Couple begin new life in Budapest, Hungary

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

A Pampa native and his wife start a new chapter of their lives today as they begin a three-day journey to their new home in Budapest, Hungary, where they will serve as Baptist missionaries.

The couple are the first international missionaries from First Baptist Church of Pampa.

"I want to bring a message of hope for hopeless people," Mark Aderholt told the First Baptist Church Women's Ministries at a "send-off luncheon" honoring him and his wife Kristie this week

Aderholt had served as a journeyman (temporary) missionary in Oslo, Norway, for two years. But he said he was called to the ministry while serving in Romania.

"I saw in the people of Europe a real broken spirit. There was no hope," he said. "It was as if someone had turned off the light bulb."

He had graduated from Wayland Baptist University with a degree in marketing, but now knew he wanted to return to seminary and become a minister. He hadn't dated for three wears, but he believed he was ready for a wife.

"The trouble was, how was I going to convince someone that I want to go back to eastern Europe for the rest of my life?" he remembered.

His prayers were answered when he met Kristie at a camp in Switzerland where he was director and she was assisting. Kristie served as a journeyman missionary in Moscow.

Mark earned a master's degree from Southwest Baptist Theological Seminary. Five months after Kristie returned to the states from Moscow, the couple married.

"It's a privilege to be married into this family," Kristie said.

Being a missionary had always been her dream, she said.

"I always wanted to be a missionary. I assumed everyone wanted to live overseas and just hadn't got there yet."

Her experience as a missionary in Russia has prepared her for this next assignment, she said.

"I was so naive. That's when I realized I really

Early voting starts Wednesday

Early voting in the Aug. 12 dog registration election begins Wednesday, July 26, and goes through Aug. 8. If the election passes registration of all dogs which belong to owners outside the city limits of Pampa would be required. Balloting will be held in the Gray County Clerk's office on the second floor of the courthouse, Room 201, through Aug. 8.

Applications for a ballot in the dog registration election are currently being accepted. The last day the clerk's office will accept the applications will be Aug. horse may have to be destroyed.

Among the injuries the horse received were numerous lacerations to the head area. The lip area was ripped away from the horse's gum showing exposed bone in the attack. It also received numerous facerations about the head and flank area.

Lester said the miniature horse which was blinded in one eye several years ago is now primarily used as a brood mare. She said the animal is pregnant and in danger of aborting due to the Wednesday attack. Another miniature horse owned by Lester received scratches in the most recent incident, she said, but did not require medical treatment.

She said the horse has been thoroughly traumatized by Memorial Library Summer Reading Program reading logs are due Monday, July 24, at the library.

Logs returned after this date will not be eligible for gift certificates. A party to celebrate the program will be held at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, July 26, at the library.

The top five readers will receive $10 gift certificates from Hastings and a drawing will be held for an additional five gift certificates. At the party, bookmark and certificate winners will be announced and program participants will each receive a Texas State Library certificate.

All children are invited and the program is free of charge. Children so far this summer have read over 98,000 minutes and received over 120 free books.

In a separate attack in April a miniature horse owned by Lester was attacked at the same location by pit bull dogs. In that incident, Brookshire received four citations in connection with the April attack, two citations for animals at large and two citations for failure to display rabies tags. There has been no disposition of the case, according to a Municipal Court spokeswoman. The dogs are reportedly from inside the Pampa city limits.

Women confront challenge of living with chronic illness

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Rick Harris, he said.

Despite the debilitating effects of multiple sclerosis, three local women manage not only to live with the disease, but to also make a difference in the lives of those around them.

Multiple sclerosis (MS), a chronic disease that progresses in severity over time by attacking the central nervous system. MS can cause a variety of symptoms that may be different with each person, depending on what part of their nervous system is being affected. The disease works by destroying patches of the membrane surrounding nerves and hardening nerve tissue.

Here are the stories of three women who have met the challenges forced on them by a diagnosis of multiple sclerosis.

Linda Davis

About 15 years ago, Linda Davis noticed that she was walking "funny" and her equilibrium seemed to be off. When she went to the doctor, she learned that at 32 years old, she was a victim of MS

"I had no idea," she remembered. "I was devastated. It was one of the lowest times in my life." Her youngest son Jeffrey was a year old.

For 10 years, Linda and her family lived in Liberty a community by Houston where her brother lived. She coped by working out at the gymnasium.

"I felt like giving up. I don't know what changed my mind, but I'm glad I didn't," she said. Then eight years ago, her husband died, leaving her a widow with children. She was able to make it through the difficult times through the help and support of her children, her brother, and a MS support group

"I miss that, the companionship, and getting together with people," Linda said. "It seems like you always have a friend.

"Most people don't understand (what it's like to have MS), even your family," she added. MS affects Linda's speech and ability to walk, it hasn't affected her ability to make as normal a life as possible for herself and her son leff. She also has a grown daughter, Ginger Alexander, and two grandchildren, Chelsy, 8, and Cullin, 4, who live in Pampa.

"I'm so glad I can see them now," she said, smiling.

She depends on a walker to keep her steady and sometimes uses a wheelchair. Her friend Kayla Pursley, who also has MS, (See WOMEN, Page 6)

The phone call that wasn't made

Talk about a phone call that wasn't made. Well, I don't know it wasn't for 100 percent but I'd bet the farm it wasn't.

The wished for phone call I am talking about is when Clinton nemesis Paula Jones gave one of Gov. George W. Bush's aides her cell phone number — just in case the Texas governor had time to meet with her.

I don't think so.

While I have never considered "W" to be the brightest star in the sky, he isn't that dumb.

It seems Jones was seated outside the doors of a $1,000 a plate Republican fund-raiser being held in Little Rock.

"I can't afford to pay $1,000" for a seat at the fund-raiser, she told a reporter. "We just wanted to show him our support."

As you remember, Jones is the former state worker who accused then Gov. Bill Clinton of sexually harassing her in 1991. She received $850,000 from Clinton in a settlement in which Clinton acknowledged no wrongdo-

Obviously Paula is no money manager if she couldn't spring for the thousand bucks. Or maybe she spent it all on her nose job. Was I tacky?

Well, talk about tacky. That's Gov. Mike Huckabee from Arkansas who, Bush said, isn't on the vice presidential short list.

Geez. I wouldn't think the former employee in Texas. Gov. Bush said so.

a religious right television show would make a good VP candidate but, then again, there's that wing of the party ..

And while we are talking about tacky. Huckabee and his wife have to move out of the Governor's Mansion while some construction work is under way. So where's he going? No where. He's moving a double-wide onto the Mansion grounds.

Now, I am not against manufactured housing per se but not for my home state's governor ... even if I don't care for him. So, score another one for Arkansas' national reputation.

Anyone who reads my column knows my political leaning ... it's with the Democrats and my reason is pretty simple. I truly believe the Democratic Party is a party of all the people including the poor and hungry and less fortunate.

But of course, there are no hungry children period.

GOP tax cuts could threaten surplus

Brushing aside a presidential veto threat and criticism the legislation is skewed to the wealthy, the Senate last week passed the Republican version of the "marriage penalty" tax bill.

Earlier, a House version was approved and now House and Senate negotiators hope to resolve the differences between the competing legislation.

Citing research from the labor-funded Citizens

What's fair about that?

While it is fundamentally unfair for a married person to have to pay more tax than he or she would if single, lawmakers should be very careful to make sure the legislation benefits not just the rich, but middle and low-income people as well.

for Tax Justice, Democrats said almost 58 percent of major GOP tax cuts passed or pending this year would go to families with incomes in the top 5 percent — $130,000.

New generations shape political future

And the Republican drive for tax cuts could risk squandering the nation's surplus to benefit primarily upper-income people.

What's fair about that?

By putting the emphasis on tax cuts for the wealthy, the Republicans are ignoring what should be the nation's spending priorities such as providing prescription drugs under Medicare and improving the country's public schools.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said it best: "They are more interested in taking care of their wealthy friends than working families. I don't think the American people are dumb. They don't want the [surplus] money to go to tax cuts for the wealthy."

Thought for today

"Truth is the secret of eloquence and of virtue, the basis of moral authority; it is the highest summit of art and of life."

Who will define the political ideals of the emerging century, Generation X or Y? Will it be Republicans or Democrats? For that matter, who defines politics today? I would argue that political parties are shrinking, and individual allegiance to ideals is growing stronger.

The people in the United States seem to be motivated by philosophy conservatism, environmentalism, liberalism, etc., rather than with Democrats and Republicans. But if an individual does identify with a political party, he might say, I'm a conservative Democrat or I'm a liberal Republican or vice versa

Are labels important to people? If the answer is yes, is it possible for a conservative Republican and a conservative Democrat to agree on 90 percent of the issues they face? Of course! You and I could probably name a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist and a Catholic who are not living lifestyles congru- Bible as in many other religions, is not to anything. This has been true for all generaent with their professed beliefs. We could also probably name a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist and a Catholic who is living his or her life with integrity and value. This movement does not necessarily who are wrong regardless of their labels. So associate each other with a specific church labels we apply to ourselves. why do labels imply such deep meanings? Why does it matter what church we attend if, affiliation is important to all of us.

People often associate themselves politically because of the beliefs of certain family members. Discussing politics can be considbecause of the individual's impression of having their upbringing being attacked, as their beliefs are rooted in their family history. For this reason, it is obvious good people are on every side of the political fence.

for concern for the future of our country? Is i a cause for concern among Republicans and Democrats? I would argue the answer is no, not at all. In fact, I think it is cause for celebration. I believe my generation is yearning to make decisions based on what we think is right and wrong rather than on who is right and who is wrong. Racial tensions are not as high, social diversification is more commor and "gender gap" is becoming a phrase of the past.

I'm not saying the members of my generation will not stand up for what we believe. As a matter of fact, I believe when we do take a ered offensive, not because of the issues, but stand on issues we are more in harmony amongst opposing idealists because of our understandings of labels and diversity. My vision for this new century is one of great prosperity and innovation.

I have been taught my whole life that if you don't stand for something, you will fall for judge others but rather to look at how you can tions and I predict it will ring true for future generations. Election is a very good sign for Mexico

After 71 years of continuous rule, Mexico's Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) decided to have one honest election. PRI lost it. Bet it won't make that mistake again.

No kidding. There is a story out of Mexico of bitter fights going on inside PRI between the reformers and the old, well, let's call them the old school. One can almost hear them: "Reform? You reformed us right out of power, you blockheads!'

There are many politicians in Chicago and other places in America who sympathize with PRI's old-style pols. Chicago never used to wait for the Day of Judgment for the dead to rise. Many of them did so every Election Day, joined by the city's ghost workers who materialized only to vote and pick up their paychecks.

At any rate, it's good to see that Mexico can change leaders without gunfire. Vicente Fox, the victorious candidate of the National Action Party (PAN), is talking quite sensibly and cems to be genuinely concerned about the welfare of the Mexican people. That will indeed be a change if he proves to be the genuine arti-

Mexicans, on the other hand, might learn what Americans have learned - that is that changing politicians doesn't necessarily mean any meaningful changes in government and government policies. There will be, of course, a massive shift in patronage, but, beyond that, we'll have to wait to see if genuine changes occur

I recall an anecdote about a famous American management expert who was hired by the Mexican government to study the country's problems. "Basically," he is supposed to have told government officials, "you need 20 inches less rain in the south and 20 inches more rain in the north."

For sure, some of Mexico's problems stem from geography. Much of the northern states is desert and much of the southern states is jungle. Neither type of terrain is especially productive. Look at our own state of Nevada. Its principle products are atomic bombs, gambling and divorces. Beyond that, it's a long way between slot machines.

I asked a Latin American priest once how he would describe Mexicans. "Well," the good in 1919 and Villa in 1923. father said, "they are a sweet and gentle people . unless, of course, they've been drinking." That sort of describes my own Irish ancestors, though, come to think of it, some of them could Mexican people.

be pretty belligerent even when sober. At least Mexicans are not dour like my Scottish and Welsh ancestors

Years ago, I had a friend whose father had served as the artillery officer for Pancho Villa. Through him, I did quite a bit of reading on the Mexican Revolution, which is exciting but ultimately sad. Men who seemed genuinely concerned about the welfare of the people such as Villa and his hero, Francisco Madero, and Emiliano Zapata all died from assassins' bullets

My favorite anecdote about Villa is that a companion mentioned that a Mexican general claimed he could put a bullet inside an empty cartridge case at 10 yards. Villa immediately ordered the car to stop. He pulled the slug out of a .45 and wedged the empty case into a wall. Then he backed off 10 paces. After a moment, Villa drew his pistol and fired in one smooth motion. His bullet hit the case but slightly off center.

"He's a liar," Villa pronounced.

Villa was a bandit for 15 years before he oined the revolution, and Zapata was a small landowner. Neither man had any formal training, but when the crisis came, both proved to be natural military leaders. Zapata was killed

I presume PRI was founded by the assassins or their heirs, in which case I'm glad PAN has whipped them. I hope the future is kind to the

Storms hit Oklahoma. thousands in the dark

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -The second major thunderstorm in as many days blew through Oklahoma central early Saturday, damaging buildings and knocking out electrical power to at least 100,000 customers, authorities said.

"All the work we did from yesterday's storms, we're just going to have to start over. All that progress has been erased," said Paul Renfrow, a spokesman for Oklahoma Gas and Electric.

An estimated 75,000 people were left without power after a powerful thunderstorm swept through central Oklahoma early Friday. Combined with Saturday's damage, the power outages were among the worst in OG&E history. Renfrow said.

"It's like rebuilding the system," he said.

The damage was caused by straight line winds of up to 90 mph that accompanied a massive storm system that stretched from Kansas across Oklahoma to the Texas border, said Scott Curl, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service.

Winds were estimated at 100 mph in Alfalfa County along the Kansas border, and another line of storms was expected to move through the area early Sunday.

In the Oklahoma City area, strong winds knocked down trees.

Is there a 'music gene'? Scholars mull music's roots everywhere: in shopping malls, concert halls, carpools and cathedrals.

Even when there is none playing, we often hear it inside our heads. Because music occupies so much of our lives, could it have played an important role in the development of the species?

Some scientists have recently proposed that music may have been an evolutionary adaptation, like upright walking or spoken language, that arose early in human history and helped the species survive.

"Of course it's utter speculation," says David Huron, a professor of music at The Ohio State University in Columbus.

Most experts still assume music was a cultural invention, like cave painting or writing, that humans invented to make their lives easier or more pleasant.

Finding one or more genes for music would settle the issue. If music is genetic, it is influenced by multiple genes acting simultaneously. With the recent completion of the human genome project, it may eventually be possible to find a music gene or two - if such genes exist.

"If there are genes for music I suspect that we'll find out about them within our lifetimes," Huron said.

Woman's Claims on Husband Clash With Those of His Wife

DEAR ABBY: I met a really nice guy at a child's birthday party. About a week later we ran into each other at a museum. We talked and exchanged e-mail addresses. A week later I e-mailed him and the conversations began. I found out he was unhappily married.

We continued to e-mail each other. During every conversation. he told me how much he wanted to remove himself from his marriage; however, he didn't want to leave his children. He asked several times to take me to lunch or dinner. Because he was married, I refused.

Then last January, he asked if he could take me out for my birthday. I agreed to lunch. We had a wonderful two hours, and I kissed him at the end of lunch. What a great kiss it was! In March, he moved out of their home and into his own place. Then he filed for legal separation. (I saw the paper with both signatures.)

Since his move, his wife has begun to question him about seeing other people. According to him, she doesn't want him back, but she doesn't want him with anyone else. She insists he keep the children every weekend and any evening he isn't working. Over the past month, our communication has declined. He's exhausted from working two jobs and spending every non-working moment with the children. He says repeatedly that he wants us to continue seeing each other, but he

Letters to the editor

No one is safe in the confines of their home ...

To the editor,

Until the last few days ago, I thought that one was safe in the confines of their own home. Early on a recent Sunday morning I was awakened by a noise at the front door.

Pulling myself out of bed, I made it to the front room and noticed my TV was missing from the stand where it had been. I looked out the window and I could see someone leaving in a wheel-chair (an automated one) with what looked to be my TV in their lap.

I called the police and they came and took my story.

At the present time, I am still trying to get my TV back, but in all reality I know I probably never will. What I am saying is this: I am not the first one to have this problem in Pampa, and I'm sure it will happen again.

I will say this. To those of you who think you can come right into anyone's home and take what you please - you better think twice next time. I know who you are, but I can't prove it. The police also have an idea of who is the culprit but without any proof or catching them in the act then all is lost.

I implore to all of you, please keep your doors and windows locked and fastened and all valuables put away in a safe place. The police can

Choose God so that you may receive eternal life

To the editor,

I'm not sure just where to begin. This is something I must do. What is sin? Sin is against, God, and his laws, family, mankind. It is doing anything that you know in your heart is wrong, breaking spiritual, natural, moral, or laws set up for good of the land.

We live in a land where lawlessness abounds! We have been bombarded with it since birth. Immoral sex, sexual perversion, violence, etc., across our air waves. Drugs and alcohol in our land are killing people. I'm one of the lucky few (luck has nothing to do with it) it is something we have become accustomed to saying.

I was introduced at a very young age to drugs but I am glad to say (for sometime now - years) I no longer have anything to do with them and if you have anything to do with them get away from them for it will wreck you life, your marrage and your family!

Again sin ... It is only by the grace of God that you can be set free. We live in a land where somebody, and sometimes everybody, is advertising something for free and (it's not so) for it cost someone, somewhere, something just to get your money, time. Its called greed - sin again.

Some people might be supprised to find out that I claim to be a Christian, and I must also say I have had sin in my life and fall short of

A look inside TDCJ past the inmates to correctional staff

To the editor,

I haven't been in Pampa very long, but I have been here long enough to read the letters the inmates send to the newspaper. They complain about how they are treated and the living conditions they live in. Well, all I can say for them is if you do the crime, you do the time. I could go on about all their complaints, but I want to get to why I am writing this letter.

Let's take a look at the employees that have to cater to all the inmates' needs and what they have to endure.

The officers at TDCI don't have a cushy desk job. They deal with these inmates one-on-one and put their lives on the line daily to see to the inmates' every need. Actually if you look at it from their point of view, they are locked up with these criminals and aren't treated any better. The inmates spit on them, urinate, throw feces on them, ejaculate in front of the officers and throw that on them, cuss them and possibly even hurt or kill these officers. If an officer comes down with AIDS, TB or what ever they may catch from these inmates they have to prove they got it at the prison or the prison isn't held liable. That's garbage.

Next is the treatment of the officers by the higher ranking. If you aren't in the click, you get nothing but chewing by who else than the warden. Some can do anything they want and get by with it. Others get disciplinary or worse, threatened to bust you back and maybe even a transfer to another unit. All because your not in the click or he doesn't like you at all.

Another problem is the amount of officers that TDCJ is short. It is next to impossible to get a transfer to another unit where you happen to live because the unit where you work is so short handed. Look at it like this. If every unit in the State of Texas is short handed, there must be a reason for that. Most of the officers can deal with the inmates and whatever they demand, but it is hard to deal with them and the problems that come down from fellow officers and rank.

If you ask any one of the officers that work for the state, you will probably find out that most of them work eight- to 12-hours a day without a break or a lunch.

Who do you believe is the most mistreated, the inmates or the officers? I realize that if you don't like your job, you should quit, but take a look around and tell me where else there is to work. I am just asking you to think about this the next time you see someone in Gray. There will be another letter to follow at a later date.

the glory of God. But I am seeking forgivness this day from any one who has aught against me. Even God Almighty Himself. No matter what it is - debts I owe, sins again st people, family. (If you want to gossip about me, sin again.) So this day I ask in the name of Jesus, please forgive me.

I also tell you, you must do the same to seek forgivness from God and turn from your sin, to seek the Lord while he may be found for today is the day of salvation. For we have no promise of tomorrow. Jesus will come like a thief in the night to receive his own. When the Father sends him, he does not even know the time nor the hour and then you will either spend eternity in heaven or hell but it is your choice, for God says I have set before you blessing and cursing, prosperity or poverty, life or death - choose life, choose God.

I tell you the truth. I do this that your blood may not be required at my hand before God.

NU journalism professor cries foul from afar

To the editor,

A Northwestern University journalism professor and his students hope to exonerate Pampa death row inmate Henry Skinner.

Professor David Protess states from afar that he can see that Skinner's trial was "a textbook case of a miscarriage of justice." If the Prof and his students do get Skinner off the hook, I propose that citizens of Pampa make an offer Skinner can't refuse and settle him in Illinois next to his university friends.

Indian site fight pits religious tradition against modern-day interests

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA Associated Press Writer

BIGHORN MOUNTAINS, Wyo. (AP) - A frozen wind blew high atop the Bighorn Mountains. Along a chain-link fence caked with snow and ice even in June, leather pouches and colorful cloth bundles twisted in the breeze, their red and yellow hues like bursts of sunlight.

Inside the fence lay a collection of limestone rocks: a giant center cairn and hundreds of smaller stones stretching into 28 spokes. Outside lay a sign containing the words of an Arikara Indian: "Eventually one gets to the Medicine Wheel to fulfill one's life.'

On this mountain range rising 10,000 feet above the sea, the Medicine Wheel stands as a testament to what American Indians hold sacred. It is where Earth meets sky, where the secular and the ethereal converge. According to legend, Nez Perce Chief Joseph fasted at the Wheel after his people fled the U.S. Army. Crow Chief Red Plume received medicine and feathers here to protect his people from harm.

Today, more than 80 tribes make the 11/4-mile trek to the Wheel to lace their colorful bundles around the fence and pray for loved ones, for wisdom, for strength.

"The Medicine Wheel," explains Crow elder John Hill, "is a chapel in the wilderness."

The chapel was deserted on a recent cold afternoon silent, but for the wind and an occasional bird. Through the clouds, the view stretched for miles across snowcapped pines and valleys of wildflowers.

There was no sign of the struggle over this and dozens of other Indian religious sites across the country. There was only serenity.

Once hailed as a model for how federal land managers and Indians can work together to protect sacred Indian sites, the Medicine Wheel has become a battleground in a fight over how to balance traditional Indian religion with modern interests such as logging, mining and tourism. It is a fight, Indians believe, fueled by the ignorance of a society that places the almighty dollar above the Almighty.

Keith Harding frowns as he maneuvers his pickup across the Bighorn National Forest in northern Wyoming. Where others see beauty, Harding finds blemishes: lodgepole pines infested with disease, dead and splintered Douglas firs, overgrown patches of spruce that are a fire hazard.

"If you don't have the tools to manage for that," he grumbles, "these trees are all going to die."

Harding sees a forest in decay — and millions of dollars down the drain.

Harding is chief forester for Wyoming Sawmills Inc., based on the eastern edge of the Bighorn Mountains. The sawmill, employing 100 people, was founded in 1964 after the U.S. Forest Service solicited companies to help manage timber in the forest.

"The Bighorn has always been our base," says mill President Ernie Schmidt. "That's why we're here."

And that's why Schmidt and Harding are worried. In 1985, the Forest Service approved a management plan that set aside 264,000 acres of land in the Bighorn for logging. Four years ago, the agency amended the plan to create an 18,000-acre "area of consultation" around the Medicine Wheel. The policy requires the Forest Service to consult with Indians about any activity within the zone that might harm the spiritual value of the wheel, including logging.

As Schmidt sees it, the Indians "would have veto

The sawmill has sued the Forest Service to do away with the area of consultation, arguing the idea violates the constitutional separation between church and state and has cost them millions of dollars in potential business. A federal court ruling is pending.

The battle over sacred sites dates back more than a century, when the government forced Indians onto reservations and ordered them to abandon their relition for Christianity. After Congress passed the American Indian Religious Freedom Act in 1978, Indians returned to their religious sites to find some damaged by commercialism.

"The federal land managers were destroying these sites quite frequently," says Jerry Flute, executive director of the Association on American Indian Affairs

The tribes fought back, filing lawsuits when the government wanted to construct a logging road through a sacred area or allow a ski resort to be built on a sacred mountain. Yet time and again, courts ruled the religious freedom act did not prevent the government from doing as it pleased on its lands.

The tide has begun to turn in recent years, due primarily to a 1996 executive order requiring land managers to consult with tribes about activities that could damage sacred sites.

Lawsuits persist today, although plaintiffs now include businesses such as Wyoming Sawmills, tourists - even rock climbers who accuse land managers of unlawfully restricting access to public places by implementing policies that sacrifice individual rights in the name of religion. "What we have to do is balance it," says Kolleen Bean, a Forest Service heritage resource specialist who works at the Medicine Wheel. "We are directed to allow timber sales, mining, grazing, and we're also directed to allow certain areas to be set aside for traditional use. If both sides are mad at us, we're probably doing the right thing." The battles are particularly intense in the West. In Utah, a group of bridge enthusiasts sued the National Park Service over a policy that asks visitors to refrain from walking under Rainbow Bridge National Monument because of its religious significance. In Arizona, members of the San Carlos Apache are fighting construction of a power line to an observatory built on Mount Graham, a sacred peak.

And just a few hundred miles east of the Medicine Wheel, near the South Dakota border, they're fighting over what to call a hulking butte known to visitors as Devils Tower. To American Indians, it is Bear Lodge.

They had pretended to be tourists, only they held religious offerings instead of cameras and came to worship rather than gawk. When they were ready to leave, they dug up a cottonwood to take back and plant on the reservation. The tree, it was said, could protect one from evil.

Charlotte Black Elk was just 7 years old when her parents brought her to Devils Tower to pray. She had been to the butte before, but this journey was differ-

"I knew that I would have to remember everything to pass it on," says Black Elk, an Oglala Lakota. " was a place that had to be honored and respected."

It was 1952 and the tower, the country's first national monument, was a popular tourist stop on the Mount Rushmore-to-Yellowstone route. Climbers also flocked to scale the 867-foot rock column.

Long before the tourists and climbers arrived. Northern Plains Indians lived and worshipped at Bear Lodge, named after an Indian legend that says the tower was formed when seven girls jumped on a rock to escape a bear. The rock shot upward as the bear clawed its side, thus creating the deep crags that line the butte.

When white settlers arrived, the Plains tribes were relocated to reservations far from Bear Lodge and ordered to abandon their religion. Those who wanted to keep their sacred practices alive did so in secret. Even into the 1950s, when the Black Elks made the 190-mile trek from the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota to Bear Lodge, they did so as tourists not Oglala Lakotas coming to pray.

Black Elk returned every year, but it wasn't until after the Indian Religious Freedom Act was passed that she stopped pretending. She and other Indians went to the National Park Service and, in 1985, began holding an annual sundance at Bear Lodge.

By then, visitation had risen after the tower was featured in the film "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." When Indians held ceremonies, says Black Elk, visitors stared as though they were a stop on a tour.

They stand at the edge of the tower and will look. We've had some clownishly dancing," she says.

Signs were erected asking tourists to respect the religious nature of the tower and in 1995, following more consultation with the tribes, the Park Service began asking climbers to refrain from scaling the tower in June, when the sundance is held.

The number of June climbers has dipped an average of 85 percent. Several climbers sued the Park Service arguing the policy violated the separation between church and state. Earlier this year, the U.S. Supreme Court let the closure stand.

Black Elk, now 48, calls the policy a triumph in the fight to protect sacred sites, although tribes are still working to formally change the name of the butte to Bear Lodge. These days, her children help organize the sundance and practice Lakota religion without fear of retribution.

Their attitude is very different from my father's generation," she says. "He was quietly Indian. My children are openly Indian."

Black Elk worries that sacred sites will remain threatened until the public understands that Indian religion and the land are inextricably linked.

The American attitude is that everybody has a God-given right to be entertained and to get wealthy while they're being entertained," she says. "The attitude with natural resources is not that they need to be respected, but rather how they can be protected for the benefit of humans."

From mountains to medicine wheels, bridges to waterfalls, sacred sites all across the country are entangled in similar disputes. There have been winners and losers on both sides, but the only point all seem to agree on is that Congress or the courts will have to determine future management of these sites.

We need a simple law to protect American Indian cultural properties, particularly where they are known sacred sites that have been used by tribes for millennia," says Indian activist Flute.

Until then, the fight will be fought case by case - as it was at Devils Tower, as it is at the Medicine Wheel. Until then, concludes Flute: "This contention will continue.'

AMARILLO - Delegates from the Texas Plains Girl Scout Council recently elected Karen Davis as president of the council during it annual meeting.

Davis, a California native, recently moved to Amarillo to work for Ultramar Diamond Shamrock Corp. as a customer service support manager.

As a Girl Scout growing up, Davis understands the value of Scouting and the importance of developing skills like responsibility and organization that she says helped her succeed in life.

Davis served on the board of directors for one year prior to being elected president. On the board, she served as a member of the Finance Committee and chairs the Donor Annual Giving Campaign.

"I am very excited about the challenge of making Girl Scouting available to every girl everywhere," Davis said.

As president of the TPGSC, Davis will serve a three-year term. Davis' major responsibilities include organizing the board of directors during board meetings, upholding a working relationship with the executive director and seeing current policies are maintained.

She is also charged with keeping the Girl Scouts visible through developing and keeping community relationships. Another responsibility as president will be the fund development side of Scouting. Davis will oversee fundraising for the Annual Givingcampaign which provides the resources allowing girls to be part of the organization.

"We need the girls of our community to become the leaders of tomorrow and Girl Scouting is the best way to do that," Davis concluded.

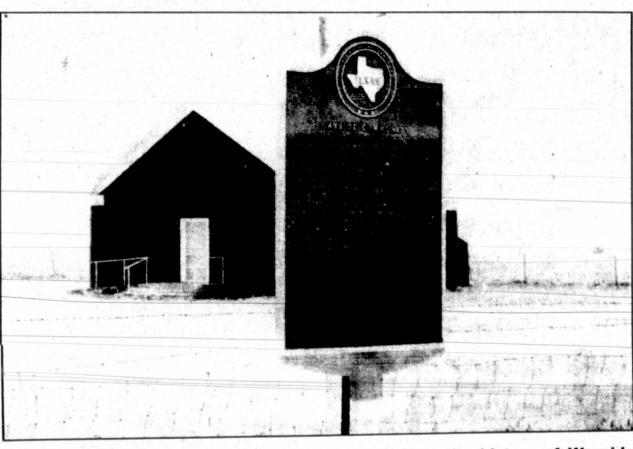

Davis, mother of three grown children and four grandchildren, is married to Doyle Davis who works for the City of Amarillo.

TPGSC annually serves over 3,000 girls and 800 adults in 17 counties including Gray, Hemphill, Wheeler and Carson Counties.

"To me this was pretty exciting," said Cecil Frost, the only state-paid staff member in the program. "After 20 years and seeing these kind of places destroyed year after year, to see this kind of place coming gives you hope."

The Plant Conservation Program is an agency in the state Department of Agriculture created by the Legislature two decades ago to monitor and protect North Carolina's rare and endangered plants.

More than 150 plant species are on the state or federal endangered species lists, and about 600 more are considered significantly rare. All told, about one in seven of the native plants in North Carolina are under the plant program's care.

Some species received the designation due to development or air pollution. Nearly half the plants on the state and federal lists are there because wildfires once allowed to burn creating room for the plants to thrive -

The program also has a field scientist whose salary is paid with federal grants, but no money is provided for research or equipment. Money for additional positions was cut from the state budget approved last month in the House.

Frost said the state Wildlife Resources Commission has more than 200 people in the field working on animal species.

"For plants, doing the comparable things we have one state person," he said. "The situation is really kind of ridiculous right now."

Given that, program projects often are performed by volunteers who bring their own rakes and shovels. About a dozen flower lovers traveled recently in the Uwharrie flags. Each marked the location of a sunflower.

The Schweinitz's sunflower, named for a profile species.

Moravian minister and naturalist, grew throughout the central Piedmont in the early 19th century. But it depended on fires or grazing animals to remove other plants that would eventually shade it out. It is now found in a few places within 90 miles of Charlotte.

Monica Bates, a scientist who does contract work for the U.S. Forest Service, found the sunflowers while surveying a tract in the national forest that the agency had planned to open for logging.

"I had never seen so many in one place," said Bates, a volunteer who cleared away taller plants around a patch of sunflowers. "We need to open the canopy the give the plants the light they need to make them grow taller."

Efforts also are under way to preserve seeds of rare plants that can then be replanted in the wild.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP)

- Tiger Woods made his first bogey in 64 holes of major championship golf Saturday but held onto his lead in a suddenly much tighter British Open.

Woods' 4-foot putt on No. 2 lipped out, ending a streak of par or better that began on the 11th hole of the third round of the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach last month. He followed with a birdie on the third hole.

Two strokes behind was a pack moving up the leaderboard with a flurry of birdies. It included David Duval, Ernie Els, Steve Flesch and David Toms, who had pulled within one of Woods before a bogey on No. 4. Duval made the biggest move and was 5 under for the day through 13 holes.

On another sunny day with lit- to shoot a pair of career rounds to tle wind off the North Sea, Bernhard Langer and Bob May set the early pace in the third round with 6-under 66s, tied for the best round so far.

Langer, who has been runnerup twice at the Open, pulled within five shots of Woods and would have been even closer if not for a bogey on No. 17.

"The conditions are perfect," Langer said. "I haven't given up hope yet."

But he admitted, "It's going to be hard to make up the distance.'

Woods held him off in the PGA Championship. "I would love to play with him on the weekend," said Garcia, four strokes behind Woods midway through the third round. "It

"That's not the start you need," Els said. "I went right back into the pack."

The ease at which Woods made it through two rounds under major championship conditions might make Garcia think again.

Woods has birdied nearly one hole out of every three and rarely strayed into any semblance of difficulty. When he finally did appear to be in trouble on the Road Hole on Friday, he pulled off a spectacular shot off a tight lie to make par.

Everything looked easy. though Woods said it was not.

'That's a nice compliment," he said. "When you're playing well, and when anyone is playing well, the game seems a little bit easier. But, I guarantee it, it's not."

Certainly the Old Course was playing easier than Open officials envisioned. The field averaged just under par on Friday and the cut was at even par - a score good enough to win most major championships.

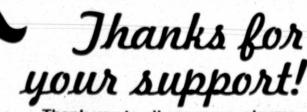

That was mainly due to a lack of wind, which led to perfect scoring conditions. If the wind picks up, scores will probably follow, though that might not be much comfort to Woods' pur-

"I would love to see it windy," Woods said. "I think that is what a British Open is all about."

They might also not get any comfort when they consider that Woods is a notoriously good front-runner. He is 18-2 when having the lead after three rounds of a tournament as a pro.

"I've always enjoyed being in the lead because if you're in the lead and you make a mistake it is not as costly as when you're behind," Woods said.

The way Woods has played so far, mistakes don't seem to be a concern.

VFW Ladies Auxiliary president to host called-meeting in Dumas

Aletha Jeter, newly elected president of the Department of Texas Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars, will make an inspection visit to District 9 beginning with a tour of the VA Hospital in Amarillo at 9 a.m., July 29. From there she will travel with State Senior Vice President Kay Paulk of Amarillo and District 9 President Dee Branch of Amarillo to Dumas where a called meeting is scheduled at 10 a.m. at the Dumas Post 9022 Home. Jeter's theme for the year is "Keeping Dreams Alive as We Preserve the Past Prepare for the Future."

Aletha Jeter was elected president of the Department of Texas Ladies Auxiliary to the Veteran of Foreign Wars during the 74th annual convention held recently in Dallas-Fort Worth. Jeter is a fifth generation Houstonian who joined Auxiliary 3907 in Palestine in 1989 under the eligibility of her then husband, James.

Aletha Jeter

Jeter says she is proud to serve the Ladies Auxiliary as president and is proud of her family's history of service to country. She can trace her family history back to the battle of San Jacinto where her family name is on the monument at the battlegrounds. Her family also fought in the Civil War as well as World War I and II, Korea and Vietnam. Jeter knows first-hand the sacrifice veterans gave so freely to insure our freedom.

She is a former part-owner of Superior Floor Covering Co. in Houston and previously 'owned a barbecue restaurant in Aldine, Texas. She spends her time now doing work with the veterans of Texas, their families and the youth in our communities.

Jeter's special project will be American Diabetes the Association. She has set high goals this year for the Ladies Auxiliary but knows that her members will come through for her.

District 9 includes the Texas Panhandle area. All members are encouraged to attend the July 29 meeting in Dumas.

Jeter has two daughters and a grandson and is now living in Spring, Texas.

taken up residence in the forest. They rely on bush meat, too.

Locals might eat the primates' hands, feet and entrails. Heads and genitals are sold as fetishes do it here, then we've got to have and folk medicines locally and abroad.

The choice cuts are loaded onto trucks, river ferries and trains destined for city markets hundreds of miles away. A chimp might bring $20; a gorilla, $60.

paid by America's 134 million Armies and refugees also have zoo visitors. The Bronx Zoo has raised $1.5 million for its Africa programs with the Wildlife Conservation Society.

"There's a lot of disposable income in this country and we need to tap into it," said International's Conservation Russell Mittermier.

Price is another way to control the trade and reduce demand. Trouble is, westerners can't agree what bush meat costs or how much to tax it.

For years, affluent Africans in cities have paid $40 for a plate of monkey or elephant as a cultural link to their ancestral villages. Often the meat is heavily smoked and dishes are cloaked in wine-based or peanut sauces. Rose says in Cameroon he declined a bowl of monkey stew; it smelled like a sour mutton

In frontier towns, the unadorned meat sells for a fraction of the cost of beef and chicken. It's protein that poor people can afford.

'We're not sure what's driving the trade," Wilkie said. "If we don't know that, we're not going to be sure of the approaches to minimize it."

And what if they succeed? Conservationists wince at charges they want to cut off food to fast-growing black nations.

"How do you replace a billiondollar industry?" Eves said. "How do you replace one million metric tons of protein? You could save hundreds of animals in a single area if you could ensure a system of properly feeding the people."

That's beyond the expertise of most conservationists. That's the irony of the bush meat crisis.

To end the hunting and protect primates for future study, the Jane Goodalls might have to be forsaken for new leaders ers and supermarket executives.

"These aren't the things we learn in biology or forestry," Rose said. "Conservation needs

Newspapers deliver the community!

Only a few friends knew Bill Jones wanted to sell his recently-built home until he advertised it in his hometown newspaper.

Seventy-nine percent of local newspaper readers own their own home. No single media reaches as many local homes with as much credibility as the hometown newspaper. For proven advertising response and a solid connection to the community, newspapers deliver the most value for the dollar.
