DALLAS (AP) — A 13-year-old boy who tried battling the black bear that killed his mother and another camper in Canada last year says his actions were something anyone would have done.

Kelly McConnell of Paris, Texas, today was to receive Canada's second-highest decoration — the Star of Courage — for trying to fight the bear.

"I'm looking forward to it, but don't know that I deserve it. 'Wouldn't you do that for your mother?'"

Kelly and his mother, Patti McConnell, were walking through a park in Liard Springs, British Columbia, in August 1997 when the bear attacked.

The teen-ager recalled that the bear, an aging male with broken teeth, ran out of the woods at a full gallop. He said his mother ran, but the bear tackled her.

Disney World trip gets thumbs up

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
 Staff Writer

Ironically, the Pampa ISD Board of Education spent only a few minutes to approve a DECA trip to Orlando and a band trip to Disney World, while spending almost an hour in discussion on the adoption of a three-cent tax rate increase proposal they unanimously approved last month. (See related story on this page.)

The board tabled action on requests for school-sanctioned, spring trips to Disney World and Orlando last week after board member Pat Kennedy expressed some opposition on the matter.

Kennedy reminded the board of the Texas State Board of Band director Bruce Collins said one of the parents who objected is the parent of a senior student — a student who has never been able to go on a band trip in the last four years.

Education's decision to divest itself of Disney stock and questioned whether a school-sponsored trip to the theme park would be advisable.

The Disney company's "gay-friendly" company policies and the R-rated movies created by its subsidiaries have been under attack by several religious organizations in the last year.

Upon approaching the board last night, Pampa High School

Principal John Kendall said the national DECA competition at Orlando was confirmed to be a trip to Orlando — not to Disney World.

Band director Bruce Collins then addressed the board and proceeded to hand out a copy of the questionnaire students and parents were given concerning a Disney World trip, and a letter outlining the information gathered from the questionnaires.

Of the total 101 parents surveyed, he said, 87 parents had no objections. Twelve parents had reservations about the trip, but said they will allow their students to go. Two parents objected and said their children cannot go.

Board members asked about the two objections. Collins spoke of the two parental objections in anonymous terms.

He said one of the parents who objected is the parent of a senior student — a student who has never been able to go on a band trip in the last four years.

The other objection was expressed by the father of a male student; this student's mother signed the same questionnaire in favor of the trip for the boy's sister, who is also in band.

Collins confirmed that a handful of parent volunteers also made phone calls to provide parents with an additional opportunity to express opinions regarding the trip.

Very little discussion was given on the matter after this point. Collins was thanked for his cooperation on the matter.

Lee Porter moved that the class be allowed to go to Disney World. Bill Jones seconded the motion. The vote was unanimously agreed upon by the board, with the exception of board member Pat Kennedy's vote; Kennedy was not present at last night's meeting.

Man facing child sexual assault charges

A 59-year-old Pampa man was in Gray County jail today in lieu of bonds totaling a quarter million dollars after being charged with sexual assault.

Charles Ronald Gatlin was arrested Thursday on warrants charging him with two counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of sexual assault.

Gray County Sheriff's deputies said today the case revolves around accusations by several juvenile boys, between the ages of 8 and 14, against Gatlin concerning sexual encounters.

Deputies said they received a complaint by the parents of one of the boys on Monday. After questioning four juvenile boys, officers presented their case to District Attorney John Mann early Thursday. Based on their investigation, Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge issued the warrants for Gatlin's arrest late Thursday morning.

Authorities said Gatlin was arrested by Gray County Sheriff's deputies about 2:30 p.m. Thursday at his residence (Lakeview Apartments) in the 2600 block of North Hobart.

Officials said the alleged incidents occurred at Gatlin's home. Judge Prestidge set bond for Gatlin at $100,000 on each of the two counts of aggravated sexual assault and $50,000 on the charge of sexual assault.

School board compromises on tax rate hike

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
 Staff Writer

After an initial split vote over whether the tax rate should be increased by three cents at last night's meeting, the Pampa ISD Board of Education voted unanimously to adopt a $1.475 rate that will increase property tax by only two cents per $100 of taxable value.

Instead of paying $25 dollars more this year on a $100,000 piece of property, as proposed under the three-cent tax rate plan, tax payers will pay $17 more.

A property owner of a $50,000 homestead will be paying $7 instead of $10.50.

The owner of an average Pampa homestead valued at $28,910 will be paying an additional $2.78 in taxes this year, compared to the (See TAX, Page 2)

Panhandle-Plains Historical Society, WTAMU makes free Sundays possible at PPHM in Canyon

CANYON — The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon has announced that free admission to the museum for all visitors each Sunday from 1-6 pm will continue through the upcoming year. This is made possible through the support of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society and West Texas A&M University.

"These free Sundays will make it possible for anyone, regardless of personal financial resources to take advantage of educational opportunities at the museum. Combined with free access to school children on tour, it will insure that the museum is available to all," stated Museum Director Walt Davis.

In order to assure that all local and area citizens have access to the museum, the free Sundays is only one of the programs that allows free admission. Other programs that do not have an admission charge are special community events, such as the Victorian Christmas Open House, Museum Day and other days to be announced.

Members of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society and members of the Museum Auxiliary are admitted during all public hours without an admission charge.

Membership in the society is available to anyone at a nominal charge, beginning with a "Friend" membership (available to Auxiliary members, senior citizens and students) for $25.

An "Individual membership" at $40 allows that individual unlimited visits to the Museum, as well as advance notice of all museum programs, invitations to special events, a 10 percent discount in the Museum Store and on children's programs, Corral Dust (the quarterly newsletter) and the Panhandle-Plains Historical Review (the Society's Annual Journal), as well as opportunities for educational travel and reciprocal admission benefits and discounts at other museums and cultural sites across the country.

A "Family" membership (at only $50 for the entire year) allows unlimited visits to the museum for the entire family, as well as all benefits given to Individual memberships. Other levels with additional benefits are also available.

In order to provide educational access, school children visiting the museum with their reserved school groups, scholars using the Research Center or collections, and WTAMU students, faculty and staff are admitted free of charge.

The museum began charging admission on June 1, 1998, after thoughtful and concerned deliberation by both the Board of Trustees of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society and a specially appointed task force consisting of area and community representatives.

The museum's admission charge is $4 for adults, $3 for senior adults 65 and over, $4 for children 12 years of age and over, $1 for children ages 4-11, and children age 3 and under are admitted free. Groups of 20 or more will be charged $3 per person.

Winter hours at the Museum are Monday through Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. The museum is located on the campus of West Texas A&M University at 2401 Fourth Avenue in Canyon. You can visit our web site at <http://www.wtamu.edu/museum/home.html>.

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on population trends:

A projected rapid growth of both younger and older generations lies in the world's future, and that spells new kinds of benefits as well as challenges.

The first point made in a United Nations Population Fund report is that, worldwide, more people than ever before are entering their childbearing period. In short, the baby boom experienced in the U.S. may be going global.

At the same time, though, says the U.N. agency, the number and proportion of people in their graying years — over 65 — are growing at an unprecedented rate.

Those factors, plus others, mean that despite a widening use of birth-control methods, world population will continue to expand by about 80 million people a year well into the next decade, according to the population group.

The "Day of Six Billion" fast approaches. Says the U.N. report: "The rapid growth of young and old 'new generations' is challenging societies' ability to provide education and health care for the young and social, medical and financial support for the elderly."

In 1950, there were 2.5 billion people. The "State of World Population" report projects that the world will be inhabited by 6 billion people by mid-1999 and by between 7.7 billion and 11.1 billion by 2050.

The U.N. is referring to next June 16 as "the Day of Six Billion" — the day that the world's population is expected to hit that numerical level.

The U.N. is urging industrial nations to honor 1994 commitments calling for devoting $17 billion a year by 2000 to continue a process that would provide universal reproductive health by 2015, reduce maternal mortality by 75 percent and make comparable reductions in infant and child mortality. So far, those nations are falling short of their commitments.

There is an interesting, positive sidelight to the projection involving today's largest-ever young generation, which numbers worldwide over 1 billion individuals between ages 15 and 24. Over the next two decades, they will be swelling the working age population in many nations, especially in less developed ones, according to the report.

Workers will outnumber dependents in places. This represents a "demographic bonus": Working people will outnumber both their younger and older dependents — a reversal of the problem confronting the U.S. and other Western nations where work forces are not large enough to support the retirement and health needs of old baby boomers.

To make the "demographic bonus" to work to their advantage, nations should be spending more on health, education and job creation. The ensuing economic gains from those investments can improve the quality of life and reduce the burdens of supporting older populations in the future.

On the other hand, a failure to create new jobs for growing populations could lead to social unrest and instability.

The U.N. report says the industrialized countries of Europe, North America and Japan face slow or no population growth. That, of course, includes us.

The U.S. and other developed nations need to be able to provide care for elderly people in retirement, according to the U.N. report. We are becoming acutely aware of that need.

Such care for the aged can be done, but in the view of the U.N. Population Fund, this requires examining different kinds of remedies. Among them are increasing the age at which people retire, changing the retirement benefits and increasing the rates of contribution that people should have to pay into their own retirement funds.

El Paso Times on military border patrols:

Joint Task Force-6, the Department of Defense's antidrug support agency, is to be commended for scheduling a series of 10 meetings with the public from September through November.

JTF-6 provides a vital, but little-known, service by coordinating military counter-drug support requested by civilian law-enforcement agencies in the 48 contiguous states and by supplying military personnel from all four military branches for intelligence analysis, training teams, construction projects and more. It is headquartered in El Paso at Biggs Army Airfield.

The agency is not free of controversy. In May 1997, a Marine assigned to JTF-6 shot and killed a 19-year-old goatherd in Redford, Texas. Since the fatal shooting, anti-drug patrols by armed military personnel have been suspended.

The organization provides a coordinating center and information clearinghouse that's desperately needed in the ever-widening war on drugs. And it promotes the cooperation of law-enforcement agencies, which is vital to a comprehensive and effective anti-drug campaign.

When JTF-6 meets with the public, it should serve to clear up concerns and misinformation about the agency. Although the meetings will focus on the environmental impact of JTF-6 and Immigration and Naturalization Service operations, other ancillary matters will undoubtedly come up. JTF-6 and other government officials should make certain that all legitimate concerns are fully addressed.

Angels in the outfield

If you want to know the meaning of the word "sportsmanship," you can look in Webster's Third International Dictionary, which defines it as "conduct becoming to a sportsman and involving fair, honest rivalry, courteous relations and graceful acceptance of results." Or you can watch Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa.

It takes a lot to eclipse a successful race for the all-time home-run record, but if there has been anything more impressive than the slugging prowess of these two, it's the way they've comported themselves during the pursuit. Amid all the hoopla, scrutiny and pressure, McGwire and Sosa have displayed a winning combination of humility and joy, suggesting they haven't forgotten that the game they are playing is, after all, a game. In the process, they have made what could have been just another overhyped distraction into an elevating experience for the entire country.

The old notion that sports build character is no longer taken seriously, having been convincingly rebutted by the likes of Latrell Sprewell, Pete Rose and Mike Tyson. But McGwire and Sosa have shown that the demands of excellence can foster personal maturity, which in turn can contribute mightily to athletic success.

The Cardinals first baseman, who once chafed visibly under the spotlight, has displayed imperturbable patience and generosity that have undoubtedly helped him withstand 24-hour-a-day inspection — unlike Roger Maris, who nearly wilted under the far less intense coverage he endured in 1961. And Sosa flowered as a hitter this year only by transforming himself from a free-swinging "rock-head" (as the Cubs hitting coach called him) preoccupied with his own statistics to a disciplined team player. Thus we were reminded that, as the New Testament promises, the last shall be first: Both players have made themselves great only by treating the game as bigger than themselves.

Steve Chapman

That approach has manifested itself in assorted ways: In McGwire's homage to Roger Maris, in Sosa's adorable gestures of affection to the fans, in their mutual insistence that hitting homers is secondary to winning games and, most dramatically, in their tributes to each other. Sosa has waved off comparisons between himself and his rival, declaring repeatedly, "McGwire's the man." And McGwire has never missed a chance to express admiration for Sosa's talent.

Given the long and often bitter rivalry between the Cardinals and the Cubs, the contest could have acquired a nasty edge. Thanks in large part to the principals, it has become a love fest. After the Cardinals' star hit his 62nd, we saw something never seen before: the fans in St. Louis standing as one, cheering for a Cub to go deep.

What made a historic moment unforgettably sweet was seeing the two embrace after McGwire broke the record. You might expect the also-ran to feel keen disappointment at being outdone. But if McGwire was the happiest person at Busch Stadium, Sosa appeared to be a close second in that race, too.

They looked less like opponents than like brothers in arms, which in fact is what they were. Whoever ends up with the record at the end of the season, they are partners in a joint conquest of baseball's highest summit.

They have also worked together to revive the concept of sportsmanship, which sometimes seems as defunct as Ebbets Field. Try to explain to a team of Little Leaguers that winning is not the important thing, and you can expect some blank looks. Accepting success and failure with grace does not come naturally to youngsters, and they find too few examples among professional athletes, many of whom behave as if the purpose of competition is to exalt yourself and humiliate your opponent. (Things have reached the point where you get trash-talking even in women's tennis.)

Some players also give the impression that reporters and fans are a painful burden. If the home-run race had pitted Albert Belle against Jose Canseco, it would have had a different tone.

Insuperable players, contrary to the claims of nostalgia, are nothing new: Ty Cobb used his spikes as weapons, and Ted Williams spat at Boston fans. But maybe the heyday of the bad actors is past. Even the dimmest athlete can see that mere ability is not what earns widespread respect. Michael Jordan, Ken Griffey Jr. and Tiger Woods are revered partly because they are so good at their sports — and partly because they conduct themselves so well in public.

Virtues admired for centuries have not become obsolete. McGwire and Sosa got attention by hitting home runs, but they won hearts by remembering that what really matters is how you play the game.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Sept. 18, the 261st day of 1998. There are 104 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On September 18, 1947, the National Security Act, which unified the Army, Navy and newly formed

Air Force into a National Military Establishment, went into effect.

On this date:

In 1759, the French formally surrendered Quebec to the British.

In 1793, President Washington laid the cornerstone of the U.S. Capitol.

In 1810, Chile declared its independence from Spain.

In 1850, Congress passed the Fugitive Slave Act, which allowed slaveowners to reclaim slaves who had escaped to other states.

In 1851, the first edition of The New York Times was published.

In 1927, the Columbia Phonograph Broadcasting System (later CBS) made its debut with a basic network of 16 radio stations.

In 1940, Harper and Brothers published "You Can't Go Home Again" by Thomas Wolfe.

To Gore or not to Gore ...

No American should be mistaken. The possibility of President Clinton's being forced to leave office is now real.

Whether or not you believe this should be the situation, whether or not you believe it is justified, it is a reality.

Washington is now a cauldron, steaming and bubbling with the heat of this reality. Republican and Democratic party leaders are in the process of deciding whether they would rather have Bill Clinton or Al Gore as president.

They get to decide because most of them are in Congress. And the ones who aren't, finance those who are. That is, they bankroll congressional campaigns and therefore have heavy influence.

The Constitution gives Congress the power to remove a president through impeachment, and President Clinton by word and deed has opened the possibility of impeachment. And Kenneth Starr has pursued the opening.

There are three basic avenues being discussed behind closed doors on both sides in the decision-making corridors of Washington.

One: The House of Representatives votes for an impeachment trial, the Senate conducts the trial, decides the president must give up his office, and he does.

Two: Public opinion, economic conditions, the mood of Congress and press coverage coalesce into a critical mass of disgust, disdain and dismay, creating so much pressure on the president and his family that he resigns.

Dan Rather

Syndicated columnist

In either of these instances, Gore becomes president. He then nominates a new vice president, whom Congress may accept or reject.

The third possibility: Congress, keying off public opinion and press coverage, decides the president should be reprimanded, but stops short of removal from office. Voting for an official censure would be the most probable such reprimand.

Deciding which of these three paths to follow figures to be a long, drawn-out process. That is, unless the president suddenly decides to throw in the towel and quit. While that IS a possibility, by any reasonable analysis it ignores the history of the Clintons, and is not at the moment considered very likely.

More likely is that the president and the first lady fight tenaciously for delay and a chance to hold on long enough for him to finish his term. But they are limited in what they can do.

Their best hopes are that Clinton's job approval rating stays up in the polls, that the economy, especially the stock markets, weathers current uncertainties, and that Democratic candidates do better than expected in this November's elections.

In private, Republican leaders are increasingly reaching the conclusion that they can get Clinton out of office if they choose to do so. Whether that would be good or bad for their chances of regaining the White House in 2000 is a question still hotly debated.

Some Republicans think that by ensuring Al Gore is the incumbent next time, and likely Democratic nominee, they can give the future Republican nominee the best chance.

Democrats must come at this question differently. Gore, succeeding the president before Clinton's second term is over, would give their party a change at the top and a fresh start. But Gore's weaknesses — his dullness as a speaker and campaigner, his problems with money-raising laws in the last campaign, and his long association with the Clintons are worrisome to party leaders.

So, to Gore or not to Gore. That is the question on both sides of the congressional aisle, whether or not any of the decision makers choose to put it so bluntly.

The days and weeks of September are going to be tougher, rougher and nastier than most Americans could have expected when the now fading summer began.

Robertson: Resignation 'too good' for Clinton

By RON FOURNIER
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson today demanded that Congress impeach President Clinton, saying resignation is too good for a "debauched, debased and defamed" leader.

"While resignation might be easier for America, it's not best for America," Robertson told 3,000 members of the Christian Coalition attending a two-day conference of the nation's most active religious conservatives.

Four or five members of the crowd held up yellow signs that read, "Impeach Clinton."

Christian Coalition leaders have long called for Clinton's ouster, but the rhetoric was more timely and stronger than ever. It is the organization's first gathering since the president admitted to an affair with Monica Lewinsky and House began work that could lead to impeachment proceedings.

In a veiled warning to Republicans tempted to move cautiously toward impeachment, Robertson said, "I'm not sure whether the Republican or Democratic Party will emerge stronger."

"How can we truly say the party of (former Sen. Bob) Packwood and (former President Richard) Nixon has reached perfection while the party of Kennedy and ... (Clinton) is hopelessly beyond redemption?" Robertson asked. "Of course, that is not the case."

Ralph Reed, former director of the Christian Coalition, later told the group that there are Republicans in "the upper reaches" of the GOP leadership who want to move timidly against Clinton.

Not wanting to be considered among the timid, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott followed Reed to the stage and promised to take impeachment proceedings seriously.

"I don't know if ... (Clinton) will do the right thing, but we will do the right thing," Lott said.

Reed said Democrats will pay in Nov. 3 elections for supporting Clinton. "They're going to get a wake-up call." And he predicted that Americans, more than ever, will take character into account in November and 2000.

"We care about the character of our leaders and we will not rest until we have moral leaders on every level of government from the courthouse to the White House," Reed said.

Robertson urged Democrats and Republicans alike to push forward with impeachment "because we need America to see there are still outstanding leaders in our midst. After all, not all of our leaders are debauched, debased and defamed."

Robertson heard a smattering of boos when he told the crowd that, as Christians, they must forgive Clinton. But then he quickly added that as citizens, people "must do our duty ... to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States, even when our president does not do so."

The failed 1988 GOP presidential candidate expressed disgust with the revelations of Clinton's affair with Ms. Lewinsky, calling them "our worst nightmare."

"For nearly nine months, we have seen one man wreak political havoc on our most noble office. For nine months, we have been mocked, demeaned, belittled and lied to," he said to thunderous applause.

The Oval office has become "the playpen for the sexual freedom of the poster child of the 1960s."

"Ladies and gentleman," he said, "I say to you today, we will be silent no longer!"

Man who blabbed Hyde affair says he wanted to expose hypocrisy

By JOHN PACENTI
Associated Press Writer

WESTON, Fla. (AP) — A retired salesman who said he was tired of hypocrisy divulged a secret that gives House Judiciary Chairman Henry Hyde and President Clinton something in common: an extramarital affair.

Norm Sommer, who went to the Internet magazine Salon with news of a 1960s affair between the then-married Hyde and the former wife of Sommer's tennis buddy Fred Snodgrass, insisted the White House was not behind the story, as some Republicans have alleged.

"Let me make very clear that nobody ... has been in contact with me from the White House," Sommer said Thursday from his home in nearby Aventura. "I tried to call the White House to offer support but they never called me back. I tried to call 57 people in the media. Salon was the last on my list."

Of Hyde, who is leading the House impeachment review of Clinton's sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky, Sommer said: "He is the height of hypocrisy."

Republicans blamed the story on the White House — an allegation hotly denied by the Clinton administration and Salon. Sommer said he initiated the call to the online magazine because he "doesn't want to see a president railroaded out of office."

The story forced Hyde, R-Ill., to admit to what he called "youthful indiscretions." Sommer, 72, said he learned of the affair during a tennis match with Snodgrass about six years ago.

Sommer's comments came on the same day that Republicans demanded an FBI inquiry into an alleged "systematic attempt to intimidate" Hyde and others.

Snodgrass, 76, a retired furniture salesman living in this Fort Lauderdale suburb, said the affair ruined his life, and that recounting it threatens to destroy an already fragile relationship with his eldest child, a daughter who told him not to give reporters her name or give her whereabouts.

According to Snodgrass, Hyde was a 41-year-old state legislator and the father of four sons when the affair began in 1965 with 29-year-old Cherie Snodgrass, who had a son and two daughters between the ages of 7 and 9 at the time. The relationship lasted until 1969 or later, he said.

Snodgrass said he and his wife divorced because of the affair, reconciled, but divorced again in 1971. But Cherie Soskin, 62, the former Mrs. Snodgrass, who now lives in San Antonio, provided a somewhat different account.

She told The Associated Press that she was 25 years old, separated from her husband and starting divorce proceedings when the affair with Hyde began. She said her ex-husband was publicizing the affair out of revenge.

Ms. Soskin said the affair lasted seven years, breaking up by mutual agreement in 1967 or 1968.

Ms. Soskin said she learned during the affair that Hyde, who sent her cards and pictures inscribed with messages of love, was married.

Prospective buyers are advised to do some work before house-hunting that will help ensure their success. First, they must be sure they know the difference between letters of pre-qualification and pre-approval. Pre-qualification, which can be obtained in fairly short order, means that a lender would probably approve a prospective borrower for a specific loan amount if the borrower's information proves to be valid. Pre-approval, on the other hand, takes a couple of weeks, is tantamount to going through the whole loan process, and largely amounts to loan approval. Thus, ideally, prospective buyers want to enter the house-hunting process with a letter of pre-qualification for a specific loan amount, which indicates to sellers that they are ready to do business.

House Judiciary Committee tries again to approve release of Clinton videotape

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee is trying again to approve release of more information on President Clinton's relationship with Monica Lewinsky following furious arguments over whether to make available phone sex conversations and other lurid material.

Exhausted committee members bolted out of their day-long, closed-door meeting Thursday, acknowledging that in today's meeting, they likely would have to endure another round of bitter partisanship over the most graphic, salacious material submitted to Congress by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

The committee got so bogged down in debating and defeating Democratic proposals on party-line votes Thursday that members never got to discuss release of Clinton's videotaped, Aug. 17 grand jury testimony. The tape is considered the key item in Starr's referral of "substantial and credible" information that may indicate impeachable conduct.

With a 21-16 committee majority, Republicans have left no doubt they will use their muscle to override Democratic objections and bring the testimony to the nation's television screens.

While Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., characterized debate inside the room as "strongly partisan, vigorously partisan," the nastiness spilled over to disagreements beyond arguments over what material to release.

—Top House Republicans demanded an FBI inquiry into an alleged "systematic attempt to intimidate" Hyde and other lawmakers, and the agency pledged to take "appropriate steps" in response. Republicans have blamed the White House for an online magazine story exposing a sexual relationship between Hyde and a married woman in the 1960s. Presidential aides denied involvement.

—Senior committee Democrat John Conyers wrote Hyde a letter, protesting the chairman's acting without his knowledge to seek a copy of Clinton's videotaped deposition in Paula Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit, which the president gave Jan. 17. Hyde sent a letter signed only by himself to U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright in Little Rock, Ark., asking for the tape, and later told reporters he expects it ultimately will be made public. The judge's law clerk said she was making arrangements to comply.

—Clinton's attorney, David Kendall, said in a statement that Starr had earlier refused a request to destroy the Aug. 17 videotape after it was viewed by a grand juror who was absent for the president's testimony. The only purpose for preserving it, the lawyer contended, "was to ensure its public release and embarrass the president."

Starr, in response, said, "We concluded that we could not comply with this request. Federal law required us to transfer to the House ... the videotape, along with all other substantial and credible information that President Clinton had committed perjury and other felonies. ... We cannot and will not destroy evidence of a crime."

Democrats and Republicans argued vigorously Thursday over Republican attempts to release more salacious material than the Democrats wanted, according to House officials from both parties who were familiar with the discussions.

The officials, who would not be identified by name, said Republicans argued that it was relevant to the House's impeachment review to let the public see and judge Ms. Lewinsky's descriptions of phone sex conversations and physical acts, particularly one involving a sexual prop.

In his testimony, Clinton acknowledged only an inappropriate relationship, while denying he had sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky.

Democrats, who said the material was disgusting and not relevant, accused Republicans of breaking agreements reached by the committee staff to keep much of the explicit material secret.

Democrats also made proposals to make the information available to Clinton before it is released publicly, and to hold up release until Sept. 28 — the House-set deadline for disclosure — so more committee members could review the material. A number of panel members have not seen the videotape or plowed through thousands of pages of material backing up Starr's report, which said he had found evidence of potentially impeachable offenses in 11 separate instances.

Even before the committee met on Thursday, TV outlets were making plans for airing the four-hour grand jury tape — said to contain images of a president who was defiant, angry and evasive as he fielded explicit questions from Starr's prosecutors.

In his testimony, the president gives several evasive answers when pressed about his early testimony on being alone with Ms. Lewinsky and having sexual relations with her.

"I have not had sex with her as I defined it," Clinton told prosecutors at one point in the testimony.

Mexico: Massacre stuns neighbors in northern village

EL SAUZAL, Mexico (AP) — The execution of 18 adults and children left neighbors wondering why members of a family seemingly so peaceful and well-liked were shot to death by a criminal firing squad.

Some speculated the answer would be found in the drug trade and related gunbattles that have swept northern Mexico, but prosecutors withheld judgment.

"We cannot say 100 percent that it was an aspect of drug trafficking or for some other motive," the attorney general of Baja California state, Marco Antonio de la Fuente Villarreal, said at a news conference Thursday, hours after the massacre.

Officials had announced no arrests and no solid leads as of early today. A 15-year-old girl who survived the attack by hiding under a bed was under treatment for shock.

Gunmen lined the victims against a wall and shot them before dawn.

The victims appeared to be asleep when the gunmen showed up; most of the bodies were wearing pajamas — or nothing at all — and the beds in at least one of the houses were unmade, as if sleeping people had been pulled from them.

The brutality of the killings prompted fear and outrage. "They are savages," barked Hugo Rodriguez, a fisherman who lives a mile from the sprawling ranch compound where the bodies of nine adults, two teen-agers, six children and a baby were found.

Rodriguez noted that Mexico's most violent drug trafficking cartel, the Arellano Felix brothers, "has spread fear and terror" in Baja California.

Earlier in the day, the government news agency Notimex quoted the attorney general as saying Castro was suspected of growing marijuana for the Arellano Felix gang based in Tijuana, 60 miles north.

Of the 20 people lined against the wall, only Castro and a teen-age boy survived. Both were reportedly in critical condition at a local hospital, according to authorities.

Police said Castro had been under police investigation in the past for reasons they would not disclose.

"He was involved in something," said federal highway police Capt. Fernando Rodriguez Goni, implying that "something" was illegal.

Over half of nation's high school teens abstaining from sex, according to CDC

ATLANTA (AP) — Teen sex isn't what it used to be. Federal officials say more than half the high-school students they asked are abstaining — and most of the ones who are having sex are using condoms.

It is the first time this decade that more than half of America's high school students are saying no to sex, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Thursday. And high schoolers who are sexually active are using condoms at the highest rate recorded in the 1990s.

Dr. Lloyd Kolbe, director of the CDC's Division of Adolescent and School Health, and others said the findings show that teaching teen-agers about safe sex hasn't resulted in more promiscuity.

"I've never believed giving a kid access to a condom is going to promote sexual activity. Now we have evidence that this is correct," said Daniel Zingale, executive director of AIDS Action, a Washington-based advocacy group.

Kolbe also said the findings show that teens who are virgins shouldn't feel like outcasts.

"It's an important milestone because students who have not engaged in intercourse can say that they're in the majority," he said.

The 1997 survey of 16,262 students nationwide showed that a lower proportion of high schoolers are engaging in risky sexual behavior than in 1991, when the CDC began giving teen-agers anonymous questionnaires every two years about their sex lives.

Asked if they had ever had sexual intercourse, 52 percent of those surveyed last year said no, compared with 46 percent in 1991. Asked if they used a condom the last time they had sex, 57 percent of students said yes, compared with 46 percent in 1991.

Sixteen percent of students said they had had sex with four or more partners, down from 19 percent in 1991.

The trend toward abstinence in the 1990s is in sharp contrast to the 1970s and '80s, when sexual activity ballooned among teen-agers, Kolbe said. Sexual activity among girls 15 to 19, for example, jumped from 29 percent in 1970 to 57 percent in 1988, according to previous studies.

Kolbe attributed the recent declines to efforts by parents, schools and health officials to educate young people about safe sex and the risks of teen pregnancy, AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

But he warned there are still plenty of conflicting sexual messages in movies, television and other media.

"I think they're fragile changes," he said. "The worst thing we could do is be lulled into complacency."

The CDC also noted that its survey doesn't cover all teens, since as many as 5 percent are high school dropouts.

The survey showed abstinence was almost equal among boys and girls — 51 percent and 52 percent, respectively.

But the overall decline in sexual activity has been greatest for boys. Teen-age boys reporting they had intercourse dropped from 57 percent in 1991 to 49 percent in 1997. For girls, the figure dropped from 50.8 percent to 47.7 percent.

The proportion of black high schoolers who said they had sex dropped 8 percentage points from 1991 to 1997, to 73 percent. For whites, the decline was 6 points to 44 percent. The change for Hispanics was less than 1 percentage point, to 52 percent.

Woman shocked over exposure of relationship with Henry Hyde

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A woman with whom U.S. Rep. Henry Hyde acknowledges he had an affair in the 1960s said Thursday she can't believe the relationship has been exposed.

"My God, this was 37 years ago. It's crazy," said Cherie Soskin, 62, who now lives in San Antonio.

Hyde, a Republican from Illinois and a key player in a presidential impeachment drama, confirmed the affair Wednesday and said he won't be deterred by public accounts of the relationship.

Hyde, 74, chairs the House Judiciary Committee, which is preparing to release a videotape of Clinton's grand jury testimony showing him answering uncomfortable questions about his affair with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

The Internet publication Salon Magazine first reported the story about Hyde's affair, which took place in the 1960s in Chicago when Ms. Soskin — then Cherie Snodgrass — was a married woman and Hyde was a married man.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Ms. Soskin said she was beginning divorce proceedings with her then-husband, Fred J. Snodgrass, when she started seeing Hyde.

"I'm just shocked that something 37 years old — I was just 25 years old — is surfacing after all that time," said Ms. Soskin. At the time, she said, she believed Hyde was single.

Since the story of the affair broke, Ms. Soskin said, she has received calls of support from friends, for which she is grateful.

Ms. Soskin said she didn't want to comment further until after she reads the story by Salon. She said she understands some of the reporting on the relationship is inaccurate, but she declined to elaborate.

"There's some truths and there's some lies," she said, adding she believes her ex-husband is publicizing the story out of revenge. "I'm really upset about the lies and my ex-husband's revenge."

Ms. Soskin told The Dallas

Morning News that her affair with Hyde lasted seven years, breaking up by mutual agreement in 1967 or 1968.

She added that she didn't believe Hyde is morally fit to live in Florida, said Thursday he revealed the Hyde affair because he claims the congressman is "the height of hypocrisy."

"Did you hear on the floor of member who peddles information about the personal life of a lawmaker.

"The statute of limitations has long since passed on my youthful indiscretions," Hyde said. "Suffice it to say, Cherie Snodgrass and I were good friends a long, long time ago. After Mr. Snodgrass confronted my wife, the friendship ended and my marriage remained intact."

Hyde's wife died of cancer in 1992.

Ms. Soskin's ex-husband called Hyde a "super hypocrite."

"He had an affair with a young woman with three children. At least the president didn't do that," Snodgrass of the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., area said in an interview Wednesday.

Snodgrass, who divorced his wife, remarried her and then divorced again in 1971, said the affair devastated their children.

Ms. Soskin, who called Hyde "Hank," told the San Antonio Express-News her ex-husband was "a blamer.... He could never accept responsibility for his own actions and blamed everything on Hank."

Ms. Soskin told The Dallas Morning News that her affair with Hyde lasted seven years, breaking up by mutual agreement in 1967 or 1968.

judge President Clinton.

"No, I do not, because of his past," she said.

Ms. Soskin said she learned during the affair that Hyde, who sent her cards and pictures inscribed with messages of love, was married. But she said she chose to ignore the fact.

"I didn't care. I wasn't looking for marriage; I was trying to get out of a bad one," she said.

Snodgrass, Ms. Soskin's ex-husband, said the affair was revealed to Salon by a male friend of his that the magazine identified as Norm Sommer.

Sommer, a retired salesman who the House where (Hyde) is quoting Sir Thomas More saying, 'Anyone who takes an oath places his soul into his hands?'" Sommer said of the 16th century writer and English statesman who was executed for refusing to take the Oath of Supremacy acknowledging King Henry VIII as head of the Church of England. "I ask: Is a marriage vow an oath?"

The Republicans have blamed the story on the White House — an allegation the Clinton administration and Salon denied.

In a letter Thursday, White House chief of staff Erskine Bowles promised to fire any staff

1998 Property Tax rates in GRANDVIEW-HOPKINS I.S.D.

This notice concerns 1998 property tax rates for GRANDVIEW-HOPKINS I.S.D. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the school district used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the school district can set before it must hold a rollback election. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$978,526
Last year's debt taxes	$0
Last year's total taxes	$978,526
Last year's tax base	$75,271,205
Last year's total tax rate	1.300000/$100
This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$977,817
/ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$76,530,896
= This year's effective tax rate	1.277676/$100
This year's rollback tax rate:
Amount of local taxes needed based on state funding formulas and 1998-99 student enrollment	$895,658
/ This year's adjusted tax base	$76,530,896
= This year's local maintenance and operation rate OR adopted 1996 maintenance and operation rate	1.170322/$100
= This year's maintenance and operation rate (use greater of 2 rates above)	1.300000/$100
+ $0.08	1.380000/$100
+ Rate increase adopted for 1997-98 school year	0.000000/$100
+ This year's debt rate	0.437757/$100
+ Rate to recoup loss certified by commissioner of education	0.000000/$100
= This year's rollback rate	1.817757/$100

Real friends take risks...

In 1988, three people told me I was fat. One was my dad. Parents can get away with saying hard things but the other two were women friends who loved me enough to gently remind me of what should have been obvious. (It was obvious but I was pretending not to notice.)

My dad pointed out I ate Nutty Buddies at bed time and liked to wear jogging suits a lot. He said I was getting "right round."

Another said that it isn't good to be fat because husbands tend to stray when their wives aren't attractive. Another woman bluntly said, "You're fat."

Of course they were right. As the scales edged upward, I pretended each tomorrow was a new and hopefully victorious day in the food fight. The truth was I liked to eat and I wasn't snacking on lettuce.

By the grace of God and promise of a new mink coat, I lost 40 pounds. I liked my slim body and jeans in the single digit sizes. I really like my mink coat.

Ten years have passed and the pounds have crept on again, but my weight isn't as high as before. I exercise regularly and occasionally determine to return to my teenage weight. The pounds don't slide off so easily now and my store of will power seems to be exhausted more quickly than 10 years ago.

And, of course, I still think chocolate, ice cream and pizza are their own food groups.

Occasionally someone asks me about my time in the desert with 1200 calories a day and I tell them how I learned to listen to my body and how free I felt because I knew my jeans would fit as well tomorrow as they did today. And whether I tell them or not, I am reminded of my three advisors who loved me enough to verbalize the mirror's silent message.

That reminds me of the Bible's wisdom that real friends are the people who risk your friendship by telling truths you don't want to hear. And since I have no siblings, they are friends who stick closer than a sister.

Synagogue fire brings reflections

By JULIA LIEBLICH
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Central Synagogue lost its roof but not its grandeur after fire broke out last month. Light streams into a courtyard of charred columns of faded blue, sienna and gold in the 126-year-old Moorish revival temple, sanctuary of the oldest Jewish Reform congregation in New York City.

The Holy Ark that holds the Torah scrolls, the Five Books of Moses handwritten on parchment, escaped harm as did the lamp symbolizing God's presence. And as the Jewish High Holy Days approached, Central Synagogue's senior rabbi, Peter Rubinstein, could not help marveling at the light amidst the loss.

"There's a mystery about the things that were protected," said Rubinstein, who noted that enough of the midtown Manhattan structure survived to allow rebuilding. "The way the building was struck casts a profound and visual difference between destruction and hope. ... And having the sky as your roof is awesome."

It was just before sundown on Friday, Aug. 28, when a workman's torch apparently set the temple on fire. Rubinstein saw smoke encircling the 112-foot minarets and raced into the synagogue, where he broke a glass display case and carried out two Torah scrolls, the only two in the temple that had not been stored during a renovation.

"My instinct to save any Torah scroll was so strong," he said.

While firefighters battled the five-alarm blaze, synagogue members who had gathered for Friday services prayed and comforted one another at the synagogue's community house across the street.

News of the fire spread quickly, and other religious leaders offered sanctuary and condolences.

In San Diego, Rabbi Wayne Dosick couldn't help thinking of the day his own home burned, and the lessons he brought to the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashana, and the Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur.

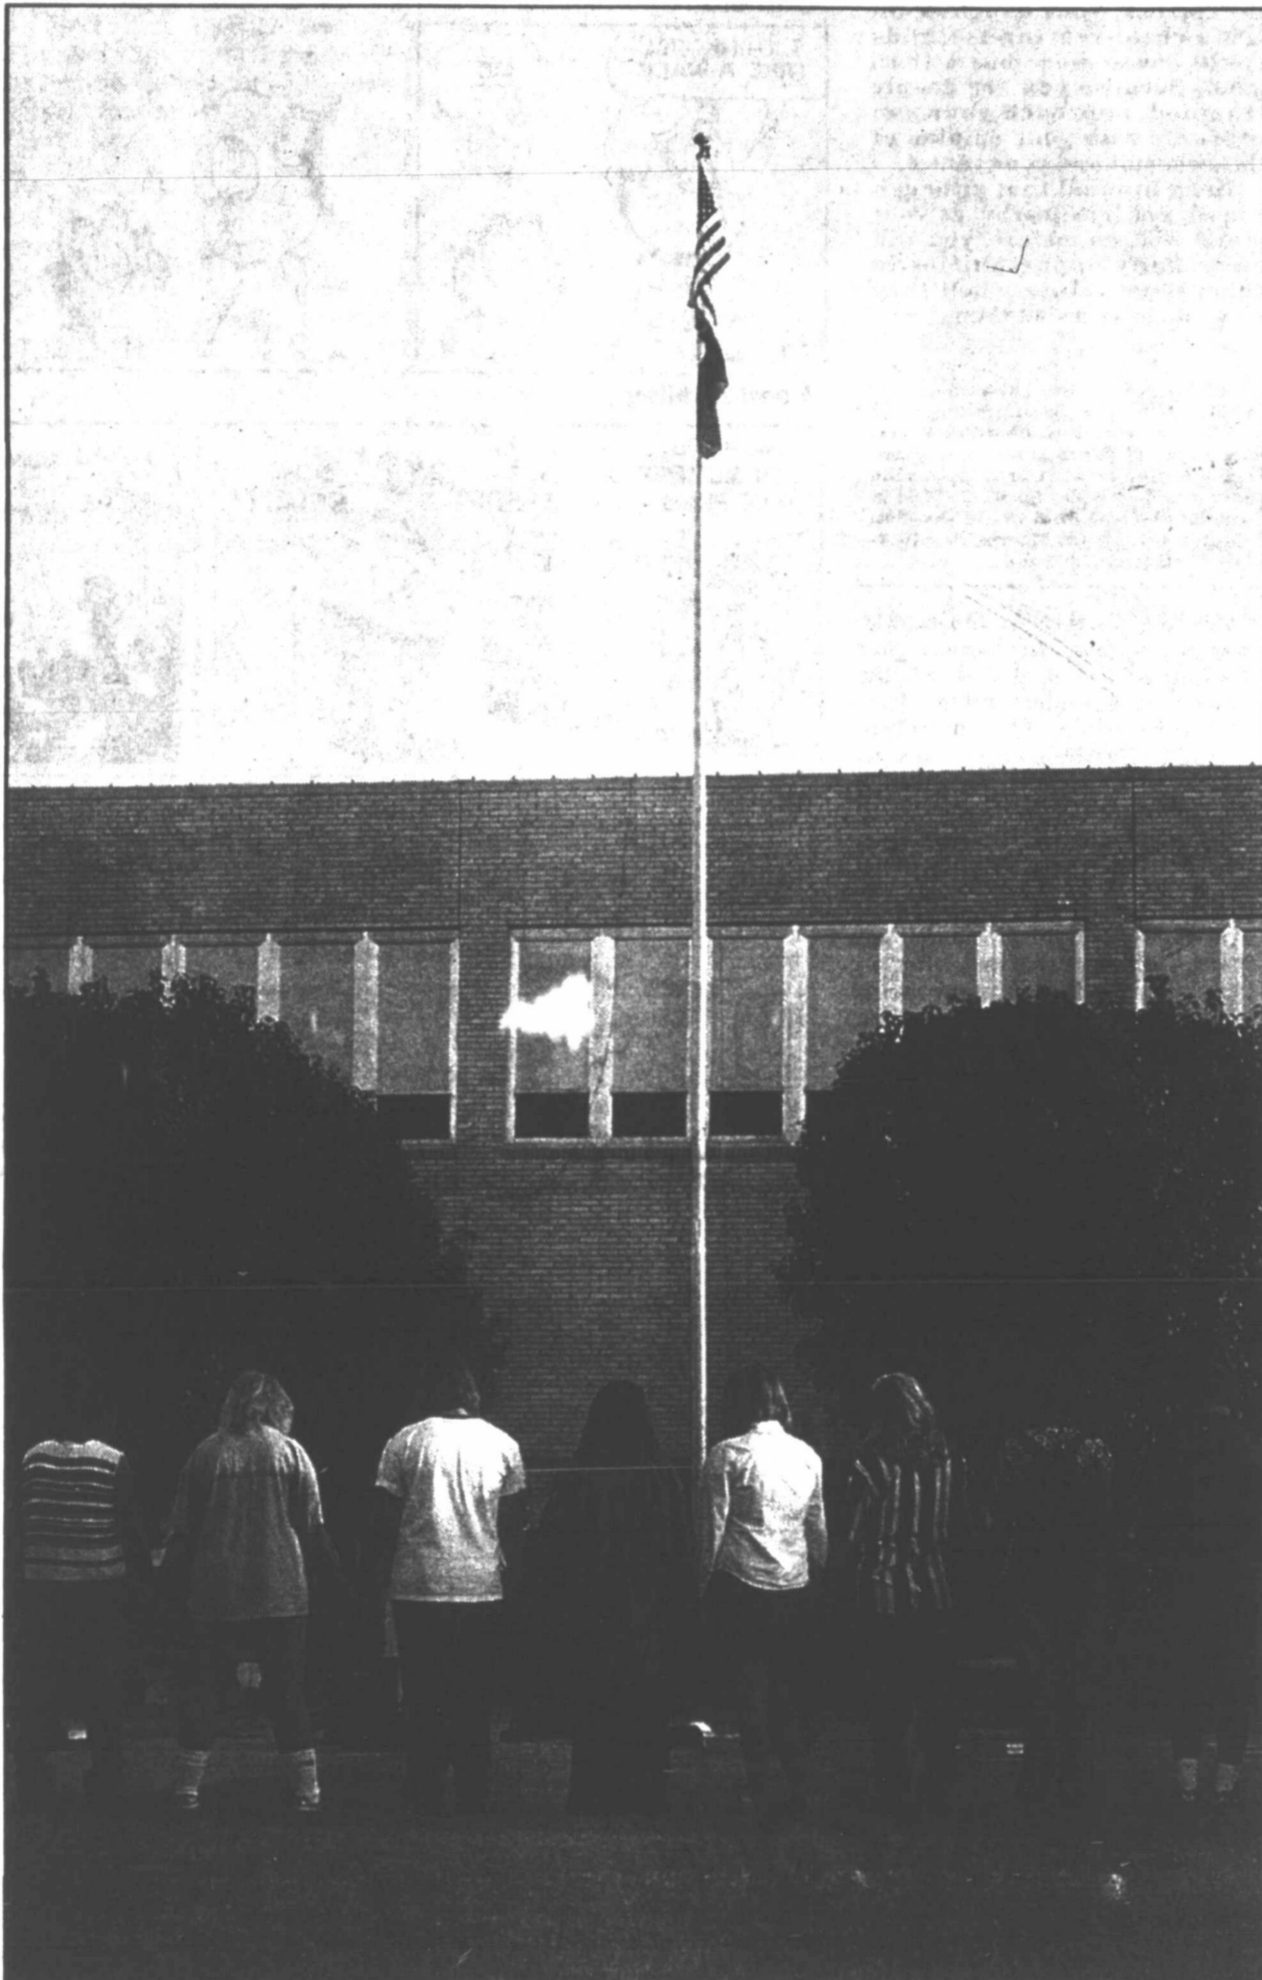

In the past, Dosick said, he read the words in the prayer book — "How many shall pass on, how many shall come to be ... Who shall perish by fire and who by water?" — as part of a litany of the ways people might die in the upcoming year.

After the fire, he understood the text differently. "Instead of meaning, 'Who shall pass away?' it means, 'Who shall pass through this?'" said Dosick, author of "When Life Hurts: A Book of Hope."

"When we stay connected to God we can get through the worst things. When we're disconnected from God we feel anguish not so much from a terrible event, but from not being connected to the source."

The High Holy Days, beginning at sundown Sunday with Rosh Hashana, are traditionally a time for Jews to think about such connections and their own mortality and renewal in the face of death.

The fire at a mighty sanctuary, said Rubinstein, made members of Central Synagogue "more aware of their own fragility. ... And in the most mystical way, it led to a time for consideration of what we want to do with ourselves."

Approximately 200 Pampa High students were gathered around the school's flag pole at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday morning to pray. These students were taking part in an annual "See You at the Pole" prayer event in which school children across the country meet at their school flag poles to pray together.

Longtime member Emita Levy has been reflecting on what it means to be an "urban nomad" in a congregation without a home. Traditionally, High Holy Days services attract 5,000 worshippers to the synagogue and several spillover locations. This year, services will be held at a state armory, and Levy hopes the common location will foster a sense that a community is more than a building.

"I hope this brings us together, really together," she said.

Rubinstein repeatedly reminds his congregants that their fire was a trauma, not a tragedy that took human life, that Jews have a history of rebuilding, and before long they will be carrying their Torah scrolls joyously into the synagogue.

"With care," he said, the community will emerge "with a quiet, trembling strength."

He hopes other religious communities can learn from Central's experience without repeating it. "And I hope they can comprehend the centrality of their church, synagogue or mosque in their life, and rekindle the feeling of passion before their own loss."

Missionary guest speaker Sunday

This Sunday morning during the morning worship time at First United Methodist Church, Dr. Chris Hena will speak.

Chris is a United Methodist missionary who is serving as the Director of Medicine for the United Methodist Church of Russia. She is an active member of the United Methodist Church of Love and Salvation in Sunseve. Chris is a practicing physician at one of the hospitals in Moscow.

She also serves clinics in three different villages which are hundreds of miles outside the city. She is also working among 35 United Methodist Congregations in Russia to establish health care programs within their own communities.

This is a timely message since Russia is in the mews so much today. Make an extra effort to hear Chris as she tells about her work as a United Methodist missionary in Russia today.

Our morning worship service begins at 10:30 a.m. and will include mission hymns and a Children's Sermon by the pastor (a nursery is provided). Please join us at 201 E. Foster this Sunday, Sept. 20.

NIMBY, religion and the state law

BOSTON (AP) — Three residents are challenging the constitutionality of a law that allows the Mormon Church to build a temple in Belmont, an area zoned for single-family homes just northwest of Boston.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, could affect church construction throughout Massachusetts and questions the constitutionality of an amendment to state zoning law.

The 1950 amendment gives nonprofit schools and religious institutions the right to build anywhere in the state — except Boston and Cambridge — regardless of local use restrictions.

That amendment was cited by the Belmont Zoning Board of Appeals when it issued permits to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to build on nine acres. Work has already begun on the $30 million temple, which is to be six stories tall with a 139-foot central steeple and 225-car parking lot. Completion is expected in two years.

"We contend this zoning exemption is unconstitutional because it aids religion by giving it favorable status," said Mark White, a lawyer for the plaintiffs. "You couldn't put up a center for agnostics there, or even a two-family home."

John Gahan, chairman of the zoning board said the board "followed the law as we understood it. We aren't supposed to be making independent determinations of constitutionality."

The deadline for church news and letters to the editor is noon Wednesdays.

Man's Territorial Imperative Takes Place In His Front Yard

DEAR ABBY: My husband of many years urinates in the front yard of our home. He usually does this after dark, but has on occasion moved to the side yard to urinate during daylight hours. When we were first married I thought it was because he was drunk — but he's been sober for more than 10 years. I've told him I believe his behavior to be a form of perversion, illegal and disgusting. Years ago, he promised to stop since it upsets me so much, but when I interrupted his front-yard ritual a few moments ago he said he "forgot" how strongly I felt about it. He promised not to do it anymore and reassured me that all men do it. He doesn't think it is wrong at all.

Abby, we live in a nice neighborhood, my husband has a college degree, is a successful businessman and is over 50. I am so afraid my neighbors have seen him I can't even think about it. I've seen him do it even when the toilet would be closer. Is this a normal male ritual?

lic view." Check with the police in your city to be sure there are no ordinances against it.

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many mothers dress their little girls like adults? When my granddaughter, age 7, showed me her new bathing suit, I was appalled. It was a two-piece bikini that barely covered her bottom, and the top was no better. I didn't say anything other than to ask her who had chosen it. My granddaughter told me her mother did.

I don't know if I should say anything about this to my daughter-in-law. I don't want to lose her friendship, but the world doesn't need 7-year-old sexpots, and I believe that, aware of it or not, my daughter-in-law is encouraging this attitude in her child.

I have noticed that in her family all the women tend to dress provocatively. I want my grandchildren to learn better values than this. However, since they don't live nearby, I don't have much opportunity to influence them.

I don't want to run their lives or make enemies, but if the elders of our generation do not teach their young people about life and values; who will? I'm not afraid to be unpopular by standing up for what I believe; neither do I want to cause trouble. I'm not saying I'm better than my daughter-in-law, but I think my values are. What should I do?

TROUBLED GRANDMA

DEAR TROUBLED GRANDMA: Any attempt on your part to "correct" your daughter-in-law's child-rearing methods could cause more harm than good. Because you are deeply troubled, approach your son privately with your opinion of the swimsuit and your values.

Keep in mind that although you do not live nearby, as your grandchildren mature, you will have many opportunities to share your values when they visit you or you visit them.

WRESTLING

PAMPA — The Pampa Takedown Club is getting ready to kick off the 1998-99 wrestling season. The club will host a parent's meeting on Sept. 24, starting at 7 p.m. at 320 S. Ballard.

The meeting will be an opportunity for the parents and youngsters to find out more about amateur wrestling in Texas.

The club had an outstanding season last year, thanks to the support of individuals and business organizations. The club is looking for the community's help once again.

If you have an old wrestling singlet, wrestling shoes or head gear, the club would appreciate any donation.

Persons interested in helping out the wrestlers, please contact Jennifer Harrison at 669-7157 or Brandi Urquhart at 665-8321.

VOLLEYBALL

BRISCOE — Fort Elliott defeated San Jacinto, 15-7, 12-15, 15-13, to win the Fort Elliott Volleyball Invitational.

Fort Elliott opened the tournament last weekend with a 15-2, 15-1 win over Sanford-Fritch junior varsity. The Lady Cougars advanced to the finals with a 15-5, 15-9 win over Dumas junior varsity.

Lee Scales, Amber Estes, Susie Luttrell, Ja'Nae Goad and Reagan Meadows were among the players who stood out for Fort Elliott.

"Lee did a good job of digging and setting on the back row," said Fort Elliott coach Russell Schaub. "Amber has made great improvement in her hitting and Susan, one of our setters, had a good game. Reagan made some outstanding plays at times."

Fort Elliott coach Russell Schaub praised his entire team for their tournament performance.

"I've had people tell me how scrappy these kids are. It was just a good overall effort from the whole team, Schaub said.

In the third-place match, Fritch varsity defeated Dumas junior varsity, 15-5, 15-3.

In a regular-season match played earlier this week, Trinity Fellowship defeated Fort Elliott junior varsity, 15-9, 16-14.

Fort Elliott travels to Hereford tonight for a dual with Hereford and Randall junior varsities.

FOOTBALL

MIAMI — Still searching for its first win, Miami travels to Higgins for a six-man battle tonight.

Both Miami and Higgins are 0-2 on the season.

Against Silvertown last week, the Warriors jumped out to a 6-0 lead on a one-yard plunge by Lucio Moreno. However, the Owls scored the next five touchdowns enroute to a 51-24 win.

Moreno scored another Miami touchdown on a 15-yard run in the fourth quarter. Brady Lackey added Miami's other TD. Trey Rogers had three PATs for the Warriors.

Jeremy Holt scored five TDs for Silvertown while Jared Holt had two.

Silvertown improved to 2-0 for the season.

McLEAN — McLean tries to get back on the winning track after dropping a close 40-33 verdict to Follett in six-man action last week.

The Tigers (1-1) host Silvertown at 7:30 tonight. Silvertown is off to a 2-0 start.

McLean was leading Follett, 27-18, after three quarters, but the Panthers scored 22 fourth-quarter points for the come-from-behind victory. The Tigers had held a 15-12 lead at halftime.

The Tigers received an outstanding performance from Aaron Rice, who scored three touchdowns on runs of 57, 25 and 10. Ike Hanes added two touchdowns. Hanes rushed for 165 yards on 20 carries while Rice had 115 yards on only nine carries.

Lefors looking for first win

LEFORS — Lefors hosts Lakeview at 7:30 tonight in a six-man football contest. The Pirates are looking for their first win after two setbacks.

Lefors had outstanding performances from Kody Franks and Michael Steele in a 50-28 loss to Hedley last week. In the first half alone, Franks rushed for 109 yards and scored on a 60-yard run. Steele scored three touchdowns on runs of 35, 5 and 15 yards. Len Lock added two conversion kicks for the Pirates.

Lefors jumped out to a 28-6 halftime advantage, but were held scoreless the second half. Four turnovers contributed to the Pirates' loss.

Hedley's comeback was led by Russell King and Dustin Monroe. King ran for two touchdowns and threw for a TD. Monroe scored three touchdowns.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Taking his No. 17 Texas A&M squad to Southern Mississippi wasn't coach R.C. Slocum's decision. He knows the possible downfalls.

But the Aggies (1-1) play Saturday in Hattiesburg, where few Top 25 teams have ventured before, against a Southern Miss team that has anxiously waited two weeks for another chance.

The Golden Eagles (0-1), who have won two straight Conference USA titles, were a preseason Top 25 team for the first time in school history. But they lost their Sept. 5 opener 34-6 at No. 8 Penn State and dropped out of the poll from No. 21.

"You're really put yourself in a precarious situation to go over and play a game like this," said Slocum, the 10th-year Aggies coach. "It's a tough deal for us."

M.M. Roberts Stadium, which seats only 33,000 on the USM campus, will likely be sold out for only the fifth time since being renovated in 1976. It is the one of the most anticipated home openers ever for the Aggies.

Slocum said the game is part of a "3-for-1" contract agreed upon "some time ago" in which Southern Miss plays at College Station three times for the Aggies lone trip Saturday to Hattiesburg. USM lost 41-17 at A&M two years ago.

Texas A&M may be one of the nation's winningest teams in the 1990s (76 victories), but there have been some notable road losses to unheralded opponents. The Aggies lost at Tulsa in 1991 and two years ago at Southwestern Louisiana, which had never beaten a Top 25 beforehand.

Slocum has to convince his players that Southern Miss is better than its game at Penn State.

"The game on the field was a lot closer than that score," Slocum said. "Watching the tapes, their offense made some plays and their defense gave Penn State some problems."

Southern Miss has won 15 of 16 home games, and eight in a row, since a 24-14 loss to then-No. 21

Virginia Tech in 1994. The Hokies were the last of five ranked opponents who have ever played at M.M. Roberts.

The Eagles hope to change two trends. They have never beaten a ranked team at home, and are 0-18 against Top 25 teams since Jeff Bower became coach at the end of the 1990 season.

And they just want to get back on the field.

"The Penn State game was a big test for us, but it will be an even bigger test to see how we respond," said Southern Miss senior quarterback Lee Roberts. "This team is a lot better than we showed."

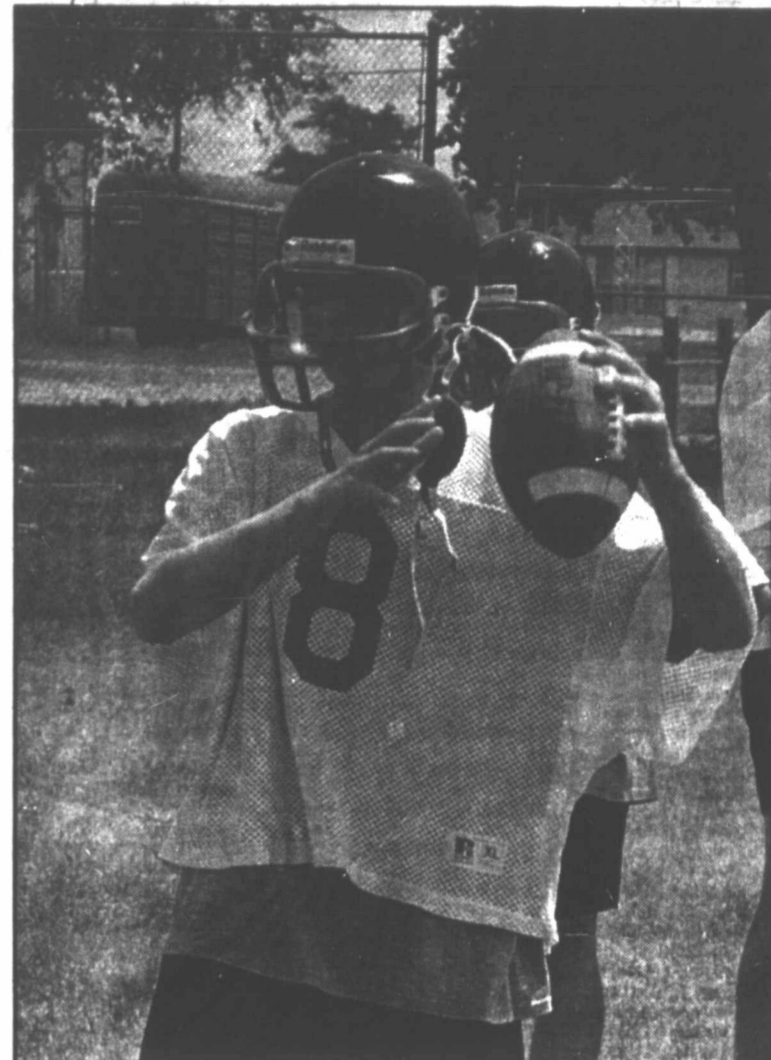

Roberts has added the title of father since the Penn State game, but is ready to play another game. He was back at practice Wednesday, just hours after his wife Traci gave birth to the couple's first child, an 8-pound boy.

Southern Miss will try to do what Texas A&M has already done, respond with a victory after losing its season opener to a ranked team.

The Aggies followed up a 23-14 loss to then-No. 2 Florida State in the Kickoff Classic with a 28-7 victory over Louisiana Tech last weekend. Tech's Troy Edwards, who had 17 catches and an NCAA record 405 yards receiving against Nebraska, was held to just 11 catches for 67 yards.

"They are a very fast team defensively, must faster than we saw against Penn State," Bower said. "They are not overly big, but they can really run."

Big numbers

(Pampa News photo)

Junior quarterback Curt Smith has put up some big numbers in two games for Fort Elliott. Smith has thrown for 634 yards and 14 touchdowns for the 2-0 six-man Cougars. The 5-11, 160-pound Smith has completed 72.3 percent of his passes.

Pampa JVs roll by Palo Duro, 22-6

PAMPA — Pampa rolled to a 22-6 win over Palo Duro in a junior varsity football game Thursday night.

Quarterback J.J. Roark and Tony Beck ran for touchdowns and Roark also threw for a touchdown to Tristen Perry. One of the Pampa TDs was set up when Perry intercepted a Palo Duro pass and returned it to the two-yard line. Roark scored a two-point conversion. Travis Lancaster caught a two-point conversion from Roark.

Defensive standouts for Pampa were Jason Burklow and Alan Parker.

Pampa JVs are now 3-0 for the season.

CANADIAN — Canadian has climbed eight spots, from No. 29 to No. 21 in this week's Class 2A Harris Ratings.

Canadian hosts Childress tonight and the 2-0 Wildcats are three-point favorites.

Canadian is coming off a 45-7 win over Panhandle. Quarterback Derek Maupin threw two touchdown passes, one to Luke Farrar (22 yards) and the other to Eric Hall (33 yards).

Canadian's defense scored two touchdowns. Matt Laurent returned a fumble seven yards for a TD and Todd Dickinson had a two-yard TD interception.

Dickinson also scored on an eight-yard run. George Peyton scored on a 26-yard run and kicked a 32-yard field goal.

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — Derrick Anderson scored a touchdown from the 1-yard line with 59 seconds left and Eric Nuber kicked the extra point as Southeastern Oklahoma squeaked past Texas A&M Commerce, 21-20, Thursday night.

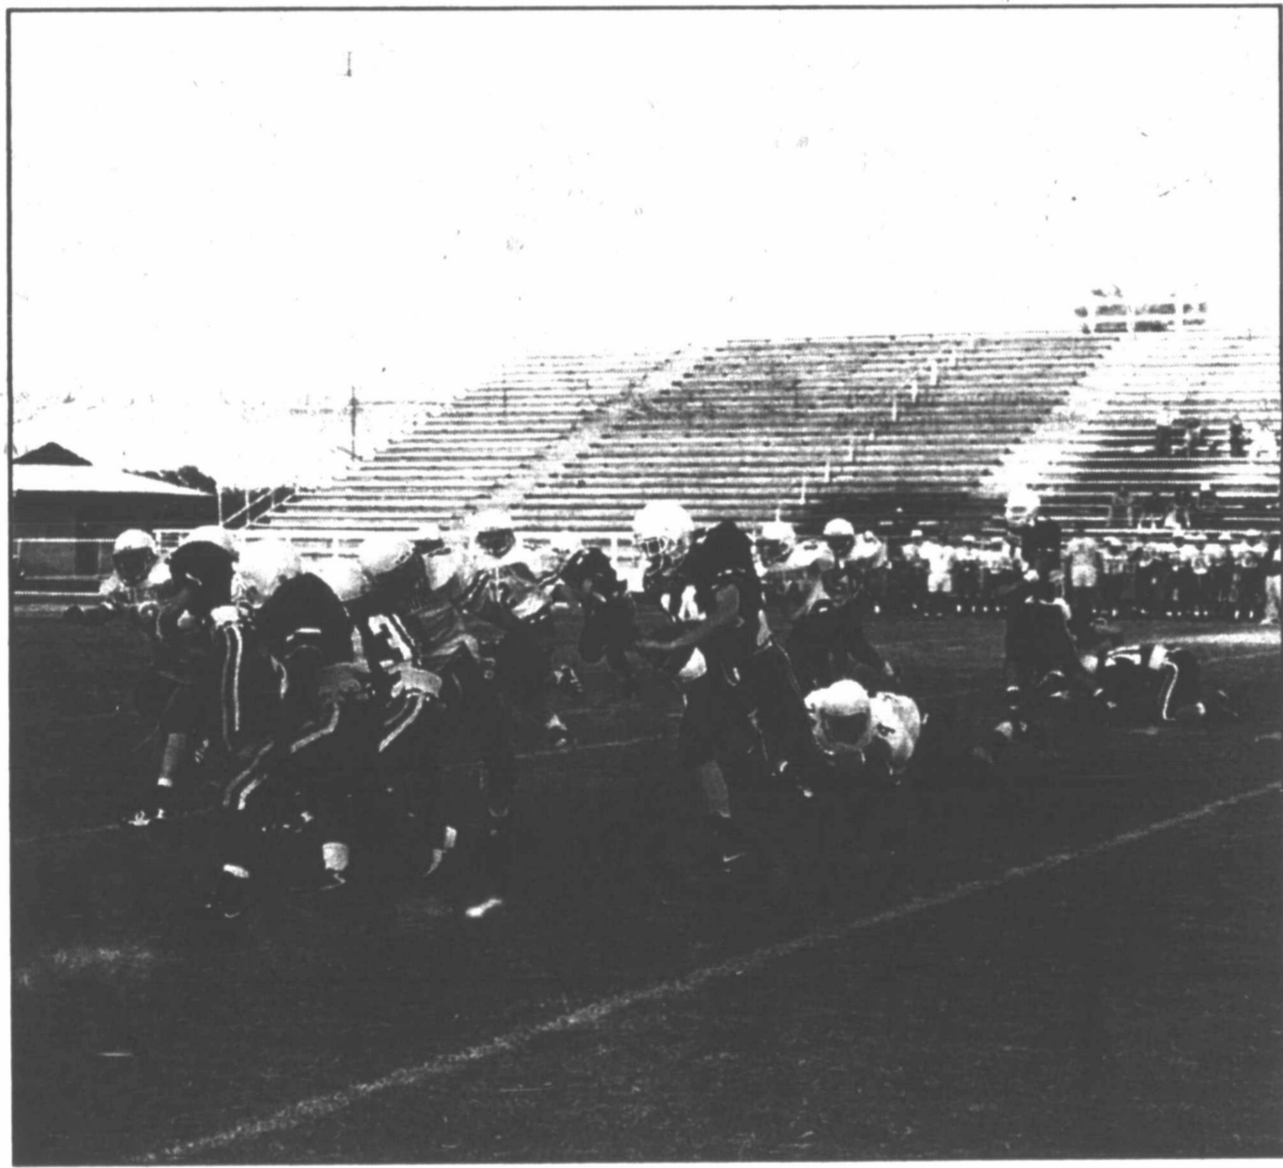

A&M Commerce (0-2) led the entire game, compiling a 17-0 advantage at one point.

Ronnie Humphrey's five-yard run and a David Dell kick put A&M Commerce on the board, 7-0.

Dell added another extra point after quarterback Clint Clayton's 27-yard pass to K. Harrison at the end of the first quarter.

He sealed A&M Commerce's first-half domination with two field goals — one for 32 yards, the other for 31 yards — just before the end of the half.

The Savages (1-1) finally scored with help from Chris Kuykendall, who ran a kickoff return 80 yards. Nuber added the extra point with about 4 1/2 minutes in the second quarter left.

TOTTA holds cycle contest at McClellan

Top of Texas Trials Association started its new competition season recently at Lake McClellan. Riders from as far away as Albuquerque, N.M., came to participate.

Riders are judged on their skill to maneuver over logs, rock, small trees or any other obstacles. Points are scored each time a rider puts a foot on the ground or their motorcycle just happens to die or go out of control. Riders are put into different classes according to their skill levels.

Morning riders start in the Rookie Class then move into the Novice Class. After the Novice Class, riders move into the Amateur Class. As skill levels increase, riders advance to the afternoon classes. These classes are the Intermediate, Expert and Masters.

First time rider from New Mexico Barry Brooks captured first place in the Rookie Class.

In the Novice Class, Bill Stephens of Pampa came in first. Johnny Doan of Skellytown came in a close second. Tommy Hayes of Lubbock came in third.

Thirteen-year-old Kevin Youree of Pampa captured his first Amateur crown by having his best ride ever. Second was won by Mark Williams of Pampa. Tim Brooks of New Mexico came in third.

In the Intermediate Class, Pody Hinds and Butch Noble, both of Pampa, received first and second places.

Quint Anderson of Lubbock narrowly beat out Robert Yearwood of Memphis to claim the Expert division.

Lance Butler of New Mexico took first place in the Master Class.

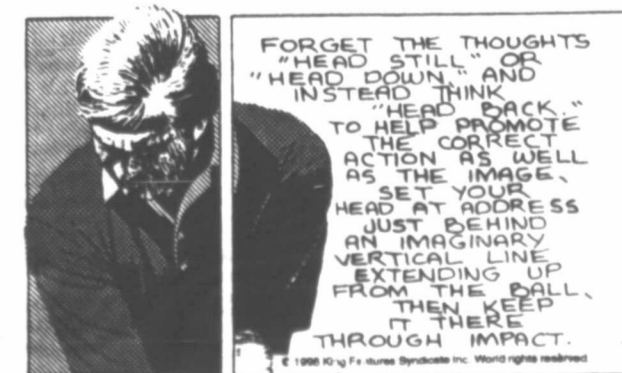

TOTTA's next event will be held Oct. 11 at Lake McClellan.
