PAMPA — Four women and two men are needed for ACT's upcoming production of "Romantic Comedy" by Bernard Slade. The three-act show will rehearse three to four nights a week from 7 to 9:30 p.m. and rehearsals begin Monday, Nov. 16.

Auditions will be Thursday, Nov. 12 at 7 in the ACT location at the Pampa Mall. The entrance is on the west side of the building, south of Homeland Grocery Store.

Directed by ACT Board member Debbie Hartman, the play will be produced in the M.K. Brown Heritage Room on Feb. 4, 5 and 6 as a dinner theatre performance. For more information call Hartman at 665-3679.

PAMPA — Pampa recently made national press when U.S. News & World Report mentioned Gov. George W. Bush's stop in town. The magazine referred to Bush spotting a "timid teenage girl" at a rally here and said, "I'd like to have my picture taken with someone wearing yellow nail polish." The magazine used the incident as an example of their contention that Bush "has a populist streak."

Offending firms could have water cut off

Back flow safeguards must be installed

By KATE B. DICKSON
 Associate Publisher

Some Pampa businesses are refusing to allow city utility officials to check their water systems to make sure proper equipment is in place that prevents contaminants from back flowing into city water lines.

And, without proof of compliance, utility superintendent Joseph Palma, has notified the companies by letter the city will cut off their water supply 14 days after the date of the letter.

That was part of the report given to city commissioners Tuesday by Richard Morris, director of public works, who provided a copy of the letter to commissioners.

While not giving an exact number, Morris said "a lot" of letters have been mailed that inform companies about regulations which require an air gap or an approved reduced pressure principle assembly be installed on their systems.

He said most of the 30 or 40 companies falling under the requirements are those along Highway 152 and are commercial or industrial businesses, some of which mix water with chemicals.

Without proper equipment, a line break

"If the businesses continue to refuse to cooperate with the city, they can deal with the TNRC."

— Richard Morris, public works director or other event could cause chemicals or other dangerous substances to be sucked back into the water lines. This could cause the drinking water supply to become contaminated, Morris said, and endanger the public health or physically damage the public water system.

For those company officials who won't permit the city inspections of their inside and outside lines, Morris said to them, "It probably won't be the last you'll hear."

Morris said the back flow protection rules are contained in the 1986 amendments to the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act which, in the past, were not actively enforced by the Environmental Protection Agency.

But now that the EPA has turned the enforcement duties over to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, that state agency is zealously enforcing the rules, Morris told commissioners.

If the businesses continue to refuse to cooperate with the city, Morris said, "they can deal with the TNRC."

Bailey promoted to managing editor

Miranda G. Bailey

Miranda G. Bailey, staff writer for The Pampa News since July 1997, has been promoted to managing editor, publisher T.W. McCauley announced today.

In the position, Bailey will continue to serve as back-up to the editor, will be responsible for staff management, getting out some issues of the paper and will assume more duties pertaining to special sections and promotions.

Bailey covers a variety of news and feature stories for the paper and will continue this coverage in addition to taking photographs. She recently wrote and edited a special section featuring

Auditorium roof job bid $111,420

Replacing the flat roof over part of M.K. Brown Auditorium is going to cost $111,420.

That was the low bid submitted by Parsley's Roofing and accepted unanimously Tuesday by the Pampa City Commission.

Four companies placed bids and the highest bid, by Construction Services, was $138,000.

The job will be financed by proceeds of certificate of obligation bonds, said City Manager Bob Lockridge. The roof job was included when the bonds were sold for the new landfill.

Bill Hildebrandt, community development director, told commissioners the remaining roof sections will need to be replaced in the next three-to-four years.

The city manager said, "We can't do the whole roof now," and suggested the commission start saving so the money will be there when needed.

Hildebrandt said a cheaper sealing method was considered but it isn't practical because that surface can't be walked on to service the roof air conditioners.

A force of some three dozen were up before dawn today, distributing flags across Pampa in honor of Veteran's Day. Gray County Veterans Service Officer John Triplehorn said the group started about 7 a.m. with 12 to 15 youth, eight to 10 sponsors and six to eight VFW members putting flags along city streets, at businesses and residences and at local cemeteries. Veteran's Day had its origins in Armistice Day which marked the end of World War I. The armistice ending the first major conflict of the century was signed at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month 80 years ago today in a railway car in France.

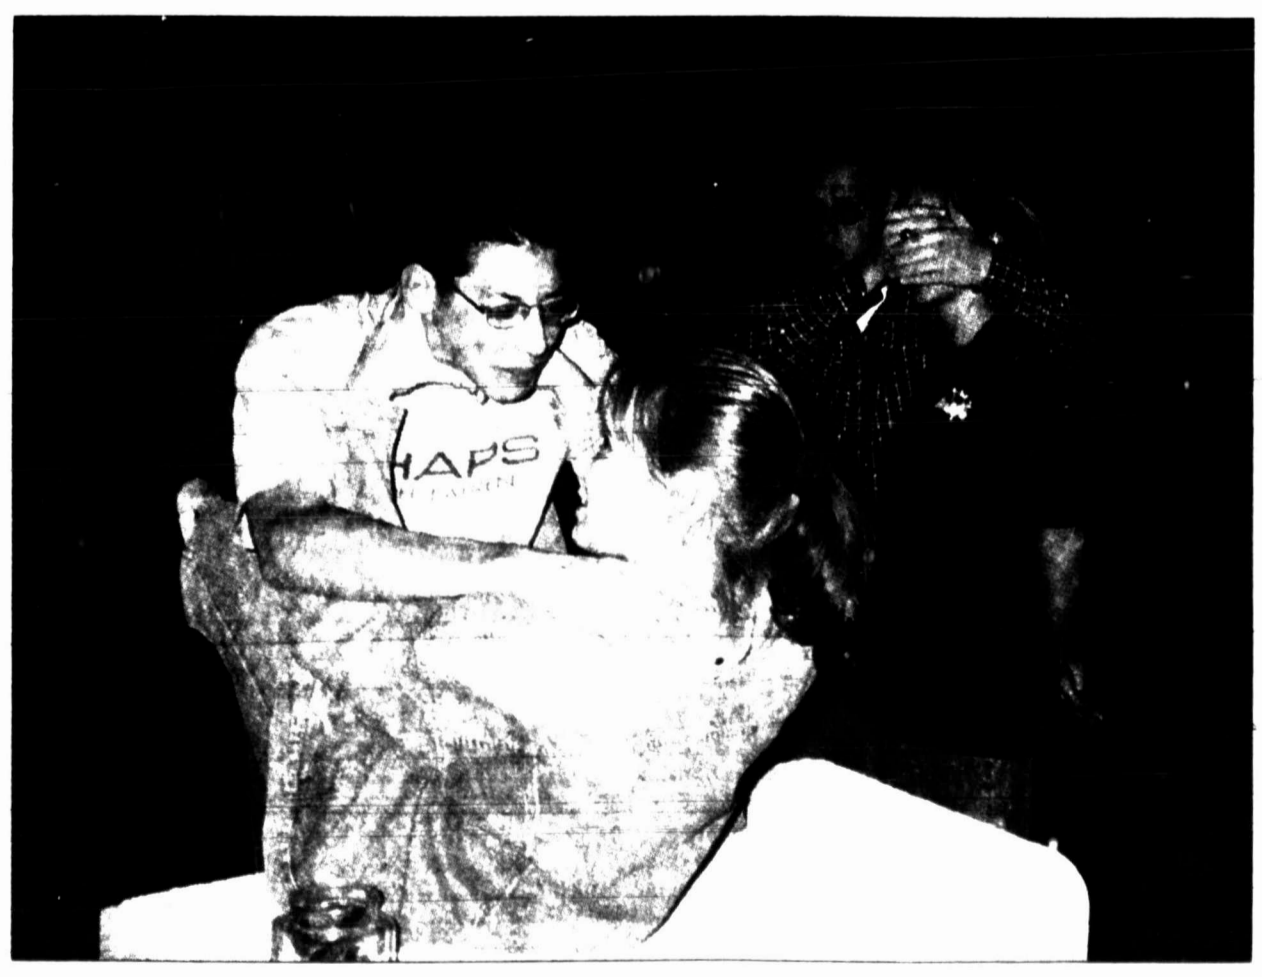

Hypothermia puts man in ICU

A Pampa man remains in intensive care at Columbia Medical Center after being discovered outside his home late Sunday morning.

Paramedics found Douglas Ray Ward, 44, outside 736 Scott in Pampa suffering from possible hypothermia. Police were called in because it was unclear why Ward was outside for a long period of time.

He appears to have been outside the house for many hours, according to Pampa Police Detective Connie Lockridge.

Ward was unable to communicate at first, according to emergency personnel, and Lockridge said the case remains under investigation.

The show, directed by Drama teacher Dean Birkes, will be performed next Monday and Tuesday at the high school theater. Tickets are $3 a person and performances begin at 7 p.m. both evenings.

Marshal denies making any threats

By JEFF WEST
 Staff Writer

Residents arguing about the conditions of houses in Fetters started the city Commission meeting off on a contentious note earlier this week in an otherwise uneventful meeting.

Ruth Brown appeared to complain about a condition that Fetters City Marshal John Worthington denied the claim and said it could be foolish for him to even say anything about it.

Brown has donated the house, which had been abandoned for some time to low and Arlen Styles. The house had been outside of Fetters but was moved into the city of the Styles. The house has given a number of complaints from other residents of the town, according to Worthington. All of the windows in the house are broken and the walls are so thin that light shines through in places, according to city commissioner Lundy Forsyth. She also said the roof needs to be replaced and the back porch was barely attached.

The Styles wrote a letter to the city commission saying they intend to fix the house up but are missionaries and are busy providing help for other areas. The letter said as soon as the Lord provides, they will fix the house. It also said the couple is about to leave to go on another mission in Appalachian mountains.

Forsyth said she had received complaints from other residents about the house but that Fetters has no building or zoning codes. The only action possible is to go to court to declare the house a dangerous property.

Worthington said he had stopped low Styles, who was not at the meeting, for a traffic violation. Worthington mentioned that he had heard complaints about the house from other residents and suggested getting it fixed. He again denied ever making any threats to burn that or any other house.

BAILEY

Columbia Medical Center.

"I'm happy to make this announcement," McCall said. "Miranda has proven to be a real asset to The Pampa News and to the community since coming here."

Bailey, and her husband, Mark, came to Pampa after both graduated last year from The University of New Mexico. She has a Bachelor of Arts, Journalism and Mass Communication and a Bachelor of Fine Arts.

Her husband is a process control engineer at Celanese and both attend Trinity Fellowship Church in Pampa.

Bailey has been active in the community having just directed an ACT I play, "Eleemosynary," that had a two-day run last week at M.K. Brown Auditorium. She also serves a vice president of membership for the arts organization.

She volunteers in the school system where she is a HOSTS mentor tutoring math to a grade-school student weekly. This marks her second year to do so.

Prior to joining The Pampa News, Bailey worked on her college newspaper in the advertising department where she worked in both sales and advertising design.

Before moving to Pampa, Bailey had ties to the panhandle. Her parents are from Dalhart and Amarillo and as a child she was reared in Borger and Canyon moving to Albuquerque at age 11.

3rd ANNUAL Christmas at Home Open House, 2205 Evergreen, Fri. 13th 5-

Researchers seek study participants

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — As part of an ambitious, nationwide hunt for rheumatoid arthritis genes, UC Davis Health System scientists are hoping to find hundreds of afflicted patients from Oklahoma, Nevada, Louisiana and Texas willing to participate in the study. The researchers are seeking sibling pairs, either sister-sister, brother-brother or sister-brother, who both have the disease and are willing to be visited by a UC Davis nurse practitioner.

Rheumatoid arthritis is a chronic, crippling illness that affects more than 2.5 million Americans. The illness occurs when the body's immune system, for still unknown reasons, turns on itself. Immune cells, meant to attack foreign invaders, instead destroy healthy tissues in the joints. The disease also saps sufferers' energy, and can cause complications in other parts of the body. Rheumatoid arthritis typically strikes adults — most often women — in the prime of life, between ages 20 and 50.

UC Davis and nine other top research institutions joined the National Institutes of Health and the Arthritis Foundation in 1997 to form the North American Rheumatoid Arthritis Consortium.

Each study volunteer will be asked to participate in a 10-minute telephone interview. Interviewers will ask questions about rheumatoid arthritis symptoms and medical history. Sibling pairs will be scheduled for a physical examination of their joints and to give a blood sample. The exam and blood test are free, and a nurse practitioner will travel to meet with out-of-town patients. All study information will be kept strictly confidential, and all cell samples will remain anonymous. Each volunteer will be kept up-to-date about overall research progress, but will not learn specific results of his or her individual DNA analysis.

"I often get phone calls from rheumatoid arthritis patients who have exhausted all the treatments that are available to them, and want to know what else they can do," says Holly Walsh, nurse practitioner and study coordinator.

For more information about the study, or to volunteer, leave a message for Walsh by calling the toll-free number at 1-888-223-3067.

Postal Service facing Y2K computer bug

WASHINGTON — Deputy Postmaster General Michael S. Coughlin announced recently the U.S. Postal Service is aggressively addressing the computer challenges posed by the Year 2000.

"Year 2000 is a daunting challenge, but I believe we have the structure and resources in place to successfully deal with it," Coughlin said at the monthly meeting of the Postal Service Board of Governors.

He explained in terms of business applications, the Postal Service has over 500 identified, including payroll functions, address management databases and employee benefits processing, that will be impacted by Year 2000 conversion.

Recently completed field tests of postal mail processing equipment in Atlanta and Tampa were successful, Coughlin indicated.

Last summer, the Postal Service's Office of Inspector General, at the request of postal management, began monitoring the ongoing progress and status of the agency's Year 2000 effort. Coughlin said the IG's reviews "have been helpful in covering all the bases."

Coughlin noted the Postal Service's planned expenditures to address the Year 2000 challenge were estimated at approximately $500 million. He concluded, "It is not an inexpensive proposition to fix these systems."

Texas cultural events go high-tech with new website

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on the Arts, the state agency responsible for arts education, arts funding and cultural tourism, recently launched an on-line arts calendar. The calendar lists more than 2,500 cultural attractions and events across the state including the Old Jail Art Center in Albany, the Peach Jamboree and Rodeo in Stonewall and the Roy Orbison Festival in Wink. These and other events across the state are attended by 17 million visitors annually.

The website will be updated to provide accurate information on events each month and year-round.

"We developed artonart.com to provide people with information about the state's unique artistic and cultural heritage," said John Paul Batiste, executive director of TCA. Searches on the website can be conducted in several ways. Visitors can search by city, region, date, topic or organization name. Cities are arranged in alphabetical order within seven regions — Big Bend Country, Gulf Coast, Hill Country, Panhandle Plains, Piney Woods, Prairies and Lakes and South Texas Plains. The topic search allows visitors to view events from a list of categories such as "museums," "literary," and "bluegrass." Users also have the option to type in specific organizations' names for more information.

Upon completion of the search, visitors can get written directions or a map to specific attractions. The website will also have a travel planner section that will allow visitors to hyper link to vendors so they can rent a car, make airline reservations and book hotel rooms.

For example, say you have plans to visit Great-Aunt Edna in Ozona and you want to soak up some of the local culture while you're in town. Instead of relying on Edna, you can log onto artonart.com and plan your trip. Just select "Ozona," enter the date of your trip and you will get a list of cultural events for the area. In addition, you can find information on nearby state parks, local conventions and visitors bureaus and much more.

Pamphlet to benefit borrowers

AUSTIN — The state's financial regulatory agencies updated their guidelines to address issues and questions raised during the first 10 months of home equity lending in Texas. Issued jointly by the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner, Department of Banking, Savings and Loan Department, and Credit Union Department, the "Regulatory Commentary on Equity Lending Procedures" was updated primarily to include the agencies' position for dealing with home-stead size limitations, the three-day period of rescission and the refinancing of a mortgage.

The issue dealing with home-stead size has been raised because an urban homestead is defined as consisting of not more than one acre of land, together with any improvements thereon, as written in the Texas Constitution and the Texas Property Code. Problems occur because many urban lots commonly exceed one acre of land.

The entire "Regulatory Commentary on Equity Lending Procedures" may be downloaded from the public documents section of the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner's website at: <http://www.occc.state.tx.us>. Additionally, the Department of Banking has formulated examination procedures regarding home equity lending which are available on their website at <http://www.banking.state.tx.us>.

Consumers with questions about home equity lending may contact the Office of Consumer Credit Commissioner at its toll-free consumer helpline 1-800-538-1579.

Government offers the real monopoly

The average American appears to have a better grasp of basic economic principles than the government officials who enforce the nation's antitrust laws. A new nationwide survey conducted by Wirthlin Worldwide found that 65 percent of the public believes that markets, not government, should regulate high-tech industries.

Yet the highly publicized lawsuit against Microsoft Corp. brought by the U.S. Justice Department and 20 states attorneys general has gone to trial. Federal and state officials claim the computer giant engaged in monopolistic practices by bundling its Internet browser with its industry-dominant Windows operating system.

The suit against Microsoft is the most prominent in a series of government actions that, in the name of combating monopolies and protecting consumers, micromanage how major firms operate.

Recently, the Justice Department announced another antitrust putsch, this time against the nation's largest credit-card networks. The feds claim that Visa and MasterCard are monopolistic, in part, because of competitive restrictions they place on member institutions. And in June the Federal Trade Commission filed a complaint against Intel Corp., arguing that because of the computer chip-maker's dominant market position, it must share technical information about upcoming chips with competitors.

The government is adopting the old anti-business mentality that dominated the Justice Department earlier this century.

The Microsoft lawsuit, critics claim, is based on tenuous legal ground.

Microsoft is in hot water for, essentially, offering something to consumers for free. And the feds are targeting Intel at a time when the company is losing ground to two ambitious competitors. Justice's credit-card action comes now that consumers are inundated with low-rate card offers.

Who is suffering here? What else beside an anti-market mentality could explain such heavy-handed government efforts?

Indeed, Newsweek reported in March that Justice antitrust chief Joel Klein "believes passionately in 'surgical intervention' in the marketplace." In other words, he believes that federal bureaucrats should endlessly meddle in the private sector. Klein and company, and like-minded officials at the FTC and in state attorneys general offices, apparently need a refresher course in market economics.

The cases against Microsoft, Intel, Visa and MasterCard are reminiscent of the drawn-out antitrust cases the government filed against IBM in the 1970s and 1980s. Eventually, IBM was superseded by upstart competitors, rendering pointless the whole government spectacle. The IBM suit evaporated because the company was not a monopoly.

It is worth keeping in mind, as the Microsoft trial progresses, that governments, not successful businesses vulnerable to marketplace disciplines, are the only organizations that have true monopolistic power.

—Odessa American

Is it them or us?

It's after an election, and I'm not one to defend politicians, even though only few exhibit honesty, statesmanship and respect for our Constitution. On the other hand, we all have complaints about what Congress does. In my more cynical moments, I feel that Americans deserve what we're getting, including the diminution of our liberties. Let's look at it.

What kind of things make us feel good about our particular congressman? Just listen to political advertisements. Among the criteria we use to judge whether our congressman is doing a good job are: Does he support federal expenditures for more teachers? Has he supported punitive taxes on cigarette smokers? For Midwesterners, has he supported agricultural subsidies? For the elderly, has he supported Social Security and Medicare payment increases?

Nowhere in the U.S. Constitution is there a speck of authority for Congress to make expenditures for those activities. Moreover, making those expenditures comes at the expense of personal liberty. In other words, Congress has no resources of its very own. The only way it can give a farmer or a senior citizen one dollar is to first, through intimidation, threats and coercion, confiscate it from some other American. The very last criteria we use to judge whether our congressman is doing a good job is whether he's respectful of the U.S. Constitution and seeks to protect our liberties.

Walter Williams
 Syndicated columnist

The supreme tragedy is that a congressman who lived up to his oath of office by respecting the Constitution would be viewed with contempt by most Americans. Imagine Williams was your senator. During my re-election campaign, I tell my constituents that I voted against congressional measures that would take their money to give to someone else. I voted against measures that encroached on state sovereignty. I voted against the education bill because not even the word education appears in the Constitution.

Needless to say, I'd go down in blazing defeat, possibly tarred and feathered, as well. Most constituents would view my respect for the Constitution with contempt. Even those who had a modicum of constitutional respect would confront me with a practical issue, saying: "Williams, if you don't fight for our share of aid to higher education, agricultural hand-outs and federally financed teachers, it doesn't mean we'll pay lower federal taxes. All it means is that some other state will get the money, instead. You're expecting us to commit hari-kari." What could I say in response? They'd be absolutely right.

The reason is due to a phenomenon known as "the tragedy of the commons." Once legalized theft or constitutional disrespect begins, it's in everybody's private interest, at least economic interests, to participate. The person or politician who abstains becomes a loser. Even more ominous about the process is the tendency for legalized theft to beget more legalized theft and more constitutional disrespect to beget more constitutional disrespect.

"Williams," you say, "what can we do?" The first step is that we must stop the charade of blaming politicians. Politicians do precisely what we elect them to office to do: promote programs that allow one American to live at the expense of his fellow American. We must demand constitutional accountability from our politicians by demanding they give us specific constitutional authority for what they do, and don't let them get away with that "welfare" and "commerce" clause nonsense.

I'm not optimistic Americans will do that. Therefore, the most likely scenario is for us to see our liberties diminish and Washington despotism grow. If we truly cared about our children and future generations, instead of demagoging about them, we'd worry more about saving liberty than saving Social Security.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 11, the 315th day of 1998. There are 50 days left in the year. This is Veterans Day in the United States, Remembrance Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 11, 1918, fighting in World War I came to an end with the signing of an armistice between the Allies and Germany.

On this date:

In 1620, 41 Pilgrims aboard the Mayflower, anchored off Massachusetts, signed a compact calling for a "body politic."

In 1831, former slave Nat Turner, who had led a violent insurrection, was executed in Jerusalem, Va.

In 1889, Washington became the 42nd state.

In 1921, President Harding dedicated the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

In 1939, Kate Smith first sang Irving Berlin's "God Bless America" on network radio.

In 1966, Gemini 12 blasted off from Cape Kennedy, Fla., with astronaut James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. In 1972, the U.S. Army turned over its base at Long Binh to the South Vietnamese army, symbolizing the end of direct U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War.

Ten years ago: Police in Sacramento, Calif., found the first of seven bodies buried on the grounds of a boardinghouse. Landlady Dorothea Puente was later charged in the deaths of nine people; she was convicted of three murders and sentenced to life in prison.

Five years ago: A bronze statue honoring the more than 11,000 American women who had served in the Vietnam War was dedicated in Washington, D.C.

One year ago: Retired Gen. Colin Powell announced he would not seek the Republican presidential nomination or any other office in 2000, saying he lacked "the passion" for political life. Photography giant Eastman Kodak announced it was cutting 10,000 jobs because of fierce competition from Japan's Fuji Photo Film Co.

Assessing election's outcome

The elections are over. The people (at least, some of them) have spoken. Now we begin finding out whether the politicians in Washington have been listening.

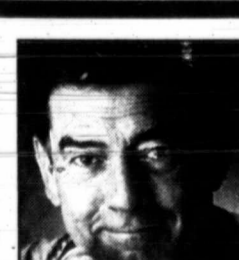

Americans have mixed opinions about whether or not President Clinton should be punished. But, overwhelmingly, they don't want him impeached. That's what the polls say, and it's what reporters hear when they talk directly with their fellow citizens.

Whatever Congress decides to do with the president's case, most people tell us they want it done quickly. "Get it over with and move on," they say.

Many Republicans in Congress want to do just that. But they've got problems.

Number one: Much of their base, those self-described hard-rock conservatives who work the hardest for and contribute the most money to Republican causes, are determined that the impeachment movement not die. Many of them are already demanding that the GOP's congressional leadership increase, not lessen, the impeachment pressure. No Republican leader in the House or Senate wants to cross these people.

Number two: It's all well and good to talk about "some kind of punishment short of impeachment," but what might that be? This is tricky, to say the least. Plus, the Republican special prosecutor Ken Starr can continue to pursue the president and the first lady — right on into the criminal courts, if he chooses to do so — regardless of any deal Congress may try to strike.

Dan Rather

Among other things, all this means that we've now entered one of the most interesting periods in American history. The time between now and early January, when the new Congress will be sworn in, will be feverish in back-room, behind-the-scenes wheeling, dealing and double-dealing.

Congressional leaders and their lieutenants, are already facing some grumbling troops. In some quarters there's an urge to blame the Republican congressional leadership for commands and judgment calls that, with hindsight, look to have hurt the party more than they helped. These include the eleventh-hour attack ads that targeted the Lewinsky matter.

If they are to have power to match their titles, leaders such as Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott are going to need to look tough. They may feel the need to reassert the impeachment drive, as if to say, "You see, I told you this was important." Kenneth Starr, in his attempt to depict his investigation as "not about sex," has already written many of the best lines Lott could use to promote a newly aggressive impeach-the-president inquiry.

But rank-and-file Republicans in Congress may not want to go aggressive. They may prefer to listen to those voters who said, "Please drop this impeachment inquiry now."

Yet always in the background will be the rumbling of their Clinton-hating base. Those voters have let it be known that in 2000 they will punish any politician who falters in the drive to impeach Bill Clinton.

Any member of Congress looking to make a deal has to be nervous. Wound tighter than an eight-day clock.

Make no mistake, this is still a time of great peril for President Clinton and his chances for finishing his term.

The election helped his chances, but he remains a long way from being out of the danger zone. The U.S. economy, especially the stock markets, remains key. As does the president's standing in public opinion polls. If both stay up, he stays in. If not, he may not.

He still must dance day-to-day on the razor's edge of danger. The election results allow him to breathe easier. A little. But that's all.

Former speaker talks about resignation Gingrich

DALLAS (AP) — Former House Speaker Jim Wright says he won't gloat over the resignation of Republican Newt Gingrich, whose investigation of the Fort Worth Democrat forced Wright from office.

Wright's comments came Tuesday with media in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"It would be somewhat pointless to be gloating over it or critical at this juncture," Wright told The Dallas Morning News. "I don't want to be that kind of person."

Wright said he remembers Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., who is expected to become speaker when the House votes Nov. 18, as "quiet and not flamboyant and bombastic."

"I'm happy for the country that this fellow Livingston is not mean-spirited," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "A number of my Democratic colleagues on the Appropriations Committee have told me he's a man with whom you can work and a reasonable person and not obsessed with trying to discredit and embarrass someone else."

Study calculates high heart disease risk among the obese

DALLAS (AP) — Obesity is a heavy burden for the heart. While experts have long known that too much weight raises the risk of heart trouble and increases the cost of health care, doctors from Harvard Medical School set out to learn what this means for the individual.

An analysis by Dr. Graham Colditz shows that the effects of too much weight can be dramatic.

His study calculates that an man of ordinary weight between 45 to 54 faces a 35 percent chance of coronary heart disease at some point during his life. That goes up to 38 percent for the mildly obese, 42 percent for the moderately obese and 46 percent for the severely obese.

For a normal-size woman in the same age range, the lifetime risk is 25 percent. This rises to 29 percent for the mildly obese, 32 percent for the moderately obese and 37 percent for the severely obese.

Prominent criminal defense attorney slain in home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A prominent criminal defense lawyer was shot to death as he slept in his home in northwestern Bexar County, police say.

Police said Leslie Vaughn, 44, was shot in the back of the head about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Lawyers, judges and others at the Bexar County Justice Center expressed shock.

"When something like this happens, it strikes so close to home," said Cornelius Cox, a criminal defense lawyer and one of Vaughn's close friends.

"We work with it every day; we work with victims, with people accused of crimes, and sometimes people feel we aren't affected by the tragedies," said Cox, a past president of the San Antonio Black Lawyers' Association. "But today we're all feeling a great sense of loss."

Republicans say with thin majority, they will work together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Would-be House GOP leaders are stressing a common theme: Republicans must learn to work together next year in a chamber where they will dominate by just a six-vote majority.

"Maybe I'm optimistic, but it may be easier" than it was this year, said Rep. Mike Castle, R-Del. "There will be more evidence that we do have to work together now."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., who seems certain to be the next speaker of the House, and other rivals for top leadership jobs all have been calling for Republicans to avoid intraparty splits in the 106th Congress, which convenes in January.

But the real question is with just a six-vote majority, can they remain united on tough issues like tax and spending cuts, boosting defense spending and strengthening Social Security. And what if conservative pro-family groups begin pressing GOP leaders for votes on abortion and other social issues that often split Republicans?

"There's plenty of incentive for them to unite, but I'm skeptical they can find the right vehicles," said Ronald Peters, director of the Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center at the University of Oklahoma. "When they become specific, there are still disagreements."

Dragging death suspect denies killing was racially motivated

DALLAS (AP) — One of three white defendants accused of beating and dragging a black man to death in East Texas says the crime was not racially motivated.

Rather, accused killer John William "Bill" King says in a seven-page letter released to The Dallas Morning News, the murder stemmed from drug ties between one of his cohorts and the victim, 49-year-old James Byrd Jr.

Jasper County District Attorney Guy James Gray said he knew of no evidence to support King's claim of drug ties between suspect Shawn Berry and Byrd. Gray declined further comment.

King, Berry and Russell Brewer all face capital murder charges in the June murder of Byrd in the deep East Texas town of Jasper.

In his letter, which court-appointed defense attorney C. Haden Cribbs called "a terrible, terrible mistake," King blamed the slaying solely on Berry, who initially cooperated with police.

Allstate sued for allegedly practicing law

DALLAS (AP) — Allstate Insurance Co. denies allegations that it is illegally practicing law in Texas by using law firms staffed by company employees to represent its policyholders.

The charge is contained in a lawsuit filed in October by the Unauthorized Practice of Law Committee of the Texas Supreme Court, The Texas Journal of The Wall Street Journal reported in today's editions.

Attorney Mark Ticer, who filed the suit on behalf of the committee, said the suit involves "whether the people practicing law have the requisite moral character and fitness—which is what the bar examines in licensing."

Allstate officials say staff-counsel arrangements are in the best interest of policyholders because the lawyers have a specialized knowledge of insurance law and can handle the cases economically and efficiently.

"I believe a corporation has a right to hire a lawyer to handle its work," says Pat Gallery, a Northbrook, Ill., attorney who oversees Allstate's staff attorneys nationwide, "and arrange with the lawyer a method of payment—be it salary, hourly rate or other."

Police dive team to scour lake for missing boy

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A police dive team will scour the murky bottom of a small lake for a boy missing since he rode away from home on his bicycle more than two weeks ago.

Police Chief Jerry Neal, desperate for clues in the Oct. 26 disappearance of Dorian Thomas, decided Tuesday to allow the department's diving team search the bottom of Martin Road Lake.

"I made that decision based on some of the information we've heard about him spending time around there, and you just never know," Neal said.

Dorien's family said the boy often played at the lake while riding his bike in the area. The Bivins Elementary School student was reported missing more than 24 hours after he vanished near his apartment.

Neal said diving into the northeast Amarillo lake won't be an easy undertaking.

With the Money Manager Account, the money that used to just sit idle in checking is invested in your choice of one of four money market mutual funds through NationsBank Investments, Inc. or an FDIC-insured, interest-bearing account through NationsBank. Result? Higher earnings potential for your daily money.

The Money Manager Account also gives you access to a full range of investments through NationsBank Investments, Inc.: stocks, bonds and thousands of well-known mutual funds. And you get all the convenience you'd expect from a NationsBank checking account, including no-fee, unlimited check writing and no-fee access to thousands of NationsBank ATMs and banking centers.

You can open a Money Manager Account today with just $10,000 in any combination of cash and securities. Call NationsBank Investments, Inc. at 1-800-446-0916 or visit any NationsBank banking center and ask for more information.

FOOTBALL

IRVING, Texas (AP) —

Two months ago, the Dallas Cowboys used the Arizona Cardinals for a punching bag on their way to a 38-10 season-opening win.

But if you ask Cowboys coach Chan Gailey about the Cardinals as he prepares for the rematch Sunday in Phoenix, you'd swear he was talking about a different team.

That's exactly what Arizona wants everyone to believe. Although the Cardinals aren't bowling teams over, they've rebounded from that humbling loss to build a 5-4 record, just one game behind the Cowboys in the NFC East.

"The biggest change is that it looks like they may have found a running game," Gailey said. The Cardinals ran for 187 yards Sunday, but that was against Washington, the NFC's worst rushing defense. Against Dallas, Arizona running attack was 45 yards.

Gailey said the Cardinals have good skill players on offense, especially quarterback Jake Plummer, a streaky passer who was pressured into 14-for-33 passing by Dallas but went 22-of-30 against Washington.

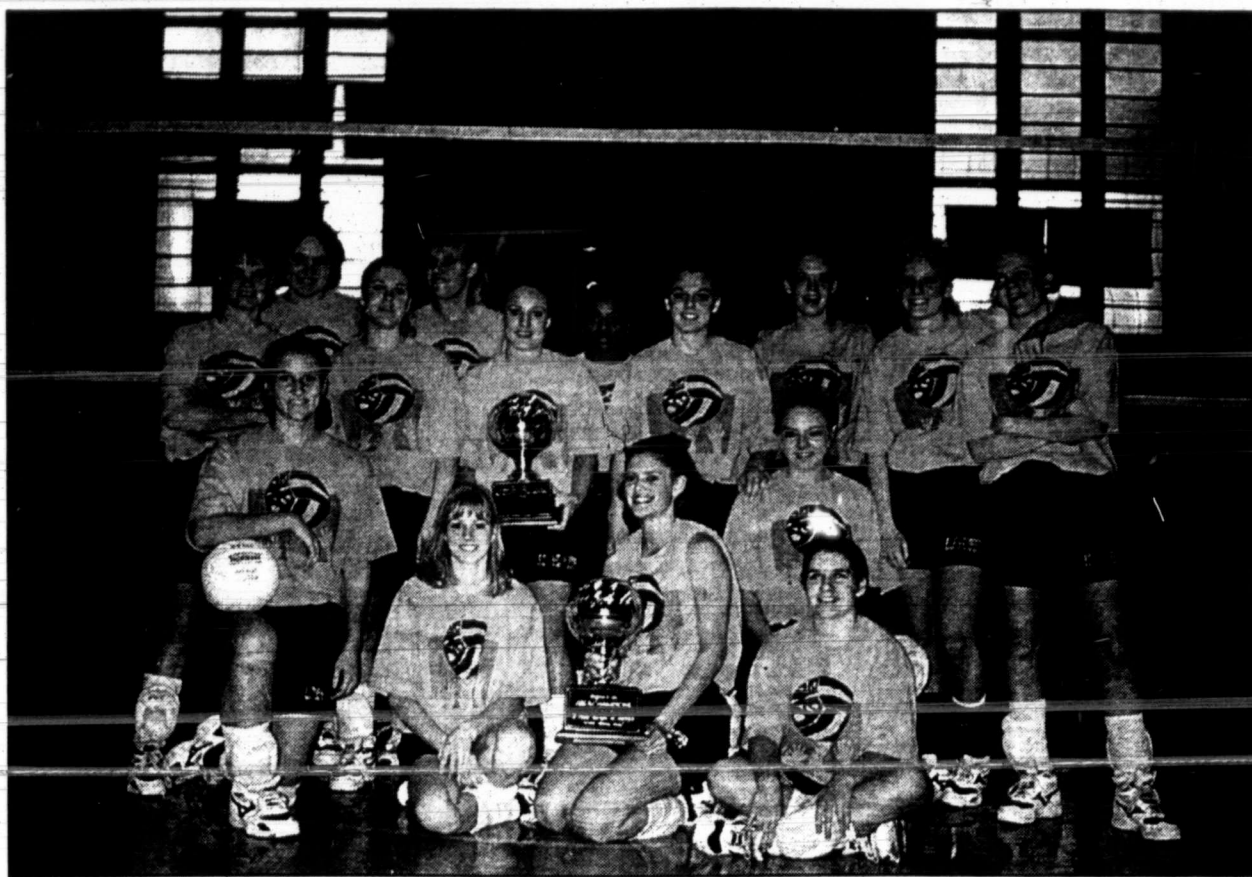

"He's very mobile ... he poses a real problem for containing the quarterback," Gailey said. "We haven't had that" in other opposing quarterbacks.

But if the rest of the NFL teams have taken notice of the Cardinals — and that's not to say they have — it would be for their defense, ranked third in the NFC.

"They're playing well on defense. They've given up some plays, more in the two-minute defense than anything," Gailey said. "Even without (injured all-pro tackle) Eric Swann, they're getting pressure on the quarterback. They're creating turnovers."

Several Cowboys are nursing injuries, including quarterback Troy Aikman, who sprained the index finger on his throwing hand. Both Aikman and tackle Erik Williams are expected to play, but reserve cornerback and kickoff returner Kevin Mathis is out. Gailey hasn't decided who will return kickoffs, but he won't risk using Deion Sanders, who handles punt returns.

"It's a different type of return," Gailey said. Then he added, "There are some great collisions that go on in that situation."

The Top of Texas Trials Association will hold its annual TOTTA cup event this weekend at Lake McClellan. The competition will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday. Dyer's Bar-B-Que will cater a meal at 6 p.m. under the covered awning at the lake. The public is invited to eat barbecue for $5 a plate and to watch the motorcycle riders in competition. The trials will resume Sunday morning. Riders from all over Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico will be competing, including Kevin Youree (pictured), in the amateur division.

Pampa favored by 3 over Frenship

PAMPA — The last thing Frenship coach Bobby Davis wanted to talk about was how good Pampa's defense was.

He remembers how the Harvesters shut down his Tigers, 52-7, in the 1996 bi-district game the last time the two teams met.

"We just weren't ready for them. I thought they had about the best defense I've ever seen two years ago. They're tough on defense again. It's exceptional," Davis said.

Pampa and Frenship meet again in the bi-district round of the playoffs at 7:30 Friday night at Frenship.

Harris Ratings figures it will be a much closer game this time around, picking the Harvesters by only 3 points. Pampa finished the regular season with an 8-2 record and tying Hereford for the District 3-4A title. Frenship, 7-3, in the No. 2 seed out of District 4-4A.

While Pampa is riding a three-game winning streak, Frenship is trying to regroup from a 37-6 loss to Plainview in the final regular-season contest. "I thought we had a good defense against the run until last Friday night. Right now, we're just trying to recover from that fiasco and get back into the groove," Davis said.

Frenship's backfield punch of fullback Dustin Peters and tailback Jonathan Shelby were smothered up by Plainview's defense as the Tigers managed only 54 yards on the ground.

Frenship, much like Pampa, has had injury problems throughout the season.

"We've had three knee surgeries and two broken collarbones, but injuries are something every team has to deal with," Davis said.

Groom takes on McLean at 7:30 Friday night in Clarendon in a six-man bi-district game.

Unbeaten Groom (10-0) is ranked sixth in the state's six-man poll. McLean has a 5-5 record.

In the area's other bi-district six-man clash, Miami goes against Samnorwood at 7:30 Friday night in Lefors.

Both Miami and Samnorwood have 6-4 records.
