How well can you hear the sirens? City investigating whether more emergency sirens now needed

Reserve police, dairy cows and the possible addition of emergency sirens were discussed at the Pampa City Commission meeting yesterday.

Local Emergency Management Coordinator Ken Hall spoke to the commission about adding additional emergency sirens to the seven that are already in place.

The sirens now meet standards set by Federal Emergency Management, but some citizens have complained that they can not hear the sirens well.

Hall noted that many of these complaints come from people that had one of the old sirens very close to them which changed with the placement of the new sirens. He also said that the system was meant to be an outdoor warning system, not indoor, as some people assume.

Hall said he has been in contact with the manufacturer of the sirens, and has received ideas on how to increase the volume above the minimum by adding three or more sirens. The manufacturer suggested that the city add as many as nine more, Hall said.

The commission asked Hall to find out exactly what three additional sirens would cost and how effective they would be. They also suggested that in the next few weeks Hall coordinate a drill with Pampa ISD to see how well the sirens are heard in the schools around town.

The sirens now meet standards set by Federal Emergency Management, but some citizens have complained that they can not hear the sirens well.

Police Chief Charlie Morris approached commissioners yesterday to explain why he thought a police reserve would be a benefit to the city. He said 5-10 reserve officers will be state certified and could work under the supervision of one of the full time officers. Morris stated that the reserve officers could help during special events like parades and the rodeo and searches for lost children or alzheimer's patients. He also said the officers could ride with full time officers providing additional security in a two-person unit.

Morris said the use of officers for special detail could save the city money by cutting out some of the overtime that is now paid to full time officers. Reserve officers, he said, would be required to work about 16 hours a month and would have no authority unless called by the agency administrator.

Mayor Bob Neslage said he thought the reserve could also act as a replacement

Surveys will measure youths sexual attitudes and behaviors

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Staff Writer

Parents got the opportunity earlier this week to review questions on student surveys which will be distributed to Pampa ISD students this year by Worth the Wait — a new federally funded Gray County abstinence education program.

Eric Tooley, a member of Aim for Success — the largest provider of sexual abstinence education in the state — also spent an hour and a half with parents Monday night at Pampa Middle School demonstrating an example of an abstinence education presentation Pampa children can anticipate seeing in the future.

Worth the Wait is a non-profit organization created to address the problems associated with teen sexual activity and its consequences, according to program directors Stacey Ladd, RN, and Beth Kettenring.

The purpose of the survey, said Ladd, is to establish a baseline regarding teen attitudes and intentions about abstinence and sexual activity.

"If we survey them, we can follow them over the next three, five, six years," she said.

The surveys, which will be filled out anonymously, are being distributed this fall to students in the sixth through 12th grades.

"Under state law, parents may exercise their opt-out right if they do not wish for their children to participate in the survey," said Ladd.

Ladd presented the survey questions to PISD board members late last month before bringing the questions to parents Monday night for community input.

"We want your input and your involvement," she said.

Dance the night away ... Street dance to raise money for museum

"Dancing Under the Stars III," a street dance and dinner, is scheduled for Sat., Aug. 29. It is the latest fund-raising effort of the White Deer Land Museum.

The event will take place at the museum, 116 S. Cuyler, from 7 until 11 p.m. Western swing music will be provided by two area bands, The Magic City Cowboy Band and The Rocking Chair Cowboys.

From 7-7:45 p.m. guests will sample salsas and dips made by the foundation and advisory board members followed by a brisket dinner with all the trimmings.

A silent auction of items donated by area artists, crafts people and businesses will be up for bid in the museum's Holland Wing until 9 p.m.

Cost of the entire evening's events is $15. Guests may tour the museum during the evening and see the current exhibit in the Holland Wing, called "Panhandle Wildflowers."

During the past four years, the White Deer Land Museum Foundation's membership drives and special events have helped raise money for the expansion of the museum facilities, educational programs, public exhibits and recognition of donors.

Tickets for "An Evening Under the Stars III" may be purchased by contacting any foundation board member. For more information call the museum at 669-8041.

Fire restrictions lifted at Meredith

FRITCH — John Benjamin, superintendent of Lake Meredith National Recreation Area and Alibates Flint Quarries National Monument, recently announced the fire danger readings have decreased in north and east areas of the park due to recent rains. It has rained enough in these areas that vegetation has turned green, thereby resulting in a lower fire danger situation. The west and south areas of the park remain in a high fire danger situation due to insufficient moisture. Camp fires are now permitted in the following designated campgrounds: Bugbee, Blue Creek, Chimney Hollow, Blue West, Harbor Bay, Fritch Fortress, Cedar Canyon, Sanford-Yake and Spring Canyon. Fires of all kinds are still banned at McBride Canyon, Plum Creek and Rosita Flats. The remaining fire bans will be lifted when it rains enough for vegetation to green up. Park officials request visitors keep all fires small. Never leave a fire unattended and always extinguish a fire completely before leaving the campsite. The use of pallet and construction material for fuel requires the removal of all hardware such as nails and screws prior to entering the park. Campfires will be allowed in these areas until fire danger readings reach "high" or "extreme" levels. Wildfire prevention cannot be successful without public support.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate 1998 Property Tax Rates in Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3

This notice concerns 1998 property tax rates for Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$302,705.00
Last year's debt taxes	$0.00
Last year's total taxes	$302,705.00
Last year's tax base	$2,453,036,923.00
Last year's total tax rate	0.012347/$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$302,905.00
+ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$2,572,893,092.00
= This year's effective tax rate	0.011772/$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property and adjusting for transferred function)	$302,876.00
+ This year's adjusted tax base	$2,572,893,092.00
= This year's effective operating rate	0.011772/$100
x 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	0.012713/$100
+ This year's debt rate	0/$100
= This year's rollback rate	0.012713/$100

Let's give youth a hand

Between 1990 and 1994, youth between 10 and 16 years of age clearly posed a major threat to society, committing 23 percent of the most serious violent and property offenses.

Offenses like murder, sexual assault, robbery and aggravated assault are not childish pranks. Neither are burglary, larceny-theft, and motor vehicle theft. In 1994, the problem worsened as the number of serious offenses by youth rose to 28 percent.

In an effort to combat juvenile crime, the Office of the Attorney General joined with prosecutors and law enforcement agencies in proposing many revisions to the laws in the Texas Family Code that relate to juvenile crime.

In addition, the Juvenile Crime Intervention Division of the Office of the Attorney General is working with other service agencies to help prevent youth from getting into trouble. The Juvenile Crime Intervention Division is working to educate not only teens, but parents, educators and others who work with youth about the many options for assistance that are available.

The 75th Legislature adopted a tough new attitude toward young criminals and enacted broad reforms that took effect in 1995. The Legislature funded more probation officers, doubled the capacity of the juvenile corrections system, and created penalties to match the seriousness of the crimes and the criminal histories of the perpetrators. Other reforms loosened confidentiality requirements, held parents responsible for their children's crimes, and required youthful offenders to pay restitution to their victims.

Dan Morales
 Attorney General of the State of Texas

According to the Texas Department of Public Safety, Texas police arrested fewer juveniles in 1997. The 2.4 percent decrease in juvenile arrests was the first decline recorded in Texas since 1988. DPS attributed the decrease to demographic shifts, earlier intervention and harsher penalties for juvenile offenders.

Good news? You bet. But will just cracking down solve juvenile crime? Very unlikely.

In an attempt to keep their youth off the criminal path early on, many communities are dealing directly with problem teens - before crimes are committed.

One method being used is a Youth Resource Fair that gives teens and their parents a look at possibilities for help in their own hometown. The fair can provide an opportunity for one-on-one counseling with local agency personnel in a wide variety of areas.

The idea is to get an entire neighborhood involved in looking at healthy alternatives to violent lifestyles. The emphasis is on providing answers, not just handing out colorful brochures. Local representatives from more than two dozen state agencies are on hand to help with substance abuse or domestic violence counseling or to sign teens up for job training and education programs.

Youth Resource Fairs prove that it doesn't take big bucks to make a difference in a youth's life. Creative use of existing resources and better coordination of efforts can provide new answers for communities in need.

The Juvenile Crime Division of the Office of the Attorney General has joined with other service organizations to coordinate Youth Resource Fairs across the state. Recent fairs were held in Giddings at the State School and in Northeast El Paso.

A Youth Resource Fair is a great reminder that part of a parent's job is to help children explore possibilities. This can be difficult to do when parents are working to keep a family going. Parents need to be aware of just how much help is available to them in their own communities.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: The Dallas Morning News on Texas' high-tech work force:

For decades, the oil and agriculture industries provided leaders for Texas. That was largely because their work was right here in Texas, connected to the land and the soil.

Today's global, technology-based economy has changed all that. The state's expansive high-tech companies, typified by the "Telecom Corridor" in Richardson, form the backbone of the modern Texas economy. But for many high-tech innovators, whose businesses often take them all over the world, Texas is only a place to live.

Changing that dynamic, and getting more people from the state's inventive and entrepreneurial technology community involved in solving state and local problems, presents one of Texas' great challenges.

Vin Prothro, who chairs Gov. George W. Bush's Science and Technology Council, has a particular goal for the state's technology community. The Dallas Semiconductor Corp. chairman wants people from within the industry to press Texas legislators during their 1999 session to invest ample funds in the state's community colleges and in high school advanced placement courses. Those reforms would help improve the skills of workers coming into the Texas work force.

The state's schools indeed provide a natural place for the Texas technology community and the state's civic needs to coincide. That's why some relationships already exist between large computer companies and Texas colleges.

Still, the gap between the state's universities and its technology community remains sizable, especially when one considers the legion of start-up technology companies spreading out across Texas.

The University of Texas at Dallas, for example, sits in the middle of Richardson's Telecom Corridor. It draws strong support from several big technology companies like Texas Industries, Nortel, Ericsson and Electronic Data Systems. But only a few of the corridor's dynamic start-up companies have been big players in the university's life.

That's troubling because UT-Dallas' mission fits naturally with the work of the Telecom Corridor's 550 high-tech companies. UT-Dallas places great emphasis on math and sciences. And it recruits top-tier high school students who can eventually feed into the area's technology companies.

The 1999 Texas Legislature presents an opportunity for UT-Dallas leaders and young, entrepreneurial Telecom Corridor executives to change this situation. They could work together as a team in presenting the school's needs to Texas legislators.

The university needs additional money to recruit more aspiring young faculty members and to offer scholarships to more premier high school seniors. Those professors and students could in turn expand Telecom Corridor's innovative work, just as Stanford and MIT helped fuel a technological explosion in California's Silicon Valley and along Massachusetts' Route 128.

Investing in the work of specialized schools like UT-Dallas would make a real difference in the new Texas economy. So would sizable investments in the state's community colleges and advanced placement courses. This message is one that technological leaders should carry to Austin. Speaking up for Texas schools would allow the high-tech team to become a new force within the state's civic life.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Amtrak:

With more travelers riding its trains, more of those trains leaving and arriving on time and more money than projected coming in, Amtrak is positioned to make a strong case for increased government support.

This week Amtrak reported a 5.8 percent increase in ridership over the corresponding period last year. That same report showed Amtrak's revenues exceeded projections by $5.5 million and trains adhered to schedules 80 percent of the time.

Those positive indicators have put the four confirmed members of the Amtrak Reform Board in a decidedly upbeat frame of mind. That board is entertaining thoughts of offering cruise-ship quality luxury service on some lines and high-speed lines outside the Northeast Corridor. Texas, California, Florida and the Pacific Northwest were mentioned as possibilities.

Despite such encouraging words from the reform board and the promising statistics that inspired them, Amtrak could face problems in the U.S. Senate. There have been indications that the transportation appropriations subcommittee was preparing a 1999 spending bill that includes no money for Amtrak operations.

Such a funding setback could imperil the viability of some lines, such as the Texas Eagle. The immediate challenge confronting the reform board is to convince the Senate that the demand and the need for rail passenger service is growing but the federal operational subsidies are still needed.

Without operational subsidies now something called Amtrak might achieve self-sufficiency by 2002. But that diminished entity wouldn't come close to being a truly national rail passenger system.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 7, the 219th day of 1998. There are 146 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

In 1789, the U.S. War Department was established by Congress.

In 1912, the Progressive Party nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president.

In 1942, U.S. forces landed at Guadalcanal, marking the start of the first major allied offensive in the Pacific during World War II.

In 1947, the balsa wood raft Kon-Tiki, which had carried a six-man crew 4,300 miles across the Pacific Ocean, crashed into a reef in a Polynesian archipelago.

Privileges do not equal rights

Charley Reese
 Syndicated columnist

The odd thing about post-modern America is that many people have rejected both religion and reason. Superstition and illogical thinking are the chief characteristics of public debate in America.

Pro-abortionists, for example, wish to be called pro-choice, though the child to be aborted is denied both choice and life. They claim a woman has a right to control her own body, but it is not her body that is killed at the abortion clinic. It's her baby's body that ends up in the dump. Abortion is infanticide.

To show you how illogical the law is, a pregnant woman who uses drugs can be charged with child abuse by the criminal justice system, which says it is OK if she hires an abortionist to kill the same child. Laws should at the least be logical. Apparently, killing is not considered abuse. The last government that advocated death as therapy took power in Germany in 1933.

The U.S. Senate has passed a resolution declaring the president of Yugoslavia to be a war criminal. By the time you read this, the House may have done the same.

The question is, Where in the Constitution does it say that American politicians can sit in judgment of foreign heads of state? And how can 535 American politicians, most of whom don't even know what's going on in their own country, determine that a foreign head of state is a war criminal? I suspect that the reason is because some Washington public relations firm, representing the man's enemies, suggested it and probably even drafted the resolution, which is, of course, pointless to begin with.

U.S. politicians never declared Pol Pot a war criminal. He murdered one-third to one-half of all Cambodians. They never declared Joe Stalin or Mao Tse-tung war criminals and those two murdered millions. What this shows you, this resolution about Slobodan Milosevic, is what a bunch of low life posturers and demagogues we have in Washington at the present time. Their mouths, as well as their votes, are for rent.

But, of course, private character doesn't matter. This claim, put forth to rationalize President Clinton's despicable behavior, is childish absurd. Would you name a pedophile to run a government day-care center? Would you elect a serial killer as sheriff? Then why do you think a man who lies and cheats on his wife and lies to avoid the draft will tell the truth about public matters? In fact, Clinton has been as unfaithful to the Constitution and to his promises to the voters as he has been to his wife.

Look at the contradiction between professed egalitarianism and group rights. If one group has rights that another doesn't, then you obviously have discrimination and inequality. If all groups have the same rights, then all individuals within the groups have the same rights, and it's pointless to talk about group rights.

As a matter of fact, the basic premise of America is that rights, a gift of God, reside with the individual, not with the group. The Bill of Rights does in fact apply to every individual in the United States regardless of how you might wish to group them.

Today, people mistake privileges for rights. What most groups clamoring for "rights" really are asking for are special privileges and favors denied other people.

And how about the intolerance of the tolerant? Those who preach tolerance of homosexuality are intolerant of people who disagree with them. Those who are tolerant of pornography, vulgarity and profanity are intolerant of those who object to those things. To sum up, it's called human regression.

The Clintons: Two against the world

Dan Rather
 Syndicated columnist

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Inside the White House, it's two against the world. Bill and Hillary, the president and the first lady. More than ever, now that Monica Lewinsky and her mother have agreed to help Ken Starr.

When the news of this first came to the White House, it was plunged into gloom. Two long-time Clinton confidants told this reporter the same thing that day: "There have been dark times around here before, but this is the darkest." And both said the Clintons never before have felt so alone. But both emphasized that, in the words of one, "They're determined to tough it out, fight to the finish and prevail." Preval meaning finish their term in office.

The Clintons long have been convinced Starr is out to "get" them. He failed in every effort. Then, near the start of this year, came the break about Lewinsky having some kind of relationship with the president. That breathed new life into Starr's investigations. But as long as Lewinsky wasn't talking, Starr was stymied.

Now she is talking. A lot. As a result, the Clinton presidency has been moved into a new and more perilous position. The Clintons know it. Their whole history together as a married couple has been forged in the fires of political heat. But they have never been through heat this hot.

They now must make a long march through a scorching valley in the shadow of political death.

Washington is once again filled with whispers of the possibility - the real possibility - of impeachment or resignation. Some of those whispers are in the White House itself.

Among the staff, doubt and fear are spreading like mildew in a damp basement. In this atmosphere, the Clintons know that in important, fundamental ways, they can depend only upon themselves. It's the two of them against the world.

Among those who know them best, it is said that this is the way they view the situation: They must fight on three fronts: legal, political and historical.

Legally, they expect Starr to try for an actual indictment of the president. They believe Starr would also indict the first lady if he thought he could. But against her, he doesn't have enough. So goes the belief. But against Mr. Clinton, Starr - now, that he has Lewinsky talking - has enough to tempt him to go for indictment.

That's why the president's decision about whether he will testify before the grand jury is so important.

Politically, the Clintons are said to be convinced that Starr will submit a voluminous case to the Republican-controlled House of Representatives and will argue that it lays out a "constitutional crisis" worthy of impeachment consideration. No one in the White House, least of all the Clintons, underestimates the ominous potential this has. All in the White House, most of all the Clintons, are furious about this, believing it to be grossly unfair, but they recognize the real and present danger it represents.

If the Democrats should win back control of the House in November's mid-term elections, that could change dramatically the equation in the Clintons' favor. But they can't count on it. The odds against it happening are too long.

On the historical front, the Clintons are said to be absolutely convinced that history will view Starr's case as a political vendetta, bankrolled by wealthy ideological haters of all they have tried to accomplish, and built on shaky evidence of minor, at most, wrongdoing.

Hope, clearly, is the father of this expectation. As the siege tightens and the climactic, decisive battles draw nearer, the Clintons cling to the hope.

Together. Angry. In the last decisive fight to hold together what's left of their dreams, two against the world.

Neighbors shocked, officials debate what to do with child murder suspects

CHICAGO (AP) — They're the kind of little boys who like to play with puppies and watch cartoons. That's exactly what they did, police say — after they killed an 11-year-old girl for her shiny blue bike.

The accusation against two boys, ages 7 and 8, stunned a city that has agonized before over children who kill children, and left authorities with a terrible dilemma: How do you punish kids so young if they have committed crimes so vicious?

That question lingered Tuesday as the boys, among the youngest murder suspects ever in Chicago, were ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation. Both are charged in the July death of Ryan Harris, who was struck in the head, sexually molested and suffocated. Her panties were stuck in her mouth; grass and leaves were stuffed in her nostrils.

Police say the 7-year-old hit Ryan in the head with a rock, knocking her off her bike. The boys allegedly hid the bike in some weeded lots, but it was gone when they returned to look for it.

Neighbors in the South Side community of Englewood, where the boys lived across an alley from each other, couldn't believe the accusation.

"They're not monsters," said Kosi Waterhouse, 45, leader of a Jamaican band. "They're not evil children ... These children loved their parents and their parents were good with them."

Neighbors and shopkeepers describe the 7-year-old as an aggressive child who was good with his hands, loved candy and bikes, and earned spare change doing yard work or helping out in the local grocery.

"You know kids get into mischief, but he was a sweet little boy," said Shirley Blanton, an attendant at the Wash Factory, a laundrette, whose grandchildren played with the boy.

The 8-year-old, who recently received a bike as a birthday present, is an honor student. He was so shy that he rarely left his yard, neighbors said.

"After school all the kids would be in here and we'd have to roust them out because they'd be so noisy ... but not him," said Abdul Ismail, a clerk at the 50 Stars market. "That was the last person you'd expect this from."

This is just the latest sensational case in Chicago in which children have been charged with killing other children.

Four years ago, Robert "Yummy" Sandifer, 11, was killed in a chain of events that began when he fatally shot a 14-year-old girl in a botched plan to shoot a rival gang member. He, in turn, was shot to death in a killing that prosecutors said was ordered by gang leaders to silence him.

That same year, two boys, 10 and 11, dangled, then dropped 5-year-old Eric Morse 14 floors to his death in a Chicago housing project after he refused to steal candy for them.

Defense attorneys say the boys charged with killing Ryan Harris are good kids from decent homes with no history of trouble. They claim the rock throwing was a prank that went awry.

Uncomfortable Traveler Thinks Hosts Should Visit Guest Room

DEAR ABBY: Since travel season is upon us, I'd like to offer a suggestion as well as seek your advice. For the host and hostess who are having houseguests: Please spend a night in your guestroom to judge its comfort level.

We visit my in-laws in another state twice a year and stay in my husband's childhood room. The sheets are so thin you can read a newspaper through them and the pillows are so musty it is difficult to breathe. The only light in the room is a tiny decorative child's lamp, which does not cast enough light to tell what garments are in the closet, much less to read by. In addition, the closets are jammed with years of accumulation, making it difficult to find a place to put our clothes. It has been this way for years.

When my in-laws stay in our home, I go out of my way to make them feel welcome. I always include small "extras" — new magazines, an alarm clock, extra pillows, fresh soap, a couple of drinking glasses and even fresh flowers on the dresser.

Abby, I appreciate my in-laws' hospitality and do not want to appear ungrateful, but it has reached the point where I dread staying in their home. It is not a matter of money for them or for my husband and me. I would gladly pay to "freshen" the room, if it could be done diplomatically.

Any suggestions?
DREADING IT

Abigail Van Buren
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR DREADING IT: Your suggestion to check out the guestroom before guests arrive is a good one. Your mother-in-law may think that your husband will feel more at home because she has left his boyhood room intact. However, I see nothing wrong with your providing her with a "hostess gift" of new bedding, a folding luggage rack or a new table lamp specifically marked for the guestroom. She should welcome it.

DEAR ABBY: My son died recently after a long illness, and many mourners stepped past my husband to offer me condolences. It hurt my husband deeply. He's the only father my children have known for the last 11 years, but even his family felt that was my loss, not ours.

Abby, my son and my husband were very close, especially near the end. I think my son felt he could confide his fears to his dad, but must be brave for Mom.

In a world where birth fathers are walking away from their responsibilities, stepdads, foster fathers and adoptive parents are stepping in to shoulder that responsibility. Even though their presence is often resented by the children, these dads continue to love and care for their new families.

Abby, please explain to your readers that even if they don't understand the dynamics of step-family relationships, the stepparent shares in the rearing of the child, including loving the child. Condolences or congratulations should be expressed to the stepparent as well as the birth parent.

Thank you for allowing me to share my feelings.
GRIEVING MOTHER

DEAR GRIEVING MOTHER: Perhaps the mourners didn't mean to be insensitive. I hope your letter will cause them (and others) to reconsider their assumptions about stepparents who do, indeed, deserve more sympathy than your husband received in his time of sorrow.

Aggies once again seeking national limelight

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — It won't take the Texas A&M Aggies long to know whether they once again belong among the nation's elite.

The Aggies fell from grace in 1996, then rebounded last year to go 9-4 and win the Big 12 South.

Several A&M players remember the 1996 slide began with a loss to Brigham Young in the early season Pigskin Classic. This year, the Aggies have another tough early battle against Florida State in the Kickoff Classic on Aug. 31.

"What happened at BYU two years ago seemed to have had a rough effect on our season," senior linebacker Dat Nguyen said. "But this year, I think playing Florida State will be good for us. We know what to expect now. We know we can't just grind through the motions."

After struggling to a 6-6 record in 1996, A&M bounced back by winning its first five games of 1997. The Aggies fell on consecutive weeks to Kansas State and Texas Tech, then won their last four regular-season games.

Things tailed off from there. Nebraska whipped A&M 54-15 in the Big 12 championship, then came a 29-23 loss to UCLA in the Cotton Bowl.

Nguyen said lessons the Aggies learned from the Nebraska loss will help them prepare for Florida State.

"We made a lot of mistakes and we know we can't make mistakes and expect to beat teams like Florida State," Nguyen said.

The Seminoles are one of seven teams with 1997 winning records that the Aggies will play this season and coach R.C. Slocum thinks the early test is good.

"Either we'll match up well or we won't," Slocum said.

A&M will need quick results from both offensive and defensive lines.

There are no returning starters in the defensive line and only guard Semisi Heimuli returns on the offensive side.

The Aggies appear set in the backfield.

Senior quarterback Brannnon Stewart is assisted by three career 1,000-yard running backs (Dante Hall, Surr Parker and D'Andre Hardeman) and superb blocking back Marc Broyles.

Slocum wants more of a passing attack and he expects to get it with receivers Aaron Oliver, Leroy Hodge, Chris Cole and tight end Derrick Spiller. The Aggies also plan to send Parker wide on occasion for another look.

"Our receivers have come a long way the last couple of years," Stewart said. "We've got some good guys and depth. We've got fast people and a couple who are big targets to get balls for short yardage."

Nguyen headlines the line-backers, the strongest position on the defense. The defensive backfield, a pleasant surprise a year ago, returns intact with cornerbacks Jason Webster and Shun Horn and safeties Rich Coady and Brandon Jennings.

A victory over Florida State would be a great kick-start to the Aggies' season. They haven't beaten a top 10 team away from Kyle Field since 1979.

"We are much better prepared at this time for a team like Florida State than at this time a year ago," Slocum said. "We were coming off a disappointing season and trying to regroup. This year we're coming off a championship season."

BOXING

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's state Athletic Control Board is expected to make a decision Friday on whether to award a boxing license to Mike Tyson.

The board scheduled a public meeting for Friday morning. Maureen Sczpanki, spokeswoman for the state Department of Law and Public Safety, said Tuesday a decision is expected during this meeting.

Tyson will attend the meeting, according to his lawyer, Anthony Fusco Jr.

"He will definitely be there," said Fusco. "We're hopeful. We think we made a good presentation."

Tyson, 32, hasn't fought since June 1997, when he bit the ears of WBA heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield during a bout in Las Vegas. Nevada regulators revoked his boxing license and said he could reapply after one year.

But he opted to apply for a license in New Jersey instead, hoping for a return to the ring in Atlantic City. Tyson's supporters say Tyson has paid his penalty for the biting incident, but some boxing insiders believe he should have returned to Nevada to repent.

During a hearing before regulators two weeks ago, Tyson lost his temper and cursed after being grilled by state lawyers about the Holyfield incident. But Fusco, his wife and other supporters told the board that Tyson was remorseful for biting Holyfield. Tyson said it will haunt him for the rest of his life.

Critics say Tyson's outburst during the hearing proves he has problems with self-control. Citing Tyson's 1992 rape conviction in Indiana, members of the New Jersey chapter of the National Organization for Women say allowing Tyson to box again in New Jersey would be "an insult to women."

Supporters say Tyson was deeply repentant and that he deserved a second chance.

The board met last Thursday to discuss the matter. Board members would not comment after that meeting.

Some New Jersey lawmakers, meanwhile, have called upon the board to reject Tyson's application.

Two weeks ago, Senate Democratic Leader Richard Codey said approving the license would make New Jersey "the International Embarrassment State."

On Tuesday, that sentiment was echoed by State Sen. William L. Gormley, a powerful lawmaker who represents Atlantic City and whose brother, Gerard, is on the state Athletic Control Board.

"They shouldn't have had the hearing in the first place. He should not be licensed," Gormley said. "The issue is his fitness to be licensed."

Pampa team has "3-Peat" in 1998 Streetball Challenge

PAMPA — For the third year in a row, the 3-Peat team of Pampa has gone unbeaten to win the 1998 Streetball Challenge held recently in Amarillo.

Pampa's team of Gabe Wilbon, Leo Ramirez and Shawn Young slipped by Hickory, 21-19, in this year's finals. They finished the tournament with a 5-0 record.

3-Peat opened with a 16-15 win over Enign & Tunnell Architects, 16-15, then beat Court Order, 16-10, in second-round action. They were awarded a third-round forfeit against Gruver, then drew a bye in the quarterfinals. 3-Peat rolled by OSIMA, 16-5, in the semifinals to set up the championship game against Hickory.

3-Peat came close to forfeiting in the finals when Young suffered a head injury and had to be taken out. However, Young returned after being treated on the sideline to help lift his team to a hard-fought victory.

"They were ahead the whole game against us. It got to where it was game point and we were down 20-16," Ramirez said.

However, 3-Peat was able to rally for the win as Wilbon hit the winning shot.

The Streetball Challenge has three players on a team and is played on outside courts. There are two divisions, competitive and recreational. The 3-Peat team was in the competitive division. Teams are placed in divisions according to the height of the players.

There is a 30-minute time limit in all games with the exception of the finals. There is no time limit in the finals and a team must win by at least two points.

3-Peat started participating in the Streetball Challenge in 1994, coming away with a 4-1 record. They were 3-2 in 1995 and won their first title in 1996 with an 8-0 record. 3-Peat was also 5-0 last year in capturing the championship.

Both Ramirez and Young will be PHS seniors. Wilbon will be a freshman student at Frank Phillips College in Borger.

Astros rally in 10th for win over Brewers

HOUSTON (AP) — Jeff Bagwell couldn't believe what he saw. Phil Garner saw enough.

Bagwell, the Houston first baseman, watched his team come from behind to win for the 35th time this season and for the 20th time on their final at-bat, beating Milwaukee 6-5 Tuesday night. It was the Astros' fifth consecutive win.

"We keep finding a way to do this," Bagwell said. "I didn't think we could do it again, but it keeps happening for us."

Bagwell and Moises Alou had three hits apiece, including a home run, but the game wasn't decided until Tony Eusebio lined a game-clinching single to left in the 10th. The victory left the Astros a season-high 8 1/2 games ahead of second-place Chicago in the NL Central.

Eusebio pinch hit for Brad Ausmus in the 10th with Richard Hidalgo on third. He lined a hit into the left-field corner, and after touching first to make the game official, Eusebio was mobbed by his teammates. Or perhaps nugged is a better word.

"Everybody was kind of excited," Eusebio said. "(Ricky) Gutierrez and (Craig) Biggio were hitting me on the head. It was almost like a fight. But I knew they were just excited."

The Astros tied it in the ninth when a single by Bill Spiers drove in Sean Berry.

Garner said he felt Berry, who had walked, never should have been on base. He felt Berry had swung at a third strike, but first base umpire Jerry Meals denied the appeal.

"You can call it what you want," Garner said. "And I'm not saying they might not have won anyway. But there's no way Sean Berry should have scored the tying run."

"I don't think (Meals) knows what a strike is. There were some others that they missed."

Garner, who was ejected by Meals, ran down the line and exchanged words with the umpire, but the call stood and Berry was sacrificed to second by pinch-hitter Tim Bogar before Spiers delivered his game-tying hit.

"That obviously changed everything, but we had chances early against (Houston starter Sean) Bergman and we didn't put him away," Garner said. "We had a chance to blow it open early and we didn't and they held us where we were and kept plugging away until they had a chance to tie it and then win it. That's what good teams do."

Bagwell and Alou tied the score at 4 by homering on consecutive pitches by Bronswell Patrick in the sixth. Alou has 32 homers, including four in his last five games.

Marquis Grissom hit an RBI double off Jay Powell to put Milwaukee ahead 5-4 in the seventh. But Bob Wickman walked Berry leading off the ninth, Bogar sacrificed, Craig Biggio was hit by a pitch and Spiers singled. The Astros loaded the bases with one out, but Bagwell struck out and Alou lined out.

Mike Magnante (4-5) pitched a scoreless 10th.

Rangers creep closer to Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — There are plenty of intriguing matchups when the Cleveland Indians play the Texas Rangers. Kenny Lofton trying to run on Ivan Rodriguez and Jaret Wright challenging Juan Gonzalez come to mind.

Then there is the Yankee Factor.

The Rangers beat the Indians 2-1 Tuesday night and crept a game closer to Cleveland in the AL. The way the standings are now, that would be the key to playing the New York Yankees in the best-of-5 division series instead of the best-of-7 ALCS.

If the wild-card team comes from the AL East, it would play either the AL Central or AL West winner — whichever has the better record. A five-game series certainly would give Cleveland, Texas or Anaheim a better shot at upsetting the Yankees than a seven-game series.

Hold on, says Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove, before we get ahead of ourselves.

"The last time I heard somebody say they wanted somebody to lose because they wanted to play somebody else, it was the Yankees, and they wanted to play us," Hargrove said, referring to last year's playoffs when Cleveland upset New York in the division series. "We just want to get there, and we'll play whoever's there waiting for us."

Esteban Loaiza, plagued by lack of run support since the Rangers acquired him from Pittsburgh, got his first victory for Texas. The Rangers, without Gonzalez for the second straight game due to a stiff neck, had scored three runs in Loaiza's two losses.

"I don't want to hear him say we don't get him any runs," Texas manager Johnny Oates joked. "We got him two tonight and got him a win."

Gonzalez, who leads the majors with 119 RBIs, did not start for the eighth time in 13 games. Mike Simms, his replacement in the lineup, hit his 12th homer.

"With the pitching and defense we have now, we can win these low scoring games," Oates said. "We couldn't do that earlier in the year."

Loaiza (1-2) must have been wondering. Acquired from Pittsburgh on July 17 for Todd Van Poppel and Warren Morris, Loaiza pitched well, but was 0-2 with a no decision for the Rangers.

The right-hander allowed one run and seven hits in 7 1/3 innings, walking one and striking out three. He was working on his second career shutout when Jeff Manto hit a one-out, solo homer in the eighth to cut it to 2-1.

"It feels good to get the first win here," Loaiza said. "Everything is great with this club."

Pinch-hitter Mark Whiten followed Manto's homer with an infield single, and Xavier Hernandez relieved. Kenny Lofton, in a 2-for-15 slump, flied out to right, and Omar Vizquel fouled out to end the threat.

John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 32nd save.

Cleveland's sleepwalk through the AL Central continued as the Indians dropped to 27-28 since June 9. Even so, they have picked up 2 1/2 games during that span as every other team is below .500. With Minnesota and the White Sox both losing Tuesday night, Cleveland maintained a 13-game lead.

The Indians' offense continued to struggle without All-Star first baseman Jim Thome, out with a broken hand.

"I think there was something like 275 RBIs missing from both lineups," Oates said.

David Justice and Lofton, both in danger of dipping below .270, are still badly out of sync. Justice stranded Vizquel at second in the first with a weak grounder to the mound and was 0-for-4. Lofton, 1-for-4 and batting .256 in the second half, grounded into an inning-ending double play in the third.

Lett sprains knee in scrimmage; Smith shines for Cowboys

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys team doctors were to examine Leon Lett's left knee today after the star defensive tackle suffered a sprain during a scrimmage against the New Orleans Saints.

Lett was helped off the field during the Saints' first possession. Team officials called it a sprain but said further tests today back in Wichita Falls should reveal the severity of the injury.

Losing Lett would further cripple a defensive line that already is struggling to put pressure on opposing quarterbacks.

There was some good news during Tuesday night's scrimmage before 28,317 fans at Independence Stadium — Emmitt Smith looked something like his former formidable self.

Smith carried six times for 83 yards, including a 54-yard burst, as the Cowboys' first-team offense showed improvement.

Smith's big run came on the Cowboys' first sequence, giving Dallas a first down at the Saints' 15. He broke free through the middle and appeared on his way to a touchdown until he was caught from behind by cornerback Tyrone Drakeford.

Despite the run, the Cowboys didn't get into the end zone after Aikman failed to connect with Billy Davis on third down. Davis appeared to cut the wrong way on his route. Cunningham ended up hitting a 29-yard field goal.

Smith continued to shine on the Cowboys' next possession with consecutive runs of 6, 10 and 11 yards. An Aikman 13-yard screen pass to Irvin set Dallas up for a 1-yard touchdown dive by rookie Tarik Smith.

The performance by Smith follows a dismal exhibition against Oakland on Saturday. He rushed for 3 yards on four carries against a defense that was the NFL's worst in rushing and total defense last year.

Coach Chan Gailey said Smith's performance should dispel what everybody had been thinking about him.

"For his sake, I'm glad it happened," Gailey said. "But I knew it was going to happen. I didn't know when, but I knew it was going to happen. For his sake, I'm glad it happened now."

The Saints, whose offense was the NFL's worst last year, also moved the ball well on their first drive with a big assist from Dallas cornerback Kevin Smith, whose pass interference on the first play set New Orleans up at the Cowboys' 24.

Hobert hit tight end Josh Wilcox with a 12-yard touchdown pass three plays later.

Troy Davis added a 5-yard touchdown late in the scrimmage for New Orleans.

Saints coach Mike Ditka said he was happy with the scrimmage.

"It was ragged in a lot of areas, but there were some good things on both sides," Ditka said. "I think that's all that Chan and I were trying to see. ... To me, nobody won the thing. It was about an even game, and I think for right now that's good for us if we can play with the Cowboys."

For Dallas, the scrimmage also marked a return to action for Everett McIver, the Cowboys' starting right guard who missed two weeks of work after suffering a deep neck cut in a mysterious July 29 incident at a training camp dormitory.

McIver went through drills with the team and started with the first team in a pair of 10-play offensive sequences.

"I kept a big eye on our offensive line tonight," said owner Jerry Jones. "I really liked what Everett McIver, Flozell Adams, Clay Shiver — I liked what they did. I know they'll have some concerns when they look at the film. But we moved the ball, like what Emmitt Smith did."

Oilers remain optimistic

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Oilers still can't sell out a stadium, even when it's the smallest in the NFL. But the players say winning will fill the stands.

The Oilers, who debut Saturday in their third stadium in three years, remained about 10,000 tickets short Tuesday of selling out the 41,000-seat Vanderbilt Stadium for their home exhibition opener against the Washington Redskins.

"Just be patient," said receiver Chris Sanders. "It's all going to work out. We're going to get a lot of people out there, especially when we start winning."

Coach Jeff Fisher said his players haven't talked about the lack of a sellout yet and are concentrating on trying to reach the playoffs.

"The tickets will take care of themselves. They're either going to come, or they're not. If we do our part of it, we believe they'll come and see us," he said.

Poor crowds have plagued the Oilers, who haven't had a winning record since 1993. Consecutive 8-8 seasons resulted in thousands of empty seats first in Houston, then in Memphis last year. The Oilers managed to average just 28,028 in Memphis' Liberty Bowl, worst in the NFL.

That prompted the Oilers to settle into their new hometown a year before their new 67,000-seat stadium is finished and rent Vanderbilt Stadium.

The Oilers have done everything they can to win new friends. They spent millions in the offseason on free agents like Yancey Thigpen, Jackie Harris and top draft pick Kevin Dyson.

Owner Bud Adams agreed last month to change the nickname to something more Tennesseean for this season. The Oilers even broke a six-game preseason losing streak last week.

Yet only the Pittsburgh game Nov. 15 is close to selling out with more than 39,000 tickets sold as of Tuesday.

People have complained they are tapped out from buying personal seat licenses at the new stadium, which give them the permanent right to buy season tickets there. Others cite the Oilers' high ticket prices, among the highest in the NFL at $48 and $36.

Woods brings out the best in other golfers

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) — Give Tiger Woods some credit, even though he's been shut out in his last six majors.

Mark O'Meara does, and he has a green jacket and a British Open trophy to show for it. So does Lee Janzen, who won his second U.S. Open title in June at the Olympic Club.

Woods has not merely re-energized the game of golf. He's done the same thing for the games of some fellow pros who might have otherwise been content to win a tournament here and there and live comfortably away from the fringes of greatness.

"He just wants to be the greatest player who ever lived," Janzen said Tuesday. "And when you see somebody with those kind of aspirations you think, well, I certainly can expect more of myself."

On the eve of the PGA Championship, which starts Thursday at tree-laden Sahalee Country Club, the talk isn't just of Woods and his chances of winning the final major of the year. It's also about the influence his emergence on the golf scene has had on his competitors.

Woods hasn't won a major since running away with the 1997 Masters. He hasn't dominated week-to-week like some predicted. In fact, he's won only one PGA tournament all year.

But look no further than O'Meara and Janzen, the winners of this year's majors, to see that he has still had a huge impact on the 1998 golf season.

"I think he's challenged the rest of us to maybe start thinking a little higher and setting higher goals," Janzen said.

Janzen set his goals high enough to win his second U.S. Open in nine years as a pro. O'Meara, who had never won a major in 18 years, suddenly won twice at the age of 41.

Both are neighbors of Woods at the Islesworth Country Club in the Orlando, Fla. Both play practice rounds with him regularly.

And both seem reinvigorated by the presence of the 22-year-old budding superstar.

"New blood has always tended to do that and I think it always will," Woods said. "I think it's great for the game because these guys obviously have a lot of game and they're winning."

Woods likes to compare his impact on the tour to that of Michael Jordan in the NBA.

"When Jordan came into the league right away and was just flying everywhere and doing all his things, guys started to raise their games up," Woods said. "I think that happens in any sport."

While others have learned from Woods, he has also been doing some learning himself. Though he has won only once this year, Woods says his game has never been better, and neither has his attitude, both on and off the course.

He showed that in last month's British Open, when he opened with a 65 and then struggled in the rain and wind before coming back with a final round 66 that left him a stroke out of a playoff with O'Meara and Brian Watts.

Woods chipped in for birdie on his 71st hole, then sank a 30-footer on the final hole, offering the first tantalizing glimpse since his Masters win that he could win a second major.

"I feel very pleased with the progress I've made in the last 14 months, not only as a player but as a person," Woods said. "The biggest thing I've learned is just learning how to play the game out here at this level."

Woods' game might not be exactly suited for the 6,906-yard, par-70 Sahalee course that winds itself through towering trees in this Seattle suburb.

It's the kind of course where drives of between 240 and 280 yards offer the prime landing areas. It's not the kind of course where Woods can pull out his driver and boom shots to within short iron distance on par-5 holes.

Sahalee has only two par-5s anyway, and Woods plans to keep the driver in the bag through all 72 holes.

"I think that if I'm going to step on one, it's definitely going to be the 3-wood," Woods said. "The driver really doesn't fit here for me. Some of the points where I'm going to land my ball is probably the narrowest point of fairway with my driver."

While Woods may have to rely more in finesse than distance, steady players like Janzen and O'Meara or straight hitters like England's Lee Westwood figure to have an advantage in PGA.

O'Meara played 56 majors without winning one, but is now in the improbable position of trying to become the first pro since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win three majors in one year.

Woods himself believes it can be done.

"There's absolutely no reason why he can't win here," Woods said of his close friend.

One thing that does figure to change from the last two major championships is the scoring. While even par won the U.S. Open and put O'Meara and Watts into a playoff for the British Open, it figures to be far back in the field here.

The only variable might be the weather, which has been hot for Seattle standards and could firm up the greens.

"If the greens are soft, I think the winning score will be around eight or nine under," Tom Watson said.
