FLOOD REHABILITATION WORK IS COMPLETED BY RED CROSS

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—The American Red Cross has completed rehabilitation work among the 9,000 victims of the Concho valley and Brazos river floods of late September. This announcement was made by Wm. M. Baxter, Jr., the agency's midwestern area manager, who placed total Red Cross expenditures at $141,918. Of this amount $47,277 was subscribed by Texas citizens, the remainder being appropriated by the National Red Cross.

Living thousands of families from their homes when it left its banks on September 17, the Concho river seriously flooded parts of five counties. Two-thirds of the damage, however, was confined to San Angelo, where 800 homes were demolished or damaged by the flood. At Lampasas 200 residences were struck. Altogether 1,096 families turned to the Red Cross for assistance in this disaster, Baxter said.

Waco bore the brunt of the Brazos river flood of September 27. Falls county also felt the effects of this overflow, but damage was not heavy. The Red Cross helped 1,097 families, most of whom resided in Waco. Since only 170 homes were seriously damaged, the task of rehabilitation was not as heavy as in the Brazos river flood, Baxter pointed out. Here the relief agency cooperated with the state health department in an immunization program.

In a statement to the 236 Red Cross chapters in Texas, Gov. James V. Allred last week called upon the citizenship to support the national organization in its November 11 to 28 Roll Call. His office cooperated closely with the Red Cross throughout both disaster operations.

"As you know," said Gov. Allred, "the existence of the Red Cross is dependent upon individual membership, enrolled annually during the organization's Roll Call. The objective this fall for Texas is 154,000 members. Attainment of this goal calls for a substantial increase over last year's enrollment, which totaled 120,426. Not only as governor of our state, but also as an individual citizen, I sincerely hope that no effort will be spared in keeping the Red Cross at full strength by the achievement of our state membership objective."

J. Arthur Haley, Notre Dame business manager of athletics, found himself in an embarrassing predicament at the Notre Dame-Pittsburgh grid game. A stiff neck permitted him to nod, but he could not shake his head negatively in refusing requests for tickets to the sellout game.

With morning . . . came the repair crews

An early snow, drifting down from leaden December skies, froze to telephone poles and lines. Hard on its heels came the wind. Ice-laden wires snapped and poles splintered before the blast.

Night found scores of towns throughout the storm region handicapped by crippled telephone service.

But, with the morning, came the repair crews. Hastily gathered from regions untouched by storm, they poured into the stricken area with trucks, tools and materials. Day and night they rushed the work of reconstruction.

One advantage of the Bell System's far-flung organization is this: When disaster flattens the telephone system, men and money and materials are instantly available for the prompt repair of the damage.

Task Of Registering Millions Of Workmen Given To Commission

AUSTIN, Nov. 11.—Oscar M. Powell, federal social security regional director, this week visited the new Texas unemployment insurance commission, and turned over to it the task of registering 1,000,000 Texas workmen and about 50,000 Texas firms subject to the state and federal laws.

The social security board is preparing to register the workers to be eligible for future benefits, in the states where no local unemployment insurance machinery has been set up. This is estimated to cover about one-half the 26,000,000 Americans who are to be affected by the security program.

In Texas, the state agency just created will list all the firms subject to this year's state and federal payroll taxes, and will set up the first register of Texas workmen for whom future unemployment benefits begin to accrue.

Mr. Powell met with R. B. Anderson, chairman and director, and Wallace C. Reilly, member of the new commission. Third member of the state commission is yet to be announced by Gov. James V. Allred.

Director Powell actively assisted Texas officials and a committee work out provisions of the state unemployment insurance law. Under this law, the state levy is the full 90 per cent which employers are allowed to offset from payments due the federal government on this year's payroll.

Mrs. Frances Holiday of Ballenger has returned to her home after a visit in the F. V. Gates home.

BURLEIGH PROMISES TO GIVE BROOKLYN A WINNING BALL CLUB

By TOM PAFROCKI (Associated Press Sports Writer) BROOKLYN, Nov. 11. (Sp) — Burleigh Grimes' promise to give Brooklyn baseball fans a fighting club is not a campaign promise. The former spitball pitcher had little use for loafers during his active playing days. It is unlikely that he will be more tolerant of the laggard now that he is to occupy the Dodger manager's seat.

Coach Taylor Expects His Bobcats To Win By Thirteen Points

PAYMENT ON A DEBT

Most appropriate is the coincidence of Armistice Day and the beginning of the Red Cross Roll Call, for the greatest work the Red Cross did was its service to the men in our armies overseas and in camps during the world war, greater only than the work it has since been doing in caring for the interests of those soldiers and their families, when there is need of care, since that memorable Eleventh of November when the guns were hushed and the war came to an end.

Red Cross membership denotes that the member is one of those who remember the service of the soldiers and sailors and marines in a material way. Words alone will not meet the needs of Red Cross activities—it takes money, and the needed money should be given with a liberal hand and an appreciative heart. It is unfortunate that solicitors have to be conscripted to ask the people for the money the Red Cross needs. It is still more unfortunate that in many cases this solicitation is met with refusal and sometimes downright discourtesy, when the contribution should be a voluntary one.

The men and women who are soliciting money for Red Cross are themselves contributors of money, and as added good measure they are giving time to the work they are doing. They are representing something different from the ordinary charity appeal, for contributions to Red Cross must not be thought of as charity, but rather as part payment on a debt, a part of which each citizen owes. The blaze of patriotism which inspired us during the days of actual conflict has died down to embers, but we should be able to blow into those embers enough life to lead us to realize the need and to impel us to do our part in the work of this greatest of all relief agencies—the Red Cross.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK — The absence of that kindly little man with the sagging jowls and the explosive Russian accent is noticeable on Broadway. The footlights lost one of its best hosts when Nikita Balieff died.

Those sympathetic notes and personal checks of his turned up innumerable times when others less fortunate than himself stood in need of a pat on the back. Balieff was like that. He remembered his own early struggles too well to let "white collar poisoning" mar his later success.

Thp thought persists that when Balieff died the 'Chauve-Souris' passed on, too. Unlike most geniuses of the footlights, his personality was far more important to theatrical success than the wizardry of trick settings and talented groups of performers. I mean, Ziegfeld is dead, but the "Follies" go on. Others could continue the spectacular tradition of the "Vanities" and "Scandals."

But Balieff's inimitable "Chauve-Souris," with its merry "Parade of the Wooden Soldier," and its hilarious melange of muskovite songs, is gone with the wind and I hope nobody ever tries to bring it back.

Defeat An Aid

With true ingenuity, Nikita turned his inability to master the English language to good account, and it was this paradox that really helped him to fame. He could not say, for instance: "The next number on the program will be songs by Glinka, the great Russian composer." He would stammer and explode into a guttural, apoplectic roar: "Donickst number-r- onde phogrim: Sonx by Glinka, gret Resianian com'ser." When he did this his audiences roared. Balieff's whole fame was predicated on a defect in speech and his ability to ad lib extemporaneously with guests in the audience.

I remember a morning several months ago when the old man dropped in to chat with Bob Reud at the St. Moritz. His dog was with him and Balieff dropped into a chair, without removing his familiar black felt hat. "Take off de hat," he commanded the dog. The animal, whining eagerly, leaped into Balieff's lap and nudged the hat off with the point of his nose. "Now kist old Nikita," he commanded. Instantly the dog stood in the impresario's lap and began licking his bald head. Balieff loved that.

Missed By Great And Lowly

Balieff's last New York engagement was in the grill of a New York hotel, and with his troupe was a man who had once been a sensational star on the continent. In the economic maelstrom that engulfed Germany during the depression this man lost every mark he had saved. Quietly and unostentatiously, Balieff sent him passage money to America and gave him a job in the "Chauve-Souris." It was not just the money that mattered here—Balieff wanted the man to save his self respect.

That is the sort of man Balieff was. When his body lay in state in the Russian orthodox church in 121st street, a grand duchess and other notables of the old Russian nobility mingled with the crowd of Broadway celebrities who gathered in respect to his memory.

And so today there are scores who actually grieve for the roly-poly little man and miss his shy, amicable chatter. There is also a dog in a Riverside apartment who noses an old black felt hat and wonders why Nikita doesn't come home.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The president was a bad guesser on his own electoral total. He reckoned on 300, got 323. But his predecessor, Herbert Hoover, was accurate; in fact he was nearly square on the head. It is no secret that Hoover and Landon were completely on the outs during the campaign. But how bitter the ex-leader of the republican party felt toward his successor did not leak outside the inner circle.

After their meeting in Toledo, Hoover complained that all Landon talked to him about was whether he could carry California. He asked no advice about the national situation. Later, it became obvious that Landon and his campaign manager did not want Hoover to speak. They offered him few facilities, humiliated him on several occasions, in Philadelphia made no effort to find him a hall.

So Hoover's friends advised him to let the republican candidate paddle his own canoe. But the ex-president felt that he owed his services to the party. At the very end of the campaign, however, his feelings got the better of him. A friend was predicting that Landon had a chance of being elected.

"Listen," replied Hoover, "he won't carry but two states—Vermont and Maine—and any republican dog could carry them."

Roosevelt Welcome
Scene: Washington union station during President Roosevelt's triumphant re-election arrival.

Right up in front, and first to welcome him was Secretary of Commerce Roper, Secretary of War Woodring, and Secretary of Labor Perkins—all of them most likely to lose their jobs.

Loitering carelessly in the background was Secretary of Agriculture Wallace—sure to keep his.

After the greeting, the little cabinet members (assistant secretaries) stepped up, one by one held out their hands, beamed. "Congratulations, Mr. President," they chorused, all anxious for promotion.

Automatically Roosevelt shook hands, obviously bored. Then up stepped a group of little girls, aged six to ten, a little shy and holding big bunches of flowers. For the first time the president looked really pleased, gave them a genuine reception.

Roosevelt's homecoming reception was inspired by Eugene Meyer, ex-governor of the federal reserve board, now publisher of the bitterly critical Washington Post.

Poor Math
The estimate of Emil Hurja, mathematical wizard of the democratic national committee, was nowhere near as good as Hoover's. It was just as bad as the president's.

Hurja has been ballyhooed as the author of a miraculous method of calculating election results. Astonishing stories were told of his uncanny accuracy. He was supposed to have forecast totals in the 1922 and 1924 elections to within a few hundred votes.

But 1926 proved his Waterloo. He contended it would be an extremely close race. His final prediction was a Roosevelt electoral vote of 370 and a plurality of 3,000,000—off 163 and 8,066,000.

Hurja is in the way out as democratic national committee master mind. He and Big Jim Farley don't get along. Jim recalls that when he was under heavy fire last year, Hurja had his eye on the national chairmanship.

G-Boss Out?
The justice department is buzzing with a report that J. Edgar Hoover may soon leave the bureau of investigation.

Insiders say that the G-Boss has been offered $25,000 a year by the duPonts to become head of their large company police force, and that he is seriously considering the tempting offer. The duPonts have a small army of private guards and slouches to patrol their numerous plants and properties. On this staff are several ex-G-men.

One hitch declared to be keeping Hoover from jumping at the offer is his disinclination to relinquish the opportunity for grandstanding which his government post now affords him.

The G-Boss loves his publicity and while the duPont job would pay him several times what he could ever hope to get from the government, nevertheless his transfer to private business would put an end to the limelighting Hoover values so highly.

On the other hand, he knows that he is far from popular in inner administration circles and with certain powerful figures on Capitol Hill.

There are a number of first-wave new dealers who feel that Hoover used the administration's crime suppression program to aggrandize himself. Last session he was subjected to a caustic cross-examination by the senate appropriations committee.

A change in the attorney generalship probably would see Hoover's wings clipped. Foreseeing this, he may step out while the stepping is good.

White House Secretariat
Another high dealer leaving the new deal is Steve Early of the White House secretariat—though not for the same reasons.

Steve had expected to resign and accept a cushy job in January, win, lose or draw, on November 3. He will be replaced by Eugene ("Red") Leggett, former correspondent of the Detroit Free Press, now acting as Landon's of the national emergency council.

Leggett left the Free Press (bitterly anti-Roosevelt) when it wanted to recall him to Detroit. He has been a new dealer ever since, recently handled Roosevelt's campaign press relations, has done a good job.

Merry-Go-Round
Now that he has helped re-elect his friend Franklin Roosevelt (though it was not needed) Governor Herbert Lehman of New York may resign in the not too distant future. He is worried about the manner in which his banking firm, Lehman Brothers, is being operated, and wants to return to it.

BUY'S HOLIDAY GOODS
J. D. Elliott has returned from Dallas where he spent several days buying a complete stock of Christmas goods for his drug stores.

Fishhook-Spear Patented
HONOLULU (UP)—At least two fishermen on the Island of Wai-lua are convinced they have come up with something to teach American anglers in the way of fishing. They have obtained an American patent on a combination fishhook and spear.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

Chapter 25
BIG BOOK

"That's all right with me," said Bassett, "and I'll answer for my mates. But you'd better watch out for the crooks. It ain't going to be no sort of garden party, fighting against the Big Boss."

"It won't be as bad as all that," answered Mahony. "For one thing, provided you can keep our friend Lake hidden away safely, Lawson isn't going to know you're up against him just yet. You'd better see to Lake right away, before I say any more. Catch hold of him, Mahony turned to the fat man. 'What's your name?' he asked.

Monday night." Mahony glanced at this strange document with great interest. Back to his mind came the words he had heard in the crooks' car on the night when he had rescued Elmer Little. "He probably received his instructions typed in red on a piece of blue paper," one of the crooks had said. Mahony smiled slightly. He had made up his mind that he was going to be at the Golden Centipede on Tuesday evening.

"What's your name?" he asked.

Barney's hand came firmly down over his face.

Barney shot out a huge hand, grabbed Lake by the shoulder, jerked him to him, and held him firmly. Lake opened his mouth to yell, but Barney's left hand came firmly down on his face, effectively shutting out any sound.

"Will I give him a crack on the head, just to make sure he'll keep quiet?" asked Barney.

"Not for a moment," answered Mahony. "Turn out his pockets to begin with. Then I want to ask him a question. If he won't answer, you can hit him as hard as you like."

"They call me Fatty Bassett," replied the fat man. "Right," said Mahony. "Here are your instructions for the time being. I want Lawson watched very carefully for the next couple of days. Every time he goes out, I want him followed, and I want to know where he goes, how long he stays there, and, if possible, whom he meets. Can you manage that?"

"That'll be easy," answered Bassett. "I'm a bit of a boss meself in me own way; I can generally get a few blokes to work for me if I wants 'em. Is that all you want me to do?"

Lake's pockets were turned out and the contents emptied on the table. When that had been done, Mahony stood in front of Lake looking him squarely in the eyes.

"What's in that big book that Barney was told to steal from Lawson's house?" he demanded.

Lake's knees were trembling; his teeth were chattering with fright. He knew that if he divulged that information, and Lawson found out, his life was not worth a moment's purchase. On the other hand, if he did not divulge the information...

"I'm going now," said Mahony. "I don't think the cops had much chance to recognize me on that roof. I'll take a chance on it, anyway. I'll give you a ring tomorrow."

With that he left the house and emerged into the dark street. He reached the Commercial Road unmolested and from there he took a taxi to his lodgings.

In the taxi he was very thoughtful. The evening's work had not been unprofitable. Now he had a rough crowd of supporters at his back, and he also had information which might prove distinctly useful.

"It-it contains documents," whimpered Lake. "Papers about people he has dealings with and—members of his own gang."

"People he has dealings with—you mean people he's blackmailing and selling drugs to," said Mahony. "I understand that. But what are the documents about, members of his own gang?"

"He's got written evidence of some criminal act against everybody who works for him—that is, everybody who works for him knowing who he is," went on Lake. "He keeps it all pasted in a book."

"In other words, he likes to be in a position to squeal whenever he feels inclined," remarked Mahony.

"I'm going now," said Mahony. "I don't think the cops had much chance to recognize me on that roof. I'll take a chance on it, anyway. I'll give you a ring tomorrow."

With that he left the house and emerged into the dark street. He reached the Commercial Road unmolested and from there he took a taxi to his lodgings.

In the taxi he was very thoughtful. The evening's work had not been unprofitable. Now he had a rough crowd of supporters at his back, and he also had information which might prove distinctly useful.

But now he knew exactly why Moss had been so anxious to get hold of that book. If he wanted to break away from Lawson, it was absolutely essential that he should get possession of the evidence which Lawson held against him.

"The him up and take him away," he ordered.

Lake was tied up and gagged and removed from the room. While this was being done, Mahony went through the contents of his pockets. They consisted of a bunch of keys, a cigar-case, a note-case, and various odds and ends.

Mahony knew that shady night clubs are frequently used for the distribution of dope to dope addicts; the Golden Centipede might prove a fruitful source of further information regarding the details of Lawson's organization.

Inspector Kennedy finds a very useful hat, tomorrow.

Followers of Laurel and Hardy who have been wondering where the thin sad faced Englishmen and the rotund, mustached self-centered "Ollie" have been of late will be pleased to know that the top ranking comedy team has made a full length picture for the Hal Roach company of M-G-M production. The feature, entitled "Our Relations," will begin a two day run Wednesday at the Lyric.

In support, the two popular actors have Betty Healy, a newcomer from the stage, Daphne Pollard, Sidney Toler, James Finlayson, Iris Adrian, Lona Andre, Arthur Housman, Alan Hale, Ralfie Harold and Noel Madison.

Both Laurel and Hardy take dual roles in the picture. The story centers around the lives of two respectable and peaceable business men and their wives who enjoy a happy existence until a letter arrives from a sea captain informing the pair that their twin brothers have been hanged.

The reports prove to be erroneous and the twins arrive on the scene. A mixup immediately occurs when the townspeople imagine they recognize the sailors as Laurel and Hardy.

After dating out two of the town's social flames and getting into trouble with several citizens, the sailors disappear and Laurel and Hardy are blamed. They finally

SCRAP BOOK YIELDS POTHOLDERS

New Models Are Not Only Useful But Very Decorative

By ELIZABETH MAY BLONDEL
(Prepared by McCall's Magazine For The Herald)

If you like burned fingers, you don't really need potholders. But the new ones, which you can make yourself, are so good to look at you will want them around the kitchen just for decoration.

And they cost nothing but a very little time, because all the materials can come out of your scrap bag. You will probably find in it leftover and odd-shaped pieces of calico prints, chintz, gingham, percale and perhaps colored felt—anything goes! The sewing is of the simplest kind and you can get very inexpensive patterns for all the new designs.

HOW TO AVOID BURNED FINGERS. Attractive potholders in a variety of design can be made at home with cloth remnants and a small amount of effort.

A little house, for instance, is just a piece of unbleached muslin with green gingham roof, windows and door. Green shrubbery can be put in with embroidery cotton in simple lazy-daisy and outline stitches.

A very realistic orange potholder is made from a scrap of cranberry-colored gingham or percale, with green applique leaves and little white orange blossoms of rick rack braid. Apples, pears and other attractive fruit can be made the same way.

A tropical parrot can be created of gay colored flannel or felt pieces. A sunburst potholder, of very small odds and ends, looks like the old hit-or-miss quilt patterns from Colonial days.

Winged potholders—butterfly, hen and duckling, are just button-holed around the edges with colorful embroidery cotton—not close or fine stitches.

Pairs of holders are nice to have, like two ducklings in a canoe-shaped holding case; and so are sets, like fruits.

And can you think of a more perfect Christmas gift than something you yourself made? For church fairs and bazaars a large assortment of potholders is a sure winner. They are straight matters out but at a new high in humorous situations and side splitting gags in doing so.

Thanksgiving numbers. "Good literature is the highest ideas and ideals passed on from the wisest people of past generations to our generation," said Pierce. Continuing on the topic, "The Educational Value of Good Books," he stressed the value of books as a definite time scheduled for worthwhile reading and the importance of providing instructive and worthwhile reading material for boys and girls.

On Tuesday evening there will be a benefit party at the school building where tables may be reserved for bridge, 42 or domino games. Games, races, a fishing pond and other amusements are being planned for the children.

The children's program consisted of the second grade group singing "America, the Beautiful" followed by a salute to the flag and a song, "Little Indiana Looking On." Margaret Smith gave a musical reading, "The Things That Are in Me." A Pilgrim play by seven boys concluded the entertainment.

Attending were Mrs. T. B. Spencer, Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mrs. M. L. Cox, Mrs. R. C. Williams, Mrs. T. J. Fink, Mrs. Roy Eldins, Mrs. Andy Tucker, Mrs. Deas Wilson, Mrs. Harry Veig, Mrs. W. C. 1937.

First payments are to be made in 1942. To qualify for payment on that date, the worker must have reached the age of 65 years, must have earned a total wage of at least $2,000 in the intervening period, and earned wages for at least one day in each of the five different calendar years.

Death benefits will be paid to the estates of individuals who reach the age of 65 but who do not qualify for monthly benefits. The amount paid them will equal 3-1/2 per cent of the employee's total wages.

The amount the worker will receive in his retirement is determined in this manner: He will get each month one-half of one per cent of the first $3,000 which he has drawn in wages since Jan. 1, 1937, plus one-twelfth of one per cent or the next $12,000, plus one-twenty-fourth of one per cent of all over that.

These are not affected by the measure: Self-employed, employees of the railroad industry subject to the carrier's taxing net of 1935, agricultural labor, domestic service in private homes, casual labor not in the course of the employer's trade

COTTON MOVEMENT BELIEVED TO HAVE PASSED THE PEAK

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. (UP)—Belief that the into sight movement of American cotton has passed its seasonal peak was strengthened last week by the sharp decline of the movement from the preceding week, the New York cotton exchange service said today.

The into sight movement last week totaled 638,000 bales, compared with the 744,000 in the previous week. Since 6,849,000 bales already has moved into sight this season, the exchange estimates the balance no available, on the basis of the Oct. 1 crop estimate, at 8,961,000 bales, against 8,118,000 in the corresponding period last season.

The service reported its index of domestic cotton mill activity, based on Oct. 31 at 113.5 compared with 112.6 in the previous week and 95.2 in the corresponding week last year.

"In other words, domestic mills ran last week at a rate equal to about 13.5 per cent higher than the average in the pre-depression period," the service said. Its index for the price of cotton, based on 1926-29 as 100, was 67.4, against 68.1 for the previous week and 62.8 for the 1935 week.

BUICK PRODUCTION IN OCTOBER HIGHEST FOR CURRENT YEAR

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 11.—Production of Buick motor cars during October totaled 19,325 units, the largest month's output this year, according to Harlow H. Curtice, president.

The company entered November with approximately 30,000 unfilled orders on hand at the factory and an additional 20,000 on file in zone points, he said, the largest bank of new business in the recent history of the company.

To meet demand for the new cars, which were announced on October 24, schedules for November and December have been stepped up heavily, with output for the current month placed at 25,292 cars, including 22,341 domestic and export production at the Flint factories and 2,951 in the Los Angeles assembly plant of General Motors. Schedules for December, Curtice said, call for 27,326 units of which 24,520 will be produced for domestic and export sales at the home plants and 2,806 in California.

er things they needed: how the birdman made his living selling birds and how many cages he was capable of carrying, and similarly about the hat man. They did it with poise and language befitting a high school student.

Group Projects

Back of all this was the group projects. The first of these, under the direction of Richard Stripling, was devoted to making an adobe house. To make it required much reading, some arithmetic, close observation of illustrations, a resourcefulness enough to find clay and then dry it out after it had become wet to work.

The second group, led by Faye Cook in the absence of Yvonne Beasley, was constructing a cotton farm because they were "studying about Texas, and Texas grows more cotton than any other state or nation in the world." Here they had rustled a few scraps of lint cotton and were wadding into little balls which they stuck on sprigs arranged in rows after the fashion of a cotton field.

Darrel Douglas was leading his, the third group, in the composition of a picture which, in truth, was nothing less than a miniature mural. Members of the unit were drawing free hand, either from memory, or from what they had read, or from an illustration. They had elected to use crayon because they found chalk smeared when it was rubbed.

Eskimo Land

Number four, led by Mary Blythe, was assembling an eskimo village. They immediately hit upon the idea of using cotton for snow, but less easily found that sugar cubes made excellent ice blocks for an igloo. To keep it in conventional shape, they built it around a moxing bowl. While some were doing this, others were drawing dogs, men and sleds and cutting them out. Two girls were making clothes, actually designing, cutting and sewing them, for eskimo dolls.

The last group, under Jerry Staha, was modeling sombreroes, vases, pitchers, and vases out of clay and then painting them in the self-same bright colors native to Mexico.

Contemplating the work of the five groups in your mind, you will see that they were learning about food, shelter and clothing from three distinct climatic belts: The frigid (Alaska), the temperate (Texas) and the tropic (Mexico).

Perhaps you are thinking: "All very good. But my boy needs to know 2 x 2 is four. He needs to know how to spell, and how to write."

In their projects, the picture for example, they were applying the 2 x 2 and other mathematical facts learned in their daily hour of formal drill by drawing their pictures to scale. They were learning to spell by having to look up words they did not know. They were learning to write and speak by telling what they had discovered in their readings on project material. More than this, they were learning lessons of leadership, organization, cooperation, obedience, and responsibility through their group arrangement which required that every problem be referred first to the group leader for a decision before it could be taken by the leader to the teacher for advice. They were unconsciously absorbing a lesson of good manners.

To illustrate this: Cecelia Long served Tuesday as room hostess. She politely asked visitors to sign a guest book. Then she conducted them on a tour of the room, pausing at each group to tell what they were doing. "This group," she would say, "is making an eskimo village. Mary, would you like to tell these guests what you are doing?" And Mary, bowing acknowledgement of the honor shown, politely proceeded to do just that.

What do teachers think about the method? Frankly, they are impressed by it. You might suspect, with good cause, that they get the same thrill the pupils receive. It's a matter of work, but, well, it's lots of fun. They are even prouder than the pupils of what has been done. For when you walk down the hall, every one wants you to see her room and explain what's being or has been done.

count number in the social security set-up.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1937, the government will require employers to deduct one per cent of their employees' monthly wages, match it with a similar amount and pay the sum into the security fund.

This money and the interest it has drawn begins coming back to the employer when he is 65, provided he then quits his job, in the form of a monthly security benefit from the government fund to which both worker and employer have contributed.

Monthly retirement payments will range from $10 to $85 a month, based upon the total amount of work in the nation the employee has done since the beginning of

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)
