Texas Republicans Decide to Hold Two Conventions

PARTY TO LET STATE ISSUES REST AWHILE

Only National Ticket to Be Considered May 22

BATTLE LOOMS OVER FAVORITE

Home Ticket Will Be Selected at Fort Worth Aug. 14

(By Associated Press)
DALLAS, Jan. 16.—The executive committee of the Republican party of Texas today voted to hold two state conventions, the first here May 22 and the second in Fort Worth August 14.

At the first delegates to the national convention will be selected, and at the second the state ticket will be nominated.

(By Associated Press)
DALLAS, Jan. 16.—A battle between supporters of Herbert Hoover and Frank Lowden for nomination as Republican presidential candidate was expected to begin here today as the Texas Republican executive committee opened its meeting to select the state convention city.

Oklahoma Man Dies Here Sunday

George Jackson, 64 years and six months old, died at the Pampa hospital Sunday night following a long illness.

He was born in Ohio, but at an early age moved to Oklahoma, where he resided until two years ago when he moved to Pampa to make his home. He lived with a son, Thomas, who is a trucking contractor.

The body was prepared for burial by G. C. Malone and was sent to Henrietta, Okla., for burial this afternoon.

Pampa Community Is Given Publicity

Pampa and Gray county are being given much valuable publicity by The Panhandle Digest, a small weekly publication distributed by the Amarillo-Panhandle Development corporation.

Practically every issue contains much information on Gray county and Pampa civic development. Much of the material is taken from the Pampa Daily News. The Digest is distributed free throughout a wide territory as a weekly summary of Panhandle development news.

Mystery Sequel to Start Wednesday

"Why," demanded Vance, "did nearly everyone who knew the Canary select the night of her murder for mysterious affairs which they don't dare mention, even to clear themselves of suspicion? Was there an invasion of demons in the city that night? Was there a curse on the world driving men to dark bloody deeds? Was there Black Magic abroad? I think not."

You will ask these questions too, if you read "The Canary Murder Case." It will start in the Pampa Daily News Wednesday as a sequel to "The Benson Murder Case," by the mysterious author, S. B. Van Dine.

Help Bring Democratic Convention to Texas

These five gentlemen from Texas induced the Democrats to hold the convention at Houston. They are (left to right): Jesse Jones, chairman of the financial committee of the national committee, who guaranteed financial satisfaction by writing out his own check for $200,000; J. Adams, John Boyle, State Senator T. J. Holbrook and Congressman Daniel E. Garrett.

Songs of the Old West to Be Sung Over Radio Thursday in Program to Be Sponsored by West Texas C. of C.

(Special to the News)
FORT WORTH, Jan. 16.—Cowboy songs that rang out over the prairies of the Old West yesterday, and modern melodies that sound over the thriving western cities of the new today, together with other bits of the glamour of picturesque West Texas, will be broadcast from Fort Worth to radio audiences over the country on the evening of January 19.

East Texas in force, as represented and typified in the cream of its business and professional men, together with one of the section's most active musical organizations, and some of its best talent, will be in Fort Worth on that date, to attend the first 1928 conference of the Executive board of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and after talking shop, and banqueting, these Western goodfellows will climax the day by broadcasting a program that promises to bring the romance of the West to the world.

Mrs. Dan Moody, and a party of friends are expected to tune-in on the West Texas program at the Governor's Mansion in Austin while W. P. (Billy) McDonald, Stamford, sings "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," the song which was dedicated by him to Mrs. Moody at the State Capitol last winter when she was made official sweetheart of West Texas and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce at the annual Franklin-Webster banquet.

Rendition of that number will be especially unique, inasmuch as the soloist will be accompanied by a band. The Stamford Firemen's Band (Dick Rowland, director), former official band of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, will furnish music throughout the evening.

Two-minute talks with the banter and spice of West Texas repartee will intersperse the musical numbers. These will be made by directors of the West Texas regional organization who constitute the highest type of West Texas citizenship.

The executive board meeting which will precede the evening radio program promises to be the largest and most representative gathering yet held by the body. Seventy-five members or more will be present. A number from remote points who have never before been able to attend have indicated that they will be present on this occasion.

A contributing factor to attendance at the directorate session is, that, at this gathering, plans for the tenth annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to be held at Fort Worth next spring will be discussed. Working plans for 1928 will also be drafted

Texas Health Train Off on Long Trip of 2,500 Miles

HOUSTON, Jan. 16.—Let no guilty microbes escape is the slogan of those in charge of the Texas Better Health special train which is to leave Houston today on a tour of 2,500 miles in Texas and Louisiana.

Six cars operated by the Missouri Pacific Railroad in cooperation with the Texas State Department of Health and with the assistance of the United States Health Service, will work in conjunction with health authorities at the points visited.

Purpose of the trip, according to H. R. Safford, Houston Missouri Pacific executive vice-president, "is to encourage strictest observance of all modern rules governing health and sanitation, stressing control and prevention of certain diseases and providing means by which a greater safeguard can be placed around every community in the state."

The train will carry exhibits of sanitary equipment, Mr. Safford said, patterned after the most advanced ideas originating from study given this particular work by the country's noted expert.

"We expect to carry on this train," he said, "motion pictures and other devices by which health and sanitary activity can be placed before the eyes of those who attend each point. They will be supplemented, of course, by lectures delivered by men of many years experience in this field, some of whom are internationally known."

Black and White Cab Service Is Established Here

The Black and White Taxi company, a branch of the Yellow Cab company of Amarillo, has opened a branch here with three taxis and a large Willys-Knight sedan for country and party use. Smith Sharp is in charge of the local office.

Buses will be placed at the Schneider hotel, Adams hotel and the Red Ball station. A meter will be used to regulate the charge, which is 30 cents for the first third of a mile and 10 cents for each additional third of a mile. The charge for each extra passenger will be 20 cents.

and ratified, as well as other important matters taken up. Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth publisher, will be host to the conference at the noon hour.

STATE BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press.)
AUSTIN, Jan. 16.—The Rev. O. C. Williamson, recently a resident of Mexico, is among the new faculty members at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary here.

He will work as an instructor in the Mexican department and also will aid Mexican welfare activities.

COLLEGE STATION, Jan. 16.—A. & M. College here has just paid $250 for a rooster. He is a White Leghorn, is registered as one of the best breed-for-egg-production and is for use on the college poultry farm.

(By the Associated Press.)
AUSTIN, Jan. 16.—A reported lack of church and Sunday School facilities in some of the rural sections of Travis county, in which the state capital is located, has inspired a survey of such conditions by the Austin Ministerial Association, Rev. F. H. Hammer, secretary, said.

Two Train Men Die From Burns

(By Associated Press)
TAYLOR, Jan. 16.—Six Crews, engineer, and O. G. Bennett, fireman, died at a hospital here today, after having been scalded yesterday when the northbound International and Great Northern passenger train was wrecked here.

E. E. Chambers, express man, is expected to recover. All three men, who were the only persons reported injured, live in San Antonio. Seven of the train's eleven coaches went off the tracks and the engine was overturned.

Favorable Trade Balance Shown

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—A favorable trade balance of $681,707,000 for the United States last year was announced today by the Commerce department, which fixed the exports at $4,866,160,000, and imports at $4,184,452,000.

Revised Farm Bill Will Be Basis of Committee Efforts

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The revised McNary-Haugen bill will be the basis of farm relief discussion by the House agricultural committee, it was decided today at the first meeting of that committee to consider a flood of farm proposals, made in both the House and the Senate.

A move to prevent recurrence of previous extended hearings was made by Representative Adkins, Republican of Illinois, who expressed the opinion that the committee could agree on a bill within a week. This sentiment was approved by other members of the committee, with the suggestion that the present hearing be sharply curtailed by allowing to testify only those who had new ideas or suggestions for relief.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Telephone and telephone companies would be excluded from the Senate inquiry into financial and other affairs of public utility corporations, the Senate Interstate Commerce committee was informed today by Senator Walsh, Democrat of Montana, who is the author of the resolution for such an investigation.

Pioneer Woman of Miami Is Dead

MIAMI, Jan. 16.—Mrs. J. G. Ramsay, 70 years old, for the past 30 years a resident of Miami, died at her home here late Sunday night.

She was the wife of J. G. Ramsay, with the Brazil Land, Cattle and Packing company of Brazil, S. A. She is survived by her husband, who is at present in Brazil; one daughter, Mrs. Annie Keehn of Miami; and one son, J. G. F. Ramsay, also of Miami.

The body was prepared for burial by G. C. Malone of Pampa. Funeral services will be conducted here tomorrow afternoon.

Society for Friendless Is Given Donations

T. E. Graham of Amarillo, field secretary of the Texas Society for the Friendless for the Fort Worth-Panhandle district, told of the work of his organization in talks at local churches yesterday, and took offerings.

The Society has three main divisions: pacing children, assisting worthy mothers to care for their children, and acting as "first friend" to discharged and paroled prisoners. Welfare industries are organized to provide a "chance" instead of "charity" for unfortunate.

The work is part of a national organization, whose superintendent is the Rev. James Parsons of Kansas City. The Rev. W. C. Wheeler is superintendent of the Texas-Oklahoma division.

The headquarters is at 300 Worth building, Fort Worth.

Poll Tax Drive Fully Organized

The "Pay Your Poll Tax" committee of the Chamber of Commerce will meet tonight at the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 7:30 o'clock to complete plans for the campaign. The members of the canvassing committee have chosen their assistants and will start work throughout this community tomorrow.

Manager Scott Marcus has the business district divided and with his assistants will also commence work in the morning.

PRESIDENT OF CUBA OUTLINES SESSION SPIRIT

International Confidence Stressed by U. S. Spokesman

REPUBLICS ON EVEN PLANE

Monroe Doctrine Is Not Mentioned in the Address

(By Associated Press)
HAVANA, Jan. 16.—Stressing idealism, fraternity, and cooperation as the aims of American countries, General Morales, president of Cuba, today welcomed President Coolidge and delegates from Latin-American countries to Cuba for the sixth Pan-American Conference.

(By the Associated Press.)
HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 16.—In a speech keyed to the note of international confidence, helpfulness and goodwill, President Coolidge opened the sixth Pan-American Congress here today by urging the nations of the western hemisphere to join in the task of assuring to all its people the freedom that Columbus bequeathed to them in equal measure.

Journeying outside of his homeland for the first time since he became president, Mr. Coolidge spoke to the distinguished gathering not as the head of a pre-eminently powerful country, but as the spokesman of a nation on an equal plane with her sister republics, trying to find the way to a peaceful solution of whatever problems beset their quest for complete understanding and friendship.

Avoids Monroe Doctrine.
Without mentioning the League of Nations or the Monroe Doctrine, the president assured the Congress that the Pan-American Union "involves no antagonism toward any section of the world or any other organization," but at the same time declared that the nations of the Western Hemisphere are committed to the principle that they are "better fitted to govern themselves than any one else is to govern them."

Mr. Coolidge devoted his whole address to the community aspect of new world affairs, rather than to the individual attitude and policies of his own country. The name of the United States was not once mentioned by the president except to give the assurance that his government was prepared to encourage the development of shipping, air lines, highways and all pursuits of peace that might bring the various units of the American family of States into a closer and more permanent harmony.

He declared there was no intention in this hemisphere of any nation building up a great military establishment to over-awe or subjugate its neighbors, and enunciated the doctrine that all nations of this hemisphere are determined to adjust their differences "not by a resort to force but by the application of the principles of justice and equity."

"All Nations Equal."
"All nations here represented," Mr. Coolidge said "stand on an exact footing of equality. The smallest and the weakest speaks here with the same authority as the largest and the most powerful. You come together under the present condition, and future expectation of profound peace. You are continuing to strike a new note in international

ABOUT THE NEWS—One of Pampa's greatest needs is a city hall-auditorium. However, when that structure is erected it should be large enough to serve for a number of years. Auditoriums of the new churches will help meet local needs until the auditorium can be built. In the meantime, Pampa should go forward with her street paving. Dispatches from other Panhandle cities tell of bond voting for from 20 to 50 blocks of additional paving. Pampa has a fine start in this development, but more paving is highly desirable.

Honesty, even in government, is sometimes costly. Padding of the scholastic census in Texas counties has become a pernicious practice. Those counties which report actual attendance suffer the loss of many $15 apportionments. Gray county, having discovered an error of one scholastic in favor of the state, returned that apportionment. Such honesty is hewing to the line, and is as notable in that way as the practice of some counties is notoriously the opposite. Moreover, Pampa last year lost $14,000 because 1,000 new pupils arrived after the census. This district should have been reimbursed, but Governor Moody opposed the special appropriation.

Il Duce has a brother. Men as great as Mussolini should be careful in their choice of brothers, lest any should be unworthy. But the Italian dictator's brother, Arnaldo Mussolini, is an editor and something of a thinker. Arnaldo has written a noteworthy article exhorting the press that "the space which is now devoted to stories of crime, suicides, etc., could be better used by articles containing instructive, clean news, which tends to elevate the moral level of all classes of society. Thoughtful words, but has he brother of Il Duce ever said anything about censorship of the press? The Italian press has been as much bridled as any in the history of journalism. Misuse of the privileges of the press are detrimental, but not nearly so dangerous as suppression by governmental authority. Perhaps Arnaldo will extend his remarks to include this idea—as soon as it is safe for him to do so.

Miss Laura V. Hamner writes interestingly of Pampa in sketching the towns of the Panhandle. Her conception: Running, running gasping for breath, Rushing madly forward, Struggling to keep pace with human need, Moved by sudden economic urge; Leaving behind the old still memories—Memories jostled out of life, Stillness lost forever in your growth; Your calm sweet homes sucked into your soothing core. The town of swift response: PAMPA.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—"Mr. Mellon," says one of the secretary of the treasury's helpers, "will sooner or later be run down by an automobile."

"Mr. Mellon always runs across the street with little or no regard for what is coming. He always seems to be in too much of a hurry to wait at the cross-walks."

Mr. Mellon is an active man. He scampers upstairs two steps at a time, which would not be so unusual were it not for the fact that Mr. Mellon will soon be 74 years old. Your correspondent has it from someone who ought to know that Mr. Mellon wears his hat at breakfast, for no particular reason apparently except that Mr. Mellon wants to be ready to go. There being no Mrs. Mellon, no one ever objects. Of course, your correspondent cannot personally vouch for the story of Mr. Mellon's breakfast hat, because among his distinctions is not that of having sipped orange juice with Mr. Mellon.

The question naturally arises as to just what automobile will bump Mr. Mellon. It certainly shouldn't be any ordinary car.

Washington, as you must know, is just a little riskier both for motorists and pedestrians than most cities. There are two reasons for that. First, there are so many motoring bootleggers who are frequently pursued in thrilling but dangerous races with cops. Speakeasies do not thrive in Washington, so most liquor is delivered by automobile. Mr. Mellon's job, or one of them, is to suppress bootleggers, so it would certainly be the height of something or other if Mr. Mellon were to be given free transportation on the fore bumper of one of Washington's colored bootleggers.

The other reason, of course, is diplomatic immunity. Few except Tom Blanton object to diplomatic hooch in the legations, but there are many Washingtonians good and sore at the complete disregard by some diplomats of even the mere courtesies of motoring.

Being assured of diplomatic immunity and not liable for damages in this country, diplomats may race madly about the city and if someone gets in their way that's simply too bad.

No doubt you read recently of a little Washington girl who had concussion of the brain after the 14-year-old son of the British ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, had collided with her while driving his father and mother. Being a gentleman, Sir Esme did the correct thing, which does not alter the fact that Sir Esme was able to make prompt claim of diplomatic immunity despite the fact no one of less than 16 years is supposed to drive a car in Washington.

TWINKLES

The question now appears to be: Will the gift of a convention serve to hold the South to any given line? The politicians had better go easy on that discussion.

Supplies for the News' automatic printer-telegraph are arriving, and we are going to order about a ton extra to handle the Houston Democratic convention. It will be wordy.

NEA SERVICE

BY ERNEST LYNN

THE STORY THUS FAR

The story is laid in the Indian territory and along the Kansas border in the '80's, when a fight was being waged for the opening of Oklahoma to settlement. Chief characters are:

Tony Harrison, orphaned at 13 when his father was shot in a poker game.

Pawnee Bill, adventurer, teacher, Indian interpreter, showman;

Joe Craig, who takes Tony to the Bar K ranch to live;

Titus Moore, owner of the Bar K brand;

Rita, his daughter, with whom Tony later falls in love.

Moore is one of the chief enemies of the movement to open Oklahoma. David Payne, leader of the "Boomers," dies and Tony in his loyalty to Moore is troubled because of his sympathy for Payne's cause. He tries to forget his hopeless love for Rita, but is unable to keep from declaring his love, and when she admits she is engaged to another he disappears.

Pawnee Bill organizes his own show. Tony goes with it. It fails and Pawnee Bill is persuaded by the city of Wichita to go there and lead the Boomers into Oklahoma. The fight finally is won. On April 22, 1890, the gun is fired that sends 30,000 homeseekers scrambling over the border. Tony rides on to Guthrie, which in one day is springing from nothing to a city of 8,000. There he accidentally gets into the hardware business.

Mrs. Moore meanwhile has died in the east and Titus Moore and Rita go back to the Bar K.

A scar-faced man drops into Guthrie and at sight of him Tony is troubled by the notion that he has seen him before.

CHAPTER XLVII

Those gray slits of eyes were mistaking Benton's; there was no mistaking them. Tony Harrison had seen them, nine years before, glaring at the lifeless form of a man in a little moon in Caldwell, and he had not forgotten them.

And now he could hear Benton's voice come faintly through the glass, high-pitched, threatening, as he glared at Morrison in the chair; "All right; I'll give you one more chance to open it. I'll count ten. Then—" and he deliberately broke off and waved the revolver in his hand in a significant gesture.

Outside Tony Harrison slowly raised his own gun and leveled it. But Benton presented a bad target. There was to begin with, the barred window between them. And Benton was fairly well shielded from an outside toe, partly by his own companion, partly by Morrison. The young man thought quickly. There was small likelihood, true of a bullet's being deflected by the window pane—still, there remained the possibility. And if he should hit Benton, Morrison might be killed as a result, either by the other man or by Benton's own convulsive finger pressure.

If Morrison held out in his dogged determination not to open the safe, he would have to fire. If not, he could wait outside for the pair to gather their loot and surprise them as they left.

He heard Benton counting and held his breath, his finger tightening on the trigger of the slender weapon in his hand: "Four. . . . five. . . . six. . . ." Benton's eyes narrowed to mere cracks. They gleamed viciously. Suddenly Morrison nodded and gave up.

A smile contorted the scar-torn face of the man in front of him. "Come to your senses, did you? Now be quick about it. We're done fooling with you."

From his post at the window, Harrison could see the bank cashier, his face bloodless, kneel beside the safe and twirl the knob. The heavy door swung open and Benton shoved him roughly, out of the way and motioned for the man with the bag to get busy.

Ignoring the silver, the man swept neat little stacks of currency into the bag while Benton kept his six-gun trained on Morrison. The first few pattering drops of rain, heralds of the coming downpour, fell against the face of the watcher and a minute later the man beside the safe straightened up with a nod. The job was done.

"I ought to ping you anyway," Benton said savagely to Morrison, "for being so damn stubborn. God—but his companion with a sudden exclamation touched his arm and gestured nervously toward the door.

Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill after they had become partners in the show business.

"Let him be, Tom; we better hurry." Benton reluctantly backed away. He growled something at the cashier that Harrison could not hear and swung suddenly around.

The man outside breathed a sigh of relief and glided back into the shadows beside the horses. The man he had struck over the head still lay like a felled tree, but he bent swiftly downward and reassured himself with another brief glance at his face. Then, pulling his hat down over his eyes, he took a position close to the horses and waited.

The door of the bank swung open and two figures ran toward him in the darkness. "All right," came Benton's voice. "Let's get away."

Harrison's eye narrowed, straining in the dark. His jaw tightened. A moment now and—

Before him loomed two bulky shapes. "I've still got a good mind to kill that damn cashier," Benton growled. "Everything all right, Pete?"

"Everything tops right here, Benton," Tony said calmly. "You and your friend reach up—high."

A voice rasped: "Somethin' wrong, Tom!" and the two dim figures paused in their advance.

"What the hell!" Benton rapped out. "Ain't that you Pete? What—"

"No, this ain't Pete," Harrison said coolly. "This is a reception committee here to give you a welcome. Benton, you're wanted—for murder—he moved intuitively to one side—and a few other things. I'm giving you a chance to surrender, although I'd like nothing better—"

He was interrupted by an oath from Benton. A black shadow ducked suddenly and a pistol barked. A horse screamed in agony and the others bolted in panic.

"You asked for it, Benton," Tony said deliberately and fired. He threw himself to the ground, prone, and fired again and heard Benton groan. "Now, then," said Harrison, addressing himself to Benton's companion, "if you want the same dose—"

Light sprang suddenly from the side window of the bank, and in the faint illumination he saw Benton's companion standing with arms uplifted in a downpour of rain.

"Now, I'd call that real sensible," Tony drawled. He raised his voice and called, "Morrison!"

There was an answering cry from the bank and Morrison came running.

"Just relieve that gent of his hardware," Tony ordered. "There's something here I want to look at."

He approached the fallen Benton warily, feeling first for the man's hands. Then he felt a sudden nausea and spoke once more to the surprised bank cashier. "You'd better look at him, Morrison; I've changed my mind."

Two hours later he sat in the marshal's office, surrounded by an excited group of Guthrie citizens. In a corner of the room two men in manacles gazed about them with sullen eyes, and in the next room something lay on the floor covered with a blanket.

"He saved the bank more than $12,000," Morrison was saying. "It was the nearest thing you ever saw. Took care of three of them single-handed. Harrison," he smiled, "any time you need a loan at the bank I'll see that you get it."

"Thanks," said Tony. "And you gentleman ought to know," he said, sweeping the room with his gaze, "just what kind of a watchdog you've got sitting on your money in the bank. By golly, I thought for a while he never would open that safe."

"Harrison won't be needin' any loans for some time," observed the marshal. "There's a reward of $2500 for Benton's capture, dead or alive. Personally, I prefer him the way he is—dead."

"I'm not taking any reward," Benton's slayer announced. "I'm turning it over to the city of Guthrie for a police fund. As a business man," he added, smiling, "I'm looking for all the protection the law can give us. . . . Benton killed my father and I don't want anything for squaring the account."

The marshall took a chew of tobacco and grinned. "I'm not goin' to stand in your way, Harrison." He let go with scientific accuracy at the cuspidor. "What I want to know is how you got suspicious of this gent Forbes. Was I blind or something?"

"I don't know how he got his scar," Tony replied, "but that and his slick hair and his goatee and cute little mustache threw me off the track for a while. I had the notion all along that I knew him. It was his eyes, Marshal. He couldn't disguise them. If came to me all of a sudden while I was playing poker."

"Sudden is right," Fred Perkins put in. "He got up and left four kings."

Harrison's eyes clouded for a brief moment. He got up and stretched, saying, "Well, Marshal, take good care of these boys," and jerked a thumb toward the men in manacles. "I'm going to get some sleep," he announced.

"And you're entitled to it," Fred Perkins told him. "I'll walk along with you."

They walked together for some time without speech. "Benton," Tony Harrison said presently, "was in Chicago for a while. That much of his story was true. One of his friends told me that he didn't come back to the territory till the opening. I forgot to ask him how Benton got the scar, but it doesn't make any difference; it's all over now. . . . contracts today for timber? We're going to be busier than all getout this fall, but meantime I'm planning on a little vacation."

He went to bed that night with the conviction that the time had come for him to ride up to the Bar K and see Joe Craig.

The next morning there was a letter for him at the postoffice and he smiled at the coincidence, for Pawnee Bill had written: "If you haven't been up to the Bar K yet you ought to be ashamed of yourself. I've felt real mean about keeping your whereabouts a secret from Joe Craig and I'm not going to keep it up. I'm intending to look him up myself to see if he regards me as a friend or enemy. My wife and mother were so glad to see me after hearing I'd been killed in the rush that they've kept me tied to their apron strings on the farm. I've already made arrangements for my own show again next year and this time I'll make money. The time will come when Buffalo Bill, as big a name as he's got in the show business, will be glad to have me as an equal partner. I can see a tour of Europe and a lot of money, and then maybe you'll be sorry you stuck to the hardware business in Guthrie."

Ton Harrison smiled. "Maybe," he said and directed his steps toward the livery stable. "Cherokee," he said to the big black stallion that lifted his head in greeting, "we're going to ramble."

And Cherokee stamped his foot and nodded in approval.

(To Be Concluded)

Tony rides back to the Bar K and finds the love he thought he had lost. In the final chapter.

French Court Tennis Champ Invades U. S., Seeking World Title

Having won the Davis Cup and the U. S. championship in lawn tennis, the French are seeking new racket conquests in the indoor game of court tennis. Pierre Etchebaster (lower left), French ace, is coming to America for world's championship matches with Jock Soutar (right), the titleholder, February 20, 22 and 25, at Philadelphia.

Paris, Jan. 16.—France, not content with gaining the Davis Cup in lawn tennis, is after new laurels with the racket.

Sailing January 18, on the Aquitania, Pierre Etchebaster, professional court tennis champion of France, will seek the world's open championship now held by Jock Soutar, professional at the Philadelphia Racquet Club.

The match is set for February 20, 22 and 25 at Soutar's club in Philadelphia and will be the first meeting between an American and a Frenchman for a title in any of the court games since Rene Lacoste downed Tilden for the United States lawn tennis championship last September.

Court tennis, which is seven centuries old and the basis of modern lawn tennis, is having a moderate revival here, but is much less played than in England or America.

Etchebaster, who is the professional at a Paris club hopes to stimulate interest in the game among his countrymen by bringing back the world crown.

would like to book one of the big teams of the Western Conference for a final game, or would be willing to sign up one of the Pacific Coast powers and go to Chicago to meet them.

The Army will be a great card for any team interested in gate receipts, and they all are more or less concerned with the financial phases of the game.

The Army Reigns

There is more color to the Cadets and the Army teams than there is to the midshipmen. Most any neutral young lady would be attracted more by the fancy rigging of the cadet costume than by the formal sombre blue attire of the midshipmen, and there certainly is more interest in a bawky, kicking mule than a goat.

West Point managers are particularly eager to get an opponent with a great big name to take the Navy's place—some team with real strict regulations so evidence would be available that the Army eligibility rules were accepted by Soandso U and therefore there could be nothing to wrong with them.

Navy has attracted some large crowds away from the Annapolis parade grounds, but it is doubtful if the Navy eams could maintain the average for annual attendance that the Army does in the Yale fixture.

The Army has long established relations with Notre Dame and Yale and it is quite likely that, under the existing circumstances, Harvard will become a fixture on the schedule.

With three such teams on the schedule and the chance to hook up with one big southern, middle-western or California team the Army would be several steps ahead of the Navy and would have a schedule that automatically would make it a candidate for national honors consideration.

Who Won the Fuss?

Admission by the heads of the two service academies that there will be no Army-Navy football game this year terminates the first round, at least, of the row over eligibility rules.

After this first round, it would seem that if the Army didn't actually get the decision the edge was slightly in its favor.

The West Point officials resisted all kinds of political pressure, braved public opinion and stuck to their guns as soldiers are supposed to do.

The attitude of the Cadet officers that the Navy had no right to tell them how they were to regulate athletics was maintained so consistently that the game finally was cancelled, and if any hustling congressmen are to get the issue as far as the White House they probably will have to wait until next year.

Before the football season opens the commandants of West Point and Annapolis will have been succeeded, but the schedule will have been completed before the incumbents are relieved, and it is not military custom to ride over the inherited policies established by predecessors.

Looking for Opponent

The making of the 1928 schedule—that is, the filling in of the final November Saturday left vacant by the cancellation of the big inter-service classic—places the two academies in another sparring match for a moral victory.

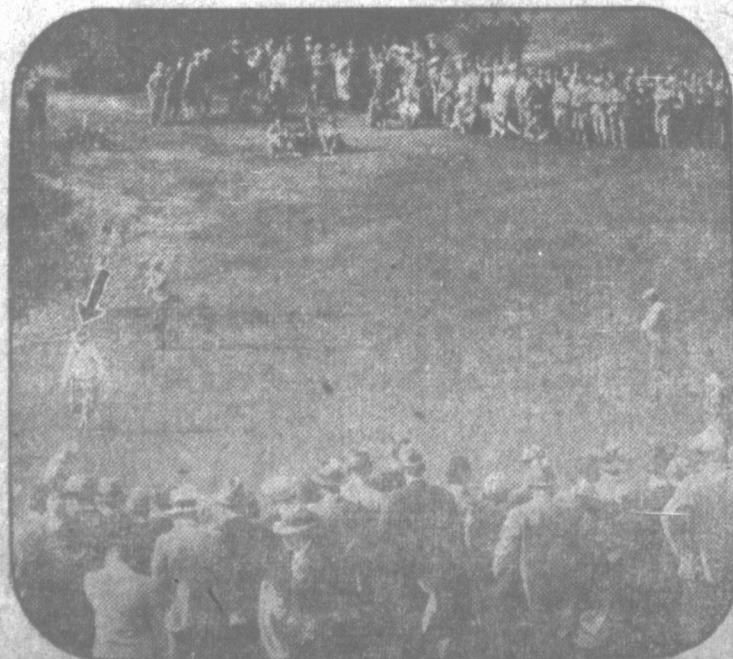

Naturally, the West Point and Annapolis schedule-makers would like to close the season with an outstanding national team so that they could look in each other's direction, make faces and gloat—"You wouldn't play us, eh? Well, look who we got in your place."

The Army already is in a better position to show a schedule with more gloss on it than the Navy possibly can arrange on short notice.

The Cadets have booked games with Notre Dame, Yale and Harvard, and if there aren't fancy trimmings in those three, where could you find them?

It is understood that the Cadets

Child Study Club To Meet Friday in Home of Mrs. Duncan

The Child Study club will meet at the home of Mrs. I. E. Duncan, Friday Jan. 20, with Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar as leader assisted by Mrs. Roy Tinsley.

The following program will be given:

"What Everyone Loses who is not Familiar with Bible Stories," Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar.

"How to use the Bible with the Children," Mrs. Roy Tinsley.

"Bible Stories Classified for Children According to Age," Mrs. James Todd.

"What not to do," Mrs. H. D. Lewis.

"Leading the Child," Mrs. C. S. Barrett.

For the benefit of the P. T. A. and the Child Study club as well, the club will not meet again in connection with the P. T. A. The club has progressed nicely during the short time it has been organized under the efficient leadership of Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar as president. Having been organized for the purpose of obtaining self culture at home with twelve members which has increased to approximately thirty-five members, it soon become a member of the Federated Clubs.

The club takes up such topics as "What a Young Child Means to its Parents," "What Every Mother Should Know," "The Value of Great Literature in the Training of Children," and "The Importance of Kindergarten Methods to the Child, the Home, and Civic Life." The club has only begun to reap the wonderful things in store for them as the programs are given with the purpose to inspire the mothers to give their best to their children.

Kingsmill Couple Are Married Saturday at Local Methodist Church

Miss Lorene Dale Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Barnes of Kingsmill, and Lane D. Coss of Muskogee, Okla., were married Saturday evening at 6 o'clock in the Methodist church, with the Rev. Joe Strother officiating. Only immediate friends and relatives were present.

Mrs. Coss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes of Kingsmill, and until recently has been attending the local high school. Mr. Coss is the radio operator of the Texas Company in Kingsmill. The young couple will make their home in Kingsmill following their return from a brief honeymoon trip.

Civic Club Urges Tree Planting in Pampa This Spring

The precious tradition of Texas hospitality should be preserved. How can we impress the spirit of hospitality upon visitors more forcefully than by making our town attractive. Beautiful trees, grassy lawns and gayly colored flowers are pleasing to the eyes of every one.

Let us plant trees. Make this spring one ever to be remembered by the greatest tree planting ever known in Pampa. The following poem by Charles Divine beautifully expressed thought:

"I like a town that sees
The sacredness of trees,
Acknowledging their right
To whisper half the night
And all the day to talk

I like a reverent town
That hews no tree trunk down,
But lets it stand to know
Sidewalks around can go
As if; I comprehend,
You were here first, My Friend."
—C. I. C. club.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang Entertain Friends Saturday Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Billie Lang entertained a number of friends Saturday evening at a delightful bridge party.

The games were enjoyed until a late hour after which refreshments were served to the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lemons, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Hestand, Mr. and Mrs. George Howsan of Denver, Colo., and H. L. Dickson of Tulsa.

Earns Living With Traps

Trapping has proved a profitable venture for Miss Helen Witzel, daughter of a farmer near Hatfield, Wis. She has been running an eight-mile trapline in the vicinity of Black River and this winter has caught 23 musk, 161 muskrats and 22 weasels. She expects to clear about $1200 for the season.

Wisconsin Women Engage in Contest for G. O. P. Seat

A feminine contest for one of Wisconsin's seats in the republican national convention is being waged by Mrs. Adalin Wright MacCauley (left), a "regular," and Zona Gale (right), "independent." Mrs. MacCauley led the American Legion Auxiliary accompanying the second A. E. F. to Paris.

MILWAUKEE—Zona Gale, famous novelist, and Mrs. Adalin Wright MacCauley, who led the American Legion auxiliary on its invasion of Paris with the second A. E. F., will stage a feminine race for a seat in the Republican national convention from Wisconsin.

Miss Gale, a La Follette follower, and Mrs. MacCauley, who belongs to the regular wing of the Republican party in the Badger state, are running for delegate-at-large.

Miss Gale's name will appear on the same ticket with those of Senators Robert M. LaFollette and John J. Blaine, who were endorsed by an independent Republican conference held in Milwaukee.

Mrs. MacCauley received her endorsement, along with other "regulars" at a party caucus.

The tutor of Lulu Bet, whose home is in Portage, Wis., is no novice in politics. She has been active for several years in the independent Republican councils and is a member of the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. MacCauley, wife of a lawyer of Menomonie, Wis., is making her debut in Wisconsin politics.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Stewed figs, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, muffins, marmalade, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Vegetable soup, toasted cheese sandwiches, canned pears, molasses cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Baked flang steak, scalloped potatoes, buttered cauliflower, French endive with Roquefort cheese dressing, canned cherry pie, milk, coffee.

Two tablespoons fine sifted cracker crumbs sprinkled evenly over the bottom of the pie crust before adding the cherries will insure a delightfully thickened juice and an unsoaked shell when the pie is served. Any soda cracker can be used. If a small six-inch pie is made, 1 tablespoon crumbs is sufficient.

Baked Flank Steak
Two pounds flank steak, 2 sweet green peppers, 1-2 large Spanish onion, 2 sprigs parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 teaspoon mustard, 1-2 teaspoon sugar, 2 cups canned tomatoes.

Remove membrane from steak and trim neatly. Grease a dripping pan a little larger than the steak with beef suet. Remove seeds from pepper and parboil five minutes. Plunge into cold water and rub off thin coating. Remove seeds and pith and mince flesh. Sauté onion and parsley. Rub tomatoes through a coarse sieve to remove seeds. Mix salt, pepper, sugar and mustard and rub thoroughly into meat. Add minced vegetables to strained tomatoes. Heat dripping pan very hot and lay meat in it. Pour over tomato mixture, cover pan and bake one hour in a moderately hot oven.

The acid in the tomatoes helps to make the meat tender.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lang and W. H. Davidson left Sunday for Guthrie, Okla., and other northern points including Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Witt and children of Amarillo visited relatives in Pampa over the week-end.

The ladies of the Baker P. T. A. will hold a pie sale Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Crawford spent the week-end in Amarillo.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Morris were Amarillo visitors Saturday.

Progress by Error.

"We are thoroughly committed to the principle that they are better fitted to govern themselves than any one else is to govern them," he said. "We do not claim immediate perfection but we do expect continual progress. Our history reveals that in such expectation we have not been disappointed. It is better for the people to make their own mistakes than to have some one else make their mistakes for them."

Attachment to the policy of peace, Mr. Coolidge declared, was second among the nations of this hemisphere only to the attachment to the principle of self-government.

Mr. Coolidge portrayed his interest in the development of shipping between North and South America and the construction of railroads and highways to serve as feeders. He declared that he is asking the United States Congress for authority to send American engineering advisors to whatever Central and South American nations request their services.
