320-acre grass fire threatened mobile home

By JEFF WEST Staff Writer

Pampa and area firefighters were kept extremely busy yesterday battling fires caused by electrical problems in town and by a combination of hot dry conditions, and fireworks use in the county.

The biggest fire was called in at 4:48 Thursday afternoon. It was just two miles south of town on Price Road. Before being finally controlled, about a half a section of lan'd had been involved, officials said.

A mobile home on the property was saved by the efforts of 13 different units and 39 personnel from around the area said Fire, Marshal Gary Stevens who believes the cause of the blaze was fireworks fired illegally from the road.

Two Pampa fire units that had started to help another county on a grass fire were called back to work the fire. They were soon joined by another Pampa unit as well as four units and 12 people from Lefors, a unit from Roberts County, three units and 14 personnel from Hoover, and some graders, pumpers and more from Gray County, Precinct Two, according to fire officials.

Smoke from the blaze was so thick it could be seen from much of Pampa and reduced visibility along Highway 60.

Just before midnight, another grass fire on the Bowers City Highway (Highway 749) just south of the city brought out three units from Pampa, two from Lefors, and tankers and graders from Gray County. While this fire was not as destructive as the other blaze it See FIRES, Page 2

Firefighters scrambled inside, but not with their water hoses. Instead, there was Ms. Bryant's boyfriend, firefighter Walter Munsel, kneeling before the petite blonde.

With trembling hands, he opened a small box and asked, "Will you marry me?" She beamed, took the engagement ring he offered and replied, "Yes, yes, yes!"

have to show they "exercised reasonable care to prevent or correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior" and that "the empl ee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise," the court said.

Justices Clarence Thomas and Antonin Scalia dissented. Writing for the two, Thomas said the court "manufactures a rule that employers are vicariously liable if supervisors create a sexually hostile work environment, subject to an affirmative defense that the court barely attempts to define."

Thomas objected that the court's rule "applies even if the employer has a policy against sexual harassment, the employee knows about the policy and the employee never informs anyone in a position of authority about the supervisor's conduct."

The court also ruled that sexharassment law no longer will rely heavily on the differences between "hostile-environment" and "quid pro quo" cases, most vividly illustrated by the supervisor who tells an employee "sleep with me or else."

Calling the two terms "of limited utility," the court said such a supervisor's threat — if it proves to be an empty one — can be a hostile-environment form of harassment that could leave an unknowing employer liable.

The rulings, respectively, revived a former lifeguard's lawsuit against Boca Raton, Fla., and kept alive an Illinois woman's lawsuit against her former employer.

The decision in the Illinois case conceivably could aid Paula Jones' effort to revive her sexualharassment lawsuit against President Clinton.

Mrs. Jones accused Clinton of propositioning her when he was Arkansas governor and she was a state employee. A federal judge, relying on a standard imposed by the appeals court with jurisdiction over Arkansas, threw out the lawsuit and said employees can collect damages only if their refusal to submit to sexual demands results in on-the-job retaliation.

In Mrs. Jones' case, the judge ruled that she had not shown any

The nation's highest court on Monday had made it much harder for students who are sexually harassed by teachers to hold school districts financially responsible. But that decision was based on a separate federal law.

Kennedy wrote for the court in the Illinois case; Justice David H. Souter authored the majority opinion in the Florida case.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices John Paul ment complaints received by the Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and Stephen G. Breyer joined in both majority opinions. Thomas and Scalia dissented from both.

In the Chicago case, Kimberly Ellerth sued her former employer, Burlington Industries, over the alleged sexual misconduct of her boss' boss.

Ellerth was a merchandising assistant in Burlington's mattressfabric division from March 1993 to May 1994, when she resigned. Her lawsuit said she quit because she was harassed by Theodore Slowik, a New York-based vice president of sales and marketing grown to 15,889. in her division.

Ellerth's supervisor Burlington, based in Greensboro, N.C., but in the course of business Slowik dealt with Ellerth on a regular basis.

Ellerth, now a homemaker in Belvidere, Ill., alleged that Slowik touched her inappropriately, told offensive jokes and made sexual innuendoes. She said he once told her, "You know, Kim, I could make your life very hard or very easy at Burlington.'

Just before her resignation, the lawsuit said, Slowik made this remark during a telephone conversation with Ellerth: "Are you wearing shorter skirts yet, Kim, because it would make your job a whole lot easier."

In the Florida case, Beth Ann Faragher intermittently worked as an ocean lifeguard for the city of Boca Raton, Fla., from 1985 to 1990 to help pay her way through college.

Faragher won $10,000 in damages from the two supervisors but lower courts ruled that she could not collect from the city because no one further up the supervisory chain knew about the harassment.

In those hearings, Anita Hill, a woman who had worked for Thomas at two federal agencies, alleged that he repeatedly used suggestive language toward her at work. He denied it.

In 1981, the EEOC received 6,883 sexual-harassment complaints. In 1997, the number had

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: The Dallas Morning News on free legal services threatened:

Rigidly adhering to the letter of the law sometimes perpetrates a great injustice. So it was last week, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a type of trust account that funds 20 percent of the nation's free legal services may be unconstitutional

Their ruling jeopardizes the Interest on Lawyers' Trust Accounts or IOLTA program. This system pools funds, such as settlements or retainers, that clients deposit briefly with their attorneys. Because the short-term deposits are pooled, they generate significant interest, which goes to foundations that fund legal aid. If these deposits landed in individual accounts, they would usually cost more in bank fees than they would generate in interest. Especially large deposits must go into individual accounts.

Texas embraced the IOLTA program in 1984. Four years later, a Houston contractor paid an attorney a $1,000 retainer, which was deposited in an IOLTA program. The contractor later sued, saying that any interest earned from his deposit is his property. Sending the interest to legal aid is an unconstitutional "taking" of his property, he argued. The high court ruled 5-4 Monday that the interest from his deposit is his property, which is superficially logical. The majority ignored the fact that pooling the accounts and assigning the interest to one beneficiary is the only reason there is any interest to fight over. The ruling could create needless administrative nightmares for lawyers and won't result in fat interest payments to individual clients. It also hurts free legal services. Dallas lawyer Darrell Jordan, who argued on behalf of IOLTAs before the Supreme Court, said the pooled accounts created something from nothing. They didn't require a new tax. They didn't require budget cuts somewhere else. The Washington Legal Foundation, which argued against IOLTA programs, responded that Congress and state legislatures should fund legal services.

NEA: Welfare for artists

Know how you can get the government to fund religion? Produce a play depicting Jesus as a practicing homosexual and call it "art."

Yes folks, the National Endowment for the Arts, the people who brought you "piss Christ" and the Maplethorpe photo exhibit, have given two grants to a theater company that produced a play called "Corpus Christi," in which the "Messiah" has sex with his apostles and is crucified as "king of the queers."

The NEA tells us its entire budget costs each American about 36 cents per year, a mere pittance compared to other items in the federal budget. Given NEA's warped defini-President Clinton has requested a 37 percent in revenue, but that didn't stop it from funding increase for the NEA's 1999 budget. receiving a $390,000 NEA grant. In fact, outs. The NEA didn't exist before 1965, but that didn't stop Tennessee Williams and tion. Frederic Remington from blessing us with their works.

'lighght,' and the "artist" received a $1,500 grant for it.

Some mistakenly believe the NEA can be reformed. They point to NEA standards requiring "decency and respect." The problem is that critiquing art is not a role that government should play. Indeed, some have even challenged the constitutionality of these standards - and the Supreme Court will soon announce a decision regarding four "artists" denied grants because their works focused on homosexuality and urina-

Another problem with "reform" of the NEA: Money is fungible. "Corpus Christi" itself did And don't think the NEA grants are going not receive a grant, but those who produced it tion of "art," I want my 36 cents back. But to starving artists. In 1996, New York's did. It doesn't take a bookkeeping genius to that's not about to happen. On the contrary, Metropolitan Opera generated $133 million shift money from an "NEA approved" project to one that is more offensive. Eliminating the NEA won't stop Every year lawmakers call for the elimina- business and individuals already donate Americans from attending their favorite opera or museum. And you won't see Pavarotti living under a bridge with a "Will the agency survives. Surely if the NEA's $98 exhibits, plays and art purchases. It's only Sing for Food" sign. What you will see are million budget is as minuscule as they sug- work unworthy of support from the free some cultural degenerates having to find real employment. Artists have a legitimate First Amendment Don't confuse my opposition to the NEA How much would you pay to read the right to be as creative, or warped, as they as opposition to the arts. I'm just saying that poem 'lighght?' This is not a typo, nor is it want to be. But "free speech" does not mean

Both sides are correct. IOLTAs don't steal from individual clients; the court's 5-4 majority shows it was split about whether there was any "property" at stake. The trust accounts are a good way to fund free legal aid.

But Congress should also stop starving legal services. Legal aid's critics delightedly denounce its missteps and conveniently ignore its good works. Critics need to recall that the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees equal protection under the law for all Americans, not just for those who can afford to hire lawyers. Legal services groups do breadand-butter civil work, such as family, housing and employment law and consumer fraud. Congress should restore legal services to its pre-1996 funding levels.

"We hear a lot of rhetoric about the rule of law and how majestic it is," Mr. Jordan says. "If people can't have access to the system, how are they going to believe in it?"

Those who don't like federally funded legal services and IOLTA programs should celebrate last week's ruling by sending a generous individual donation to their local legal aid society.

The Lufkin Daily News on Texas drought:

In the cycle of drought and flooding that has defined East Texas weather in the 1990s, this year is showing every sign of another season of drought.

Unless this part of Texas receives abnormal rainfall for the summer months ahead, a crop-killing drought is a sure bet. The usual spring rains did not appear this year as only scattered showers dotted the area in the past couple of months.

If the pattern continues during the normally dry months of July and August, it will be another year of a devastating drought.

The cost to farmers is considerable. Latest figures show that $517 million in crops have dried up.

Most of Texas is at high or extreme risk of wildfires and East Texas is particularly jittery about the danger of fire because a large number of trees that blew down in February are still on the forest floor. ..

A drought affects everyone. So be aware of the danger and be careful with fire. Until the rain returns, it's up to us.

Austin American-Statesman on Bush profits from Texas Rangers sale:

When the final figuring and handshaking was done in the sale of the Texas Rangers baseball team, Gov. George W. Bush was left counting some staggering profits

Bush parlayed a $606,000 investment in a tiny piece of the team into $14.9 million, Rangers president Tom Schieffer announced ... "It was a very good return," Schieffer said of the 24-fold payoff, "but it was not unusual

Well, maybe not, what with the stock market on fire and the state's tobacco lawyers standing to see their tobacco settlement investment blossom into something between beaucoups and billions.

The governor seemed more sanguine about his own windfall than about that of the tobacco lawyers, whose 15 percent contingency deal he heaped with contempt and disgust.

You may rightly ask what this has to do with America. After all, our public education system is dilapidated, much of our infrastructure is wearing out, our middle class is shrinking, our farm population in shrinking and is on shaky financial ground American people don't want to govern the and our debts are mountain-high.

Well, the answer is, Kosovo has nothing to do with us. Neither do the Balkans nor the quarrels in the Middle East, Africa, Asia and anywhere else Americans are inclined to meddle under the false flag of claiming that "stability" in some far-off place is in our national interests.

We have a full domestic agenda, and neither money nor lives should be wasted on far away foreign quarrels and intrigues. God did not anoint the United States to govern the world. The United States is not competent to govern the world. The Constitution does not authorize the United States government to govern the world. The world.

But alas, for most of this century what one historian has called the New York-London axis, a nexus of international banks and transnational corporations, incessantly has peddled an internationalist-interventionist foreign policy. It's been profitable for them and disastrous for Americans.

America once ran trade surpluses but now consistently runs trade deficits. America was once a creditor nation; now it is debtor nation. America was once called the arsenal of democracy; now America depends on foreign imports for key components of most of its strategic weapons. Americans, if they don't reverse course, will soon be dependent on foreign imports for the food they eat.

You should read Pat Buchanan's new book, "The Great Betrayal," published by Little, Brown and Co. The moderate Buchanan (his inscription in the copy he sent to me says, "To Charley Reese, an American first patriot who makes me sound like Boutros Boutros-Ghali") provides a succinct and accurate history of how the American people have been betrayed by the American elite, which runs the nation's foreign policy establishment.

Buchanan points out, for example, that the much-vaunted prosperity is lopsided. Corporate profits are up, the stock market is up, CEO compensation is up, but hourly wages are lower today than in the 1960s, and 63 percent of mothers with children under the age of six are working.

Yet most politicians, most of the media and most of the academics keep telling the American people to keep doing what hasn't worked for them and what has actually dollars than Europeans. American workers caused them harm. Americans need to learn

Court rules government need not subsidize indecent art

By TIMOTHY WILLIAMS ssociated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Smeared with chocolate and wearing little more than a pink boa, performance artist Karen Finley was anything but happy with the Supreme Court ruling that said government need not subsidize art it deems inde-

"Who's going to be deciding what's decent or indecent?" asked Finley, who incorporated a news conference into Thursday night's perfor-mance of "The Return of the Chocolate Science".

mouth? Is it covering your body with chocolate?" The court ruled 8-1 to restore a law that equires public values to be considered when handing out government grants. Lower courts had struck down the law, saying it was too vague and violated artists' free-speech rights. The decision was praised by some who had criticized the National Endowment for the Arts mance of "The Return of the Chocolate Smeared her performance art piece, "We Keep Our Victims Woman." "Is it a banana going in someone's Ready," featured her coating her naked body with chocolate to symbolize the oppression of wome

The show was seized upon by conservative law-makers, particularly Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who used it as an example of "indecent" art being funded by the federal government through the NEA. The controversial law requires the NEA to judge grant applications on artistic merit, "taking into consideration general standards of decency and respect for the diverse beliefs and values of the American public."

The decency standard was set by Congress in 1990 after the endowment gave money to work such as the homoerotic images of Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano's photograph of a crucifix immersed in urine.

It was challenged by Finley and other artists, who were backed by the ACLU.

In asking the court to reinstate the law, the Clinton administration argued that the govern-ment has the right to use "highly selective" rules to decide which projects and programs deserve taxpayers' support.

Writing for the court, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor determined that the law using a decen-cy standard as a criteria for grants "neither inherently interferes with First Amendment rights nor violates constitutional vagueness principles."

"So long as legislation does not infringe on making propaganda," she said, "or being a other constitutionally protected rights, Congress straight white male."

has wide latitude to set spending priorities," she said. "Congress may selectively fund a program to encourage certain activities it believes to be in the public interest."

Finley said she wept when she was told of the ruling in the case that bore her names: National Endowment for the Arts vs. Finley. "I was shocked," she said. "I feel this is a great loss to our country ... I'm disappointed because I feel that a lot of people weren't behind it, like Clinton. He's a Democrat."

"The Return of the Chocolate Smeared Woman" reprises Finley's chocolate-smearing turn. During the news conference at the Flea Theater, she sat onstage in a director's chair, the pink boa draped over her torso. She wore black underwear and spiked silver heels. Chocolate covered her body.

The audience sat on plastic white buckets because the theater is undergoing renovations. Admission was $20.

Finley said the eight-year battle with the government has taken a personal toll. She said she has been stalked and received death threats.

The controversy, she said, already has discouraged artists - and younger, risk-taking artists will suffer the most.

"Having a start in the arts is going to be more dependent on coming from inherited wealth or

President Clinton to visit largest Protestant church in Beijing

BEIJING (AP) – No steeple marks China's Clinton will worship on Sunday. The squat gray building is reached by walking through a hotel parking lot and a row of brick shanties or down narrow lanes barely wide enough for a car.

Yet on a typical Sunday the humble sanctuary of Chongwenmen Church draws overflow crowds of worshippers who spill into a cramped basement to watch a television feed of the service or sit in a courtyard sheltered by shade trees.

Urged by American religious leaders to appeal for more freedom for China's Christians, Muslims and Tibetan Buddhists, Clinton has promised to convey the message that all believers should be allowed to worship when and where they choose, free from government interference.

During the radical days of the Cultural Revolution, from the mid-1960s to late 1970s, churches in China were closed; many were destroyed. Chongwenmen did not reopen until Christmas 1982. Then about 700 people gathered each Sunday, compared with 2,500 today.

Christianity has been growing quickly in China, says the Rev. Wu Wei, the 36-year-old senior pastor of Chongwenmen.

"Society is going in a direction of diversity. People can choose their own beliefs," Wu said. Beijing, a city of 13 million people, has eight Protestant churches with a combined membership of about 30,000.

The nondenominational Chinese Protestant largest Protestant church, where President churches must register with the government before they legally can hold services.

Rights groups say independent, evangelical Christian leaders have been jailed and harassed. Han Wenzao, president of the official China

Christian Council, acknowledges there have been problems. Every day he receives letters from churches around the country, and some complain about unfair treatment by local officials of the government's Religious Affairs Bureau, he said in an interview.

The council investigates and goes through government channels to resolve cases of local officials who violate the rights of Christians, Han said.

"China being so vast, one cannot expect the provisions could be implemented everywhere the same," he said.

At Chongwenmen Church, Wu said his congregation had not suffered government interference.

"In Beijing, in our church, we feel our beliefs and lives are not constrained in any way," he said.

Can he preach without fear of censure? "Of course," he said.

Leaders of China's Protestant and Catholic churches say one of their biggest problems is lack of clergy.

Nationwide, there is about one Protestant minister for every 8,000 believers, church officials say. Many of China's 25,000 legally registered house The nation, with a population of 1.2 billion, has churches are lead by lay members with a year or

The state park is supporting a host of Independence Day activities on Saturday, July 4 to commemorate this year's 75th Anniversary of Texas State Parks being recognized with more than 100 special events at state parks throughout Texas. The Palo Duro celebration is one of 15 regional showcase diamond anniversary events being held this year at state parks.

In 1932, Palo Duro Canyon became one of the first properties purchased for park land by the State Parks Board, which was created by lawmakers in 1923 to oversee the development of a state park system. Palo Duro Canyon is one of 31 state parks whose facilities were developed under President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Civilian ment areas; and eight fish hatch-Conservation Corps.

The finding fuels hope that life also may exist on a frozen moon of Jupiter or in the polar ice erodes continually. Water pockets remain, howevcaps of Mars, researchers say in a study published today in the journal Science.

A team of scientists probed an environment that is one of the most hostile on Earth - the icefilled shallow lakes on the South Pole continent and found teeming communities of microorgan- make food through photosynthesis from the weak isms where temperatures seldom rise above freezing.

"This is more proof that life is a lot more hardy than we once thought," said Brian D. Lanoli of Oregon State University in Corvallis, a co-author of the study.

If microbes can thrive in such frigid, hostile surroundings as the Antarctic lakes, he said, then it could perhaps also be found in the frozen seas of Europa, a moon of Jupiter, or in subsurface ice fields of Mars.

"Since we know there is ice elsewhere in our solar system, this discovery makes us wonder if life might not exist there also," said Stephen J. Giovannoi, another co-author from Oregon State. The researchers found the microbial colonies while drilling ice cores from six lakes in mental extremes," the authors write in Science. Antarctica. As they drilled, they discovered a layer of dust and grit six to eight feet below the the microbes to live suggests that such environsurface of the always-frozen lakes.

Giovannoi said the grains of soil set up a "special set of circumstances" that made it possible for known to be covered with frozen water, the the microbes to live.

He said the dust was blown onto the ice during the Antarctic summer, a time when the sun is always shining. The grains absorbed solar heat enough solar energy to thaw the ice and carve and slowly sank into the ice. They reached a watery pockets where microbes could survive, point, about 6 feet to 8 feet down, and stopped said Giovannoi.

Sometimes you have to let go

You'd never know I need new living room carpet.

The floor is covered with backpacks, cardboard boxes, old newspapers and the just plain worthless debris of life.

If you look carefully, you can see its mid-dle-aged wrinkles and slightly faded color around the edges of the room. Otherwise, it is covered with the signs of what has happened or what is about to happen in our lives.

The floor has become a sorting ground for camping supplies, waiting place for books we want to read and staging zone for boxed household goods we plan to move.

Chaos reigns and I am overwhelmed.

I might scream.

RELIGION

Too many things claim my time and energy and I can't seem to prioritize them. I end up paralyzed, with very little accomplished and with more and more little "to dos" flitting through my mind.

I know all the organizational advice - make lists (I have); do the most important tasks (everything seems important); delegate (everyone is gone).

Inside, I know I need to let go and simply complete any one thing because each checked off task is a victory over inertia. Just do it, as the ads say.

But meanwhile, when the check marks are few and far between, I feel like the carpet. Wrinkled, worn out and covered up.

Crisis Care series continues

As we make our way through life we often discover little "nuggets of truth" along the way. These "nuggets" enrich our lives by teaching us about the life we are living. As we learn more and more, we find ourselves more capable of handling the situations that arise daily.

As we continue our study of Crisis Care, we find ourselves seeking for those "nuggets of truth" to share with those in a crisis. The greatest nugget of truth we can give is that we care about these individuals as a person. Still, there is more that we can and must do as we help with crisis recovery.

Sunday, June 28, at 5 p.m., we will be meeting at Highland Baptist Church, 1301 N. Banks, to look deeper into Crisis Care. Our focus will be on the positive steps we can take in ministering with crisis recovery. We'll look at how some that handles crises well and what they have in common. We invite you to be a part of this most enlightening time. Don't wait for the crisis to get ready. See you on Sunday.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) -Lee Smith, the major league's career saves leader, will join the Class AA Jackson Generals for three Texas League games this weekend in Shreveport, La.

Smith, 40, retired midway through last season, but a change of a heart and an unexpected call from the Houston Astros got him back in uniform.

Smith last month signed a minor-league contract with the Astros, and has been pitching at Class AAA New Orleans. He had a 1-0 record with two saves and a 6.23 ERA in nine appearances for the Zephyrs. The Astros, who are expected next week to make a final decision on Smith's future, apparently decided to let Smith spent the weekend with the Generals, rather than have him travel with the Zephyrs to a series in Canada.

In a major-league career that included stints with the Chicago Cubs, St. Louis, Boston and Montreal, Smith had 478 saves, a 71-92 record and a 3.03 ERA.

The Final Four would again be held in the Alamodome, which holds about 40,000 spectators for basketball.

NEW YORK (AP) — A University of Tennessee basketball star who went to Duncanville, Texas, in high school is being honored in New York by a national group for the hearing-impaired.

Tamika Catchings had a hearing aid in junior high, but stopped wearing it in the sixth grade because people teased her about it.

Now she has to wear the device to hear people cheer.

Last year, Catchings led the Duncanville Pantherettes to the Texas Class 5A state championship. This year, she averaged 18 points for the national champion Tennessee Lady Vols.

She was honored in New York by the League for the Hard of Hearing.

It was her college coach, Pat Summitt, who convinced Catchings to start wearing the hearing aid again.

Despite her disability, Catchings was an honors student in high school and has been holding her own academically in college, Catchings says the hearing aid makes her more sure of herself in the classroom.

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M's new women's basketball coach will be Peggie Gillom, who's now an assistant coach for the Houston Comets of the Women's NBA.

"I'm excited. It's a great opportunity. Great school, great tradition," Gillom told Houston television station KRIV on Thursday.

"I'm just shocked. I'm just delighted they saw fit to hire me.

The Aggies have been looking for a coach since Candi Harvey resigned on April 14 after consecutive losing seasons to become coach of the Nashville franchise of the American Basketball League.

"I was offered the job. ... I've accepted, but we haven't worked out the negotiations or anything like that," she said.

Medicine Shoppe and 1st Bank defeated Celanese, 15-2.

On Wednesday, Dunlap scored six quick runs in the top of the first inning and then hung on to defeat Moose Lodge, 9-8. In the second game, The Medicine Shoppe was ousted from the tournament by Dean's Pharmacy, 15-2.

Thursday, Weston On Teichmann struck out 13 batters in five innings as The Operating Company eliminated Moose Lodge, 9-1. Dean's Pharmacy eliminated Celanese with a 12-9 win

With four teams remaining in the tournament, play resumes tonight with 1st Bank Southwest going against Dunlap and The Operating Company going against Dean's Pharmacy with the losers facing elimination. The tournament continues until Tuesday.

1st Bank won the league championship this season.

Graf ousted by Zvereva

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) -Steffi Graf's bid for an eighth Wimbledon title ended today with a stunning defeat to a player she had beaten 17 straight times.

Natasha Zvereva, a doubles specialist who had won only three sets against Graf in all their previous meetings, beat the fourthseeded Germap 6-4, 7-5 in a thirdround match.

Graf, making her 13th appearance at Wimbledon, was competing in only her fifth tournament of the year becasuse of knee and hamstring injuries.

Her lack of match play showed as she struggled from the outset in the rain-delayed Centre Court match.

Graf double faulted six times, had trouble returning serve and was kept off balance by Zvereva's change-of-pace shots.

It was only Graf's sixth singles defeat at Wimbledon since she made her first appearance in 1984 at the age of 15. She had lost only twice in the past seven years.

There has been speculation that this would be Graf's last Wimbledon. She said this week that she had considered retirement two months ago after continued injury problems.

Graf broke down in tears at a news conference Monday, saying she was overcome just to be back at Wimbledon again.

Heat, dry spell no threat yet to wildlife

April ended the weather went directly to August without stopping at May, June or July. The state has suffered a month liberally sprinkled with triple-digit temperatures, still little or no rain, and not much prospect of anything appreciable unless something ugly boils out of the Gulf.

For some people, 1998 is dredging up ghosts of the drought year of 1996, or, worse, 1980, the hottest, driest summer most living Texans ever experienced.

And while hunters living in Houston watch their lawns shrivel to crisp brown even as their water and electricity bills climb like the mercury in their back-porch thermometers, it's hard for them not to worry about how this monthslong siege of hot, dry weather is affecting wildlife throughout the state.

After all, the scars from 1996, when scorching drought took a terrible toll on many wildlife species, are still tender.

But this isn't 1996. And it certainly isn't 1980. At least not yet.

"It's something to watch, of course. But I'm a long way from being panicked," Dr. Jerry Cooke, program director of upland wildlife ecology for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said of the hot, dry conditions' impact on most wildlife. But he added:

was drier than ever, and when might be time to start worrying a wildlife thrived. little.

This latest spell of over-heated, under-watered weather across most of the state is having a nega-tive effect on some wildlife, but the current situation is far different than the one faced a couple of years ago and in the benchmark 1980 summer.

In those years, drought hung on for months — the 1980 drought autumn of 1995 and continued until August 1996.

Those droughts saw deer fawns die in heaps. Quail evaporated. Rio Grande turkey produced almost no young. The effects lin-gered. After the 1979-80 drought, it took three years for the South Texas deer herd to return to predrought distribution, Cooke said. And the low fawn production in 1996 will really begin manifesting itself this autumn, when those 1996 fawns will be two-year-olds and carry much of the hunting and breeding pressure.

This year, things are different ---at least so far. This rainless stretch has been relatively brief (only three or four months) and, in most "If this keeps up for a couple of of the state, it follows more than a

But white-tailed deer, the most important game animal in the state, are doing just fine in most can see areas of the state. And the dry charts, weather actually could be a boost for Eastern turkeys.

If there's little or no soil moisture to temper heat during neste ing season (March-May, depending on area of the state), eggs tend to get too hot during incubation and not hatch at all. ## NHL approves new rules for next season TORONTO (AP) - The NHL linesmen) for between 10 and 20 increase scoring.

That wasn't too pleasing to Dominik Hasek, who was named of games, home and away, with the NHL's most valuable player two refs. Each referee is responsiand top goalie Thursday after the rules changes approved by the league's board of governors were announced.

"I just don't think it will work," Hasek said of a new rule moving the goal line from 11 feet to 13 feet from the end boards next season.

"I don't think it will increase scoring. You can't score from behind the net. I know, because I played in Europe. Wayne Gretzky can spend one minute behind the goal line, but he can't score from there.

"They should have asked the European players about that."

NHL general managers, who proposed the change, and the governors believe moving the net out will allow creative players more room to make plays. They also feel it will help prevent goalies from stopping dump-ins behind their nets, which might promote more fore-checking and less talling back into a neutral zone trap.

Other changes approved at the day-long meeting were:

- Shaving off the "wings" on the goal crease that stretch out beyond the goal posts in order to cut down on goals disallowed because of crease infractions.

— Giving the video goal judge the power to call down to the referee when a crease infringement is spotted. The referee will retain the right to over-rule if he feels the player was pushed into the crease.

— A player who leaves the bench and joins an altercation will no longer be automatically suspended, but the case will be reviewed by the league.

- Stricter suspensions are to be handed out in cases where a player suffers a head injury due to a stick or elbow infraction.

The league will also experiment with eliminating the red line for two-line offsides during the preseason and will "work towards implementing goalie equipment standards for the 1998-99 season." Among pieces of equipment the league hopes to limit are catching gloves and jerseys.

The board also approved three sales: the Tampa Bay Lightning to Arthur L. Williams; the Buffalo Sabres to the Rigas family; and a minority interest in the New York Islanders to New York Sports Venture, LLC.

PARIS (AP) - Nineteen min- after its second straight comeutes changed the fortunes of back victory. three World Cup teams. All the time in the world couldn't help lievable game," said Luis the hapless, dissension-riddled squad from the United States.

and Belgium was knocked out of the tournament, on the Mexico and the Mexican peostrength of three second-half ple." goals Thursday — two by the Mexicans, one by South Korea.

Germany beat Iran 2-0, domi- rally. nating a game the Iranians hoped would produce an upset and a second-round spot.

And for the United States, one game seemed just like the last in its utter flop of a World Cup. goalpost with a shot, lost 1-0 to winless in five World Cups. Yugoslavia and did more finger-pointing.

"I don't think we got the best out of the talent we had here," Tab Ramos said. "From the beginning, this whole World Cup has been a mess. I blame the coaches for the losses. I have no problem saying that."

Today, as the team left France, Steve coach Sampson announced "significant fines" against American players who criticized the U.S. Soccer Federation "as a way of directing a message to younger players that this is not professional behavior."

Mexico had no such problems that all over the field."

Tied with the Dutch in points entering the match, and ahead of Belgium by two points, Mexico supposedly had the toughest task of reaching the second round. Belgium, after The Americans hit another all, played against South Korea,

With the Netherlands leading Bierhoff 2-0 in Saint-Etienne, and the Belgians up 1-0 in Paris, that forecast seemed right.

But Yoo Sang-chul tied it for South Korea in the 71st minute for a 1-1 tie. And the two latedeveloping draws meant Mexico will get Germany on Monday in Montpellier, while the Netherlands will face off against Yugoslavia in Toulouse. Belgium goes home.

"I told my players not to lose faith," Mexican coach Manuel Lapuente said. "With faith you move mountains. They have a big heart and they displayed

The second-round pairings Slobodan Komljenovic headed were to be completed today when Romania faced Tunisia and England took on Colombia in Group G, while in Group H, it was Argentina vs. Croatia. Mexico and the Netherlands duced a 2-2 draw with the Japan played Jamaica in a Santrac said. "The game was advanced to the second round, Netherlands. "It was a fantastic match that had no bearing on not flamboyant, I know, but game for us, a triumph for anything except final positions that is how you play good although both were seeking matches." their first World Cup points.

The England-Columbia match in Lens drew added attention because of the violent reputation of English fans. Some 100 people, most of them supporters from England, were arrested overnight in northern France and across the border in Belgium, and Lens braced for trouble.

In Montpellier, and Klinsmann scored early in the second half and Germany ended Iranian hopes.

"We tried hard in the first half, but it didn't work," Bierhoff said. "We were always afraid that Iran would somehow score."

At Nantes, the Yugoslavs scored less than four minutes after kickoff, then struggled to hold off the Americans.

The U.S. team, which lost all three games by a combined 5-1 scored and was humiliated in a 2-1 loss to Iran, hit the post after acy against African nations. Only only 24 seconds. The Americans one of five African teams came away frustrated when advanced past the first round.

in a rebound off a free kick.

"We wanted to win and end the qualifications with a victory, and that was our only aim," Yugoslav coach Slobodan

Sampson was stung by the criticism of his coaching.

"You select 22 players, you give players the opportunity to participate in a World Cup or at least be selected and enjoy the World Cup," he said. "You stick by your players, even during hard times, and you hope they appreciate that. That's all you can do as a coach. Some have Oliver done a great job of showing that Juergen appreciation. Some have not."

In the midst of a tournament filled with officiating controversies, FIFA defended its refer-

'We remain generally satisfied with the performance of the referees," said David Will, a Scottish lawyer who has run FIFA's referee office for eight years. "The overall standard remains high - higher than in the United States, to be sure."

It did little to appease the African Football Confederation, which accused FIFA of a conspir-

AUSTIN - Extremely dry conditions over most of Texas have prompted fire prevention experts to urge the public to plan their Fourth of July Holiday with fire safety in mind. "Big fires start small, so we are asking people to be aware that something as small as a spark from fireworks can start a major fire," said Regional

Public hearing slated for water plan, Carson Couny residents urged to attend

Residents of Carson County are encouraged to offer comments regarding the content of the proposed Panhandle Water Planning Area regional water plan at a public hearing scheduled for 7 p.m., Tuesday, June 30, 1998. The hearing will be held at four locations across the Panhandle Water Planning Area. The locations are: Region XVI Educations Service Center, 1601 S. Cleveland, Amarillo; Canadian High School, 621 S. 5th Street, Canadian; Clarendon Junior High School, 822 W. 5th Street; Dalhart Senior High School, 1802 E. 16th Street, Dalhart. Residents are invited to attend this public hearing at the most convenient site. The fours sites will be linked by teleconferencing equipment, and input will be received from each. Members of the Panhandle Water Planning Group will be on hand at each site to assist residents and ensure that any questions or comments are received and recorded.

This hearing is being held pursuant to the requirements of the recently enacted Senate Bill 1, which requires that comprehensive water planning be conducted for the entire state. To accomplish this, the state has been divided into 16 planning regions, each of which is responsible for developing a comprehensive regional water plan. In the year 2000, the 16 regional plans will be combined into a single state water plan.

The Texas Water Development Board, the state agency charged with the implementation of Senate Bill 1, approved the 16 regional boundaries and appointed individuals to an initial coordinating body for each region in February of this year. This initial group has added additional members and is known as the panhandle Water Planning Group. The panhandle Water Planning Group has 21 voting members, and each member represents a specific interest group. The interest groups include: public, municipal, county, water districts, river authorities, water suppliers, agriculture, small business, electric generating utilities, environmental and industry. These eleven interest groups were defined by law in order to ensure an adequate representation for all potential water users. The Panhandle Water Planning Group's region consists of 21 counties in the Texas panhandle.

The hearing on June 30 is being held specifically to solicit input regarding issues that should be included or considered during the development of the Scope of Work for the regional water plan. The Scope of Work is extremely critical to the development of the regional plan, as it will define what items will be covered in the regional plan. The regional water plan will address both ground water and surface water management and conservation for a fifty year period beginning in the year 2000. The regional water plans are to be updated every five years after the year 2000.

Public comment will be received either in person or in writing at the public hearing. Residents who are unable to attend the hearing may send written comments to the Panhandle Water Planning Group, c/o Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, PO Box 9275, Amarillo, TX 79105. Persons with questions regarding this public hearing or the activities of the Panhandle Water Planning Group may

Controversial books are moved in library

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) – Two children's books depicting families with homosexual parents will be shelved in a juvenile nonfiction section of the Wichita Falls Public Library instead of the picture-book area meant for younger children.

The First Baptist Church of Wichita Falls and several religious groups had sought the removal of "Heather Has Two Mommies" and "Daddy's Roommate" or placement on adult bookshelves.

However, Librarian Linda Hughes said it's inappropriate to put the books in the adult section "because children are looking for these books now because of the furor."

She added: "They are very curious. They want to know what is going on. Sending them to the adult area would mean browsing through very graphic texts that were written for adults."

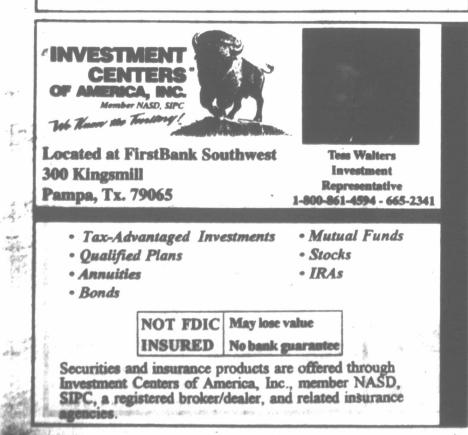

through very graphic texts that were written for adults." The city's library advisory board reviewed the books after the Rev. Robert Jeffress, pastor of the First Baptist Church, sharply criticized the books. The board recommended Tuesday that "Heather Has Two Mommies" be moved to the juvenile section, the Wichita Falls Times Record News reported in today's editions.

But Ms. Hughes had the final say. She said she decided children who wanted the books could find them in the social sciences area for juveniles. The juvenile section is geared toward children in grades 3 to 7.

Jeffress was out of town and not available for comment on Thursday. But earlier in the week, he promised to take the matter to the City Council if the books were placed where children would have access to them.

But Nancy Horvath, pastor of the Wichita Falls Metropolitan Community Church, praised Ms. Hughes' decision. Ms. Horvath is raising one child with her female partner of 11 years.

Since the controversy began, interest in the books has exploded. Previously, only five people had asked about the books. By June 8, the day the new library opened, staff tracked 187 computer title searches for both volumes, most originating from the children's terminals.
