NORIAS, Texas (AP) —
For many Mexican immigrants seeking a better life in Texas and beyond, the path is familiar. So are its myths.

The route traverses the world's largest privately held ranch, the 825,000-acre King Ranch south of Corpus Christi, where 50,000 cattle graze among cotton, grain, scrub brush and oil derricks. The dangers are well documented — nine illegal immigrants died in searing heat this summer.

Copperheads, corals, rattlers and other venomous snakes also infest the range, and authorities say that may explain why six men were sleeping in the path of a Union Pacific freight train that crushed them to death early Monday.

"There is a great (misbelief) that if you sleep between the railroad tracks, snakes won't get you," Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis said. "Unfortunately, trains will."

The six unidentified men, believed to be undocumented immigrants from Mexico, were killed around 3:15 a.m. by a 105-car train carrying mixed freight on its way to Brownsville from Houston.

"The train crew saw some debris on the tracks," said Letty Garza of the U.S. Border Patrol. "That next split second, they saw heads raise up and then six people were killed instantly."

An agent happened to be working near the accident.

"He heard the train, then all of a sudden he heard something — he described it as a loud slapping," she said.

The train was traveling about 45 mph.

Amarillo call plan holding

Roberts Co., GTE must agree

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

Those Pampa folks hoping to be able to call Amarillo all they want for one fee are going to have to wait a little longer than first thought. Pampa and Gray County recently pursued a way to make a call between Pampa and Amarillo a local call.

Southwestern Bell offers a service in Borger called Expanded Local Calling. With that service, everyone in the city is charged a fee of $3.75 and calling Amarillo or the other way around is a local call.

When contacted about that option, local officials were told by Gary Stevens of SW Bell in Amarillo that Pampa is not eligible because there are too many lines with the 669 and 665 exchange. The Public Utilities Commission (PUC), which regulates phone service in Texas, limits that service to exchanges with less than 10,000 numbers. According to Kelly Curbow of SW Bell in Austin, the Pampa

Pregnancy Center looks for new home

The Top O' Texas Crisis Pregnancy Center is going to have to move.

After six years at their Browning location, the center's executive director, Angela King, is in the middle of trying to find a suitable new building for the non-profit organization.

There is a possibility for a new location in the works, said King, but that is still tentative.

Currently, the crisis pregnancy center is in the west end of the same building as Travel Express, on the corner of Browning and Ballard.

NTS Communications kept equipment in the center's building space because it was close to Southwestern Bell, according to King, and in turn paid for the center's monthly rent as a tax write-off.

But in early September, NTS informed the center they would no longer need to store equipment there, and they told King and the board of directors that the center's rent was only paid until the end of September.

September came and went and the center still had nowhere to go. The building owner has told the center since then that they can stay as long as they are actively looking for a new location.

A call early last week has brought some hope to the situation.

Some people in town are looking at obtaining a building and allowing the center to relocate there, said King. But she hasn't heard anything definite and said she is still hoping and praying for good news.

Computer technology classes may be added

The Texas Occupational Information Coordinating Committee has listed computer networking technicians as an emerging occupation with potential for rapid growth in the next five to ten years.

To provide students with the opportunity to investigate this emerging career interest, the Pampa ISD Board of Education will consider approving a request to the Texas Education Agency to offer "Internetworking Technologies I and II" as courses for state credit at a Thursday board meeting.

Internetworking courses will be designed to develop, build and maintain small to medium-sized networks, according to a course

In the 15 years since he's opened the Hamburger Station, Ed Robinson has sold over three dozen hamburgers — well over three dozen.

"What's really made my business here is my breakfast burritos," Robinson said.

He starts every morning at 5 a.m. on the west side of Pampa.

"We're open from five to four every day now," Robinson said. "We don't open in the evening because people just don't want to drive across town over here."

New police car plan on agenda

A proposal to assign "take home" patrol cars to individual police officers highlights this evening's Pampa City Commission agenda.

If approved, the plan calls for officers to take the squad cars home and have limited personal use of the autos during off-duty hours, according to City Manager Bob Eskridge.

A hallmark of the plan calls for off-duty officers to be subject to active duty any time he or she is driving the car.

Previously, the commission discussed the proposal in connection with this year's budget which provides for the purchase of enough vehicles so the "take home" policy is achievable, the city manager said in his meeting memorandum to commissioners.

Other items to be covered during the 6 p.m. meeting at city hall include:

- Consider appointments to various city boards
- Consider approval of the 1999 Chamber of Commerce tourism budget
- Consider a resolution authorizing the city to execute an agreement with TxDOT for the con-good hamburger, you could make a living so I try to make the best hamburger there is," Robinson said.

The key to a good hamburger is quality in meat, vegetables and dressings, he said.

"I don't water anything down," he said. "I don't skimp on anything. I use 100 percent beef. Nothing else. I have ever since I've been here."

Robinson grew up in a state that boasts some of the best hamburger places in the country, Oklahoma.

"There was a little old lady up there in Bartlesville, Okla.," he said. "She had a good hamburger. She'd make every patty individually."

He said there are plenty of good hamburger places in Tulsa where he used to deliver produce.

"There's one in Okmulgee, Okla., straight south of Tulsa," Robinson said. "If you ever go through, you ought to stop there. It's got the best onion rings and hamburger I ever had. They grill all their onions. I tried grilling onion rings here, but people here just don't eat onions like that."

Robinson is originally from Locust Grove, Okla., east of Tulsa.

"It's a little old bitty town," Robinson said of his hometown. "Not much to it."

It's in the northeastern part of the state where there are lakes, he said.

Robinson said he was the first in his family to go into the restaurant business.

"None of my family has been in the restaurant business," he said, sitting in the dining room of his restaurant which was once a gas station on U.S. 60.

Robinson's first restaurant was in Bartlesville, Okla.

"I had a Chinese restaurant," he said, "but that's where he learned how to make hamburgers."

He had the Chinese restaurant for about two and a half years. He sold it in 1978.

"Right after the Vietnam War, the government started bringing all these Vietnamese families back to the United States," Robinson said. "The government bought that restaurant from me for two Vietnam families."

Robinson ended up in Pampa by way of a few

He's raced his horses at Remington Park in Oklahoma City, El Paso, Ruidoso, Raton, Denver, Missouri, all over Oklahoma.

He's raced his horses at Remington Park in Oklahoma City, El Paso, Ruidoso, Raton, Denver, Missouri, all over Oklahoma.

Horse racing in New Mexico is down because of the Texas Lottery. He said racing has also been down in Colorado, Louisiana and Arkansas, but he thinks horse racing in Texas will do well.

"I think it will be number one," Robinson said. "It will be just as good as it is except for California."

California will lead the way because of its population and per capita income there, he says.

"If Texas gets simulcasting like Oklahoma has, it will be even better," he said. "You can go right over here to Elk City and bet on the races. Now race tracks are at the point where they're going to put in these video games."

Robinson still has some 20 horses. He hopes some of them will be future winners.

"I have some in training right now," he said.

It was while training race horses that he came to Pampa. He had some friends from Bartlesville that were raised in Pampa.

"They moved back here," he said. "They were working for Phillips, and they moved back here. I was coming from the races in New Mexico, and I stopped by here to say hello. I never have left."

That was in 1981, Robinson said.

"I like it here. I chose to live here," he said. "It's been good to me. This place here's been good to me."

Hildebrandt said he'd been told that once Roberts County approves the matter it will take about six months for SW Bell to negotiate a contract with GTE and get approval from the PUC. Lines from Pampa to Amarillo go through GTE's territory and therefore it must agree to the deal as well.

If Roberts County is able to vote on the matter at their next meeting it still might be April or May before Pampa can make unlimited calls to Amarillo without worrying about a long distance fee.

Fumes from cyanide suicide sicken nine

GRINNELL, Iowa (AP) - A Grinnell College student committed suicide by taking so much potassium cyanide that fumes from his body sickened nine people.

Four paramedics, two college staff members and three students became nauseated and weak from the toxic fumes Monday. They were treated at a hospital and released.

Carl T. Grimm, 20, a sophomore from Placentia, Calif., swallowed a crystalline form of potassium cyanide, which prevents oxygen from reaching the cells. He then asked his roommate to call for help, authorities said.

The chemical reacted with water in Grimm's body and created hydrogen cyanide gas, said

Mickey Munley, the college's director of public relations.

Grimm's dormitory at the private liberal arts college about 50 miles east of Des Moines was evacuated because of the fumes. Grinnell Regional Medical Center, where Grimm's body was taken, also had to be ventilated.

"It's a very rare poisoning," said Dr. David Cranston, head of the emergency department. "You hear about it in mystery novels, but you don't see it in life very often."

It was not immediately known where or how Grimm acquired the potassium cyanide or why he would have wanted to kill himself.

Pampa Sheltered Workshop making a difference with help of United Way

This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1998 "The Power of U" fund-raising campaign.

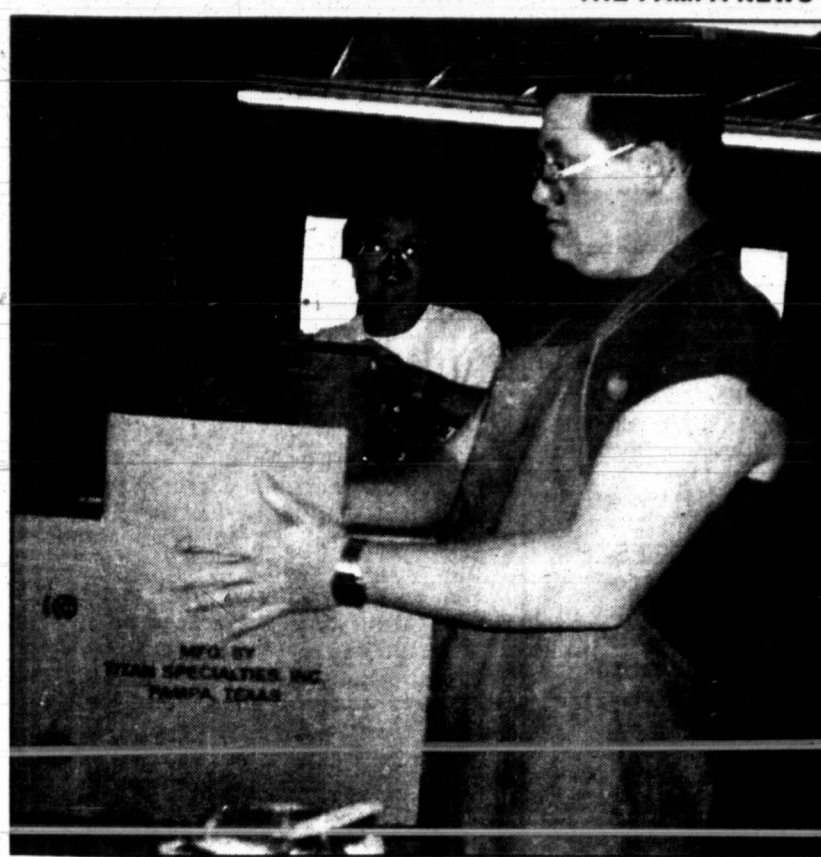

The Pampa Sheltered Workshop has changed for the better the lives of many of Pampa's mentally impaired adults, helping them to lead happier, productive lives. For them and their families, the Workshop makes a dramatic difference. This operation is so much more than a workshop; it's a place to interact with peers and make friends, to have fun and to learn life skills that help participants to function more comfortably in their community. In addition to the work they do there, they go shopping, out to eat, bowling, to church and things most people take for granted but which for them are exciting opportunities to discover their own self-worth and lead well-rounded lives.

Yes, they do work each day, usually at assembly workstations where they build up or package products for the fulfillment of contracts with cooperating wholesale and retail companies who will market the final products. Workshop participants are paid according to the amount of work they produce, and while the wages are an important source of independence, the biggest payoff is the sense of accomplishment and self-esteem that comes from being productive members of society. Some of these delightful people work outside the Workshop, but they all feel good about themselves because of their gainful employment.

Pampa Sheltered Workshop relies in part on United Way for operational funds. The vital work of this and 20 other Pampa United Way agencies would not be possible without your support. When you give to United Way, you are helping friends and neighbors who only want the chance to make our community a better place to live. If a United Way volunteer has not contacted you, call 669-1001 to receive your pledge card. Please, give generously.

Employee of the month

The Jordan Prison Unit has chosen Clifton Westbrook, Company III, as the October employee of the month. Officer Westbrook has worked in law enforcement for three and a half years. He was chosen for his consistency, dedication and willingness to go the extra mile. When not at the Jordan Unit Westbrook is usually fishing, or golfing. Westbrook said he is proud of his three children and five grandchildren.

Gray County Soil and Water Conservation sets director election

An election of soil and water conservation district director to serve Zone One and a district director to serve Zone Two on Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District Board is scheduled at 7 p.m. Oct. 15 at Gray County Courthouse Annex, L.H. Webb, chairman of the board, recently announced.

State law decrees that to be eligible to vote in a soil and water conservation district director election, an individual must own agricultural land within the district where the election is being held. The individual must also live in a county all or part of which is in the district and the voter must be 18 years of age or older.

Legal qualifications state that a candidate for the office of a soil and water conservation district must own land in the subdivision he or she represents, be 18 years of age or older and be actively engaged in farming or ranching. The candidate must also live in a county all or part of which is in the district. Soil and water conservation district directors serve four year terms of office.

Current members of the Board of Directors of Gray County SWCD are Webb, chairman; David Bowers, vice-chairman; Troy Ritter, secretary; Jim Shaw, member; and Neal Stovall, member.

The purpose of the Gray County SWCD, with headquarters in Pampa, is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on agricultural lands within the district and to serve as a voice for farmers, ranchers and local community entities on conservation matters.

The District Board of Directors coordinate the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations. The District has the authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental agencies' and private concerns to carry out its purposes.

Harrington Cancer Center director to address local cancer group

Gerald Kelly meeting, call Norris or Betty Whitson after 5 p.m. at 665-2654.

Pampa Area Cancer Support Group will meet from 7-8 p.m. Oct. 15 in the Cafeteria of Columbia Medical Center. Guest speaker for the evening will be Gerald Kelly, director of Supportive Care at Harrington Cancer Center. The public is cordially invited to attend and refreshments will be served following the discussion.

Kelly's topic will be "Herbal Remedies: The Good, the Bad and the Ugly." Herbs have been used since ancient times to treat a myriad of ailments. But with all the hype about miracle herbal concoctions and cure-all tablets, it is hard to know fact from fiction. Kelly will explore the effectiveness of herbs to treat what ails you.

Statistics give me a pain

Jeff West
Pampa News staff

M.I.T. has never once called and asked me to enroll.
 I'm not even sure how to get to M.I.T. (and no, the answer isn't study harder).
 For those of you who don't know M.I.T., the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the chief math geek school in the country right now. The students made carrying a slide rule a fashion statement before personal computers and now they've all moved up to Palm Pilots and cellular modems to connect to the internet wherever they go. By the way, calling someone a geek is no longer considered an insult, it probably has something to do with the richest man in the world being the ultimate geek.
 I never really wanted to go to M.I.T., even back when I wasn't old enough to pass for a teacher, (well an administrator, oh, ok a security guard, yes, one of those who is not allowed to carry a gun or many keys, now drop it). But even those places you don't want to go, and those things you don't want to do, you always think you might could have if you'd really wanted to. Then occasionally cold reality slaps you in the face. Now reality has slapped me in the face so often there's permanent scarring but I've never grown to like it much.

 My latest dose of reality came this week when I realized that when it comes to numbers and statistics I'm not as smart as I wish I was, well, really I'm not as smart as I should be, well, ok, fence posts look on me with pity. I had already been struggling, trying to deal with government budgets and grant applications and stuff like that. I was handling that fine though, because I know most of the folks who work with those things don't really understand them either.

Then a demographer came to town. Not some starry-eyed kid either but a guy who said he'd done it for 22 years. He even seemed to enjoy it. Now a demographer takes lots and lots of numbers and turns them into statistics. He then takes those statistics and turns them into patterns and charts and formulas and then predicts where the statistics are headed. And he liked it. For myself, I'd rather be the taste tester for dry dog food, or the guy who decides which products you can't spray into an open flame. But he liked it.
 Luckily, he was very good at explaining the numbers so even I could understand, well at least parts of it, but that's because he presented the finished product here. I can operate products with thousands of tiny moving parts, but I can't imagine trying to put all of them together. Just thinking about all of those numbers, all those statistics, gave me a headache. I wonder if M.I.T. needs a lovable but inept older student as comic relief?
 Be good to one another and be good to yourselves.

Plan will help lower taxes, set aside surplus

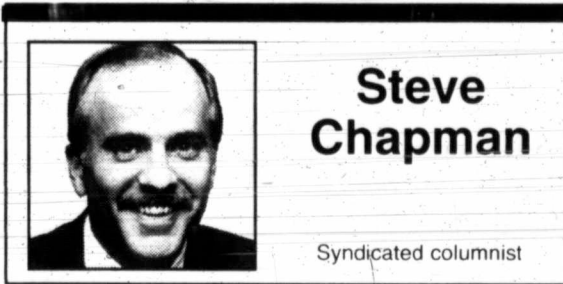

For the first time since 1969, America will run a budget surplus this year. That's something we should all be proud of. It's also something we don't want to waste.
 That's why it's important that we keep the surplus from being spent on new programs in Washington. The money belongs to you, and it should be returned to you. The House of Representatives passed a plan recently that would do that.
 Called the "90-10" plan, it would set aside 90 percent of the budget surplus to strengthening Social Security, and the remaining 10 percent to help lower people's taxes. In all, the plan would set aside nearly $1.5 trillion dollars to shore up the Social Security Trust Fund over the next five years. It's critical that we keep Social Security strong and viable for those who have invested in the system. This plan will do that.
 At the same time, it will also provide people with some well-deserved tax relief today. When measured as part of our Gross National Product, federal taxes are at their highest level since World War II. We need to let people keep more of what they earn.
 The "90-10" plan will do that in several ways. It will eliminate the marriage tax penalty on over three million couples in Texas, saving them an average of $243 dollars per return. It will make it easier on farmers, ranchers and other business owners by increasing their exemption from inheritance taxes to a million dollars immediately.
 It will also save money for seniors who want to work by raising the Social Security earnings limit to $30,000 on Jan. 1. And it will simplify the tax code in ways that will save people money — and time.
 In short, this plan will put the surplus to work for you by making sure part of it is left in your pocket, and not left for Washington to spend.

Despite scandal, national business still going on ...

If you believe what you hear on the national news, the only thing being discussed in Washington these days is the scandal involving the president. Well, that may be the only thing the Washington media is talking about, but the fact remains that the business of the country is going on.
 For example, two weeks ago, the House passed a plan that will give parents more control over what their children learn in school. The plan — called The Dollars to the Classroom Act — will require that 95 percent of federal education tax dollars be spent directly on students in the classroom, rather than on bureaucrats in Washington.
 Congress approved two defense bills that will boost military pay by 3.6 percent, and provide important funds for Sheppard Air Force Base, the Pantex Plant and the V-22 Osprey.
 The House more lately approved a plan designed to strengthen Social Security and lower taxes on working families. And just recently, the House signed off on a bill containing nearly $4 billion in disaster relief for farmers and ranchers hit hard by the drought and low commodity prices.
 So in short, the business of the country is going on — we're just not seeing or hearing much about it. The scandal involving the president is important, and something we should all take seriously. But taxes are still too high, defense spending is still too low and farmers and ranchers are still waiting for help to arrive from Washington.
 These issues may not make it into tomorrow's headlines. But they will make a difference in our lives, and are ones we cannot ignore.

'The illusion of arms control'

Steve Chapman
Syndicated columnist

Trying to prevent Saddam Hussein from acquiring terrible weapons is like trying to keep a Labrador retriever puppy from ever chewing anything. The dog really, really wants to chew, and constant vigilance against his chewing isn't enough: Turn your back for two seconds, and he'll have something in his mouth.
 Determined though we may be to stop him, Hussein is even more determined to get chemical, biological and nuclear weapons, and the simple logistics of the situation dictate that sooner or later, he will succeed and we will fail.
 United Nations weapons inspectors have been in Iraq for seven years, diligently laboring to block any efforts by the government to develop these armaments. The Washington Post reported recently that U.S. officials "had credible intelligence indicating that Iraq built and has maintained three or four 'implosion devices' that lack only cores of enriched uranium to make 20-kiloton nuclear weapons."
 Scott Ritter, who was the chief inspector for the United Nations Special Commission in Iraq, resigned in August, accusing the Security Council of giving up the effort and settling for "the illusion of arms control." But arms control under the circumstances prevailing in Iraq was always a mirage. There is simply no way for a couple of hundred outsiders, monitoring a country the size of California, to assure the foolproof detection of chemical and biological agents that can be made in a kitchen sink, hidden in a hole in the ground and moved on short notice.
 Nor, for that matter, could they do the easier part of their job: preventing the manufacture of nuclear weapons. Since 1996, the International Atomic Energy Agency has regularly attested to the Security Council that it has found "no indication of prohibited equipment, materials or activities." But three Iraqi defectors gave UNSCOM persuasive evidence that Iraq has made the critical implosion devices. Being the size of a large TV, they are not at all hard to conceal, which evidently is just what Hussein has been doing with them.

 Hussein would still need the fissile material for a bomb, but that apparently is all he needs. Unfortunately for us, there is plenty in the world, not all of it secure. As Steven Drolley of the Nuclear Control Institute in Washington told The New York Times, Iraq could be "just a Russian smuggler away" from completing a bomb.
 This demoralizing development is what happened when the U.N. inspectors were doing their work. Lately, they have not been doing their work. Iraq has refused to allow site inspections since Aug. 3, and neither the United States nor its allies has been willing to undertake the onerous task of forcing compliance with air power. Ritter's resignation came as a protest against this inaction. But it didn't change the fact that Hussein has now had two full months to do what he wants with even less fear of being caught than before.
 So far, he has paid no price for refusing to cooperate. The Clinton administration, which threatened air strikes the last time he interfered with inspections, doesn't want to act alone for fear the alliance against Iraq will collapse. Many important countries, including Russia, China and France, have lost patience with our continuing efforts to isolate Iraq. Hussein's Arab neighbors, who ought to be the most concerned about him, regard economic sanctions as a weapon that starves innocent Iraqis while leaving their ruler unharmed. Having failed to alter Hussein's behavior or remove him from power, the sanctions are no longer a believable solution to the problems he presents.

 Why aren't our friends as worried as we are about the prospect of Hussein getting weapons of mass destruction? Perhaps because they have better memories: He had chemical and biological weapons before and during the Gulf War but found them a worthless asset. They stayed on the shelf because he knew their use would precipitate an overwhelming response from the United States — possibly even a nuclear response.
 Barring a U.S. retreat from the Gulf, which is not likely, he still operates under that constraint, as well as another one. The Gulf War should have convinced him that if he invades a neighbor, he won't be allowed to keep his conquest. His options for making trouble are extremely limited — which is why a rearmed Iraq doesn't seem all that scary to most of the rest of the world. Any armaments Hussein acquires will be useful mainly for defensive purposes, not offensive ones.
 The inspections regime is a never-ending project destined to fail. Ritter thinks that when it is not backed by the threat of force, it provides only the illusion of arms control. The bigger illusion is that in containing Iraq, arms control is either necessary or sufficient.

School texts not marriage-friendly

Mona Charen
Syndicated columnist

Trust textbook writers to make even the most passionately interesting topics in life — love, sex and marriage — as dull as the fishing channel. That is what the books used in 20 states have accomplished — according to a study by the New York-based Institute for American Values.
 These plodding texts are most often assigned as part of the health curriculum and are usually relied upon by gym teachers who exude discomfort.
 "Health education" covers everything from drugs to menstruation to sex. In my elementary school, sex ed began as "Family Living." But by the time we reached high school, it had morphed into "Health." Perhaps by the time my cohort reached high school, the educators had decided that we were all out there "doing it," and therefore, the best they could hope to do was urge caution.
 Sex ed didn't get categorized as health by accident. Advocates of sex-ed loved to present their opponents as "repressed" or "inhibited" — two very bad words in the sex-ed dictionary and in the culture generally. As Wendy Shalit writes in her stimulating new book, "A Return to Modesty," the sex-ed culture has stigmatized as "unhealthy" the most natural maidenly instinct: modesty.
 The health/sickness dichotomy works fine for questions like smoking, using seat belts and AIDS prevention (sexual abstinence is strongly encouraged in several texts), but the subjects of love and marriage do not lend themselves to those categories. Love and marriage are not simply matters of the body but of the heart and spirit. And the question of whether it is better for a married couple to stay together or get divorced is a moral one, not a matter of safety or health. Yet trapped within the health paradigm, these texts present marriage in clinical or strictly utilitarian terms. It is an impoverished vocabulary that reflects all too well our diminished capacity for true love and commitment.

 Some of the information presented in these widely used textbooks is simply false. "Making Life Choices," for example, states that "almost half a million children die each year at the hands of their abusers." Whoa. Only about 50,000 children under the age of 14 die from any cause on a yearly basis. And the number who are murdered by their parents or guardians is about 1,200 — a staggering number but hardly the epidemic taught in this leading textbook. That alone might be enough to discourage some teenagers from embracing marriage.
 There is no question that the authors of these texts were concerned about not hurting the feelings of readers who are children of divorce. Yet by attempting to put the best face on a terrible situation for these children, the books wind up conveying more false information and more false hope. In "Discover: Decisions for Health," kids read about "Consuelo," who had feared that her parents' divorce meant she was losing one parent. Instead, "her father actually spent more time with her following the divorce." Fine talk. But the reality is that in the vast majority of divorces, as Barbara DaFoe Whitehead documents in "The Divorce Culture," children get very little time with their fathers post-divorce and less time with their mothers as well.

 And how do these texts recommend that youngsters prepare themselves for happier married lives than their parents achieved? By encouraging the development of self-esteem. In "Making Life Choices," kids learn that "the most important relationship in your life is the relationship you have with yourself." Another text advises that "to love oneself is the beginning of a lifelong romance." Yet a third encourages the development of self-esteem by planning "a date to take yourself on — alone."
 Nothing but the obtuse worship of pop psychology prevents these books from recommending more substantive roads to self-esteem, like taking time to volunteer for the Boys and Girls Clubs or helping an elderly relative with her shopping. But then, self-esteem really ought not enter into the discussion at all. The very selfishness these books seem to endorse has been championed by our culture for 30 years — and accounts, in part, for the excessive divorce rate we suffer.
 These textbooks didn't create our problems, but uncorrected, they will help perpetuate them.

Houston researcher lands Nobel Prize for medicine

HOUSTON (AP) — When Ferid Murad answered the 4 a.m. call, the person at the other end of the line apologized.

"I'm sorry to disturb you," the caller told him. An apology wasn't necessary. The call, from Sweden, was the fulfillment of the dream of every scientist like Murad, known to his colleagues as Fred.

Murad, chairman of the University of Texas-Houston Medical School's department of integrative biology, pharmacology and physiology, had just been told he was a winner of this year's Nobel Prize in medicine.

"I was delighted, excited," Murad said Monday. "I thought it could happen, perhaps, but you never know. Some of us do. Some don't."

UT is again nation's biggest university

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas is the nation's biggest university for the second consecutive year, but school officials aren't crowing about the repeat title.

With 48,917 full- and part-time students this fall, UT has more student bodies than its closest rival, Ohio State University, which counted 48,169 on Friday.

The head counts will change before they're final later this month, but Ohio State officials told the Austin American-Statesman on Monday their total won't change enough to make a difference.

"You're safe in saying UT is the largest," said Gail Stephenoff, an assistant in Ohio State's office of enrollment management.

UT officials had hoped to fall below last year's enrollment of 48,857 and get closer to their ideal head count of 48,000, said James Vick, vice president for student affairs.

Murder trial begins 13 years after slaying

KOUNTZE, Texas (AP) — Thirteen years after discovering the body of his murdered father, David Guillory has confronted the alleged killer in court.

Guillory, from Houston, testified Monday against Robbie Bourque, who is charged with capital murder in the Aug. 12, 1985, shooting death of John Guillory Jr.

Guillory said he found his dad on the morning of his 20th birthday.

"I saw my father dead. I saw that he had been shot in the head twice ... I checked for a pulse and there was none."

Prosecutors allege Bourque — then a 19-year-old stable boy at the Guillorys' horse farm — was hired by horse trainer Michael McKinney to kill Guillory.

Bourque, indicted four years after the slaying, has pleaded innocent. McKinney's indictment on capital murder was dismissed in 1996 for lack of evidence.

FRANCES AID: The last of the disaster recovery centers on the Texas coast set up to aid victims of Tropical Storm Frances will close their doors tonight. "The absence of disaster recovery centers only means face-to-face contact discontinues, not the disaster recovery services," officials said. ... AIRPORT WORK: The Houston City Council has decided to spend $1.4 billion over five years to improve passenger service and triple cargo capacity at the city's three airports. The city has given up on building an airport on Houston's west side and will instead improve Ellington Field, Hobby Airport and Bush Intercontinental Airport. ... FLOODING CASUALTIES: The final death toll from recent flooding in Del Rio will remain at nine. Officials say six people listed as missing were apparently erroneously reported. AIR EMISSIONS: The state's environmental agency says industrial plants in Texas are doing a better job controlling air emissions. But state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, says it's not good enough, that there's still "a terrible amount of pollution in the atmosphere."

Merrill Lynch to cut 3,400 jobs plus 900 more firm consultants

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with big losses from global financial turmoil, Merrill Lynch & Co. will slash 3,400 jobs, or about 5 percent of its work force, in an effort to reduce expenses.

The huge U.S. investment firm also reported today a $164 million loss for the third quarter, down from earnings of $502 million in the same period a year ago.

In addition to the 3,400 job cuts, Merrill Lynch said it will trim an additional 900 jobs that are filled primarily by outside consultants, who are mainly involved in technology projects.

"Because of the uncertainties now apparent in the global economy, we anticipate a much more challenging environment ahead," Merrill Lynch chairman and chief executive David Komansky and president and chief operating officer Herbert Allison Jr. said in a statement. "That is why we are implementing an energetic program to reduce expenses and selectively resize certain businesses."

The leading U.S. brokerage firm reported a loss of $164 million, or 42 cents per share on a diluted basis, for the third quarter, compared with earnings of $502 million in the third quarter 1997 and $551 million in the second quarter of 1998.

Merrill Lynch will take a pre-tax charge of $430 million to cover the costs related to the staff reductions. It expects the restructuring to result in savings of $500 million a year.

Revenues for the third quarter were also down for the quarter, falling 7 percent to $3.8 billion.

Toll takers must thank motorists

NEW YORK (AP) — Lip-reading politeness police are spying on toll collectors in search of the oft-elusive "Thank You," and they're doling out citations to the grumps.

Some workers at bridges and tunnels even face disciplinary hearings as the Metropolitan Transportation Authority heats up its civility campaign.

"We expect good customer service," MTA Bridges and Tunnels Division spokesman Frank Pascual said. "Customers expect a 'Thank you.' It's an acknowledgment that we're thanking customers for using the facility."

Alternative farewells, such as "Have a good day," are just fine with the MTA.

The union representing toll-takers considers the courtesy checks petty and vindictive.

"This is harassment. It's a colossal waste of money," said Joseph Mauro, vice president of the Bridge and Tunnel Officers union.

Thank you for reading this.

Inmate release peaks

The number of inmates who will leave prison early by receiving good-time credit has peaked and will begin falling until 2003, when nearly all will have been let go, a prison official said Monday.

In 1977, legislators passed a law that set minimum standards for the time inmates had to serve before they could be given mandatory release, which the prison system defines as a formula of good-conduct time added to time served. Those inmates also face mandatory supervision upon their release.

The law was modified in 1987 to deny early release to violent offenders. By 1996, mandatory release was eliminated.

Still, there were more than 79,000 prisoners in the system who were sentenced before 1996, meaning they were still eligible for mandatory release because the new law could not be applied to them retroactively.

About 19,000 were let out during the fiscal year ending Aug. 31.

"That was the peak, so it's downhill from here," prison spokesman Glen Castlebury said Monday.

More than 16,200 are slated to get out in 1999; another 16,175 should get out the next year, he said. Most of the last group — some 7,200 — should be out by 2003.

But while the number of prisoners eligible for mandatory release has surged steadily in the past few years, paroles have plummeted — from a high of 43,863 in 1990 to 10,738 in 1998.

Castlebury, noted that as the prison system completed a massive construction project in 1994, tripling its space from 50,000 beds to 150,000, the Texas Board of Pardons and Parole began cracking down on granting paroles.

Before the 100,000 new beds were added, paroles were offered more freely to prevent the lockups from overflowing, but "the restriction of the parole system has forced many thousands of more inmates to serve a longer time in prison," Castlebury said.

Overall, 47,719 prisoners were either paroled or given early release in 1990, when the total prison population was 50,000. In 1998, when 144,000 men and women were in Texas lockups, there were 29,788 paroles and mandatory releases.

Guests Get Tongue-Lashing For Beating Hostess Home

DEAR ABBY: I am an 83-year-old widow and live with my divorced son. We are both in fine health and recently moved to a new community, where we're trying to make friends. I joined a bridge club and have met some very nice women.

One of the members was having trouble assembling some furniture she recently purchased. I offered my son's services to help her (he's very good at this sort of thing). For my sake, my son agreed, and we all settled on 11 a.m. My son and I drove to "Sarah's" and arrived at 10:55 a.m. No one was home. We decided to wait. At 11:15, Sarah drove up. She offered no explanation for being late. My son assembled the piece, Sarah thanked him, and we left.

A couple of weeks later, Sarah called and invited us to lunch as a thank-you for my son's work. Lunch was to be at 11:30. We arrived at 11:25 and, guess what? No one was home! We waited in the car. At 11:40, I wrote a note, "Did you forget you invited us?" I left it on her door and we drove home. When we arrived back home, there was a nasty message on my answering machine. Sarah yelled at us for leaving and called us rude.

When she called a second time, I told her I expected a hostess to open the door when I was invited and had arrived. She replied that we were early and could not expect anyone to be home when we arrived early. She said she had just run to the bank. I pointed out that the bank is open until 6 p.m. and she could have gone after we had lunch. She said maybe it is OK to be early where I come from, but not in this country.

Abby, I was not born here, but I have lived in America for 50 years. I thought I was brought up with good manners, and nobody has ever said my "old country" ways are strange. Am I missing something?

SURPRISED SONJA

DEAR SURPRISED: No. It's Sarah who's missing something — common courtesy. A host should be home to greet guests when they arrive, even if they're slightly early. Shame on Sarah.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment on something in Donna Williams' letter to you about guests in restaurants. She said, "Guests are our livelihood! Without them, we might as well be dishing out food at a school cafeteria, instead of practicing the fine art of restaurant service, one in which many of us take a great deal of pride."

Abby, I have been employed in school food service for 25 years. In every school cafeteria I have worked, the fine art of service to our customers has been practiced. We, too, take a great deal of pride in our work and in servicing our customers.

I am an assistant manager in one of the largest high schools in Alabama. We serve almost 2,700 students plus faculty and staff. We do not just "dish out" food. We service all our customers in a two-hour shift at eight food bars with a total of 16 to 18 entrees, plus fruits, vegetables, salads, milk and about 15 other beverages. We do take pride in our work, and we do serve good food.

Satisfied customers are as essential to us as they are to restaurants. Remember, if we don't satisfy them, they won't buy from us. I invite Donna Williams to our cafeteria any day, and I'll be happy to treat her to lunch.

MARGARET SELLERS, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR MARGARET: Perhaps when Donna sees your letter, she'll stand corrected. She may harken from a time, as do I, when the choices in the school lunch program were fewer and less imaginative than they are today.

PAMPA — Pampa goes to Dumas for a District 3-4A game at 7:30 Friday night.

Pampa is 5-1 for the season and 1-0 in district play. Dumas is 1-5 and 0-1.

McLEAN — McLean hosts Samnorwood at 7:30 Friday night in a District 2-1A six-man game.

McLean opened the district season with a 64-24 win over Vernon Northside last weekend.

HAMILTON, Texas (AP) — A 16-year-old Hamilton linebacker has died of head injuries sustained after making a tackle in an Oct. 2 game. Chandler Craig, who played middle linebacker and offensive tackle for the Hamilton Bulldogs, died Sunday night at Scott & White Memorial Hospital in Temple where he had been treated since the injury.

"We're stunned and numb at the moment, but we're dealing with it the best we can," superintendent Gene Sheets said Monday. "We have counselors and we brought in ministers who know the town. The teachers and coaches have done a wonderful job helping the students cope with this."

A funeral was scheduled today in Hamilton, a town of 3,000 people about 60 miles west of Waco.

Chandler, known to his friends as "Chigger" because he was tough as the insect and just as hard to shake on the field, was an undersized junior who had been on the varsity team since his sophomore year. Even though he weighed 150 pounds, he started at middle linebacker and left tackle.

Chandler was injured during the second quarter of Hamilton's 19-12 homecoming victory over San Saba. The game was stopped and he was flown by helicopter to the Temple hospital.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — For one quarter it seemed that Oklahoma State might be the team to bring the undefeated Texas Tech Red Raiders back down to Earth.

Running back Nathan Simmons plowed through Tech's defensive line, the Red Raiders were held to minus-2 yards rushing and Rob Peters didn't complete a single pass as the Cowboys built a 10-0 lead.

But then Tech's defense found new resolve and the offense proved scrappy and resourceful enough to engineer a 24-17 comeback victory on Saturday.

The reward was some hard-earned national respect and a No. 22 ranking. Tech's journey into the Top 25 has been a long one.

At least a few players felt the team was snubbed by poll voters last week after a 31-29 victory over Baylor lifted Tech to 5-0. But a light schedule, including North Texas and Texas-El Paso, likely kept the Raiders unranked until they played a more worthy opponent.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Jason Garrett gets one more week to lead the Dallas Cowboys then it's back to carrying a clipboard on the sideline.

Garrett, who has become the NFL's most efficient backup quarterback with a 3-1 record, was 14-of-24 for 287 yards and two touchdowns in Sunday's 27-20 win over the Carolina Panthers.

Pampa tennis team continues perfect district season

AMARILLO — The Pampa Harvester tennis team continued their undefeated district season with a win over Caprock, 17-1.

This is Pampa's second defeat of Caprock. The first meeting also resulted in a 17-1 victory for the Harvesters. This win improves the Harvesters' district record to 7-0 and 11-5 overall. It clinched a tie for the district championship with two matches remaining for Pampa.

"I am extremely proud of the teams' ability to get the job done week after week," said Pampa head coach Carolyn Quarles. "Caprock played very hard, coming at us strong in doubles. Russ DuBose and Michael Cornelison had a great day. They defeated the No. 1 doubles team (6-2, 6-2) after falling to them in three sets at the previous meeting. They followed by beating the same two young men in singles very decisively.

DuBose won 6-1, 6-0 and Cornelison won, 6-0, 6-3 in singles.

"These two guys made a decision and stepped their game up," Quarles added.

The Pampa ladies team is now 7-1-1 in district play and the men are 59-12 in individual matches.

Jaguars use big plays to beat Dolphins

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The unbeaten Jacksonville Jaguars started with a big play and finished with another one Monday night.

Fred Taylor scored on a 77-yard run on the first play, and Mark Brunell hit Keenan McCardell with a 56-yard touchdown pass with 2:36 left for a 28-21 victory over the Miami Dolphins.

Brunell and McCardell also teamed up on a 23-yard scoring pass with 12 minutes remaining to tie the game.

Jacksonville, Denver and Minnesota are the only undefeated teams in the NFL. The Jaguars (5-0), who have won four games by a total of 18 points, took a two-game lead over second-place Pittsburgh in the AFC Central.

Miami (3-2) fell one game behind AFC East leader New England.

The Dolphins squandered the best performance of the season by Dan Marino, who had been handcuffed by conservative play-calling in earlier games. He went 29-for-47 for 320 yards and two scores, but he lost a fumble when sacked by Tony Brackens with two minutes left, ending Miami's final threat at the Jacksonville 38.

Brackens, who both forced and recovered the fumble, was playing for the first time this season after returning from an ankle injury.

Braves rally by Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Atlanta Braves beat Kevin Brown in a totally unexpected situation, and now they are halfway to playoff history.

No team has ever trailed 3-0 in a seven-game series and come back to win. In fact, no team has even forced a sixth game after falling behind 3-0.

Then again, there's never been another team quite like these Braves.

San Diego was five outs away from its first World Series in 14 years when Atlanta wrecked the Padres' strategy of bringing on Brown, who built a reputation as a Braves killer. Michael Tucker hit a go-ahead, three-run homer that sent Atlanta to a 7-6 win Monday night in Game 5 of the NL championship series.

The Braves are heading back home trailing 3-2 and ready to roll out Tom Glavine and Greg Maddux in an attempt to get to their fifth World Series this decade.

Speaking of unusual moves, Maddux closed Monday night's game for the first save of his pro career, getting the last out when his nemesis, Tony Gwynn, grounded out.

"This is big for us," Tucker said. "We got two games, and we're taking it back to Atlanta. And everything pretty much is going our way. If we keep the pressure on, keep things going, we'll be pretty successful with it."

The move by Padres manager Bruce Bochy looked good in the seventh, when Brown came on with a 4-2 lead, a runner on and no outs and retired the side.

But in the eighth, Brown didn't look nearly as sharp as he did when he won Game 2 3-0 with a three-hitter Thursday night in Atlanta. He walked Ryan Klesko leading off the eighth, and Javy Lopez reached on an infield single.

With one out, Tucker lined a 3-2 pitch over the right-field fence to give Atlanta a 5-4 lead.

With the crowd of 58,988 sitting stunned, Tucker, who finished with five RBIs, pumped his fist as he rounded first and looked at the spot where the ball landed, as if amazed he really did it against Brown.

Then again, he was hitting .545 lifetime against the Padres ace.

"The feeling in the dugout was that we were going to get him," Tucker said. "He really didn't have that extra giddy-up you really want to have."

Tucker hit a forkball down. "I feel bad from the standpoint that we came back, only to give it back to them," Brown said.

Brown, 6-0 with a 1.85 ERA in his previous eight starts against Atlanta, was the loser in just his third career relief appearance.

"I feel like I had my best guy out there with a chance to win the ballgame, who was rested, and I'll take my chances there," Bochy said. "Sure it didn't work out, and I take responsibility for that. Sure it's a calculated risk, but I thought it was well worth taking."

Bochy said there was no discussion about bringing in left-hander Randy Myers, acquired in part because the Padres figured they'd meet Atlanta in the playoffs.

Myers threw 2.6 pitches on Sunday, loading the bases ahead of Andres Galarraga's grand slam off Dan Miceli in Atlanta's 8-3 win.

"He (Brown) just ran a deep count, and I just had all the confidence in the world in Brownie there," Bochy said.

Raiders take sole possession of 1st in peewee football

PAMPA — The battle for sole possession of first place took place at the Pampa Middle School Saturday afternoon between the home team Cowboys and the visiting Ford Body Shop Raiders.

The Cowboys received the opening kickoff. Cowboy Quarterback Mateo Campos showing great ball control was able to drive the Cowboys to the end-zone. The two-point conversion was good. Cowboys led 8-0.

On the Raiders first play from scrimmage, power runner Mark Williams broke on the left side of the Cowboy defense for a 65-yard touchdown run. Williams also scored on the two-point conversion.

The score was tied 8-8 to end the first quarter. What is fast becoming a Raider tradition of giving up a score on their first defensive series and then buckling down and playing outstanding defense came true again. Raiders Shaun Carey, Chadd Malone, Chris Veal and Dusty Langley with corners Cam Seger and Dusty Lenderman stopped the Cowboys on fourth and six.

The Raider offensive unit stepped on the field again. Kyle Cambern running right, found tough resistance with Britton East and Mitchell Carroll slowing Cambern to a five yard gain. Williams again running left broke loose for a 70-yard touchdown. The two-point conversion failed. The Raiders led 14-8.

Again the Cowboys couldn't find any running room and the clock expired to end the first half of play. Raiders were up 14-8.

Sharrod Young returned the opening kickoff of the third quarter, 45 yards to help set up the third Raider touchdown of the afternoon. Kyle Cambern broke through the middle for a 30 yard touchdown run. Williams ran in the two point conversion. Raiders led 22-8.

Raiders defense led by front four Ryan Lewis, Jordan Mayberry, Jerrold Winegeart and Trent Majors stopped the Cowboys on a fourth and 15 play. The Raider offense again took over with key blocks from Ricky Harville, Michael Pergeson and Chris Jimenez. Williams again raced 78 yards for his third touchdown of the afternoon. Cambern ran the two point conversion for a 30-8 Raider lead.

At the end of the third quarter, the Raiders were up 30-8. The Cowboys having little success running the ball tried going to the air but were thwarted by Jarett Kotara, Young and Cam Seger. In the fourth quarter, running backs Shane Goldsmith, Billy Cruz moved the ball to the 30 yard line before being stopped by Mitchell Carroll on fourth down. Raider defenders Hawk Tucker, Jarrod Moler and Ryan Hook helped stop the Cowboys drive.

On the Raiders last possession, a miscue gave the Cowboys the ball back in good field position. Brant Atwood and Julian Salazar along with Miles Winton and Lexton Rabel saw to it that the Cowboys didn't advance the ball. The Raiders ran out the clock to end the game.

Mark Williams led all rushers with 219 yards. Williams carried the ball only five times and scored three touchdowns and two point conversions for a total of 22 Raider points. Kyle Cambern scored a touchdown and a two point conversion for a total of eight points.

Rushing totals: Williams, 219 yards; Cambern, 85 yards; Young, 15 yards; Goldsmith, 12 yards; Cruz, eight yards. Total Raider yards: 339.

Cowboys rushed for 98 yards and were one for six in passing with 12 yards.

Raiders moved to 4-0 and guaranteed themselves first place with one game to go against 0-4 Sunray. The Cowboys 3-1 will play Dumas Sunset 3-1 for second place in Dumas this Saturday.

Big 12 starting to achieve elite status

DALLAS (AP) — The merger of the Big Eight and half the Southwest Conference was supposed to create a superconference that would challenge for national titles every fall and put teams all over the Top 25.

Guess what? It's happening. Three years into the experiment many felt was a can't-miss, the Big 12 is finally beginning to live up to its billing. Half of the league is ranked and three are in the top 10.

"I think the league is coming into its own," said Mack Brown, in his first year at Texas and the Big 12 after watching it develop while at North Carolina.

"The first two years it was a little harder to mesh two leagues that had been so competitive against each other in recruiting. Usually the third year is when those things start happening.

"Right now, this league is one of the best in the country." The first two years produced several highly ranked teams and even a national champion Nebraska last season. But beyond the top layer of talent, the league was filled with also-rans.

That's not the case anymore. Now, teams are having all sorts of trouble looking for those sure wins on their schedule.

Oklahoma State is coming off losses against No. 8 Nebraska (5-1) and No. 22 Texas Tech (6-0) and is heading into games against No. 4 Kansas State (5-0), Oklahoma (2-3) and No. 10 Texas A&M (5-1).

Missouri (4-1), ranked 20th, plays Oklahoma this weekend then will be at Nebraska, at Texas Tech, home against No. 19 Colorado (5-1), at A&M and then close the season at home against Kansas State.

"I didn't particularly expect to play undefeated, undefeated, undefeated," Oklahoma State coach Bob Simmons said Monday during a conference call between league coaches and reporters.

"But that's the position we're in and we've got to face the facts: for us to be a factor in this race, we've got to find a way to win these types of ballgames." Almost every Big 12 team has done something right this season.

Kansas (2-4, 0-4) has led in the second quarter of all four losses, even on the road against A&M. Baylor (2-3, 1-2) beat North Carolina State when it was No. 20 and only lost to Colorado by two points in Boulder. Oklahoma (2-3, 0-2) could've started the year 4-0 with more accurate kickers.

"Every weekend you're seeing teams that are fighting," Brown said. "The comparative scores in this league are scary at how close they can be."

The notion that the four former Southwest Conference schools were riding the coattails of the former Big Eight teams also is no longer true. This past weekend, all four SWC holdovers beat former Big Eight foes: A&M upset Nebraska, Texas crushed Oklahoma, Texas Tech got past Oklahoma State and Baylor came back to beat Kansas.

"It gives some indication that this is going to be a balanced league," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "In two years we've had two champions, one from the North and one from the South. I think we've already demonstrated there's some balance in the league."

EXTRA POINTS:
The Texas Longhorns are idle this week, but coach Mack Brown isn't taking any time off from promoting running back Ricky Williams for the Heisman Trophy.

Williams has 1,225 yards this year and continues etching his name in the NCAA record books. He has scored the most touchdowns, is a few points from the all-time scoring mark and is No. 3 on the career rushing list at 5,380 yards, behind only Tony Dorsett (6,082) and Charles White (5,598).

"I think if Ricky breaks Tony Dorsett's record he has to win the Heisman," Brown said.

The quote of the week comes from Oklahoma coach John Blake, who says he's not worried about talk that his job is in jeopardy.

"I think there's been some things written about me and the program since Day 1, so it doesn't surprise me. Our players are still fired up. We've still got a lot of pride. The rest of it is out of my hands."

Power play working for Stars

IRVING, Texas — While the Stars acquired free-agent winger Brent Severyn in the off-season as a form of protection to keep opponents from getting too physical, the real enforcer for the team this season could be the power play.

After rumbling through the pre-season with 13 power-play goals in eight games, the Stars stepped up the pace in Saturday's season opener, blistering the Buffalo Sabres for three power play goals in eight chances. Not only did the success with the man advantage pave the way for a 4-1 win, it also left a feisty Buffalo team weakened by the fact it could not afford to take any penalties.

"It's a big deal, it gets them to back off," winger Pat Verbeek said. "If you can score on the power play, it changes the game." That was no more important than on the first goal of the game. The speedy Sabres were zipping about in the opening nine minutes, buzzing the Stars' net and playing the tenacious, on-the-edge sort of game that led them to the Eastern Conference Finals last season. That was until Sabres winger Curtis Brown was whistled for an obstruction penalty — part of the Sabres' style of gritty defensive play — sending the Stars on their first power play at the 9:43 mark of the first period.

Fifty-seven seconds later, the Stars had their first power-play goal of the season as defenseman Darryl Sydor completed a smooth passing play by slipping a wristed pass to Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek.

With that, the Stars had the all-important first goal (they were 42-8-8 when scoring first last season) and had control of the game.

"The power play is going to be an important part of the game this season," Stars center Mike Modano said. "Sometimes, you're going to get eight, nine, 10 chances on the power play."

With the NHL trying to open up the game for more skating, they have instructed referees to call even the petty stuff. That league officials reason, will eventually stop teams like the Stars and Sabres from playing a clutch and grab style of game.

"It's going to be a short-term pain for a long-term gain," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "In the meantime, you're going to have to be prepared to play a lot of special teams."

But while the Stars eventually frustrated the Sabres by making them pay for their mistakes, the Sabres never answered. And that could become a recurring theme in Stars games this season. The team brings back the top-ranked power play in the NHL (77 for 385 for 20.0 percent) from last season, as well as the second-ranked penalty-killing unit (309 for 351 for 88.0 percent).

The Stars' power play has a real chance to improve on those numbers. With the addition of Brett Hull in the off-season, the Stars have added another element to their attack — an element that has excelled on the power play his entire career. Hull had an assist on Saturday, but just as important, he had six shots and drew plenty of attention away from Modano, who was blanketed for much of last season.

Free to skate, Modano was able to get a goal and two assists to lead the Stars.

"Brett has a really good feel for getting open in the slot and he's definitely going to draw a lot of attention," Modano said.

Ironically, Hull wasn't a part of the first goal as Jere Lehtinen made a hustling play to keep the puck in the offensive zone. Modano then threaded a perfect cross-ice pass to Sydor that had the Sabres' collective head spinning.

But just as much as that power play goal was a thing of beauty, the next one was as ugly as they come. Grant Marshall charged the net to try to beat Hasek and the rebound lay out in front of the net until Verbeek swept in and chipped the puck in.

"We give them two very different looks, and I think that's a good thing," Verbeek said. "Modano and those guys are more speed and pretty passes and we're going to get in your face a little more." In fact, the general thinking has been that when Joe Nieuwendyk returns from rehabilitating his two injured knees, he will play with Modano and Hull on a superstar power play. But the best strategy might be to keep Modano, Hull and Lehtinen together and come back with a second line of Nieuwendyk, Verbeek and Jamie Langenbrunner. As Verbeek said, the two units could feed off each other because they would be giving the penalty killers so many different looks.

Clinton gives Milosevic four-day deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton says Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic has four days to fulfill his promise to comply with U.N. demands on Kosovo or face swift military action by NATO forces. He spoke skeptically of the chances of avoiding airstrikes.

"Commitments are not compliance," Clinton said of Milosevic's last-minute agreement Monday to comply with U.N. Security Council Resolution 1199 demanding an end to attacks on ethnic Albanians in Kosovo and the start of credible talks on autonomy for Kosovo.

"Balkan graveyards are filled with President Milosevic's broken promises," Clinton added.

In hastily arranged remarks Monday evening in between Democratic fund-raisers in New York, Clinton said NATO's political leadership, meeting in Brussels, Belgium, took a dual-track approach: It authorized airstrikes but also gave Milosevic a four-day breathing period.

In those four days international inspectors will try to verify that Milosevic has fully met his commitments.

"If these commitments are met — and the international community will be able to see for itself whether they are met — they could provide the basis for peace and progress," Clinton said. He called the full implementation of Milosevic's promises "a critical and very big 'if.'"

Clinton said Milosevic had agreed to permit a "robust" team of international inspectors to see that Serb troops pull back, that refugees be allowed to return to their homes and that other conditions of the U.N. Security Council are met.

National Security Adviser Sandy Berger said on ABC's "Good Morning America" today that the agreement provides for a very substantial verification mission on the ground, perhaps 2,000 or more people who can monitor what's happening.

"It provides for a comprehensive air surveillance system with the ground radars and the other air defense systems in Kosovo turned off. So we will be able to determine for ourselves" whether Milosevic is complying.

White House press secretary Joe Lockhart said the monitoring force would include an unknown number of Americans. Any American participants would not include combat troops, Lockhart said. He said some U.S. civilians could be involved. He had no details.

Clinton said NATO's decision marked just the second time in the alliance's nearly 50-year history that it authorized the use of force — and the first time in the case of a country brutally repressing its own people. The first NATO military strikes were in Bosnia in September 1995; they led to the Dayton peace accords that ended the civil war in Bosnia.

House sends Senate business tax package; White House seeks more

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has approved a relatively modest, $9.2 billion tax package renewing expiring business tax credits and providing benefits for farmers and self-employed people who pay their own health insurance premiums.

The measure — all that's left of the $80 billion Republican tax cut that died last week in the Senate — was passed Monday night on a voice vote without dissent. Senators have a rival, $8.4 billion version that could be considered today.

Further complicating final negotiations of the 105th Congress is President Clinton's wish to attach to the tax measure a plan to use tax credits to free up $21.8 billion in revenue bond proceeds for new school construction.

Key Republicans rejected the president's suggestion out of hand, partly because it included tax increases on business to pay for Superfund environmental cleanups and on companies that pay taxes abroad.

"These aren't serious proposals," said House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas. "These are poison pills, and the White House knows the Congress won't swallow them."

Despite all these competing interests, most lawmakers predicted some form of the "extenders" package that renews the business credits would win final approval.

"These are all consensus items," said Rep. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, a Ways and Means Committee member. "It would be terrible tax policy it were not done."

There are areas of agreement in the Senate and House bills.

Both would renew credits for research and development, for businesses that hire workers from certain disadvantaged groups and for businesses that operate in foreign countries. The House extends most of the credits until Dec. 31, 1999; the Senate's sunset date is June 30, 1999.

Both would make permanent income averaging for farmers, which allows them tax advantages to smooth out income ups and downs. Farmers would get favorable tax treatment for government transition payments they accept a few months early to help deal with an ongoing crop price downturn.

Mars is place of violent winds, floods researchers say

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The rock and soil of Mars bear evidence that the red planet is a far more violent place than Earth, with storm winds gusting to 350 mph and powerful floods erupting across vast areas.

"Mars is a small planet that does things in a very big way," John Pearl of Goddard Space Flight Center said at meeting Monday of the planetary division of the American Astronomical Society.

which has been orbiting the planet for 13 months, show that Mars is scoured by high-speed winds in storms that cover virtually an entire side of the planet, and that flood waters have exploded out of dammed up craters at speeds of more than 100 mph.

"The floods could have lasted for months," said Michael C. Malin, a research scientist on the Mars Observer team who analyzed one such flood. The water flow, he said, was 1,000 times greater than floods that have struck the U.S. Midwest in recent years.

The waters poured out of a high crater that towers over nearby flat plains and churned across the planet's surface, rolling huge boulders and carving canyons in a matter of weeks. Eventually, the water slowed and spread out into a flat basin and turned into a mud flow.

Malin said the water then either evaporated into the dry Martian atmosphere or seeped back into the soil.

AFAA to hold Southwest art show

AMARILLO — Amarillo Fine Arts Association will celebrate its 35th year with the Best of the Southwest Art Show to be held during regular business hours Oct. 16-23 in the lobby of Amarillo National Bank, downtown Amarillo. Artists will be competing for more than $3,000 in prize money donated by area businesses and individuals.

The annual event will showcase 150 recent works by local and area artists working in a variety of media and subjects including oils, watercolors, acrylics, pastels, drawings, photography, sculpture, stained glass and miniatures. The judge for this year's show will be Sandra Carpenter, editor of "The Artist's Magazine," a national art publication headquartered in Cincinnati.

Carpenter will be selecting 150 pieces for exhibit from approximately 250 pieces entered by more than 100 area artists. She will also be selecting first, second and third place winners in each of nine categories as well as Best of Show and David Beck Memorial Award.

Carpenter will give a program on how to get published Oct. 15 in Fellowship Hall of First Presbyterian Church in Amarillo. A reception will be held from 7-9 p.m. Oct. 20 at the bank. The public is invited to attend both events. Patrons will be able to buy any of the art during the reception at a 20 percent reduction in the marked prices. Proceeds from the exhibit will be used to promote interest in the visual arts through the various programs of AFAA and to provide college scholarships to deserving area high school seniors through the annual High School Scholarship Show. During the past 35 years, AFAA has raised more than $60,000 in art scholarships.

Speech and Debate team prepares for competition

Pampa High School Speech and Debate team prepares each week for their tournaments. Tournaments are held at different high schools or universities. Students compete in different events like Prose Reading, Poetry, Reading, Humorous Interpretation, Dramatic Interpretation, Duet Acting, and Debate. Students have to prepare their selections and compete against different students from around the area. The team had its first tournament at Friendship High in Worth Worth, Tx. Making it to semi-finals were Desirae Davis, Danny Kirkpatrick, Lacy Plunk, Josh Harrison, and Charles Martinez. Making it to finals and placing 8th was Lacy Plunk in her Dramatic Interpretation.

Officers were also elected Lacy Plunk-President, Michelle Gandy-Vice-President, Josh Harrison-Secretary, Angie D'Jesus-Treasurer. They all have specific duties to carry out, but their main job is to help all the new team members and make them feel comfortable. The team also held its 2nd annual tournament recently, where 18 schools attended the tournament. The Speech/Debate team has 26 members and is coached by Roger Reyna.

ADULT & PEDIATRIC UROLOGY

Dr. Worthen

Rodney L. Worthen, MD, board certified in adult and pediatric Urology

BACKGROUND:

- Bachelor of Science, Cameron University
- Doctor of Medicine, University of Oklahoma College of Medicine
- Internship, University of Missouri - Columbia Hospital and Clinics, Columbia, Missouri
- Residency in General Surgery, University of Missouri - Columbia Hospital and Clinics, Columbia, Missouri
- Residency in Urology, University of Missouri - Columbia Hospital and Clinics, Columbia, Missouri
- Certified, American Board of Urology

Dr. Worthen, a native of Lawton, Oklahoma, established his practice in Börger on October 1, 1998.

As a specialist in adult and pediatric urology, Dr. Worthen treats patients of all ages who have infections, trauma, or diseases of the urinary tract. He works closely with the family physician, who may have been the one to recognize the urologic problem.

Frequently, a person who notices a change in urination patterns, bleeding or pain in the kidneys or bladder may seek the services of a urologist. In his practice, Dr. Worthen treats kidney stones, stones in the bladder, infections, incontinence, sexual dysfunction, prostate cancer, cystitis, urinary retention, bladder tumors and other malfunctions of the urinary system.

Dr. Worthen will treat patients Monday through Friday, by appointment. Call today for further information or to schedule an appointment.
