HOME TOWN TALK

By Beddy

Our comments of yesterday relative to need for voting on a county road bond issue has been followed by the suggestion, that the city of Big Spring is very much in need of more street paving.

Reminding us of the comment heard recently from a resident who declared that, although he drove his automobile 1,800 miles on a vacation trip this past summer the roughest riding he encountered was the stretch between the Big Spring business district and his home when he returned from his long tour.

That is not repeated for the intention of "running down" our town but because we are quite sure the fellow was right. It is not even an argument that we do need much street paving.

The city officials, it appears, are following a logical course in developing municipal services and improvements. Paving has to be torn up too often if best to make way for various utility lines underground. But when sewer, gas and water main are built ahead of the paving in every instance possible this waste and inconvenience is largely eliminated.

As we all know, the city right now is in the midst of a sewer and water system expansion program. When this has been finished it appears to us the citizenship itself ought to set its own standards with reference to street paving. For the property owners must pay the bill.

There is, however, no good reason why representative citizens of the county should not get together and discuss plans for paving the state highways in Howard county, as well as a program for systematic development of important county roads.

Delay is wasteful in this matter. It costs less to drive over paved roads than over rough dirt roads. Proper development of any county today is dependent largely upon railroads and highways. We are all doing our part toward making the T. & P. N. construction possible. We all ought to do our part toward making highway construction in the county possible.

West Texas Fair To Open Monday For Six Days

ABILENE, Texas, Sept. 27. (AP)—Abilene will be host next week to thousands of citizens of Taylor and adjoining counties during the 14th annual West Texas Fair from Monday through Saturday night.

Plenty of entertainment is in store for visitors, and despite the drought that has materially reduced crop harvests and affected livestock ranges, all departments in the exhibit halls are being filled with excellent products of the farm and ranch.

And due to hard times, particular stress this year is being laid on the third of the exposition, Wednesday, termed "Abilene Loyalty Day," when Abilene citizens will turn out en masse after a campaign this week for admissions paid in advance. All passes will be revoked, including press and police slips during the day, and even fair officials will be expected to take their turn at the gates with cash in hand for entrance.

For this day, a half-holiday in all official circles of the city has been declared, and many other offices and business establishments will be closed so that employees may attend the fair.

Automobile races have been dropped from the program this year, but motorcycle racing, which took instantly on its initial showing, July 6, during the annual automobile races, has been instituted in its stead. A full card of motorcycle races has been slated for Tuesday afternoon, the second day.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoon's entertainment program will be featured by rodeo exhibitions, with over 20 entries carded. The entries include much imported stock.

Two football games also are scheduled, both featuring Abilene high school's Eagles, 1923 state high champion. Monday afternoon the Eagles pit their skill against Big Spring and Friday clash with Sweetwater.

An added entertainment feature this year is a terrapin derby for which more than 3,500 of the slow-traveling turtles have been corralled.

Officials expect the largest dairy cattle and sheep division in history, with the dairy department showing many out-of-state entries. Fully 1,500 fowls are expected in the poultry division.

A "Broadway Musical Comedy" company will feature its closing performance with a stage wedding in all its brilliant setting before the grandstand. And it's to be a real wedding, but principals have not yet been announced.

Prizes and exhibitors' premiums total approximately $10,000.

Sterling Forces To Plan Course In Next Session

BY THE POLITICAL ANALYST AUSTIN, Sept. 27.—A pre-session caucus between Ross S. Sterling, his administrative leaders, and legislators willing to cooperate, on policy legislation for next January has been discussed here by friends of the administration.

None had definite knowledge whether such a conference will be brought about by the new nominee for governor. But, if held, they foresaw it would deal with three things:

- 1. What shall be attempted in public policy legislation, including tax reforms.
2. Procedure to accomplish it.
3. Mode and extent of governor and legislature's cooperation.

If such a preliminary discussion is held and a program adopted, it was expected to mean that the governor's first message, recommending legislation, would deal with subjects on which he and substantial numbers of lawmakers had agreed upon as desirable and capable of enactment.

Another advantage of the procedure was pointed out, to take away the individuality of authorship and to present the measures as the composite judgment of representatives, senators and the governor.

The plan was praised as giving far greater assurance of success of proposals on taxation and other public policy matters, than could the simple advocacy of any author, or the recommendation of a governor to a legislator whose members had taken no part in adopting the proposal.

Necessity of putting machinery in motion to adopt some of the recommendations of the party platform was said to imply some discussion and action before the legislature meets, or at least before the governor is sworn in a week after it meets.

Among other things deep as subject matter for a conference was comprehensive steps dealing with drought relief—both as to the present emergency in many counties, and as to providing in advance so as to deal with a similar situation whenever it might arise in future.

Air Mail Schedules Show Connections Here Between Two Lines; S.A.T. Man Visits

Announcement of the opening schedules for ships plying the government's new southern transcontinental air mail lines, which will converge in Big Spring, and a conference in Fort Worth of officials of Southern Air Transport and allied groups of the Aviation Corporation, which will operate the line, were developments of Saturday following official announcement Friday of the exact routes and the depot points on the lines.

The schedules show that inauguration of this service, October 15, will place the city at the junction of two lines that will carry air mail on direct connections from coast to coast and eastward via two routes.

Marshall Here Jerry Marshall, operations manager of Southern Air Transport, with Howard Woodall, one of its veteran pilots at the controls, landed here at 10 o'clock Saturday morning for fuel and weather reports. They were enroute to Fort Worth after an inspection tour to Los Angeles, preparatory to opening the air mail service.

Mr. Marshall said that some improvements would have to be made to the local field, which his company operates under lease from the Big Spring Airport Inc., a corporation of local citizens who subscribed the funds used in purchasing and equipping the airport. He will return here in a few days and go into detail with his recommendations, he said.

Eastbound mail will be given a connection at Fort Worth for the route to Chicago including Oklahoma City, Kansas City and other cities eastward. The westbound planes leaving Atlanta in the morning will connect there with air mail from Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other Eastern cities reaching Shreveport, Dallas and Fort Worth in the afternoon. Eastbound mail will have more rapid handling from the Pacific Coast via San Antonio and Brownsville connecting at the latter place for the City of Mexico and Central America.

Trimeter Planes On the new routes trimeter planes will be used with a flying speed eastward of 125 miles an hour and 115 miles an hour westward. Birmingham will be made a stop on the route out of Atlanta as soon as its new municipal airport is completed which will permit the handling of the larger type of planes.

Three Hours The flying time between San Antonio and Big Spring will be 3 hours 5 minutes. Ships will leave here at 4:35 p. m., 15 minutes after the eastbound ship on the Los Angeles-Abilene line arrives or its 20-minute stop. The ships from San Antonio will arrive at 10:35 a. m.

Time Schedule of the new route: West Bound East Bound 8 a. m. at Ft. Worth, ar. 6:15 pm at 11:09 am at Jackson, lv. 3:02 pm at 11:31 am at Jackson, ar. 3:02 pm at 1:24 pm at Shreveport, lv. 1:30 pm

High livestock prices are expected to keep Iowa's farm income at its usual level despite the drought.

From upstairs came a scream of prolonged intensity. "What is it, dearie?" Mrs. Sims fled up the staircase, fear lending wings to her feet, and Thorne instinctively accompanied her. At the head of the stairs a young girl was leaning limply against the wall, her trembling knees barely holding her upright.

The girl shuddered. "But I touched her," she moaned, "because she didn't look up or answer when I put the coffee on the table by her. Oh, her eyes!" Thorne brushed by Mrs. Sims. "Stay here with your daughter," he advised. "Jim and I will see what's the matter," and he and his assistant sped through the dark bedroom and into the tiny sitting room beyond.

The sightless eyes turned upward, the ghastly twisted mouth, told their own tale without spoken words. Reverently the two men tipped to her side and stopped. Both her hands still lay concealed in the partly open desk drawer. "Call the coroner!" "He's sick in bed," interjected Jim. "I tried to get a message to him early today."

Then telephoned the deputy coroner, Dr. Wingate; he lives in Georgetown, and Jim, the man halted at the door. "Tell Mrs. Sims not to come in—it's no sight for a delicate woman. Explain who we are and say we'll stay and aid her." Left to himself Thorne struggled to control his rising excitement. Lying dead before him was the one woman he wanted to see—the blind woman in blue whose actions had so bewildered Arnold Winslow and had aroused his curiosity as to the connecting her and Elsa Chase.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

Answered By
Dr. S. Parkes Cadman

Questions from readers are answered by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Radio Minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Des Moines, Iowa.
Do you think that the present blind faith in science is just a passing mood, and one which will have to give way because science cannot satisfy our deepest desires?
Why cherish a blind faith in anything, science included? God does not ask so much of man. He desires him to use his reason and his conscience and to test even divine overtures by their aid.

I agree that science cannot answer the profoundest questions which life evokes. It has its own realm in which it is supreme and beyond that realm it is impotent. Eminent scientists are fully aware of this and refrain from trespassing on those spiritual dominions which are outside their jurisdiction.

But the past triumphs of science give a substantial basis for its predictions that a hundred years from now wireless telephony and television will be perfected and the world will enjoy unlimited supplies of cheap power, with the result that a twenty-hour working week will suffice to meet all needs.

What follows? According to the optimists, the abundant leisure at man's disposal will develop in him the desire for those amenities which flourish in a civilization from which noise, dirt and disease have been banished by the great magicians of science.

You may deem all this so much moonshine. Nevertheless it is not beyond the bounds of possibility. Of course the glittering vision can be destroyed by war. But a universal economic interdependence such as is here visualized may blot out that grim specter.

How can an adult person over thirty best win the confidence of children? I have to work constantly with them, and find my inability in this direction a very real handicap.

How much do you remember of your own childhood's doubts and fears, hopes and joys? Probably very little, and less than usual if your childhood was fortunate, untroubled and easygoing. But adults who experienced suffering as youngsters and have since overcome its crippling effects are more likely to feel actively sympathetic toward children whose pains and anxieties are as real to them as any suffered by grown-ups. Charles Dickens would never have pled for the children as he did had not the iron entered his soul when he was a child.

It is difficult for many persons over thirty to regard juniors except as inferiors. Consequently, it is then a case, as Miss Mary Chadwick, a well known authority on child psychology remarks, of thus far and no farther where the child is concerned. The secret of a successful leader of boys' activities lies in his ability to be a boy, to put himself on their level and to see things through their eyes.

If a boy approaches his elders respectfully, submits to their superior knowledge, never puzzles them with problems they cannot solve, well and good. I have never met that type, and if he exists he's overdue in heaven. Older people too often ignore the fact that while mischief-loving lads and lassies are deficient in experience, they are precociously wise about some things. Any teacher will tell you that his or her pupils instinctively appraise character and are specially keen on their elders' foibles, weaknesses or shortcomings.

In your work with children give them the lead. Let them do the talking. Interest yourself sincerely in what they have to say. You will find ever and anon a child spits out a jewel which sets you wondering. Show them that you really care for them and for what they feel, think or tell, and they will respond with a freshness and charm and candor which many older people might cultivate to advantage.

Philadelphia.
I insist that the British people handle the drink traffic in a better way than we do. Can you really deny this and be consistent for genuine temperance?

Suppose we analyze briefly the report of the Royal Commission appointed to consider the revision of British licensing laws of the liquor traffic. Authorities on public health, scientific research workers and eminent economists were examined by this commission in the course of its hearings and investigations.

The scientists testified that there was no satisfactory evidence that alcohol increases or fortifies the body's natural resistance to disease and that it is a narcotic rather than a stimulant. The economist stated that if weekly wage earnings expended on drink were spent for the actual necessities of the family budget there would be more and better food for children, additional clothing and other household supplies, more homes purchased through building societies and larger savings in the banks.

Sir Josiah Stamp, well known for his services in the re-establishment of European finances after the World War, calculated that an annual gain of one hundred and twenty-five million dollars could be effected by applying Britain's national expenditure on alcoholic liquors to other and better purposes.

In view of these findings I am content to submit the issue to your further consideration.

Lea-Mex First Development Company to Transport Buyers By Airplane

Kay Thorsen of the Lea-Mex Development Company of New Hobbs, New Mexico, is at the Settles Hotel this week arranging for a number of local people to travel to the new oil fields of southeastern New Mexico by airplane.

This development company is the first of the kind in the United States to use airplanes for carrying customers from their homes to the scenes of new development.

Development is rapid, business is carrying on night and day and values are showing property owners of New Hobbs enormous profits. The play is so fast and the distance of New Hobbs from other points so great that the Lea-Mex found it expedient to use airplanes in their business.

Appointment for the trip may be made by calling Mr. Thorsen at the Settles Hotel, Big Spring. See picture of development in the lobby.

STYLE TALKS For The Settles Turquoise With Black The Right Perfume

With the Settles opening so near at hand it is only right that we should make an effort to talk of evening dresses.

Of course we shall only wear our old standby and watch others with their new creations floating by it.

She goes on to say that drop-shoulder lines are another important detail.

At any rate they are lovely things. One that Mrs. Little describes is of very soft and a trifle quaint in character.

This letter goes on to say that white is still most popular for evening clothes.

MRS. LITTLE also sends us the word that the vogue for turquoise with black has reached a high peak around New York.

THE NEW YORK TIMES fashion page presents one of the most interesting assertions on perfume that we have ever read.

NEXT to buying a new costume few adventures in expenditure are more exciting than the purchase of a new perfume.

MRS. M. R. SHOWALTER

By ONA REAGAN PARSONS "Flowers of Our Lost Romance"

By Charles F. Lummis (Houghton Mifflin Co.) The names and works of Charles F. Lummis ought to be familiar to every West Texan.

Mr. Lummis died now, but he has left behind him innumerable testimonies to his great love for the Southwest.

He liked the west so well that he settled down to live in it. He had all kinds of homes from Indian pueblos to a California ranch.

Anything on the Americas having to do with the first settlers was his field, from the Incas in Peru to the first Californians.

Whether he even went to Europe, I don't know. Most likely he did not visit Spain for a better understanding of her colonization of this country.

The book is a potpourri, a very fragrant one, of many things that interested Lummis.

Health Records Of 2,289 Children Kept In Office Of County Nurse Here

Mrs. M. R. Showalter Has Found 1,252 School Children With Defective Teeth and 472 With Diseased Gums; Work Covers Large Field

Individual health records of 2,289 children in Howard County are on file in the office of Mrs. M. R. Showalter, County Health Nurse.

From this little card Mrs. Showalter can tell the whole health history of your child. If it has had the measles, the mumps, the chicken pox or bronchitis along with several other of the well known children's diseases, she will have record of the fact.

This is just a phase of the health program of Mrs. Showalter, and the type of work that comes through her busy office.

It was found that of this 2,289 children, 1,252 had defective teeth, 472 had diseased gums. The report was given to local dentists and a reduction was made on dental work for school children.

There are twenty-eight schools in the county and these schools are thoroughly covered by inspection and a health program conducted in all of them.

Children up to the sixth grade (and in many cases, higher) are given an inspection once a year. Health talks are given in every school many times a year.

Members of the committee are: Mrs. J. C. Douglass, Mrs. Fox Stripling, Miss Ann Martin, Mrs. Clint Rogers, Miss Arrah Phillips, Miss Twila Lomax, Mrs. W. Briggance, Mrs. S. T. Johnson, Mrs. O. L. Thorpe, Mrs. J. B. Bridgford.

Over 400 letters were sent to parents telling them that their children had defective tonsils. Following is a copy of the letter:

In our school inspection we noted that — had a throat condition that requires attention. The following are the most frequent complications following diseased tonsils:

1. Heart conditions such as lesion or enlargement of the heart. 2. Kidney diseases such as pyelitis or Bright's Disease. 3. Rheumatism which may involve one or more joints of the body.

Very truly yours, Howard County Health Committee Per Mrs. M. R. Showalter, Howard County Public Health Nurse.

It is known that the recommendation of the labor commissioner will have the support of state labor leaders in the next legislature.

Ward County Gets Largest Oil Producer

Gulf 13 O'Brien Flows 2,977 Barrels From 2,600 Feet

Ward county's first heavy producer, a location extension northeast of the pool, was the most interesting development in the West Texas oil country during the past week.

Gulf's No. 13 O'Brien, section 8 block F, 2310 from the west and 3300 feet from the south line, flowed 2,977 barrels in 24 hours from a total depth of 2,600 feet, five feet in pay.

The production formation unlike that in nearby wells, being a sand that the well was pinched in during part of the 24-hour gauge period in one hour, open flow, it produced 200 barrels.

Indications were that a 5,000 to 6,000 barrel producer had been discovered. Main pay was topped at 2,593 feet.
