Gray County Farm Bureau disagrees with endorsement

By DAVID BOWSER
Staff Writer

The Gray County Farm Bureau voted this week to notify the state organization they disagree with a political decision to support one candidate for lieutenant governor.

Jeff Haley, a McLean rancher, said the county organization will write a letter to the Texas Farm Bureau president and board of directors concerning their decision to support Texas Comptroller John Sharp, a democrat, for Texas Lieutenant Governor over Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, a Republican.

The Gray County Farm Bureau met Thursday morning. "We had a big lively discussion," Haley said. "We agreed to write a letter to the president of Farm Bureau, our district director and the executive staff telling them who we wanted endorsed. It wasn't John Sharp."

Haley said the letter will be drafted and ready to sign at their next meeting the second week in July.

Last month, Haley's brother, Jim Haley, president of the Hemphill County Farm Bureau, and several members of his board sent a letter to Don Staitman, Texas Farm Bureau president and president of the organization's political action committee, AGFUND, expressing their opinion of the decision at the state level to endorse Sharp.

Both brothers acknowledged that their desire to endorse Perry rather than Sharp was by no means unanimous, even within the county membership, let alone the state membership. But they resented having the state organization endorse a candidate as if they were speaking for all 311,000 members of the Texas Farm Bureau.

U.S. Bus sued for debt

While the sale of U.S. Bus is still being pursued, troubles for the company are continuing to mount.

Stansbury Equipment Company of Amarillo has filed a lawsuit in 223 district court claiming that the bus manufacturing company owes $14,000 for equipment and services.

In the suit, filed earlier this month, The Amarillo company said it had contracted in April of last year to install a copper air line system, paint drying equipment and other equipment for the Pampa company.

The suit also contends U.S. Bus contracted with Stansbury to do some maintenance work as well. All together the bill for the equipment and labor came to 17,583.95, the suit alleges. It states U.S. Bus made four $1,000 payments from July 1997 to November of last year. No payment has been made since, according to court documents.

The suit asks for the money Stansbury alleges it is owed, plus legal fees incurred in attempting to collect the debt.

Electrical short led to crash of Texas-based B-1B bomber

An Air Force accident report released today says an electrical short in a cockpit control panel of a B-1B bomber shut down its engines, causing the unarmed airplane to crash in a muddy cow pasture five miles northeast of Marion, Ky.

The four-member crew safely ejected after the $270 million aircraft lost all power while over western Kentucky on Feb. 18. The bomber flew unpowered for 12 miles, passed along the edge of Marion, missed a rural farmhouse by about 200 feet and crashed, destroying the plane and scattering cattle in terror.

The plane was from the 7th Bomb Wing at Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene, Texas. The aircraft had taken off from the base and was about halfway through a six-hour training mission, which was to include midair refueling and low-level flying, when it went down.

The impact scattered debris over an area approximately 800 feet wide and 2,400 feet long.

The report, which was released by Air Combat Command in Langley Air Force Base, Va., says the problem started when a warning light indicated possible overheating or low oil pressure in the gear box of one of the four engines.

The crew quickly and properly shut down the No. 3 engine by pushing a button on the newly installed fire warning extinguisher panel, which controls a fire extinguishing substance. But then a Miss Lake Meredith, Laura Jaye Johnson, daughter of Pampa's Dr. Jay A. and Linda Johnson, will be among the 47 women competing for scholarships and the title of Miss Texas 1998 at the pageant July 1-4 in Fort Worth.

Contestants across the state will compete for over $1 million in cash, in-kind scholarships, awards and prizes. The individuals are judged in talent, personal interview, physical fitness in swimsuit and on-stage personality in evening wear.

Currently a Texas Tech Public

Relations major, Laura Johnson is home for the summer working out everyday to prepare for the pageant. A 1996 PHS graduate, Johnson said she didn't entertain the idea of competing for Miss Texas until she went to the Miss Texas pageant in Fort Worth last year.

"I thought it looked fun, it looked like something I could do," she said.

She tried her hand at the pageant-life last year and received the first runner-up title in the Miss Lubbock competition. In January, she was awarded the Miss Lake Meredith title. As part of her Miss Lake

FLAMES

While some bays were relatively untouched by the flames the main garage area was a total loss with the north wall collapsing after about 8:30.
 Herndon said she and her husband had bought the business about two years ago. It had been closed before that. She said they had suffered a break-in about six months ago and just recently had everything replaced.
 "God's in control. Everything will be all right," she said.

FARM BUREAU

Because both Sharp and Perry have strong support within the agricultural community, many agricultural organizations have refrained from endorsing one or the other of the candidates in this year's Lieutenant Governor's race. Indeed, in their state convention in Arlington last December, the membership of the Texas Farm Bureau voted to stay neutral in the race.
 "What a lot of it is that they're cynical that the board, the state leaders, are not responsive to what the grassroots want," Jeff Haley said. "That's I think the main point."
 "Many people felt that, at the most, we should stay neutral in the campaign," said Paul Macina of Shamrock, who was a delegate at the state convention in December.
 The perception is, Haley said, that the staff and lobbyists are having more influence on the organization's decisions than they should.
 "Those guys have been there a lot of years," Haley said. "They stay on the payroll and the board members come and go."
 Another bone of contention is that the son of Vernie Glassen, the executive director for the Texas Farm Bureau, works in the comptroller's office. Glassen is also the treasurer of ACFUND.
 "He didn't excuse himself from the meeting or anything," Jeff Haley said. "The guys are kind of upset about that."

 Most felt Glassen should have excused himself during the vote if only for appearances sake.
 Danny McFadin of Uvalde County and Mike Lehr of Williamson County also registered their protests as did the Haley brothers' father, Evetts Haley Jr., a Winkler County rancher.
 Noting that the membership voted to stay neutral in this race, the senior Haley, in a letter to Stallman, asked why that was not a mandate to the board of directors.
 McFadin and Lehr said the endorsement of Sharp was handled differently from other political endorsements.
 "Closed door meetings and secret ballots were not part of other votes by the board," the duo wrote in a letter to Jim Haley. "Why the need for these tactics now? The endorsement should reflect the will of the membership."
 In his letter to Stallman, Jim Haley asked for an accounting of how each board member voted.
 McFadin and Lehr have started a Farm Bureau Members for Perry movement. The Stephens County Farm Bureau also rejected Sharp's endorsement.
 In a statement to the Associated Press, Farm Bureau spokesman Gene Hall dismissed the controversy as complaints coming from only a few disgruntled members.

from vocal performance to public relations, will sing during the talent portion of the pageant. But that's not the part she's most nervous about, she said.
 The interview and swimsuit portions are what she is concerned with most.
 "Any current event is wide-open for discussion," Johnson said describing the interview segment of the pageant.
 And while she crams in all the CNN she can and looks at tapes of past interview questions, Johnson said she's working out at the gym everyday to prepare for the swimsuit segment.

Florida mom to give birth, live on the Internet

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Elizabeth plans to bring a deck of cards to play poker with her two daughters while they wait for her contractions to begin. And then she will let whoever wants to watch her give birth.

America's Health Network, with 7.2 million cable TV subscribers, plans to broadcast Tuesday's delivery of Elizabeth's baby boy on its Web site. It's being billed as the world's first Internet delivery.

In the room will be Elizabeth's doctors, her husband, her three kids, two cameras, a cameraman, a producer, a narrator and an online audience of perhaps thousands.

The Orlando-based company said it wanted to show the birth for people curious about how babies are delivered and for pregnant women nervous about having their first child.

"It's such a miraculous and wonderful event," said Dr. Walter Larimore, the show's host. "If there's a problem, we'll show a problem. This is a real family and real people."

Elizabeth, 40, who doesn't want her last name to be used, said she is no exhibitionist; she wants to help educate other women.

"I remember with (my first child) I was so overwhelmed, and it wasn't at all what I expected," she said. "It's neat that anybody can watch it and not be afraid." She was approached by her doctor about the idea because of her history of easy childbirth and quick labor.

"They at first wanted us to use aliases," Elizabeth said. "But I said how in the world am I going to remember to call my husband 'John' in the middle of labor?"

Her doctors were planning to induce labor even before they were approached by the cable network. Elizabeth's middle child, 11-year-old Joey, was delivered in 2 1/2 hours.

Complications can arise with a woman in her 40s, but her doctors, Barb Whalen and Stephen Carlan, said they expect a straightforward delivery. However, if the lives of mother and child are threatened, the broadcast will cease, they said.

The Internet broadcast will begin 6 a.m. EDT Tuesday with Elizabeth's arrival at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children & Women. Then it's a matter of waiting.

Internet users who want to see the birth can go to www.ahn.com, click on a baby icon and download software from the Real Broadcast Network.

"It's live. Nothing has been rehearsed," said Liz Poole, the producer who will be in the delivery room. "We're being very flexible, following Mother Nature."

Odds and ends...

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — A Virginia woman has lost her appeal on charges of driving under the influence — the influence of mascara.

Judge Kathleen H. Mackay ruled Thursday that Valerie Nordstrom, 41, wasn't being safe when she applied mascara while driving during a rainy rush-hour commute on Feb. 23.

Trooper Robert Thomas testified that he saw Ms. Nordstrom holding the steering wheel in her left hand and putting on makeup with her right hand while looking in the rearview mirror.

"The trooper had a right to pull this person over," Ms. Mackay said. "He doesn't have to wait until an accident happens."

Defense attorney Mark Yeager had argued there is no state law that prohibits using a cell phone, reading or applying makeup while driving.

"I don't like people using cell phones, applying makeup, eating cereal or whatever," Yeager said, "but that is not reckless driving."

Ms. Nordstrom was originally charged with reckless driving, but was convicted of the lesser charge of improper driving — defined as a wanton or willful disregard for the safety of others.

She will have to pay a $35 fine and will be penalized three points on her driver's license.

NEW YORK (AP) — What do you get when you mix vodka and orange juice?

Not the drink called a screwdriver, but lunch.

At least that's what an overzealous health inspector thought when he handed bartender Noel McCabe a summons for violating the law that requires a hat be worn by anyone working in a bar with food.

The inspector apparently took that to mean mixed drinks.

"This gives the phrase 'liquid lunch' a whole new meaning," joked McCabe, 27.

The summons, which carries a $100 fine, was made under a health code requirement that anyone working with food "minimize contact between hair and hands, food and food-contact surfaces."

"An overzealous inspector who is very new applied a very strict interpretation of the health code," explained Health Department spokesman John Jadd. "Strictly speaking, mixed drinks are food."

Administrative Judge Robert Nisely dismissed the charge Thursday.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — Summons or not, no dogs are allowed in the McLean County courthouse.

That means a spaniel named Nike can ignore a summons issued for his appearance June 30 in court, Sheriff Steve Brien said.

The document was issued in a lawsuit filed by Bloomington landlord Larry Knuth, which named Eddie Willan Jr. and Nike. The complaint seeks $1,125 and the eviction of Willan and Nike from an apartment Knuth owns.

The dog was named as a defendant to ensure the animal would be removed from the apartment as soon as possible, said Knuth's attorney, Mark Johnson.

Willan, 26, said he doesn't owe any money, doesn't live in the apartment — his parents do — and the dog is his mother's.

Willan will have to fight it out in court without Nike. Brien said all dogs, except those for the blind, are barred from the court because of public safety, security and to maintain proper decorum.

Senate rejects capping tobacco attorneys' fees at $1,000 per hour

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to impose a $1,000-an-hour cap on legal fees for attorneys who sued tobacco companies failed in the Senate, leaving the lawyers free to collect billions in fees.

The Senate rejected by 50-45 on Thursday an amendment to the tobacco bill that would have limited the attorneys fees from tobacco company settlements.

While senators tried to move ahead on legislation that would charge tobacco companies at least $516 billion over 25 years, in part by raising cigarette taxes by $1.10 a pack, House Speaker Newt Gingrich predicted the bill would fail in the House.

"It's dead here because we won't take it up. There is no chance, none," he said in an interview in The Washington Times. He said GOP leaders in the Senate seem to have lost control of the bill.

"They have what is now sort of a feeding frenzy," said Gingrich, R-Ga. "There's enough money (in the bill) that every politician is rushing for their own pet projects. It's wrong."

The Senate debate centered on attorneys once considered heroes for getting the tobacco industry to pay the medical bills of sick smokers. Suddenly, they find themselves labeled the bad guys and accused of greed.

Lester Brickman, a legal ethics professor at Cardozo Law School in New York, estimated that Texas attorneys put in more than 25,000 hours of work toward the $15.2 billion settlement to pay Medicaid costs. Their share comes to $2.3 billion — about $92,000 an hour.

The Texas settlement, which would be paid over 25 years, is not final because Gov. George W. Bush and seven legislators have filed a legal challenge protesting the lawyers' fees negotiated by Attorney General Dan Morales.

The standard rules of ethics prohibit lawyers from charging more than a "reasonable fee," Brickman said.

"What is reasonable is in the eye of the beholder, but if there is any ethical requirement whatsoever, then surely these fees exceed the bound of reasonableness," Brickman said.

Many of the attorneys battling the tobacco companies actually did not charge their clients any specific hourly fee.

Gregory Joseph, chairman of the American Bar Association's litigation section, noted that such attorneys took on the tobacco companies on a contingency basis in which lawyers do not get paid unless they win, and then they get a percentage of the take.

"When these cases were undertaken, no plaintiff had ever recovered a dime and they had shown absolutely zero willingness to settle," Joseph said. "Nobody ever contemplated that the recoveries would be as giant as they would be."

Some lawmakers argued that without applying fee caps on tobacco-related legislation, attorneys stand to gain billions of dollars from the bill.

"What we have here is a bill that has but one constituency and that constituency is a large group of vultures who want to bring down this (tobacco) industry and then feed on its rotting flesh," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "And the biggest lead vulture in this case is plaintiffs attorneys who are going to make $92,000 an hour on this bill."

The Senate debate had an unspoken political subtext, whatever the arguments about the value of a lawyer's work. Trial lawyers are reliable donors to Democratic candidates for Congress, and since taking power in 1995, the GOP majority has proposed a number of measures that would rein them in. One measure, for example, which has yet to pass, would limit the amount of punitive damages that could be awarded in certain lawsuits.

In the Senate vote Thursday, 38 Democrats and 12 Republicans voted successfully to table the fee cap proposal — while 41 Republicans and four Democrats voted to keep it alive.

Opponents of the measure, however, said the issue goes beyond politics.

Rich Hailey, president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, said capping attorneys' fees is an attempt by lawmakers to limit free enterprise. The federal government, he argued, does not regulate the fees charged by doctors, accountants, or plumbers.

"Is Michael Jordan worth the millions he gets? I don't know, but the (Chicago) Bulls think so. Maybe the Congress should regulate the NBA," Hailey said. "When you start talking about the amounts, the issue gets missed. The issue is the private right to contract for goods and services."

Joseph of the ABA's litigation section said it is not unusual for attorneys in Washington or Wall Street law firms to earn more than $600 an hour.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: Fort Worth Star-Telegram on jail bills:

Much as we like the idea of sending criminals to jail, we can't yet convince ourselves that it's smart to make them reimburse the county for the cost of their stay. We agree that there's a certain injustice in making taxpayers pay for room and board for people who have done wrong against society, but it's hard to see how a system of making prisoners pay could be administered in a just and fair manner.

Denton County officials, under the leadership of Sheriff Weldon Lucas, say they will push the Legislature next year for just such a plan. Although details haven't been worked out, the idea is that people who have finished their jail stay would be required to pay a certain amount after they get out and go back to work — say, an hour's pay for each day they were in jail.

Lucas says he knows this could cause some problems. "For the indigent, no reimbursement should be sought, and the inmates' families should be protected," he says.

Isn't that a big hole in the plan? Who decides which former prisoners will suffer consequences for failure to pay and which ones get a free ride? Just how do we protect the inmates' families if their breadwinner first serves a jail sentence and then siphons off later income to pay for the meals and bed?

There is big money involved here. Most of Lucas' $16 million budget goes to operate the Denton County Jail, and larger counties pay much more. How nice it would be to find a new source of revenue to relieve that burden on taxpayers.

But we can't see the magic in a plan to make former prisoners pay. We'd rather they concentrate on putting the jail experience behind them and becoming productive members of society.

The Dallas Morning News on razing old lead smelter:

The pollution-emitting smokestack from the RSR lead smelter has loomed over West Dallas for decades. Many families that have lived in the community for generations cannot recall a time when the ominous silhouette was not part of the skyline.

But at long last, the days of the abandoned RSR smelter are finally numbered. Seven companies, which provided material for the plant, have entered into an agreement with the Environmental Protection Agency to demolish the facility.

Even though the RSR Corp. has not emitted lead pollutants into the air over West Dallas for 14 years, the razing of this plant will provide a psychological boost for the community.

"It's going to be a welcome sight when the smokestack is down," state Rep. Domingo Garcia said. "That's been a symbol of the abuse and neglect the citizens of West Dallas have suffered for decades."

Mr. Garcia is right. As long as the smelter remained, the West Dallas community would never have a chance to recover from the past wrongs that threatened to destroy the area.

The demolition and cleanup of the site will pave the way for construction across the street on the Dallas Housing Authority's property. Housing officials hope that the land along Singleton at Westmoreland can become a retail and residential development.

But a number of West Dallas community leaders fear the RSR site will not be properly cleaned. They want assurances the demolition won't create environmental problems.

Given past experience, we cannot blame them. But the Environmental Protection Agency will be closely involved in the razing of the RSR smelter and will not sign off on the task without a thorough review.

Participants in the demolition expect to spend more than $11 million, bringing the building down brick by brick to avoid spreading lead dust. We commend them for finally entering into this agreement.

It is time for the West Dallas community to be able to look toward the future. That has not been possible with such a glaring remnant from its past.

Austin American-Statesman on the religious right:

By most accounts, religious freedom is enjoying robust health in the United States these days.

Somewhat more challenged are the constitutional guarantees of that freedom specifically the First Amendment which is under assault on several fronts. So it's with some relief that we note the demise in the U.S. House of Representatives this week of the school prayer amendment. A majority of House members voted for the proposal, but it fell short of the two-thirds majority needed to pass.

First Amendment guarantees of personal liberties have served nobly for more than 200 years. According to recent opinion surveys, religious belief is flourishing in this country. And never before have American's spiritual values been more diverse or expressed in such a rich range of old and new religious communities.

For two centuries we have walked a careful line to allow all religions while imposing none of them. The First Amendment still works just fine, and U.S. Rep. Chet Edwards, D-Waco, and others who stood up for it deserve thanks.

English? Si; Republican? No

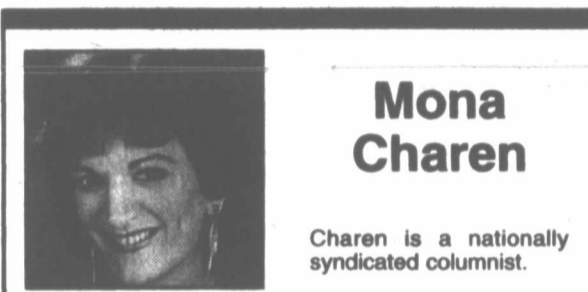

Al Checchi is one of the multi-millionaire Democrats who ran for governor of California. Asked by a reporter whether he would send his children to public school, he blurted out, "Of course not. Why would I do a thing like that?"

Yet when the subject of Proposition 227 arose — that's the ballot initiative, just passed by a large majority, that eliminates bilingual education and replaces it with one year of English immersion — Checchi was quick to smear it as "legislative vigilantism."

There you have the distilled liberal position on education: Under no circumstances should you subject your own children to the flawed system but by all means slander those who are working to change it. Steve Ybarra, a member of the California Democratic Party's Latino caucus, called Prop. 227 "racist tuggery."

Now all good Democratic voters were expected to heed this shameless name calling (which substitutes for argument) and conclude, "Gee, those Democrats are really looking out for my welfare. They like me. Republicans are bad. They hate blacks, Hispanics and women."

But something strange happened in California this time. The voters declined to follow the usual script. In pre-election polls, two-thirds of California voters expressed support for Proposition 227, and only 20 percent opposed it. And, according to a Los Angeles Times poll conducted between May 16 and May 20, 62 percent of Latino voters favored the initiative. If just Latinos had voted on June 2, the initiative would still have passed by a landslide. "I don't think it's anti-immigrant," a Latino corporate account manager told the Los

Charen is a nationally syndicated columnist.

Angeles Times. "In order to succeed in this country, you have to speak English."

The truth — that bilingual education actually harms those it was intended to help (sound reminiscent of welfare?) — is sinking in. And despite the predictable resort to "the race card" and name calling by self-styled Latino leaders and Democratic officeholders, the people proved willing to give bilingual education the heave-ho.

Now, the ordinary observer might imagine that Republicans would be skillfully exploiting this chink in the Democratic armor to make the case that they are the party of inclusion, that they are the party which wishes to see non-English-speaking children smoothly and rapidly integrated into the American mainstream, and that they are the party which opposes balkanizing and segregating children by skin color or language spoken at home.

One might imagine Republican officeholders citing studies by the University of Maryland and New Mexico State University showing that children enrolled in bilingual education enter the work force at a severe disadvantage and go on to earn significantly less than children taught exclusively in English. If you really used your imagination, you could envision Republicans making the case that in our polyglot era, when not two but dozens of different languages are spoken in California homes, bilingual education eventually becomes completely untenable. And finally, you might hope that Republicans would stress the importance of a common language in knitting all Americans, whether of Hispanic, Asian or other ancestry, together as one people.

If you imagined that Republicans were making any of those arguments, you would be disappointed. The Proposition's sponsor, Ron Unz, did challenge Pete Wilson for the Republican nomination for governor, but he was pretty much alone in the Republican Party in supporting this initiative (Wilson was a late and unwelcome convert to 227). While the campaign of vilification waged against Prop. 227 didn't sway the voters, it did mow the Republicans right down. They hid like mice.

Even Dan Lungren, the Republican nominee for governor (who is the closest thing to a white knight the Republican Party has at the moment — watch this man), has objected to Prop. 227 on local-control grounds.

Proposition 187, the 1994 measure that denied state services to illegal immigrants, damaged the Republican Party's standing with Spanish-speaking voters. That is unfortunate. But Republican politicians have learned the wrong lessons. Instead of making the case that they are pro-success for Spanish-speaking immigrants, they seem to think they must kowtow to the orthodoxy of the most extreme multicultural Democrats.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 12, the 163rd day of 1998. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on June 12, 1898, Philippine nationalists declared independence from Spain. On this date:

In 1776, Virginia's colonial legislature became the first to adopt a Bill of Rights.

In 1838, the Iowa Territory was organized.

In 1937, the Soviet Union executed eight army leaders as a purge under Josef Stalin continued.

In 1939, the National Baseball

Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y.

In 1963, civil rights leader Medgar Evers was fatally shot in front of his home in Jackson, Miss.

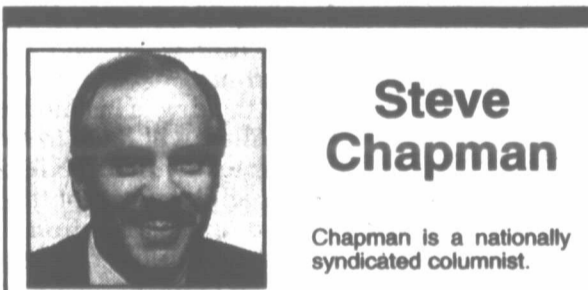

Administration isn't being realistic

For two weeks after India conducted nuclear tests, the Clinton administration used exhortations and threats to discourage Pakistan from doing likewise, and on Thursday, the Pakistanis showed that they prize nuclear weapons more than anything the United States could offer or withhold. So the Clinton administration has responded to this new state of affairs with more exhortations and threats.

Absent from the pronouncements of the White House, the State Department and congressional leaders is any sense of connection to reality. The United States continues to claim that the acquisition of nuclear weapons is of absolutely no value to countries — as if the people running the Indian and Pakistani governments are too dim to perceive their own interests. But whatever else they may be, those rulers are not stupid. If they and their people are prepared to make financial and other sacrifices to join the nuclear club, they must have good reason to think that membership has its rewards.

For the greatest nuclear power on the planet to disparage the utility of nuclear weapons is a bit like Bill Gates announcing that money can't buy happiness. It invites the question: So why don't you give up yours? But President Clinton and his aides plead innocent to the charge of monumental hypocrisy. Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott, complaining that the tests in South Asia conflict with the goal of "eliminating nuclear weapons from the face of the Earth," insisted that the United States and Russia are "moving in that direction" under the arms reduction provisions of the START II treaty.

Oh, come on. We are giving up some of our nuclear weapons only because we have more than enough to deter our enemies. No one with any responsibility for safeguarding national security seriously proposes to keep scrapping missiles and bombs until the number reaches zero. That's because we have yet to invent a better insurance against attack. India and Pakistan figure: If the bomb works for you, why not for us?

The administration portrays the tests as a setback for "peace and stability in the South Asian subcontinent." In fact, they are probably just the opposite. The two countries fought three wars before becoming nuclear states. If each side knows the other has these weapons, each will be very careful about starting a war that could end in total annihilation for both.

Given that these governments have been able to produce such bombs for years, the restraint may already be evident. As defense scholar Barry Posen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology notes, the recent low-level conflict between the two countries in Kashmir and other Indian provinces has not erupted into war — unlike previous disputes. "They could have a big war if they wanted, but they don't," says Posen. "Maybe they've contained the fighting because they were nuclear powers." Just as the fear of Armageddon kept the United States and the Soviet Union from ever going to war with each other, it should keep the hostility in South Asia within tight bounds.

The real danger of these new arsenals is that they are small, under uncertain control and possibly vulnerable to attack. Neither government is suicidal enough to think it can win a nuclear war. But a nuclear war could begin despite their best efforts.

A missile could be launched accidentally. A rogue colonel could push the button on his own. One side could conduct a test or exercise that looks to the other side like an attack in progress. Either government, in a crisis, could act hastily from fear of a pre-emptive strike by the enemy.

Through a hair-raising process of trial and error, the United States and the Soviet Union identified and addressed these dangers — with technology that makes missile launches difficult, with "hot lines" to communicate quickly and with weapons too numerous and far-flung for the other side to have any hope of destroying them all. But trial and error is too risky in South Asia. If the United States hopes to prevent nuclear war there, we need to provide money and expertise to both countries to speed the adoption of critical prophylactic measures.

The fear of American policy-makers is that steps like these would send the wrong message to governments that are weighing whether to go nuclear. That's true — and, at this point, irrelevant. When the best option is no longer available, wisdom suggests trying the second best.

It would have been nice if India and Pakistan had listened to us and spurned nuclear weapons. But they didn't. So we have a choice of taking realistic measures to reduce the chances that the weapons will ever be used — or else merely continuing to insist that they do what they have already refused to do.

It's fine to counsel teenagers against having sex. But once they have produced a baby, another approach is in order.

Texas youth crime down

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 15-year-old boy in Burnet is accused of shooting and wounding his mother with an AK-47 rifle.

A fourth-grader in Dallas beats and sexually assaults a 3-year-old girl. Two brothers, ages 7 and 8, confess to helping attack the child.

The stories are chilling, and because the alleged offenders are so young they make big headlines. But despite several recent high-profile incidents, juvenile crime in Texas is on the decline, state officials say.

A total of 181,625 juvenile arrests were made in 1997, down 2.4 percent from 186,103 in 1996, according to statistics compiled by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

"It's the first time in ten years that juvenile crime has gone down," said Tony Fabelo, executive director of the Criminal Justice Policy Council, an Austin-based state agency that studies crime trends.

Juvenile justice reforms passed by the Texas Legislature in 1995 are playing a role in the decline, Fabelo said.

"We are definitely locking up more kids that were violent and recidivist," he said. "So we don't have these kids running around if they get in trouble."

Though the public's perception may be that juvenile crime is getting worse, it may be out of fear that youth crimes are becoming "more lethal and more random," Fabelo said.

Youths arrested are finding that juvenile authorities are intervening more during probation periods and that the time of incarceration in the Texas Youth Commission has increased, Fabelo said.

More local police, community and school programs also are aimed at curbing youth crime, he said.

In San Antonio, for instance, drive-by shootings — crimes committed largely by youth gangs — have dropped significantly. In 1996, there were 445 drive-by shootings. It fell to 244 last year. There were only 74 through the end of May this year.

The San Antonio Police Department attributes the drop partly to more community policing and to a youth anti-crime initiative.

"Some of these youth gangs are starting to get the message that we're out there," said Officer Al Ballew, a police spokesman.

Gangs also are operating more covertly now rather than through attention-grabbing crimes like drive-by shootings, Ballew said.

GOP warns against premature impeachment report

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr considers sending the House an impeachment report before completing his work, key Republican lawmakers are sending him a message: Something is not necessarily better than nothing.

In an election year, the Republicans say they do not want a report that is "half-baked" or "nibbles around the edges" on whether President Clinton might have committed "high crimes and misdemeanors."

The leadership of both parties desperately hope this issue will be held past November, said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist. "They would prefer to do battle (in the fall elections) on the relatively even playing field of today than what might exist after a bomb goes off."

Rep. Bob Barr, R-Cal., a former U.S. attorney who has introduced an impeachment resolution against Clinton, said there was no danger that Starr would submit a report that would leave Republicans in a bind.

"I have enough faith in Starr to think that anything he presents to us will be very substantive," Barr said. "I don't think it would be inappropriate to present to us a substantive compilation of evidence accumulated so far."

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill.,

who would likely lead an impeachment inquiry, said, "If there's enough substantive evidence (in the report) that's one thing. If it rambles around the edges that's something else."

Hyde said that "in an ideal world, I would like to see a complete report" rather than "a partially and necessarily incomplete report." The key question, he said, would be: "Is there enough there for us to analyze and make some decisions?"

A complete report from Starr may be unlikely, Hyde said, because the White House is "appealing everything through every court. Those actions, while legal, are not designed to hasten a full and complete report."

Another House Republican leader, Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston of Louisiana, was more blunt. "I don't want to see him give us a half-baked report. A complete report is what we want."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, in an interview published in today's editions of The Washington Times, said: "If Starr thinks he has enough evidence on some parts of his case, can close those parts and file a partial report — but still have other areas open — I don't think we have to wait for him to finish every prosecution and every Supreme Court appeal."

Hyde's Senate Judiciary counterpart, Orrin G. Hatch, said

Starr will need "awfully strong facts."

Starr is facing months of delays because of a court dispute with the Clinton administration over whether he can get testimony from three Secret Service employees and presidential aide Bruce Lindsey.

Starr's spokesman, Charles Bakaly, says an interim report remains an option but no decision has been made.

The independent counsel law states prosecutors must send a report to Congress when they uncover "any substantial and credible information which... may constitute grounds for an impeachment."

Such a referral could be made before all the investigative issues, such as legal disputes over certain witness testimony, are resolved. But it is unlikely until evidence is solid enough to allow lawmakers to make a decision.

If the House approved articles of impeachment, the Senate would be responsible for conducting a trial.

Thursday, a woman who cast doubt on former White House aide Kathleen Willey's accusation that Clinton made a crude sexual advance testified before the federal grand jury. Julie Hiatt Steele of Richmond, Va., swore in an affidavit in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case against Clinton that Mrs. Willey never told her about the alleged sexual advance.

FIZZO or FIZZLE?

Some sellers decide to sell their homes on their own, without the help of an agent. This is known in the trade as a FISO "fizzo" or "for sale by owner." According to the National Association of Realtors, nationwide, about 15% of trade-up sales successfully market their homes themselves, while about half of that percentage give up their attempts and hand over the chore to an agent. More than a quarter of FISOs go to buyers previously known to the seller. These statistics suggest that the decision to go it alone is not an easy one for sellers. It takes a great deal of time, patience, and expertise to sell a home - even when the eventual buyer has been previously targeted.

Participating in the real estate market is both very exciting and challenging. Embers Of First Marriage Still Stir In Woman's Heart

DEAR ABBY: "Brian" and I fell in love at first sight as teenagers. We married very young, but he was the most wonderful, caring, loving man I'd ever known. He treated me like a queen.

We moved far away from our hometown, and I was homesick. I didn't give married life a chance. I acted like a baby instead of the married woman I was and returned to my parents. Brian begged me to stay, but I refused to listen. I planned on going back to Brian and our life together "sometime." Besides, I was having fun being single and partying — so when Brian flew home to talk to me, I brushed him off. Two months after that he moved in with a woman and filed for divorce. When I received the papers, I realized I'd made a mistake. I wrote Brian a letter apologizing and begging for another chance. He never wrote back. That was 20 years ago.

I have been married to "Charlie" for 15 years. We had some good times together, but about three years ago we started drifting apart. Neither of us cared enough to do anything about it — and it's to the point where we don't even sleep in the same room anymore. It's only a matter of time until we divorce. I'd be gone already, but I need to pay off some bills before I go.

On a recent trip to my hometown, I ran into Brian while I was shopping with my mother. I was stunned at the strength of the feelings running through me. My heart stopped and I was completely in love again. I could barely speak. My mother did all the talking.

Abigail Van Buren

I feel like a love-struck teenager. Brian is on my mind 24 hours a day. We never had a "last talk"; we never said goodbye.

I recently ran into Brian again. (Yes, it was a planned "accident.") He was very nice. He's not married, but he's living with someone. I wrote him a long letter, apologizing for everything I did and thanking him for all he did for me. In it, I said if there's ever a time he'd be willing to talk to me, I'd like to. I didn't tell him I love him or want him back in my life, but the point comes across. I want him to know that if there ever could be a chance, I want it.

Should I give him the letter? Please help me. Tell me right from wrong. I have no one to talk to and nowhere to turn.

IN LOVE WITH BRIAN
DEAR IN LOVE: You are putting the cart before the horse. You owe it to yourself, your husband and to Brian to sort out your present marital and financial situation before telling this man that you are "available." Bear in mind that even if you give the letter to Brian, there is no guarantee he will respond to it in the way you hope.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady who asked her ex-daughter-in-law to hand down the family sterling to her granddaughter set me to giggling in memory of my own very wonderful mother-in-law. She had promised to crochet a bedspread for her son and me.

She was married to a man with "itchy feet," so they moved about three times a year, which left her with very little time to work on the spread, but she finally finished it!

Twenty-one years later, her son and I divorced. I stewed a long time about that bedspread. Obviously, I was no longer in the running — so I wrote her a letter and suggested that she give it to one of my kids or one of her other grandchildren.

I was not prepared for her response: "Not to worry. I unraveled it."

HORSE RACING

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — The first leg of quarter horse racing's Triple Crown will bring 10 of the fastest 2-year-old quarter horses to this mountain resort track Sunday.

The Ruidoso Quarter Horse Sales Futurity offers a purse of $305,070, with the winner earning $125,913 for the 350-yard dash.

The field for Sunday's race advanced by winning time trials May 29. Some 111 horses were entered in the trials, with each trial limited to 10 starters. The 10 fastest qualifiers received berths in the futurity.

The top qualifier at 17:91 was First Down Bounce, owned by R.D. Hubbard and J.T.L. Jones, made its debut in the trials. Trained by "Sleepy" Duane Gilbreath, First Down Bounce will be ridden by Jacky Martin, who has won a couple of Ruidoso Quarter Horse Sales Futurities and a record six All American futurities.

First Down Bounce's sire, First Down Dash, has three other Ruidoso Quarter Horse Sales Futurity finalists: Okey Dokey Dale, So Deadsolid Perfect and First To Shine.

The entire field consists of Victory Blast, the second-fastest qualifier at 17:96; Powerful Winner (18:01), Run The Dash (18:02), For Jens (18:005), First Down Bounce, First To Shine (18:045), Revacoup (18:04), Chicks Infinity (17:98), Okey Dokey Dale (17:995) and So Deadsolid Perfect (17:995).

Quarter horse racing hasn't produced a Triple Crown winner since 1981, when Special Effort won the Ruidoso Quarter Horse Sales Futurity, then called the Kansas Futurity; the Rainbow Futurity and the rich All American Futurity.

The purse for the 1998 All American, the final leg in the crown run on the Labor Day holiday, is expected to be $2 million, up from the $1.59 million of last year.

Klein, CC Calallen reach state baseball finals

By The Associated Press

Class 5A Semifinals

Sugar Land Elkins 6, Duncanville 1
Everyone knew what Klein's Chris George could do on the mound.

But on Thursday night, he came through at the plate as well, igniting a five-run fifth inning by driving in two runs as Klein defeated Austin Westlake.

Klein (34-2), making its second state tournament appearance, will play in Friday's 5A state title game against Sugar Land Elkins (31-5), a 6-1 winner over Duncanville in the other semifinal.

Westlake, making its seventh state tourney appearance, finished the season 28-12.

George (15-0), a lefthander who was taken by the Kansas City Royals with the 31st pick in last week's amateur draft, threw a complete game, giving up five hits and two walks while recording 15 strikeouts.

The senior, who has been compared to a younger version of Atlanta Braves Cy Young Award winning pitcher Tom Glavine, struck out 10 of the first 13 batters he faced on 59 pitches without giving up a walk.

No one reached second base for Westlake until the fifth inning, when George gave up consecutive walks to open the inning. He then recorded two strikeouts and got a ground out to ease out of the jam.

In the other semifinal, Jeff Reed had two doubles, a triple and scored three runs and Jason Stanina pitched a complete game as Sugar Land Elkins defeated Duncanville.

Duncanville, 5A champs in 1990 and 4A champs in 1975 and 1976, finished the season 30-8 after making its seventh state tourney appearance.

Elkins (31-5), the 5A champs in 1995, scored two runs in the first and third and added two more in the seventh, while getting strong pitching from Slarina, who improved to 14-1.

Class 4A Semifinals

Corpus Christi Calallen 10, Nederland 9
Dallas Highland Park 7, Fort Worth Arlington Heights 0

James Garner went 3-for-4 Thursday as Corpus Christi Calallen withstood a six-run Nederland rally in the bottom of the seventh.

Calallen (33-6) will play in Friday's championship game against Dallas Highland Park (27-8), last year's runner-up in 4A.

Nederland, which finished the season 31-6 after making its fifth state tournament appearance, nearly came back from a 9-1 third-inning deficit.

Trailing 10-3 going into the bottom of the seventh, Nederland's bats sized against tiring Calallen starter

Jarrett Campbell, who got the win and improved to 15-3. But after scoring six runs in the inning, Nederland stranded a runner on second as it made the final out and fell a run short.

Calallen got strong performances from Casey Doran, who was 3-for-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored, and Thomas Fallon, who as 2-for-3 with an RBI and two runs scored. Kevin Hoffer also drove in a run with a double and scored a run.

In the other semifinal, Zane Carlson pitched a complete game, giving up just four hits, and Dallas Highland Park had hot bats as they defeated Fort Worth Arlington Heights.

Arlington Heights, state champions in 1996, finished the year 33-7.

Highland Park racked up 13 hits, including three in the first inning as the Scots built a 3-0 lead and chased Arlington Heights starting pitcher Casey Gartner.

Class 3A Semifinals

Dripping Springs 5, Iowa Park 4 (0)
Atlanta 2, Hallettsville 1
Ron Beauford scored from second base on a wild pitch in the eighth inning as Dripping Springs edged Iowa Park to advance to its second Class 3A state baseball championship.

Dripping Springs (25-6) will play Atlanta (24-7) in Friday's title game. Iowa Park ended the season at 22-10-1.

Dripping Springs had a 4-1 lead with two outs in the seventh when Iowa Park's Chad Wright doubled home his brother, Chase Wright, from third. Chase Wright had reached base on an error and moved to third on Tyler Pulley's single.

With runners on second and third and a 2-2 count, Iowa Park starting pitcher Justin Terry lined a single which scored both Wright and Pulley, tying the game 4-4 after seven.

Cabot picks up victory

PAMPA — Cabot Corporation's pitchers shut down Glo-Valve's hitters as Cabot earned a 7-3 win Wednesday. The loss dropped Glo-Valve a half-game behind Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency for the lead in the Major Baseball League.

Zach Hucks, Matt Woodruff and Tyler Doughty combined to limit Glo-Valve to just four hits as Woodruff received credit for the win. Hucks was the victim of a first-inning Campos homer, which scored Eddie Palma, who had singled, and Derek Lewis, who had walked. Hucks allowed only two hits and two walks. He struck out two. Woodruff was perfect in two innings, facing only six batters and striking out one. Doughty relieved in the fifth, and walked a batter, hit a batter and allowed two infield hits. He struck out four while yielding no runs.

Campos pitched for Glo-Valve. He allowed five earned runs and seven hits. He struck out 11, walked three and hit two batters.

Down three runs in the third, Cabot narrowed the score on a single by Doughty, a run-scoring double by Hucks, who took third on a throw to the plate, and a wild pitch which scored Hucks.

Cabot took control of the game in the fourth. Janson Hancock singled to center, Aaron Hunt was hit by a pitch and both runners moved up on a wild pitch. Doughty was safe on a fielder's choice scoring Hancock. Etchison forced Hunt at third, setting up a two-run double by Hucks which gave Cabot a 5-3 lead.

The winners padded their lead in the fifth inning. Ammons was hit by a pitch and Darrin Allen beat out an infield single. Ammons scored when Hancock was safe on an error. Doughty's single to right plated Ammons with the final run of the game.

Glo-Valve wasted hits by Blake Haskins and Mitchell Crow. They loaded the bases with one out in the fifth inning, but Doughty struck out the next batter and caused the following batter to pop out to end the threat.

Cabot's leading hitters were Hucks with two doubles and Doughty with two singles. Etchison, Allen and Hancock collected the other Cabot hits.

Texas Red nips Dumas

PAMPA — Texas Red Pest Control of Pampa slipped by Dumas, 6-5, in extra innings Tuesday night.

Cody Shepard started the game on the mound and pitched four innings, giving up five hits and one run. Jesse Francis came in and got three up and three down in the bottom of the fifth. However, in the bottom of the sixth, the wheels fell off for Pampa. Two errors, three walks, one base hit later Dumas had tied the score at 5-5.

With two runners on for Dumas in the seventh, Pampa pitcher Enrique Cabrales struck out the side to send the game into extra innings.

Carey Knutson led off the eighth inning with a well-placed bunt. After stealing second, Knutson scored on what turned out to be the game-winning single by Jesse Francis.

Cabrales shut Dumas down in the bottom of the eighth, striking out three. One batter reached base on an error.

Shawn Harris (double and single) and Carey Knutson (triple and single) were Pampa's leading hitters.

Bell answers the head coaching call

Tall Troy Bell, has moved on. The 6-6 Bell was the Pampa freshman boys' coach and also assisted head coach Robert Hale with the Harvester varsity.

Bell, who came to Pampa in 1993, accepted the head coaching position at Fort Worth Arlington Heights. It will be his first venture as a head coach.

Bell and Hale go back a long way. Bell was a player and Hale the head coach at Fort Worth Everman.

Needless to say, Bell's parting was bittersweet for Hale.

"He's like a son to me," Hale said. "I had him as a player and I had him here for five years as a coach. He was ready to move on. He wanted to go back home and he also wanted to be a head coach. He had the opportunity to do both those things."

Troy Bell poses with a championship plaque he received at a 9th grade tournament.

Bell graduated from Everman in 1986, the same year Hale was hired for the Harvesters' job. He made a few stops along the way before coming to Pampa.

Bell played in a post-season high school all-star game and accepted a basketball scholarship to Odessa College. After two years there, he transferred to Creighton University, where he played a key role on teams that advanced to the NCAA Tournament and NIT. Bell also played for a time in the Global Basketball Association and the Continental Basketball Association.

"I'm real pleased for him and also sad at the same time. I'm going to miss him and I know the kids are going to miss him," Hale said. "He was just what I thought we needed around here."

Bell left his mark as a player. I'm sure he'll do the same as a head coach.

In case you missed it, the Chicago Cubs had won 10 consecutive games before losing to the Minnesota Twins, 8-1, on Monday. It was their longest win streak since 1970. I'm rooting hard for the Cubs to make it to the World Series. Wouldn't that be the sports story of the year? The Cubs were dead last a year ago and had a National League-worst 94 losses.

Bulls gun for another "three-peat" tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — The months and years have flown by for the Chicago Bulls. Now, after five championships and a sixth so near, they are down to what could be their final 48 minutes together.

What a blend of talent and temperament as they shoot for a second "three-peat" in the last eight years.

The greatest player of his era or any other, Michael Jordan; the loyal but eager-to-leave Scottie Pippen, probably the most versatile performer in the game; the wacky do-it-my-way rebounder, Dennis Rodman; and the ex-Hippie, Zen-spousing coach, Phil Jackson.

Leading the Utah Jazz 3-1 in the NBA Finals, they are ready to clinch tonight and perhaps go their separate ways. Maybe forever.

"I'm sure this one would mean more to us, especially to myself and Michael and Phil, realizing that we're probably in our final season together," Pippen said, proclaiming Thursday — in contrast to what he said earlier in the week — that he's not returning.

"We'd love to have the opportunity to go out on top. And I think that's been the drive for us the whole season — we want to prove that we're still the greatest and we're still champions."

The best seats in the house tonight at the United Center are going for $9,000. A chance to witness history, see what could be the end of a dynasty, watch the tongue-wagging Jordan sail above the basket, spew anger at unpopular team management for leaving the future in such a cloud.

Jordan, who's been with Jackson and Pippen on all five title teams, isn't sure what will happen. But tonight's game promises to be one of the most electric of his unparalleled career because it could be his last.

"It's going to be hard not to think of it that way," he said.

"We'd love to get this thing done here, in Chicago, in front of the fans," Jordan said. "If this so happens to be the last dance, why not do it in front of the fans?"

The Jazz also feature two players chosen among the NBA's Top 50 in John Stockton and Karl Malone. They'd love to spoil the Bulls' celebration plans because it would also send the series back to the Delta Center in Salt Lake City.

They plan no big time pep talk. Both stars have struggled against Chicago's stifling defense, led by the long-armed Pippen.

Malone's game has faltered in the stretch of several games because of the presence of the bothersome Rodman. And Stockton, after a strong Game 1, has scored just 18 points the last three.

"We're not the kind of guys that go out and whoop and holler," Malone said. "We're old-fashioned. You come and are ready to play. I don't believe in a lot of speeches."

No team has ever rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win the finals.

"We're not conceding anything," Malone said.

And the Bulls are wary of premature celebrations.

"We have to guard against that mentality. It's difficult for both teams in a situation in which you are always thinking about ending," Jackson said. "The thing about it is that Utah only has to play one really good game here and go back home."

All the Bulls need is one good game and they can head out on vacation with another trophy for the case.

"We're all looking forward to going fishing or golfing or whatever our favorite past time is in the summer," Jackson said.

Some might come back, others not. It will be an offseason for making decisions.

"I think Michael will know sometime in August or September when the thirst or the hunger to come back is not there or is there," said Jackson, who has said he needs a year off.

"I'm the same as anybody else. It's going to take me a while to step back and look at this and make a decision one way or the other about what's going to happen."

Jordan claims he's approaching tonight's game as the final one of this season and taking it no farther, should the Bulls win.

"What evolves over the summer will make me think about what this game actually meant, either the team's going to be broken up and Phil is going to go his way and Scottie and I are going to go our way," Jordan said.

"And then you reminisce about the game."

Red Wings win in overtime

DETROIT (AP) — Just what the Detroit Red Wings needed — more confidence.

As if didn't have enough as defending Stanley Cup champions, they got another dose with a big comeback in Thursday night's 5-4 overtime victory over the Washington Capitals.

That gave the Red Wings a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 Stanley Cup Finals and an inflated feeling about themselves as they headed to Washington for Games 3 and 4 on Saturday and Tuesday.

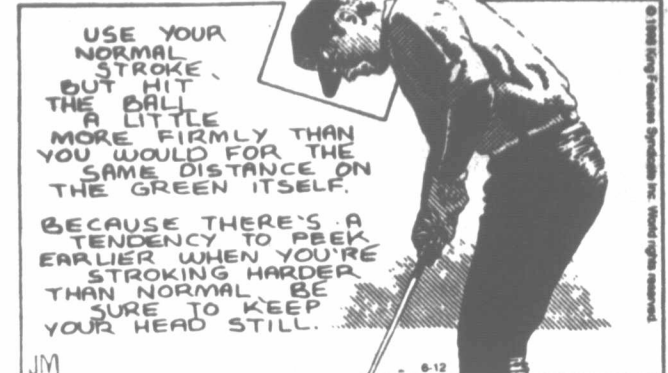

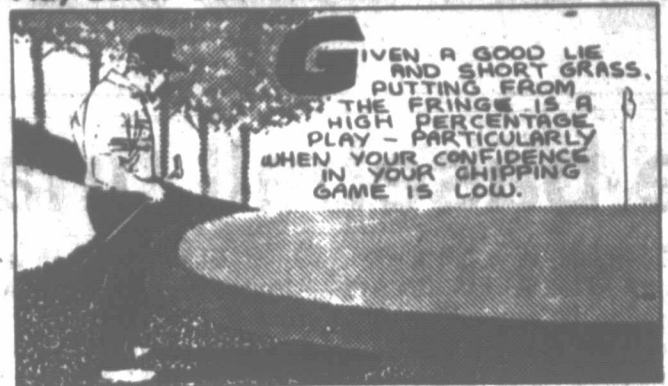

"It's a nice confidence-builder to come from behind like that and win in overtime," Detroit's Brendan Shanahan said after the Red Wings rallied from a two-goal deficit with less than 12 minutes to go and won it on Kris Draper's goal in the extra period.

It was an historic comeback for the Red Wings. They became the first team since 1956 to win a Stanley Cup Finals game when trailing by two or more goals in the third period. The last to overcome that kind of a deficit was the 1956 Montreal Canadiens, who trailed Detroit 4-2 entering the third period of Game 1 and scored four straight goals.

"You have to win games like that," Detroit goalie Chris Osgood said. "You just have to stick with it."

Minister's musing...

There is a spiritual war going on for the heart and soul of man and the church that our Lord Jesus established has been sanctioned, sanctified and empowered to stand in the gap for a world that appears out of control.

St. Matthew 28:18-20 says, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen!"

Yes, there are a few lone voices out there who are shouting the good news of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to a sinful world, but islands to themselves, or lone wolves are not what Christ had in mind when he commissioned His church and established His body to be joined fitly together, one Lord, one faith, one baptism! Yes, our world is out of control because the most powerful entity in the world is strangely mute to the happenings of our day. Have we eased up in Zion?!

Have we forgotten that we are to sound the alarm in Zion? There are forces that are out to destroy our children through drugs, alcohol, sex, pornography, abortions, gay pride, apathy and rampant ungodliness. And we are not pointing out the warning signs! The seniors of our society are slowly being pushed out of our lives. But they are actually the only ones who know what side is up, and what side is down! In other words, they, the senior citizens, are taking all the good common sense and experiences of life in their hearts and minds to the grave. They are being sequestered in rest homes and the only legacy we have left today is get yours and all you can while you can. Most folks believe that the elderly are out of touch with the times. But they know that all time belongs to God. Have we eased up in Zion?!

The world's future is accurately being unfurled exactly as stated in the word of God. And God is looking for the redeemed, His church, to stand up and be counted. We are supposed to bring lost souls to Christ! We are, at perhaps the greatest moment in the history of our world, the imminent return of our Lord and Savior. And when He returns, will he find faith on earth? That simply means doing instead of talking. Or will he find us all eased up in Zion - believing that all is well?

We must be about our Master's business in a hostile world. But our battle is not against flesh and blood; nor against black or white; nor against Democrats or Republicans; nor against Methodists or Baptists; nor against Protestants or Catholics. We wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities, against powers, against rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

But Jesus Christ promised that he would be with us, even unto the ends of the world. Christians know the truth of what is happening, but it won't do us or anyone else any good if we keep inside the four walls of our particular church the good news of the Lord being on our side. It is time to get busy spreading the good news into all the world. Just remember . . . in this time of wars and rumors of wars, the Christian battle has already been fought and won by Jesus Christ!

Preachers reaction mixed to doctrine

By DAVID KOENIG
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Is the Southern Baptist Convention trying to push women down? Or is its declaration that a woman should "submit herself graciously" to her husband as family leader merely logical advice for a smooth marriage?

Within the nation's largest Protestant denomination, the pronouncement at this week's meeting in Salt Lake City has been met with a mix of dissatisfaction and acceptance.

The convention's statement on families said wives should submit to their husbands and defined marriage in solely heterosexual terms.

The article is the first change in 35 years to The Baptist Faith and Message, the denomination's declaration of beliefs. While it's not binding, pastors, seminary employees and others are expected to ascribe to it.

Some within the 15.6-million member church viewed it as a slap to women.

"They took a good thing, the family, and used it as a cloak to further their own agenda, which is to limit the role of women in the church," said Brian Harbour, senior pastor of the First Baptist Church in Richardson. "I think the publicity will increase a lot of people's discomfort with what's happening in the Southern Baptist Convention."

Julie Pennington-Russell will become the first female senior pastor at a Southern Baptist Church in Texas when she moves from San Francisco to Waco's Calvary Baptist Church in August.

She said the declaration sees only one side of the equation.

"I believe the Bible makes a very good case for the mutual submission of men and women to each other in family partnerships," she said Thursday.

But conservative pastors said the declaration is merely a restatement of a passage from the New Testament book of Ephesians.

"When God created the family, he meant for there to be leadership," said Steve Stroope, senior pastor of Lake Pointe Baptist Church in Rockwall. "At Microsoft or Wal-Mart, nobody says, 'Why do I have to submit to the boss?' But in the family, everyone gets paranoid about the word 'submit.'"

He noted, however, that the words could be misunderstood.

"It's a good statement, but it might be misinterpreted by people outside the church," Stroope said.

Others noted that the declaration also instructs husbands to treat their wives well.

"I don't have a problem with this," said John Pollard, senior pastor at Richland Baptist Church in Richardson. "The whole context begins with the man loving his wife like Christ loved the church. Really the heavier burden is on the man, if you read the whole passage."

He said critics were using their modern sense of the word "submit" to interpret Ephesians, a 2,000-year-old letter from the apostle Paul.

"You're putting a cultural bias from the 20th century that would not have been on the mind of Paul," he said.

Both sides pointed out that individual churches are not obligated to preach the decree, and said many will simply ignore it.

"It won't change anything we're doing," said Bob Dean, senior pastor of Northlake Baptist Church in Garland.

Crisis Care program continues at Highland

Growing up I had the unusual knack of getting in trouble. By the time I was ten my Dad had accepted that part of his day would include admonishing me for my actions. I still don't understand what made me keep going back for more, but every afternoon there we were again - same place and for the same task.

Admonishing was hard, but, praise God, my Dad was up to the task. Sometimes we are required to admonish those with whom we counsel. We must be careful as we admonish lest we harden those with whom we are sharing. In our Crisis Care we are going to find what it takes to have a heavenly perspective as we admonish.

Jesus shared some hard sayings with His disciples, but it was always with a true spirit of love and gentleness. Dealing with a crisis may sometimes require us to confront an individual, but it must always be done in love and gentleness. This is part of what we will be looking at in this Sunday evening, June 14, at 5 p.m. Come join us at Highland Baptist Church, 1301 N. Banks, as we study about Crisis Care: Hope for the Hurting.
