DALLAS (AP) — The housewife on death row for the murder of her 5-year-old son left a state prison in Gatesville today to attend a Friday court hearing in Dallas.

Darlie Routier's attorney said the district court hearing involves an appeal regarding possible discrepancies in the transcript from her capital murder trial.

Stephen Cooper, Mrs. Routier's attorney, said he does not expect Mrs. Routier, 28, to take the stand during Friday's hearing, unless "something strange happens."

Mrs. Routier was convicted in February 1997 of killing a son, Damon, in the family's Rowlett home 20 miles east of Dallas in June of 1996. She is on death row for the stabbing death, but has appealed her conviction.

Her 6-year-old son Devon also died in the attack, which she claims was the work of an intruder.

What will you be willing to change to make Pampa grow?

It's one of the questions being asked of focus groups being conducted by Caroline Chamblin and the Pampa Economic Development Corporation. Chamblin is a community planner and facilitator who is conducting meetings with interested Pampa citizens this week.

While getting input from the citizens is the primary purpose of the groups Chamblin is also passing along information.

3-2 vote paves way for pay off on loan pledge

By KATE B. DICKSON

"It's obviously a disappointment. Someone had to be asleep at the switch at (FirstBank Southwest) to let this happen," said Pampa Mayor Bob Neslage.

And with that and other comments made, city commissioners voted 3-2 Tuesday to approve repayment of about 40 percent — or $22,000 — of a loan taken out by Parker and Parker, former Coronado Inn owners.

Voting in favor of payment were Mayor Neslage and Commissioners Faustina Curry and Robert Dixon. Casting no votes were Commissioners Jeff McCormick and Jeff Andrews.

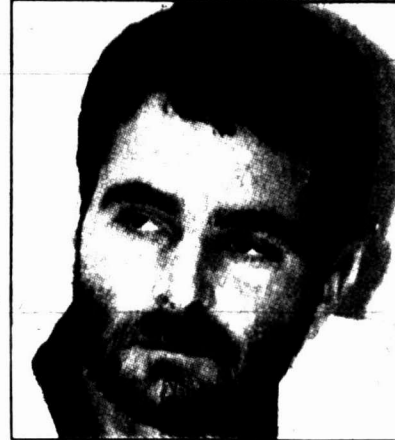

Told of the comments and action taken, FirstBank's Phil Gentry, president of the local facility, declined comment this morning in a telephone interview.

"I just really can't discuss it because of the banking (privacy) regulations," Gentry said. "That's the problem, everybody else gets to tell their side of the story but we are prevented from

Domestic violence victims find almost no help in Ecuador

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Staff Writer

(This article is part of a series in recognition of national Domestic Violence Awareness month.)

To her surprise, one Pampa woman found that while abused children are cared for in Ecuador, there are no programs for women who are victims of domestic abuse.

Alice Ford, who went to Ecuador to visit a former exchange student, got the opportunity to visit with a lawyer there regarding the programs that are available for abused women and children in that country.

Ford, a volunteer for Tralee Crisis Center, said while vacationing in Ecuador, she hoped to speak to a government official about programs for victims of domestic violence.

But after finding there were no programs for abused women, she decided to interview her former exchange student's uncle, a lawyer in Quito.

Ramilo Montesdeoca told Ford that the children are the main concern of Ecuador right now, although there is one program for women that is just starting.

Officer's firing gets attention

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A national civil rights group has offered to help a former Arlington police officer get his job back after he was dismissed for wearing a Christian symbol on his uniform.

Sgt. George Daniels, a 13-year veteran, was fired in September for his refusal to quit wearing a small cross-shaped pin. An appeal hearing is set for Nov. 9, when Daniels is expected to ask for reinstatement.

"Depending on how that comes down, we will have to make a decision on whether to file in federal or state court, but we will be proceeding in court if we have to," said Jennifer Schans, an attorney and regional coordinator for the Rutherford Institute, a conservative law center in Charlottesville, Va., that has assisted Paula Jones in her sexual harassment lawsuit against President Clinton.

Ms. Schans characterized the matter as a free-speech issue.

"There is a possibility that there is someone out there that might be offended by the cross, but that doesn't take away from Mr. Daniels' constitutional right to wear a cross," she said.

Assistant City Attorney Barbara G. Heptig told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram no one complained about the cross on Daniels' collar, but by wearing it he violated city policy.

Police department policy states that "no button, badge, medal or similar symbol or item not listed in this General Order will be worn on the uniform unless approved by the police chief in writing on an individual basis."

In July, Daniels met with Police Chief David Kunkle and asked for permission to wear the pin. Kunkle said no, but Daniels continued to wear it, according to department memoranda.

LOAN

doing so by banking regulations." On Oct. 20, the Pampa Economic Development Commission voted 3-1 to pay the loan because it had previously agreed to guarantee the loan between the bank and Parker and Parker. Their vote had to receive commission approval to be final.

The loan was taken out to pay back taxes and was supposed to be secured by a tax lien, Lew Mollenkamp, director of the PEDC, said earlier this month.

A tax lien usually has priority over any other loans on a property but apparently the local bank subordinated, or gave up, its first lien position.

When the bank subordinated the loan, the PEDC was not notified — something Mollenkamp believes should have been done. And because the PEDC guarantee does cover such situations, it was left holding the bag.

Neslage was also critical of what he called an "unfortunate situation" in that FirstBank Southwest and Parker and Parker used the same attorney to handle the matter.

Speaking in the work session before the regular commission meeting, Mollenkamp said, "These were not easy negotiations. There were definitely some strong opinions on our side. We came out a little ahead ... they (FirstBank Southwest) are covering more than we are."

COMMISSION MEETING

Though not in Pampa at the time, Mollenkamp said the project with Parker and Parker was "one that probably should have been done ... the whole objective was (to avoid) what a number of people felt could be a major problem ... for the (Coronado Inn) to be boarded up."

Likewise, Andrews, who attended the PEDC meeting, said, "I think this guarantee did keep the place open and did provide a benefit at the time."

But, Andrews said, "the PEDC was put in a very awkward position. We owe them a lot of thanks ... for (working out) something that leans less on their side of the fault line."

The commissioner said he recalls when the budget amendment was made for the loan guarantee in which he said there were "project risks" regarding the awards and benefits versus the risk.

Not realizing at the time there was "bank risk" too, Andrews said he'll "think totally different" next time the PEDC comes before the commission with a loan guarantee request.

nesses might bring to town. Possible problems might include more traffic, and a changing type of population. She also is pointing out that doing nothing will mean a decrease in the size of the area which will also result in "a different kind of change."

While she said only a small group of participants are really against growth, the groups have involved some "fairly interesting discussions, with different points of view."

Some of the things she said surprised her are the strong feelings about moving something like a telemarketing operation into the city. Much of that resistance she said was based on the false assumptions that more calls would be made to local residents. She said such centers work on a regional or national basis not local.

There was debate in some of the groups about livestock production versus livestock processing, according to Chamblin. She said some believe one is an environmental problem and some blame the other for problems.

She has also mentioned other reasons that Pampa and Gray County need to bring in more industry including the higher median age of the residents. The median age here is 36 while in the rest of Texas it is 30, which she calls a huge difference demographically. Besides having to bring in more people and business to help support an aging population she pointed out that services like hospitals need to have working people with insurance plans to help pay to keep viable health care available.

One item she has emphasized to the groups is the multiplier effect, that every new job brought into an area in certain fields creates three to four other jobs in support. Some industries have an even higher multiplier effect, according to Lew Mollenkamp director of the PEDC. He cited the dairy industry as one that can generate more support jobs than the average.

There are still some vacancies for the Thursday night focus group and one that is being held Saturday according to Chamblin. She and Mollenkamp said they would like to get some younger people involved since they will be the most affected by any changes, but anyone is welcome to sign up and discuss ideas with a group. To sign up for either group citizens can call 665-5553.

Thousands of young girls turn out for Spice Girl auditions

NEW YORK (AP) — Many parents would cringe at the sight of their preteen daughters baring their midriffs and sporting rub-off tattoos, platform shoes and clip-on navel rings.

But thousands of mothers and fathers accompanied their scantily-clad offspring to an audition Tuesday. The children were vying for a chance to be their favorite Spice Girl in a commercial.

"She loves the Spice Girls, Baby Spice in particular, and mom had to work," said 34-year-old Bill Sanger of 7-year-old daughter Brittany. "I don't want her to look back as an adult and wonder if she had the stuff to be a star."

Out of a sea of miniature Baby, Scary, Posh and Sporty wannabes — no Gingers, thank you (she quit the group earlier this year) — only one set of Spice Girl look-alikes were chosen.

The winners were Carissa Farina, 10, as Sporty; Sarah Back, 10, as Posh; Dina Lorraine Moakley, 9, as Baby; and Nirine Brown, 12, as Scary. All the girls are from New York.

The commercial, for a line of dolls and other Spice Girls products, begins filming next week. While the auditions were limited to kids between the ages of five and 12, the competition was hardly kid's stuff.

One 9-year-old Scary Spice imitator, sporting oversized plastic green glasses and a spray-aided hairdo that can only be described as untamed, coolly surveyed a rival and said: "You look nothing like her."

The response was immediate and crushing, and it came with a faux British accent. "Well, Scares-me-Spice, I can sing, I can dance, I can act. We'll see what they say inside."

Parents could offer only wan smiles for each other. And many didn't pretend to know a thing about the British pop group.

"Honestly, I don't know Baby Spice from heather spice," said Sanger.

"Oh dad," said blond pony-tailed Brittany, covering her eyes. "Please, not so loud."

AMARILLO — Can teenagers persuade younger children to make the right choice in life? Two Pampa students attended a presentation on recently in Amarillo sponsored by the Moose International Youth Awareness Program that discussed this issue.

The program organizes high school-aged leaders into effective "speakers bureaus" to persuade pre-school and elementary age youngsters against using drugs and alcohol.

Students were challenged to find opportunities to speak with groups of children in programs like cub scouts, brownies, Sunday school classes, and elementary school classes.

The Pampa teens, Cynthia Davis and Annette Botello, will complete a minimum of three "Moose Kid Talks." Victoria Davis and Pampa Moose Lodge member D.J. Williams were also in attendance.

The program was conducted at Freedom Baptist Church in Amarillo. The guest speaker was TABC Officer Bob Russell, formerly of Pampa.

Amarillo Symphony to present Mendelssohn's Oratorio 'Elijah'

AMARILLO — For the third subscription concert of the season, the Amarillo Symphony will present Felix Mendelssohn's Oratorio "Elijah" at 8 p.m. Nov. 21 in the Civic Center Auditorium. Music Director and Conductor James Setapen will lead the orchestra, four vocal soloists and a chorus of over 240 singers.

The concert is sponsored by NationsBank.

"For this grand production the Amarillo Symphony has invited choruses from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma," said Setapen. "The text is based on the Old Testament which excited Mendelssohn to write some of his most dramatic and beautiful music."

Singers for the 240 member chorus will come from the Amarillo Civic Chorus, Dr. Steven Weber, director; the Eastern New Mexico University Chorus, Dr. David Gerig, director; and the Canterbury Choral Society from Oklahoma City, Dr. Dennis Shrock, director. The vocal soloists are soprano Lucy Creech, mezzo-soprano Linda Munguia, tenor Karl Dent and bass-baritone Terry Cook.

"We are very happy to bring back Plainview native, bass-baritone Terry Cook to sing the title role in this work," said Setapen. Cook last appeared with the Amarillo Symphony in Beethoven's Opera "Fidelio" in 1995. "Linda Munguia sang Carmen with the Amarillo Opera in 1997," Setapen said.

Creech is a Texas native and lives in Dallas and Karl Dent teaches voice at Texas Tech in Lubbock. "Benjamin Simpson, a member of the Amarillo Boy Choir, will also sing a brief solo."

"For the 19th century and part of the 20th, Mendelssohn's Oratorio 'Elijah' was considered second only to Handel's Messiah as the greatest piece of music," Setapen explained.

Mendelssohn wrote about his masterpiece, "I thought of Elijah as a thorough prophet, such as we might again require in our own day (1846) — energetic and jealous, but also stern and wrathful."

The work will be sung in English and the words will also be projected above the orchestra as supertitles to make the text clearer for the audience.

For more information, call the Symphony office at (806) 376-8782.

Red Cross is vital part of community

This article is one in a series of profiles on the agencies and organizations supported by Pampa United Way. This information is being provided by Pampa United Way as part of its 1998 "The Power of U" campaign.

When we go to work each morning we never dream of getting a phone call telling us that our house is on fire.

Yet this happens to people like us every day, as do floods, tornadoes and other disasters.

Serving Pampa since 1918, the Red Cross is dedicated to easing human suffering. When a disaster strikes a community or family, they bring food and shelter to the victims and help them get back on their feet with clothing, household items, medical supplies, utility assistance and emergency health needs. They help locate people in disaster areas through the Disaster Welfare Inquiry and they track down military personnel to deliver urgent messages.

Prevention of potential problems is a primary goal. Free educational programs are offered in the community. Some of the Red Cross educational programs that benefit the community include:

- Home Alone Program
- FACT — First Aid for Children Today Disaster Education Programs
- Blood Borne Pathogens
- BAT — Basic Aid Training
- CPR for Adults, Children and Infants
- Financial Counseling
- Water Safety Classes

Drop by the Gray County Red Cross office any Friday and join your friends and neighbors taking part in free blood pressure and blood sugar testing. While you are there, check out the Medical Loan Closet, which offers use of such items as hospital beds, walkers, crutches and wheelchairs free of charge.

The American Red Cross is a vital part of our community. Its many services are available to us because of the Pampa United Way.

HOW ABOUT SOME FACTS:

Dear Voters:

In compliance with the Judicial Code of Ethics, Judge Sims cannot comment on his actions in moving the triple-murder Skinner case; however, I would like to take this opportunity to tell you what I observed as the bailiff for the 31st District Court. I have held this position for the past eight years, after having served as deputy for Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

The Skinner case was moved only after the defense made the motion to move the case, and the state's attorney agreed to the motion. Because there was no courtroom available in in the Panhandle for the necessary 6 to 8 weeks, the trial was moved to Ft. Worth upon suggestion of the state's attorney and agreement of the defense counsel.

Ft. Worth was the closest location where the type of security necessary was already in place, and also where the state's and defendant's experts lived and the scientific testing had been done. In any event, regardless of the location of the trial, the cost and expense would have been substantially the same.

In this case a heinous crime had been committed, and Judge Sims saw that a fair trial was held and justice was served. The conviction and death sentence have been upheld by the appellate courts.

I hope this small explanation will shed some light on the many considerations involved with Judge Sims' thousands of rulings. I believe Judge Sims has disposed of all of his cases in a fair and just manner, with all citizen's rights and the taxpayer's interests in mind.

Opinion

A race to divide America in the works

■ Report is weak and touts a cynical view.
 If you agree that America "cut its eye teeth on racism" and is "expert" at imposing its racism on "other people at other times," as the chairman of the President's Initiative on Race once put it, then you likely will be pleased by the final report the commission issued recently.

But we find it a cynical and ill-conceived view at the foundation of what is altogether a weak report. Besides calling for the creation of a permanent council to monitor U.S. race relations, the commission reshaped America's racist past and pushed for continuing race-based policies to create what it calls "one America."

You'd think the commission, charged with engaging America in a year-long "dialogue" about race, was in some sort of time warp oblivious to the real problems in many minority communities and ignorant of the failure of the race-based policies the administration is pushing.

The report wrongly argues that affirmative action should make further inroads in society: "But now, more than ever, racial discrimination is not only about skin color and other physical characteristics associated with race, it is also about other aspects of our identity, such as ethnicity, national origin, language, accent, religion and cultural customs."

In other words, the commission is advocating expanding affirmative action to cover newly defined groups based on ever-more uncertain characteristics.

With this mind-set, coming at a time when people more than ever want to be recognized for their singular achievements and attributes, it's no wonder the government-sponsored dialogue quickly degenerated into a monologue. Commission members, by the way, were carefully selected to reflect the president's outlook. Though one televised forum grudgingly allowed a conservative to have her say, the commission's membership was uniformly liberal on the matter of affirmative action.

The commission says the government needs to launch a nationwide media blitz to remind Americans about its legacy of "white privilege." This sort of nonsense only promotes the concept that group identity is more important than individual rights, which were a signal insight of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution.

Most Americans, however, seem to have ignored the Official Government Race Conversation. More meaningful debate is going on at America's grass roots, Clint Bolick told us; he's the director of litigation for the Washington-based Institute for Justice, which uses the legal system to promote libertarian causes. "The only people who are not (part of the debate) are the denizens of the old guard civil rights establishment. They are so far behind the times."

What type of debate is he referring to?
 "Parents are mobilizing for school-choice programs and churches are trying to bring economic opportunities into the inner city and help people transition off of welfare," Bolick said. "So I see real progress at the grass roots and just a bunch of counterproductive pablum at the ivory tower."

Speaking in Long Beach to the free-market Foundation Francisco Marroquin, syndicated columnist Walter Williams also chided the president's race commission for its reliance on outmoded liberal ideas. Williams said government regulations that restrict business opportunities — not old-time racism — are the greatest impediment to minority progress.

Given these realities, then, the work of the president's race commission is not just unnecessary. It is downright harmful.

Creating a 'climate of hate'

Heads up, all you conservatives who thought the Clinton scandal marked the end of liberal media bias. Think again.

In the wake of the brutal murder of Matthew Shepard in Wyoming, liberal activists and interviewers on the morning news show teamed up to lay blame for the crime on the "Christian right." That this tactic is familiar does not make it any less outrageous or offensive.

The facts are these: A college student was abducted, tortured and left for dead (his broken body was tied to a fence for 18 hours) in Wyoming. He died several days later. Police say the motive for the crime was robbery. But there was also evidence that the two thugs who committed this act were able to abduct Shepard by at first posing as gay men.

Gay-rights groups and their sympathizers in the broadcast media seized upon this heinous murder as an opportunity to smear conservative Christians for creating a "climate of hate."

If this sounds familiar, it should. Following the bombing of the Murrah building in Oklahoma City by a Waco-obsessed fiend, the White House blamed talk radio and, with a wink and a nod, all conservatives, for creating a climate of anti-government extremism.

A month or two before Matthew Shepard's murder, some conservative Christian groups had circulated print and television ads suggesting that it is possible to leave gay orientation behind and even marry and have children. According to the Family Research Council, one of the groups that sponsored the ads, thousands of men and women have successfully altered their sexual orientation.

Mona Charen
 Syndicated columnist

Now, it is understandable that gay activists, who want homosexuality to stand on completely equal footing with heterosexuality and who are keen to be accepted and approved just the way they are, find these ads annoying. "Why should we want to change?" they ask. There is no greater morality or greater happiness to be had by converting to heterosexuality.

But it is quite simply slanderous to argue, as Elizabeth Birch, president of the Human Rights Campaign, did recently, that those ads are "pumping lies into every community in this country. They are dangerous and misguided." Or to suggest, as Katie Couric seemed to on the "Today Show" that ads like these "prompt people to say, 'If I meet someone who's homosexual, I'm going to take action and try to convince them or try to harm them.'"

This is a most cynical use of tragedy. First, on the matter of "creating a climate of hatred," none of those who so glibly suggest that Christian groups incited Matthew Shepard's murderers has produced one iota of evidence that those two creeps ever saw or read the advertisements in question. Further, even if they had seen them, it would be hard to imagine how something as innocuous as suggesting that counseling may help homosexuals become straight could even in the most twisted mind translate into "Go kill gays."

In fact, it is far from clear that anti-homosexual animus played any part in Shepard's murder. It may be that the two killers simply settled on the easiest way to lure an unsuspecting college student into a deserted area.

There is no question that anti-homosexual bias exists and that it has contributed to violence against gays. But that bias has been declining sharply over the past several years, particularly in the wake of the AIDS epidemic, which has generated sympathy for homosexuals. So if anyone is creating the climate these days, it would seem to be the gay activists, not the Christian right.

Homosexuals are perfectly within their rights, of course, to lobby for equal moral, political and legal standing in this society. But it is slimy and disreputable to attempt to tar one's opponents with the "hate" brush. There may be some Christians who hate gays — though that was by no means the message of the ads sponsored by Focus on the Family and the Family Research Council — and such hatred cannot be read into mere opposition to the gay-rights agenda. Moreover, baseless hatred is forbidden to Christians and Jews.

On the other hand, there are certainly a good many gay activists who hate the Christian right — and nothing in their credo seems to forbid indulging that hatred luxuriously.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 28, the 301st day of 1998. There are 64 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
 On Oct. 28, 1958, the Roman Catholic patriarch of Venice, Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli, was elected Pope; he took the name John XXIII.

On this date:
 In 1636, Harvard College was founded in Massachusetts.

In 1793, Eli Whitney applied for a patent for his cotton gin. The patent was granted the following March.

In 1886, the Statue of Liberty, a gift from the people of France, was dedicated in New York Harbor by President Cleveland.

In 1893, Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky conducted the first public performance of his Symphony Number Six in B minor ("Pathétique") in St. Petersburg, Russia, just nine days before his death.

In 1919, Congress enacted the Volstead Act, which provided for enforcement of Prohibition, over President Wilson's veto.

In 1922, fascism came to Italy as Benito Mussolini took control of the government.

In 1936, President Roosevelt rededicated the Statue of Liberty on its 50th anniversary.

In 1962, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev informed the United States that he had ordered the dismantling of Soviet missile bases in Cuba.

In 1980, President Carter and Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan faced off in a nationally broadcast, 90-minute debate in Cleveland.

Ten years ago: A French pharmaceutical company that manufactured the abortion pill RU-486 announced it would resume distribution on command of the French government.

Fostering further space exploration

John Glenn is a good, brave man who has given much to his country.

Whether he and NASA have made the right decision in sending Glenn back into space is an open question. It is, at least, among more people than are willing to publicly admit it.

The question hangs out there because Glenn's mission is part science and part publicity stunt.

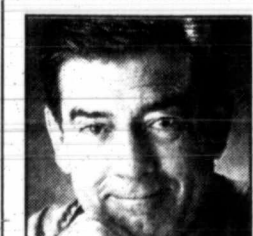

Glenn is eager to talk about the science part of it, what such a trip can teach about aging and medicine. He is reluctant, sometimes even dismissive, when the talk gets around to the publicity aspects.

He shouldn't be. There is nothing wrong with seeking publicity for a good cause. The future of this country as a space-faring nation is, many of us believe, a good cause.

Glenn doesn't talk about it, but what may be somewhere in the back of his mind is the mistake NASA and the late astronaut Alan Shepard made. Shepard, you may recall, was America's first man in space. (Glenn, just after him, was the first American to orbit the Earth.) Shepard retired from the space program but later came back, begging for a chance to walk on the moon.

NASA gave him a moon shot. Trouble was, once on the moon, Shepard pulled out a golf club and spent time demonstrating his favorite sport on the lunar surface. For what purpose, it was unclear.

What did soon become clear was that Shepard and NASA had blundered. The pictures of Shepard and his moon golf became campaign posters for those who opposed continuing to spend large sums for space exploration, especially further adventures to the moon.

Dan Rather
 Syndicated columnist

"You see," went the arguments, "it is a waste of money, all of these manned trips up there. This guy piddling around with his golf shot is a perfect demonstration, a metaphor we can all understand. Whatever we do from now on in space — and we ought to do a lot less — should concentrate on UNmanned flights." So said the detractors and doubters.

Not long after Shepard's excursion in the early 1970s, trips to the moon ceased. NASA was already having funding problems. It got worse. There were many reasons for this, including President Richard Nixon's lack of interest in space exploration and a basic disbelief in its importance.

There was much talk of "On to Mars!" just after the first manned moon landing in 1969. By the mid-1970s, it was gone. And NASA descended into having to fight ever-harder for money just to keep operating in any meaningful way.

So one can forgive John Glenn for being touchy when the publicity-seeking aspects of his mission are questioned.

Glenn is always at his best when talking about the future of exploring the cosmos and why America's should continue to be big dreamers and big doers up on the high frontier.

When your reporter sat down with him recently at his Houston training headquarters, he jumped at the chance to talk about humans going to Mars. Yes, he believes such trips are inevitable. No, he is not sure it will happen in his lifetime.

"Let's see. Do I think humans will be on Mars in, say, the next 20 to 25 years? Well, I'm just not sure. I hope so. But there is still so much to be done, so many more steps in between. And it WILL take money."

So he leaves it at that. He knows how hard getting the money will be. Brave John Glenn has made of himself a pretty good politician since his former astronaut days. He has learned well the politician's code, that "discretion is often the better part of valor." Especially when you're talking about the need for money.

But it's still true, Glenn is a better dreamer and doer than he is a talker. Which is why most of America will be pulling for him when he goes up for his victory lap in space, and murmuring once again, "Godspeed, John Glenn."

VIOLENCE

However, it has only been three years since the government began programs for abused children. But there is a law against family violence, said Montesdeoca.

"July 10, 1995, the court began getting involved in helping the families. It is a new program, but it is growing and becoming more important," Montesdeoca said, according to Ford's interview transcripts.

The government pays for the majority of programs like these, but, he said he was handling a case of rape in which the parents of the girl were paying for the help.

"When there is reported violence, the woman is given tokens to be used to call the police, they are given protections ... social help, family counseling is offered, and psychological help," Montesdeoca said. But when Ford asked if the women have a safe place to go, he said:

"No, only the children. Due to the lack of money, they have not been able to get one, although they are trying."

Ford said she was shocked to find that the country had no rape crisis center, and no hot lines for women to call.

With only minimal police protection and family and psychological counseling, women have no way to get out of the abusive situations. They don't have centers where they can stay, or get job assistance to make it on their own, said Ford.

With domestic abuse programs just getting started in Ecuador, she said "how many other countries are there that have no programs at all?"

"We don't realize as Americans how lucky we are," said Ford.

For more information on how to get out of an abusive situation or to help someone you know who's in one, call Tralee Crisis Center at 669-1131 or 1-800-658-2796.

Picasso auction may raise $70 million over three-event

PARIS (AP) — Holed up like a hermit in her apartment on the Rue de Savoie, refusing to see even her friends, the aging Dora Maar spent the years before her death in illness and poverty.

But the woman who was Pablo Picasso's dark-haired muse for eight passionate years was surrounded by glory: paintings, drawings, sketches, notes, cards, photos and countless other mementos of her years with the master.

That treasure trove, which she refused to part with until her death in 1997 — even when she needed money — is on the auction block this week.

Today was the second of a three-day auction that was expected to bring in up to $70 million.

Her friends say she wouldn't be happy. "Dora wanted her things to go to the church," said John Richardson, a collector and friend. "But she left only a 1958 will that named only monks, now dead. How silly."

Another close friend, James Lord, said Maar "would be just horrified at all this."

"All this stuff was so personal to her," he said. "It's rather morbid to have it up for sale."

Picasso's granddaughter, Diana Widmaier, agreed.

"Some of these private things should never have gone on the market," she said.

But whatever Maar's wishes, the auction has given art lovers a rare chance to examine the minutiae of an affair — from the goofy postcards to the tiny drawings on matchbooks to a doodle on a restaurant menu.

The first day of the auction, focusing on oil paintings and drawings, saw sky-high prices for drawings but lower than expected prices for some of the paintings.

But it is the deeply personal, slice-of-life nature of the collection that had Parisians standing in the rain to get a pre-auction glimpse at the Maison de la Chimie near the Eiffel Tower.

Dora Maar was 29, the dark-haired daughter of a Yugoslav architect and a French mother, when she met Picasso in 1936. She quickly became his lover and his model.

But in the 1940s, Picasso moved on to the younger Francoise Gilot, and Maar went into a tailspin.

Though she appeared to have no heirs, genealogists tracked down two distant relatives, both of whom had never even heard of Maar. Now, after 60 percent of the proceeds go to the government for taxes, they'll get much of the remaining 40 percent.

The big ticket-items Tuesday were 10 oil paintings, including seven of Dora herself. The highest price, $6.6 million, went for the 1937 "The Crying Woman (Study for Guernica)" — in which Dora's eyes are turned into tears pierced with long pins.

Yet the favorite of many, "Dora Maar with Green Nails," fetched a disappointing $4.1 million. The 1936 tableau shows the muse at the height of her style, her chin resting on green-painted nails and hair braided on top of her head.

The evening's big success was the drawings, especially "Dora with Undone Hair," which went for $900,000.

But the most fascinating objects, to go on sale later this week, are the smallest: little portraits of Dora made into jewelry; little instruments made from the silver wrapping around a wine cork; dozens of sketches on tiny matchbook covers; photographs of the dashing Picasso at all ages; original books, notes, postcards, and letters.

Nothing, it seems, was too small or insignificant for Picasso to scrawl on. One matchbook says: "It was so dark at noon that the stars could be seen." A restaurant menu is adorned with a whimsical self-portrait of the artist.

And perhaps the oddest but most poignant item from this lover's cache: a scrap of paper with a brownish stain, and the scrawled words, "Blood of Picasso."

Library plans Lady Bird Johnson exhibit, coincides with 86th birthday

AUSTIN (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson's upcoming 86th birthday will mark the opening of a new, permanent exhibit about the former first lady at the Lyndon B. Johnson Presidential Library.

Called "the First Lady's Gallery," the exhibit is scheduled to open Dec. 22. It will tell Mrs. Johnson's story from the time she met the future president in 1934 to her role in the White House and after.

The displays will range from love letters during the Johnsons' courtship to the feathered headdress that actress Carol Channing wore in a White House performance of "Hello Dolly."

"The First Lady's Gallery is a portrait of Mrs. Johnson's legacy as a humanitarian, an unofficial diplomat, and a major champion of the environmental movement," the library said in announcing the new exhibit.

Showcasing Mrs. Johnson's whistlestop campaign for her husband's 1964 re-election is a re-creation of the caboose platform on the "Lady Bird Special." Also highlighted will be programs Mrs. Johnson promoted, including Head Start, VISTA and Discover America.

Mattox to Cornyn: Stop campaign mudslinging

DALLAS (AP) — Whether attorney general candidate Jim Mattox unleashes negative advertising depends on how the final days of the campaign go, the Democrat says.

Mattox raised his hand Tuesday night and challenged Republican hopeful John Cornyn to swear to pull his campaign advertising, which Mattox called negative.

Cornyn ignored the challenge and said after the televised debate that he could document the allegations contained in the ads.

"I think that the best characterization of our ads is that they're truthful," Cornyn said.

"But sometimes the truth hurts."

Mattox said he had produced attack ads and was still deciding whether to use them in the campaign's final week.

Flood damages $831 million

AUSTIN (AP) — The rough damage total from Texas' most recent flood disaster is up to nearly $831 million, according to initial estimates from 20 affected counties.

The flooding that struck around San Antonio Oct. 17 before moving eastward to the Gulf of Mexico caused nearly $570 million worth of damage to homes, according to the preliminary figures.

Businesses suffered another $53.7 million worth of damage, and $207 million worth of roads and bridges were damaged, the totals indicate.

At least 29 people died in the disaster, and 18,000 structures were affected, more than half of which were destroyed or severely damaged. The new damage estimate is double initial estimates.

"The disaster area covers more than 21,000 square miles — about the size of West Virginia," state emergency coordinator Tom Millwee told the Austin American-Statesman. "This is a large area with a lot of damage and a lot of debris."

State and federal officials said some of the preliminary damage figures are more "guess-timate" than estimate and cautioned against putting too much credence in the rising number. It'll be weeks before the total can be better stated.

Still, Millwee and others said the latest figures illustrate the severity of the flooding, which could rival the 1994 flood in Southeast Texas.

Robert Hendrix, who is heading federal relief efforts, said Tuesday that five relief centers would open today.

Glenn, crew wrapping up flight training

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With only a day left before launch, John Glenn and his crewmates had a last chance to sharpen their flying skills by roaring over the Kennedy Space Center in jet airplanes.

Glenn, a 77-year-old senator poised to return to space 36 years after becoming the first American in orbit, was to be in the passenger seat today on one of five T-38 jets the astronauts use for training and transportation.

The same planes brought the crew to the launch site on Monday. Flying the jets the day before launch is a tradition for shuttle astronauts and a way "to get their flying legs in shape," a NASA official said.

Discovery's countdown rolled on with only minor problems and forecasters said the weather promised to be "100 percent" favorable for launch at 2 p.m. EST on Thursday.

Hurricane Mitch, which NASA weather observers had been following closely, veered westward Tuesday, away from Florida. It was not expected to have any effect on the space mission.

Tonight, Glenn and the six other astronauts were to stand at the base of the launch pad, with the brilliantly floodlit Discovery looming above them, and spend a final pre-mission hour with their families.

"They'll stand at the fence and look at the ship that will take them into space," said Bruce Buckingham, a NASA spokesman. "It's an awesome thing."

The family members will stand with the astronauts, talking in the shadows thrown by powerful Xenon bulbs that flood the launch pad and the spacecraft with white light. It is a bittersweet moment, usually filled with embraces, whispered farewells and hopes for a safe journey.

"It is the last chance for them to spend some time with their families," Buckingham said. "It is the last time they will see each other until they return."

NATO keeps guard on Kosovo

By TOM COHEN
Associated Press Writer

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Having deferred airstrikes for the moment, NATO today revealed plans for more spy plane flights to make sure President Slobodan Milosevic continues to withdraw forces from Kosovo and allows tens of thousands of refugees to return home.

A senior NATO general, Klaus Naumann of Germany, said today that the withdrawal of Serb forces was not complete but so far it represented a "considerable step in the direction of fulfilling the demands."

With Yugoslav forces drawing back, the Western military alliance did not set any new deadlines for airstrikes after the previous one expired Tuesday.

That was a bitter disappointment to Kosovo's ethnic Albanian politicians, who had been hoping that NATO would deliver a devastating blow to the Yugoslav war machine.

"Milosevic has known all along that NATO would not be bombing, that he would be getting away with what he and his military police have been doing here in Kosovo," Muhamet Hamiti of the League of Democratic Kosovo said today.

But by warning that the threat of attack remains, NATO hoped to guarantee the safety of the ethnic Albanian refugees, who are terrified of returning home unless government troops and Serb police are held back.

To back up its demands, the alliance decided to keep more than 400 warplanes on alert. Today, the U.S. Navy announced at its Mediterranean headquarters in Italy that American P-3C Orion surveillance will begin regular flights over Kosovo on Sunday.

The planes can fly for 10-12 hours without refueling and will help monitor the situation day and night regardless of the weather. The Navy said it conducted a few such flights around the time of the first NATO deadline Oct. 17.

The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe is accelerating efforts to send up to 2,000 unarmed personnel to verify compliance on the ground.

"We know that President Milosevic only moves when he is presented with the credible threat of force," NATO Secretary-

To back up its demands, the alliance decided to keep more than 400 warplanes on alert. Today, the U.S. Navy announced at its Mediterranean headquarters in Italy that American P-3C Orion surveillance will begin regular flights over Kosovo on Sunday.

General Javier Solana said after a meeting of NATO ambassadors in Brussels, Belgium.

"This crisis is far from over," he added. "I urge both sides to take advantage of the opportunity that now exists to move the political process forward."

In an Oct. 12 peace deal, American negotiator Richard Holbrooke demanded that Milosevic cut the number of troops and police in Kosovo to the levels of last February, when Milosevic began his crackdown on the separatist Kosovo Liberation Army. Hundreds have died in the fighting and 300,000 ethnic Albanians have been forced from their homes.

About 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million residents are ethnic Albanian, and most favor independence. Kosovo is a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright told reporters that NATO would move quickly to use force against Yugoslavia if Milosevic sends troops and special police back to Kosovo.

Albright said the NATO allies were organizing a rapid-reaction force based in neighboring Macedonia to protect — if necessary — the 2,000 unarmed personnel who will verify that Milosevic keeps his promises.

A spokesman for the OSCE said Norwegian Gen. Bjorn Nygard was due in Pristina on Thursday to take charge of the verification operation.

International officials hope the continued pressure will encourage many refugees to return home. Many of them are camping in the woods and hills, fearful that Serb police will shoot at them if they tried to go back.

In the village of Ostrozub, southwest of Pristina, Avdullah Krasniqi loaded up his wagon with his wife, children and household goods and headed home Tuesday. His decision was prompted by one fact: It was getting colder by the day in his mountain refuge.

"We spent three months in the mountains," Krasniqi said as family members sat on a huge pile of carpets, kitchen utensils and other household goods, all pulled by the family tractor. "It's very cold."

The Krasniqis wanted very badly to go home, but they are still wary.

"We don't have any faith in Milosevic," he said, licking his thick dark mustache, and noting that his next-door neighbor was shot and killed on his doorstep.

Hurricane Mitch roars off Honduran coast, spreads fear across Caribbean

LA CEIBA, Honduras (AP) — Spreading fear across the western Caribbean today, one of the century's most powerful hurricanes forced tens of thousands to flee, dumped torrents of rain, mowed down trees and damaged homes. At least 12 people were reported killed.

Hurricane Mitch hovered 30 miles off the coast of Honduras this morning, its downpours causing rivers to flood across Honduras, Belize and elsewhere in Central America.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami said up to 20 inches of rain could fall on mountain areas.

At its peak Tuesday, Mitch was the fourth strongest Caribbean hurricane in this century, with 180 mph winds. By 7 a.m. EST today, the 350-mile wide storm still packed a punch, but its winds were down to 120 mph, with higher gusts.

More than 45,000 people were evacuated from coastal and low-lying areas of Honduras, according to Col. Guillermo Pinel, chief of the National Emergency Committee. Many towns were cut off by some 50 flooded rivers.

Mexico declared an alert throughout the Yucatan Peninsula, evacuating thousands of residents and tourists from vulnerable beach resorts like Cancun and Cozumel and cutting back on pumping oil from wells in the Gulf of Mexico.

In Belize, most of the 75,000 people in Belize City fled inland in cars and government buses.

Port officials at Chetumal, Mexico, said a wave kicked up by Hurricane Mitch washed a Connecticut man off a catamaran south of Cancun on Monday and he was presumed dead. He was identified as Robert Gates, 55, of Niantic.

Honduras reported three deaths — one in a collapsed house and two men electrocuted when they were blown off a roof. The Red Cross in neighboring Nicaragua said eight people died there in flooding from Mitch's rains.

On Tuesday, Mitch blasted the Bay Island of Guanaja, 75 miles northeast of here, ripping the metal roofing off hundreds of houses and knocking out power and telephones. Many residents took shelter on larger nearby islands.

"It's raining hard and the winds are very strong," said Marta Ondina, a worker at the Hong Kong restaurant on Roatan, an island a few miles west of Guanaja.

"They have taken people from the shore to churches and more secure places," she said by telephone. "The people are very worried. There is no power."

The weather service said ham radio reports indicated extensive damage on Guanaja and Roatan.

Mitch appeared nearly stalled early today over Guanaja, moving very slowly toward Honduras' coast. The hurricane center said it was expected to head west later in the day, but the storm's slow pace made its movements unpredictable.

Bombs found in New Hampshire libraries

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A bomb set off a small fire in the city library and a second device was found later at the nearby state library, prompting authorities to close many government offices today while they investigate.

State police said the discoveries Tuesday night followed an anonymous written threat that bombs would be detonated in the city. They said the threats were general and did not specify a location.

The Statehouse, which includes the governor's office; the Legislative Office Building; and the city and state libraries were to be closed this morning while police continued their investigation. The Legislature was not in session but the closure was disrupting some activities by committees. Gov. Jeanne Shaheen already had a meeting scheduled out of town this morning.

The first bomb was described by various officials as a pipe bomb or a small incendiary device. Firefighters found it around 7:45 p.m., as they put out a small fire in the city library on a shelf behind some books. The device somehow ignited the shelf, police Chief William Halacy said.

Lawmakers, staff solicit industries they oversee for last-minute dollars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Rangel, the top Democrat on the House committee that writes tax laws, is a natural magnet for big political donors. Now, he's using his pull to round up last-minute money for other Democrats.

Rangel, a shoo-in for re-election whose campaign coffers are full, is on the road this week calling and meeting potential contributors. Meanwhile, hundreds of miles away back in Washington, the Republican chief of staff to House National Security chairman Floyd Spence is calling contractors in the defense industry his boss oversees to ask for money for the Republican Party in South Carolina.

It's all part of a furious effort by both parties to get lawmakers in safe races to dial for dollars and ask industry friends they know best for political contributions.

The trick, sometimes, is to find politically connected solicitors that will be hard to say no to.

Craig Metz, the top aide to Spence, R-S.C., called a list of defense contractors seeking donations ranging from $10,000 to $25,000 for a Republican Party "Victory '98" fund in the lawmaker's home state.

His call sheet, mistakenly faxed to The Associated Press, shows some of his calls were carefully targeted to players who know the power his boss wields.

When Metz called defense giant Lockheed Martin to ask for $25,000, he talked to the company's chief of congressional relations, according to his handwritten notations. And when he tapped

McDonnell Douglas, he talked to the "state gov't liaison," the call sheet noted.

Some of the defense contractors he reached said they had to tell him he was too late.— they already had given the maximum they could afford after being solicited by other GOP members of Spence's committee.

Such calls are perfectly legal. All Metz had to do was walk a few blocks from his House office to the National Republican Congressional Committee to make them.

But critics see the practice as unseemly. "The pressure is really on," said Larry Makinson, head of the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonprofit Washington outfit that studies political fund-raising. "The (Metz) fax is documentary evidence of why this money keeps rolling in. Who in the defense industry wants to say no to the chairman of the House National Security Committee?"

The NRCC, which has set up a suite of offices for their members to make such calls, says it is just democracy in action. It currently is running a $20 million to $25 million ad campaign in House districts to motivate voters to turn out on Election Day this Tuesday. The calls help pay for the blitz dubbed "Operation Breakout."

"When we ask the member to do this, they know who they know best and who they have the best relationships with and can get on the phone right away. So they make those decisions themselves," NRCC spokeswoman Mary Mead Crawford explained.

Over 400 historians say impeachment inquiry could cripple presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 400 historians issued a statement today deploring the House's decision to conduct an impeachment inquiry, saying it could leave the presidency "permanently disfigured and diminished."

"Although we do not condone President Clinton's private behavior or his subsequent attempts to deceive, the current charges against him depart from what the (Constitution's) Framers saw as grounds for impeachment," the statement said.

The House voted 258-176 on Oct. 8 to approve an open-ended investigation of Clinton's conduct toward former White House intern Monica Lewinsky and independent counsel Kenneth Starr's charges that Clinton lied under oath and obstructed justice. The investigation is expected to begin after next week's election.

The House action "creates a novel, all-purpose search for any offense by which to remove a president from office," the historians said.

Sean Wilentz of Princeton said the petition grew out of a conversation he had with Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., a historian who served in John F. Kennedy's White House.

Wilentz said he sent e-mails to about 30 or 40 historians who would share his view of the impeachment proceedings as contrary to the intentions of the Constitution's authors.

"Within three days 300 people had contacted me," Wilentz said. "It was then that we realized we had touched a nerve."

The statement calls the impeachment proceedings "extremely ominous for the future of our political institutions."

"If carried forward, they will leave the presidency permanently disfigured and diminished, at the mercy as never before of the caprices of any Congress. The presidency ... will be crippled."

The organizers called a news conference to make the petition public.

The drive drew signatories from more than 130 colleges, including some of the country's best known historians.

Wilentz said only one historian who was asked to sign declined. He would not identify him.

But he said he suspected "plenty" of Republicans were among the signers and a few of those who signed have called for Clinton's resignation.

"This was nonpartisan or bipartisan or transpartisan, however you want to put it," he said.

Among the signers were: Doris Kearns Goodwin, biographer of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt and Lyndon Johnson; C. Vann Woodward of Yale, historian of the South; Civil War historian James McPherson of Princeton; Henry Louis Gates of Harvard; civil rights leader Julian Bond of the University of Virginia; Lincoln biographer David Donald of Harvard; journalist and author Garry Wills of Northwestern; John Morton Blum of Yale; Taylor Branch of Goucher College, historian of the civil rights movement; Alan Brinkley of Columbia; Sheldon Hackney of the University of Pennsylvania, former chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities; and Jack N. Rakove of Stanford, winner of a 1997 Pulitzer for history.

Klan leaders use Halloween loophole to march with masks

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A sheriff has warned Ku Klux Klan leaders they'll be thrown in jail if they try to use the holiday as a way around Georgia's anti-mask law.

"If they've got on a Klan robe and a Klan hat and any type of mask, including a Mickey Mouse mask, they will be arrested," Hall County Sheriff Bob Vass said Tuesday.

Klan leaders thought they had found a loophole in the law that bans anyone from wearing a mask, hood or any device that conceals a person's identity in public.

The law exempts Halloween costumes, but Vass said officers know the difference between Klan hoods and Casper masks.

Gary Mallicoat, spokesman for the Gainesville-based American Knights, said the group had planned on marching with masks on Halloween "because we thought we could get away with it."

But threatened with arrest, "None of our members will be covering their faces."

Husband Claimed His 'Space' And Now Wife Claims Hers

DEAR ABBY: I have been married 30 years to a man who is in his 60s. He is now retired and has too much time on his hands. When we married, he made it clear he liked his "space," often leaving home without saying goodbye or telling me where he was going.

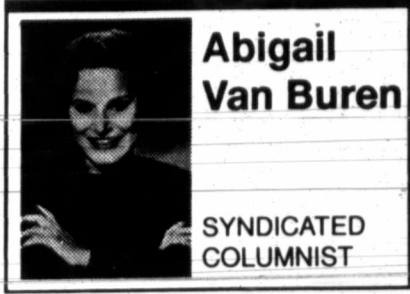

He said he didn't need to explain his whereabouts, which was very difficult to deal with, but over time and many tears later, I learned to live with it. Later on, he accepted a high-paying job that took him away from our family for long periods. We would see each other on weekends or during school vacations. Over the years I have learned to entertain myself without intruding on his "space" or complaining when he was away for long periods.

Now that he isn't working and I am still working, he doesn't get my attention when he wants it. He says he feels ignored or unloved because I have continued to entertain myself by reading, playing bridge with my women friends, or occasionally working on weekends. My colleagues laugh at me when they hear me call my husband from work to ask if it's OK if I meet a client on the weekend. Sometimes I resent doing it, but it does keep the peace.

Meanwhile, my husband watches every sporting event on television, pouting or sulking when I don't join him.

Abby, I love this man, but now that he is home, he wants me to be constantly available. Is there a solution?

BORED IN LOS ANGELES

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR BORED: For a man who wanted his "space," your husband appears to have become very dependent. It's flattering that he wants you by his side, but you are in danger of being smothered.

Remind him that when he married you, he demanded and was given his "space," and now you need yours. Encourage him to become physically active and to get involved with groups where his talents are needed. I'm sure there are many.

DEAR ABBY: I think you were way off base in your response to the lady who asked whether she should let her mother-in-law read the letter on computer disk that her father-in-law left to his 2 1/2-year-old granddaughter. If the man intended the letter to be read by everybody and his brother, he wouldn't have addressed it to his granddaughter.

In my opinion, this has nothing to do with "bringing peace to a grieving widow," but rather with a domineering woman sticking her nose where it should not be. Just because the letter is on a computer disk doesn't mean it's any less a letter than if it were written on paper and sealed in an envelope. By advocating allowing the mother-in-law to read that letter, you're also advocating denying that little girl her right to a precious gift given to her by her grandfather out of love because he knew he wouldn't be there to watch her grow up.

I'm just curious — do you also advocate opening and rewrapping children's gifts before they receive them just to make some adult "feel better" about knowing what's in them? Remember that even the youngest members of our society deserve our respect, and one of the aspects of that is to respect their property.

A READER WHO DISAGREES

DEAR READER: The child's grandmother is not "everybody and his brother," and I do not agree that allowing the grandmother to read the letter would diminish its value to the 2-year-old when she's finally old enough to appreciate it. However, intelligent minds can disagree, and I respect your opinion although it does not coincide with mine.

THURSDAY, OCT. 29, 1998
BY JACQUELINE BIGAR

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

**** Double-check plans today. Emphasize clarity, as you're faced with confusion. Others seem to be in their own world. Misunderstandings are likely. Remain steady while others tumble in various directions. An associate acknowledges you for a job well done. Tonight: Make nice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

**** Others simply have different ideas than you; somehow there is a lag in communications. Bosses demand high performance, but they aren't clear about what they want. A loved one is full of opinions rather than suggestions. Tonight: You are on your own!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

**** Though you have the best of intentions, the more information you seek out, the more confused co-workers become. Focus and concentrate. Do take an overview of each project or issue. You might need to redo some of your work if you aren't careful. Tonight: Relax with a movie.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

**** Though you think a financial decision is sound, wait. More confusion comes forth, forcing you to think through recent decisions. A child or a new friend fills you with news, but verify information. A misunderstanding is likely. Tonight: Let another convince you that they are right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

**** Let others express their views, though you might not really want to listen. A family member clearly disagrees and causes much agitation. Recognize limits as far as another's boundaries. Be gentle with yourself as well as those close to you. Tonight: Make it easy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

**** Screening calls, closing your door and isolating yourself might be the only way to get work done presently; a fringe benefit is that solitude calms your nerves. Stay focused. Make plans with a loved one for later in the day once you are relaxed. Tonight: A talk ignites strong feelings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

**** You hit a money barrier. You can opt to be creative, but it might only increase problems. Let your ingenuity float into your interpersonal relationships. Add more fun and caring into a loved one's life. Your efforts come back in multiples. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

**** Negativity creates upset within your inner circle. You might be a lot harder on yourself than need be. Ease up some, relax and discuss options. Be willing to dissect an idea, review recent actions and even start from the beginning one more time. Tonight: Express your caring.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

**** Your mental wanderings distract you from the task at hand. Problems occur because of the ensuing confusion. Be as clear as you can, use self-discipline and concentrate. Take care of a romantic issue, and worry less about the results. Communications will flow. Tonight: Could be dreamy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

**** Another's money advice might be well-intended but could send you down the wrong path. Pull back and make sound decisions on your own. Sometimes, you don't take enough credit for your intuition and talents. Trust yourself. Tonight: Dinner with a special friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

**** When the boss growls or parents yell, use that charming personality to restore calm. Trust your abilities. Others turn to you for solutions and ideas. Schedule an important meeting later in the day when others can hear you better. Tonight: Accept another's applause!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

**** Sometimes you lose your sense of direction. Recognize what is going on and postpone important decisions. Don't stand on ceremony over a misunderstanding. Make an additional effort. Others admire your compassion. Tonight: Accept an invitation out!

BASEBALL

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Juan Gonzalez's $8.5 million option for 1999 was exercised Tuesday by the Texas Rangers.

Gonzalez led the AL in RBIs (157) and doubles (50), hit 45 home runs, batted a career-high .318. He could win his second AL MVP award in three years next month.

The Rangers also have a $7.5 million option for the 2000 season. Gonzalez made $7 million, plus bonuses, this season.

FOOTBALL

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Veteran's Stadium conjures up images of boos, batteries and ice pouring down on the Dallas Cowboys.

Even though the Cowboys will be playing a bad team next Monday night, it can be a bad place to play.

The Philadelphia Eagles have won just one game, but a win over the NFC East-leading Cowboys (4-3) would salvage something for coach Ray Rhodes' underachieving team.

New Dallas coach Chan Gailey knows all about the perils of a night road game in what the Cowboys players call "the city of brotherly shove."

"I was there with the Steelers and I know the fans can be loud," Gailey said on Tuesday. "It will be our responsibility to keep it a quiet place."

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — With NBA owners and players returning to the bargaining table, the union was looking to see if the league moves off its demand to reduce salary costs from 57 percent to 48 percent of revenues.

The league has been seeking such a scaleback since the sides began talking April 1, and union director Billy Hunter said Tuesday it is the single biggest obstacle the sides face.

Talks were scheduled to resume around noon today after a group of about 150 players and the league's Board of Governors hold separate meetings in the morning.

"We're trying to salvage as much of the season as possible," Hunter said. "I'm optimistic we're going to get a deal. I can't say it's going to happen this week."

After meeting for about nine hours Monday, the sides spent another four hours together Tuesday discussing non-economic issues such as personal conduct clauses, player discipline and substance abuse policy.

It was the first time since talks began that the sides had a detailed discussion of the many side issues that have been all but ignored in favor of the core economic themes.

"We talked about a lot of issues. I can't say we made a lot of progress," said Jeffrey Mishkin, the NBA's chief legal officer.

The league, which has already canceled the first two weeks of the season, is expected to announce further cancellations later this week. There have been rumblings from agents that the league plans to cancel the remainder of the November schedule and the first two weeks of December. If true, it would leave teams with about 60 games remaining on their schedules.

Commissioner David Stern and deputy commissioner Russ Granik did not take part in the non-economic talks Tuesday, meeting instead with the owners' labor committee.

The likely focus of the owners' discussion was whether any positive signals could be taken from the meetings Monday night, when for the first time they discussed an economic operating system that does not include a hard salary cap.

"I'm sure there's a segment of the owners ready to make a deal, and some of them are hawks that have taken a contrary position," Hunter said.

PHS girls favored in district c-c meet

PAMPA — The Pampa girls' cross country team has hopes of continuing their winning ways at the District 3-4A meet Thursday at Canyon.

The Lady Harvesters have won four of five meets this season. They finished second only to Amarillo High at the Amarillo Invitational.

"We've got the best team in district based on past performances. The last time all the district teams ran against each other, we placed six runners in the top 10, Hereford had three in the top 10 and Borger had one," said Pampa head coach Mark Elms. "Hereford has the No. 1 girl. We expect her to get first place and we'll take the next five places. That's our plan anyway."

The Lady Harvesters gained momentum for the district meet by scoring a perfect 15 to win the Lake Meredith Invitational two weeks ago. Beth Lee had the winning time while teammates Jenny Fatheree, Amanda White, Samantha Hurst and Rebecca Fatheree captured the next four places.

"That's been our bright spot," Elms said. "We've never had a team at the varsity level do that."

In the boys' division, Kelby McClelland and Gonzalo Salazar are Pampa's best hopes of advancing to regionals.

"We could have the second and third best runners in district. We're going to be looking at others to close the gap so we can get to regionals as a team. Borger is favored, but everyone is a contender, except maybe for Caprock," Elms said.

The meet begins at 3 p.m. at the West Texas Horse Center with the junior varsity girls' division going first, followed by the junior varsity boys at 3:30, the varsity girls at 4 and the varsity boys at 4:30.

NFL's 32nd spot has three bids

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NFL may decide by early next year whether Houston or Los Angeles gets its 32nd franchise.

The league's owners spent most of Tuesday listening to pitches from the two cities that were deserted by their teams after the 1995 and 1996 seasons. They did not take a bid out, commissioner Paul Tagliabue said he expected a decision some time in the winter.

Both cities lost teams at the height of the "franchise free agency" period. Los Angeles lost both the Rams and Raiders, the Raiders returning to Oakland, from where they had moved in 1982, the Rams going to St. Louis.

The Oilers committed that same year to leaving Houston, but didn't move until the next year for Tennessee.

Tuesday's presentations came from three groups — one from Houston and two from Los Angeles.

One Los Angeles group is headed by Ed Roski, owner of the NHL's Los Angeles Kings, and wants to renovate the Coliseum. The other is headed by former Hollywood agent

Michael Ovitz and wants to build a stadium called "The Hacienda" in Carson, 12 miles south of the city in what was originally planned as a shopping mall.

The new franchise would join the new Cleveland Browns, scheduled to begin play next season as a replacement for the team Art Modell moved to Baltimore after the 1995 season.

League officials would like the new team to begin play in 2002 or 2003. And Ovitz and businessman Bob McNair, who heads the Houston group, said they need to have a decision by late this year or early next.

"We want to be responsive," Tagliabue said. "I would think we could have something decided early next year."

All three groups presented plans for stadiums they claimed would be as modern as any in use now and all said their financing was in place.

Houston's, to be built in the parking lot of the current Astrodome, would have a retractable roof that could be closed within 10 minutes.

The Coliseum would be what Roski called "the Camden Yards of football," a reference to Baltimore's baseball stadium.

And Ovitz's group plans a stadium with a Latin motif on the outside surrounded by the shopping mall.

Tagliabue said it would take time to study all three proposals. And the owners themselves seemed undecided, although Los Angeles has seemed to be an NFL target because it's the nation's second largest television market.

"It would be nice to have a team in the Los Angeles area," said Denver owner Pat Bowlen. "But Houston's not a small market either."

The owners took little other action Tuesday, but Tagliabue reiterated that Dwight Clark, the player personnel director of the San Francisco 49ers, was likely to stay there through next April's draft despite a move by the Browns to get him to Cleveland. Carmen Policy, the 49ers' former president is now president of the Browns.

On Wednesday, owners will decide between New Orleans and San Diego as the site for the 2002 Super Bowl. The game is in Miami next January, followed by Atlanta and Tampa.

Lady Harvesters take on Canyon in bi-district volleyball playoffs

PAMPA — Pampa's volleyball team will be looking for a "three-peat" against Canyon in the bi-district round of the Class 4A playoffs.

Pampa beat Canyon twice during the regular season, but the Lady Eagles did well enough in district play to capture the runnerup playoff spot.

"Canyon has scrappy team. They keep coming at you and they're pretty good at getting ball back over the net," said Pampa head coach Carmen Pennick.

Pampa grabbed the third-place playoff spot out of District 3-4A and finished the season with an overall record of 19-8.

"The kids are very excited about being in the playoffs. They feel like they have a chance at controlling their own destiny if they just step up and try their best," Pennick said.

Pampa's probable lineup for the playoff match is Anne Gaddis and Tandi Morton at middle blockers; Lori Lindsey at setter; Lisa Dwight and Lisa Kirkpatrick at outside hitters; Kimberly Clark at backup setter.

The bi-district match is set for 7:30 Thursday night at the Palo Duro Activity Center.

PAMPA — Pampa swept Borger in middle school volleyball matches earlier this week.

Pampa won the 8th grade match, 15-12, 15-9. Pampa had outstanding serving by Karissa Intemann.

Pampa's B team used an outstanding team effort to defeat Borger, 1-15, 15-12, 15-2.

Pampa defeated Borger, 15-8, 15-4, in the 7th grade match. Stacey Johnson and Jennie Waggoner were outstanding servers.

Pampa used a strong team effort to win the B team match, 15-8, 15-11.

The P.H.S. Swim Team is young, boasting 13 freshmen and two sophomores. They are led by one junior and five seniors. Sophomore swimmer, Matt Schoenrock, suffered an elbow injury in September and is sorely missed.

The swimmers will be hosting Amarillo High School in a duel meet this Saturday, October 31.

Starting time will be 10:00 a.m. at the Pampa Youth and Community Center. The new electronic timing system purchased by the school and local swim club will be in use. Residents are urged to show their support for the team by attending.

Controversial film director Spike Lee visits Lubbock, addresses students at Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Spike Lee in West Texas?

Sitting on a barstool, dressed in a blue Nike shirt, black tennis shoes and a red New York Yankees cap, the filmmaker known for directing controversial movies about race relations answered questions about his films, blasted white directors for making poor films about slavery and traded barbs with students as he spoke at Texas Tech University Tuesday evening.

Lee admitted that he was a little skeptical about traveling to a region known for being conservative, but was pleased to find dozens of fans and few critics during his two-hour conversation with more than 300 students.

"I wasn't too worried about it," Lee said about traveling to West Texas. "I spoke at two places where I got bomb threats so after that I can't be worried."

Lee, who was invited by a student group that plans events, also spoke passionately about low black attendance of films about black history.

"You make a movie like 'Rosewood' and you get a few black people to see it but you make 'Booby Call' and you get everyone fighting over each other to get tickets. The problem is that Hollywood is watching and when no one comes out to see a movie like 'Rosewood' it becomes a lot harder for those movies to get made. All studios want to put out there is 'Booby Call,' Lee said referring to a highly-sexual comedy about dating.

Lee, who was invited by a student group that plans events, also spoke passionately about low black attendance of films about black history.

Jason Lenning, a film major at Texas Tech, said he was skeptical about Lee's visit, but was surprised by Lee's comments.

"I'm going to have to revise a lot of my thoughts on him," Lenning said. "I thought he was going to come out here and tell me

I'm bad for being white and I can't make films with black people because I'm white. He didn't say that at all. He just challenged us to get our facts straight. I think a lot of rumors about him have made him into a villain for white people."

Lee said Steven Spielberg's movie 'Amistad,' about a slave revolt that allows several Africans the chance to legally gain their freedom, highlights a principle problem in Hollywood's portrayal of black history.

"Why was Matthew McConaughey in that movie? It was a box office consideration," Lee said. "The story (shouldn't have been) about a white lawyer. It should have been about the slaves."

Lee's conversation with the students took a more serious turn when a white professor asked Lee if he felt that he could do a good job teaching African-American history.

After a long pause Lee said, "There's nothing wrong with a white male teaching African-American history, if it's taught the right way. But if you teach that Cleopatra looked like Elizabeth Taylor — it just wasn't like that."

Oldest reptile nests discovered in Arizona

The Associated Press

The world's oldest known reptile nests have been identified in Arizona, establishing that protective parenting habits developed much earlier in the history of life than previously believed.

The 62 bowl-like depressions in a sandstone layer in Arizona's Petrified Forest National Park were dated at 220 million years old, twice as old as any previously known reptile nests.

The nests — holes in the sand that over time turned into stone — were probably made by crocodile-like creatures called phytosaurs or by aetosaurs, which were armored reptiles, said Stephen Hasiotis, a consulting geologist for Exxon who discovered the sites.

Other scientists said the discovery suggests that at least 220 million years ago, during the Triassic Period, some vertebrates stopped laying their eggs directly on the ground and started protecting them in nests.

"This shows that these guys were digging nests into the banks of rivers much earlier than we thought," said Jim Kirkland of the Dinamation International Society, which makes scientifically accurate dinosaur robots and displays.

The nests do little to resolve one of the hottest debates in paleontology: How helpless were baby dinosaurs?

Many researchers believe that dinosaur babies hatched soft-boned, blind and helpless, like baby birds. They argue that dinosaur adults were tender, caring parents and that the young remained in the nest for feeding and protection.
