PAMPA — A fund to raise money for the medical needs of a Pampa couple has been opened at National Bank of Commerce. Both James, 57, and Sue Meeks, 55, have suffered strokes and are now homebound. Meeks formerly owned a junkyard and his wife was a certified nursing assistant.

FORT WORTH, (AP) — Workers laid off by General Motors because of strikes at two key plants in Michigan are getting some financial help from the United Auto Workers.

The international union has agreed to issue loans to workers from Local 276, since the state is not likely to pay them unemployment benefits.

The workers were laid off two weeks ago when strikes at two GM parts supply plants in Flint, Mich., shut down the automaker's Arlington assembly plant as well as 25 other GM production facilities.

Texas workers will only have to repay the $150-aweek loans if the state denies them assistance.

"It makes you feel good about the union," David Barnes, a second-shift repair worker at GM-Arlington, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in story for Tuesday's edition. "We pulled enough savings to pay our bills through the month. I hope to go back to work by Aug. 1. After that, I'll probably be looking for some (work).

Storm causes damage; brings rain

"We may have had a small tornado. We heard a roar, and it deposited some things in the back that were twisted," said Ben Woodington, Ganell Overhead Door at 1000 Price Road.

A fork lift operator from Billy Scribner Welding lifts the Jumbo Fireworks Stand off the pavement at Price Road near Highway 60. The stand was the first casualty of the thunderstorm yesterday.

Storm winds reach 70 mph

Marsha Bailey was afoot today after a tree fell on her car in northwest Pampa.

A pine tree was uprooted Monday afternoon at 1120 Terry Road and dropped on her 1989 Chevrolet Beretta, denting the hood and scratching the paint, but it didn't break the windshield.

Another tree was uprooted at: the Pampa High School athletic offices shortly after 3 p.m. Monday as a severe thunderstorm moved through the Pampa area with high winds, hail and heavy rain.

A roof was blown off a house at 2136 Coffee.

Pampa recorded an official 1.09 inch of rain Monday. Darrell Sehorn, Pampa's weatherman, said the moisture Monday brought the total for July to 2.49 inches

"At least we got the rain," he said.

Sehorn said Pampa also received pea to marble sized hail and that tree limbs and fences were blown down.

"We had wind gusts to 70 miles an hour," Sehorn said.

He said there could have been some larger sized hail in spots. Ben Woodington with Ganell

Contractor sizes up stock better than riders

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

Elk city-based stock contractor Bennie Beutler may be a good judge of bucking bulls, but he has a little trouble sizing up their riders.

And again this year he's in Pampa bringing stock for the Top O' Texas Rodeo which gets under way Thursday night for a three-performance run.

It was about five years ago at the Top O' Texas Rodeo in Pampa that Beutler almost threw out two bulls riders that didn't look old enough to be in the arena.

"It could have been stronger than that," he said.

Woodington said he saw the storm coming and thought it would bring 30-or-40 mile an hour winds and some much needed rain, but he said he was totally surprised by the strength of the storm and the damage it did.

The worst of the storm lasted about 10 minutes.

Joann Madeen at Waukesha-Pearce Industries at 201 North Price Road said their electricity went off for a while, but they reported no damage to their building or equipment.

Two Border Patrol agents shot, killed in morning shootout

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — Two Border Patrol agents were shot to death and a sheriff's deputy was injured this morning in a gunbattle with suspects who were fleeing from another shooting.

The suspects took off again and were stopped later. Officers wounded one gunman and another fled and was barricading himself from authorities, officials said.

The initial shooting occurred around 5:30 a.m. in Rio Hondo, a Harlingen suburb. Cameron County Sheriff's Department officers chased the suspects' white pickup truck, but they lost sight of the vehicle and called for help, said San Benito police patrolman Albert

Two Border Patrol agents were the first to reach the truck and pull it over, Aguirre said, adding that a Cameron County deputy arrived

An exchange of gunfire killed a female Border Patrol agent and a male colleague, said agency spokeswoman Letty Garza in McAllen. The deputy was wounded and taken to Valley Baptist hospital in Harlingen. Identities were not immediately released.

A second pursuit ensued, ending about 10 miles southeast in San "The only thing we have is they were chased out of town, there

Southwest jet makes emergency landing

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An engine caught fire today on a Southwest Airlines jet carrying 95 people to Birmingham from Tampa, Fla., forcing the pilot to land with just one engine.

No one was hurt, and passengers on Flight 1565 bound for other destinations continued their trips on another plane, said Southwest spokesman Ed Stewart.

Passengers noticed flames coming from the right engine on the two-engine Boeing 737 when it was about 35 miles away from Birmingham, said Stewart. Ninety passengers and five crew members were aboard, he said.

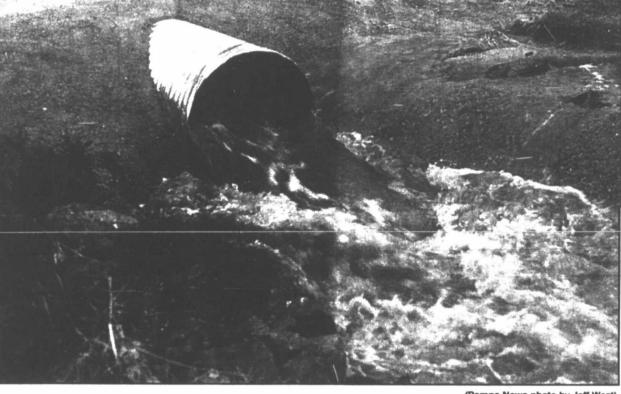

"Flames were all the way to the back of the plane," said one passenger, a business traveler who would not give his name. "The flight attendants were calm, but the passengers were pretty nervous.

Stewart, speaking from headquarters in Dallas, denied the fire was that large. "Only a handful of people knew what was happening," he

"The engine was immediately shut down and the plane landed without incident," said Stewart. Fire trucks and other emergency equipment brought to the runway were not used.

Monday's storm toppled a tree in the 1900 block of Hamilton that blocked traffic until it could be removed.

School sex ruling was sensible, just

There are limits to what school districts can do to prevent or detect sexual misconduct.

When a 52-year-old teacher was discovered naked in a park with a 15-year-old student, the school district fired the teacher. The girl sued the school district.

In a recent 5-4 ruling, the U.S. Supreme Court held that Lago Vista Independent School District near Austin, isn't liable under federal civil rights law for sexual harassment because school officials didn't know the teacher had seduced the student.

In order be found liable, someone in a position to do something must know there's something to be done and be "deliberately indifferent," wrote Justice Sandra Day O'Connor for the conservative wing of the court.

The decision makes sense. School officials should try to protect students against sexually predatory teachers and administrators, as well as against the far more common problem of sexual harassment by classmates. But there are limits to what districts can do to prevent or detect sexual misconduct, and there should be limits to

In this case, the girl told no one about the affair, which started in spring of 1992, when she was a ninth-grader in Frank Waldrop's advanced social studies class. It ended in January 1993 with his arrest in the park. No sexual encounters took place on school grounds.

In a 1992 case, the court defined sex between a teacher and an underage student as sexual harassment, and agreed unanimously that it's included in Title IX's ban on sex discrimination in education programs. But the court left open till now the school district's responsibility for unreported sexual harassment.

In a dissent, joined by the court's liberals, Justice John Paul Stevens complained that the decision gives school officials an incentive to see and hear no evil. "As long as school boards can insulate themselves from knowledge about this sort of conduct, they can claim immunity from damages liability." In other words: Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise.

Certainly, the decision sets a high standard for civil rights suits against schools - higher than the standard used for workplace sexual harassment suits, which fall under a different civil rights

The courts have held employers liable if they knew or should have known about workplace sexual harassment, or if a supervisor uses his authority to carry out the harassment.

Lago Vista didn't explain to students the procedure for reporting sexual harassment complaints. For an employer, this would be used to prove willful ignorance of workplace harassment. But students are unlikely to use a formal complaint procedure. They are far more likely to turn to parents or teachers.

The use-of-authority standard also is different in a school setting than in a workplace. All school employees - teachers, coaches, counselors, administrators – are in a position of trust and authority, which can be misused. Under this standard, school districts would have no liability shield at all, regardless of how hard they tried to monitor employees" behavior and publicize anti-harassment policies and procedures.

The decision doesn't prevent the student, now in college, from suing the school district under state law, or from suing her former

It does create a more common sense definition of sexual discrimination in education, and protect school budgets from paying for the secret sexual misbehavior of employees.

We don't believe school boards, superintendents or principals will turn a blind eye to a school employee's sexual abuse of students in the hopes of dodging liability in a future lawsuit. And we don't want school officials to be obliged to patrol the public parks looking for unauthorized sex education.

Indianapolis: A success story

Say the words "self-effacing, modest, straightforward and dedicated to principle," and who would conclude that you were describing a politician? But those are the words that first leap to mind when Mayor Stephen Goldsmith of Indianapolis is the subject.

In two terms as mayor, Goldsmith has produced a small urban miracle in the nation's 12th largest city. A dedicated small-government conservative whose hero and mentor is Milton Friedman, Goldsmith has put into practice ideas that Republicans never tire of discussing but almost never implement. How many Republican candidates have promised to run the city (state, country) "like a business." But once in office, many Republicans become creatures of government instead of critics, protecting their own slices of pork and providing patronage to favored friends.

rein them in – but he did attempt wherever and whenever possible to introduce the element of competition.

As he explains in his surprisingly readable new book "The Twenty-First Century City: Resurrecting Urban America," it looked to America's major cities were caught in an irreversible downward vortex. In order to redistribute income, cities raised taxes. Higher taxes and urban crime rates drove more city dwellers even more, which in turn drove more people out, and down the spiral went. Goldsmith believed his city could avoid consultant to help prepare its bid.

Charen is a nationally syngoing down the drain. He believed that by adhering to free-market principles, the city could be run more efficiently as well as more economically - that the city could save money city had done plus more for only $1 million per and avoid raising taxes.

His first experiment in "marketization" concerning filling potholes. When word got out that the mayor intended to seek competitive Goldsmith didn't attempt to run the city like bids on street maintenance, the union repregoing to have the discipline of the market to uproar. Though Goldsmith promised that they were free to bid on the work, they were certain that he was setting them up. In a private meeting, union representatives told the mayor that it was unfair to expect them to bid competitively when they were saddled with 32 politically appointed supervisors at most observers in the 1970s and 1980s that very comfortable salaries. Complicating matters for Goldsmith was the fact that the supervisors were all Republicans. Indianapolis has been a Republican city for some time. But Goldsmith perceived that if he flinched into the suburbs. Faced with the loss of revenue on streamlining the supervisors, his credibility due to middle-class flight, cities raised taxes as a free-market reformer would be sacrificed, and so he transferred or terminated 14 of the 32 supervisors and also provided the union with a

The results were dramatic. With the spur of competition, the union devised a thousand ways to improve efficiency. They did in fact submit the low bid. And whereas the city had previously been paying $425 per ton filling potholes with asphalt, the new proposal brought the city's cost down to $307 per ton, a 25 percent reduction.

The city of Indianapolis applied this lesson over the next eight years to 70 different areas of service. Pre-Goldsmith, the city had been operating three print shops at a cost of $1.4 million annually. After the work was contracted out, Pitney-Bowes was able to do all of the tasks the

From towing abandoned vehicles to wastewater treatment, Indianapolis saved money for taxpayers and improved service by turning to competitive bidding. Goldsmith got into some a business - he knows governments are never senting transportation workers was in an trouble for saying that a city could be run with "just a mayor, a police chief, a planning director, a purchasing agent and a handful of contract monitors." He was exaggerating but not

> By streamlining non-essential services and "marketizing" everything else, Goldsmith was able to add 100 new police officers, improve fire protection and spend $750 million on infrastructure. During each year of his mayoralty, the city's budget was reduced, and taxes declined slightly.

The city is now enjoying an unprecedented boom and has been host to 3,500 mayors, governors and councilmen from around the world seeking the key to such success.

But as Goldsmith will tell you, the key is easy stick to your principles.

different kind of cultural revolution

TIANJIN, China - Touring a Motorola plant here, I find myself thinking about "Mulan." The Motorola plant is modern. Very. Vast, gleaming workspaces. Clean. Bright. About as far from a sweatshop as Tianjin is from Cleveland. At long tables, dozens and dozens of Chinese women are assembling pagers. It's close work, delicate, difficult. Their fingers fly. Motorola wants to show the best and the brightest of its Chinese plants to an American reporter. The company believes it makes good business sense to pay better wages, to provide better working conditions, for more and more Chinese employees

Not all factories in China are thus. Human rights organizations say that some of the worst working conditions in the world today are found in China. Cramped, unsanitary, low-paying and the very worst are literally slave-labor camps

What's this got to do with "Mulan"? Well, the movie's heroine - Mulan herself - is Chinese. She looks Chinese. So do her friends. No other leading character in a Disney cartoon feature has been or looked Chinese. Only recently (with films such as "Aladdin" and "Pocahontas") did leading characters begin to such as Motorola and Disney can't bring politilook anything other than white Anglo-Saxon sometimes even when they were ducks or rabsee a hero who looks like you. You don't have to see "Mulan" to grasp the significance of this. All you need to do is look at the toys. Across China today, workers are makinb "Mulan" toys - figures that look like Chinese people.

Licensing has been a big part of the Disney company's financial success. Even when people weren't going to the movies, they were buying Mickey Mouse watches, books, stuffed animals, clothing - you name it.

Disney doesn't usually make such products in-house. Instead, it sells licenses, and other companies then manufacture products using the characters' images.

These days, a great percentage of Disneylicensed products are made in China. A quick tour of a Disney store near my office confirms that most of the "Mulan" products for sale there were made in China.

By themselves, big international companies cal rights to China. However, they are trying to improve working conditions in that country, either by building glistening facilities such as of their licensees, as Disney does. But in the movies, Mulan doesn't wait for other people to solve her problems. She tackles them herself. It's possible Chinese workers will never see the movie (although Disney is currently negotiating with the Chinese government to release the film soon). So they may not see what a young Chinese girl can do - in the movies, if not under the current regime.

Mulan breaks all the rules, deceives her government, disguises herself as a soldier and saves her people in wartime. Mulan is a heroine through exactly the kind of defiant independence that is NOT TOLERATED in China today. Chinese workers may LOOK like Mulan, but they may never have the opportunity to ACT like her. In truth, looking AT her may be as much as they're ever able to do.

The Chinese government allows a limited amount of capitalism nowadays. It does not allow independence. It does not want real-life

Yet, as I walk around the Motorola plant,' I can see the face of Mulan on the faces of the women at work. The work is not easy. And if these women are capable of this work, what else might they achieve?

There's the potential here, for a story far more thrilling than anything in the movies. A different kind of cultural revolution.

U.S. Army general in hot water

WASHINGTON (AP) - A retired two-star Army general "engaged in a pattern of inappropriate behavior" with the wives of four subordinates while he was the top American military officer at a NATO base in Turkey, an internal Pentagon investigation concludes.

Maj. Gen. David Hale also sanctioned the misuse of government funds for travel and made "false and misleading statements" to investigators and Pentagon officials, said the report by Defense Department Inspector General Eleanor Hill.

A copy of the 49-page report was obtained Monday by The Associated Press.

The allegations involve a period from 1996 to 1997 while Hale was stationed in Turkey as the deputy commanding general for NATO land forces in southeastern Europe.

The Army announced last week that it was opening a criminal investigation of Hale, 53, who retired earlier this year after serving only four months as the Army's deputy inspector general.

He has not been available for comment. The inspector general's report, however, said Hale "strongly denied all the allegations of inappropriate conduct," while acknowledging a "relationship that he maintained with the former spouse of a subordinate Army officer who served with him in Hawaii."

Hale called some of the allegations against him "bizarre," the report said.

Pentagon spokesman, said Monday: "The Department of Defense has not officially released the report and no release date has been determined at this time. The report has been provided to the Army and to select members and committees of Congress."

Rep. Carolyn Maloney, D-N.Y., who has been outspoken on allegations of sexual harassment and abuse of women in the military, said it confirmed her "worst suspicions"

"Not only have most of those charges been confirmed, but a pattern of similar behavior, involving the wives of other subordinate officers, has been established," Maloney said.

"It's just aggravating," she added, complaining that, "Hale is retired somewhere, fat and happy, while others who are accused of much lesser crimes face court-martials, public humiliation and financial ruin."

Cohen ordered the investigation in March to determine, among other things, why Hale was allowed to retire honorably while the sexual investigation was under way.

The report made no specific recommendation for a next step, suggesting further proceedings should be left to the secretary of the Army Donnamaria Carpino, the wife of an Army colonel, told military investigators that Hale had forced her into a four-month sexual relationship in Izmir, Turkey, while her husband was posted there. She said Hale threatened to ruin her husband's career.

"It was coercion. It was psychological rape," Carpino said Monday night on ABC News.

The Pentagon report concluded that the relationship "was prejudicial to good order and discipline and brought discredit on the armed forces." However, the report also found that "the preponderance of evidence indicated that the sexual activity ... was consensual."

The report also said Hale improperly sanctioned the "misruse of government funds" to pay for her air fare between Turkey and the United States so she could accompany him on a trip in 1997, including a night they allegedly spent together in May 1997 at a hotel in Farmington, Conn.

She told investigators that while she was delivering Christmas cookies to Hale in December 1996 he closed the office door and "suddenly and unexpectedly expressed special feelings for her and kissed her on the lips."

Protestants attack police, set cars ablaze over blocked march

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) – Determined to overturn police restrictions on their march, Protestants attacked police overnight in Belfast with bullets, rocks, gasoline bombs and grenades in the most serious street violence since April's peace agree-

The British army announced today it was deploying an extra two battalions of soldiers to Northern Ireland after a second night of widespread protests and mob violence in Protestant districts.

The Orange Order, Northern Ireland's conservative Protestant brotherhood, appealed for nonviolent protests only against police restrictions on their annual march last Sunday through the main Catholic section of Portadown, 30 miles southwest of Belfast.

Britain's minister responsible for governing Northern Ireland, Mo Mowlam, urged Orangemen "to recognize that there are sinister elements who are using their protest to attack the security forces."

The imminent deployment of the first battalions of the elite Parachute Regiment and King's Regiment by plane from England – swelling the combined strength of police and troops here to more than 30,000 – underscored British resolve to quell the mayhem before it turns deadly.

"Orangemen must realize that if this violence continues, it will only be a matter of time before we once again are following coffins," said David Trimble, a past defender of Portadown's Orangemen who is the newly elected minister heading Northern Ireland's power-sharing government.

In London, Prime Minister Tony Blair announced he would be "very pleased to meet" an Orange delegation at his London office, probably Wednesday, to hear their demand to be allowed to march past Catholic homes along Portadown's Garvaghy Road.

On Monday night, Orangemen established human blockades across main roads and traveled in a convoy to Hillsborough, a picturesque village midway between Portadown and Belfast, to mount a round-the-clock "Freedom Camp" of protesters outside Mowlam's castle residence.

Police came under rifle fire in three parts of Belfast as they tried to stop drunken youths from hijacking cars and creating flaming road barricades across the city.

Youths barraged a north Belfast police station with gasoline and paint bombs and Youths barraged a north Belfast police station with gasoline and paint bombs, and threw a grenade at a passing police armored car.

In the predominantly Protestant town of Carrickfergus, north of Belfast, people threw 10 grenades at a police barracks, and two more into the backyard of a policeman's home. They also gasoline-bombed a bed-and-breakfast where 14 guests were staying.

"My husband was fighting the fire with one extinguisher and I ran up to get two more. We martaged to get it out but it was very, very dangerous," owner Mandy Mulholland said.

Gasoline bombs damaged the Holy Cross Catholic elementary school in north Belfast. And in the overwhelmingly Protestant village of Dromore, southwest of Belfast, a Catholic priest's car was set on fire, as was the gas station beside his home.

In 1996, police blocked the Orangemen before they could reach Portadown's Garvaghy Road, where anti-Orange protesters have tried to block the march for the past three years. But after four nights of Protestant rioting, police caved in and allowed the Orangemen to march down the road, a bitter outcome that Blair and police chiefs insist won't happen this time.

Now, backed by British soldiers in armored personnel carriers, police are patrolling Belfast in strength from dusk until dawn.

Orangemen in Portadown, dubbed "the Vatican of Orangeism" because of its symbolic importance as the birthplace of the 203-year-old group, have refused to negotiate with the Catholic protesters. They say they'll camp out until authorities dismantle the barbed-wire barricades blocking them from Garvaghy Road.

A few hundred Orangemen slept all night in their tents outside Drumcree Anglican church, where Portadown Orangemen were prevented Sunday from marching farther. In contrast to 1996, when riot police and Protestants clashed violently outside the church, the Drumcree standoff this year has taken on a relaxed, even festive atmosphere. Booths set up under a big tent sell burgers and baby's bibs that declare, "Born to walk the Garvaghy Road."

Animal abuser receives 12 years

JANESVILLE, Wis. (AP) – A man who admitted beating five cats to death was sentenced to 12 years in prison, even though prosecutors recommended a four-year sentence.

About 200 animal-rights activists who packed the court cheered Monday's sentencing of Barry Herbeck, 37, of Janesville, who got the maximum term from Rock County Circuit Judge Richard Werner.

In May, Herbeck pleaded no contest to charges that he killed the cats. As part of a plea deal, a charge that Herbeck killed a puppy was dismissed.

Herbeck told investigators he took in cats and killed them to relieve anger built up from being

Attending Texas Farm Bureau's 35th annual Citizenship Seminar held recently in San Angelo were (left-right) Jeremy Pierce and Shelly Murry, both of Lefors, and Briam Fuller of McLean. Sponsored by Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau, these students were among 350 high school juniors and seniors from over 150 counties across the state. The purpose of the seminar is to provide students with better understanding of their American heritage and the capitalistic free enterprise system, according to James Hefley of Gray-Roberts, county FB president. Speakers at the seminar included FB president, Bob Stallman, Dr. James Hindman, president of Angelo State University, and David Vernon, of Lubbock Christian University, to name a few.

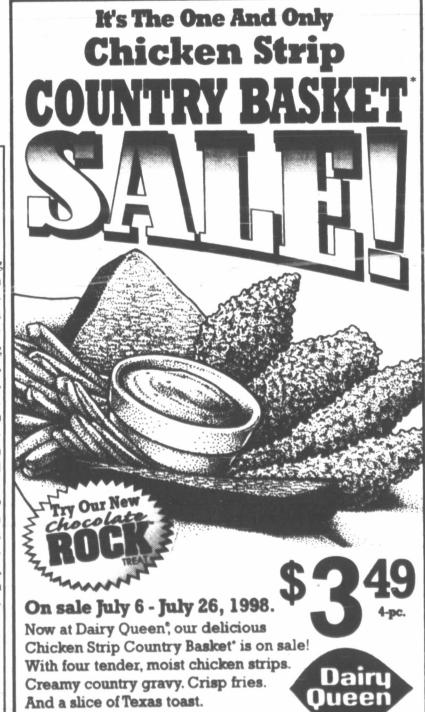

Pain may be eliminated for millions

(SPECIAL) -- A drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis," and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis, relieves pain by first selectively attracting, and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis, is available immediately without a prescription in an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream or new roll-on lotion form. Arthur Itis, is guaranteed to work or your money back. Smooth Divorce Hits a Bump When Mom Plans to Relocate

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Beth, and I are being divorced, and until recently, things were cordial and polite. At first, she was going to remain here in Oregon and allow me convenient access to our daughter, Cathy, who is 6 years old.

Beth tried for three years, with little success, to get her own business going here in Oregon. I must admit that she's tried hard. Now she has received an offer to relocate to Florida and live in the home of a male friend while he is away in the Navy for the next few years. She is involved in a multilevel business and her "up-line," who lives in Florida (not the person who owns the house), has promised to get her set up and on her feet. She's planning to move before the end of the sum-

This morning I asked Beth if she'd consider going to Florida alone for the first six months to see if she likes it. She rejected the idea.

I am staying with my parents now, and they are really upset about the idea of Cathy leaving. My mother wants me to fight it. They love their granddaughter and see her quite often.

Abby, I want this divorce to be amiable. It was, until Beth decided to move to Florida. I suppose if she does move and gets her life together, I could move to Florida to be close to our daughter.

Should I try to control my animosity and allow Beth to go to Florida and tell my parents to butt out? Or should I try to force her to stay here in Oregon? I'm certain

She should also have known to ask for another gown to cover her backside, or how to use a robe or sheet to drape around herself to go to the

I can't be sure without all the facts, but I'm guessing that "Exhausted" is a typical hypochondriac trying to get a few days in the hospital complete with "maid" service by her nurses, while her insurance pays for this "vacation."

No one who is truly sick gets up and leaves for the reasons she gave. And if rest at home was better than what she could get in the hospital, why didn't she just stay home in the first place?

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) -The Oakland Raiders signed free agent quarterback Wade Wilson, a veteran of 17 NFL seasons who spent the past three years with the Dallas Cowboys.

The 39-year-old alumnus of East Texas State has made 66 starts in 120 career games. As a starter, he is 37-31.

"He'll come in as our No. 3 quarterback and will be a good complement to starter Jeff George and Donald Hollas," Raiders coach Jon Gruden said Monday.

Wilson, drafted Minnesota in 1981, has played with the Vikings, Atlanta Falcons, New Orleans Saints and Dallas.

Wilson led the Vikings to three playoff appearances, including the NFC championship game in 1987.

WACO, Texas (AP) —

Baylor University is considering phasing out its tradition of using a live bear as its mascot.

"In the past when we retired bears we found new homes for them at zoos and wildlife parks," Baylor spokesman Larry Brumley said. "Now we're running into challenges finding acceptable places for the bears to retire to. That's part of what's driving this.

Baylor has used live bears as mascots since World War I, when a bear named Ted was given to the university the Army's 107th after Engineers they received orders to leave Camp MacArthur in Waco.

The two bears now acting as mascots are Ginny, 2 1/2, and Bill Boyd, 9.

Traditionally, Baylor has trotted out the bears at football games, both at home and away. However, the school's entry into the farflung Big 12 conference has restricted the mascots' traveling in recent years.

Brumley also said athletic directors are increasingly refusing to let live mascots into stadiums for liability reasons.

"Placing a bear is not like placing a dog," said Rosie Roegner, nongame permit coordinator for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "Black bears require a special diet — you just can't go down to the store and get bear chow and special facilities. They're not easy to place."

Baylor used to send its former mascots to zoos and wildlife parks such as the defunct Texas Safari in Clifton. However, Roegner said, such sites are no longer hungry for out-ofwork bears because they aren't a big attraction for zoo visitors.

In 1940, the Baylor Chamber of Commerce, the campus organization that looks after the mascots, raised $2,500 to build the first permanent home for the school's bears.

The so-called Bear Pit gave way in 1977 to a plaza across from the student center that features a large roaming area, a waterfall and a viewing area for spectators.

bears Baylor have marched in homecoming been parades, photographed with governors and even a president. Ronald Reagan helped Abner the Bear down a Dr Pepper during a 1980 campaign stop in Waco.

Brumley told the Waco Tribune-Herald that a decision on whether to keep the bears probably won't be made until the fall.

Griffey had said for more than a month that he would not participate, a stance that led to him being booed loudly when the AL took batting practice. But when it came time for the contest, Griffey was in the lineup and he wound up beating out Jim Thome in the final round.

"I felt if I felt good in BP, I'd be in it. I don't like to get booed. I've got 4 million reasons to do it," said Griffey, the top vote-getter in fan balloting for All-Star starting

Local girls win opener

DUMAS — Pampa's 11-12 year-old girls' softball all-stars began play Monday night in the Area 1 Tournament with a convincing win over the Stinnett all-stars, 12-0.

Pampa played a near perfect game with great pitching, good hitting and errorless defense to end the game with the 10-run rule in effect after four innings.

Chelsey Davis, Pampa's starting pitcher, pitched four complete innings, allowing only a bloop single in the fourth for Stinnett's only hit and base runner. On an attempted steal after the hit, backup catcher Jaclyn Spearman threw to second baseman Teryn Garner who made the tag to erase the runner. Davis recorded seven strikeouts and did not allow a walk. She picked up the win to go 1-0 in tournament action.

Pampa plays Borger, who was idle, at 6 tonight in Dumas.

Pampa's leading hitters against Dumas were Jennie Waggoner, home run, single and 2 RBI; Wendi Miller, double, single and 1 RBI; Kellie Mullican, 2 singles and 2 RBI; Erin Norris, home run and 2 RBI.

looked like an improved version of the team that won the franchise's first divisional title in 1996.

But cracks were already appearing in the foundation, and they only got bigger as the Rangers went from holding a six-game lead over Anaheim on May 27 to trailing by 3 1/2 games on July 1.

The most obvious problem was wafer-thin pitching staff. Although Rick Helling and Aaron Sele surpassed expectations, three others - Darren Oliver, John Burkett and Bobby Witt - were ineffective.

longest U.S. Women's Open already had enough experience in the water at No. 18, where she had to get both feet wet hitting her second shot.

And Pak already believed she let her guard down far enough.

'First time I cry in my life," the 20-year-old South Korean said after her long birdie putt on the 20th hole put away Chuasiriporn in the first sudden death of this event.

Impervious to pressure through 92 holes, Pak was a bundle of emotions when the tournament finally ended after five hours on the rugged Blackwolf Run Golf Course.

But taking a dunk was a bit too

"I told her to jump in the water, but she wouldn't," Chuasiriporn said. "I told her she had to. She said, 'No, I can't do it.'

"I was going to, though."

What Pak did do was pump her right fist, then hold it high, along with the putter in her left hand. Then she searched the crowd for her father, Joon-Chul. Chuasiriporn's chip for a birdie from the rough was way too hard and ended up 10 feet past the hole.

Pak's putt for par was short, leaving Chuasiriporn, who had parred 10 through 17, with a chance to win it all. But the ball went past by less than an inch, and her tap-in for bogey sent the twosome back to the 564-yard, par-5 10th hole for sudden death.

There was a special buzz in the arose about whether the man of all time. Was Sampras, in this era of fast, heavy hitters with giant, space-age rackets, the best ever to play the game? Better than Borg? Better than Laver? Better than Roy Bill Tilden, who ruled the Roaring

And what of John McEnroe or Jimmy Connors, geniuses with rackets no matter how they acted

And then there was the whitehaired gentleman who sat quietly comparing champions of different at a table a few yards from Sampras' chair on the dais. He considering how they would fare stood up, smiled and waved to the assembled 400 when introduced, receiving the most affectionate applause, then retreated from the spotlight.

At 85, Don Budge is among the oldest of the champions who took tennis to international prominence by touring the world with their wooden rackets and white balls, playing on every surface from grass and clay to carpet and concrete and gymnasium-floor wood.

During Centre Court ceremonies at Wimbledon this year, Budge was introduced as "the tall red-headed Californian with the greatest backhand ever." His mark on the game, in fact, was much

Surely, it could be argued, that if you magically took all the great champions at the peak of their idol Rod Laver for overall Grand Wimbledon, Sampras still might

He might have the best serve air on this occasion and a debate ever and he volleys with such solidity and swiftness that he is the hour was indeed the man for almost impenetrable at the net. He has, as he likes to say in evaluating others, no holes in his game. His forehand is second to none, his backhand is more than adequate. It could be argued with equal Emerson, who won 12 majors, or validity that Boris Becker, with his flair at the net, might in his heyday have been better on grass. Or that Borg, who revamped his baseline game to win Wimbledon five straight times, was the greater genius.

In the ever fanciful endeavor of eras in any sport, the test is not in against each other but in how they fared in their own times. And in tennis, the further issue is how they handled the many surfaces on which the game is played.

In that regard, Sampras doesn't match up with Grand Slammers Budge or Laver. Nor with Connors, McEnroe, Borg or Ivan Lendl — none of whom won all four majors but who demonstrated proficiency on all four surfaces.

Connors won the U.S. Open on grass, clay and hard courts, won Wimbledon twice, finished runner-up four times, and won the Australian on grass. Lendl won five of his eight majors on hard courts — three U.S. Opens, two Australians — plus three French Opens. And though he struggled to adapt to grass, he still reached the Wimbledon final twice and the semifinals four times. Sampras suffers by comparison because of his utter failures on accomplishment that gave birth to clay, a slippery, slow surface that may not be to his liking or training but one that is the court of choice Nobody had done it before. Rod all over Europe and Latin Laver is the only man to have America. In the most important clay court event, the French Open, Sampras has gone as far as the "that no other American man has semifinals only once in nine

Authorities searching for bones of woman missing since

DENTON, Texas (AP) - The long-forgotten case of a college student who vanished 50 years ago has been reopened after a tip from an elderly man who claims to have known the woman's killers. Police excavated the earthen dam of a stock tank east of downtown Denton on Monday, sifting dirt for the remains of Virginia

"Passages for Men Getting Your Life's Worth Out of Every Stage" by Gail Sheehy

The author of the best-selling "New Passages" and "The Silent Passage" now turns her perceptive eye on men today - their problems, their passions, their hunger for renewal - in a book that every man should read ... and every woman will.

"Sugar Busters! Cut Sugar to Trim Fat"
The fact: Low-fat diets don't work. The reason: Because they are high in sugar. Sugar produces insulin that, in large amounts, keeps weight from coming off - in spite of strict dieting and exercise. The answer: Sugar Busters! Developed by renowned physicians and based on sound nutritional principles, this groundbreaking diet program explains how to eliminate sugar daily through easy-to-follow recipes and meal plans.

"Unspeakable" by Sandra Brown

The author adds to her 31 New York Times bestsellers with the haunting story of a convicted killer who returns to an East Texas cattle ranch with the worst of intentions. The sudden arrival of drifter Jack Sawyer threatens to shatter the lives of Anna Corbett, a deaf widow, her young son and her father-in-law. As Sawyer hones in on his destination, it becomes clear that only he can explain Anna's self-imposed silence and the mystery that binds them together.

"Secret Prey" by John Sandford

The ninth thriller in the unfailingly popular Prey series promises to be the most relentlessly suspenseful of all, as Lucas Davenport returns to face the dark cloud of evil that cost him his fiancee and nearly his life. Investigating the shooting of a CEO on a hunting trip, Davenport rounds up four of the dead man's colleagues, each with a complicated reason to rejoice in the man's demise. But Davenport soon realized that more than a single whodunit is involved - something much greater than the murder of a single man. With his own survival on the line, he determines to put an end to the secret forces howling in the cold woods.

"The Pilot's Wife" by Anita Shreve

Acclaimed for her ability to wind together the themes of jealousy and guilt into a taut tale of suspense, the author presents a story of marital secrets and their consequences. When her husband, a pilot, dies in a crash, Kathryn Lyons finds herself at the center of a media firestorm as disturbing rumors surface about the man she thought she knew. Torn between her impulse to protect her husband's memory and her desire to know the truth, Kathryn faces shocking revelations as the media seem determined to make her into a celebrity victim.

"Belladonna: A Novel of Revenge" by Karen

Reminiscent of Anne Rice's Beauty series, a keenly awaited story - the subject of articles in Entertainment Weekly, Variety and Publishers Weekly – features a mysterious woman whose sexual enslavement as a teenager fills her with a burning desire for revenge. Once the thrall of a sadistic ish nobleman, now living in New York, Rockefeller' Belladonna opens an opulent, exclusive club hoping to lure the men who ruined her life. She succeeds in pitting brother against brother, father against son, and confronting the one man who can free – or destroy – her.

"Summer Sisters" by Judy Blume

The always popular author of adult and young adult novels traces the bittersweet early life of two women - one the child of wealth, the other of the working class - growing up inseparable on Martha's Vineyard. The novel unravels the threads of their fates as they move through young adulthood and marriage, capturing the choices that force them to confront each other and the men and women who shape their lives. A novel about the passage from innocence to knowledge, the author's 22 book explores the bonds of kinship, class, family and friendship.
