Band-sponsored carnival in town June 9-June 14

Food, thrills and fun for all ages, will hit Pampa when the Pampa High School Band Boosters bring the Pride of Texas Carnival to town June 9 through June 14.

The Pampa High School Band Booster Food Trailer will sell hot dogs, burgers, nachos, drinks, homemade ice cream and their famous "Pride" Burgers.

There will be 89 items to bid on at the Silent Auction Booth. Various local merchants donate items to sell to the highest bidder. Some of the items to choose from this year are a Princess Diana beanie baby, a portable basketball goal, a Miami Dolphin watch that comes with a Zach Thomas rookie card, a talking pitchers target, a silver belt buckle and many more items for all ages. There will be many gift certificates from businesses and restaurants.

The carnival is the number-one fundraiser for the band and the proceeds from the food booth, silent auction and dunking booth help finance Pampa's award-winning band.

The dunking booth is a good way to get revenge on local celebrities. Some of the people to take the plunge this year are:

Water bill donations buy playground fixtures

New equipment going to Recreation Park

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Staff Writer

Recreation Park is scheduled to be the new home this fall of several brightly-colored pieces of playground equipment funded by Pampa citizens' water bill donations.

The city's parks department is aiming to have the playground equipment, which includes three swing sets with two swings each, a slide and a "Humpty Climber" unit, in place before Christmas.

The $6,600 total cost of the actual playground equipment is being paid from city water bill donations. Seventy-five cents of every dollar goes toward Pampa's parks department "for visible park improvement," according to Parks Director Reed Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick told the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board recently he thought he could have the equipment, benches and ground cover implemented at Recreation Park for approximately $10,000.

An additional proposal to purchase park benches was approved by the advisory board.

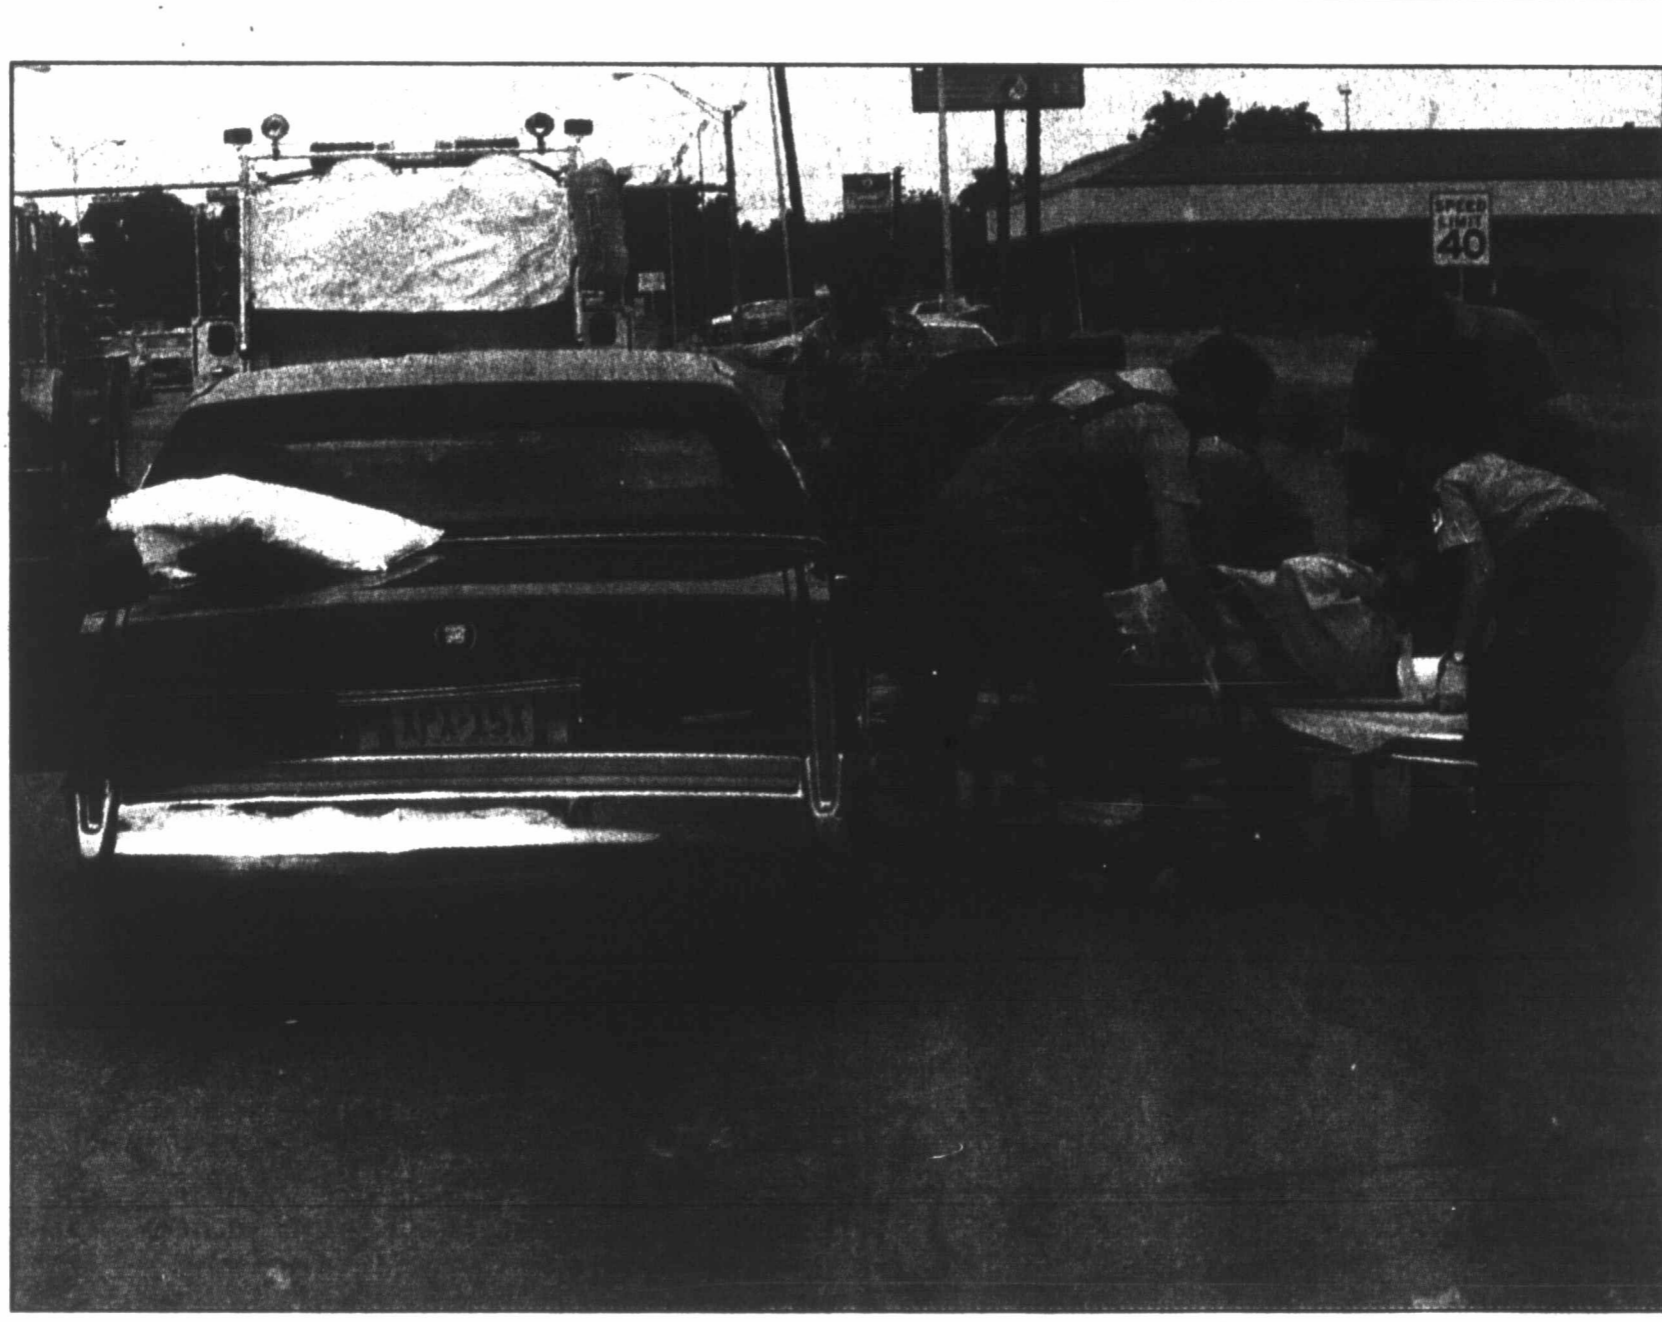

"I'd like to recommend that we appropriate money for benches and we'll leave that up to you to decide," said the board's chairman, Judy Elliott to Kirkpatrick.

Green, red and yellow were the colors chosen for the equipment by past advisory board member and current Pampa Art Club President Kathy Gist. Gist and another Art Club member, Frances Hall, made recommendations for equipment coloring at the board's request.

During the discussion of colors for the equipment, board member Rusty Neef asked if a study had been done concluding that certain colors "retard the desire for people to vandalize?"

"Yes sir, extensive studies have indicated that more neutral, earthtone colored objects make people less likely to vandalize," Kirkpatrick said in response.

Green, Kirkpatrick said, yellow and red qualify as a natural and earthtone colors. The colors recommended for the equipment were approved.

Lawmen surround two survivalists in Utah wilderness canyon hideout

BLUFF, Utah (AP) — In a scene reminiscent of the Wild West, authorities said two survivalists suspected of killing a lawman and wounding two others were surrounded today in a canyon in the Utah wilderness.

A third suspect was dead, with pipe bombs attached to his body, apparently after shooting himself.

Scores of law-enforcement officers, including National Guard troops and SWAT teams, converged on southeast Utah, not far from the Four Corners area where Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid used to hide from posses led by Pinkerton detectives.

The manhunt began May 29 after police officer Dale Claxton, 45, was slain in a barrage of gunfire in Cortez, Colo., 50 miles east of here. Two other officers were wounded in the ensuing shootout.

Based on a tip, authorities identified the suspects as Robert Mason, Alan "Monte"

Pilon and Jason Wayne McVean, but they found nothing but a pair of tracks until Thursday.

That's when Kelly Bradford, a San Juan County sheriff's deputy, was shot as he checked a report that a camouflage-clad gunman had fired at a social worker. Bradford, 35, was in serious condition at a Colorado hospital.

Bluff, a colorful artists' colony of about 300 people, was evacuated after Bradford was shot. Found 300 yards away was the camouflage-clad body of Mason, 26, of Durango, Colo.

Authorities did not know if Mason had shot Bradford. Sheriff Mike Lacey said Mason appeared to have shot himself in the head. A bomb squad was called to remove the pipe bombs.

Officers followed tracks until dark

Thursday before the ground search for Pilon, 30, of Dove Creek, Colo., and McVean, 26, of Durango was called off for the night.
 Helicopters with night-vision equipment searched through the night, but around dawn, authorities said there had been no new developments.
 Lacey said the fugitives were believed to be surrounded in a 7-by-2 mile area in a rugged region of heavy brush and woods near the San Juan River. He said a SWAT team was stationed downriver in case the men tried to leave by boat.
 Cortez Police Chief Roy Lane said Pilon had a history of anti-government views and owed the Internal Revenue Service $1,500. But the three, who all worked in construction, had no known links to anti-government groups.
 "They are outdoor survivalist-type people but have no connection to any militias that we've found," Lane said earlier this week. McVean was convicted of criminal trespass several years ago for breaking into cars, while Pilon had a drunken driving conviction.
 Claxton was shot last Friday after he stopped a stolen truck.

 Investigators suspect the three men may have robbed a casino in Taos, N.M., in January 1997 and might have been planning another casino heist at the time the stolen truck was stopped.
 The state social worker who was shot at on Thursday, Steve Wilcox, had been visiting Navajo families when he encountered a man dressed in camouflage clothing and carrying a high-powered rifle.
 Wilcox's wife, Janet, said he "was driving back from having lunch by the river when he saw some boots in the road." That's when he saw the man hiding in some bushes "pointing a rifle at him."
 Wilcox sped away and heard a gunshot and "saw dust kick up," his wife said. He called 911 on his car phone and met Bradford, who put on a protective vest before he was shot.
 "He's a pretty young officer and his wife is expecting a baby in a couple of weeks," Mrs. Wilcox said of Bradford. "These men are awful. They don't ask questions. They just come out shooting."
 Police said they found three pipe bombs in Pilon's camper and two more bombs in Mason's pickup truck, which was parked next to the camper near Durango. The bombs were detonated by a bomb squad.

Woman who tried to swap baby sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — A homeless woman who tried to trade her 2-year-old son for a custom van has been sentenced to two years in prison.
 Amanda Lee Odeal could be eligible for parole in about a month because of credit for time already spent in the Harris County Jail.
 She says she wants to regain custody of the boy she was trying to raise on the streets.
 "It's one of the saddest and most heartbreaking cases I've ever seen," said Jay Karahan, Ms. Odeal's court-appointed attorney.
 Visiting state District Judge Robert D. Jones imposed the sentence after the woman returned from a three-month stay in a state mental hospital.
 Ms. Odeal pleaded no contest after she was judged mentally competent to stand trial, Karahan said.
 Kim Fahmy, who lives in north Harris County, says she picked up the woman in downtown Houston on Aug. 11.

She said the woman was using a pay phone and the child was wearing new shoes and playing in the street.
 The woman said she took Ms. Odale and the child to her home and gave the boy a bath, treated him for a diaper rash and gave Ms. Odale clothing.
 She also bought them lunch and arranged for them to stay in a homeless shelter in Montgomery County.
 Ms. Fahmy said that as they drove to the shelter, Ms. Odale offered to trade the boy for the van. The woman told Ms. Fahmy that she and her son, Joshua, had lived on the streets and in shelters for two years.
 Ms. Fahmy testified that Ms. Odale told her she could live in the van by herself. She said she thought it was a joke until Ms. Odale asked her to wait until she could cross state lines before reporting the van stolen.
 After Ms. Fahmy reported the trade offer to shelter officials, Montgomery County Child Protective Service officials were notified.

UAW strikes key General Motors truck parts plant in Flint, Mich.

DETROIT (AP) — More than 3,300 United Auto Workers went out on strike today at a key General Motors Corp. stamping plant that makes parts for its lucrative light trucks.

The strike, the seventh against GM since early 1997, came after negotiators failed to reach agreement by the union's 10 a.m. deadline. Talks went around the clock in the final day.

A lengthy strike could cost the No. 1 automaker hundreds of millions of dollars in lost sales of its high-profit pickups, sport utility vehicles and minivans. Like the rest of the industry, GM has been enjoying strong sales of light trucks.

The Flint Metal Center north of Detroit makes fenders, doors, hoods and other sheet metal parts for most of GM's full-size light trucks and some cars. With 3,377 hourly workers, the plant supplies 16 GM assembly plants in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

The strike also could delay the scheduled fall launch of GM's redesigned full-size pickup, the 1999 Chevrolet Silverado, and its twin, the GMC Sierra. A smooth launch is critical: The truck is GM's highest-volume vehicle and a major profit source.

The UAW also increased pressure for a settlement by threatening to strike another key GM parts plant in Flint. The union said it may walk out next Thursday night if no agreement is reached at the Flint East complex operated by GM's Delphi subsidiary. Talks were to continue there today. Some industry observers say the threat is so great that the issues at the Flint Metal Center are likely to be settled soon.

"I don't see them doing a major strike," Merrill Lynch analyst Nicholas Lobaccaro said Thursday. "A couple of days at most. Their differences are not irreconcilable."

UAW officials have charged that GM has not spent the $300 million it promised to upgrade the plant, and that the automaker plans to cut 191 jobs.

GM insists it has made a significant portion of the planned investment, though officials will not say how much. The company alleges the union has not cooperated with changes it wants to make the plant more competitive.

The company tried to remove key equipment from the plant as the strike deadline neared, angering the UAW. On Wednesday, the company hired trucks to remove some parts racks, but was thwarted by more than 100 UAW members who blocked the exits. Over Memorial Day weekend, when the plant was idle, GM removed dies used to form parts for the new pickup.

The moves increased fears among workers that GM may permanently pare work at the plant or close it altogether. They also made negotiations tougher, said Norm McComb, first vice president of Local 659.

"It just made for a bad atmosphere, worse than what it already was," McComb said.

Worker shoots three managers, self

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — It was mid-morning on a work day when William Muth Jr. arrived at his sister's house. She asked him if he had the day off from his job at a U.S. Foodservice Inc. distribution center.

"No, not really," he said. "I've got some personal business to take care of."

A little later, police said, Muth walked back into the plant and shot three managers Thursday, killing one who was on a conference call with the company president. Then he shot himself to death.

Muth, 41, a 12-year warehouse worker at U.S. Foodservice, had been sent home after a meeting but returned around 11:30 a.m., Lehigh County District Attorney James B. Martin said.

Muth shot his supervisor, warehouse manager Earl A. "Sonny" Moritz, and human resources manager Timothy Kita with a .40-caliber semi-automatic handgun as they were on a conference call.

Then he walked down the hall and fired through a wooden conference room door, hitting John Leodler, vice president of operations, in the face.

"I was on the telephone in the middle of a conference call with people in this office when I heard the gun shots through the phone," Jim Miller, CEO of the Columbia, Md.-based company, said outside the plant.

The shooting "involved, we believe, a disciplinary action that was being taken by Mr. Moritz," Martin said. "I think they're going to have to wait for the recovery of Mr. Leodler and Mr. Kita to shed some light on what occurred."

Moritz, 48, of Allentown was pronounced dead at the scene.

"A while ago, Sonny told me this guy was threatening him," said Moritz's wife, Cheryl. "I just said, 'Sonny, be careful.'"

Leodler, 46, was in stable condition and Kita, 37, in critical condition at Lehigh Valley Hospital, spokeswoman Tracey Micio said.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: The Dallas Morning News on Texas casinos:

Gov. George W. Bush has nothing personal against the Tigua or Kickapoo tribes. But he is very opposed to permitting casino-style gambling in this state without first getting approval from Texas voters.

That's what has happened on the Tigua and Kickapoo reservations, where two casinos provide a wide array of gambling, including slot machines and table games.

The Texas Lottery Commission's legal counsel visited the Tiguas' Speaking Rock Casino in El Paso and said the gambling operations do not appear to be lawful.

That is why Gov. Bush is right to try to shut down all wagering activities at the casino that violate Texas law. And that is why we share his hope that a court will review the gambling operations at the Kickapoo's Lucky Eagle casino in Eagle Pass.

If the tribes offer gambling that isn't legal in Texas, the camel's nose and neck and shoulders will be under the tent. That's a tempting opening for other casino interests who want to move into the state.

Major gaming companies can argue that Texas needs a casino gambling law so it will be able to regulate wagering. And the failed attempt to sell casino legislation to Texas lawmakers a few years ago will be back on the front burner.

Regardless of how individuals feel about casino gambling, all Texans should be concerned that this kind of wagering could come to our state without authorization.

Lawyers for the two tribes insist the casinos comply with state laws. They argue that adoption of a state lottery in 1991 opened Texas to public wagering.

But the sale of individual lottery tickets at convenience stores is a far cry from long rows of electronic slot machines, with bells and lights to lure more customers in. The state has argued that point long before this latest controversy with the Tiguas and Kickapoo emerged.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales concluded that the eight-liner gaming machines in restaurants and bars around Texas are against the law and has ordered them seized.

It is unfortunate that some have tried to paint Gov. Bush's actions as a political move against two of the nation's more impoverished tribes. This isn't about the Tiguas or the Kickapoo. The governor does not want to close their casinos or to cut off their livelihood. He simply wants everyone who lives in Texas to comply with state laws.

San Antonio Express-News on Clinton's China trip: Congressional Republicans and human rights advocates are right about President Clinton's planned summer trip to China. He should cancel it.

The president's upcoming China sojourn is clouded by at least two important factors.

First, Clinton will travel through Tiananmen Square, and he possibly will attend a welcoming ceremony at the infamous site.

In 1989, hundreds of demonstrators seeking democracy were massacred there by Chinese forces.

By traveling to Tiananmen Square to meet with the Chinese oppressors, the leader of the free world will send the wrong message.

The Chinese government crackdown on the young protesters was an outrage that should offend anyone who cares about freedom.

Clinton says he has voiced his concerns in private.

But a trip to Tiananmen Square with no plans to honor the protesters would be a misstep.

Also worrisome is the president's latest campaign finance controversy.

After the Democratic National Committee received $100,000 reportedly funneled from a Chinese military official and more than $600,000 from the head of Loral Space and Communications, Clinton signed a waiver allowing the firm to export satellites to China.

The president granted the waiver despite the fact that Loral was under investigation by the U.S. Department of Justice to determine whether it provided sensitive military information to China earlier.

The situation raises serious questions about China's attempts to influence American policy in the 1996 presidential election.

Of course, another key concern is whether Clinton's satellite waiver decision, which involved national security implications, was influenced by campaign contributions.

Bernard Schwartz, the chief executive officer of Loral, was the largest individual contributor to the Democratic Party in 1996.

Congressional committees are looking into the matter.

Clinton has said he would welcome a Justice Department probe of the controversy.

Even a majority of House Democrats voted last week to block the president from making satellite and missile agreements with China during the trip.

Until all the details of the campaign contributions and the Loral deal are in the open, a presidential trip to China will be counterproductive.

A trip to the inner suburb

Dan Rather
 Syndicated columnist

EAST LOS ANGELES, Calif. — When reporters from the Northeast come to Los Angeles for the first time, they always ask to see the slums, the "inner city," the sometimes over-boiling melting pot of Southern California.

And when they get there, they say, "Where is it? Where are the slums?"

In truth Los Angeles doesn't have many stereotypical slums, as Northeasterners understand them. Most of Los Angeles looks like a suburb: single-family dwellings, tidy yards, smallish apartment buildings. Not Simpson's Brentwood or "Knots Landing," but not tenements, either.

Walk the streets of East L.A. with me. They're the living, throbbing heart of Los Angeles and, indeed, of America as it approaches the 21st century.

White migrants from various European heritages, from the American Midwest and South, helped build this neighborhood in the early part of this century. There followed a heavy influx of Irish and Jewish lower- and middle-class families: California dreaming, chasing the great American dream.

Today East L.A. is heavily populated by Mexicans and their American children. As Pete Hamill writes in his new book, "News Is a Verb," East L.A. is "a true neighborhood, with middle-class folks in their own homes a few blocks from housing projects, dozens of shops, great music stores, fine restaurants, and a big main street that until recently was called Brooklyn Avenue." (Now it's Cesar Chavez Avenue.)

Your reporter finds abundant reminders that wave after wave of new immigrants from Mexico and elsewhere in Latin America have made deep, lasting changes in American culture. And in the daily life of our big cities.

You see it in Phoenix, San Antonio and Houston. You see it in Denver, El Paso and Miami. Each has its own booming inner city. And so do major metropolitan areas OUTSIDE the Southern and Western U.S.

Just before coming West, your reporter spent a day in New York City's thriving Spanish Harlem, and found it climbing away from the stigma "slum." New immigrants, many from Mexico, are feeling something like a boom.

But New York's Spanish Harlem is unlike the Spanish-speaking inner-city neighborhoods of the Western and Southern population centers. That's why Northeasterners may not recognize an inner-city when they see one.

Neighborhoods such as East L.A. are, as Hamill points out, "horizontal cities, unrestricted by geography, built AFTER the coming of the automobile; they had no need to emulate the verticality of the East."

"Innersuburbs," your reporter calls them. They look like suburbs. But they have the same problems — and the same potential for power — as the inner cities of the Northeast.

The center of gravity of American life has shifted in my lifetime and yours from the city to the suburb, from the Northeast to the South and West. An increasing weight within that center of gravity is immigration from Mexico, the Caribbean, Central and South America. Its core is in neighborhoods such as East L.A.

Walking the streets of East L.A., your reporter listened closely to what people are talking about, what's on their minds.

Their children and a yearning for better schools headed the list. Some still want schools to teach a majority of subjects in Spanish, but most (in this scattered, very lightweight sampling) don't. Most seem to believe that if their children don't learn English with something approaching native fluency, they will be disadvantaged for life.

That's a hot issue now. Parents, teachers, and politicians are reassessing and debating bilingual education in your state and mine. The results of California's vote on Proposition 227 — and, specifically, how East L.A. polled — will be scrutinized, and may wind up an important factor in your children's education.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 5, the 156th day of 1998. There are 209 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Thirty years ago, on June 5, 1968, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was shot and mortally wounded just after claiming victory in California's Democratic presidential primary. Gunman Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was immediately arrested.

On this date:

In 1723, economist Adam Smith was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland.

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1883, economist John Maynard Keynes was born in Cambridge, England.

In 1884, Civil War hero Gen. William T. Sherman refused the Republican presidential nomination, saying, "I will not accept if nominated and will not serve if elected."

In 1933, the United States abandoned the gold standard.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

In 1947, Secretary of State George C. Marshall gave a speech at Harvard University outlining an aid program for Europe that came to be known as "The Marshall Plan."

In 1967, war erupted in the Mideast as Israel, convinced an Arab attack was imminent, raided Egyptian military targets. Syria, Jordan and Iraq entered the conflict.

In 1975, Egypt reopened the Suez Canal to international shipping, eight years after closing it because of the 1967 war with Israel.

Pakistan unmoved by sanctions

Walter Mears
 AP Special Correspondent

Shrugging off American sanctions, a Pakistani diplomat said his nation was accustomed to them long before the nuclear weapons tests that triggered the latest punitive steps. Sanctions were automatic, against both India and Pakistan for their rival nuclear blasts.

The response amounts to so what.

Pakistan's ambassador to Washington dismissed the cost as paltry.

But the price would be substantial should economic sanctions against a nuclear arms race in South Asia gain broader international backing, to go along with sanctions already imposed by the United States, Japan and Canada.

Riaz Khokhar, the ambassador, said U.S. sanctions involved only $6 million. But the automatic sanctions also commit the United States to oppose a $1.6 billion loan from the International Monetary Fund.

Even so, economic punishment may not deter ancient enemies.

"Sanctions don't work in these areas," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, once U.S. ambassador to India. He said denial of international loans won't have much effect on the deep religious and ethnic enmity between Pakistan and India.

That's the sanctions dilemma. Economic sanctions restricting trade, aid and other relationships have increased markedly since the end of the Cold War, pressed by Congress, to the dismay of presidents, who want leeway to conduct foreign policy by negotiating with carrots as well as sticks.

"Most administrations, most presidents, including this one, seek flexibility so they can address each situation as the individual situation requires," said Mike McCurry, the White House press secretary. "And sometimes when you preordain conclusions in law, you make it harder to unravel complex problems."

McCurry said many other nations have little appetite "for the kind of unilateral economic sanctions that we invoke as a matter of law."

And he noted also that as a practical matter, unilateral U.S. sanctions sometimes open the door to foreign competitors who take over the trade Americans have to shun.

Beyond that, there's the question of what sanctions can and can't achieve. They seldom mean deprivation at the top — witness Saddam Hussein, still in control in Iraq, under U.N. sanctions dating from the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

They do affect commoners, especially the poor.

And they can rally a regime by giving its leaders an enemy to blame for poverty and shortages — the United States. Fidel Castro has been playing that hand in Cuba for three decades plus.

Dismissing the latest sanctions, Pakistan's foreign minister, Gohar Ayub Khan, said on CNN Sunday that "we are accustomed to it."

"And it is under embargoes and sanctions that we developed our nuclear and missile program," he said, insisting that Pakistan will emerge stronger despite them.

Pakistan was under U.S. sanctions, imposed in 1990 against aid unless the White House certified that Islamabad did not have nuclear explosive devices. That same law has blocked a $650 million shipment of U.S. warplanes, although Pakistan already has paid for them.

Overall, the President's Export Council reported in 1997 that more than 75 nations are now subject to or threatened with unilateral U.S. sanctions. The report said sanctions covered 27 different kinds of conduct the United States opposes.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., sponsoring legislation to overhaul the sanctions system, said the Institute for International Economics estimates that trade restrictions imposed for foreign policy purposes are costing $15 billion to $19 billion in annual export sales.

There are almost certainly more sanctions coming from Congress, including a bill to impose them against nations deemed guilty of religious persecution. Another measure would sanction Russia for nuclear power dealings with Iran.

President Clinton is waiving a sanction with his annual decision to continue standard trade and tariff status with China; that one dates from a 1974 law requiring that most-favored nation trade treatment be renewed each year for communist nations, passed originally to press the old Soviet Union for Jewish emigration.

It is subject to congressional disapproval, and that has been attempted each year since the Chinese democracy movement was crushed at Tiananmen Square nine years ago.

With disputes over satellite technology transfers and campaign money, and with Republicans linking China policy to the India-Pakistan nuclear flare, the extension this year could be more difficult than before, especially in the House.

"The timing obviously is not good," said Sen. Trent Lott, the Republican leader.

Thomas sends life aboard shuttle

Space Shuttle Discovery launched on Thursday, June 5, 1998, carrying the 28th mission, STS-77, to the Mir space station. The shuttle is scheduled to dock with the Russian space station on Saturday, June 6. The mission is the longest yet for the shuttle, lasting 28 days. The shuttle will deliver water, food and other supplies to Mir and move Thomas' experiments and other gear into Discovery. By early today, the crews had transferred 22 gallons of water to Mir, along with some flight data files.

Thomas, who spent the last 10 months of his life aboard the shuttle, was the first to look out the window of the shuttle. Thomas said that when the hatches had swung open, he had embraced his colleagues one by one as they floated in to greet him.

"It's really a wonderful moment for me," he gushed.

With the exception of a last weekend's failure with Mir's automatic docking system, Thomas' stay was uneventful compared to those of some of his six American predecessors.

RELIGION

Shakers still alive, attracting a few members to last village

By TOM KIRCHOFER
Associated Press Writer

NEW GLOUCESTER, Maine (AP) — The hymn "Rock of Ages" resonates powerfully through the sparsely furnished room where men sit on one side and women on the other.

No religious symbols are visible. The walls are plain, and the glass in the windows is wavy with age.

It's Sunday at the Sabbathday Lake Shaker Village, where a handful of Shakers carry on their religious tradition as they have for more than 200 years in the United States.

"There are some things about a day at Shaker Village that never change," said Sister Frances Carr, 70.

Many things have changed since the religion's heyday when it counted 5,000 followers and dozens lived in the community's imposing six-story house at Sabbathday Lake.

Now there are only seven followers, all in Maine.

The Shakers are a utopian Christian sect whose members pool their resources to put community before self. They swear off sex and the pursuit of material goods, which they say interfere with the worship of God.

They also are pacifists who believe in worshipping God through work, and every day they perform physical labor that ranges from tending the farm's herd of 50 sheep to preparing the community's main meal at noon.

"Our motto is, 'Hands to work, hearts to God,'" Sister Frances said during a break from the daily rhythm of work and prayer.

The Shakers settled in 1783 at Sabbathday Lake, one of 19 Shaker communities across the country at one time or another.

Sister Frances' family followed local custom by sending her to live with the Shakers when she was 10 because they could no longer care for her.

Back then, the Shaker house was bustling and followers worked nearly 2,000 acres in Maine.

Today, the village is home to just three men and three women. The seventh is in a nearby nursing home. Much of the Shakers' land in the rolling hills has been leased to lumberjacks, farmers and local residents.

The Shakers no longer take in children, but they still reach out to potential members through the mail. That's how Brother Arnold Hadd, 41, found the community. As a teenager in western Massachusetts in the 1970s, he wrote to the Shakers with questions about their customs and theology. He was invited to Sabbathday Lake for a visit. He joined in 1977.

The Shaker farm is a curious blend of old and new. The most recent building dates from 1910, and many of the rooms are furnished with antiques handed down through generations.

Unlike the Amish with whom they're often confused, the Shakers do not shun the modern world. In fact, they maintain a page on the World Wide Web.

"We were the first in town to have an automobile," Brother Arnold told a reporter.

In other ways, they are happily out of step with fast-paced modern America.

"Self-denial is not the most popular thing in the world," Brother Arnold said. "We don't really expect or have a lot of luxury."

The Shakers made a splash in 1996 when they joined a professional singing ensemble and made a compact disc of Shaker songs.

It's been pretty quiet since then.

The Sabbathday Lake Shakers might have faded away had they not broken in 1965 with the only other remaining Shaker community, in Canterbury, N.H., over a decision to admit no more new members. The last of the Canterbury Shakers died in 1992.

Sister Frances said the Sabbathday Lake Shakers never agreed with the decision to bar new members. In fact, the youngest Shaker, a 33-year-old Irishman, arrived at Sabbathday Lake 2 1/2 years ago.

"We have always been, and continue to be, open to new members," Sister Frances said.

Life at Sabbathday Village moves at a slower pace during Maine's long winters. Summer brings the herb farm and waves of tourists.

Many may expect something exotic, said Mary Ellen W. Hern, executive director of the Shaker Museum and Library in Old Chatham, N.Y. "But in reality, they're not unlike the religious orders of nuns and brothers that much of America grew up with."

Most visitors know about Shaker-style furniture. Original pieces of the plain, rugged furniture often fetch thousands of dollars on the world market.

The Shakers no longer make furniture. And while they maintain a large collection of antiques at Sabbathday Lake, they seldom use them.

"A lot of old Shaker furniture looks nice but isn't really comfortable," said Brother Arnold.

I was raised third row from the back on the left at Tabernacle Baptist Church in Cartersville, Ga.

I know all six verses to just As I Am and earned the title of queen in Girls' Auxliary. My name was entered on the nursery's cradle roll when I was two weeks old.

I've been in my hometown for the last week and so many memories of the church are fresh and tender in my mind.

The now retired sanctuary faces Church Street which routed high school parades for many years. My friends and I stood on the tall church steps to watch the Purple Hurricane band and admire pretty homecoming queens.

We had Sunday school in the church basement when I was in primaries and in the red brick three-story educational building when I was in juniors.

As a first grader in Sunday school Billy Whistler poked his gluey finger in my eye. He was the meanest boy I knew and he never missed a Sunday.

Mrs. Whitworth taught my Sunday school class when I was 9. One Sunday she asked my seven classmates and I to read a Bible passage verse-by-verse with each girl taking a turn.

We discovered one girl could barely read and we nearly died from embarrassment. Mrs. Whitworth never asked us to read round robin style again. I can't recall the Bible verses, but I remember the moral of the lesson: ask for volunteers, don't presume everyone is capable of doing something even if it comes easily to you.

Besides school teachers and doctors, pastors were the only college educated people I knew.

Rev. Randy Haman led my daddy to the Lord and Mama said Preacher Haman knew Greek and Hebrew, which impressed me no end.

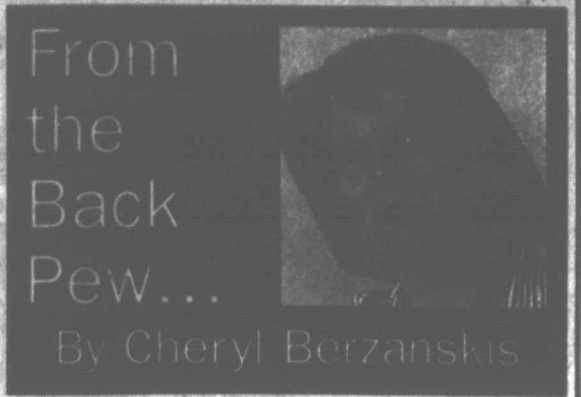

Rev. Harry Wooten graduated from Baylor University. His wife, Jeanine, was the first woman I knew who went to college and didn't become a school teacher.

When I was 15, I spent a week at our association's camp at Crowe Springs and learned to sing Old Stewball for the end of camp talent show. I spent another couple of weeks at Ridgecrest, the Baptists' North Carolina sister to Glorieta, and savored independence on its campus.

Tabernacle Baptist is now more accurately described as a mega church instead of the blue collar congregation of my childhood. I wonder how it would feel to walk through its doors as part of the church's history but not its present.

I will be in Georgia a few more days. Maybe I'll follow the signs to the church's visitors' center and take a look around the modern worship center. After all, it was in the old sanctuary that so much of my life was shaped.

Maybe in the new sanctuary, excuse me, worship center, other lives are being molded as well. I want to see where it happens.

Elderly nuns may be losing order but still have friends

FAIRMONT, W.Va. (AP) — Five elderly nuns may be losing their order, but they still have lots of friends.

A group calling itself friends of the Sisters has rallied around the nuns, who range in age from the 60s and 80s, since the Catholic Diocese announced plans in May to disband the Sisters Auxiliaries of the Apostolate order in Monongah. If it is closed, more than $1 million the sisters had accumulated in long-term investments for their retirement will revert to the diocese.

The order's elementary school is to close at the end of this academic year. It also runs the convent and helps care for the elderly in nursing homes.

Bishop Bernard Schmitt has pledged that the nuns will have a place to live and will receive financial aid. Friends of the Sisters plans to write to him outlining the community's support for the nuns.

Fairmont businessman Joe Manchin said the community is returning the support it has received from the sisters over the years.

"There have been times when people could not pay tuition, and they let children go for free. And they have given children attention that they would not have received in public school," Manchin said. "We just want the bishop to know that they've touched us, and they've done so much for the community."

Crisis Care session three set

You've heard the words "trust me" many times before. From a father waiting to catch a daring child to a father and mother talking with a child about a certain area in life, "trust me" continues to be spoken. Proverbs 3:5 says, "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding." Yet another father calling for his children to trust Him.

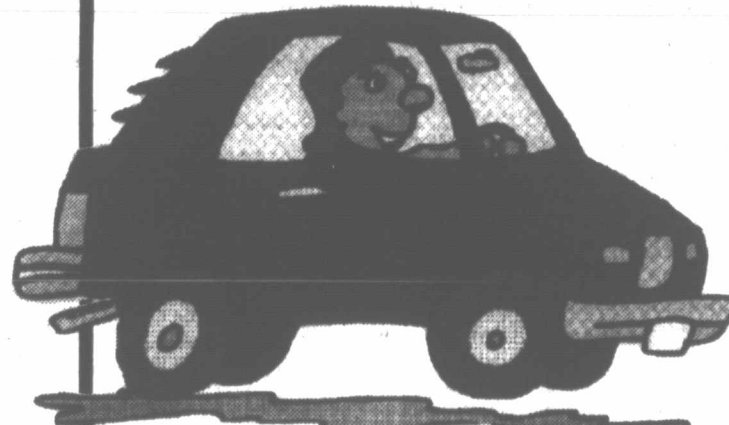

A big part of Crisis Care is trusting God. Trusting God for what to say, what to do and trusting God that all is in His control and power. The fundamentals of counseling in a crisis situation lead us to recognize that we could not do it apart from the love and compassion of our Heavenly Father.

This Sunday, June 7, at 5 p.m. we begin session three of Crisis Care. We have traveled some distance, yet if you desire to be a part of this time, please, accept the invitation of Paul L. Nachtigall, pastor, to join in this time. Join us this week as we trust in God to lead us to the point of caring in our lives.

Community breakfast Saturday morning

Saturday, June 6, there will be a Community Breakfast at the St. Mark CME Church located at 406 Elm. It starts at 9 a.m. until noon. The public is welcome to enjoy cold juice, hot pancakes, bacon, sausage, eggs, grits, fruit and coffee. Donations will be cheerfully accepted.

Pampa's many churches welcome you Sunday.

Girl Has Message for Other Teens: Bigger Is Not Bad

DEAR ABBY: Everyone has heard about teen-age girls who think they're fat when they're not. I'm 13 years old and a little overweight, but I try not to think about it all the time. I know lots of girls who do, and many of them are slim, healthy and attractive. Parents and teachers try to tell girls that size doesn't matter, but most teens think it does.

Magazines, television and even our peers recognize only thin people as being beautiful, so how can you blame girls for wanting to be thin? I'd like to give some advice, especially to other teen-agers.

Girls, if you are with someone who is heavier than you or uncomfortable with her body, don't complain about your own. It will only make them feel worse. Believe me, I should know — I have been hurt many times by behavior like this.

Guys, let a girl know she doesn't have to have a perfect body or look like a model for you to like her. One reason a lot of girls go on diets is so that guys will notice them.

Everyone: Compliment others. Make them feel loved, accepted and beautiful. Focus on people's good points, not their flaws. Not only will this make them feel good, it will make you glad to know you have made somebody's day a little brighter.

BEEN HURT BEFORE IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HURT: Excellent advice! It is unfortunate that someone who is as thoughtful and caring as you have been hurt by the thoughtlessness of others. The insight you possess will take you far. I hope those around you conduct themselves by your example.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those abused husbands who took your advice and moved out 18 months ago. Fortunately, I had the means to have my own place. I am a healthy, retired professional. My wife is also a retired professional with strong willpower. I was a widower (married 35 years with three children); she, a divorcee of about 12 years with a college-age daughter. We were associates at work who had known each other about 25 years.

We started out great and had some great times, but she has a violent temper. She resorted to extremely abusive language, coupled at times with physical attacks. Abby, I never struck back.

My departure was occasioned when, nine days after I returned home from a hospital following a painful knee replacement, she attacked me physically and verbally and told me to leave. At the time, I could barely walk. With the help of my son-in-law, I found a place and moved out.

I presented my wife with a separation agreement which she ignored. She has hinted several times that we should live together for financial reasons. I say that is a poor reason to maintain a relationship.

After about seven months, I filed for divorce. She has responded quite greedily and is trying to wipe me out financially. Yes, Abby, we had a prenuptial agreement, but a lot can be acquired in 11 years together. So now we're going up for a complicated and expensive trial.

Nevertheless, I am happy to be out of that relationship. My family is also happy for me. My daughter, her family and my sister can visit me anytime they want. My son is visiting me again. There is no tension now.

So, Abby, I want to tell you that I heartily agree with your advice to abused husbands: "Get out. It may be tough at first, but you'll adapt."

FREE IN FLORIDA

DEAR FREE: Thank you for the firsthand testimonial. Divorce is never easy, and it can be costly — but in your case, I'd say it's the better option. Enjoy your freedom; you've earned it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 You get a series of jolts and surprises. Maintain perspective when someone shares. You don't have all the answers, but you know that you don't have the complete story. Let fun enter your life. A loved one lures you to his way of thinking. Tonight: The party is at your place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 Hold on tight, because someone you put on a pedestal may inadvertently tumble off. Odd feelings punctuate recent developments. Understand someone's feelings, yet go with spontaneity. Only you can handle a money matter. Take charge. Tonight: A special invitation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 What you say has more meaning than you realize. Others take too seriously what you meant as a joke. Be careful when discussing someone's feelings. Make long-distance calls, arrange a trip and focus on making your life happier, yet simpler. Tonight: Make it an easy night.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 A partner delights you with his wild imagination. Listen to others, and share your feelings better.

Your friend runs with what you say even softly. A gut feeling about money could pay off. Just don't risk anything you can't afford. Keep a secret. Tonight: Celebrate with friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 Someone could delight you. Listen carefully to what he suggests. Where your friends are is where your happiness lies. Getting together adds to the relaxation and the fun of the moment. A friend has some gossip for you. Be discriminating. Tonight: Visit a parent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Invite a friend to the movies or a concert. Put your feet up, and let yourself be entertained. You like what someone has to share. Touch base with an older relative. Use the insight you gather to move a project forward. Let go of problems. Tonight: Make that long-distance call.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 You are delighted by what someone has to share. Let go of restrictions, and loosen up. Don't be controlling. Listen to someone's suggestions. A child or a lover has much to share. Start talking about your visions for the future. Tonight: With your favorite friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Others share some unusual ideas. You are delighted, and might toss plans and convention aside. Don't worry as much about what someone is going to say; rather, think about what a difference you can make. Invite friends over for a spontaneous barbecue or get-together.

Tonight: Flip burgers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 A low profile might be desirable, but it is close to impossible. Flow with what is happening. When another piques your interest, you cannot help but chat up a storm. Just be careful about how much you reveal. Another obviously has strong opinions. Tonight: An early night.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 Make calls, and change the status quo. Much that is fun and desirable could cause a change in your plans. Be spontaneous, worry less about security and let go. A relationship becomes toasty as a result. A child or loved one adores the new you. Tonight: Let the wilderness in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 You stun others with your impulsiveness, but that isn't new! A friend has a lot to share. Talks are animated, and particularly caring. A change in pace is likely; respond to a last-minute request. Your responsibility comes through. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 Take off, someone's invitation is simply too enticing. Be open to unusual and different ideas. Understanding grows between you and a family member. Discussions are exciting and dynamic. New ideas hold tremendous appeal. Tonight: Do what comes instinctively.

PAMPA — Texas Red Pest Control, Pampa's 16-18 year-old summer baseball team, beat Borger in a doubleheader Wednesday night, 4-0 and 16-11.

Cody Shepard pitched a two-hitter through five innings and Aaron Whitney struck out six batters in a row to finish the opener.

Leading hitters for Pampa were Shepard two for two with a double, Kaleb Snelgroves two for two and Erique Cabrales two for four.

Pampa had seven hits and committed two errors.

In the second game Russell Robben took the mound for Pampa, giving up seven hits in three innings. Cabrales finished the game, allowing only three hits.

Cabrales, Shawn Harris, Whitney and Snelgroves had two hits each. One of Snelgroves' hits was a home run.

Pampa had 12 hits and committed six errors.

GOLF

PAMPA — The Pampa City Golf Championship will be held June 20-21 at the Hidden Hills public course.

The tournament is open to all Gray County residents, man and woman. There will be a separate seniors flight.

Entry fee is $40 and carts will be extra. Players will be zoned according to handicaps and then flighted after the first-round scores.

To sign up, call 669-5866 as soon as possible.

Phil Everson has won the championship the last two years. He won last year's title by eight strokes over Scott White and Kelly Everson.

This will be the ninth year of the tournament.

TENNIS

PARIS (AP) — Carlos Moya, overcoming muggy conditions and a patient fellow Spaniard, defeated Felix Mantilla 5-7, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2 today in the semifinals at the French Open.

Moya will play either another Spaniard, Alex Corretja, or Cedric Pioline in Sunday's final. Pioline hopes to become the first Frenchman to win at Roland Garros since Yannick Noah in 1983.

Moya mixed his powerful groundstrokes with delicate drop shots to throw off Mantilla, who preferred to rally patiently from the baseline.

The Spaniards split the first two sets and Mantilla took a 4-1 lead in the third set. But Moya won the next five games, losing just five points during that span, to take control of the match.

Moya got to match point with a 127-mph serve that handcuffed Mantilla, then hit a 122-mph service winner to finish off the 2-hour, 42-minute match.

On Thursday, Monica Seles advanced to the French Open final for the first time since 1992 and won for the first time against Martina Hingis, yet showed none of the giddy enthusiasm she had as a teenager.

Though Seles flashed a big smile after her 6-3, 6-2 victory in the semifinals of the event she won three straight times in the early 1990s, her success was tempered by playing in her first tournament since her father died of cancer on May 14.

"I do feel happy. I mean, it's really great. But I've tried to keep a sense of balance," said Seles, who pumped her fist in triumph after Thursday's win over the world's top-ranked woman. "I'm still going to be missing people. Some things in my life are not going to be better."

She'll face Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in Saturday's final. Sanchez Vicario celebrated her 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) win over second-seeded Lindsay Davenport by blowing a kiss to her Yorkshire terrier in the VIP box.

Rickey sparks Athletics

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A blend of speed and power made Rickey Henderson one of the game's premier leadoff hitters. Nothing has changed in his 19th year in the big leagues.

Henderson has been displaying that rare combination on a daily basis for the Oakland Athletics, with the latest instance coming in Thursday's 6-1 victory over the AL West-leading Texas Rangers.

The 39-year-old outfielder hit a tie-breaking, three-run homer in the seventh. It was his third home run in as many games, and helped make a winner of Jimmy Haynes (4-2), who teamed with Bill Taylor on a five-hitter.

"I still enjoy the game and my body has been great to me," said Henderson, who made a key defensive play, running down Domingo Cedenio's third-inning liner in left field and taking a hit away with a diving catch.

"The guy really takes care of himself," Oakland manager Art Howe said. "He's been going out there just about every day for us, and he still gets the bat through the zone."

Henderson, whose 22 stolen bases tie him with Texas' Tom Goodwin for the AL lead, has six homers this year and is in the midst of a four-game roll, going 5-for-16 with a double, three homers, eight RBIs, six runs and three walks in that span.

"I've been seeing the ball really well for the last two weeks," said Henderson, signed as a free agent prior to this season for his fourth tour with the A's.

"I've been hitting the ball pretty much on the button. I haven't been coming up with that many hits because it seems like I had been hitting the ball right at people. But it so happens in the last three days, the balls I've been hitting have been getting out the ball park."

The score was tied 1-1 in the bottom of the seventh, when Miguel Tejada doubled and Ryan Christenson rolled a bunt single down the third-base line that no one picked up.

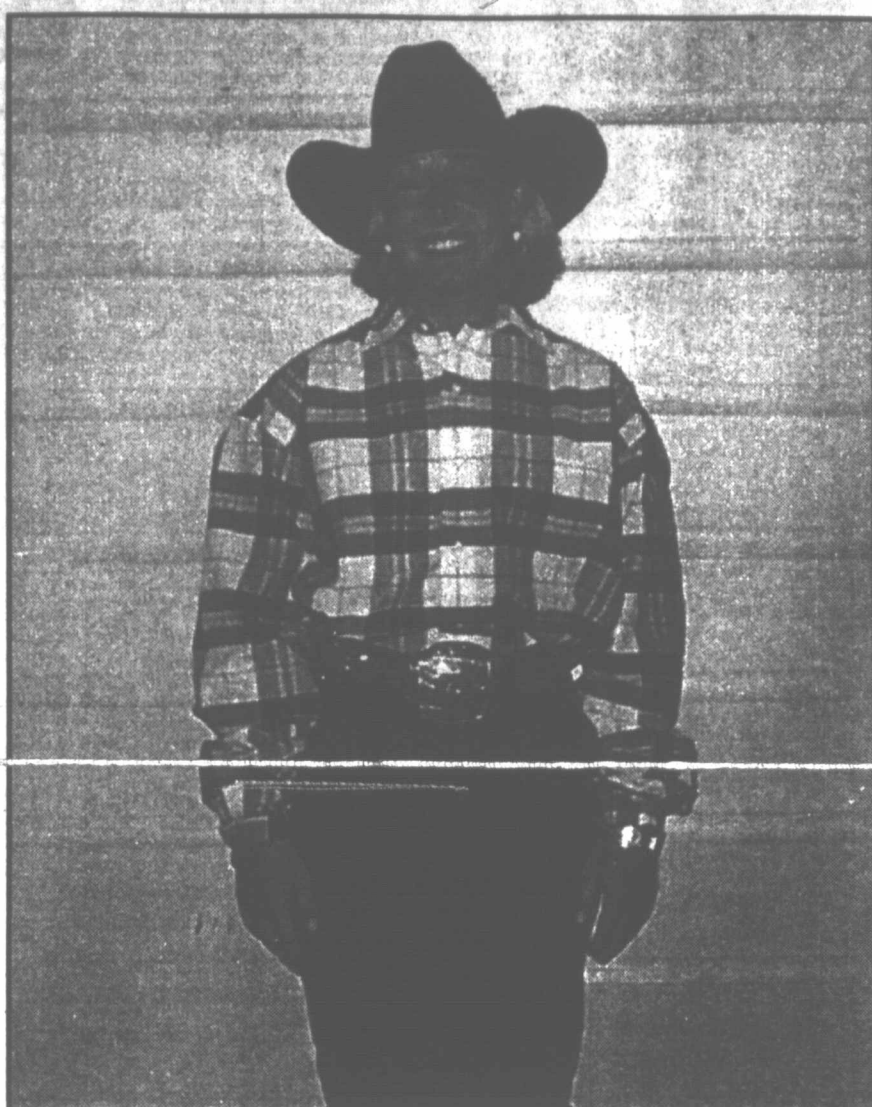

Henderson drove Rick Helling's first offering into the left-field bleachers as Oakland won for just the fifth time in the past 15 games.

"Rickey Henderson is no punch-and-judy," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "I've seen Rickey hit a lot of balls out. It comes down to the one pitch, but a lot of things happened before that."

Helling (7-3), who failed in his third try for his eighth victory, said a miscommunication between him and third baseman Luis Alica led to their failure to go after Christenson's bunt, allowing him to beat it out.

"It's frustrating because they're willing to give you an out," said Helling, who allowed four runs on eight hits over seven innings. "But there was no way I could get it and there was a little miscommunication between Luis and myself. The next thing you know he hits a home run and it's 4-1."

Haynes, acquired in a midseason trade with Baltimore last year, allowed one run on five hits in 7 1/3 innings and Taylor got five outs for his 10th save.

Glo-Valve wins squeaker

PAMPA — A dramatic six-run rally fell one short as Glo-Valve Service hung on to defeat Celanese Corporation, 10-9, a game shortened to four innings by the time limit Thursday in the Optimist Major Bambino League. Glo-Valve remains tied for first with Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency, a 3-2 winner over Cabot Corporation in the early game, with an 8-3 record.

Glo-Valve ran away from Celanese in the early innings. Eddie Palma, Dennis Shuck and Derek Lewis opened the game with consecutive singles with Palma scoring. Nick Story was hit by a pitch to load the bases for Keaton Hutto. Hutto lined a double on a full count to score Shuck and Lewis. Mateo Lewis followed with his second home run of the year to put Glo-Valve up 6-0.

In the second inning, Palma singled again. He advanced to second on a passed ball and kept going on an overthrow. He scored on an infield grounder hit by Story. Glo-Valve made it 8-0 in the third inning. Campos singled and was forced at second by Chris Driscoll. Driscoll moved to second on a single by Chris Moody and to third when Blake Haskins forced Moody at second. He trotted home on Palma's third hit of the game.

Celanese went out in order in the first two innings. Walks to Rickey Gattis, Brad Britten, Seth Foster, Jason Brown and Alex Couch sandwiched around a single by Chance Henley brought in three Celanese runs as Celanese sent nine batters to the plate in the inning.

Glo-Valve got two of the runs back in the top of the fourth inning. Lewis led off with his second hit of the game. Story was hit by a pitched ball for the second time in the game. Lewis scampered home on Campos third hit of the game. A walk to Moody forced Story to third, loaded the bases and allowed Story to score on a wild pitch.

Down 10-3, Celanese, who lost an 11-10 thriller to DFB Monday, refused to quit. Ben Ponce was awarded first base on catcher's interference. Gattis and Daniel Resendez walked. Henley was safe on a fielder's choice as the throw to the plate was too late to get Ponce. A base-clearing triple by Foster followed. Rogers was safe on a fielder's choice as the throw home was too late to get a sliding Foster. An alert Rogers continued to second on the throw. An errant pickoff attempt advanced Rogers to third. He scored on a ground out by Brown. A single by Mitchell Carroll and a wild pitch moved the tying run to second base before the tenth batter of the inning struck out to end the game due to the one and one-half hour time limit.

Palma, who pitched the first two innings, won his fourth game of the season for Glo-Valve against no losses. He faced only six batters, striking out four. Story relieved in the third. He allowed one hit and struck out two. He surrendered three runs and walked five. Campos pitched the fourth inning. He struck out one and walked two. He permitted just two hits, but was charged with five earned runs.

Hutto made the fielding play of the game for Glo-Valve in the first inning, snagging a hot grounder hit by Foster and nipping the batter at first. Gattis caught a fly ball hit to deep right field by Eric Willingham in the first inning for Celanese's defensive play of the night. Each team had just one error.

Campos and Palma led Glo-Valve hitters with three hits each. Lewis had two hits for the winners. Shuck, Hutto, Moody and Blake Haskins rounded out the Glo-Valve hitting. Henley, Foster and Carroll had hits for Celanese.

In the early game, Dusty Lenderman, with help from Clayton Young, outdueled Tyler Doughty and Zach Hucks as DFB stayed pace with Glo-Valve at the top of the Major Bambino League with a 3-2 over Cabot Corporation.

Glo-Valve clashes with Rotary at 5:45 in the only game scheduled today. Tuesday contests feature Cabot and Celanese in the early game and DFB and Rotary at 7:45 p.m.

TIP OF THE WEEK

By Mickey Pierson, Golf Pro, Pampa Country Club.

The majority of golfers stop turning their shoulders on the downswing. When the shoulders quit turning much of the power of the swing is not used. The P.G.A. Touring Professional will keep his elbows as close together as he or she can which forces the shoulders to turn through the ball. This is also extremely effective on the short pitch shots.

A player should strive to have his elbows as close as possible at impact on all of his shots.

Try this, see if it helps your game.

Until next time, see ya IN THE ROUGH.

DOWNHILL PUTTS ON VERY FAST GREENS ARE ALWAYS TRICKY. OUT THERE'S A WAY TO PLAY THEM CONFIDENTLY - ESPECIALLY WHEN THERE'S LITTLE IF ANY BREAK.

THINK OF SAYING "A 10-FOOT PUTT AS BEING A THREE-FOOTER ON A LEVEL AND MODERATELY PANCED GREEN, THEN STRIKES THE BALL THAT WAY." IMAGINE THAT A SPOT THREE FEET AHEAD OF THE BALL IS THE HOLE. WILL IT HELP YOU DO THAT?
