PAMPA—The back window of the car of a fleeing suspect was shot out early this morning by a Gray County Deputy.

Deputy Gary Noblett went to the Wal-Mart in Pampa about 9:30 this morning to arrest a Mark Covalt, age unknown. Covalt ran from the deputy and out into the parking lot.

Noblett pursued and attempted to block the car from leaving. According to officials, Covalt then attempted to back out over Noblett. The deputy fired one shot which shattered the back glass of the Ford Taurus and lodged in the passenger's side headrest.

PAMPA — The Celebration of Lights organization is working in Recreation Park again this Saturday to continue setting up lighted Christmas displays for the holiday season. "We are really short on man power ... we could use help to finalize this project," said Kathleen Chaney. The volunteers are meeting at 9 a.m. on Saturday.

PAMPA — The 1998 election results in Gray County were formalized Tuesday when the county commission met to canvass the vote.

While a few numbers were off, there were no changes drastic enough to affect any outcome. The biggest change was a loss of 100 votes by Steve Emmert who defeated incumbent M. Kent Sims for 31st District Judge. That problem was caused by numbers that had been transposed on the tally sheet. Even with the loss of votes, Emmert won in Gray County 3,643 to 2,659.

Oil price drop: Some win, some lose

Skeeter Thorp cleans a windshield at one of the world's fast disappearing institutions, a full service gas station. The price of regular gas at Lentz Chevron Station where Thorp works was 95.9 cents per gallon today well below the national average of $1.027 per gallon.

Every cloud has a silver lining. The silver lining to the dark cloud hanging over the oil patch is a lower price of refined gasoline at the pump for the nation's motorists. The silver lining of the storm clouds that are blowing across the Mid-West is the jump in prices for natural gas produced in Gray County.

A nationwide survey last week indicated the price of gasoline at the pump has dropped nearly a penny a gallon due to low crude oil prices and less consumer demand.

The average price for gasoline, including all grades and taxes, was $1.086 on Friday, down 0.86 cents from two weeks earlier, according to the Lundberg Survey of 10,000 stations nationwide.

At self-service pumps, regular gasoline was $1.027 per gallon, mid-grade was $1.135 and premium was $1.219. At full-service pumps, regular was $1.463, mid-grade was $1.55 and premium was $1.624.

In Pampa, a spot check Wednesday showed self-service regular gasoline was $0.959 per gallon, mid-grade was $1.019 and premium was $1.099. At full-service pumps in Pampa, regular was $1.399, mid-grade was $1.419 and premium was $1.459.

Prices were down in all regions of the country, industry analyst Tilby Lundberg said.

"It's tough in the oil business," she said. "The national average price is 17.5 cents under what it was a year ago."

"We're in one of those periods where we're painfully subject to forces beyond our control, notably in the Persian Gulf," said Wayne Hughes, executive director of the Amarillo-based Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

There are two forces in the Persian Gulf that effect the immediate price of crude oil and even

TAAS test Is it too easy? Research group is critical

By MIRANDA G. BAILEY
Managing Editor

A recent story by the Associated Press cites several out-of-state professors as saying the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills exam taken annually by Texas students is not challenging enough.

The TAAS is given to students in grades 3-8, and in high school, and it's used to rate schools and school districts. Students need to pass the high school TAAS to get a diploma.

The Tax Research Association of Houston and Harris County, a private taxpayer advocacy group, published a report that came out this week questioning the state's educational standards. Within the report, the group asked "several out-of-state professors" to grade the TAAS test.

"Too easy," the professors reported back.

The AP story provided the following example 10th-grade exit exam math question along with a response from the advocacy group's report:

"At a restaurant Steve ordered food totaling $6.85. If he paid with a $20 bill, how much change should he receive? ... Certainly every high school graduate should be competent at solving problems of this nature. However these items do not reflect the kinds of skills and knowledge that are grade-level appropriate for high school students."

When asked for an opinion on the analysis and the reported findings, both Texas and Pampa educators responded in several ways.

High-tech describes 911 mapping system

By JEFF WEST
Staff Writer

Imagine a burning industrial building. Firemen get the call and instantly have a map of the structure complete with every fire escape and hazard spotted, along with pinpoint locations of hydrants, fire hoses and any stored hazardous chemicals.

That's one scenario that may be possible when the new 911 appraisal mapping system comes on line next year, according to John Yeager, of AIMS mapping company. Yeager spoke to the Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee meeting earlier this week.

AIMS, an Austin company, is doing the mapping for the Gray County Appraisal District. The district wants information concerning all structure locations in the county as well as the names of land and building owners.

AIMS is also gathering information that will be relevant for the 911 system including rental property, occupant name information.

All information could then be

Losing mother ...One family's story

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
For The News

On her birthday almost a year ago, Hazel Robinson tell, throwing her family into a 17-day roller coaster of emotions before she died. Confused and uncertain, they tumbled through a maze of decisions and the disturbing feelings associated with their choices.

"The whole death experience for us was a nightmare," said Carol Deavers, Robinson's daughter.

"Often a person's death while in hospice care is portrayed as a 'peaceful, almost holy, experience. The family is saddened but also satisfied that they had done all they could to make their loved one's last days as good as they can possibly be," said Sherry McCavit, executive director of Hospice of the Panhandle, a non-profit organization providing end-of-life care to Pampa and the surrounding area.

"Most of the time, this is true, but not always," McCavit explained. "Difficult deaths are a part of the hospice experience, too. To deny this would be to deny the realities of life."

Robinson had been under the constant care of a doctor for 10 years for a chronic illness, fibro-neuralgia.

"He never saw it," said Shirley Maddox, another of Robinson's daughters. "It took a stranger to find it."

"It" was cancer, cancer that had invaded her liver and her brain.

An angel seems to be watching over members of Hazel Robinson's family as they pose with her picture. From left, Granddaughter Lisa Maddox; daughter Shirley Maddox; and husband Keith Robinson.

"We had to tell Mother she was dying twice," Shirley said with bitterness. "We got her out (of the hospital) and she was never the same."

usually refined gasoline, Hughes said.

"The Saudis decide by determining how much they are going to sell next month," Hughes said. "The Iraqis will help determine how much we get by whether or not we go to war with them. Those are two major issues."

If there is another armed conflict over Iraq, the price of oil will go up because of worry over oil supply from the Middle East.

"Our industry will be effected by the jitters like all other industries," Hughes said.

On the demand side of the equation, Hughes blamed the falling demand on the collapse of various national economies around the world.

"The thing that holds us back and continues to hold us back is the poor showing of international economies," Hughes said. "They're not buying as much from the U.S., and one of the things they're not buying is petroleum and stuff made out of petroleum."

Until the world market turns around, he said, the oil industry would continue to slump.

Hughes said consumer demand also played an important role in the slumping oil field economy.

"There is less consumer demand," Hughes said. "Automobiles are more efficient than they used to be."

Lundberg said OPEC members and other oil producers are waiting to see if the winter will be cold enough to increase demand for heating oil, which would bolster crude oil prices.

Weather is what keeps the petroleum industry alive in the panhandle, Hughes said. Winter storms are hitting parts of the nation that are heated with natural gas from panhandle gas fields.

"The gas issue is an entirely different matter," Hughes said. "That's where we will probably do better here in the panhandle. In the last five days, prices have gone up about 20 cents per thousand cubic feet. That's on 90 day contracts. That's what they're projecting in January. That's the bright spot for us. Much of our gas goes to the upper Mid West and the east coast."

With blizzard conditions across the upper Mid-West this week, natural gas prices have increased.

"We've got a share of that market up there, and the demand will cause prices to go up a little," Hughes said. "That's what really keeps us alive here in the Texas Panhandle. If we had to rely entirely on crude oil, we'd be in a real tight spot right now."

displayed on a map that will show exactly where a house is and provide the fastest path there. The system can also display such facts as the number of people in a house and if anyone there is handicapped, according to Yeager.

Information such as where hazardous material is stored, where gas turnoffs are and locations of fire hoses are will require the cooperation of businesses but can be of help in an emergency, said Ken Hall, Pampa's Emergency Management Coordinator.

The system can display an area ranging from the entire county down to a city block. Police can keep information such as number and type of calls, accidents, or crimes in order to coordinate patrols or increase an officer's knowledge of previous incidents.

Yeager has just started using aerial maps which will be superimposed over conventional maps and drawings of the area to make sure roads, bodies of water and structures are accurately drawn. He asked to come back in a few months in order to show the committee more accurate maps of what he is doing for Gray County.

Texaco cutting jobs to remain profitable

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Texaco Inc. is the latest oil company to announce it's cutting jobs to try to remain profitable as oil prices fall.

Texaco said Thursday 1,000 jobs will be eliminated by March in its exploration and production departments as part of a restructuring that will save $200 million a year.

The company said 750 jobs will be cut in the United States and the rest in Britain. Refining and retailing will not be affected and no cuts are likely at Texaco headquarters in White Plains.

The lost jobs amount to nearly 5 percent of the company's work force of over 20,000. Spokeswoman Kelly McAndrew said she did not know if some of the jobs could be cut by attrition rather than layoffs.

The announcement came after more than a year of plunging oil prices. It follows recent cutback announcements by Mobil Corp., Unocal Corp., Atlantic Richfield Co. and Occidental Petroleum Corp.

A pursuit ensued and the suspect was followed to the Courtyard Apartments on Sumner. The suspect was blocked in from leaving and was arrested a few minutes later in apartment number 221. Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum acquires lithograph

CANYON — J.B. Lane of Amarillo has funded the acquisition of a Peter Hurd (1904-84) lithograph in memory of Lawrence R. Hagy for the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum. Hurd's "Dona Nestorita" (1942) joins two Hurd watercolors and a lithograph already in the museum's collection.

Born at Roswell, N.M., Hurd began his studies at the New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell followed by the United States Military Academy at West Point. In 1924, he entered the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and began an apprenticeship under N.C. Wyeth. After marrying Wyeth's daughter, Henriette, Hurd returned to New Mexico, and bought a ranch at San Patricio which he maintained for the rest of his life.

He painted New Deal murals at Big Spring and Dallas, and Alamogordo, N.M., and later murals at Texas Tech University. In addition to numerous group exhibitions, Hurd received solo-exhibitions in major museums at Fort Worth, San Francisco, Oklahoma City, Denver and Phoenix as well as a joint exhibition (with Millard Sheets) at the Amarillo Art Center in 1974.

Hurd began making lithographs in the 1930s as part of a lithographic renaissance sweeping the United States at the time.

Eventually, he became one of the most prominent lithographers in the Southwest. The Associated American Artists, a cooperative formed to make art more affordable to the general public, commissioned "Dona Nestorita."

"This is an especially important acquisition for the Museum because while we had the two Hurd watercolors, Hurd was an extremely important lithographer in the Southwest and having two of his lithographs gives a better idea of his talents in this medium. Moreover, Lawrence Hagy liked Hurd's work and collected it so Dona Nestorita is an appropriate memorial to Mr. Hagy," said Michael R. Grauer, curator of art.

Appraisals may pay off in long run, ASA says

WASHINGTON — A professional appraisal of your jewelry can help you should you ever become the victim of theft or fire or if you need to sell any of your precious items, according to the American Society of Appraisers. But one appraisal does not necessarily fit all, so how do you know which type of appraisal you need?

When you obtain an appraisal for insurance purposes, the items will often be appraised according to their replacement value. This is the amount required to replace a property with another of similar kind and quality within a reasonable length of time in an appropriate and relevant market. For example, if your two-carat diamond ring is stolen and is insured for its replacement value that value will be what it costs you to obtain a similar diamond ring in today's market.

When should you appraise a property for insurance? Insurance professionals and appraisers recommend an appraisal if: 1) the property exceeds $250 in value; 2) the market is not commonly known, as with one-of-a-kind gems or jewelry; 3) the characteristics central to the property's value might not be commonly recognized such as exceptionally good condition, rare features or superior design; 4) if the property is to be insured by floater or Valuable Items Policy.

An appraisal performed to determine value for equitable distribution such as in divorce proceedings or for division among heirs is based on the fair market value of the items appraised. The Internal Revenue Service defines fair market value as the price at which the item or comparable item would be sold at retail. Fair market value is the only value accepted by the IRS for estate or gift tax liability. For example, if your grandmother willed her emerald earrings to you, an appraisal of their fair market value will determine the estate tax liability.

When should you obtain a fair market value appraisal of your jewelry? If your jewelry is part of your estate and is willed to your heirs, you should obtain an appraisal. Likewise, if you receive any jewelry as an heir, undergo divorce proceedings or wish to sell any jewelry for any reason, you should have the items appraised. Certain states recognize community property. If you live in one of those states it would be beneficial to have your jewelry appraised at the time of death of a spouse to limit tax exposure at the time of the survivor's death.

An appraisal is needed when jewelry is placed in a trust and again when there is an event such as a death of a principal, a gift from the trust, dissolution of the trust or invasion of the principle. Jewelry in a trust should be insured. While trusts may avoid probate expenses, they do not eliminate taxes while an appraisal will be necessary in certain states and certainly if the size of the entire estate is in excess of the 1998 threshold of $625,000. This figure will increase to $650,000 for the year 1999 and continue increasing to one million dollars in the year 2006.

Any appraisal report should clearly state the kind of value being estimated such as fair market value, replacement value or an orderly liquidation value. The report should also describe the property being valued; the procedures used to estimate the value such as analysis of comparable sales; and the effective date of the valuation.

The report should also stipulate the appraiser has no interest in the property being appraised, or, if the appraiser does have such an interest, that the appraiser disclosed this interest to the prospective client prior to beginning work. The document should be signed by the individual who made the appraisal and who is responsible for its validity and objectivity. It also should contain a statement of the individual's qualifications data.

Texas Editorials

By The Associated Press

A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers: The Dallas Morning News on electoral fraud:

If Americans don't vote in adequate numbers, it's not because voting is difficult. Voting has never been easier, thanks to laws designed to increase registrations and to permit mail balloting for the sick and elderly.

However, those same laws have also made voter fraud easier than ever. The United States needs to keep the good parts of the more wide-open system, eliminate the bad and punish those who would abuse it.

The television news show 60 Minutes brought the problem startlingly to light on Nov. 1 with a report about the 1993 motor voter law, which allows people to register to vote when applying for a driver's license or welfare.

The motor voter law is noble and well intentioned. However, it is also flawed because it forbids government officials from asking people to produce identification showing that they are eligible to vote.

The result has been many noncitizens registering even though they are ineligible and people registering more than once. 60 Minutes even described cases of people registering dogs, cats, a donkey and an elephant.

This wouldn't be so bad if it were easier to prevent ineligible votes from being cast. But illegal voting is rarely prosecuted because the laws regarding it are soft as well. Most states don't even require identification when voting; Texas only did so this year. And mail ballots are notoriously easy to manipulate.

In Texas, the 1997 Legislature cracked down on mail ballot fraud, which was the preferred manner of stealing elections in the state. But Texas Secretary of State Alberto Gonzales recently discovered 74,000 duplicate voters on Texas rolls and 43,000 others who may be dead.

Texas must do more. Mr. Gonzales has some good ideas. He would clarify existing laws to make it easier to prosecute fraud, forbid campaign operatives from helping voters to complete mail ballots and empower his office to refer fraud complaints to the Department of Public Safety, thus bypassing overwhelmed or complicit district attorneys.

At the federal level, Congress and the president should restore integrity to voter registrations, perhaps as part of some omnibus election reform bill that also restricts campaign financing.

No one benefits from an electoral system that invites fraud. Democracy is eroded when the credibility of its elections can no longer be assumed.

Corpus Christi Caller-Times on state board of education: "The Legislature ought to rid the state of what is rapidly becoming an embarrassment and, perhaps most importantly, an obstacle to raising the educational profile of Texas, by taking the State Board of Education off the ballot.

Republicans in particular ought to join in this effort. The extremist wing of the party has sought to take control of this board and use it for their own ideological ends. On Tuesday night, the hard-liners came a step closer by taking several key seats, though they are still short of a majority.

The Legislature already has taken much of the power out of the hands of the board. It ought to finish the job by making the board appointive, and removing an opportunity for political mischief.

San Antonio Express-News on Congress and budget boondoggles: "By now most of us know that the 1999 federal budget Congress passed two weeks ago is 4,000 pages long, 16 inches thick and weighs 40 pounds.

What will probably take many more weeks to decipher, however, is what the heck is in it. We'll highlight a few horrid examples, but a Congressional Quarterly headline on its budget story said a mouthful: "Head-shaking, not hand-clapping, follows Capitol Hill's closing act."

Among the most expensive lowlights were these: — Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., got $100 million for one of the premier pork-barrel projects of all time, a Boston tunnel and road project known now as the "Big Dig" but which was known as "Tip's Tunnel" when the late House Speaker Tip O'Neill was alive and funding.

That, incidentally, indicates how long this boondoggle has been in the public works.

— How about the "Dickey Split," named for U.S. Rep. Jay Dickey, R-Ark? He got $100 million to run the proposed Interstate 69 through both Arkansas and Mississippi to please lawmakers from both states one of whom, no doubt, is Senate leader Trent Lott.

But our favorite is a little one. Someone, probably, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, got $750,000 for grasshopper research. Who are we to second-guess that?

And which of our local congressmen had the audacity to vote for this mess? All of them. And of the two Texas senators, only Phil Gramm had the dignity to say no.

Opinion polls do count

One fantasy of conservatives must now be laid to rest — namely that the polls are not to be trusted.

Throughout the drama of the past year, conservatives have been telling each other that the polls showing support for President Clinton and opposition to impeachment are rigged or untrustworthy in some vague way. "I don't know who they are polling" is the constant lament, rather like the resident of Cambridge, Mass., in 1972 who could not believe George McGovern had lost since he did not know a soul who had voted for Richard Nixon.

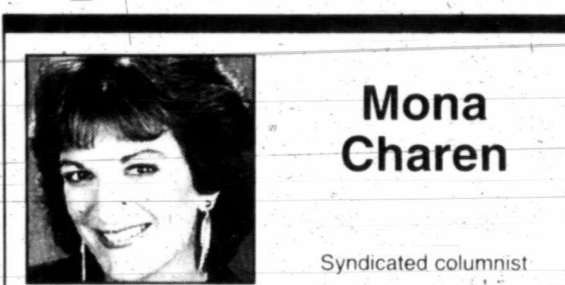

But the election of 1998 was a solid reflection of what the polls have been saying for 11 months. There is no widespread enthusiasm for impeachment of this president — quite the contrary. There are about equal numbers of people in the United States, 30 percent on either extreme, who love or loathe Bill Clinton. Most dislike his personal behavior (61 percent according to a New York Times poll), but 62 percent do not wish to see him impeached or removed from office.

Republicans must now reflect seriously on their position.

Even in an off-year election in which the president's party traditionally loses seats, the Democrats were able to make gains. Even when the leader of the Democratic Party is disgraced and his supporters revealed as hypocrites (e.g. Sen. Barbara Boxer, Sen.-elect Charles Schumer), the Democrats are able to rock Republicans back on their heels.

Republicans are clearly doing something wrong.

Yes, the tactics of the Democrats were atrocious. In Illinois, Hillary Rodham Clinton

Mona Charen

Syndicated columnist

called Senate candidate Peter Fitzgerald "anti-woman, anti-education and anti-equal opportunity." And in St. Louis, Democrats ran radio ads warning black voters that Republican victories would mean cross burnings on black citizens' lawns (I am not kidding). The media were all exercised over some tepid Republican ads that wondered aloud whether "Clinton should get away with it." Let's see, whose tactics were more outrageous, those who compared Republicans to the KKK or those who reminded voters of Clinton's conduct?

The black turnout did make a difference in this election. But Republicans cannot chalk this up to dirty politics and walk away.

They'd better consider their own less-than-admirable conduct. Many voters believe that Republicans capitalized on Clinton's troubles for partisan reasons. Would that it were so.

When Nixon was weakened by Watergate, Democrats pushed through legislation he was unable to tawart, like the War Powers Resolution and the Budget Act. How have Republicans exploited Clinton's troubles? By passing a budget that Sen. Chuck Hagel, a loyal Republican, called "disgusting" and Sen.

Robert Byrd called a "monstrosity." The Republicans' budget failed to deliver tax cuts despite the first surplus in 30 years. The Republicans' budget included $20 billion in new spending, much of it for things Republicans do not even favor, like $1.2 billion to pacify the National Education Association.

Who can blame Republican voters for concluding that there were no pressing reasons to return Republicans to office?

The current crop of Republican leaders, in the House and the Senate, should resign their leadership positions. They promised that the strategy of lie low and shut up would deliver a filibuster-proof Senate and a larger majority in the House. They failed. They did not articulate or fight for an agenda beyond splitting the difference with President Clinton. And because they dithered about producing appropriations bills on time, they handed the president a key advantage when the omnibus spending bill was due. These are not gifted tacticians.

Most analysts will now conclude that Republicans must soften their hard edges on abortion and other social issues if they hope to win in 2000. But that is not the lesson of this election. Ellen Sauerbrey, defeated four years ago and accused of being too conservative, modulated her message this time around and lost anyway.

No, the lesson of this election is for this crop of Republican leaders. They lost their nerve after the budget fiasco of 1995 and have been hibernating ever since. The voters may be quite wrong about excusing Clinton's conduct (as I believe they are). But they are right not to excuse the Republicans' inertia and cowardice.

Israel: Stop playing 'gotcha'

Israelis will rightly hail as a hero the soldier who dove his jeep between a car bomber and a school bus, sacrificing his own life to save the lives of more than 40 schoolchildren on a road in Gaza.

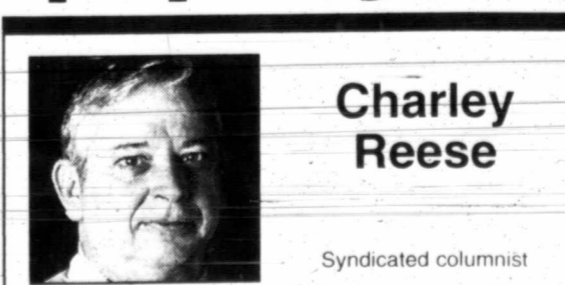

Palestinians also should honor the soldier. He saved the children. He also saved the Palestinian cause from a catastrophic blunder from which it probably would never have recovered. All the hard work of Palestinian moderates, by far the majority, would have been undone by the mangled bodies of Israeli children.

Palestinian children die anonymously, as far as the American media is concerned, but Israeli children do not.

If in fact the military wing of Hamas planned this attack, then the leaders of Hamas ought to execute them, not only for their evil intent but also for the evil they would have done to both Islam and to the hopes of Palestinians for peace and self-determination.

Adults killing adults is bad enough, but killing children is evil, and too many children, both Palestinian and Israeli, have already died in this struggle over land so arid and rocky that most Americans wouldn't buy an acre of it at a bankruptcy sale.

Every single death is another log on the fire of hatred that burns on both sides. And killing has become all too common and casual. There is no moral difference between trying to blow up a school bus and Israeli gunners deliberately selling a U.N. camp in Lebanon, knowing that it contained more than 100 women and children who had sought refuge.

Charley Reese

Syndicated columnist

Without a just peace, these fires will burn and consume flesh indefinitely into the next century. And, inevitably, they will spread.

The majority of Palestinians, now led by Yasir Arafat, renounced terrorism and made the even more important decision to settle for a Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza. This was the sea change that hard-nosed Israeli Yehoshafat Harkabi wrote about in his last book, in which he warned that Israel would be committing national suicide if it turned its back on this opportunity for peace.

Hamas, however, is a separate organization, mainly a religious and charitable organization that operates a string of hospitals, schools and a welfare system. It has a military wing, and it has never bought into the idea of compromising with the Israelis. Ironically, it was the Israelis who initially encouraged the growth of Hamas in order to divide Palestinians. That may yet go down as one of the Israelis' biggest blunders.

It's always been the Israeli plan to instigate a civil war among the Palestinians. So far both Arafat and Hamas have avoided that. All these extra guns that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu now complains about came from Israel.

Right after the Israelis pulled out of Gaza, I had dinner with several municipal officials from Gaza and they told me that Israelis were selling guns to anyone who wanted them in Gaza. Why? To make a civil war more likely, they said.

Arafat's task of dealing with terrorism is complicated by a number of factors.

1. The areas under Palestinian authority are isolated spots, surrounded by Israeli-controlled territory.

2. The Israeli government itself has continued to commit acts of terrorism, assassinating one Hamas leader in Gaza and attempting to assassinate another in Jordan. It has also continued to confiscate land and expand settlements. This, of course, provokes retaliation.

No country in the world, not Israel, not the United States, can be 100 percent successful in preventing terrorism. This, no matter what Arafat does, the Israelis can always claim it's not enough. Israel should quit playing "gotcha" games and make peace while it still has the chance.

MOTHER

"He never saw it," said Shirley Maddox, another of Robinson's daughters. "It took a stranger to find it."

"It" was cancer, cancer that had invaded her liver and her brain.

Keith Robinson, Robinson's husband, believes the cancer had probably spread from a malignancy removed from behind her eye 10 years before. At the time, doctors had told the family the cancer had been completely removed.

Ten years later, Robinson fell. Keith was in Amarillo for a check-up following shoulder surgery. When he came home, his wife was gone. He couldn't reach anyone in the family. He missed the note on the door saying she was in the intensive care unit at the Pampa hospital.

Test results showed she had cancer in her liver and her brain. The doctor gently told the family nothing more could be done to cure the disease and that she probably had about six months left to live. He mentioned hospice.

The family then had the awful task of telling Robinson she was going to die.

"We took her home that night," Shirley remembered. "We didn't want to leave her there in the hospital. We wanted her home with us."

After going home and thinking about her prognosis, Robinson decided she wanted a second opinion. She scheduled an appointment with her physician in Amarillo.

"He told her she wasn't going to die, that the shadow on her liver was just a bruise from the fall," Shirley said.

Robinson was admitted to an Amarillo hospital and subjected to another battery of tests. Shirley remembered the nurses telling her mother that she was going to be all right. Her hopes and the hopes of her family soared.

It wasn't all right. Someone from the hospital that they had never seen before came to the family and told them Robinson had cancer in her liver and brain. They were told it would be fatal. Hospice was mentioned again.

"We had to tell Mother she was dying twice," Shirley said with bitterness. "We got her out (of the hospital) and she was never the same."

The Robinsons called Hospice of the Panhandle when they got home.

"Mother had mixed feelings about contacting hospice. I remember Mom saying after she signed the papers, 'I've signed my life away,'" Carol said. "She felt like it was giving up."

"We wouldn't have used hospice at all if there had been (the hope of) any other outcome than there was," Keith said. "It was good for her, but hard for us."

"Hospice was there for us," Carol said. "They told us we could call them day and night and we did. They were always there in about 10 minutes. We appreciated that. We were scared."

"Not just afraid - we were terrified," Shirley added.

"You are so alone. It's good to know there's someone out there who deals with (dying) every day who can just help you make it through the day," Carol said.

Robinson's nurse Tiffany Chaney, RN, quickly developed a close relationship with her patient.

"Mother loved Tiffany," Carol said. "We really appreciated the care she gave Mother."

It wasn't all right. Someone from the hospital that they had never seen before came to the family and told them Robinson had cancer in her liver and brain. They were told it would be fatal. Hospice was mentioned again.

"We had to tell Mother she was dying twice," Shirley said with bitterness. "We got her out (of the hospital) and she was never the same."

"She was so kind, very kind. I remember Tiffany holding her hand and talking to her and being so gentle with her," Shirley said.

"Anything Tiffany knew she needed she saw that she got it," Keith interjected. "Being a hospice nurse must be the hardest profession, knowing that your patient is going to die every time."

One day in early December, about a week after Robinson entered hospice care, she convinced her daughters to take her shopping for Christmas presents. Robinson loved Christmas, her favorite time of year. In fact, this year the family decorated the house and put up the Christmas tree early just so she could enjoy it.

"It was cold and windy. We didn't think she needed to be outside, but she insisted," Shirley said.

"Now that I think back on it, she was very determined to go that day," Carol added.

Robinson spent the day buying everyone a Christmas gift. Encouraged by her mother's surge of energy, Shirley's optimism soared once more. Surely this meant her mother was getting better, she thought.

By the next day, though, her hopes began to fall. Robinson's condition worsened. The weekend nurse explained to Keith that his wife appeared to be in the early stages of dying.

In shock and grieving, Keith kept the information to himself. "How could I tell them their mother was dying?" he said.

"I was taking care of Mother," Shirley remembered. "I was hearing bits of pieces and not putting it all together. Besides, how could my mother be dying? She was out shopping yesterday."

"We just knew we would have Mother for Christmas," Carol added. They had been told she had six months or less to live - not two weeks.

"Death is different for each person. (Keith) knew she was going to die, but we just couldn't see it," she said.

Robinson's daughters recall the last 18 hours of her life as being especially difficult. They struggled to comprehend what was happening, even as they clung to the hope that their strong mother would rally once more.

"The only person she knew that day was Keith," Carol said.

But it was Carol who was sitting beside her mother, looking into her eyes, when she died.

Robinson's brother, her sister, a niece, the grandchildren and even some of the grandchildren were in the house when Robinson died.

"Even with the house full everyone was going through their own grief inside," Carol said. "Everybody had a different experience."

The Texas Education Agency, according to the article, cited a study by the National Education Goals Panel that lauded Texas and North Carolina for having the greatest gains in the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

"The fact that the Texas test is too easy cannot be the case if you look at how well Texas students are doing on national tests," said Ann Smisko, associate commissioner for curriculum, assessment and technology. "They are scoring very well," said Smisko to the Associated Press.

Locally, Pampa ISD Superintendent Dr. Dawson Orr first responded by saying that the math question in the story is not the only question on the math portion of the TAAS.

Orr provided The News with a copy of one of last year's TAAS tests, which included many other questions like:

"Tanya is flying a model airplane at a height of 100 feet above the ground at point P while she stands at point T, 40 feet away from point P. Which equation could be used to determine the distance between point T and the airplane?"

Orr also pointed out that the test is designed to evaluate basic level mathematics information.

"It's not prepared to measure college-level skills," he said in response to the college professors' opinions of the exam.

Pampa High School TAAS preparatory English teacher Billie Osborne said basically the same thing — the test is used as a means of examining students' basic knowledge.

"The TAAS test is a basic skills test. It does not judge the ability of our students; it simply tests basic skills that these young people need to know in order to function everyday," said Osborne.

The TAAS given in the spring of 2000 is scheduled to reflect more rigorous standards that the state board adopted last year, according to TEA officials in the story.

RELIGION

That day will come...

When he is little he has to love you because you are his mother. It is designed into the ancient and complicated fiber of his heart.

When he is big, he doesn't have to love you because there is an entire world of lovely and interesting people to choose from. If he loves you, it is because he wants to. If he becomes your friend, it is because you have earned the continuation of his fellowship.

I've always believed that at some point in the growing up years, children divorce their parents. It may be a split so gentle it creates only a ripple in the family; it may be so painfully brutal the entire family is shocked by the earthquake of emotions.

From the Back Pew...

By Cheryl Berzanskis

The child may be 8 or 9, he may be 18, but the divorce will occur. You can see the divorce in his eyes when a one percent solution of "I don't belong to you. I belong to me. Catch me if you can," glints there.

You might miss it, but a mommy's radar should register the light.

That's the day the family changes. Perhaps it is better to grant the divorce before your child discovers he will inevitably do this. Talk of his growing up, his college years, of "someday when you are big." Let him know you won't clutch him forever, that leaving literally and figuratively is the right way of things. Then when his eyes glitter with tiny independent light, grant his freedom with grace and blessing.

He will remain your son and best friend, if not your child.

Minister nominees now sought

COLLEGE STATION — Nominations are open for the 1998 Rural Minister of the Year award until Dec. 31 by the Minister Selection Committee of the Texas Conference of Churches.

Ministers may be nominated if they have served a church located in the country or in a community close to a larger town or city for at least two years, according to Monique Dorsett with Texas A&M. A nomination booklet must be filled out by a congregation member.

This year's theme is "The Pastor as Shepherd," Dorsett said.

According to Dr. Carol M. Worthing, committee chair, specific examples of a minister's achievements must be included in the nomination book.

"Inform the Minister Selection Committee how the pastoral skills and other talents of the minister you are nominating have not only sustained but also enriched the lives of people in his or her church," Worthing said.

All nominees accepted by the selection committee will receive a certificate of recognition. The Texas Rural Minister of the Year will receive a plaque from Progressive Farmer Magazine during the closing session of the Assembly of Representatives of the Texas Conference of Churches in Austin on Feb. 16.

The award is presented at the assembly as a way of recognizing the outstanding contributions being made by pastors in rural communities.

They also lead the worship services every Sunday morning at Pampa's Calvary Baptist Church.

The Lesters in concert

The Lesters will be in concert at the First Baptist Church Auditorium on Sunday, Nov. 15 at 6:30 p.m.

Founded in 1925 by Harvey and Opal Lester, this talented family group is celebrating over 70 years of Christian music ministry.

The versatility of the Lesters is extremely diversified encompassing music styles from southern gospel to a top 40 country flavor to the soulful black stylings and finally a pop sound reminiscent of the Carpenters, all being performed equally well in their own inimitable way.

Confiding Secrets to Strangers Provides Safe Venting for Some

DEAR ABBY: This has always puzzled me. Why do people who are virtual strangers tell you their deepest secrets?

I was on a first date not long ago with "Phil." Before the evening was over, he'd told me about his father's attempted suicide, the fact that he hasn't spoken to his mother in more than 18 years, and his sister's many bad habits — all of which were described in detail.

On another occasion, the woman seated next to me at a seminar told me more than I ever wanted to know about her struggle with infertility. What gives?

OFFENDED IN OTHELLO, WASH.

DEAR OFFENDED: Phil may have been talking to mask his first-date jitters. Many people use nervous chatter to hide their feelings. Or perhaps he mistook you for a sympathetic listener. You could have gently stopped his recitation by turning the conversation to another subject, or lightly suggesting that it wasn't necessary for you to learn everything about him in one night.

Some people confide in strangers because it's "safe." They are able to express their emotions and lighten their emotional burden without worrying about the other's reaction, or living with the consequences of what they have disclosed.

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

Abby, I chose my entire menu from your "More Favorite Recipes." Your tomato salad because it could be made the night before, your Sour Cream Chicken because I could assemble it early in the morning to cook just before their arrival, and the Heavenly Peanut Butter Pie. While I made the salad on Friday night, Rick made the pie. He also helped me with the chicken recipe on Saturday morning.

I'm happy to report that dinner was a great success. My in-laws were impressed. In fact, Jill said, "You've been hiding something from me — I had no idea you were such a talented cook." Rick's dad was equally complimentary and didn't have to be encouraged to take seconds.

Thank you, Abby, for helping me measure up to Rick's terrific parents. Sign me ...
GRATEFUL IN PALO ALTO, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'm delighted that my recipes helped you dazzle your in-laws. (However, I suspect your secret weapon was Rick, the kitchen collaborator!) Next time you entertain, try my carrot cake, the sweet potato pie or the brownies. They're not local — but I predict there won't be any leftovers.

DEAR ABBY: I owe you a debt of gratitude. I'm a 20-year-old married college student. "Rick" and I married five months ago, and we live in Palo Alto, Calif. I love my in-laws dearly. They are kind and generous, but I do have one problem with them. They are so perfect they intimidate me.

They live in a lovely house that my husband's father keeps in good repair. The outside looks almost picture-perfect. "Jill," my mother-in-law, has made the interior look like a designer's pet project. She's a great cook, too. Neither of Rick's parents has ever tried to make me feel inferior, but how could I ever measure up to their level?

Recently, Rick's father was sent to Oakland on business and decided to bring Jill with him. They asked to come to our apartment since they were in the area. I was scared out of my wits. However, among the gifts I received at my kitchen shower before my wedding were your two cookbooks. I needed something that I, a novice at cooking, could prepare.

PAMPA — NBC Bank moved its record to 4-0 with a 14-9 win over Meredith House in Optimist 5th-6th Grade girls action Thursday night.

Summer Cunningham was the leading scorer for NBC with 6 points. Brittany Adams had 4 points, Autumn Schaub and Ashlee McLean 2 each to round out the scoring for NBC.

Scoring for Meredith House were LaShay Douglass 4 points, Kylie Winegeart 3 points and Taylen Gregory 2.

FOOTBALL

PAMPA — Mark Buzzard had the winning ticket during a drawing Thursday night at a community pep rally in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Buzzard received five Harvester athletic t-shirts courtesy of First American Bank. The bank also made a donation to the Scholarship Fund.

The pep rally was held for the Pampa football team, which plays Frenship tonight in the bi-district round of the playoffs.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Emmitt Smith is supposed to be on the downside of his career. That's what his critics said and what his numbers from the last two years suggested.

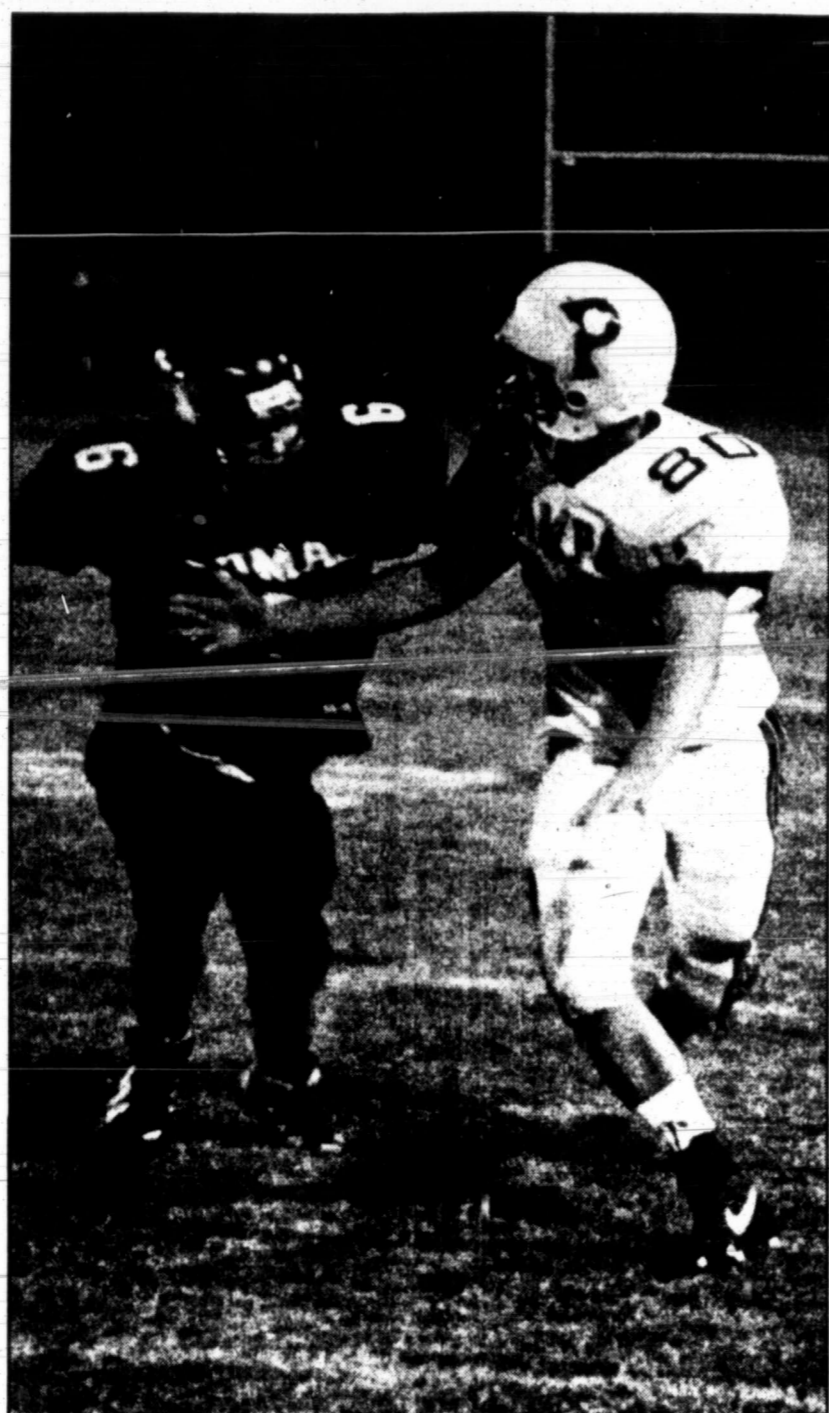

But nine games into this year, a new offense for the Dallas Cowboys has given new life to Smith's career.

Smith has 871 yards, fourth-best in the NFC and good for seventh in the NFL. He's gone over 100 yards five times and is coming off a 163-yard game against the New York Giants that was his best in three years.

If anyone had forgotten what Smith has accomplished in his career, Sunday's big day featured the perfect reminders. Smith passed Tony Dorsett to become the leading rusher in Cowboys history and became the eighth player in NFL history with 12,000 yards.

Smith admitted his adrenaline spiked a bit against the Giants because he wanted to pass Dorsett in front of a home crowd, including several relatives and friends who flew in for the occasion.

That has led to a backlash from fans who interpreted Smith's motivation as a way of saying he doesn't get up for every game.

Pampa tight end-kicker Justin Barnes (80) runs a pass route in a recent District 3-4A game. The 167-pound junior handles all the kicking chores for the Harvesters, who meet Frenship at 7:30 tonight in a Class 4A bi-district game tonight in Frenship. Barnes finished as District 3-4A's third-leading kick scorer with 26 points. He was a perfect 5 of 5 in field goal attempts and averaged 33.5 yards per kick in 55 tries during the regular season. Pampa enters the playoffs with an 8-2 record while Frenship is 7-3.

WBU's King wins award

PLAINVIEW — Serenity King, junior volleyball player for Wayland Baptist University was recently named the first Sooner Athletic Conference Shining Star of the 1998-99 school year. This weekly honor is awarded not only on the basis of athletic achievement but also takes into account the student's activities and contributions off of the court as well.

King represents her school in the classroom as well as on the court. The junior Lady Pioneer from Pampa is an English/Psychology major with a 3.63 G.P.A. She is a two-time All-Conference outside hitter and currently leads her team in kills and digs. She is currently ranked 3rd in the NAIA Southwest Region averaging 4.1 kills per game. King also ranks in the career top five in kills, digs, and service aces at WBU.

King is a member of the Psychology club and is part of a group trying to begin an English club. Her hobby is writing, and she hopes to be a magazine or newspaper editor. She writes prose and poetry, and her poetry has been selected for publication by The National Anthology of Poetry.

King is also interested in other sports besides volleyball.

In high school, she was a three time All-District selection for soccer and was All-State in softball as a freshman. As Sports Editor of her high school newspaper, she was a two-time Regional Qualifier in the U.I.L. Academic Meets.

King is the daughter of Dennis and Doris King of Pampa. She feels the most influential people in her life are her coach, Brad Borden (who also coached her two seasons in high school), and her mother. "Serenity is a very special person to me," said Borden. "This is the fifth year that I have coached her including high school. In all that time I have never one time had to question her effort whether on the court of play, in the weightroom, or in the classroom. Serenity and other young people like her are the reason I am in coaching and are the true definition of the college student-athlete."

Wayland Baptist is entered in the Sooner Athletic Conference Tournament this weekend at Lubbock Christian College. The Lady Pioneers meet John Brown University at 5 p.m. today in first-round action.

No. 18 Texas heads to Texas Tech for high-stakes contest

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — There are so many reasons both teams must win that you could almost lose count.

On the line for No. 18 Texas: a shot at the Big 12 South championship, Ricky Williams' second-to-last chance to break the NCAA rushing record and the Longhorns' bowl prospects.

Texas Tech needs the victory to boost recruiting for next year, snap a three-game losing streak, get into a top-notch bowl and overcome the reputation of not being able to beat ranked teams.

"This is a huge game for us for so many reasons," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "Sometimes you just imagine there is a lot of pressure. This time, there IS a lot of pressure. This is a game that will give us something to talk about with kids next year when it's recruiting time."

Longhorns coach Mack Brown said Tech's three-game slide isn't representative of the Red Raiders' ability.

"Texas Tech is very fast. They have great team speed and quickness," Brown said. "I don't think they received the credit that they deserved when they were 6-0. They are a really good football team."

Much of the focus Saturday will be on Ricky Williams, who is only 204 yards behind Tony Dorsett's NCAA Division I-A career yardage record.

If Williams can break the record against Tech, he'll earn his place in history against one of the nation's top defenses. Only Missouri's Devin West has run for more than 100 yards in Tech's last 12 games.

Brown said the Red Raiders' defense could provide some problems.

"Montae Reagor may be the best defensive end in the country," Brown said. "He can dominate a game, especially as much as we throw the ball."

Harvesters have their own kicking threat

Frenship kicker Steven Todd is considered a major college prospect as a punter. His 39.8 yards per kick led District 4-4A this season and the 178-pound senior connected on two game-winning field goals.

Pampa could find Todd hard to deal with when the two teams kick off the bi-district game tonight at Frenship, but the Harvesters have their own threat in junior kicker Justin Barnes.

Barnes averaged 33.5 yards per kick in 52 attempts to finish fifth in District 4-4A, but his booming, well-placed punts put Borger in the hole in last weekend's district finale at Bulldog Stadium.

In five attempts, Barnes averaged almost 38 yards against Borger and two of his boomers landed inside the Bulldog 12.

Barnes has been dead accurate in field goal attempts with a perfect 5 of 5. He made good on 11 of 16 PATs and his 26 total points placed him third in the district in kick scoring.

In pre-season, PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier knew Barnes had a powerful leg, but he was a little concerned about his accuracy on field goals and extra point attempts. Cavalier isn't concerned anymore. Barnes, listed at 167 pounds, also starts at tight end.

Sports Editor

If Pampa gets past Frenship, senior fullback Erich Greer could be available for duty.

"Greer is making excellent progress," Cavalier said. "We could have him back next week if we're still in the playoffs."

Greer, who suffered a knee injury two weeks ago in the Palo Duro game, has rushed for 519 yards and 5 touchdowns.

Some may have forgotten, but Pampa scrimmaged Frenship on Aug. 27 at Harvester Stadium. Cavalier wasn't real pleased with the outcome.

"Frenship was very impressive. They did us in," Cavalier recalled. "I know we've improved since then, but I'm anxious to find out much Frenship has improved."

Harris-Ratings has Pampa favored by a mere 3 points. Maybe it could be that close.

Whatever happened to The Andy Griffin Show? Those timeless reruns were like a breath of fresh air in the polluted world of television comedy.

Flashback, 1972: Richard McCampbell scored three touchdowns and rushed for 82 yards as Pampa defeated Canyon, 27-7. McCampbell, Jesse Hunnicutt, Jody Johnson and Carson Watt each had a pass interception.

Astros hope to sign free agent Caminiti

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros hope to sign free agent third baseman Ken Caminiti by the end of the week, owner Drayton McLane says.

Caminiti has said he he wants to return to Houston so much that he was willing to turn down an $21.5 million deal from the Detroit Tigers.

Falcons get their chance to soar

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

The San Francisco 49ers have won 13 NFC West titles in 17 seasons.

The Panthers, Rams and Saints have one each, with no winner in 1982 because of a strike that forced the NFL to have only conference standings.

Now it's Atlanta's chance. The 49ers go to the Georgia Dome tied with the Falcons for first at 7-2.

A win by the Falcons would give them a good shot at their first division title since 1980, the season of the "Grits Blitz."

The 49ers are favored by 3 1/2, largely because they're the 49ers: San Francisco is 26-8-1 against Atlanta since 1981, including a 31-20 win in San Francisco on Sept. 27 in a game that wasn't as close as the score.

But things have changed. Atlanta won its biggest road game in years last week, routing New England 41-10 in Foxboro. The 49ers, meanwhile, were barely squeezing by Carolina as Steve Young rested a pulled abdominal muscle.

Another role reversal: The Falcons are confident, the 49ers aren't.

"It's scary that we're 7-2 and we haven't played well," says Jerry Rice. "If you ask me, 'Do we have the team to go all the way? No, not right now. Not the way we're playing."

There have been bigger upsets.
FALCONS, 31-20

Dallas (minus 3 1/2) at Arizona
A mini-version of the 49ers-Falcons.
But look more closely.

The Cards' last three games were two-point wins over Detroit (now 2-7) and Washington (now 1-8) and a 34-7 loss to the Giants (now 3-6).

Besides, when the Cowboys go to Tempe, they usually have the crowd on their side.
COWBOYS, 21-8

Denver (off) at Kansas City (Monday night)

1, John Elway's ribs hurt and he may not play.

2, The Chiefs are desperate.

3, Deep down, Mike Shanahan wouldn't mind taking off some pressure by losing one.
BRONCOS, 21-13

Pittsburgh (plus 1) at Tennessee

The second meeting in three weeks. When that happens, go with the loser of the first game.
STEELERS, 41-31

Seattle (minus 1) at Oakland

The second meeting in three weeks. When that happens, go with the loser of the first game.
SEAHAWKS, 31-18

New England (plus 2 1/2) at Buffalo
The Patriots' injury list continues to grow.
BILLS, 16-10

Green Bay (minus 7 1/2) at New York Giants

Under Mike Holmgren, the Packers are 1-10 outside on artificial turf and are about out of running backs. But Brett Favre is enough firepower against the punchless Giants.
PACKERS, 20-10

Tampa Bay (off) at Jacksonville

The Bucs are desperate. But they're 0-4 on the road and the Jags have won 19 of 20 at home.
JAGUARS, 22-15

Cincinnati (off) at Minnesota
Jay Fiedler will almost surely be the quarterback for the Vikings.
He'll be all right if he just throws jump balls.
VIKINGS, 24-20

Miami (minus 3) at Carolina

Miami is 5-0 at home, 1-3 on the road and the win was at Indianapolis.
PANTHERS, 9-6

New York Jets (minus 6 1/2)

at Indianapolis

A perfect time for a letdown by the Jets. So Tuna will rant and rave this week.
JETS, 27-10

Baltimore (minus 1) at San Diego

Ryan Leaf has been benched for Craig Whelihan, 0-8 as a starter last season.
RAVENS, 15-11

St. Louis (plus 3) at New Orleans

Mike Ditka promised Kerry Collins the start and Collins has got it.
SAINTS, 17-16

Chicago (off) at Detroit

Charlie Batch is only a rookie, but has more experience than Steve Stenstrom.
LIONS, 20-17

Philadelphia (plus 4 1/2) at Washington

Isn't one of these enough?
REDSKINS, 19-8

Last Week: 5-10 (spread), 8-7 (Straight up).

Season: 67-65-3 (spread), 85-50 (Straight up).

Hoagie's win in overtime in girls' Optimist action

PAMPA — Hoagie's Deli took the floor Wednesday night at the Pampa Optimist Youth Club gym looking for their first win, but faced a big obstacle from undefeated Holmes Sports Center.

Jennie Rogers scored 11 points, combined with Teryn Garner's 6 Missy Brown 5, and Lindsay Rhoades 2 to lead Hoagie's Deli to a 24-21 overtime win.

In what was a crowd pleaser and a nail biter — good defense and strong rebounding by Hoagie's Courtney Crawford, Isabell Chavez, plus good play off the bench by Rhoades, Heather Balay, Emily Hillman, Kandice Maddox and Dawnya Hicks — got Hoagie's (1-2) the win.

Holmes (1-3) had Erin Winegart with 6 points, Holly

Miller 5, Ashley Davis and Yolanda Young 4 each and Felicia Urban 2.

Other action saw Lindsey Ammons score 19 points to lead Celanese to a 31-12 victory over Meredith House.

High scorer for Meredith House was Kylie Winegart with 5 points. Also Centramedia raced to a 25-8 win over Clifton Supply with Centramedia's Wendy Miller leading the scoring with 13 points. Kan Terrell and Payton Baird each had 4 points for Clifton Supply.

Ruth ball sold for $126,500

NEW YORK (AP) — When Mark Scala, a graphic designer from Ramsey, N.J., discovered a baseball signed by Babe Ruth in the attic, he decided to do a little investigating. "I know nothing about old baseballs," he said.

He learned more after the ball — hit by Ruth for the first home run at Yankee Stadium on the ballpark's opening day 75 years ago — was sold for the record price of $126,500 early Friday morning by Leland's Auctions.

Mike Heffner, managing director of Leland's, said the buyer, who made the winning bid by telephone — did not want to be identified.

"Obviously, it was worth it," Heffner said. "It's the best baseball we've ever sold."

ANY WAY YOU SLICE IT To help ensure that they get the highest prices for their homes, sellers are advised to select real estate professionals who have experience selling their type of homes in their specific areas. This recommendation is given in recognition of the fact that demand and the appreciation rates linked to them for different types and prices of homes can vary widely within the same geographical area. Thus, it may be erroneous to assume that, just because starter homes in a certain area have increased in value, trade-up homes have enjoyed increase at a similar pace. Brokers who are familiar with specific types of homes in specific areas are best able to set realistic asking prices and expectations.
