 2,000 acres of short grain rice.

What has changed is the mix of varieties farmers intend to plant, said John Robinson, director of the University of Arkansas Rice Research and Extension Center near Stuttgart.

A recently released long grain variety from the university, called Drew, will be the leader this year, Robinson said. Another variety, Kaybonnet, was grown on more than 30 percent of the acreage last year. Drew will push Kaybonnet out of the top spot either this year or next year, Robinson said.

The two varieties will make up 35 to 45 percent of the state's total rice acreage, followed by Cypress, Bengal and Lagrue, Robinson said.

Cypress and Lagrue are long grain varieties. Bengal is a medium grain, much of which is purchased by cereal companies.

After 36 years, firm set to irradiate food

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — By Thanksgiving, a small company in Virginia hopes to show the poultry and beef industries that sterilizing meat in one of its irradiators is the best way to quell fears of food poisoning.

Lawrence Barrett began working to irradiate food in 1963 when he founded Applied Radiant Energy Corp. That was the year the U.S. government took its first step toward approving food irradiation by allowing its use on wheat powder. At the time, expansion of irradiation use looked promising.

But the anti-nuclear movement spoiled Barrett's plans. "It seems food irradiation became connected to the nuclear industry, and to some people anything nuclear is evil," said Jim Myron, Applied Radiant's vice president in charge of research and development.

Barrett instead used the technology to irradiate wood flooring and make it more durable, while continuing to hope that the government would eventually clear the way for irradiated food.

"The regulatory processes were much more severe than I surmised," said Barrett, who needed approval from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department. He also had to get environmental permits because the sterilization takes place in water.

In irradiation, packaged food is bombarded with gamma rays emanating from rods of cobalt-60. The rays will kill bacteria such as E. coli, salmonella and listeria. The process takes place in 20 feet of water in a tank with thick concrete walls and ceiling.

Irradiation has been used for years on limited amounts of produce, spices and other foods. In 1992, the FDA approved irradiation for killing bacteria such as E. coli and salmonella in poultry, but no major processor wanted to be the first to use the procedure.

However, last summer's recall of 25 million pounds of ground beef feared contaminated with E. coli sparked new interest in irradiation. In December, the FDA approved irradiation of red meat using cobalt-60 gamma rays, the process Applied Radiant uses.

Two weeks ago, ConAgra Inc. President David Rohde became one of the first major food executives to publicly outline plans to install irradiation in meat-processing plants when the technology becomes feasible on a large scale.

Barrett has formed a subsidiary, Applied Food Processors, which is building a second irradiator that will be used as a test model for food processors.

"We will be irradiating poultry in the near future for research and development," said company President Wayne Zeigler. Barrett said they're also working with a major beef processor, but he and Zeigler declined to identify it.

After some fine-tuning, the company hopes to manufacture and sell irradiators to food companies, which would incorporate them into the assembly line.

Parents of youth suspended for threatening essays sue school

HALF MOON BAY, Calif. (AP) — The parents of a 14-year-old who was suspended after he wrote essays about starting a school riot and killing the principal have sued the school.

The student said his essays, submitted in March and April, were simply works of fiction.

"I don't see how they viewed it as a threat," he said in Thursday's San Francisco Examiner. "It was a class work assignment."

The boy's five-day suspension last month was believed to be the first use of a new state law allowing schools to discipline students for threatening school officials.

Administrators at Cunha Intermediate School in the coastal town of Half Moon Bay say the essays — entitled "The Riot" and "Goin' Postal" — were "terroristic threats" that qualify for suspension.

"There are kids who say they'll do something, and they do," said Doug Stone, a spokesman for the state Department of Education.

But the student's parents said they sued Cabrillo Unified School District in San Mateo County Superior Court to have the suspension expunged from his permanent school record.

"He's always writing about current news events," his mother said. "He questions authority, but he doesn't cross the line."

In "The Riot," a student named John, fed up with school rules, jumps onto a lunch table decrying the "oppression going on in school." Students join him in breaking windows, torching the library, damaging science labs and beating the principal with a baseball bat.

"Goin' Postal" describes a student shooting the principal and vice principal, then "smiling blissfully ... having done away with the two people he hated most."

Real-life student shootings in Jonesboro, Ark., and in Daly City inspired "Goin' Postal," and the film "Natural Born Killers" prompted "The Riot," the boy told the Examiner.

Four classmates and a teacher were killed in Arkansas, and a student allegedly shot at but missed his school principal in Daly City.

The student denied the essays were threats, saying he only wanted to get "A" grades.

Whether the essays fall under the new state law, which went into effect Jan. 1, is under debate. The law allows suspension or expulsion for either verbal or written threats that could result in injury or death, even if the student doesn't intend to carry it out.

Ann Brick, staff attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California, said the essays didn't appear to violate that law. She said it was her opinion that the essays were "disturbing" but were protected by the First Amendment.

"The person uttering or writing the words has to intend that the recipient will think it's a threat," she said. "It has to be unequivocal. It has to be unconditional so that the person who is supposedly threatened is convinced that he or she is in danger."

But Emi Yuehara, an attorney representing the school district, said officials felt they acted appropriately.

"The district has an obligation to take appropriate steps to provide for a safe educational environment for students and staff," she said.

'Titanic' bootleg videos flooding the black market

Bootleg videos have been trouble for the film industry for years, taking $250 million a year from U.S. sales and $2.5 billion worldwide.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The top-grossing film of all time is also No. 1 on the black market. "Titanic," the ocean liner disaster movie that picked up 11 Academy Awards, has become the most-wanted pirate video on the streets.

Russians say they will begin to lower Mir's orbit in June

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian space officials will gradually begin lowering the orbit of the Mir space station next month in the first stage of a year-and-a-half-long plan to retire the aging craft, a senior flight controller said Friday. Space officials previously said they would begin altering the orbit this month in preparation for discarding the 12-year-old space station some-

The Motion Picture Association of America's video piracy unit has seized 1,500 videos from street vendors in New York City since January, and dozens more in sweeps in Newark, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cleveland.

The video, two tapes selling for about $10, comes in a professional-looking sleeve with photography of scenes from the film, said Bill Shannon, who heads the association's East Coast anti-piracy unit. "It looks factory fresh," Shannon said. "It's going to be a blockbuster."

Officials at Paramount, the studio with domestic rights to the film, aren't surprised. "It wouldn't be unusual that this movie is heavily pirated," said Anat Levy, the executive director of anti-piracy operations for the studio. "It is the best-selling movie of all time."

"Titanic" has grossed $560.6 million nationwide and more than $1 billion globally. Paramount hasn't decided on an official release of a home videocassette. The illegal tapes are believed to be copies of the videotapes sent to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 5,400 voters. Paramount mailed out copies to each voter in its Academy Award campaign.

The Mir currently orbits 250 miles above the Earth, and will be gradually lowered to 90 miles by December 1999, at which time it will be allowed to burn in the Earth's atmosphere. The Mir is to be replaced by a new international space station, a collaborative project among 15 countries.

The Academy members know that these tapes are not to be distributed and sold or copied," Levy said, adding each Academy tape comes with instructions saying just that. She speculated that some might have given copies to friends.

Other "Titanic" videos are poor-quality versions made by people who smuggle camcorders into theaters, Shannon said — with grainy film, background noise and the occasional audience member walking in front of the camera.

Bootleg videos have been trouble for the film industry for years, taking $250 million a year from U.S. sales and $2.5 billion worldwide, said Ken Jacobson, director of the MPA's anti-piracy program.

Film studios annually file hundreds of lawsuits against the pirates; police confiscated 570,000 illegally made videocassettes last year.

Why buy a videotape when the movie is still in theaters? "They'll buy a tape. It'll cost them 10 bucks and six of their friends will watch it. They've saved themselves 38 bucks," said Paterson Police Lt. Jim Smith.
