FORT WORTH (AP) — Fort Worth school officials have fired the driver of a school bus where middle-school students allegedly brawled and sexually abused female classmates.

Cynthia Fowler was suspended after officials viewed security camera video of Forest Oak Middle School students punching, groping and simulating sex acts with other students on the bus.

Ms. Fowler, a driver with the district since 1996, complained only after some children hurled rocks and football-size chunks of dirt and grass into the vehicle after leaving at a bus stop.

Memory Gardens sold New mausoleum will be built

Don McLaughlin, the general manager of Memory Gardens Cemetery, shows where a new, interior mausoleum will be built.

"Without a doubt, this will be the finest mausoleum in this northern area of Texas," said Charlie Rouse.

"Our company is known for upgrading services," said Dewey Akers.

"We're the keepers of the memories of these families," said Don McLaughlin.

With great expectations and plans to upgrade Memory Gardens Cemetery with a new, interior mausoleum, three members of Saber Management sat down last week to discuss their goals and projections for the grounds.

McLaughlin, the new vice-president and general manager of Memory Gardens Cemetery, moved into town this month from Jacksonville, Florida.

The Illinois-based company's Vice President of Sales, Charlie Rouse, and Vice President of Operations Dewey Akers, were also in town last week overseeing the company's newest acquisition.

The officials for the year-old company say Pampa's Memory Gardens Cemetery is Saber Management's second cemetery purchase.

Typographical error gets man off hook in drug case

By KATE B. DICKSON
Associate Publisher

After a not guilty plea was entered and a jury sworn, drug charges against a Pampa man had to be dismissed when it was discovered, due to a typing error, that he had been charged with the wrong crime.

District Attorney John Mann said Shannon Harris should have been charged with a felony cocaine offense, but instead the paperwork coming from his office was incorrect. It reflected a methamphetamine charge.

Mann said the charge had to be dropped and Harris can't be tried on the cocaine charge. He said once a plea is entered "jeopardy attaches." To bring the case back before the court would be tantamount to trying Harris twice for the same charge — something that is not legal.

In a Sunday column in The Pampa News, it was written the case was halted because deputy prosecutor Matt Martindale, who was handling the case, had represented Harris when the man was a juvenile.

Mann said while it is true Martindale had represented Harris, that fact was not sufficient to keep Martindale off the case unless the deputy prosecutor was using knowledge from his defense representation against Harris.

After Harris' arrest, Mann said evidence confiscated was sent for analysis that revealed two substances — methamphetamine and cocaine. The amount of methamphetamine found was a misdemeanor amount, while the amount of cocaine found constituted a felony.

"The case had to be dismissed because my office messed up the paperwork," Mann told The Pampa News. "This kind of thing has happened before but it's the first time it's happened to me ... but I take full responsibility for the error."

Christmas light project work to begin

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY

Christmas comes early in Pampa out of sheer necessity for Celebration of Lights volunteers.

The handful of artists and welders are meeting in Recreation Park this Saturday to begin setting up the displays that will light up the park again for the 1998 holiday season.

"Last year we ran into several weekends of freezing weather and we didn't have help putting up the park," said Kathleen Chaney, one of the group's founding members.

To avoid setting up the entire park in the chillier days of late November, the volunteers are beginning Saturday, October 3 at 9:30 a.m. The big frame metal pieces will be staked down, said Chaney.

Community members are being asked to bring work gloves, hammers, cordless screwdrivers, "and any equipment they bring needs to be labeled," Chaney said.

Money made real in teacher's class

Free, who was nominated and won the PISD 1998 Middle School Teacher of the Year award, invites Powers into the world of Eagle Inc.

She creates a universe where students earn their own "eagle" dollars when they turn their work in on time. They then must maintain a checking account, fill out deposit slips, pay rent, and deal with fines ranging from "speeding" in the halls, to being a "public nuisance."

This is where Powers comes in; he decides their fate.

"And some of them have pretty hefty fines," Free said.

By the end of the year, her students have used their "money" to pay for first or second class seats on the bus during field trips, to purchase items at the "eagle store," and to learn the thing that most

'Round up' on S. Wells a success

There's no reason to wait until the cows come home anymore, they made it last night.

Yesterday afternoon some residents in the 1000 block of South Wells were surprised to see two cows slowly moseying down the street, wandering from yard to yard and seeing the sights.

David McKnight said he heard a noise and looked out his front door to see a cow standing on his porch looking in. He went out and saw another behind the first just wandering with a sheriff's deputy slowly following behind.

Deputy Sana Alexander had followed the cows from the Gas Man service station trying to keep them off the road. She said they finally ran into a back yard of a vacant house in the 1000 block of South Nelson.

Because school was about to (See ROUND UP, Page 2)

construct wooden and metal displays for Recreation Park.

At least one day a week volunteers meet at a Price Road warehouse, owned by and courtesy of Rep. Warren Chisum, to prepare the Christmas decor that makes Recreation Park a sight worth seeing during the holidays.

Although the group has about 12 volunteers in total, it is rare occasion when all members are available at the same time to work on the project, said Chaney.

The group is seeking more helping hands this holiday season.

Local artisans are particularly being sought out to help paint a realistic "Noah's Ark" display that is in the works.

Chaney said she expects it will take a total of six weekends to set up the displays in Recreation Park to complete the project this year. For more information, interested volunteers can call 669-2454.

adults are still learning how to do: manage money. It's a lesson Free teaches her math students while trying to keep her kids motivated, something she said is the hardest thing about teaching.

"Some are naturally motivated, and some are not. I wish I could do more to get them where they want to be motivated," she said.

Particularly in math, said Free.

"You have to show them the need to use math."

She teaches them the importance of learning, of asking questions and the "relevancy" of it.

"Tell me where you're not going to use math," she says she will tell her students.

Making math important to her students in turn makes math important to her. She said she's not afraid to admit to her students when she doesn't have all the answers, emphasizing to them that no one ever has to stop learning.

Cheryl Free grew up in Pampa. A teaching career was "probably in the back of her mind," she said, but it wasn't until later on in life that she took a semester of college and decided teaching was for her.

Free's favorite part of the job is the kids.

"I think if you're not teaching to be teaching for the kids, you shouldn't be here," she said. "I think they give me more than I give them. They give me hope for the future. They give me joy."

When asked what her advice to new teachers would be, she said they must be willing to put in extra time and care for the students.

"Be willing to try different things. You can't be stuck in one teaching mode. If something doesn't work, try something else."

High court moves to open its records

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has issued proposed rules that would open virtually all administrative documents — travel expense records to appointment calendars — kept by state courts.

Chief Justice Tom Phillips said the draft rules, to be reviewed in a public hearing next week, would open judges' telephone records to public inspection.

The state's highest civil court last year overruled an opinion by Attorney General Dan Morales that would have required release of telephone records.

The rules issued Tuesday would prevent release of draft opinions and internal memos on court rules and procedures. But they would subject to public scrutiny travel and expense records, visitor logs and judges' personal and business appointment calendars.

Murder charges filed against carnival operators

AUSTIN (AP) — In what could be unprecedented for the amusement ride industry, nine company executives face murder charges after a teen-age girl was thrown from a carnival ride.

A Travis County grand jury on Tuesday indicted owners, employees and associates of B&B Amusements. The Arizona-based company owned the Himalaya ride on which Leslie Lane was killed at the Austin-Travis County Livestock Show and Rodeo.

"The grand jury believes that a company like B&B cannot come into this community and, for profit, expose our citizens to the hazards of that ride," Rosemary Lehmsberg, first assistant district attorney, told the Austin American-Statesman.

"Not only the people who operated the ride that night, but the inspectors and the owners are responsible for the death of this child," Ms. Lehmsberg said.

WT alumni announce Buff event

CANYON — Feeling a little nostalgic for college days or wishing for time to catch up with friends? Make plans now to attend West Texas A&M University's Homecoming. WTAMU alumni and friends are invited to link up with other Buffs Friday, Oct. 2 and Saturday, Oct. 3.

"It's one of the most important activities in the annual University calendar," M. Keith Brown, director of alumni relations, said. "It's an opportunity for alumni and friends of the University to come reconnect with their alma mater."

Traditional events kick off Friday afternoon with the Homecoming Golf Tournament. Later that day, the Alumni Association will host an open house and reception in Buffalo Courts for members of the classes of 1948, 1973 and 1988. Graduates from the classes of 1928 and 1938 will also be honored. Graduates, students, staff, faculty and community members are invited to the Homecoming Pigskin Revue, Bonfire and Dance.

On Saturday, University and Alumni Association news and updates will be on the agenda at the annual Alumni Association Breakfast and Meeting. Alumni are invited to revive old college memories at the Homecoming Parade, refuel at the Homecoming Barbecue, tour new campus spots like the Hastings Electronic Learning Center and review WTAMU's past at the History Buff Lecture. WTAMU will wrap up Homecoming activities at the football game against the Angelo State University Rams Saturday night. A victory dance is planned following the game.

Stocker cattle workshop series set

AMARILLO — With moisture short and pastures in decline, the question on the minds of many beef cattle producers right now is how they will take their stocker cattle through the winter and keep them healthy. Dr. F.T. "Ted" McCollum, beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will be presenting in-depth information and tips for stocker cattle survival in a three-part workshop series slated Oct. 5, 20 and Nov. 3 at Hemphill County Exhibition Building in Canadian. Each meeting will begin with a meal at 6:30 p.m. followed by a two-hour program beginning at 7 p.m.

Workshops will include:
—Oct. 5 — Utilization of alternative feeds as supplements for stocker cattle; comparison of the value of added weight gain with the cost of added gain; use of implants and feed additives;

—Oct. 20 — Optimizing performance of cattle grazing wheat pasture;

—Nov. 3 — Management programs for stocker cattle on grass focusing on nutritional management during winter and summer months.

All panhandle area producers are encouraged to attend. The series is sponsored by TAES and is being hosted by Hemphill, Lipscomb, Hutchinson, Ochiltree and Hansford Counties.

White Deer Land Museum exhibit

Mary Fathree, former White Deer Land Museum Advisory Board President, stands beside a custom made display case holding artifacts from Fort Elliot. Three custom made cases were built with grant funds from the Texas Economic Excellence Program sponsored by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The three cases are on display in the Gallery of the White Deer Land Museum and were shown to the public for the first time on Aug. 29, 1998 at the Gala Street Dance. The museum is open to the public from 1-4 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Square House presents Halbert exhibit

AMARILLO — One of Amarillo's newest attractions is the subject of George Halbert's photographic exhibit "Wildcat Bluff: Focus on Preservation" at the Square House Museum in Panhandle. The exhibit may be viewed through the end of October in the Opal Weatherly Purvines gallery in the Square House, located at the intersection of TX Hwy. 207 and Fifth Street in Panhandle.

The Wildcat Bluff Nature Center was established in 1993, the gift of Carol Bush Emery. It consists of one section of land in northwest Amarillo, on the west side of Soncy Road. West Amarillo Creek flows through the property, passing by the base of Wildcat Bluff.

George Halbert of Amarillo, an original Board member of the Center, has spent several years photodocumenting the area. His 3" x 9" black-and-white panoramic photographs capture the beauty of the broken terrain and varied vegetation, as well as remnants from the days when the property was part of the Frying Pan Ranch.

Halbert's compelling love of nature has influenced his development as a photographer. His first major encounter which combined the study of nature and photography was in 1973 when he hiked across Big Bend National Park. He has conducted photographic "expeditions" into the Four Corners region of the American Southwest and to various localities in Africa. He uses the camera both as a recording device and as his artistic medium.

Admission to the museum is free; donations are accepted. For more information on the Wildcat Bluff Nature Center, call (806) 352-6007.

TPMHA to offer 'Back In Control' parenting class

AMARILLO — Having an adolescent who is out-of-control — a child who wrecks havoc at home, in school, or in the community can be a nightmare for the parents, teachers and other adults who live and/or work with such a youth. Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority Child & Adolescent Services is offering "Back In Control" parenting class for parents of adolescents from 8:15 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Oct. 3 at TPMHA Administration Building, 1500 S. Taylor, Amarillo. Certificates of achievement will be presented at the end of the class.

Back In Control was written by Gregory Bodenhamer, a former juvenile probation officer. TPMHA Child and Adolescent staff, Stacy Sandorsky, BS, and Amanda Killian, BSW, are the instructors. The curriculum is hard-hitting yet compassionate.

Gene Ann Grant, TPMHA Family and Community Education director, reports that Bodenhamer, a nationally renowned expert on childhood behavior problems, draws on over 20 years experience working with difficult children between the ages of 12 and 17. The class will cover a wide range of problems — whether a teen is simply ignoring household rules, or perhaps lying, or stealing — to more harmful problems such as drug and alcohol abuse or unsafe sexual activities. Parents will learn how to avoid potentially explosive situations, ways to use tested solutions to averting immediate danger and preventing these behaviors from happening again.

Cost of the class is $15 — $5 for the class materials and $10 for the book. This class is for anyone who has an adolescent in the home or classroom. Pre-registration is required.

For more information, call (806) 354-2191.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:
 Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Mexican massacre:
 The image of a river of blood in a Mexican neighborhood was horrible. At 4:30 a.m. Thursday, 18 people — nine adults, two teen-agers, six children and a baby — were pulled from their beds, lined up against a wall and slaughtered by gunmen using assault rifles, shotguns and small arms.
 Mexican authorities initially said they couldn't be sure that the massacre in El Sauzal, a suburb of Ensenada, was related to increasing drug-related violence. But it certainly looked like it.
 Ensenada is a popular Baja California resort a 90-minute drive south of San Diego. A drug gang led by the Arellano Felix brothers is based in Tijuana, across the border from San Diego. Initial reports said a victim of the El Sauzal massacre grew marijuana for the powerful brothers.
 Known for their past violence, the Arellano Felix brothers are suspected in the slaying of drug rival Rafael Munoz Talavera, who was recently found fatally shot in the Texas-Mexico border city of Juarez, across from El Paso.
 The horror of these slayings causes us to recoil, to ask how anyone could do such terrible things. We muster little emotion when a known drug dealer is slain in an apparent turf battle with another known drug dealer. We read with little passion about bodies of drug runners showing up outside border towns, apparently killed because of a discrepancy in the amount of drugs or money they were supposed to deliver. But whole families pulled from their beds and ruthlessly murdered?
 People in the United States can't solve murders in Mexico. But it is important that they realize this: Drug wars south of the border are not a fight over drugs. They are a fight over the money that so many Americans are willing to pay so they can use drugs. These drug users have blood on their hands.

The Dallas Morning News on Kosovo crisis:
 A great humanitarian catastrophe is forming in the Serbian province of Kosovo. Serb army and police attacks against the more than 90 percent of Kosovars who are ethnic Albanians have created a swell of refugees who lack food, shelter, clothing and other necessities. This is occurring while the chill Balkan autumn is beginning to announce the onset of another nasty winter. Unless more is done to mitigate the tragedy, tens of thousands of people could die of starvation, exposure and disease. The United States and the other big powers must not allow this to happen.
 President Clinton (and President George Bush before him) warned Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic of serious consequences if he attacked Kosovo. A lot of good that did. Mr. Milosevic loosed his armies anyway, making refugees of at least one-fifth of Kosovo's population of 2.1 million. For all the West's determination to prevent another Bosnia, that is exactly what it has, complete with ethnic cleansing, atrocities against civilians and hordes of ragged, terrified and shivering Kosovar refugees living in the open air.
 In the short term, humanitarian organizations should increase their assistance to the estimated 400,000 refugees in Kosovo, the Yugoslav republic of Montenegro and the independent states of Albania and Macedonia. At present, only about 1 in 5 of those refugees receives assistance, largely because Serb authorities are blocking aid.
 If the concept is not too discredited by the debacle of Bosnia, the United Nations Security Council should consider establishing "safe havens" in Kosovo where refugees could be fed and housed without fear of Serbian attack. But it should do so only if the big powers are truly prepared to defend them. As the world learned at Srebrenica and other Bosnian safe havens, grouping thousands of people in a small area without the intention to repel aggressors can be a recipe for massive slaughter.
 In the long term, the Serbian siege can probably be broken only by a combination of Western diplomatic and military muscle. A surgical bombing campaign against Serb military targets would not be "mission creep" as people have come to understand the term since the Vietnam War but enforcement of the warnings of Presidents Clinton and Bush not to expand the Balkans conflict. North Atlantic Treaty Organization warplanes stopped the Bosnian Serb genocide; they could stop Serbian oppression in Kosovo. The United States, whose leadership is indispensable in the matter, cannot sit idly by while Serb soldiers carry out Mr. Milosevic's violently expansionist plan. Many innocent lives are at stake.

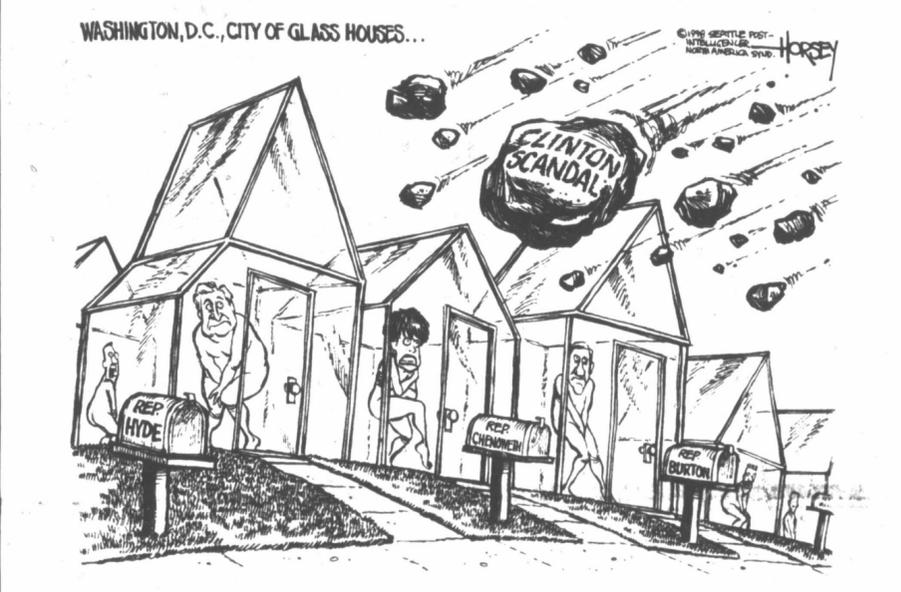

So now we have from President Clinton's own mouth his justification for lying, under oath, in the Paula Jones case. He told the grand jury that since he regarded the Jones team as political enemies who were bent on hurting him, he owed no obligation to tell the truth. Funny, it sounds exactly like his rationalization for taking illegal campaign contributions in 1996. If he lost the election, he explained, the Republicans would dismantle Medicare, cripple education and pollute the waters. This is known as "the end justifies the means" — and people who seriously reason this way are dangerous.
 From the Clinton scandals, only one of two outcomes is possible. Either this will be remembered as the time when the let-it-all-hang-out morality of the 1960s was finally repudiated, or it will be recalled as the moment when that morality triumphed. If this president is not disgraced, he will be rehabilitated, and his rehabilitation will serve to ratify lying and polymorphous immorality.
 At this moment, it is hard to imagine Bill Clinton's reclamation. But it could easily happen. All of the habits and traditions of the nation will flow in that direction. When the president delivers the State of the Union message in January, the entire honor guard of American government will rise to its feet in extended tribute. It is simply impossible to imagine a more nuanced reception — namely polite applause lasting perhaps 30 seconds and no more. Members of Congress cannot so finely calibrate their responses. This is the '90s after all, not Edith Wharton's America.
 The office implies moral rectitude, and it is a national reflex to offer obeisance to it. When the president presents an initiative on drugs or illegitimacy or tobacco, or when he appoints people to serve in government or threatens a foreign power, his imprimatur is heavily weighted. In contrast to the argument now advanced by the White House, morality is fundamental to everything a president does.

Mona Charen

 Seven Boy Scouts from Utah have announced that they do not wish to see this president's signature on their Eagle Scout certificates (a tribute to the uprightness of Utah and the Boy Scouts), but if the president holds office six months from today, the simple performance of such tasks — to say nothing of larger ones like bombing terrorists — will lull the nation into comfort with his tawdriness.
 Aristotle spoke of the "habits of virtue" because he understood that the mere repetition of immoral acts corrupts the soul. It is no different with an electorate. If the president performs his functions day to day, most people will very rapidly forget what all the fuss was about. In fact, it is virtually certain that if President

Clinton is not removed from office, personal morality (all of it) will be deemed irrelevant to presidential fitness.
 In the Weekly Standard, David Frum offers the crucial insight that Richard Nixon was not impeached because he was disgraced; he was disgraced because he was impeached. (He resigned before trial.)
 The decision by the Republican majority to release President Clinton's videotaped testimony before the grand jury has been decried by Democrats as nothing more than an attempt to shame and humiliate Clinton. Not exactly. It is clearly impossible to shame this president. Any normal man would have resigned long ago rather than face the humiliation of the Starr Report. No, the hope is not that President Clinton will be shamed but rather that the inertial electorate will finally bestir itself and shake him off. Members of Congress who know their duty but continue to shoot nervous glances at opinion polls hope that videotape is mightier than the printed word.
 If the process of impeachment is thwarted, by a deal or by anything short of resignation, the principle that presidents may with impunity hold the electorate and the law in contempt will be established. Are the 56 percent of Americans who want Clinton to serve out his term unmindful of the precedential effect? What will the next "private" sin be? Do we want perjurers, extortionists and thieves to believe the electorate doesn't care about character?
 Republicans and the press are united, for once, in believing this man to be unworthy. That alone ought to make the voters take notice.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
 Today is Wednesday, Sept. 30, the 273rd day of 1998. There are 92 days left in the year.
 Today's Highlight in History:
 On Sept. 30, 1938, British, French, German and Italian leaders decided to appease Adolf Hitler by allowing Nazi annexation of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.
 On this date:
 In 1791, Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" premiered in Vienna, Austria.
 In 1846, dentist William Morton used ether as an anesthetic for the first time on a patient in his Boston office.
 In 1927, Babe Ruth hit his 60th homer of the season to break his own major league record.
 In 1939, the first college football game to be televised was shown on experimental station W2XBS in New York as Fordham University defeated Waynesburg College, 34-7.
 In 1949, the Berlin Airlift came to an end.
 In 1952, the motion picture "This Is Cinerama," which introduced the widescreen Cinerama process, premiered at the Broadway Theatre in New York.

Scholars debate Holocaust

Did Christianity cause the Holocaust? That is the question four scholars considered at Washington's Ethics and Public Policy Center (www.eppc.org) recently. It is a subject more brooded upon than openly discussed outside of academia, so it's interesting to get a glimpse at the scholarly analysis.
 Professor Stephen Aschheim, a historian from Jerusalem's Hebrew University, began by observing that nearly everything that preceded the Holocaust has been blamed for it. German romanticism, the counter-enlightenment, the supposedly peculiarly vicious form of German anti-Semitism, modernity, racism and, of course, Christianity, have taken their share of blame. But Aschheim is scornful of books with titles like "From Luther to Hitler," which make a simple leap from Christian anti-Jewish outbursts and calumnies to genocidal Nazism.
 Continuity is not causation, Aschheim cautioned. Racism, for example, is always pernicious, but rarely genocidal. If Christianity were the cause of the Holocaust, one must explain why during 2,000 years of Christian rule in Europe, there was no Holocaust. There was bitter persecution, to be sure. Nearly every Nazi persecution of the Jews — including the Nuremberg laws, but not the "final solution" — had its parallel in earlier Christian oppression.
 The Christian churches are still coming to grips with their own moral failure during the Weimar Republic and Nazi period. (One example: The Catholic and Protestant churches were vocal and decisive in fighting euthanasia in Weimar Germany. Yet, with some laudable exceptions, they remained silent in the face of the mounting anti-Semitic campaign of the Nazis.)
 The Holocaust was not perpetrated by the Church,

Mona Charen
 Syndicated columnist

nor the four scholars agreed, could it possibly have been. For while the Christian hatred and contempt for Jews was at times extreme during the Medieval period and afterward, the Christian faith is a moral one. Jews themselves understood this, and took refuge from murderous mobs in the homes of bishops and popes.
 Though there were local priests who incited mob violence against Jews, and certainly local Christian police who looked the other way, it was never the message of the Church to kill Jews. As Aschheim so succinctly stated it: "The aim of the Church was to convert the Jew. That was the worst nightmare of the Nazi."
 Still, these threads of causation are tangled and quite difficult to tease apart. Aschheim, while not accepting the view that Christianity caused the Holocaust, does not shrink from indicting Christian churches for creating the climate in which the more virulent and vicious seeds of Nazi racism could grow. As Professor Steven Katz, another of the scholars present, framed the question, "Why did the Nazis choose the Jews as the paradigm of the other?"

Katz's answer is this: The Nazis understood that centuries of Christian anti-Judaism had prepared the ground for Nazi anti-Semitism. He argues that while you do not get to Auschwitz from the New Testament, you cannot get there without it, either.
 The Rev. J. Augustine Di Noia, executive director of the Secretariat for Doctrine and Pastoral Practices of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, did not disagree. The Catholic Church has been examining its teaching and practices regarding the Jews since 1945, and has dramatically altered both. Particularly under the leadership of Pope John Paul II, the Church has repealed its old view of the Judaism as a fossil religion, totally supplanted by Christianity, and now recognizes the Jews' continuing covenant with the Almighty. Di Noia spoke affectingly of the folly of the deicide charge, explaining that to blame anyone for Christ's death is to excuse oneself and thus remove oneself from the salvation his sacrifice promises.
 Professor David Steinmetz of the Duke University Divinity School is an expert on Luther. On the occasion of the 500th anniversary of his birth, Steinmetz received many calls from journalists asking whether Luther was an anti-Semite. "The answer is yes," said Steinmetz, "Luther wrote repulsive things about the Jews, of which the Nazis made use. But he was not a Nazi."
 The specter of the Nazi genocide — the killing, as Aschheim put it, "of civilized victims by civilized murderers" — continues to haunt us. It presents a particular challenge to Christians. But it is heartening to see that Christian churches and Christian scholars are taking the challenge to heart.

Confiscation without compensation

Bobby Unser, three-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, went snowmobiling with a friend in New Mexico. They were caught in a blizzard that created a whiteout and were forced to spend the night in a snow cave and trek 18 miles the next morning to find help. Both were hospitalized.
 Unser was charged by the U.S. Forest Service with illegally taking his snowmobile into a federally designated wilderness area. He faced a fine of $5,000 or six months in prison. Now Unser had not gone snowmobiling in the wilderness area. He had gone in a national park open to snowmobiles.
 If he went into the wilderness area — his snowmobile had not been found — it was purely an accident while he was trying to save his life in the zero-visibility blizzard. Yet the U.S. government has spent more than $600,000 trying to convict Unser.
 That's why people don't trust their government anymore. That's why Unser wrote the introduction to the "National Directory of Environmental and Regulatory Victims," published by the National Center for Public Policy Research. It is a record of injustice and government insanity.
 For example, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration ordered state road workers to wear long pants in the middle of a heat wave because they were dealing with hot tar, as if experienced road builders didn't know that. After several collapsed from heat exhaustion in the long pants, a congressman finally intervened.

Charley Reese

 But the stories of people deprived of their life savings by federal bureaucrats abusing the Endangered Species Act are tragic, not amusing. What these bureaucrats, egged on by environmental extremists, do is designate private property as the habitat of some bug or bird or animal, thus depriving the owner of any use of his or her property without compensation. Thousands of people lost their jobs over the spotted owl.
 Another trick federal bureaucrats use is wetlands. Let some bureaucrat declare your property a wetland and you are effectively robbed of your property — without compensation. This is unjust. This is tyranny. Since when does property, often owned for decades, suddenly become U.S. property if some bureaucrat says the water doesn't drain off of it fast enough?

The political problem is this: There are more renters and folks living in urban areas where they generally don't run into this kind of nonsense than there are property owners who get victimized. So, as people do when it isn't their ox being gored, they don't support the property owners who are isolated and then picked off by the bureaucrats.
 That's a dangerous indifference. The principle of the right to own and use property is the foundation of all other human rights. The principle of destroying private property rights so that all live at the mercy of the government is the foundation of all tyrannies.
 It is only by acquiring and using private property that a human being can become economically independent — and, thus, politically independent. Slaves and serfs, dependent on the landowners for subsistence, cannot afford to complain or to assert their rights. That's why the basic plank of communism is to eliminate private property. Because the state controls all property, everyone in a communist country lives by permission of the state.
 That's why people in the streets and in the burbs ought to be protective of property rights. Property rights are the foundation of human rights and political freedoms. It seems to me it's just kindergarten-level political philosophy not to tolerate the government confiscating private property without compensation.

MEMORY

because we didn't care for how others did business. We wanted to serve families the proper way," said Akers.

The 432-crypt mausoleum the men have planned for Pampa will be built within four years of the first sale, and must be completely constructed within five years, under a purchase contract. But the administrators said their goal is to have it completed in three years.

Saber's track record indicates that these men do exactly what they say they will.

The company, with its home offices in Indianapolis, purchased a small, Illinois community cemetery last year. Within 90 days, the cemetery was renovated and cleaned up. And on Memorial Day, the cemetery saw 2,500 visitors who came in to see the changes.

Rouse said they polled the citizens to ask what more they would like to see at the cemetery, and the community response overwhelmingly was to "keep on doing what you're doing," he said.

The indoor mausoleum will be heated in the winter, cooled in the summer. Family members will have their own key to the building so that they may enter at their leisure — even after hours.

Instead of standing outside in severe temperatures for the committal services, loved ones can hold services inside the mausoleum. Tables and chairs will be located inside for the comfort of visiting family members.

There will be a special wall dedicated specifically for veterans. The outside of the building will also have crypts as well as cremation niches.

After this initial mausoleum is built in the open area to the north of the cemetery, the company has plans to build several "garden buildings," or exterior mausoleum buildings.

The Saber administrators said that interior mausoleums are the trend for cemeteries today, and all three confirmed that mausoleum crypts are basically the same price as garden lawn plots, if not less expensive.

The "Gibraltar" construction company, a well-known name in the cemetery construction business, will be coming to Pampa to construct the mausoleum. This is the same company who built the 4,000-crypt mausoleum in Amarillo, said Rouse.

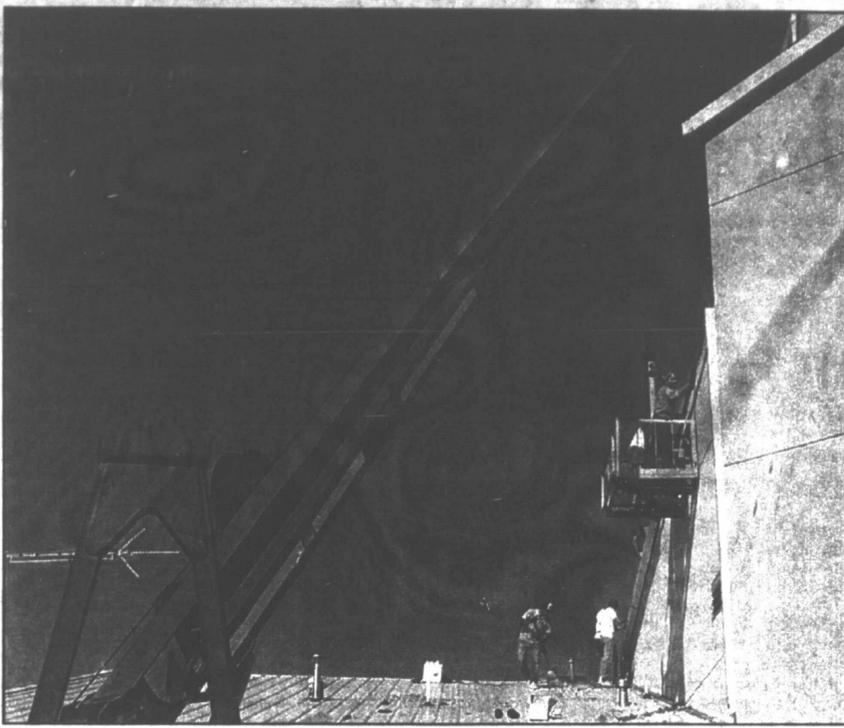

He added that a Pampa resident in the funeral business was impressed when he heard that Gibraltar would be constructing the site.

In addition to the new mausoleum, Saber Management intends to upgrade the cemetery's services by making sure that a company representative is present at all services.

A top-of-the-line computer program is being installed which will provide detailed information about the people buried there.

"The main thing is that this system can print out a complete history ... it's good for genealogy purposes," according to Rouse.

General renovations and clean-up to the current buildings on the grounds will also begin in approximately six months.

Hog farm neighbors voice concerns to committee

WOODWARD, Okla. (AP) — Northwest Oklahoma residents living near hog farms want more regulations of the industry, which some say have affected their quality of life.

About 100 people packed a votech auditorium Monday to call for more regulations of the industry. Some told a special state Agriculture Department rules committee that it should be required for farms to have a leak-detection systems under the hog lagoons that capture manure coming from huge pig barns.

The systems would detect wastewater leaking from the lagoons before it seeps into the groundwater.

Some of the attendees said they feared any regulations created would not take into account the sandy soils that prevail, particularly along the beds of the Cimarron and North Canadian rivers.

Neighbors also expressed concern that longtime cattle rancher Paul Hitch, who now raises hogs, is a voting member of the Oklahoma Board of Agriculture.

Hitch often votes on items dealing with Seaboard Farms Inc., even though he rents facilities to the corporation and contracts to raise hogs for the company.

Seaboard is the largest agriculture-related corporation in Oklahoma.

"I can't understand how anybody thinks that deal is right," said Bill Carnagy, whose family lives in Ellis County.

Several people did speak in favor of the hog industry, saying it has been the best thing to happen to northwest Oklahoma and the Panhandle in decades.

Fred Little, a farmer who lives near Rosston, said Kronseder Farms Inc. and Pig Improvement Co. are among the state's major taxpayers.

He also noted that Mooreland School District's biggest source of revenue is Kronseder. Kronseder's placement on the tax rolls increased the district's valuation for tax purposes by one-fourth, Superintendent Terry Kellner said recently.

His son, Doug, said if it weren't for the hog industry, he would not be able to remain in Oklahoma.

"People who think we'll do something to destroy the air and water don't have the facts," Doug Little said.

But the neighbors complain that the industry has affected their lives and lowered property values on land their families have owned for generations.

Rules committee member Michelle Stephens said Monday it was evident that many people's main concern still is the odor problem.

Beaver County resident Earl Mitchell said there is no reason the hogs have to smell so bad. His family has raised about 100 sows at a time for the past 39 years, and has fed the hogs special enzymes to curb the odors, he said.

"Our hog operation was never the magnitude of the corporations," Mitchell said. "But we've had many friends who say they hardly smell our pigs."

Mitchell, however, is getting out of the business. He said he cannot compete with the large hog producers any longer.

Former Pampa resident Markos Antonio Mendoza was convicted of aggravated robbery in the murder and robbery of a Hutchinson County man.

The jury sentenced Mendoza yesterday to 18 years after a trial held in Panhandle on a charge of venue.

According to Clay Ballman, district attorney for the 84th Judicial District, Mendoza had sold drugs to George Hunter of Hutchinson County but one deal went bad.

Mendoza planned the murder and robbery of Hunter who was found dead in September 1995, Ballman said. It wasn't until the following summer that the sheriff's office got a break in the case and discovered that Mendoza had driven Tommy Dominguez and Rene Seger to Hunter's house. Seger testified that she and Dominguez shared some cocaine with Hunter and then beat and stabbed Hunter to death and robbed him of about $900.

When they left the house, according to Ballman, the two took some knives and a brass dolphin they had used to beat Hunter with. Mendoza picked up the evidence and had a friend of Seger's throw the items into the Canadian River.

Police got a tip that led to the recovery of the murder weapons, some credit cards and drivers license from the victim and some clothing that had blood on it.

Some of that blood tied Dominguez to the murder. He was sentenced to life in an earlier trial. Seger agreed to testify in exchange for a 20-year sentence for her part in the murder. She testified in the trial against Mendoza.

Ballman had tried to get a murder conviction against Mendoza as well but the jury voted to convict only on the aggravated robbery charge.

"I think the jury had difficulty with a harsher sentence since he did not actually go into the house and do the actual killing," Ballman said.

All three have been in jail since June 1996.

Fire forces Gateway Arch closure for month

ST. LOUIS (AP) — An electrical fire forced the closing of St. Louis' biggest tourist attraction, the Gateway Arch, for at least a month.

Signs were posted around the arch on Tuesday, a day after the small fire damaged the 1960s landmark that accommodates more than 4 million visitors a year.

The fire started while workers were installing an electrical panel. It knocked out the system that powers the entire Jefferson National Expansion Memorial complex, which includes an underground museum as well as the 630-foot arch that overlooks the Mississippi River downtown.

Two workers suffered minor burns and were treated overnight at a hospital. Nine others suffered assorted minor injuries, including smoke inhalation.

Democrats assail, vow to fight GOP farm aid proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle lines are drawn in the fight over how best to help America's ailing farmers, with Democratic farm state senators vowing to fight "as long as it takes" to increase a Republican-backed aid package.

"This battle is far from being over," declared Sen. Timothy Johnson, D-S.D.

Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., said Democrats would "fight like heck" against the $4.1 billion GOP plan.

Democrats said they will move to send the GOP proposal back to committee until Republicans add more money. "We will stay here as long as it takes," Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said. "This matter will be resolved."

Still, it is uncertain how successful the Democrats' efforts will be. They were unable to muster the votes to get their $7.3 billion farm aid proposal out of a House-Senate agriculture conference committee Monday night.

Instead, Republicans, negotiating the overall agricultural spending bill, kept their own plan despite the threat of a presidential veto.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, warned GOP leaders against increasing funding for the aid package.

"We ought to draw the line. We ought to say 'no more,'" Livingston said in the meeting Monday night. "The fact is, $4 billion is not a thimbleful of money."

Republicans have been adamantly opposed to the centerpiece of the Democratic aid package — a one-year boost in rates on commodity marketing loans that would trigger an estimated $5 billion in government payments to growers. Under the marketing loan program, farmers can either receive a payment for the difference between the selling price of their crop and the higher per-bushel loan rates, or they can borrow money at the per-bushel loan rate and repay it at the crop's lower value.

Republicans have charged that the proposal is an attempt to return to the days before the 1996 farm law when farm subsidies were tied to crop production. Some economists fear higher loan rates could lead to excess production and depressed prices.

The Republican package offers a mix of disaster relief and about $1.7 billion in direct payments to farmers. Farmers in the upper Midwest would get about $675 million to help with a series of crop failures over the past five years.

The government predicts farm income will drop nearly 16 percent this year to $42 billion as the agricultural economy suffers through its worst downturn in more than a decade.

Boy Scouts make youngsters lives little more well-rounded

(This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1998 "The Power of U" fund-raising campaign.)

The Pampa Boy Scouts program is administered by the Golden Spread Council, Boy Scouts of America, which assists over 200 community organizations chartered by the BSA in 26 counties of the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles. There are some 2,000 volunteers bringing scouting to approximately 6,000 youths involved in the Boy Scout programs.

The Boy Scout program is designed to prepare young people to make ethical life choices, thus achieving their full potential. The values instilled in the youths are based on the Boy Scout Oath and Law.

The program begins in the first grade when a boy and his adult partner may join Tiger Cubs. Beginning with the second grade, boys become Cub Scouts in a home-centered, family-oriented program. At age 11, the youth becomes a Boy Scout with a program based on outdoor skills and leadership training.

The high school age program is co-ed, with emphasis on careers and special interests as young adults prepare themselves for responsibilities in the world of work and adult life.

The Golden Spread Council maintains a Scout service center in Amarillo, with the administrative office and Scout supply shop providing a variety of scouting services for the organizations in the area. There is a full-time professional staff, clerical employees and a camp ranger who are employed to train, guide and provide program assistance and many other support services for the scouting volunteer organization.

The Council owns and maintains two camps, Camp Don Harrington, 12 miles south of Amarillo, and Camp M.K. Brown, located near Wheeler. These facilities provide scouting outdoor program opportunities year round. This past summer, approximately 1,500 Cub Scouts, Webelos and Boy Scouts participated in the various summer camping operations.

The Golden Spread Council is a member agency of 10 United Ways (including the Pampa United Way) which provide finances for nearly 30 percent of scouting support service needs. Currently, scouting is serving approximately 16 percent of the youth of scouting age in Pampa.

With the success of the current year's campaign, the Pampa United Way will provide funds to help continued support of scouting in the Pampa area. When contacted by your United Way representatives, please give generously so the scouting programs may continue to serve the youth in the community.

Clinton supporters drop plans for ad campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — A TV ad campaign attacking Republicans' handling of the Monica Lewinsky inquiry is still in the works, but it will air without the high-powered help of President Clinton's friends.

Under fire from congressional Democrats, the White House told its supporters Tuesday to send their money to congressional campaign committees — not the ad campaign headed by a liberal advocacy group.

And the president's chief of staff, Erskine Bowles, promised Democratic congressional leaders that the White House would help try to raise $1 million for the party's cash-starved candidates.

Both moves were designed to mollify Democratic lawmakers angered by plans of Clinton supporters outside the White House to raise up to $5 million for the anti-GOP ad campaign and other get-out-the-vote efforts.

Much of the money would have gone to the People for the American Way, a group founded by Hollywood producer Norman Lear whose ad campaign caught the attention of Clinton political operatives. The group plans to conduct the campaign without help from Clinton pals, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Lawmakers had argued that the campaign would dry up money that would otherwise go to Democratic candidates.

"It was a very dumb idea," said Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, chairman of the Democratic Senate campaign committee.

Congressional Democrats also feared that the attack-Republicans strategy would stir up the Democrats' hard-core voters, who would then pressure candidates to defend Clinton. That could hurt candidates in marginal districts filled with voters who don't support the president.

A senior presidential adviser involved in the fund-raising plan, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the project was dropped Tuesday at the request of the White House. "The heat was too much," he said.

Clinton, now in the middle of his second term, will need the support of Democratic lawmakers if Congress moves toward impeachment.

The dispute exposed a long-running feud over whether the White House and the Democratic National Committee are doing enough to elect Senate and House candidates.

Officials with the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee and the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee want the DNC to ante up more money for their candidates. They question whether the party is spending too much on White House operations, such as polling and consulting fees.

Firing back, a senior Democratic strategist familiar with the DNC operation said the party has already raised and borrowed all the money it can; it's time, the official said, for the House and Senate campaign committees to raise more money themselves.

"They could borrow more. They could raise more. They could raise more," said the party official, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

The DNC recently agreed to co-sign a $3 million loan, the most allowed by its bankers, and split it equally between the House and Senate campaign committees, officials said.

Clinton has had a rocky relationship with party leaders since he arrived from Arkansas in 1993, then ran for re-election in 1996 on a strategy that distanced him from congressional Democrats.

Bowles' meeting Tuesday night with House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., was said to have eased tensions. But the leaders want to make sure the White House follows through on its promise to find a way to raise $1 million.

Aides to all three men have been assigned to figure out how to do that.

Student Eager to Find Calling Should Explore Options First

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old student in my last year of high school, desperately trying to find my calling in life.

I love writing, and I am proud to say that my English grades have been high. I enjoy anything that has to do with writing, from making my own greeting cards and calendars to writing stories and letters.

Abby, I want to go to a university, but I'm not sure what field I should pursue, because many people tell me that there aren't many jobs available in the language field.

I read your column every day and admire your work. I was hoping that you could give me some sound advice.

UNSURE SENIOR IN HIGH SCHOOL

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a letter from "Widow X" that contained some valuable advice to the elderly who had to move in with their adult children upon the death of a spouse. May I please add to her wonderful list of self-cautionary words?

— Don't assume that you're included in every social event or invitation your child and in-law receive. When you are included, accept cheerfully if you wish to attend. However, if the invitation does not specifically include you, don't pout and complain.

— If your child and spouse plan a vacation, don't whine if you're not included. Remember when you and your own spouse were able to take vacations; recall how nice it was to get away alone. Give them the same opportunity.

— Nurture grandchildren, but don't interfere in their discipline. Do not create discord between children and parents. If you have a valuable insight to offer regarding child-rearing, share it during a private moment with your adult child.

Under no circumstances should you pry into drawers, bills, personal papers, mail, etc. Refrain from asking the price of a purchase, i.e., new home, vehicle, furniture or appliance. If they want you to know, they'll tell you.

— Remember, they have offered you a place to live. Although it is now your home, too, respect the fact they are the head of this household. You had your turn in that position. Now let them enjoy theirs!

MARY HELEN SALAZAR, LA PUENTE, CALIF.

DEAR MARY HELEN: Your addition to the rules from "Widow X" make sense. However, all members of multigenerational households should remember that such living arrangements often involve an enormous adjustment for everyone concerned. Giving up one's independence is often as difficult for the senior as losing privacy is for the sandwich generation.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? Get it off your chest by writing to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

BASEBALL

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, maybe more than any team, know the difference between winning and losing in the postseason can come down to bad breaks, bad bounces or bad karma.

But for a team haunted by so many ghosts of Octobers past, the 1998 postseason couldn't have begun on a brighter note.

Boston, seeking its first World Series title in 80 years, opened its AL playoff series against Cleveland on Tuesday with an 11-3 rout of the defending league champion Indians.

The Red Sox played like a more confident, more disciplined team. In fact, they had a little Mo of everything.

Mo Vaughn, who couldn't wait to erase the frightful memories of his last playoff appearance, homered twice and matched a playoff record with seven RBIs as the Red Sox won in the postseason for the first time since Game 5 of the 1986 World Series — a losing streak spanning 13 games.

"We didn't make too much of the streak until everyone reminded us of it the last couple of days," Vaughn said. "But Game 1 is an important game in any series. I'm glad it broke the streak, but I'm more glad it was Game 1. If we push it and go after it, we could be in a pretty good set when we go home."

Nomar Garciaparra hit a three-run homer and Pedro Martinez pitched seven innings as Boston ended a playoff slide that began on Oct. 25, 1996, when Mookie Wilson's grounder to first skipped past Bill Buckner at Shea Stadium in the World Series.

That forced a Game 7 the Red Sox lost, and Boston — which hasn't won the Series since 1918 — was swept in four games by Oakland in 1988 and '90, and then in three by Cleveland in 1995.

"As players, I don't think the streak held any validity, because most of us weren't here," said Darren Lewis, who left the game in the fifth inning after being hit on the left ear flap by Jaret Wright.

Past failures weighed heavily on the Red Sox, and especially on Vaughn, who went 0-for-14 with seven strikeouts in '95 when Boston was swept in three games by Cleveland.

"It was nice to get off a lot of things," Vaughn said. "... We did all right, man. We did a lot of things individually and as a team. It was nice to get it done today."

Vaughn ended his streak of playoff failure in the first inning with a three-run homer off Wright, sending Cleveland on to its worst loss in 55 postseason games.

Garciaparra's three-run homer made it 6-0 in the fifth. Vaughn connected for a two-run shot in the sixth off Doug Jones, becoming the first Boston player to hit two homers in a postseason game since Rico Petrocelli in the 1967 World Series.

Vaughn added a two-run double in the eighth off Jim Poole to set a career-high for RBIs and tie Edgar Martinez's record for RBIs in a postseason game.

PAMPA — If the Harris Ratings System holds true, the Pampa Harvesters are set to ignite their offense this weekend against the Randall Raiders.

Pampa is rated as a big 20-point favorite by Harris in this meeting of former district rivals.

The Harvesters have won the last three outings against the Raiders, including a 21-12 win last season. Pampa won 28-20 in 1996, 40-3 in 1995 and the two teams battled to a 3-3 tie in 1994. Randall came away with a 30-10 win in 1993.

Pampa has a 3-1 record while Randall is 1-3 going into the Harvester homecoming tilt Friday night.

"We have a lot of respect for Randall. They haven't quite put their game together, but we know the talent is there. They've got seven returning starters from a state semifinalist team," said Pampa head coach Dennis Cavalier.

175. The Harvesters were ranked No. 57 a week ago.

Top high school performances
By The Associated Press
 Several 300-yard runners, some super all-around efforts and a couple of reliable kickers highlight this week's Associated Press honor roll.

Here are the outstanding performers:
 —O.J. McClintock ran for 147 yards and two touchdowns, passed for 180 yards and three touchdowns, and caught a 91-yard touchdown pass in Round Rock Westwood's 54-0 victory over Austin High.

Rangers fall in opener

NEW YORK (AP) — David Wells and the New York Yankees knew that no matter how many games they won during the regular season, it could all be wrecked in less than a week.

Not to worry. Looking every bit like the team that set an AL record with 114 victories, Wells provided the Yankees a perfect start in the postseason with a 2-0 win over the Texas Rangers in Game 1 of their division series.

"Right on top, get in this situation, playoffs, ain't nothing better, I want the ball," Wells said. "Tonight we had the opportunity to win, that's one for us."

Exactly a month after they clinched a playoff spot in a season in which they were never challenged, the Yankees were sharp. Clearly, they did not want to repeat the history of the two teams they chased this year.

The 1954 Cleveland Indians, who held the AL record of 111 wins, were swept in the World Series by the New York Giants. The 1906 Chicago Cubs, who hold baseball's mark of 116 victories, lost the Series in six games to the Chicago White Sox.

Behind Wells, however, the Yankees were never in much trouble. The left-hander, whose perfect game in May highlighted their dream year, improved to 5-0 in postseason action with New York, Baltimore, Cincinnati and Toronto.

"I was pumped up for this game. A house full of crazy fanatics, that's what you want behind you," Wells said.

Wells gave up five hits in eight innings and struck out nine, many with a sharp curveball. He kept Juan Gonzalez from hitting a ball out of the infield and escaped the Yankees' only real jam by fanning Mike Simms to end the seventh with runners on first and second.

"You talk about a courageous outing," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "And Todd Stottlemire, and I'm not saying that just because his dad is our pitching coach."

Stottlemire allowed just six hits and struck out eight for a complete game in front of his father, Mel, watching in the opposing dugout.

"Tonight's game probably ended the best way," Mel said. "My son pitched well and we won. That's my job."

Andy Pettitte (16-11), who struggled down the stretch, will start Game 2 tonight against Texas' Rick Helling (20-7) in the best-of-5 series.

Wells, who shut out Texas last month, stopped a team that hit .316 against lefties this year, permitting just one runner past first base until the seventh.

"He didn't give us much to hit," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "He's got a lot going for him right now."

Recently, Torre said the team's most significant games this season came six months ago, in the first week at Seattle after a 1-4 start. No surprise, it was Wells who beat the Mariners in the opener of that series.

Shortstop Derek Jeter made a dramatic play in the eighth, Greer's slow roller to end the eighth, and Mariano Rivera pitched a perfect ninth for a save.

Raiders beat Dumas in Tiger League tilt

PAMPA — The Pampa Raiders moved to 2-0 with a 40-14 win over the Dumas Sunset in Tiger League football action.

Dumas, on the first play from scrimmage, broke loose on a 60-yard touchdown run. The two-point conversion failed.

On Pampa's first series, they moved the ball downfield smoothly and Cam Seger broke through for a 7-yard touchdown run. Pampa's two-point conversion also failed.

The Raiders and Dumas both had six points to end the first quarter. The Raiders' defense tightened and stopped Dumas with consecutive tackles in the backfield.

The Raiders were forced to punt on fourth down and 25 yards to go.

The Raiders again moved the ball downfield with Kyle Cambern scoring on a 3-yard plunge. The 2-point conversion failed and Pampa led 12-6.

With the Raiders' Dusty Langley, Chad Malone, Chris Veal and Shaun Carey on the defensive front wall, Dumas couldn't find any running room up the middle. Again, Dumas was stopped on downs.

The Raiders moved downfield again only to be stopped by the clock at the 2-yard line. At half-time, Pampa led 12-6.

The Raiders took the kickoff in the second half and moved downfield with Mark Williams capping it off with a 6-yard run. Cam Seger scored on the 2-point conversion. Pampa led 20-6 and again the Raider defense stopped Dumas with tackles in the backfield. Dumas tried to go wide, but was stopped by corners Cam Seger and Dusty Lenderman and linebackers Kyle Cambern, Mark Williams and Jerrod Winegeart.

The Raiders drove downfield and scored on a 1-yard plunge by Dusty Lenderman, with center Chris Veal providing the key block. Sharrod Young scored on the 2-point conversion. The Raiders led 28-6.

The Dumas defense couldn't find any running room, so they tried going to the air and were picked off by Sharrod Young. With Young and Brant Atwood at the safety positions, Dumas was doomed in the air.

The Raiders once more moved downfield with quarterback Dusty Lenderman finding Jaret Kotara all alone in the end zone for a 10-yard touchdown pass. The Raiders upped their lead to 34-6. Lenderman recovered a Dumas fumble to stop Dumas again.

With only two minutes to go in the game, Dumas again broke loose up the middle for a 55-yard touchdown run. The 2-point conversion was good and Pampa led 34-14.

With Dumas kicking off, Kyle Cambern returned the kickoff for Pampa's final score.

Rushing totals: Williams 120 yards; Cambern 70 yards; Seger 35 yards; Billy Cruz 15 yards; Lenderman 10 yards; Young 30 yards. Passing totals: Lenderman 2 for 3, 15 yards. Total yards: Pampa 295; Dumas 70.

Pampa coach Heath Parker talks on the sideline to Daniel Abernathy during a junior varsity football game last week. Pampa JVs travel to Randall for a 7 p.m. game Thursday.

Brown shuts down Astros, 2-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Randy Johnson had all the hype. Kevin Brown, it turns out, had most of the strikeouts.

With his sinker and forkball leaving Houston batters flailing, Brown boosted the San Diego Padres into control of their NL division series with a 2-1 win over the Big Unit and the Astros on Tuesday.

Brown was brilliant, striking out a career-high 16 and allowing just two hits in eight innings. Bob Gibson is the only pitcher with more postseason strikeouts, 17, in the 1968 World Series.

Brown pitched a no-hitter for Florida in 1997, but said this victory, in the opener of the best-of-5 series, was bigger.

"I'll take this one any time because of the impact of the situation," he said. "Being in the regular season, that didn't have the meaning for the team that this one did."

Brown's performance rejuvenated the Padres, who struggled in September, particularly after clinching the NL West title. Their goal had been to get overall home-field advantage for the NL playoffs, but they couldn't even get it for the first round.

"We stole the home-field advantage away from them," Tony Gwynn said. "I felt like we were ready to play. The guys were getting pretty antsy. Now they can relax and do what they need to do."

Game 2 is Thursday, with the Padres starting Andy Ashby (17-9) against Shane Reynolds (19-8).

Johnson truly had the home-field advantage, going 5-0 with four shutouts in the Astro dome since the Astros acquired him in a trade with Seattle on July 31.

But then Brown did what everyone expected Johnson to do.

"It was a very dominating performance," said Johnson, who has lost his last four postseason decisions.

"Now I know why a lot of the hitters drag their bats back," added Johnson, who struck out 12 Padres in an interleague game on June 24. "He defies the law of gravity with the pitches he throws. With his forkball and sinker, it's no fun facing a guy like that."

Houston's Killer B's — Craig Biggio, Derek Bell and Jeff Bagwell — were a combined 0-for-10 with seven strikeouts. Catcher Brad Ausmus, who bats eighth, had the two hits off Brown.

"The way Kevin Brown pitched today, I don't care who you are, you're not gonna get a lot of hits," Bagwell said.

"Randy gets a lot of hype, but Kevin is a great pitcher too," Ausmus said.

Brown ignored the hype surrounding the marquee pitching matchup, saying he needed to concentrate on the hitters, not on Johnson.

"Thank goodness I did a good job," Brown said. "That was my focus, and I did that probably as well as I've done it in quite some time."

Both aces were obtained in trades to get their teams to the World Series. Brown was there last year, winning a ring with Florida, but became expendable along with the other high-priced Marlins and was snapped up for three prospects.

The Astros already were in control of the NL Central when they got Johnson, an acquisition that many felt made them the favorite to reach the Series.

Brown's previous strikeout high was 11, which he did three times in his final 11 regular-season starts.

Brown, 18-7 during the regular season, beat Atlanta's Greg Maddux and Tom Glavine in last year's NL championship series despite being weakened by the flu, and now has added Johnson to his list.

Trevor Hoffman, who tied the NL record this season with 53 saves, allowed an unearned run and two hits in the ninth.

Doak Walker never outlived his fame

DALLAS — Doak Walker never outlived his fame. Perhaps that is the essence of his life and athletic career.

Legends often fade with time. The memory of their deeds recedes as they are replaced by those who follow. Figures from a distant time and place become the artifacts in a museum of the mind.

The retelling of their story only occurs when elders gather, adjust bifocals, shift walking canes and whistle through false teeth. Faulty recall embellishes or exaggerates the tale. And so, on the sad occasion requiring an epitaph, the legend is revisited in inflated form.

This never happened to Walker. His deeds never dimmed. His life never lost its appeal 49 years after he played his last football game for SMU and 43 years following retirement as a running back for the Detroit Lions.

The things Doak did couldn't be exaggerated or inflated for a reason that foreclosed on dispute.

They were true. Walker combined athletic heroism with in-person humility. He was special in a special way rarely seen today — a modest myth.

That Walker died on Sunday as he did — paralyzed by a skiing accident eight months ago in Colorado — ended his life in a manner an athlete especially would abhor. The man still skiing and riding horses at age 71, the graceful runner who used to go dashing for touchdowns, had lost his mobility.

There are no new anecdotes to tell about Walker. Most were reprised at the time of his accident last Jan. 30. More vignettes surfaced on the occasion of his death. Teammates and contemporaries repeated identical themes.

Doak was the best player they ever saw. Doak was the best person they ever knew.

Nationally acclaimed author Dan Jenkins, a Fort Worth native, wrote the most apt description of Walker's style as a tailback for the Mustangs. His foreword to a Walker biography titled "More Than A Hero" and completed last year reads like so:

"Poetry in motion. That's how the old sportswriters used to describe various football immortals. Your Red Grange. Your Don Hutson. Anybody else who came along and made their typewriters hum. But if you applied the phrase to Doak Walker in his heyday at SMU, then you had to say that the only guys who deserved to be in the same backfield with him were Byron, Shelley and Keats."

From his home in Florida on Monday, Jenkins repeated his permanent opinion about Walker.

"I think he was the best player I ever saw. I've only said that about five or six thousand times," Jenkins said. "I was a Doak Walker fan before I even knew him. He had class stamped all over him the way he did everything."

State of Baylor: Air game could hold key

WACO, Texas (AP) — It's not something Baylor coach Dave Roberts wants, but he's got it: a quarterback controversy.

Odell James, a highly touted recruit two years ago, overthrew several open receivers in last week's 18-16 loss to No. 15 Colorado. Backup Jermaine Alfred moved the offense better in the second half, and James' starting job could be on the line when the Bears (1-2, 0-1 in the Big 12) visit Texas Tech (4-0, 1-0) on Saturday night.

"Right now, Odell is the quarterback, but Jermaine will play," Roberts said.

Roberts said he hasn't decided how to split the playing time and doesn't intend to platoon at quarterback very long.

"I like one quarterback. I don't like to play two," he said. Roberts thinks James' problem is mechanical — that he overstrides before throwing, making the ball sail high.

"He's an option quarterback, and we're trying to throw the football," Roberts said. "He's worked very hard to improve, and he has improved, and he will improve. There are moments that don't look very nice."

James is 16-of-37 passing for 170 yards and three interceptions on the year. Alfred is 12-of-21 for 113 yards and one pick. Neither has a touchdown.

Defenses are showing no respect for the Bears' passing game, moving their safeties close to the line of scrimmage. On tailback Darrell Bush's first two carries against Colorado, he was tackled by safeties for no gain and one yard. "A lot of times safeties are four or five yards from the line of scrimmage, and they're seeing if we can throw the football," Roberts said. "We've got to back them up, so we've got to be able to throw the football better than what we're doing right now."

There is no controversy about the defense, which kept the Bears in last week's game against speedy Colorado and throttled then-No. 20 North Carolina State for a half in Baylor's 33-30 upset win over the Wolfpack on Sept. 19.

"I think our defense is on track," Roberts said this week. He attributed this year's improved defense to off-season strength work by the players and to junior college transfers who have added depth.
