City board approves gazebo design

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Construction of a gazebo in Dr. V. E. von Brunow Park is another step closer to becoming a reality.

The design of the gazebo was approved by the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Thursday night, and approval was given to Bill Hildebrandt to contact architects regarding the building.

According to the action taken by board members, plans for the gazebo include one entrance, a brick floor, wrought iron 6-posts, wiring for one light and roof studding.

Hildebrandt will contact architects to seek qualifications and experience in constructing a gazebo. He will report back to the advisory board at the next meeting. Six thousand dollars are budgeted for the structure.

Concern was expressed by board members about the trees which have been placed in the park not prospering. Reed Kirkpatrick, Parks Superintendent, said the problem was the type of trees which were planted in the park. He said the trees of concern are Virginia Pines. He said the trees and grass have differing watering requirements and it is causing concern.

Kirkpatrick suggested Ball Cypress Balsam and Cottonwood trees would be appropriate for the area in the future as the below-ground materials include caliche and concrete floor.

He told the board he has concern about the flower beds in the von Brunow Park as he does not have the time to weed the area and care for the flowers. Discussion centered on the types of flowers being grown in the park. Kirkpatrick said his degree is in forestry and not horticulture.

Board members discussed having someone "adopt" the flower beds or to plant grass in the areas. Volunteers will be sought for the project. He said Cabot and a Red Cross employee have assisted. Organizations suggested by board members included the Garden Club, Downtown Business Association and JPO.

Anyone interested in assisting on the project should contact Kirkpatrick.

Despite a forecast of sunshine and 90 degrees today, thunderstorms roamed the Texas Panhandle as the weekend started. A line of storms moving through Friday evening, turned low spots on Foster into raging torrents, flooded streets in White Deer, and spawned severe weather warnings and tornado watches across the eastern portion of the panhandle. Golf ball sized hail was reported near Higgins. Pea sized hail was reported near Clarendon. A tornado was spotted near Shattuck, Okla. The forecast for today is for sunny skies with only a slight chance of thunderstorms through Wednesday as afternoon temperatures reach into the 90s.

Miami looks to grants for court house renovation

MIAMI -- Roberts County expects a written report soon of the what an inspection team found at the courthouse last week.

A team from the Texas Historical Commission and National Trust for Historic Preservation along with an architect and engineering representatives hired by Roberts County toured the historic courthouse Friday.

"They were highly complimentary," said Roberts County Judge Vernon Cook.

The team was in Miami at the request of the county to do a survey of the Roberts County Courthouse in preparation for some structural and cosmetic work.

"We're in the planning stages of doing some upgrading," said Judge Cook. "We're looking at modifying the heating and air conditioning system and modernizing the electrical system."

He said they were also planning on doing some masonry work.

"We're looking at a general upgrade," he said.

The team included a member of the Texas Historical Commission and a representative of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, a non-profit organization with regional headquarters in Fort Worth.

"They have come up with seed money for studies," Judge Cook said. "We were fortunate enough to get matching grant funding for our courthouse."

Judge Cook said they are working with Michael Peters, an architect, and Joe Grimes, an engineer, to do an in-depth study of the courthouse.

The judge said the county hopes to get funding from the state to help with the modernization of the courthouse.

Recreation brings bucks to Pampa merchants

By NANCY YOUNG
Managing Editor

Softball is not only one of today's most popular sports, it is also an economic boon to the City of Pampa. The sport brought $180,000 into Pampa merchants in 1998, according to a report given to the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Thursday.

Shane Stokes, Recreation Superintendent, presented the report to the advisory board which listed 2,400 participants on 160 teams during the eight softball tournaments held locally in 1998. The tournament total includes the first-ever national tournament held in Pampa.

Stokes presented the number of participants and teams as well as the estimated dollars spent in Pampa during softball tournaments since 1994.

In 1994, six tournaments were held. Teams totaled 90 with 1,350 participants. Merchant revenues were $101,250. The 1995 tournaments again totaled six with 110 teams and 1,650 participants. The economic gain was $123,750.

The 1996 year was the first year a state tournament was held in Pampa. The number of teams totaled 136 with 2,040 participants. The community gained $153,000. In 1997 the town made $133,875. Seven tournaments were held with 119 teams and 1,750 participants.

During league play in 1994, the Recreation Park Softball Complex hosted 74 teams: spring league, 43 and fall league, 31. There were 1,110 players. In 1995, 84 teams, including 51 spring leagues and 33 fall leagues, participated. Players numbered 1,260.

In 1996 82 teams, including 49 spring leagues and 33 fall leagues, comprised of 1,230 players competed. The 1997 season saw 77 teams with 1,155 players playing on 50 spring leagues and 27 fall leagues.

League play saw its best year ever in 1998 with 1,470 players and 98 teams. This was

Gun debate turns to House, Senate negotiators

By LAURIE KELLMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the death of the House's gun-control bill, Congress' response to a rash of school shootings now rests with a small panel of lawmakers whose talks will start with the stricter Senate measure that had been opposed by the National Rifle Association.

Even as they left behind the marathon proceedings Friday, lawmakers of both parties were girding for battle.

They immediately began blaming each other for the 280-147 defeat of a gun-control bill only two months after bloody school shootings in Colorado and Georgia.

President Clinton, in his weekly radio address today, called the situation in Congress unacceptable.

"We can't allow the gun lobby to rewrite our laws and undermine our values," the president said in the broadcast, taped at the summit of world leaders in Cologne, Germany.

To House members, Clinton said, "You've still got an opportunity, and you've still got an obligation, to do the right thing and pass real legislation that will strengthen our gun laws, not weaken them."

GOP officials noted that Democrats comprised most of the no votes. Democrats accused Republicans of weakening the bill at the behest of the NRA.

Meanwhile, both sides huddled on strategy for looming negotiations between a small committee of House and Senate lawmakers that will be controlled by Republicans.

Minority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., said House Democrats are counting on Clinton to lead the charge for the Senate's proposed new gun controls.

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders will dispatch pro-gun control women lawmakers to make the same pitch. They will be led by Rep. Carolyn McCarthy of New York, whose husband was shot and killed on a Long Island commuter train, Gephardt said.

"They're frankly more effective than we (male lawmakers) are," Gephardt told reporters.

Asked why, he replied: "Because they're mothers" with an "earnestness and passion" that makes an impression with voters.

Although he voted for the Senate bill, Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said he hoped the final product "will be something close to what the House has done. They've done good work."

But the staunchest proponents of both sides of the issue agreed the outcome was uncertain at best.

"It's very difficult to handicap," said Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga.

"I don't think you can forecast" the outcome, Gephardt said.

The issue went off the political charts after the April 20 shootings at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., that left 15 people dead, including the two gunmen.

With Vice President Al Gore's tie-breaking vote, the Senate last month passed a measure that would extend required background checks to all sales at gun shows, including those conducted by non-licensed firearms dealers. In addition, it would require dealers to provide safety devices with all handguns; ban the importation of certain high-capacity firearms clips and impose a lifetime prohibition of gun ownership on any juvenile convicted of a serious felony.

The defeated House bill included the safety device provision. And while it would have required non-licensed dealers to conduct background checks on their customers at gun shows, an amendment by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., would have reduced the amount of time allowed for the check from three days to 24 hours in all cases. In addition, it would have defined gun shows in a way to exclude some events that are now covered.

The waiting period is crucial to the gun debate because if federal officials do not respond to the background request in the time period allotted, the purchaser may take possession of the gun.

House and Senate conferees must meet now to try to work out some compromise. Given the House's solid rejection of the gun bills, there is some doubt about whether the Congress will approve any expanded gun measures this year.

Gephardt decided Democrats stood more of a chance of increasing the waiting period if they defeated Dingell's amendment and tried to frame talks with the Senate as a choice between current law's 72-hour requirement and the Senate-passed waiting period of three business days.

"We decided we were better going into conference with current law," Gephardt told reporters.

He had lobbied his caucus hard to vote no, and on final passage, only 45 of the House's 211 Democrats voted for the bill.

By the same logic, meanwhile, Republican leaders and the NRA launched a furious last-minute lobbying effort to pass the bill with the Dingell amendment attached. House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., told leaders in a private meeting early Friday that passing the bill would give the GOP a better chance at coming out of conference with some gun control, but not so much as to turn off conservative campaign donors next year.

"You can't beat something with nothing," Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, explained. In the end, the House rejected the overall bill, and lawmakers fled town for the weekend.

years in part by hammering Democrats for votes to ban assault-style firearms and to give authorities up to five days to check backgrounds on those seeking to buy handguns.

At the same time, 37 of the 45 Democrats who defected on the gun show amendment later voted with their party to defeat the larger bill, which Democratic leaders said didn't go far enough to control guns.

The 45 party defectors were led by Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, who sponsored the amendment that would have loosened some existing restrictions on firearms sales at gun shows. An avid hunter and former NRA board member, Dingell once described agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms as "jackbooted American fascists."

Although Dingell's district is mostly suburbs south of Detroit, hunting is popular throughout the state.

Conservative, rural Democrats go their own way on gun control

By JONATHAN D. SALANT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the 45 House Democrats who bucked their party by voting to loosen background checks at gun shows hail from districts with lots of hunters or other conservative voters.

They're much more likely than other Democrats to have received donations from the National Rifle Association. And some had to stave off strong Republican challenges last fall.

"Democrats are reflecting, in many of these cases, their constituents and their districts," said Democratic political consultant Peter Fenn.

The bill that carried the divisive amendment ultimately failed in the House on Friday, but the battle over the amendment suggests that many Democrats learned a lesson from the 1994 election.

That year, the NRA and other gun groups helped the GOP capture the House for the first time in 40

(COURTHOUSE)

The team's survey is part of the Courthouse Smart Start Program.

The southwest office of the National Trust with a grant from the Meadows Foundation and in partnership with the Texas Historical Commission and Preservation Texas established the Smart Start planning grant that was awarded to 12 Texas counties in anticipation of the governor's Texas Courthouse Initiative. The last session of the legislature provided about $50 million in matching grants for the repair and restoration of historic courthouses. Gov. Bush signed the bill into law last week.

Peters and Grimes were hired by the county to prepare a plan for restoration of the courthouse. The plan is expected to be completed by Sept. 1.

The study, Cook said, is a comprehensive assessment of the building's structure, foundation, electrical system, plumbing, landscaping, safety issues and compliance with such regulations as the American with Disabilities Act. The study also included other memorials and statues on the square.

Rangers talk to relatives of suspected serial killer

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Rangers trying to find out as much as they can about a suspected serial killer are talking to police in Mexico and the wanted man's family members.

Police describe Rafael Resendez-Ramirez as a transient who hops freight trains from town to town. He is wanted in connection with five beating deaths in Texas and one in Kentucky, and is suspected in several more killings.

Although he has not been linked to the crime by evidence, police in East Texas have called Resendez-Ramirez their prime suspect in the 1998 beating death of an 82-year-old woman.

"There are a lot of similarities to some of the other murders in Texas, and it's looking like a close match," Hughes Spring Police Chief Randy Kennedy said. Kennedy said they have not yet linked Resendez-Ramirez directly to the Oct. 2, 1998, slaying of Lefie Mason.

"By next week, we should have a better idea after we finish checking our evidence with the material from the murders in Houston," Kennedy said.

Mrs. Mason was found beaten to death in her Hughes Springs home, which is about 50 yards from the train tracks that run through town, Kennedy said. The attacker entered through an unlocked window, Kennedy said.

The latest trace of Resendez-Ramirez was found at the Mexican border near Del Rio. Officers found a car stolen from the home of Noemi Dominguez, 26, whose slaying here this month has been tied to Resendez-Ramirez.

Mike Cox, a Department of Public Safety spokesman in Austin, said Rangers have been in Mexico to gather information about Resendez-Ramirez, 38, who is from Puebla.

It's "even odds" whether he fled to Mexico, Cox told the Houston Chronicle.

Rangers also are talking to family members in the United States and Mexico. Cox wouldn't reveal where the family members live in this country.

The hunt for Resendez-Ramirez has U.S. customs and immigration agents closely watching the Texas-Mexico border.

"We're all very much aware of the information the FBI has provided," said customs spokeswoman Judy Turner. "It has brought us to a state of heightened awareness that this wanted man could possibly come into the United States or we might catch someone leaving the United States."

Museum to exhibit Lone Star Pastel Society show

PANHANDLE — Two very colorful exhibits are currently showing at the Square House Museum in Panhandle this month.

Twenty-four members of the Lone Star Pastel Society have contributed one work each for a members-only show at the museum. The only thing these works have in common is the use of the "pastel" medium. Visitors can expect a remarkable array of subject matter, including landscapes, portraits, and still lifes. Twenty-four artists bring 24 techniques, from impressionistic vagueness to photographic-like sharpness.

The Lone Star Pastel Society is just four years old. Organized in May, 1995, by two Amarillo artists, it now boasts a membership of over 60 professional and avocational painters from the region, the nation, and even abroad. The Square House Museum is proud to have hosted the society's first members-only show last year and pleased to repeat the event this month.

The Lone Star Pastel Society show can be viewed in the Hazlewood Arts and Education Building gallery through Sunday, July 4.

In the Opal Weatherly Purvines gallery in the Square House Annex, visitors can view a selection of textiles from the Museum's Permanent Collection. A cross-stitch of the Square House itself, comprised of over 38,000 stitches and 84 colors, was recently donated by Eva Thorp of Panhandle. The Thorp family actually lived in the Square House in the 1920's. On loan from her family is a crewel embroidery made by the late Margaret Surratt, one of the museum founders and original board members.

There are 11 quilts and a bedspread from our collection that have not been displayed before. Several are 150 years old, dating to the middle of the 19th century. Crazy quilts predominate, but there are examples of the Grandmother's Fan, Democrat Rose, Nine Patch, Windmill, Bear Paw, and other patterns.

The visitor can learn about the methods and techniques of manufacture as well as enjoy the artistic aspects of these works. Material and tools associated with the cross-stitch and crewel works are on display, as well as quilting scraps and piece blocks provided by Museum Educator Viola Moore. This display of hand-woven textiles can be viewed through Wednesday, June 30.

Several experienced quilters from the Panhandle community are at work every Thursday afternoon from about 1-3 p.m. in the Freedom Hall gallery. Visitors are welcome to observe and converse with these talented women.

Both the pastel and textile exhibits can be viewed during normal Museum hours: Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and from 1-5 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the museum is free.

Sul Ross offers Pathway to Academic Socialization and Success program

ALPINE — Pathway to Academic Socialization and Success is the name chosen for Sul Ross State University's new program aimed at helping students succeed in college. The program is funded by a grant from Houston Endowment Inc., and will begin this summer with a two-week residential experience. Participating students will learn academic, study, and socialization skills conducive to being successful in college. The program will accommodate fifty incoming freshmen in the first year, 100 the second year.

The dates for the summer portion of the program are Aug. 2-13. During this period, students will receive individual advising, mentoring, academic support, and enrichment opportunities, in addition to instruction in academic areas. This two-week summer program is entirely free to students, thanks to the generosity of the Houston Endowment Inc. In addition to free room and board and all course materials, each student participating in the summer program will receive a $100 stipend each of the two weeks of the summer program to offset incidental expenses.

Beginning in the fall semester, the selected student group will be enrolled in block scheduled courses specifically designed to allow maximum interaction and learning opportunities.

A small pilot program at Sul Ross during the summer of 1997 showed considerable success.

Manners can't be legislated

Kate B. Dickson

Associated publisher/editor

At this writing the Louisiana legislature is on the verge of passing the governor's bill requiring students to address teachers and other school employees as "ma'am" or "sir" or use the appropriate title of Mr., Miss, Ms. or Mrs.

While I certainly think children should address their elders with courtesy titles and say "ma'am" and "sir," I'm not so sure a state law is going to make much difference.

The way the bill is written, punishment for not following the law will be left up to each school district.

Besides, having good manners is not something one can legislate. Also having good manners takes practice ... lots of practice.

If any of you are into the "ma'am," etc., you know how many times it has to be repeated to a young child before he or she answers or addresses adults properly.

My great-niece Cassie is 5 and her sister Rachel is 3 and both of them have to be reminded often not to forget to do the "ma'am" and "sir" bit. I'm glad their parents, John and Angela, think having good manners is important ... because it is.

I am also glad they are willing to make time to teach their children. So many parents don't take time and, frankly, don't seem to care. All you have to do is look around or listen to know that's a fact.

Now, I had a good friend who didn't believe in it ... and she wasn't even a Yankee. She was from Washington State and moved to Arkansas as a newlywed. Her deal was that her girls should answer with a polite "yes" or "no."

But as the children grew older (both went to Catholic school) the girls started saying "yes ma'am," etc. on their own. Jan didn't object to it, telling me that the change came about "because that's what their friends say."

Once it becomes a habit, it's something that usually takes hold pretty well. I can attest to that because I used to get in trouble for saying "ma'am" when I went to boarding school in Ohio when I was in the fifth grade.

There must be Yankee nun and Southern nun difference. In Ohio the Yankee nuns made me say, "Yes, Sister," etc. "Ma'am" wasn't acceptable and drew a pretty harsh reprimand.

And you geography buffs or whatever out there, please don't call me to tell me Ohio isn't Yankee that's it's midwestern or something. When you are from Arkansas, Ohio is Yankee. Trust me on that one.

I still answer my mother using all of the above. And some older people I still call Miss Betty or Miss Charlotte or Mr. Larry Joe or whatever. Calling them by their first names just isn't something I am comfortable with and saying Mr. Jones, etc., is too formal for a close family friend.

I know a successful businessman who was hired on the basis of two things — his "yes sirs" and "no sirs" and the fact he got mad when he lost playing tennis. The company owner who hired him said these two traits — good manners and not wanting to lose — were the most important. The business particulars could be taught at that point, but not the manners and drive.

And when one thinks about it, that makes a lot of sense.

'Passenger rights' movement gets some results ...

While the action wasn't done out of the goodness of their hearts, the announcement by the airlines to institute a package of voluntary measures to improve passenger service is certainly welcome.

Under the threat of congressional action and a mountain of consumer complaints, the airlines now pledge to tell customers of the lowest available price, notify people of delays and cancellations, provide prompt ticket refunds, handled bumped passengers with fairness and meet customers' essential needs during long on-aircraft delays.

The measures were prompted by several highly-publicized incidents last winter when passengers were made to sit on runways for hours without access to food or restrooms.

Many of us who have had to sit on runways at Dallas-Forth Worth when the temperatures are near or above 100 have often hoped for relief. Hopefully, that relief will mean a return to the terminal rather than spending hours sweltering.

Left to be worked out is the issue of notifying passengers of overbooking and there is still the promise of possible legislation in order to make sure the airlines comply with their promises.

We hope Sen. John McCain and others who are behind the "passenger rights" movement won't stop their effort and will put into law some of these badly needed requirements.

Bombshell from Reform Judaism

Pundit and historian Richard Brookhiser once quipped that Reform Judaism struck him as "the Democratic Party with holidays." A recent survey conducted on behalf of the American Jewish Committee would seem to confirm that analysis.

The committee polled a cross section of Jews (not only the Reform) and found that almost 80 percent approved of the Senate's acquittal of President Clinton, 60 percent blamed Republicans for the impeachment crisis (36 percent blamed the president), and 73 percent opposed parental choice in education.

The survey further found that only 15 percent of Jews polled believed "religious observance" to be important to their Jewish identity. This statistic tends to stun non-Jews, who assume that Jews believe in Judaism. But the depressing truth is that most American Jews derive their identity not from the five books of Moses or from centuries of Jewish tradition but rather from the Holocaust and anti-Semitism. The AJC survey found that 98 percent of those polled said "remembrance of the Holocaust" was important to their Jewish identity, while only 46 percent cited "being part of the Jewish people." Fully 62 percent of Jews think anti-Semitism is a greater threat to Jewish identity than intermarriage.

Jews have a talent for self-delusion. The very fact of an intermarriage rate of hovering around 52 percent contradicts the notion of widespread anti-Semitism in America. It was Irving Kristol who said of American Christians: "They don't want to persecute us. They want to marry us."

The stubborn liberalism of American Jews is an old story — but it isn't the whole story.

Mona Charen

Syndicated columnist

Elsewhere in the news comes evidence that even in the stalwart precincts of Reform Judaism, tradition is making a comeback.

Reform has been the butt of ridicule from the other branches of Judaism for years because of its rejection of traditional Jewish practices and customs. Whereas all Orthodox and many Conservative Jewish men wear skull caps and don prayer shawls in synagogue, the Reform do not. Nor does the Reform movement recognize the continuing validity of Jewish Sabbath observance or dietary laws. The liturgy has long since been purged of most of its Hebrew. And the Reform movement has permitted female rabbis, homosexual clergy and the full participation of non-Jews in its services. (With an intermarriage rate estimated at 60 percent, the Reform movement was under pressure to permit participation by the non-Jewish spouses of its members.)

In another significant break with Jewish tradition, the Reform movement accepts children of Jewish fathers and non-Jewish mothers as Jews. The other denominations do not.

But just as orthodoxy is making a comeback among Christians, the same phenomenon is transforming the Jewish landscape. Orthodox Jews are becoming even stricter. Conservative Jews are taking on more Orthodox practices (like more rigorous study of Talmud). And the Reform, in a vote of their leadership recently, have decided to encourage traditional rituals. Skeptics will note that the resolution to adopt "guiding principles" had to be extremely vague in order to pass. Nonetheless, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the rabbinical group that sets policy for the denomination, voted 324-68 to endorse wearing yarmulkes, keeping kosher and learning Hebrew.

Even if this amounts to nothing more than lip service, it is highly significant. It's on the order of People for the American Way endorsing tax cuts, opposing quotas and condemning abortion. The Reform movement was established in Germany in the last century to throw over nearly everything that set Jews apart from other Germans. Like the ethical culturalists who came later, the Reform liked Jewish morality but disliked the obligations of traditional Judaism.

Perhaps they are finally recognizing that without spiritual roots, the cut flowers of Jewish morality (Will Herberg's wonderful image) cannot bloom for very long. The steady loss of Jews to assimilation has led the Reform movement in the past to ever more liberal accommodations. This resolution amounts to a move in the opposite direction — toward spiritual substance. As Rabbi Laura Geller of Beverly Hills told The New York Times, "For too many people, Reform Judaism is a Judaism of minimalism; of what we don't do. This will enable people to think about what calls them." Yes, or Who.

Quality care can be luck of the draw

Most days in most ways, your average American hospital is a modern miracle. But there are other days.

Let me tell you about a few that have come to your reporter's attention lately.

First, there's a person I've known a long time who suddenly wound up in a big-city emergency room. He'd been mugged and was beaten pretty badly.

An older, apparently very experienced X-ray operator quickly got into an argument with the younger resident physician on duty.

The older woman dominated, the younger woman cowered, the patient shuddered, and the whole scene dissolved into chaos.

Was there some kind of problem with the equipment, or with the patient himself? The patient didn't know. These health-care professionals didn't even try to explain.

Whenever the patient would say, "Will someone please tell me what the hell is going on here — and, more importantly, will someone please help me?" the answer came back every time as a version of "Just lie there and be quiet." Sometimes that answer was delivered matter-of-factly, sometimes rudely, but never politely.

After several hours, a more senior physician — or at least a more commanding one — took over. Some sense of order was restored, and the patient finally was treated.

Then now calls the experience "an eye-opener." He then calls the experience "an eye-opener." He then calls the experience "an eye-opener."

Dan Rather

Syndicated columnist

The parents rushed the child to the nearest hospital. It happens to be one of the country's best known.

The family's experience was awful. There were a series of delays, misdiagnoses, doctors' turf wars and open arguments among surgeons, internists and pediatricians.

With the child's condition worsening and no sign of abatement in the doctors' squabbling, the family sought to move the child by ambulance to another hospital.

People — mostly doctors — at the first hospital sought to prevent this. And not politely so. The parents prevailed, the child was moved, other doctors quickly diagnosed the ailment, and the child survived.

The family's reaction to their hospital troubles: "We're still astounded and angry."

Lastly, the most recent case in point: A husband's internal pain gets much worse. He awakens his wife. They call 9-1-1 and get to a hospital emergency room.

There the man lies for 12 hours — 12 hours.

Doctors come and go, so do nurses. Some of the doctors conduct classes with younger doctors over the patient. So do some of the nurses. At least that's the way it appears. Yet again, no attempt is made to explain anything to the patient or his wife.

So far as the wife could tell, nobody ever took charge. No diagnosis was made. A young doctor got into a shouting match with a lab technician — which ended with the technician cursing at the doctor and then at the astonished patient's wife.

After pleading with several hospital authorities for help, and receiving none, the wife took her husband out of the hospital and back home. She then got him admitted to another hospital, where they were treated reasonably quickly and well.

None of these were HMO cases, which some people may find surprising.

None of these cases happened in small or rural hospitals.

These were big-time, important medical facilities, and these were patients with the means to pay for the finest care.

Now we've all heard of the stress hospital personnel face every day. Many of them aren't paid well or treated with much respect. But how many excuses can you make for this kind of behavior?

Do these cases tell us something important about possible trends in American medicine? The answer may very well be no. But cases like these do make you wonder.

'Beggars and Choosers': Explores world of TV, from the inside out

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If nothing else, the timing of "Beggars and Choosers" confirms its basic message: The network TV business is plumb crazy.

Consider how this new Showtime series (its two-hour opener aired Saturday at 10 p.m. EDT, followed by 20 weekly hours) is part of the TV renaissance that cable brings viewers each summer while broadcast networks, citing too few hot-weather viewers to justify much besides reruns, help assure cable's growth at the networks' expense.

Plumb crazy, huh? It is this crazy world that the comedy-drama "Beggars and Choosers" ambitiously and amusingly invades — specifically, the struggling LGT Network, for which Rob Malone serves as head of programming.

Played by Brian Kerwin, Malone is a decent guy, a family man, an idealist trying to Do the Right TV Thing.

"When I took this job," Malone tells his wife, "I had hopes of putting things on the air that I thought people were gonna be talking about the next day around the water cooler. Now, half the time, I'm just putting out fires."

At LGT, there are fires aplenty and lots of people playing with matches. They include the goatish patriarch who owns the network (Bill Morey); Malone's sexy, two-faced VP of Development (Charlotte Ross); the network's sole star, Parker Meridian (Paul Provenza), who's holding up LGT for a huge new contract; and many more.

Malone's pet project, a drama about rough-and-ready survivalists called "The Mountaimen," is also getting a little too hot to handle: Each week, its riled-up heroes rail against consumer products, advertising and even television itself.

"Beggars and Choosers" was cooked up by Brandon Tartikoff, the late NBC programming whiz who has explained that, in TV, the Beggars are those pitching the ideas, shows and stars to the Choosers, those empowered to green-light or take a pass.

Tartikoff, who died of Hodgkin's disease two years ago at age 48, enjoyed an unequalled reign as a Chooser. At 30 he became the youngest-ever network entertainment president and then lifted NBC from last in the ratings to first with such breakthrough series as "Hill Street Blues," "The Cosby Show," "Cheers" and "Miami Vice," which he famously got rolling with two words: MTV Cops.

Leaving NBC the winner of its sixth consecutive season in 1991, Tartikoff eventually became an independent producer. It was in this new role of Beggar that he co-created "Beggars and Choosers" with novelist-screenwriter Peter Lefcourt.

Showtime chose the project in 1996 and a script was completed by the spring of 1997. That August, Tartikoff died.

"The series was revived last fall," says Lefcourt, "and Showtime ordered more scripts. Then they pushed the button in the middle of January. We had no sets, no cast. But we started shooting March 8. It was quite a track and meet."

Lefcourt is phoning from Vancouver, where, until November, "Beggars" will be in production. This far-from-L.A. outpost invites one of the series' many in-jokes: A Malone associate grumbles that a prospective LGT show will flop because the producers "couldn't get any good actors to relocate to Vancouver."

"Beggars," by contrast, has a fine cast also including Isabella Hofmann, Carol Kane and Stuart Margolin.

Where the series falters is in its stories, which — to judge from the first installment — don't reflect the seen-it-all knowingsness Tartikoff should have delivered. Insulated as fiction, this series was supposed to be the repository for the really juicy stuff he held back from his make-nice memoir in 1992.

"Beggars," billed as an affectionate satire, comes across as a little too affectionate and somewhat too generic. For example, when Malone is forced to get the boss a hooker — an incident based on real-life network big-wigs whom Lefcourt wouldn't name — it smacks of comic formula.

Tartikoff's unforeseen absence doesn't explain why "Beggars" isn't crazy enough. At least, it shouldn't. He is not the only insider to glimpse TV's craziness.

"One of the joys about doing this series," says Lefcourt, who will serve as a writer as well as producer, "is that we don't need any technical advisers. It's our lives."

And the craziness is only increasing.

The ordered craziness in which Tartikoff triumphed at NBC is gone forever — and no one knew it better than Tartikoff. He explained his memoir's title, "The Last Great Ride," as "an acknowledgment that the medium has changed so irrevocably."

It is certainly a whole new world for his make-believe counterpart, Malone, who in "Beggars" confronts such ominous changes as his teen-age son's preference for the Web over TV. "More and more people are multitasking," Malone says. "The market's fragmenting. There are more and more choices out there."

Choices like Showtime, which, along with the rest of cable and the Internet and even the Fox network, were of no concern to Tartikoff.

"I'd like to be remembered as the person who had the most fun doing the job of playing television," he wrote in his book.

Fun? Malone, a nice guy in an industry careening beyond crazy, doesn't seem to be having any.

The audience for "Beggars" may not have quite enough.

Chlorine makes purifying sounds with new release

By JOEY GUERRA
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — With the Tuesday release of Chlorine's "Primer" (Time Bomb Recordings), the Houston music scene may again get a nationally successful rock band to call its own.

The closest recent thing to that has been Austin's Fastball, who may go the one-hit-wonder route after scoring big with the modern-rock hit, "The Way."

With "Primer," the four-member rock outfit Chlorine seems poised to repeat that success and hopefully take it even farther.

Since solidifying its current lineup a few years ago, Chlorine has paid its dues the usual way: an endless barrage of local club shows. The band eventually earned its way onto bigger gigs, such as the annual Buzzfest and opening for national acts Dogstar and Cheap Trick.

Chlorine — vocalist/guitarist Mark Fain, guitarist Chris Henrich, bassist Jared Mueller and drummer Eddie Travis — seeps its sound in heady guitar riffs and power-pop choruses, an affecting answer to the lightweight pretty boys of alternative radio.

Credit "Primer" producer Matt Hyde (Monster Magnet, Porno For Pyros) for keeping the band's sound tight and focused. He doesn't allow Chlorine to reach beyond its capabilities at this early point in the game. This makes for a rather satisfying effort.

The band's only misstep comes when the volume is cranked up on Gravity.

The searing guitar is impressive, but overall, the attempt at head-banging doesn't fit in with the rest of the album.

Chlorine cites The Cure, Cheap Trick and Aerosmith as influences, but its style is decidedly '90s on tracks such as "Way Out," the album's melodic kickoff track that is anchored by a distinct guitar lick; and "Before Too Long," a hard-driving blend of vocals and instrumentation.

Fain is the band's chief songwriter, and he doesn't stray from the usual odes to tortured love (And who are you stuck with now/How does he put you down) and ambiguous musings on life's complexities (I'm always hanging from nooses/From someone else's fault).

"Don't Even Care," the first single, builds to an intense frenzy, combining Cure-inspired guitar riffs, a pulsing drum beat and Fain's throaty vocals. With his bad-boy snarl and pleading delivery, Fain comes off like an angrier version of matchbox 20's Rob Thomas.

"Primer" is ripe with potential hit singles, including "Back Down" and "Get to Tomorrow," but it's the album's quietest moment, "Over You," that could provide Chlorine with its biggest success. Buoyed by a gentle drum beat, Fain turns down the rock-star ranting for a contemplative delivery. It's an unaffected moment that could find its way into the hearts of lots of radio listeners.

Father's Love Is Felt in Force When His Son Becomes a Dad

DEAR READERS: Several years ago, Richard H. Kent, a retired colonel who served in the U.S. Air Force, sent me a poem he'd written as a tribute to his father. I have kept it in my book of special treasures. Today I'm sharing it in honor of fathers, stepfathers and grandfathers everywhere. Read on:

A BELATED GRACE
by Richard J. Kent, Springfield, Va.

Make me half the man my father was
And I'll know that I've been blest.
Give me half his courage and loving care
And a kingdom I'll possess.

When I was young and foolish I heard but I didn't hear
His words of wisdom, his sound advice.
The need to persevere.

When I grew older and wiser, I saw what I hadn't seen:
His strength to cope with adversity
And do it with dignity.

No need for the Ten Commandments
When I came to a fork in the road.

I had only to think what he would have done
And again, he'd carry my load.

Make me half the father to my two sons

As the father he was to me
And I know that I will rest at peace
Throughout eternity.

DEAR ABBY: Your columns about random acts of kindness prompt this letter. I'd like to tell you about some people I'll never forget.

I was taking the train to Oklahoma from Chicago for my Christmas vacation during World War II. I stood on the platform while all the servicemen boarded, and soon the train was packed. The conductor leaned out, announced, "There is no room for you!" and closed the door. I was standing in the snow and it was getting dark, and all I could think of was, "Will I ever get home?"

Then a couple of the cooks leaned out of the dining car and said I could ride with them. They had such wonderful smiles and laughs. They pulled me up, put an apron on me, and sat me beside a big, warm, pot-bellied stove. After they had served everyone else, they cooked a wonderful meal for me. It was so much fun.

When we arrived in St. Louis, they took my luggage and we ran through all the steam until we found the train going to Oklahoma. I'll never forget them, and think of them often.

ANN IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ANN: You must be a person "of a certain age" to remember train travel when the industry was in its glory. Those were wonderful times.

The dining car staff was generous to take you under their wing, and you probably received better service than any other passenger.

DEAR ABBY: I recently saw a celebrity actually show his bare backside on a daytime talk show.

If this is called "mooning," what is it called when a woman lifts up her blouse and shows her bare breasts?

Weak export market leaves grain cars idle

By ROXANA HEGEMAN
Associated Press Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A weak export market, coupled with low wheat prices, has left thousands of empty grain cars sitting idle along railroad sidings as the wheat harvest begins in Kansas.

The Burlington Northern-Santa Fe alone has more than 6,000 grain cars sitting idle because of lack of demand, said Jim Sabourin, spokesman for the BNSF in Fort Worth.

BNSF has been adding 2,000 grain cars per year to its fleet, and last fall the company established a 24-hour grain desk at Fort Worth, he said.

"We don't anticipate any problems keeping up with the projected demand," Sabourin said.

Jim Rosacker, who handles transportation issues for the Department of Agriculture in Kansas, said he has checked with other railroads that also have cars sitting idle.

"There seems to be a supply of cars and demand to transport is low because the price of wheat is low," Rosacker said.

Kansas is still in the early stages of harvest, so the critical point will be the return haul, or how fast those rail cars come back for loading after they move the first loads to markets, said Tom Tunnell, president of the Kansas Grain and Feed Association.

One thing is certain: Kansas grain elevators this harvest have fewer transportation options.

The Surface Transportation Board just last week

Jim Rosacker, who handles transportation issues for the Department of Agriculture in Kansas, said he has checked with other railroads that also have cars sitting idle.

"There seems to be a supply of cars and demand to transport is low because the price of wheat is low," Rosacker said.

approved the abandonment of two Kansas Southwestern Railway lines in Sumner, Harper, Barber and Reno counties.

The decision abandons the railroad's 57.8-mile Hardtner Branch from Conway Springs to Kiowa and a 50.9 mile portion of its Stafford Branch from Conway Springs to Olcott. The two lines wind through Sumner, Harper, Barber, Reno and Kingman counties.

The board also issued a decision on trail use for the abandoned line. The city of Kingman had requested a 3.4 mile portion of the right-of-way for recreational trail use. The decision gives the city 180 days to negotiate an agreement with the railroad.

In its request for abandonment, Kansas Southwestern Railway said it essentially is a feeder carrier for the Union Pacific Railroad. When the Union Pacific began increasing its rates, shippers began trucking their wheat to Enid, Okla., and Hutchinson.

The railroad contended it would lose $314,005 annually by continuing to run the line and would lose another $323,209 by foregoing other more profitable uses of its equipment elsewhere.

No protests or opposition to the abandonment were filed on behalf of shippers along the line, although an adjacent landowner protested the trail use proposal.

Jim Irlandi, a Wichita transportation consultant, said those lines were poorly maintained even before abandonment and had been unusable for eight or nine months.

But, he said, the decision means there will be a lot more grain trucks tearing up the roads in Kansas because it takes three and a half truck loads to haul the amount of wheat a single railroad hopper car can carry.

It also adds to transportation costs for elevators. "The country elevator will have to pay less to its patrons that deliver the grain to their elevators," he said. "They can only absorb so much money."

Irlandi said even those elevators that have alternate rail transportation, such as Kiowa, will have to pay the higher BNSF rates to Wichita.

Grain also won't be moving on some other rail lines this harvest.

The Isabel Co-op cannot move grain out by rail because the Central Kansas Railroad line across the Chikaskia River between Spivey and Zenda in Kingman County was washed out by spring floods, Irlandi said.

Last year was the first that Kansas transported more grain by truck than rail.

"What we do is haul more by truck," said Steve Fenton, manager of the OK Grain Co-op at Kiowa. "That puts a load on the highways, but you have to move the grain somehow."

"Last year, I shipped about a million bushels by truck," he said. "This year it looks like it'll be more."

There are other problems once the grain-filled trucks hit the road, elevator managers said, topped by construction delays. The delays near Fenton's OK Co-op are so bad, he has asked the Kansas Grain and Feed Association to get Gov. Bill Graves to intercede.

Another problem is getting items that normally are shipped to the elevators by rail, such as fertilizer and chemicals, Danville Co-op Manager Ken Kohlenberg said from Argonia.

"We'll have to find some other way to haul in now," Kohlenberg said. "That'll be harder than figuring out moving the grain."

Tilt fungicide exemption given for grain sorghum

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs announced recently that the Texas Department of Agriculture has been granted approval by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to issue a Section 18 specific exemption to use Tilt fungicide (propiconazole) to control ergot on grain sorghum. The specific exemption allows the use of Tilt until Dec. 31, 1999.

The specific exemption for Tilt, manufactured by Novartis, applies to all grain sorghum-producing counties in Texas. All applicable directions, restrictions and precautions on the EPA registered product label for Tilt fungicide, as well as restrictions within the EPA approval notice, must be followed.

Other restrictions include:
—Tilt may be applied at the rate of 4 fluid ounces (0.113 lb. a.i.) per acre in a minimum of 15 gallons of water per acre when ground application equipment is used, or in a minimum of 10 gallons of water per acre when aerial application equipment is used.

—Applications should be made only by certified applicators, by licensed applicators or by persons under the direct supervision of licensed applicators.

—Tilt should not be applied within 21 days prior to harvest.
—Tilt applications must not exceed more than 12 fluid ounces (0.339 lb. a.i.) per acre per season to control sorghum ergot.

—Crops intended for food, grazing or any component of animal feed or bedding should not be planted within 105 days of Tilt application, unless the crop appears on the product label.

—Tilt may be used on a maximum of 270,000 acres of grain sorghum in Texas.

For more information, contact your county Texas Agricultural Extension Office or TDA at (512) 463-7407. A copy of the EPA Approval Notice is available on TDA's web page, <http://www.agr.state.tx.us/pesticide/tilt99.htm>.

Mint glut gums up 1999 harvest for growers

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — The sweet smell of success seems elusive this season for farmers facing a national glut of mint oil.

Growers and buyers around the country are holding 3 million to 4 million pounds of mint oil, nearly the amount Washington produces annually. In Montana's Flathead Valley alone, growers have half a million pounds.

Some farmers are still trying to sell mint harvested in 1997.

A small portion of some crops have been contracted for sale at $9 a pound. Two years ago, his native spearmint sold for $11 a pound.

Even at $8 a pound, there are few takers. "You'd have trouble selling it. Nobody wants it," says Rocky Lunde, director of the Mint Industry Research Council in Stevenson.

Washington is the country's top producer of spearmint oil. It's also a major source of peppermint oil, second only to Oregon. The oil is used to flavor toothpaste, gum and mouthwash.

When demand for mint was strong a few years ago, U.S. growers began to add acreage. At the same time, countries such as India, China and Argentina emerged as major competitors.

Texas forecast is for less wheat

AUSTIN — The 1999 Texas winter wheat crop is forecast at 112.2 million bushels, 18 percent less than last year and six percent less than in 1997. The estimate is up six percent from the May forecast.

According to a June 1 survey conducted by the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, statewide yield is expected to average 33 bushels per acre, down 2 bushels from last year. Harvested acreage, at 3.4 million acres, is down 13 percent from 1998.

"Harvest was winding down in the Blacklands by June 1. Fields in the High Plains were maturing rapidly, but hail and rain have caused some damage," State Statistician Robin Roark reported.

Production on the Northern High Plains is forecast at 54.0 million bushels, decreased 14 percent from last year. Winter wheat production on the Low Plains is forecast at 22.2 million bushels, down 24 percent from last year. The Cross Timbers is estimated at 8.0 million bushels, down 27 percent from last year's production. Production in the Blacklands is forecast at 20.0 million bushels, 13 percent less than the 1998 crop. In South Texas, wheat harvest was completed by June 1.

United States winter wheat production for 1999 is forecast at 1.61 billion bushels, down 14 percent from last year and down fractionally from May 1. Yield is expected to average 44.7 bushels per acre, down 2.2 bushels from a year ago. Acreage to be harvested for grain is expected to total 36.0 million acres, 10 percent below a year ago.

Animal health focus of USDA web site

Farm animal health has taken to cyber space.

The United States Department of Agriculture's research service has launched an internet web site on the health of farm animals and fish.

Healthy Animals can be found at: <http://www.ars.usda.gov/is/np/ha/>.

Kathryn Barry Stelljes, a spokesman for the USDA's Agricultural Research Service, said the web site will be updated quarterly. I will provide links to research on the health of cattle, poultry, swine, goats, horses, wildlife and aquaculture fish.

Stelljes said the new web site was designed to help veterinarians, researchers, producers, animal industry groups and the news media. She said the site does not provide treatment advice for producers with sick animals or give individualized recommendations.

An index on the site lists ARS research covering about 70 topics, ranging from specific diseases, such as Lyme disease, to broader topics, such as nutrition, parasites and vaccines.

Each quarter, she said, one article in Healthy Animals will focus on a particular element of ARS animal research. The first issue features four ARS programs devoted to animal health and production. They are Animal Pests and Parasites, Animal Health, Aquaculture and Animal Wellbeing and Stress Control Systems.

For more information email Stelljes at stelljes@ars.usda.gov.

The Agricultural Research Service is the USDA's primary research agency.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros manager Larry Dierker has been moved out of intensive care and into a private room after undergoing surgery this week to remove tangled blood vessels from the front of his brain.

Dr. Rob Parrish, who performed the surgery Tuesday at Methodist Hospital, told Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker on Thursday that Dierker was "walking around on his own" in his private room.

Dierker, who suffered a seizure in the Astros dugout during a game Sunday, was expected to remain hospitalized into next week. He likely won't return to managing until mid-July at the earliest.

Doctors say two tangled sets of blood vessels caused 52-year-old Dierker to suffer the grand mal seizure on Sunday. An angiogram performed on Dierker the day after his surgery showed no remaining tangled blood vessels.

BASKETBALL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — David Robinson couldn't contain his emotion when he walked off the court with 62 seconds left.

"When I see us playing together and working hard together, I'm fired up," Robinson said after San Antonio took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 series with an 80-67 victory Friday night. "I'm jumping up and down. The first game I was doing that in the first quarter. I think I had finals fever. I like how in the fourth quarter we did a better job."

Robinson walked to the sideline sporting a huge smile, having turned in another efficient night of work with 16 points on 5-for-8 shooting with 11 rebounds. He hugged his little buddy, point guard Avery Johnson, and embraced other teammates as he walked to the sideline.

Robinson is only two victories away from the championship he's cherished for so long. He is in that position because the Spurs salvaged one of the ugliest games in the history of the finals, beating a Knicks team that shot 33 percent.

"We are not going to blow guys out," Robinson said. "You look up at the clock in the first half, and they're shooting 28 percent, 30 percent. You feel like you should be up by 15!"

OLYMPICS

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Italian city of Turin was awarded the 2006 Winter Games on Saturday in the first selection of an Olympic host since the Salt Lake City scandal.

Turin upset the Swiss favorite, Sion, in the final vote by the International Olympic Committee.

Four other candidates in the all-European race were eliminated earlier when a special panel reduced the field: Helsinki, Finland; Klagenfurt, Austria; Poprad-Tatry, Slovakia; and Zakopane, Poland.

Title goes to Wells

PAMPA — Pampa tennis player Mandy Wells has qualified for the USTA Super Championship Division by winning the Lubbock Hwy. 80 Championship in the Junior Major Zone.

Wells, a 1999 PHS graduate, entered the tournament as the No. 2 seed and had drawn a first-round bye. Wells defeated Aibe Sadaburo of Conroe 6-0, 6-1 in Kristen Merbel of Frisco 6-4, 6-4, and Christy Austin of Dallas, 6-4, 4-6-6-4, before meeting Eleanor Norman of San Antonio in the finals where she claimed a 6-1, 6-0 win.

Wells finished her high school career as the all-time leader in victories with 177. She advanced to the regional semi-finals the last three years.

Wells will be playing college tennis at Eastern New Mexico.

PHS junior Michael Cornelison also played in the Lubbock Tournament, losing in the consolation semi-finals.

TENNIS

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Cedric Pioline of France upset top-seeded Greg Rusedski 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) to reach the final of the Nottingham Open grass-court championship, the final tuneup for Wimbledon.

Pioline will play Kevin Ullyett of Zimbabwe, in the finals. The unseeded Ullyett outlasted Germany's David Prinosil 7-6 (7-4), 7-6 (9-7).

DEN BOSCH, Netherlands (AP) — Patrick Rafter became the favorite to win the Heineken Trophy grass court tournament after his main rival Richard Krajicek lost.

The top-seeded Krajicek was beaten in the quarterfinals by Germany's Tommy Haas 7-6 (7-3), 1-6, 6-4, while Rafter defeated unseeded Dane Kenneth Carlsen 6-3, 6-4.

The other men's semifinal will pit Romanian Andrei Pavel, who downed Sweden's Nicklas Kulti 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), against fourth-seeded Czech Karol Kucera, who topped another Swede, Jonas Bjorkman, 6-2, 6-3.

American Kristina Brandi reached today's final on the women's side by defeating Bulgarian Magdalena Maleeva 6-7 (7-4), 6-3, 6-3.

Brandi will meet Croatian Silvija Talaja, who beat Miriam Oremans of the Netherlands 6-3, 6-2 in the other semifinal.

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Third-seeded Nathalie Tauziat beat Anna Kournikova 6-4, 4-6, 8-6 to reach the championship round of the Eastbourne grass court tournament. Tauziat will face sixth-seeded Natasha Zvereva in the final. Zvereva defeated South Africa's Amanda Coetzer 6-7 (5-7), 7-6 (7-4), 10-8.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have played championship by sweeping Orlando in the finals.

The Spurs have beaten their opponents by an average of 13.4 points on the road during the postseason.

"We haven't lost on the road yet, but we also haven't played in Madison Square Garden yet, either," San Antonio guard Steve Kerr said. "It's a tough place to play."

San Antonio took advantage of the nearly 40,000 screaming fans at the first two games in the Alamodome. As the contest came to a close Friday night, the rowdy crowd shouted, "Sweep, sweep, sweep."

"We're excited about this victory," point guard Avery Johnson said. "We're not going to take our shirts off, but we are excited about it. We know we can play a lot better."

Latrell Sprewell of the Knicks said New York needs to simply concentrate on winning the first game at the Garden.

"We just got to get one," he said. "I think we just need to say 'Let's start with the first one at home.' We need to work on getting that one and then build on that."

Elie, a native New Yorker, knows the feeling of playing for a championship against the Knicks on their home court. He was with the Rockets when Houston faced New York in the NBA Finals in 1994.

The Knicks won two out of three at the Garden in that series, but the Rockets ended up winning the title in seven games.

"You can't take these guys lightly," Elie said. "That's a hell of a ball club down there. They never give up."

It's an all-Florida matchup in College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Miami beat Florida State five out of six times this season. The Seminoles can make up for it with one victory at the College World Series.

Karl Jernigan's three-run homer in the bottom of the 13th inning gave Florida State a 14-11 victory over Stanford on Friday, sending the Seminoles to the national title game for the first time since 1986.

With runners on first and third and no outs, Jernigan said he wasn't trying for dramatics when he sent a 1-0 pitch into the left-field bleachers.

"All I was trying to do was get a ball to the outfield and bring in a run. The last thing on my mind was a home run," he said.

The victory by the Seminoles made it an all-Florida final today when second-seeded Florida State (57-13) played top-seeded Miami (48-13).

"We're going to be on time and we're going to fight for 27 outs," Florida State coach Mike Martin said. "It's an uphill battle, but thank the good Lord, we're going to play for it all."

The matchup revolves around rest. The Hurricanes have it and the Seminoles don't.

Florida State used seven pitchers to beat Stanford in a game sure to leave some emotional wear on the Seminoles. The teams combined for eight home runs, 35 hits and countless momentum swings.

"Ho-hum. Just another day at the yard," Martin joked.

Miami coach Jim Morris planned to give the ball to right-hander Alex Santos (12-3, 3.00 ERA), who has a 1.35 ERA in the series. Morris also considered unbeaten right-hander David Gil (12-0, 3.19).

"You can choose either of them and not be wrong," Morris said.

Santos and Gil — and the entire Miami lineup, for that matter — are well rested. The Hurricanes won twice on the opening weekend of the series, then played again Thursday.

That's the luxury of staying on the winner's side in the two brackets. Florida State, on the other hand, lost early in the tournament to Stanford, then came back to beat the Cardinal on consecutive days.

The question is, did Florida State have enough recovery time for the championship?

"They've beaten us five out of six this year," first baseman Ryan Barthelemy said. "We're excited and ready to play. Today took a lot out of us, but we've proven we can win."

Many of the Miami players watched Friday's game from the stands.

"We're relaxed and playing well," shortstop Bobby Hill said. "We're doing the little things right."

Miami's success against the Seminoles might stem from Morris being familiar with Martin. Morris served as pitching coach in Tallahassee from 1980-81 the start of Martin's 19-year tenure.

"He was my first assistant back in 1980," Martin said. "You're not going to surprise him with anything."

Morris said he loves to coach against his old boss.

"Being a former assistant coach for Mike, this makes the game even more exciting," he said.

Braves blank Diamondbacks

PHOENIX (AP) — John Smoltz pitched six strong innings, and Chipper Jones and Ryan Klesko drove in two runs apiece as the Atlanta Braves beat the Arizona Diamondbacks 6-0 Friday night in a duel for the NL's best record.

Atlanta improved to 41-26, while the Diamondbacks fell to 40-27.

Jones and Ozzie Guillen each had three hits. Guillen got the first run with an RBI double, and the Braves won their fourth in a row and snapped Arizona's four-game winning streak.

Smoltz (8-2) recovered from a shaky start to win his third decision in four starts since he returned to the rotation on June 1.

He allowed four hits, walked two and struck out four in his second six-inning shutout stint since coming off the disabled list after recovering from inflammation in his right elbow.

Andy Benes (4-7) survived his own wildness in the fourth, when he loaded the bases by hitting Brian Jordan and walking two batters before getting Randall Simon on a grounder to second for the third out.

Letters to the editor

Darth Maul gave joy to many children

To the editor,
We the employees of Pizza Hut Delivery would like to thank the person or person's responsible for stealing Darth Maul. We had him and Skywalker outside to promote our STAR WARS promotion. Not only did you steal one of the crew member's mannequins that was used as part of a Christmas decor, but a 3-year-old's lightsaber from another employee's child. Because of your actions, we had to give the lightsabers that we were going to raffle off to this child.

The money that we in turn would have raised was going to Waiting Child which is Big Brothers/Big Sisters. So I hope that Darth Maul is worth the price others have paid because of your selfishness. The monetary value of Darth Maul may not have been much, but the joy that it gave to the children of the community who made their parents stop so they could get out and enjoy it was priceless.

Thanks Dad for all you've done for me

To the editor,
As I think back on my childhood, I consider myself to have been extremely lucky. Unlike so many families today, mine included parents of both genders. And, although I'm sure many single parents handle the responsibility admirably, I'm equally certain that both parental figures do indeed play different and, at times, even opposing roles.

When I was a small boy, I was brought outside and taught to throw a ball by one parent. I was later bathed and gently towed dry by the other. As I grew older, I was taught to swing a bat and hit the ball by one parent. I had the splinters—oh yes, this was long before aluminum bats with rubber handles—removed by the other. I was taught to slide by the one; the cuts and scrapes cleaned and dressed by the other.

In high school, still throwing, hitting, and sliding, I received constructive criticism from the one and afterward, a gentle, "You looked so handsome out there" from the other. As I began to excel at the game, the one said, "You need to start thinking about where you're going with this," while the other promised, "No matter what you decide, we'll still love you."

The one: "Focus on the game!" The other: "Have fun while you can."

The one: "You're a man now, act like one!" The other: "You're growing up so fast."

The one: "Here's the key to the car, be careful!" The other: "Have a wonderful time at the prom."

Then the day came when, in front of thousands, I focused intently on the pitch, swung a level swing, and put the ball into the cheap seats. I made my obligatory trip around the bases, slapped so many hands that my own were raw, and tipped my hat to the fans in the stands. And later, when the camera came in and caught me off guard, the only thing I could think to say was, "Hi, Mom."

Well, it's time to give credit to the one, having already acknowledged the other. Thanks Dad. I made it to the big leagues. In a way, we both did.

Celanese sites receives safety awards

DALLAS — Employees at five Celanese Chemicals sites operated throughout 1998 without a lost workday. To recognize this accomplishment, the Washington, D.C.-based Chemical Manufacturers Association has awarded its Certificate of Achievement to three Celanese manufacturing sites — Pampa, Clear Lake and Bucks, Ala.; a chemical terminal in Rock Hill, S.C.; and the company's technical center at Corpus Christi.

Each facility has operations that exceed 20,000 employee hours per year.

"Environmental health and safety is one of the key areas in which we must excel to be ultimately successful. These certificates recognize our employees for their collective commitment to health and safety performance improvement under CMA's Responsible Care Program," said Rick N. Shaw, president, Celanese Chemicals - Americas.

Celanese Chemicals and Acetate is a world leader in the production of commodity chemicals and acetate products. Celanese had worldwide sales of $3.8 billion in 1998 and employs about 11,000 people. Celanese is a member of the Frankfurt-based Hoechst Group. The Hoechst Group has announced in 1999, subject to the approval of its shareholders, it plans to spin off most of its industrial businesses including Celanese into a new entity to be called Celanese AG, based in Frankfurt.

Celebrating Fathers

As we pay tribute to all the fathers today, there are many types of fathers who compose the fatherhood of the world.

By Nancy Young
Managing Editor

On the last Father's Day of the 20th century, not all fathers are head of a household with a job, a wife, two kids, two cars in the garage and have a white picket fence around the family dwelling.

Fathers are married, single, and divorced. Many are new fathers and are eagerly giving their sons and daughters as much knowledge as their little minds can store. Most older fathers who have graduated to becoming grandfathers and great-grandfathers are happy to relinquish the reins of parenting young people to their children and grandchildren. While the older fathers love their children, these men generally welcome the time of the "seasons" and accept that it is now time for their children to become fathers and grandfathers.

Many are raising or are assisting in raising other men's children. These step-fathers probably have the most mercurial family life.

There are men who are raising children without a mother in the household while some fathers have never married the child's mother. Current organization of some families has resulted by choice, while others have been by death. Many exceptional people enjoy parenting and children so much they have decided to add to their family by becoming foster parents.

For five years before he and his present wife, Brenda, married four and one-half years ago. He was the father of a 14-year-old teenager, Katie. Brenda was the mother of Tausha, 16, and Laci, 13.

Three teenagers in one family is never an easy mixture, even with both parents being the biological parents. Not surprisingly, blending the two families totaling three teenage girls proved challenging at times. Katie came to live with her father just as the marriage began between Johnnie and Brenda, and she was also getting to know her new step-mother and step-sisters.

Making rules all could live with and trying to back each other up was what Johnnie and Brenda settled upon shortly after their marriage began. "All in the new family had to compromise. We found that if we let time pass, things will generally smooth themselves out," said Johnnie. "Kids try to set the limits. They need to know that parents set the rules and what the limits are."

"I had to stand on the sidelines sometimes while Brenda and her ex-husband, Gary, worked out issues concerning Tausha and Laci as I'm not their birth father. I'm glad they can communicate for the ben-

While Marcus misses seeing his sons on a daily basis, he is certainly enjoying spending time with them this summer.

The young father said he plans to relax and take it easy on Father's Day, perhaps have a barbecue. He knows he is going to spend the day with his sons.

The two boys and their father will take a vacation to Six Flags before they return to their mother. These few weeks are certain to be memories for both father and sons. While Marcus is now single, he is still very graduated from Pampa High and is preparing to enter the Air Force in November. She is working for Dr. Kenneth L. Royse until her enlistment date.

All five have gone through tears and have turned full circle. Tausha, Laci, and Katie maintain close relationships with their other parent.

Combining five people into a new family causes emotions of all kinds, but it is not impossible. Being a father and a step-father can be tricky, but it is not impossible.

much a father. Kevin Woods is the father of two sons, Taylor Shea Waters, 4 years, and Kade Curtis Woods, 7 months.

He and his wife, Jeree, are a blended family, but he loves Taylor very much, saying, "I'm not a new father (after the birth of Kade), because I have Taylor." He considers both boys as his. He said that Taylor is very excited about Kade's birth. "It's gone great. I love being a father. It's great," he said.

Kevin said he plans to play golf and have a cookout for Father's Day, and enjoy his sons.

Ken Rheams is a grandfather of two boys, and he is very proud of those two grandsons. "I like being a grandfather," said Rheams.

His two grandsons, Brandon, 5 years, and Jacob, 5 months, both live in Pampa. This is very pleasing to Rheams as he gets to enjoy them more. He has recently been on hand to watch Brandon's T-Ball games.

"I feel good. The boys make me younger. It is nice to have them living close to home," said Rheams.

Their parents are Charles and Kim Grimsley.

Still others are a father-figure to children who have no fathers in their lives. While many people refer to many of the current family structures as dysfunctional, others describe the changes in society as realism.

Not all men who are birth fathers want the responsibility, and do not acknowledge the financial obligation to their children. These males are called dead beat fathers. While it is the children who continue to suffer most from lack of emotional development, psychological enrichment and financial assistance, the situation has not been solved.

Still, many other fathers do acknowledge their responsibilities. As the saying goes, "Anybody can be a father, but it takes a special man to be a dad."

Johnnie Cook is both a father and step-father. After his divorce, he remained sin-efit of the girls," he said. "Communication makes it a lot easier."

One of the milestones in their relationship was when the girls said to him, "I love you," he said. "We have all really come a long way. I had to just be myself, and be consistent. I wasn't going to lie."

He reported the process took a couple of years and as the new marriage and family was established, "There were hard feelings, and there are scars, but it is better. You can't blame the girls, though," said Johnnie. "Brenda and I chose each other. Out of love for us, the girls accepted and grew to love our choices."

He reports he is really happy the way the family has turned out. Tausha is now 22, married and is serving with the U. S. Navy. Katie, 19, is living in Amarillo and is a student at West Texas A&M. Laci recently Marcus Hall is a single father. His two sons, Christopher, 4, and Hunter, 2, moved to Walker, La., with their mother in February. The two boys are spending a few weeks with their father this summer.

While there are all different kinds of fathers, a father's love for his children remains the same no matter what type of father they are. Happy Father's Day to all fathers.

 GUNSMITH ON DUTY - TUES. AND FRIDAY ONLY

Majority of Texans in House support loosening restrictions on gun shows

WASHINGTON (AP) - Most of Texas' House delegation, including a cluster of conservative Democrats from rural areas, were part of a narrow majority that early Friday voted to loosen restrictions on sales at gun shows.

The 218-211 vote, which marked a victory for the National Rifle Association, was bitterly denounced by President Clinton.

"So one more time, the Congress of the United States ... said, 'We don't care what's necessary to protect our children. We can't possibly bear to make anyone in the NRA mad,'" Clinton said in an exchange with reporters in Cologne, Germany.

All 13 of Texas' House Republicans voted to limit background checks for firearms purchasers at gun shows to 24 hours - short of the 72-hour limit approved by the Senate.

The state's 17 Democrats split on the background checks. Nine of them were among the 45 Democrats who joined with a GOP majority to loosen restrictions at gun shows.

They were: Reps. Gene Green of Houston, Ralph Hall of Rockwall, Nick Lampson of Beaumont, Solomon Ortiz of Corpus Christi, Silvestre Reyes of El Paso, Ciro Rodriguez of San Antonio, Max Sandlin of Marshall, Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Jim Turner of Crockett. Democrats could not unite against the gun show provision, many of them said, because of skittishness left over from 1994 election losses that they blamed on the House's gun control committee.

While en route to Geneva on Wednesday, Clinton called the Democrat who now holds Brooks' seat - Rep. Nick Lampson of Beaumont - from Air Force One to shore up support for the pending gun restriction votes. The call appeared to have little effect.

Later in the day, Lampson issued a statement saying: "I will not overreact and support legislation that punishes sportsmen, like me, who use firearms responsibly."

Gun control advocates maintain the 72-hour period is needed to ensure that felons or others prohibited from gun ownership don't buy weapons at gun shows.

Supporters of the measure - pushed by the House's senior Democrat, Rep. John Dingell of Michigan - said it would help restore the rights of law-abiding citizens. "To go beyond this is simply to harass innocent law-abiding citizens and to hurt people who love to go to gun shows," said Dingell, who is a former NRA board member.

Current law requires federally licensed gun dealers to conduct background checks on customers at gun shows, but does not cover sales by private individuals at the same events.

Dingell's provision would cover fewer gun shows than current law and would give the government only 24 hours to complete background checks, rather than the three business days that is now the case. It also would extend the shortened checks to sales at gun shows by private vendors who set up tables but do not have licenses and are not required to perform the checks.
