Site proposal for drug rehab elicits gripes

By JEFF WEST Staff Writer

"I'm not opposed to the facility itself but I'm very much opposed to the location," said real estate businessman Jim Ward about a proposed juvenile drug rehabilitation facility.

Ward made the comments while speaking at a meeting Tuesday of the Pampa Economic Development Corporation.

"It makes it awful hard for Realtors to sell Pampa when they come in here and we say this is our {planned} super-playground park right next to this lock-down facility.7

A large group of people came to the meeting to oppose converting a building, originally built to house nurses, into a lock-down facility. The building is on Hobart Street between National Bank of Commerce and Bill Allison Auto Sales.

Gray County Judge Richard Peet and Albert Nichols, Gray County's chief juvenile probation officer, were there to request PEDC help to remodel the facility and pay part of the start-up costs. Nichols estimates 17-21 jobs will be created if the facility is opened.

At the May 1 meeting, PEDC Executive Director Lew Mollenkamp had expressed his support for the facility but many members of the PEDC board were less enthusiastic yesterday.

Summer programs start at L. Meredith

Summer season programs and services are beginning at Lake Meredith National Recreation Area and the Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument, according to superintendent John Benjamin.

Panhandle residents, he said, can be proud that they have the only National Monument in Texas. The "jewel of the Texas Panhandle", Lake Meredith National Recreation Area, is also in their neighbor hood. "Visitors to the Amarillo area sometimes don't realize they have these spectacular, nationally significant areas within a short drive. We encourage everyone to come and visit their National Monument and explore their National Recreation Area," Benjamin said. Beginning Saturday, May 23, the Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument will offer daily tours of the quarries at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Daily tours will be offered through Labor Day, September 7. After Labor Day, visitors can visit the National Monument by reservation only.

Beverly Snider, Pampa Communications, was checking paging systems this morning after a satellite outage in space interrupted communications traffic around the world. While local and area pager communications, she said, will not be affected, state and national paging may be sporadic.

"Even with a satellite," Snider said, "you don't get total coverage.'

Snider said the first question her husband asked her this morning was if her pagers were working, and she immediately began checking. Snider's company has local.

Ceremony, flag flying Memorial Day activities

The VFW and 4-H are prepar- Gray ing for Memorial Day Monday when flags will be placed and a ceremony held.

Over 200 American flags will be put out at local cemeteries, said John Tripplehorn, veteran's service officer.

Also, the public is encouraged to attend a Memorial Day ceremony at 10 a.m. Monday at the Veteran's County Monument at the Freedom Museum, 600 N. Hobart.

The flags will be loaded at 2 p.m. Sunday at 123 W. Foster and will be placed at two local cemeteries at 7 a.m. Monday. Pickup will be at 5 that afternoon.

Tripplehorn said "all veterans and friends of veterans" are invited to help.

silent, pagers in Pampa continue to work.

Millions of pagers that keep doctors, detectives and loved ones in touch sat silent today and some radio and TV relays were interrupted because a $250 million communications satellite lost track of Earth.

But pagers in Pampa are tied to towers, not satellites, according to Beverly Snider, owner of Pampa Communications.

"There are two ways you can get a pager signal," Snider said today. "One is by a signal from a tower site. The other is from a satellite."

Pager communications in Pampa, and in most of the rest of the Texas Panhandle, rely on tower sites to relay signals. There is only one company in Amarillo, PageMart, that uses a satellite and their signals stop just outside of Pampa, Snider said, national paging services. All Snider's local and area wide services are tower-based. The state and national networks with which she works are tower-based but do use satellite links.

"They may be affected," Snider said this morning.

She said the state and national networks contacted her this morning to say that such communications could be sporadically interrupted.

"I don't think anyone in Pampa will be affected," Snider said of the satellite outage. "All our people should be all right."

The Galaxy 4 satellite stopped relaying pager messages and media feeds at about 6 p.m. EDT Tuesday when its onboard control system and a backup switch failed and the satellite rotated See PAGERS, Page 3

Teacher's 'kids' make job a blast

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is one in a series of stories on Pampa teachers entitled; "Celebrating our Teachers." Teachers interviewed were nominated by school administration.

"Do not take any of the frogs out of the classroom," Sue Cree told her curious seventh-grade students.

Cree's middle school science students were dissecting frogs after weeks of preparation for the event.

"I don't want to hear you took parts of the frogs out of here and disturbed other classes ... " Cree warned the students.

The youngsters listened as attentively to her instructions as 12year-olds can while trying to subdue excitement over investigative trays with ripe specimens waiting for incisions.

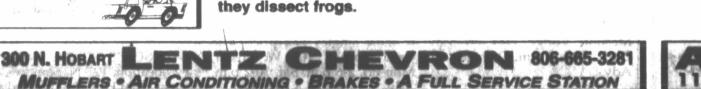

Cree's six years as a Pampa Middle School science teacher have brought her to the conclusion that, "all students can learn at different levels.'

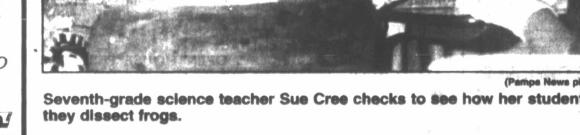

Her classroom demonstrates this.

With 20 or so students, all at varying learning levels, Cree's room is also home to pupils with more specialized needs through the school's inclusion program — a program which brings those with learning

"The problem with the facility is not on a business decision. The problem for the use of this type is the location of the facility," said PEDC board member Roger David. Cree, who at one time thought she was destined to be a kindergarten teacher, ended up doing both her undergraduate and graduate studies in geolo-gy. After marriage and children — when her own children were going to school all day - Cree said, she thought perhaps she could share her excitement for science with Pampa students.

Cree's love for learning is instrumental to her teaching style.

"I love to learn. I like to use what's happening daily and bring that into the classroom," she said. She uses a number of methods to motivate her students in addition to her hands-on approaches.

Scott Baradell, a spokesman for PageNet, one of several paging companies whose services were interrupted, estimated that 80 percent to 90 percent of the 40 million to 45 million U.S. pager users lost service.

"This is the first time in 35 years that pagers have gone silent," said John D. Beletic, chairman and chief executive officer of Dallas-based PageMart Wireless Inc. "Virtually all paging companies have been affected.

PageMart announced on its Internet Web page today that service had been moved to backup satellites for customers in major cities including Boston, Minneapolis, Cleveland and Philadelphia, and it was working to move service for others. Baradell said it would take about a day for his company to finish switching service for most of its 10 1/2 million customers.

The only customers not affected were those whose connections are through ground-based radio transmitters, Baradell said.

The pager problem was of particular concern to doctors. Dr. Steve Dickens, a cardiologist at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, said he spent the night at the hospital because of the problem.

flunks its free speech exam

By upholding a federal appellate court ruling, the Supreme Court comes close to treading on a fundamental principle of American life.

We discover, as a society, whether we are really committed to noble principles like freedom of speech and freedom of the press when we confront the hard cases. The U.S. Supreme Court just encountered such a test – and it flunked.

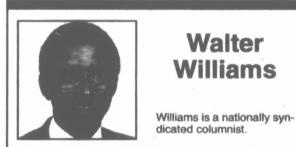

The high court allowed a liability trial to go forward against a publisher who produced a purported instructional manual entitled "Hit Man: A Technical Manual for Independent Contractors." The family of Mildred Horn and her then eightyear-old disabled son contend that James E. Perry, who has been convicted of the crimes, killed the two along with the boy's nurse by following the instructions in the book to the letter.

A Maryland district federal court threw out the lawsuit on the grounds that the book was protected by the First Amendment. But the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeal reinstated the case, arguing that the book is "a training book for assassins and therefore has no free press protection." Although the Supreme Court upheld the decision without comment, meaning it doesn't become an official precedent, it implicitly endorsed this troubling version of what free speech means. The temptation to draw a line somewhere is understandable. As Erwin Chemerinsky, a distinguished legal scholar who teaches at the University of Southern California, said, "Part of me says we would be better off as a society if what amounts to an instruction manual for murder didn't exist at all. But the decision in this case is profoundly troubling to me. The First Amendment was designed to protect the right to say and print unpopular things, things that many people find disturbing or offensive. Courts have carved out exceptions to an absolute right to press freedom, including the ill-defined category of pornography, but they've usually been narrow exceptions. "The relevant doctrine here is incitement," says Professor Chemerinsky. In the 1969 Brandenburg v. Ohio case, the Supreme Court held that even speech advocating an illegal act is protected by the First Amendment unless it is "directed to inciting or producing imminent lawless action" as a direct result of that speech or writing. "That test of imminent incitement simply isn't met in this case," said Chemerinsky We agree. The book has been in print since 1983. If it truly incited people who read it, there would have been a wave of hit-man murders. Only one has been alleged. This decision is also troubling because it could serve as a precedent for censorship of other kinds of writing. Plenty of fictional crime and horror books describe murders and other crimes in excruciating detail, in a way that almost amounts to a "how-to" manual. Some fiction writers pride themselves on research that allows them to describe such hideous actions authentically and accurately. Will they one day be subject to lawsuits? The Supreme Court decision doesn't settle the question of whether the publisher was liable regarding these particular murders; it only allows a trial to go forward. Whatever the outcome of that trial, it's likely to be appealed again. If the case gets back to the Supreme Court, it should rethink its action. The court might not take as uncompromising a position on behalf of the freedom to publish as we would. But it should at least affirm the long-standing principle that freedom of speech and the freedom to publish can only be infringed when genuine incitement is present.

Lifestyle zealots attack caffeine

In Salt Lake City, two college students were walking down the street smoking cigarettes. A gang of 20 teenage thugs, calling themselves Straight Edgers, ordered them to put out their cigarettes. Following an exchange of words, the students were attacked with chains, bricks and pepper spray. One student landed in the hospital after being beaten on the head with a baseball bat. The Straight Edgers don't drink, smoke or take drugs - they use violence to enforce their moral standards on others.

Many California bar owners have ignored the state ban on smoking. One bar owner geting teens and younger kids. ... While we're on the subject of health-care cost, there are some other lifestyle regulations we might consider to protect our children. Hundreds of thousands of teenagers and young adults are injured, crippled or killed each year playing basketball, baseball and football, and swimming and cycling. While safety equipment prevents some injuries, they cannot be completely eliminated. Should we call for government regulations that either ban sports activities or change game rules so that no one can be injured?

The people who want to regulate the lifestyles of others are cowards. You say, "What do you mean, Williams?" I mean if Michael Jacobson, CSPI's director, sees me at a

Global warming debate wages on

A handy-dandy antidote to overheated rhetoric about global warming is the little book "Hot Talk, Cold Science," by S. Fred Singer.

Singer is an atmospheric and space physicist. He designed satellites and instrumentation for remote sensing of the atmosphere and was the first director of the U.S. Weather Satellite ing. On the contrary, scientists continue to dis-Service, now part of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

He also predicted - correctly - that an increase in methane could lead to a depletion of ozone. In other words, this guy is a legit scientist and not a shill for industry.

Yet, he says:

"The United States and other industrialized nations are on the brink of adopting policies that will ruin national economies and drive manufacturing and other industries into lessdeveloped and less-regulated countries (with the perverse effect of destroying their environments). Such policies will cost citizens literally hundreds of billions of dollars in higher production costs and lost wages - all to mitigate climate 'disasters' that exist only on computer printouts and in the feverish imagination of professional environmental zealots.

Pooh-poohing the statements by politicians that climate science has "settled" the issue of global warning, Singer writes, "The purpose of this book is to demonstrate that evidence is neither settled, nor compelling, nor even convinc-cover new mechanisms for climate change and to put forth new theories to try to account for the fact that global temperature is not rising, even though greenhouse theory says should."

This little book is chock-full of summaries of scientific studies, charts, graphs and enough reference material to satisfy anyone. It's been endorsed by Arthur C. Clarke, a scientist and author of "2001: A Space Odyssey," and several other, heavily credentialed scientists and professors. In other words, Singer writes as a scientist, not as a politician.

If you can't find it at your bookstore, you can get a copy from The Independent Institute (http:// www.independent.org), 100 Swan Way, Oakland, CA 94621-1428.

Let's face it. Most of us only know what we read in the newspapers and hear on television about climate science. Unfortunately, that's a good way to be not only uninformed but misinformed. The best use of news about science is to simply take it as a cue to do further research because these days a lot of what passes for "sci- who are clay from head to toe.

ence" comes out of the mouths of politicians and the fax machines of lawyers for environmental groups with axes to grind.

We live in an age of propaganda, and the irony is that just as the technology of communications has reached superb heights, the task of sorting fact from fiction has gotten more difficult instead of easier. To use a radio metaphor, there is a lot of noise drowning out the signal of truth

Singer's little book provides a real service. He provides you with an overview and the background. Interestingly enough, he points out that the "father of the greenhouse warming," the late Roger Revelle of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, wrote before his death, "The scientific base for warming is too uncertain to justify drastic action at this time."

After bringing you up to date on current research, Singer then discusses several possible outcomes and responses. The only certain outcome is the economic destruction should the Kyoto Agreement be ratified by the Senate and put into effect.

You may be asking, how could the heads of industrial nations be so wrong? Well, history shows example after example of the high and mighty making foolish mistakes. Heads of states are not only mere mortals with feet of clay, many today are professional politicians

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 36-year-old food server with a 12-year-old son. I have been married four times. The first marriage lasted seven years, the second lasted nine months, the third lasted a year. When I married my fourth husband, I realized within the first two weeks that I had made another mistake, so I had the marriage annulled.

As you can guess from the number of times I have been married, I want to be married. But for some unexplained reason, I start arguments and sabotage my relationships. Since my last marriage, I find myself starting to sabotage as early as the third or fourth date.

Men usually like me and are puzzled by my arguments and sudden cold shoulder. When they ask me to explain what is wrong, because they can't figure out why I won't speak to them for days, I can't give them an answer.

Abby, I don't know why I do this. I feel terrible about it, but I can't seem to stop. I have noticed that with a couple of the men, the ones who didn't push for too much intimaty right away, I didn't start arguing or fighting quite so quickly. Perhaps I need my space, and when they encroach on it I unconsciously use arguments to regain my independence.

Have you any idea why I do this, and how I can stop driving nice men away? I do want a loving relationship.

AMARILLO - The third annual American Quarter Horse Foundation (AOHF) Benefit Roping is scheduled for Memorial Day weekend, May 23 and 24, at the Tri-State Fairgrounds in Amarillo.

This year Professional's Choice will be the title sponsor, providing AQHA with money and prizes for winners, according to J. Lee Fulton, spokesman for the association.

"This roping has been a success in raising money and Foundation awareness," said Jim Pfluger, Senior Director of AQHF.

The Professional's Choice Benefit Roping will again be classified as an AQHA Special Event entitling contestants to earn AQHA points in all of the roping classes.

After a special match roping and barbecue on Saturday evening, a dance with Jody Nix and his band will highlight the evening's festivities. Barbecue tickets are $7 for adults and $4 for children 12 and Under. Dance tickets will be $12 at the door or $10 if purchased in advance at the American Quarter Horse Heritage Center and Museum.

DALLAS (AP) - This year's Western Conference finals could be the NHL's answer to the NFL's NFC championship game.

The top-seeded Dallas Stars and the third-seeded Detroit Red Wings, the two best-performing regular season teams left in the playoffs, face off for best-in-the-west honors and a chance for the Stanley Cup.

This, against the backdrop of an Eastern Conference finals matchup between the fourth-seeded Washington Capitals and the seventhseeded Buffalo Sabres. Both teams rose to the conference finals after the first round upsets of the top three teams made the east resemble the usually second-fiddle AFC.

"I think it'd be great for hockey, just to have your champ from the year before and the number one team this year," Stars center Mike Modano said of playing the Wings.

The series is sure to pick up where the teams last left off, when Dallas beat the Wings 3-1 on April 15 behind strong penaltykilling and a transcendent goaltending performance from Ed Belfour, who stopped 44 shots, That game marked the first time the Stars beat the Wings this season.

The Stars come in with a but goaltender in Belfour, who has a leagueleading 1.41 goals-against average and a third best .937 save percentage. Compare that to Detroit's Chris Osgood, who has a .905 save percentage and 2.44 goals-against average. But Osgood plays behind a churning offense led by Sergei Fedorov, who is $12 million richer now that the Wings made it to the conference finals.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) -Darin Erstad beat out an infield single and later scored on Mike Blowers' throwing error in the 10th inning as the Anaheim Angels beat the Oakland Athletics 4-3 Tuesday night.

Erstad reached first on a close play after hitting a slow grounder to second. Jim Edmonds moved him to second with a sacrifice bunt, then Oakland's Billy Taylor (0-4) intentionally walked Tim Salmon.

Cecil Fielder then hit a slow roller to third, Blowers charged the ball and bounced a throw past first base that allowed Erstad to score.

Shigetoshi Hasegawa (2-1) got the last out of the ninth for the Angels after they had blown a 3-0 lead.

Shut out by Chuck Finley on four hits through the first eight innings, the Athletics tied the game with three runs in the nínth.
