Lefors council reviews possible bookkeeping improprieties

By JEFF WEST Staff Writer

Records, bookkeeping, and taxes once again dominated a meeting of t¹ Lefors City Council Monday night.

Shirley Jernigan of Jernigan Bookkeeping Service gave a report on several items she said had not been done properly by the previous bookkeeper for the city, Tom Grantham of Grantham, Corey Call and Heare.

"We finally got all the information that was available from Grantham's office," Jernigan said. "Nothing has been done except payroll reports since September 30. No financial or any posting we're going to have to bring that up to current."

She said she was concerned because the city apparently has been paying the old firm to do all the reports and yet has not received the services. She asked if the council wanted her to prepare a bill to send to Grantham for the work she is going to have to do to bring the records up to date.

City Secretary Judy Williams said Grantham had voluntarily sent a refund of $500, which is about one month's bill but Mayor J.W. Franks said if the work hasn't been done since September, that would be closer to $3,000. Williams said Grantham blamed computer problems around the first of the-known that there is another family member who also has "the right stuff."

Annie Glenn, wife of the former senator and the first American to orbit the earth, has confronted fear and overcome adversity every bit as tough as the NASA hero. Annie Glenn has learned to come to grips with a significant stuttering problem and changed her life in the process.

Imagine her anxiety on Feb. 20, 1962, when she waited for her husband to return safely from space flight. Mrs. Glenn also knew that hundreds of reporters would want her to speak publicly afterwards. Humiliated and embarrassed by her incapacity to speak without a significant struggle, she chose to let her children answer questions from the media. Trying to get out the words smoothly and fluently before the cameras was impossible.

Yet the story does not end here. Annie Glenn was not going to be conquered by her speech disability or be less than a full partner in her husband's future public service career. She attended an intensive program for stuttering. Slowly, painfully, she learned to speak in a new way. Hesitations, blocks, repetitions of sounds — none of those magically disappeared. But, through perseverance and sheer determination, Annie Glenn learned to talk with more ease and self-confidence. Over the years, her problem finally stopped being a problem.

For her remarkable achievements, the nonprofit Stuttering Foundation of America is pleased to announce that Mrs. Annie Glenn will be the 1999 Honorary Chair of National Stuttering Awareness Week, May 10-16.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — When John Glenn returned dously impact a wide cross-section of Americans," to space last year, most people may not have said Jane Fraser, president of the Stuttering Foundation. "Despite her isolation in those tough early years, Annie Glenn was never alone. Not enough people realize that approximately three million Americans every day cope with a stuttering disorder. But most can be helped with professional speech therapy." "It is difficult to exaggerate how much stuttering can impact a child or adult," Glenn added. "For years, I avoided speaking on the telephone, giving directions to someone, or even asking questions concerning my children at the school's parent-teacher conferences." Like her father, she was faced with a severe stuttering problem as long as she could remember.

"Annie Glenn is an excellent role model because she succeeded in the especially tough task of confronting stuttering in her adult years," remarked the SFA's Fraser.

"There is no magic cure for stuttering," admonishes Glenn, "but there is a lot that can be done to help someone speak more freely. Unfortunately, many parents, teachers and stutterers themselves are not made aware of the therapy and self-help possibilities." Glenn now speaks without debilitating fear or embarrassment at public events and has successfully participated in many television and radio interviews.

For a free copy of the National Stuttering Awareness Week brochure featuring 14 famous people who stutter, call the Stuttering Foundation toll-free at 1-800-992-9392, or www.stutterSFA.org. The Foundation was started in 1947 by the late philanthropist and business leader, Malcolm Fraser, who, like Glenn, also "Congress authorized this annual awareness learned to cope effectively with a significant stut-week because it knows that stuttering can trementering problem later in life.

Foundation announces summer camp

GAINESVILLE

Southwestern Diabetic Foundation in Gainesville has announced the dates for the summer camping season at Camp Sweeney as follows: first session - May 30-June 18; second session - June 20-July 9; third session - July 11-July 30; mini-camp - August 1-7. Located just north of Highway 82 between Gainesville and Whitesboro, Camp Sweeney has been in continuous operation since 1950, and is the largest camp of its kind in the U.S.

Camp Sweeney is designed to promote a healthy life-style for children with diabetes. It teaches youth life-saving medical management skills for their disorder.

Each camper learns to test their own blood glucose levels at least four times a day and administer their own insulin when necessary. There is a medical team on duty around the clock to monitor the children and prescribe dosages:

Each counselor receives extensive training in the care of children with diabetes. They lead activities such as archery, tennis, lacrosse, boating, fishing and crafts. There is a ratio of one counselor to every four campers.

Camp Sweeney's summer camp session is for children with diabetes ages 6-18. Enrollment is limited and is on a first come, first serve basis. For more information, write Camp Sweeney, P.O. Box 918, Gainesville, TX 76241, or call (940) 665-9502.

Nominating youth to service academies

One of the more uplifting parts of my job in Congress is being able to nominate young people to our nation's military service academies. It's also something with which a lot of people are not that familiar.

I recently hosted a pair of meetings to give students and their parents more information about the service academies, what they have to offer, and what those interested in attending need to do to apply. Representatives from West Point, the Naval Academy, and the Air Force Academy were on hand to speak and answer questions, and a good number of students and their parents turned out for each.

As a member of Congress, I can nominate up to five students for each service academy. This number varies depending on how many students from the 13th District are attending an academy at the time of nomination.

Applications for nomination are due in to me by Nov. 1 of a student's senior year. I then pass these nominations onto the service academies. They make the final decisions on who is eventually selected. Those who are selected get their education for free. In return, they agree to serve in the military for a minimum of five years after graduation.

Obviously, service academies aren't for everyone. But for young people who are looking for a top-notch education and a chance to serve their country, I think it's an opportunity that

If you'd like more information on military service academies and how to go about being nominated, please contact me at either my Wichita Falls or Amarillo office, or through my website at ww.house.gov/thornberry/

Everything I do is south

I think I'm becoming a small town driver and I don't think I like it.

When I first came to Pampa from Amarillo was amazed at how quickly you could get anywhere in the city and the lack of traffic jams and how there didn't seem to be a single car on the streets after 10 (except at Hastings). I was used to driving 15 or 20 minutes to get to almost anywhere.

Now I don't go to some stores here because they are too far away, or to the left. See, almost everything I do is south, or to the right of where I live. Downtown, the newspaper office, most traffic accidents, all to the right. A few things are slightly to my left but manage that occasionally. A few stores are far to the left as I turn onto Hobart. I hate that. True they are only three to five minutes away but still they are to my left.

I once heard a story that J. Edgar Hoover, who was driven in a government limousine, once was in an accident while making a left hand turn. From then on, so the story goes, his driver could only make right hand turns. Even if he had to make four of them.

going to town" I do it quite a bit during the day and I found that left turns are a problem for a lot of Pampa. Apparently people are afraid of left turners.

See, here's the scene. I pull up to a stop sign with my left blinker on. I have the left blinker on because I'm planning to turn left. Another car, pickup, van, SUV (short for super ugly vehicle in my book but sports utility vehicle in car lingo), motorcycle, bicycle, unicycle, whatever, pulls up at the other stop sign at the same time. So I wait for the other vehicle to go straight, and I wait, and I wait. ver. Eventually I decide the other driver has While I may not like turning left when passed out and I start to go, even though I yourselves.

should wait. Invariably that causes the other driver to start up. So I wait and wait and wait for the driver who now has parked again and is starting to set up camp. This is not a one time thing but a recurring problem. I'm wondering if the driving classes are different here than elsewhere.

I don't want to go. I remember Coach whats-his-name in high school driving class stressing the rule that cars going straight have right of way. It's a rule, really. It's on page 4-2 of the handbook. Go get your copy and check it out, I'll wait.

For those of you who have misplaced your Texas Drivers Handbook, trust me it's there.

I was going to write about this problem earlier but something got in my way. I was driving around town thinking about small town drivers when I found myself at a stop sign, there was somebody facing me, not moving. It was then I realized he was going to turn left and was waiting on me to go, which I wasn't doing. I think I'm becoming a small town dri-

Dr. Amyim Palmer is the founder and headmaster of Marcus Garvey School. After several invitations to tour the institution, I finally managed a visit on one of my trips to Los Angeles. Marcus Garvey School exemplifies black academic excellence and Palmer — and I think I would, too — is willing to match his students against any other students in the

As Palmer was escorting me from class to class, a kid hip-hopped by us. Palmer, telling me the kid was new in the school, excused himself and approached the kid and in just a few seconds the kid walked away normally, sans hip-hop. Palmer had asked the kid whether his legs were hurting. When the kid responded no, Palmer told the kid, "We don't walk that way at Marcus Garvey." The case

Knowing Palmer, I'm sure had the kid disobeyed, and after an attempt parental consultation to gain compliance, expulsion would have followed. But what might have happened in a public school? The kid might have warned Palmer about his constitutional rights. Had Palmer persisted, the kid's parents might have summoned some ACLU lawyers to sue the school, alleging the kids' First Amendment rights to freedom of expression were violated.

Forget the hip-hopping at Marcus Garvey for a moment and turn to the tragedy at Columbine

dents and one teacher died. According to news reports, teachers and students were well aware of the atypical behavior by the two murderers. They donned black dusters, openly expressed hatred for athletes and admiration for Hitler, and belonged to an organization known as the "Trench Coat Mafia. Suppose the school principal harbored suspicions about the killers, Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold — what could he have done? Could he have called the boys into his office to discuss their behavior and attitude without risking a suit alleging violation of privacy rights? Suppose he suspected their lockers contained contraband or unsavory material, could he have inspected their lockers without worrying about some ACLU lawyers suing him for violating Fourth Amendment protections against "unreasonable" search and seizure?

Today's kids have rights, and teachers and High School in Littleton, Colo., where 14 stu- principals must heed due process. But, rights day.

and due process cost. Let's return to the hiphopping at Marcus Garvey to ask: If Dr. Palmer had to spend time and effort documenting the kid's hiphopping, consult with legal counsel and take other "due process" measures, would he have approached the kid, or said to himself, "It's not worth the grief" and let it slide? I'm guessing the latter.

The same human response applies to teachers' suspicions about student locker contents, gang membership, foul language and bizarre dress. A lot of student behavior that teachers know is not quite kosher goes unsanctioned and uninvestigated, degrading the school ambiance, because "it's not worth it." What are Americans really concerned about?

We're concerned about whether children smoke cigarettes. Education is going to rot. Children are making babies. They use foul language to and in the presence of adults. And every now and then kill one another. And from the White House to the outhouse, the nation's top concern is children smoking.

I'm 63. When I was young, a lot of kids smoked. But they didn't use foul language to and in the presence of adults, make a bunch of babies, or murder and assault one another, and they could read and write. Plus, we dressed civilized for school (sneakers were no-no's and so were jeans for girls). I'll take cigarette-smoking civilized kids any

Self-government requires discipline

Gannett News Service recently reported some statistics that show the true nature of our two-tier economy.

According to the story, one-third of Americans have no savings, no investments and are in debt. A fifth have zero assets. Ten million households don't even have a bank account — an indication they are literally going from one check to the next.

It's important to understand the difference between wealth and money. Wealth consists of assets houses, businesses, land, tools, vehicles and so forth. Money is a medium of exchange. The difference can be shown by example.

Let's say a person owns a home, owns a car and is debt-free. That person can live on a modest income of money. Now the next person owns nothing but has a good-paying job. He rents or pays on a mortgage, he pays for club memberships, he leases a fancy car, he borrows for vacations and other stuff. Outwardly, he appears to be living the good life, but in reality, he is extremely vulnerable and on the edge of

Let him get laid off and what happens? He loses everything. He was living on the basis of monthly payments, and now his cash flow has gone 100 percent negative-all out, no in. Unless he can find a new job quickly, he will lose his house, his car and everything else.

If indeed a third of Americans have no savings, no investments and are in debt, then they ence and protect their assets. My own state has are living on the edge of economic disaster and certainly not really sharing in the prosperity touted by the politicians and academics. There is a big difference between statistical prosperity and real, flesh-and-blood prosperity. A person may be counted as employed, but if a person is employed in a low-pay, no-future job, then that person is not participating in prosperity. One reason we have a low unemployment rate is that many people are in part-time positions, where generally they have no benefits like vacation time or medical insurance. Another reason is that people who have given up looking for work are not even counted as unemployed. Never trust government statistics.

One good argument for a frugal government is that extravagant governments will dump most of the tax burden on the poorest people. Why? Because the very wealthy people can and will use their wealth to purchase political influsuch a regressive tax system that it even manages to nail the homeless. (If a homeless man bums $5 and buys a hamburger, he has to pay sales tax.)

We certainly need a fairer tax system, not only at the federal level but at the state and local level. Tax increases by local and state governments have been tremendous in recent

The problem is, though, that government spending is what drives taxes, and until Americans wean themselves from the idea that governments can solve all human, social and personal problems, it is pointless to talk about tax reform. The politicians may play games, like lowering a rate while eliminating deductions, but they won't — they can't really reduce the tax load until they end many, many government programs. They won't do that until people demand it.

Put plainly, a politician earns no Brownie points by ending a spending program, while starting a spending program always pleases at least the people who benefit from it. In all my years of sitting through government meetings at one level or another, I never heard any citizen come forward and say, "Cut spending." Everyone always wanted government to spend money on some project they favored.

Self-government requires self-discipline on the part of citizens, and we aren't quite there yet, though some are working on it.

McCurry was expected to be in uniform for Tuesday night's game against Pittsburgh.
