Annual Chautauqua fun begins tomorrow

Two stages will be featured once again at Chautauqua, the Pampa Fine Arts festival in Central Park, Labor Day, Sept. 7.

The opening ceremony with PHS band, color guard and cheerleaders will begin at 9 a.m. at the bridge stage with Rev. Darrell Evans giving the invocation. Emcee Jack Gindorf will lead the Pledge of Allegiance, and the Girl Scouts will present the colors.

The main stage will open at 9:40 a.m. with emcee Wanetta Hill, who has helped lead the stage entertainment all 17 years of Chautauqua, sponsored by Pampa Fine Arts in Pampa. Tae Kwon Do martial arts will lead off at 9:45 a.m. followed by the New Arts Six, an ensemble of experienced musicians from Dallas. The group will present well-known and original spirituals. Partially funded by the Texas Commission on the Arts, the Six will tour area schools the day after their Labor Day presentations at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. at Chautauqua.

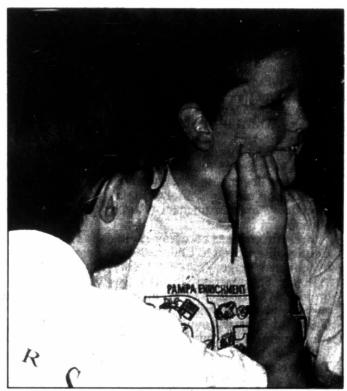

Returning this year is the PHS Folklorico dance group at the bridge stage at 10:40 a.m. Other returnees include the PHS Show Choir, "Elvis" by Binion, Gymnastics of Pampa, vocalist Joe Martinez and cow-girl poet Sarah

Several church groups participating from the two stages include the Calvary Baptist Praise Band of six adults playing contemporary Christian Rock on Keyboards, guitars and drums at 11:30 a.m., main stage. The church's Shekinah Glory ensemble of eight men and women will sing contemporary gospel at 1:35 p.m. Trinity Fellowship will have two groups: the Mimes, youth who call themselves "human videos," at 9:45 a.m., bridge stage, and the Trinity ensemble of five who will sing patriotic songs at 12:55 at the main stage.

Rev. Lynn Hancock will sing solos followed by duets with his daughter Lynnsee and wife Janet at 2:25 p.m., main stage. A father-son team from Amarillo, Jim and Cody Anderson, will present cowboy music and poetry at 1:40 p.m., bridge stage.

Weekend tour documents panhandle history

By BOB IZZARD For The News

If you're interested in Texas Panhandle history, then an upcoming three-day tour (Sept. 10-12) of Red River War battlefields may be the ticket.

The tour, starts Thursday night in the Coronado Inn. On Friday, the tour will cover Baldwins Battle, a newly discovered cantonment site, Mackenzie's battle, where he lost his horses in 1872 and the slaughter of buffalo hunters on Chicken Creek.

William Redwood Price — and its proximity to Buffalo Wallow.

Sunday will be devoted to Fort Elliott, Mobeetie and the opening of the Panhandle that became Hollywood's wild west. Here's the background:

A battlefield, never marked and feared lost, from the Red River War has apparently been located near Old Mobeetie. On the 12th of September 1874, two major engagements were underway. The battle for Captain Saturday will be spent at a Wyllys Lyman's wagon train newly-found battlefield location began at three o'clock the after- were engaged in battle that close — the Lost Battlefield of Major noon of Sept. 9, 24 miles southwest of Antelope Hills on the high ground above the Washita River. The number of Kiowas and Comanches in the attack have been estimated from 400 to o'clock the morning of Sept. 14. A scout squad, comprised of Billy Dixon, Amos Chapman and four soldiers, had been dispatched to locate Lyman and the wagons. They were attacked at sun-up Sept. 12, eight miles southwest of Lyman's battle. Neither unit was aware that they together.

There were 125 Indians that attacked the six in the scout squad. This is known as the battle of Buffalo Wallow and has always gone down in history as 600. It would end at three the only battle in the history of the United States where every man was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. It is also known in military circles as drawing the 125 Indians away from Lyman's fight which weakened his enemy. There was a third major battle that day.

William Redwood Price came upon the Buffalo Wallow group the following morning, Sept. 13. It was raining, cold, all were wounded, one had died, another was in critical condition. They were out of ammunition and food. Price refused them ammunition, medical attention and food. He did send a company south to try to alert Gen. Nelson Miles to their plight. He has always been cast as the officer who left them at the mercy of the Indians and without help for at least another day. Possibly, as the result of this, the battle he fought See HISTORY, page 2

History

on Sept. 12 has never been marked nor indeed located.

In April, this year, a group of people from the Old Mobeetie Jail Organization took the verbal description of a battle fought by Price and attempted to match it to local terrain where it was felt the battle had been fought. They Louise Hogan, Bobbye Hill, Bernice Hefley, Melba Corcoran, Norman Dysart, and Winnie and David Gilmer walked Price's battlefield. They had studied the report that Price had turned in following the campaign.

In it he states: "On the 11th of March we camped on the plains, near one of the branches of the Sweetwater." (This could be any where along the stream.) "On

Play

Intelligent, sensitive and full of faith, this 16-yearold "spelling genius" serves as a bridge between the two women that mean most to her.

Director Miranda Bailey is searching for three women to fill the shoes of these roles she refers to as, "juicy roles with a lot of potential."

Acting experience, though a plus, is not necessary. There are no age requirements to be in this show.

'You don't have to be a seasoned actor. All that I need," according to Bailey, "are three individuals with energy, dedication, and flexibility ... three people who are willing to rehearse three to four nights a week for an eight-week period, and take part in a show which I truly believe will be a memorable, and valuable learning experience for everyone involved."

Bailey is posting audition notices this week and said she "would like to encourage interested retirees or seniors to consider the role of Dorthea." She is also looking to interested school-aged students to come and audition for the role of Echo.

"I really need three strong, versatile actresses who can play women that span in age, and that's why I'm looking for individuals in three, distinct age groups," said Bailey.

I'm also looking for someone who is interested in acting and/or theatre who would like to be my assistant-director. This person will be someone who is organized, responsible, eager to learn, and can have fun in an atmosphere that takes acting seriously. Again, I am encouraging school-aged drama students to inquire about this opportunity during my audition times,"she said.

Auditions will require actors to do some cold readings of the script, answer a few silly questions, (i.e. Who's your favorite actor? What's you favorite play and/or movie?) and to fill out an audition form listing scheduling and possible rehearsal conflicts.

Bailey, who studied acting and received a B.A. in theatre, has also written a play that was produced while at the University of New Mexico. She said she is anxious to answer any questions potential auditioners have.

"I'm extremely excited about doing this show! I'm not only interested in the logistics, like blocking and making sure that lines are memorized, but want to work with people who want to learn more about the acting craft and are willing to try new approaches, while having fun doing it.

Auditions will be Wednesday, Sept. 9 and Thursday, Sept. 10 at 7 p.m. each night at ACT I's Pampa Mall location on North Hobart, next to Homeland. The entrance is behind the building, on the west side. Other arrangements can be made if there are scheduling conflicts. Call 669-6843 for more information.

Burton, who was not present for the hearing, abducted Ms. Adleman off a trail alongside a secluded bayou in northwest Harris County.

Witnesses placed Burton on the bayou trail minutes before they heard a scream. The mother of three had been running along the trail alone so she could recite lines from a play she had written about women in the Bible.

Stock market is scary

Like millions of other Americans I have been watching the stock market with some trepidation. The ups and downs lately are pretty frightening ... especially because during the past seven years or so the bull has been run-

I am trying to keep the attitude that there are normal fluctuations in the market and "corrections" are all part of the game.

But my mother worries more. Of course, I guess I would also if I had grown up during the Depression. She rarely talks about it but I do know about how her family lost the farm in Arkansas when she was a child and how she watched — and cried as "they" took away her beloved horse, Nellie and Nellie's colt, Alice.

Then there's the Russian thing. And when you add it to the Asian crisis, problems in North Korea, floods in China, etc., it's pretty frightening.

I'm glad Clinton went on with the summit to Moscow last week but it was sad to watch in a way. Both he and Yeltsin are pretty emasculated right now. I know there are those who think we shouldn't help Russia but I believe we should. When I think about it I don't want a bunch of hungry Russians over there with

And speaking of hungry Russians — good transition, huh? Anyway, when I was in Little Rock for a party a couple of weeks back, I met a man who is a government patent attorney in

It seems a lot. It was explained to me that when we enter into trade agreements with other governments most of the negotiations involve honoring each other's patents and guarding against infringement. I'm sure there is a lot more but this explanation was enough to suit me for the moment. The gentleman went on to explain how he is part of the negotiating team that travels abroad to hammer out such agreements.

When you deal with the Russians you never get the business done in one meeting," he said.

I thought this sounded reasonable. After all, such dealings must be highly complex.

"The Russians like to take trips," he continued. "So, even if we could we never get through with just one meeting. Last time we had to hold extra meetings they wanted to meet in London and Vienna.

Then it was explained how the Russian negotiators generally don't pay for their digs in such cities ... just let the hotels know that if building in Moscow is in future plans ... well, you get the idea.

About that time, the man's friend who had been listening to us grinned broadly and said with emphasis, "...And never get in the way of Russian and his buffet table.

'Or the bar either," the attorney added. "Yes, I guess so," I said. "Russians like their

"Oh, it doesn't really matter," the attorney smiled and said. "Scotch will do."

Pampans are being asked to dig deep in pockets

Pampans are being asked to dig deeply into their pockets now that two major fund-raising projects are under way in the city and

One is the needed $800,000 expansion of Clarendon College-Pampa Center and the other is the drive to raise $100,000 to build a Super Playground for the city's children.

Both are coming along toward their goal thanks to a core group of hard-working citizens who see the value in both projects. This group has done an excellent job or recruiting other volunteers to make the two dreams a

So confident are the Super Playground volunteers that Oct. 21-25 has been set as the build dates for the playground that will go up on a site just north of the existing Clarendon College-Pampa Center at 900 N. Frost.

On those five dates it's said it will take about 1,000 volunteers to put together the 20,000 square-foot park. And when it happens, that will be something to see!

Meanwhile, college backers are continuing to solicit funds, and like their playground counterparts, they, too, have come up with some innovative ways to garner public interest in bettering the college.

We tip our hats to all those volunteers who we're confident will make both of these projects a reality. It's people like you who make our city a better place in which to live.

Thanks.

I agree with C.S. Lewis that when you find you've taken the wrong road, going ahead isn't progress. Progress is going back until you find the right road that takes you where you want to go.

We took still yet another wrong turn when we left the belief in mysteries for the belief in some thing even more preposterous: reason. We got further lost when we abandoned a federal republic of sovereign states and chose instead the European model of the centralized state.

Mother Nature doesn't play fair It doesn't take much to convince me that Dr.

Thomas Sowell, senior fellow at the Hoover Institution, must write with both hands. His most recent book, the last of a trilogy, 'Conquests and Cultures," is a masterpiece of research and thought. In years of researching socioeconomic differences between peoples, he has laid lie to the conventional wisdom, namely that the misfortune of some groups is solely a result of mistreatment and exploitation by another in the forms of racism, colonialism or multinationalism.

Sowell says neither geography nor demography is egalitarian. Let's look at just geography. Africa is more than twice the size of Europe, but it has a shorter coastline. The European coastline constantly twists and turns, creating innumerable natural harbors, while the African coastline is smooth, with few harbors. Sowell asks how surprising it should be that international trade has played a smaller role in the economic history of Africa than of Europe, especially Western Europe. Less trade produces more isolation. No great civilization developed in isolation.

When the British crossed the Atlantic, they were able to do so because they used rudders invented in China, they navigated with trigohometry invented in Egypt, their calculations were done with numbers invented in India, and their general knowledge was preserved in letters invented by the Romans. The resulting clash between them and the native opulation wasn't a clash between a British culture and an Indian culture. It was a clash between cultural developments from vast regions of the world, in the case of the British vs. a more restricted cultural development. The cultural opportunities were unequal, and the outcomes were unequal.

Historically, large cities, as economic centers, emerged along navigable rivers and harbors. In the United States, it's no accident that cities like Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco are our old cities, and those like Denver, Phoenix and Kansas City are relatively new and didn't become major cities until railroads and trucks were invented. Historically, water has been the cheapest way to ship goods. During the 1700s, it was cheaper to ship a ton of goods from London to Philadelphia than from Philadelphia to Lancaster, Pa., a mere 60 miles away.

dreds of miles, connecting wide areas both culturally and economically. That's not true in Africa. The rivers of tropical Africa plunge a 1,000 feet or more on their way to the sea, with waterfalls and cascades making them navigable for only tiny distances. In Western Europe and the United States, regular rainfall and melting snows keep rivers flowing year round, but Africa has neither, so rivers rise and fall dramatically, further limiting their usefulness Vast cost differences between water transport and land transport affects economic activity. Gold and diamonds repay costly land transport over thousands of miles of rough termin, but grain, coal and steel cannot. The absence of cheap transportation not only limits economic growth but cultural enrichment as well. Geographical disparities may be suggestive of the many ways that physical settings have restricted the cultural universe available to different peoples. One revealing indication of isolation and the resulting cultural fragmentation is that African peoples are 10 percent of the world's population but have one-third of the world's languages.

Even if people were genetically equal and we all behaved like saints to one another, there'd be gross disparities in achievements and wealth among peoples. But that's not what the psychobabblers would have us believe. They might argument that the reason the Himalayans did-In Western Europe and the United States, n't emerge as seafarers and Eskimos as great

The final clue was the most difficult. The quote - "I moved eastward on the Rio Negro, (Dry Fork of the Washita) the 13th, and in eight miles struck the wagon road. While halting here and endeavoring to find some trace of one of my Lieutenants, a man was discovered off to our right on foot, endeavoring to communicate with us. It proved to be a scout from General Miles command named Dixon."

This turned out to be the main clue. It's known from Dixon's description of the Buffalo Wallow Battle that he had traveled half a mile from Buffalo Wallow (northward) when he, too, found the wagon road. "Hurrying along as rapidly as possible and keeping a constant lookout for Indians, I checked myself at the sudden sight of an outfit that seemed to cover about an acre of ground." (There was still rain, I assume low clouds and some restricted visibility.) "They were about two miles to the northwest. They moved, they were troops, I never felt happier in my

We knew that they would have to be just a couple of miles northwest of Buffalo Wallow. The big question was identifying the stream that Price had followed as the Rio Negro or the dry Fork of the Washita. Both are listed on some old maps, but not in this immediate vicinity. However, Gageby creek does give us

The group from Old Mobeetie had pooled their information and the personal information supplied by David Gilmer. There was a ridge. It was long and had a distinct crest. There were outcrops of rock that would have been great defensive positions where a horse charge wouldn't be effective.

Gilmer gave the group the information that in riding and hiking over this ridge for his entire life he had found over one-hundred empty brass cartridges along this ridge. He had also marked each spot where he found the brass.

From a point at the end of the ridge, right over Gageby Creek, if you draw a line about eight miles northeast you find yourself just above the location of the battle of Buffalo Wallow. According to the only descriptions available, the Old Mobeetie group had found the Lost Battlefield of Major William Redwood Historically it is important. Price was attacked by a force of from 150 to 175 Indians. Buffalo Wallow started at sun-up, the group that attacked Price hit him, 14 miles away, at noon. This means that close to 300 of the Indians who had been attacking Lyman and his wagons had left.

By the general tone of their direction of travel it would seem that both groups were headed for the Palo Duro Canyon. Also, again an indication, most of the Indians were Kiowas. This means that Kiowa Chief Satanta, who is thought to have been in charge of the Lyman battle, had sent a great percent of his forces on to join Isatai and Quanah Parker in their camp in the Palo

It would indicate that during the Lyman battle his scouts had found Dixon and his scouts, Price and his column both headed for the Lyman battlefield from the south. There was also a column from Fort Supply headed to the Lyman battlefield from the north. Knowing this, Satanta may well have started breaking off the battle on the 12th of September. One other interesting note comes from the two battles in the Palo Duro Canyon. The first by General Nelson Miles ended the 30th of August when the three tribes evacuated their camp in Tule Canyon. They left trails in every direction and Miles did not know where they had gone. Ronald Slidell Mackenzie's troops found them 30 miles north of Tule Canyon where Cita Creek and the Prairie Dog Town Fork of the Red River join. It is now known that the Comanche tribes were camped on Cita Creek.

The Cheyenne tribes were camped next to them. The Kiowas were camped at the north end in a ravine called Rush Canyon. Apparently, Satanta and the Kiowas were given the job of scouting and following General Miles. They were in the perfect place and did intercept the wagons on their way back to General Miles. When General Mackenzie assaulted their camp on Sept. 28 he found the Kiowas on the north end. They obviously had arrived there last. They were busy attacking Lyman and only got to the Palo Duro a few days before Mackenzie arrived.

It's all conjecture, but the women from the Old Mobeetie jail have added a great piece of information to history by locating the lost battle site of William Redwood Price.

Imogene McMinn hands the reins over to Jane Goode at Pampa's Sheltered Workshop. In informal ceremonies, Goode took over from McMinn as president of the Gray County Association for Retarded Citizens. Gloria Swires assumed the office of vice president. Sharon Strickland took over the duties of secretary. Sherry Carlson remains as treasurer. Although the association normally meets the first Monday of each month at the Sheltered Workshop, they met a week early into to lay plans for their annual fund raiser, a trail ride Sept. 19, at the Reynolds Ranch north of Pampa.

'OS ANGELES (AP) rk Grudzielanek and Charles Johnson each homered and drove in three runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 8-5 Friday night for their first four-game winning streak this season.

Barry Bonds broke the NL record for reaching base in 15 consecutive plate appearances. He walked his first time up, singled in his next two at-bats, and doubled in the seventh. He singled in the ninth to break the record set by the Dodgers' Pedro Guerrero in July 1985.

The three-time MVP is one plate appearance shy of tying the major league record set by Ted Williams in 1957.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — All in all, a quiet day for Mark McGwire.

McGwire skipped a pregame news conference set up for him, then was silent at the plate Friday night in the St. Louis Cardinals' 3-2 loss to the Cincinnati Reds.

But while McGwire went 0-for-3 with a walk and stayed at 59 home runs, the chase for Roger Maris' record of 61 got even more Sammy Sosa hit No. 57 as the Chicago Cubs won at Pittsburgh 5-2. And just think — Sosa and the Cubs come to town Monday for a two-game series.

As the Texas high school football season kicked off on a sweltering September night, the Duncanville Panthers felt the heat in more ways than one.

Duncanville, the No. 4 team in the Associated Press Class 5A poll this week, needed Terrance Dean's 5-yard touchdown run with 4:33 ered. remaining Friday to cap a 25-21

No. 5 Plano East. Quarterback Kyle Yudizky sparked Duncanville, then trailing 21-12, with a 16-yard touchdown on a scramble with 2:20 left in the third quarter. Yudizky is filling in for starter Jeremy Hurd, who has a fractured collarbone.

come-from-behind victory over

After Dean's score, Plano East made one last threat. Quarterback Clint Guinn drove Plano East to the Duncanville 25 with 1:35 left, when he floated a pass to Ahmaad Spears in the end zone. But Duncanville's Mark Walker knocked the ball away to secure the victory.

In other games involving top 5A teams Friday, No. 2 Tyler John Tyler thumped Fort Worth Wyatt 51-12, No. 6 Longview beat DeSoto 16-10 and No. 10 Converse Judson hammered Laredo Nixon 70-0. The only loser was No. 7 Flower Mound Marcus, taken down by North Mesquite 21-7.

Marcus, the defending 5A Division II state champ, was hampered by quarterback problems. Matt Kipp, making his first varsity start, threw four interceptions, and the Marauders never recov-

North Mesquite's Westbrook carried 25 times for 105 yards, including a 31-yard touchdown that made it 19-0 at halftime.

In Class 4A, No. 1 La Marque beat Galveston Ball 21-16 in its first game in nearly a decade without Alan Weddell. The new Texas A&M linebackers coach went 103-13 as head coach of the Cougars, including winning the last three

His successor, Larry Walker, says La Marque contines to focus on the swarming style of defense that Weddell fostered.

"Defense wins games and defense wins championships," Walker said. "That's what La Marque's been known for, and that's what we have to do."

On Friday night, the Cougars' "Black Swarm" defense held Ball to 101 total yards, including minus-15 yards rushing in the second half. David Smith scored the go-ahead touchdown for La Marque with a 95-yard kickoff return in the third quarter.

"I was just determined not to go down on that kick return," Smith

season, Juan Gonzalez seemed to have Hack Wilson's major tant." league-record 190 RBIs in his sights.

Gonzalez had 101 RBIs at the All-Star break, and the talk around baseball was that Gonzalez had as good a chance to catch Wilson as Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa'had of setting a home run record.

Gonzalez probably won't catch Wilson this season, but there are other standards within reach for the Texas Rangers slugger.

Gonzalez drove in two runs Friday night to better his club record single-season RBI mark, and Will Clark had four RBIs as the Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 9-3

"Now he's approaching 150 RBIs," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "It used to be that 100 RBIs was a milestone, but all those numbers are falling by the wayside. He's amazing, the number of runs he can drive in."

Gonzalez improved his major league-leading RBI total to 146, breaking his team record of 144 by driving in 10 runs in his last four games by going 9-for-18.

"We need to keep scoring lots of runs every night," said Gonzalez, who extended his hitting streak to 15 games, tops on the team this season. "Our 1/2 games of Boston in the AL bullpen is tired and they need all wild-card chase.

Gonzalez said. "This is why you work so hard in the winter and in spring training, to have a big

Now Gonzalez has 150 RBIs within reach. If he hits that standard, he will become the first AL player to drive in at least 150 runs since Boston's Ted Williams and Vern Stephens each drove in 159 in 1949.

Clark, who's been hampered by the flu, had a two-run single in the third and a two-run double in the sixth to extend his hitting streak to 13 games with a 3for-5 night.

"I was afforded the luxury of having a few guys on base in front of me," Clark said. "I got a few hits, which hopefully helped the team win the game. You can't drive in 100 runs by

Pampa was incorporated in 1912

On April 14, 1902, when Roberts County Commissioners approved the plat for the original town of Pampa, only a few people were living at the railroad station. An early newspaper reported that Pampa boasted a population of not more than 15 when Dr. V. E. von Brunow came in 1903. For a geography project in the fall of 1905, Freddie Hobart counted 52 residents.

Pampa was primarily a shipping point for cattle until about 1906 when ranchers began moving into Pampa so that their children could attend school. During the school year 1905-06, enrollment increased from six to 43.

At a time when the speed limit for autos was 12 miles -per hour and hitching racks were erected at public expense, the town of Pampa was incorporated on Feb. 17, 1912.

Application for incorporation of the town of Pampa was addressed to the Hon. R. E. Williams, county judge of Gray County on Jan. 25, 1912 by more than 20 citizens. The sheriff (J. S. Denson) was given notice Jan. 30, 1912 to post notices of election, which he did the following day. His return shows that he posted copies of the notices at the livery stable (near 100 S. Gillespie), the post office (115 North Cuyler) and the schoolhouse cents a barrel. (309 North Cuyler).

Minutes of Pampa as an incorporated town reveal how infant institutions grew here, with mounting responsibilities and taxes. The first city election was held March 5, 1912. J.N. 'Devil Sweeper' make situation worse not better

To the editor,

Our city street department is in the process of doing some much needed repairs on sections of streets and alley entries. The city crews doing the work are doing a fine job. We do have one area that seems to be causing some probmake a decision at some point in management. The section in question is 23rd street between Perryton Parkway and Duncan Streets.

Prior to the start of school, the crews came in and completely resurfaced this section, leveling, spreading tar, and gravel. Silhouettes are sometimes minimal, "a l'americaine," or even with a slightly Italian look. They are quite long and lean, but with a flirty flare here and there. Rather fuller skirts are at Chanel's haute couture, with cutaway jackets for a new look.

There's a generally more A-line look to the haute couture; its cuts are often simple but sophisticated, with endless lacy or light-touch glamour for evening, cut-out bare or strapped backs, a few bows and bustles.

Shoulders are shaped, but not given power emphasis any more. Pants are now a staple, whether of these clothes that swathe the sillean or somewhat fuller.

There will be a beef leader training this fall for anyone interested. To become a volunteer you must attend the trainings and return 50 hours back to your local 4-H program. It is a great opportunity to learn. The first training will be Saturday, Sept. 12 at the Extension Center in Amarillo. The second training will be Saturday, Sept. 26 and the third training will be March 13. Cost is $30 which pays for meals, refreshments and training guides.

Anyone interested in attending the training should call the Extension office for more details.

Bake Show

Six Gray County 4-H members participated in the 1998 Gray County 4-H Bake Show. 4-H members prepared and exhibited yeast

Taking top honors for best yeast rolls was Emily Elliott of Sew Fine 4-H Club of Pampa. Elliott's entry was dinner rolls. Cory Jackson of Lefors 5-H 4-H Club earned second place honors and Lori Stephens of Sew Fine 4-H Club won third.

Other 4-Hers with outstanding entries were: Drake Jackson of Lefors 5-H 4-H Club, Emily Nusser of Prime Time 4-H Club and Kaylee Shank of Sew Fine 4-H Club.

Cory Jackson as alternate will represent Gray County at District 4-H Bake Show on Sept. 19 at the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo.

Micro-surgery is helping many overcome their hand injuries

Injuries or diseases affecting the hands disrupt the person's ability to do jobs at work and cause problems with everyday tasks.

Dr. Edward E. Quiros is a board certified surgeon who specializes in the delicate task of repairing the hands. Dr. Quiros can often correct or repair the hand without surgery. However, if surgery is required, it can usually be done on an outpatient basis.

Hand micro-surgery can correct or repair bone fractures, tumors, deformities, carpel tunnel syndrome, arthritis-enlarged joints or injuries.

Dr. Quiros has spent more than 20 years in the Texas panhandle treating patients with hand injuries and perfecting his skills as a surgeon, For more information, about Dr. Quiros and hand micro-surgery techniques, please call 273-7596.

Oil companies spending millions of dollars in effort to overcome Year 2000 glitch

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Big Oil will sink more than $1 billion to try keeping the Year 2000 computer glitch from jeopardizing the world's energy supply — and companies' bottom lines.

Embedded computer chips that will read the year 2000 as the year 1900 could hamper or even shut pipelines, offshore rigs and refineries if not corrected by Dec. 31, 1999.

"As you might imagine all phases of the oil and gas industry depend on information processing in one phase or another," said Harry Woodstrom, vice president of consulting services with SIG Inc., a Houston firm assisting several energy companies with their 2000-related computer problems.

They range from everyday accounting systems to process control systems to embedded systems for oil discovery, drilling, platthe point of sale at the pump," Woodstrom said.

Called Y2K in computer lingo, the problem is simple: Older equipment was designed to read years as two digits with a prefix of 19 assumed. The problem arises in 2000, which unrepaired systems will read as 1900.

For instance, a pipeline valve with a Y2K-afflicted chip might shut, thinking it had gone without routine maintenance for 100 years. Entire offshore drilling rigs could grind to a halt if their operating systems aren't cleansed of the bug.

'You're talking about huge numbers of operations and transactions. Oil is not as homogeneous as other industries," said Fadel Gheit, an oil-industry analyst with Fahnestock & Co. in New York. "In the oil business, there are different operations that deal with different groups and sectors of the economy.'

Unaddressed problems could "paralyze" the entire industry, said Gheit, who predicts that companies will spend as much scrambling to repair problems occurring after Jan. 1, 2000, as they are now trying to prevent them.

handles, it insists the glitch poses more of a danger to profit margins than to workers and citizens.

"These systems are designed to fail safe," said Ron Quiggins, forms, pumping, transportation, processing, refining, and even director of Shell Oil Co.'s Renew 2000 effort. Most petroleum equipment susceptible to a computer glitch is designed to shut without spilling material or endangering people, he said.

Shell is spending about $150 million to solve the 2000 puzzle, he said. Exxon Corp., the world's second-largest oil producer, is spending between $250 million to $300 million to make its systems compliant, according to a recent Securities Exchange Commission filing.

Shell is spending about $150 million to solve the 2000 puzzle, he said. Exxon Corp., the world's second-largest oil producer, is spending between $250 million to $300 million to make its systems compliant, according to a recent Securities Exchange Commission filing.

Quiggins, who estimated the 40 largest oil companies will shoulder about 90 percent of the Y2K burden, said it was too early to estimate the overall cost. Based on an analysis of what the giants plan to spend, the total could eclipse $1 billion.

According to SEC documents filed by some of the country's biggest producers, the problem is expected to cost Amoco about $100 million, Texaco about $75 million, Phillips Petroleum around $58 million and Unocal as much as $30 million.

And they're just the tip of the iceberg. "We're a large industry, but that also means we have a lot of resources to work on the problem," said Kendra Martin, manag-

Despite the oft-volatile nature of the materials the industry er of electronic commerce and information technology for the American Petroleum Institute, the industry's trade group. "Although we're certainly all competitors, because we're so intertwined and all dependent on each other, we've really approached this problem in a cooperative manner."

Part of the API's effort involves a database of Y2K-related information in which its member firms share their experiences in dealing with various kinds of equipment.

"We as a petroleum industry consider this 2000 problem a noncompetitive issue, and we're approaching it that way," said Quiggins, who chairs the API's Y2K task force. "I believe (competitive pressures) gets in the way of other industries to a certain degree. One of the major objectives of the task force is to share learning."

Shell has developed a Y2K guide to be used within in the company and, for what Quiggins called a nominal price, for anyone else looking for help in exterminating their bugs.

Companies also are pressing their suppliers and customers to shape up their systems, because it doesn't do a firm any good if one of their major vendors' computers is stricken.

"A company could spend hundreds of millions, but then a small contractor in Abilene, Texas, hasn't fixed the problem and, guess what, the connection isn't going to be there," said Gheit, the New York analyst. "They're going to be trouble shooting for 24 hours a day, maybe for months."

Gheit likened the turn-of-the-millenium in the oil industry to a "traffic jam with no cops and no traffic lights. They're going to be using hand signals and horns for a while."

SIG, the Houston consulting firm, has benefited from the multimillion-dollar Y2K industry that has emerged since the mid-1990s. Woodstrom said his company has dispatched workers to service clients all over the world to solve an array of computerrelated problems.

While the expenditures are staggering, Woodstrom said companies had little alternative. The amount of memory it would have taken to leave space for all four of a year's digits would have come at an exorbitant cost. Only recently has memory become affordable enough to leave room for the entire number, he said.

"It's not a difficult problem by any stretch of the imagination," Woodstrom said. "The difficulty is that it's so pervasive, it's so commonplace. It's so everywhere you forget where it might be."
