Trials of Walker and Bailey Set In Borger Slayings

CHARGED WITH KILLING TERRY AND KENYON

Outrages Followed the Robbery of Local Bank

Walker Brothers Also Held in Buchanan Murder

(Special to the News) BORGER, Dec. 12—The trial of "Whitney" Walker is scheduled for December 14, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Curtis Douglas Walker. Walker is charged with murder in connection with the killing of Pat Kenyon and Elmer Terry, local officers, on the night following the robbery of the First National bank of Pampa.

The case of Ed Bailey, charged with murder in connection with the same offenses, has been set for December 19.

Kenyon and Terry were killed about midnight while in search of men believed to have robbed the Pampa bank on that afternoon. They left Borger and went in the direction of Phillips. Soon afterward their dead bodies were found lying at the roadside near the Whittington post office. They had not fired a shot and their pistols were still clasped in their hands. It is alleged that a few days later one of the pistols which one of the officers was carrying when killed was found at the home of Walker.

Bailey and Walker were arrested immediately following the killing, and were indicted by a grand jury. Their cases have twice been continued in the 84th district court.

Walker and his brother, Hugh, also are under indictment charged with the killing of Officer Coke Buchanan March 17 on Dixon street. The Walkers were arrested and held on $35,000 bond, which on appeal was reduced to $15,000 for "Whitney" and $1,500 for Hugh. The bond was made.

Following the killing of Kenyon and Terry, Governor Dan Moody sent the Rangers to Borger and started the clean-up. At that time five hundred men and women left town, and famous Dixon street had not a single light that night.

COMMISSIONERS TO MEET
The city commissioners will meet tonight in regular session and conduct routine business. In the absence of Mayor T. D. Hobart commissioner Dave Osborne is acting in that capacity.

TAMMANY QUILTS HISTORIC HOME, DEMOCRATIC CENTER FOR 60 YEARS

The venerable home of Tammany Hall on New York's lower east side is to be abandoned for quarters farther uptown. At the left is the building of the democratic organization as it looks today, and at the right a scene at its dedication during the national democratic convention in 1867. Among famous Tammany members are Grand Sachem John R. Voorhis (left), 97, and Gov. Alfred E. Smith, (center). The statue of the Tammany Indian (right) has become a party symbol.

NEW YORK—Tammany Hall, symbol of democracy on the island of Manhattan since 1789, is putting its 60-year-old home on the fringe of the Bowery.

From its historic "wigwam" on the lower east side, Tammany will move within a year to new quarters further uptown, closer to the shifting center of the metropolis and not far from Central Park and the spires of upper Fifth avenue.

With it will go the paintings of past leaders which hang about the smoky walls, and the statue of Chief Tammany which rises from a metal cornice atop the dingy red brick buildings. But with the razing of the structure by interests which have acquired the site, a venerable landmark will be missed by a city which has no dearth of landmarks.

To the nation at large Tammany Hall represents the democratic organization which has been a power in New York politics for generations and which sprang from a society founded 136 years ago by William Mooney, Irish upholster, to fight the aristocratic federalists under Alexander Hamilton. But there is also a fraternal side of Tammany, or "Columbian Order," closely allied, the charter of which defines it as a "benevolent and charitable society for affording relief to indigent and distressed members, their widows and orphans and other proper objects of charity."

Tammany's political star has not always been ascendant, but the society has emerged from frequent political defeats with new vigor. It was hardest hit when "Boss" Tweed was exposed for graft and imprisoned to die in Ludlow Street jail. Other scandals have touched it, but they have been survived and, to a great extent lived down.

In modern years a "new Tammany" has been heralded, led by such men as former Judge George W. Olvany, present Tammany chieftain; Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, a sachem in the order; Mayor James J. Walker, U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner and James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Ger-

Interesting Places Will Entertain Chamber of Commerce Sessions Next Year—Pampa Panhandle-Plains Host

STAMFORD, Dec. 12—One of the most famous and wonderful scenic spots of the nation, some of the outstanding beauty spots of the state, and many West Texas' substantial cities are slated to be host to West Texas Chamber of Commerce conventions during the 1928 season.

Eleven town hosts for 1928 have been set, which, including the mammoth annual convention, will make a convention for each month of the year. Exact dates of the district meetings will be announced later. The big annual membership gathering is already for June 11, 12, and 13, at Fort Worth.

Early in the new year, Colorado will be host to the West Central district of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. This meeting will be followed shortly afterward by the Oil Belt district convention at Dublin. Lamesa will entertain the South Plains meeting which is usually held in April, and Quanah will be next when delegates of the Lower Panhandle section gather there, these during the spring season.

The most unique 1928 district convention will be that of the Pecos Valley-Inter Mountain section, which will meet in the famed Carlsbad caverns, near Carlsbad, New Mexico. Another picturesque gathering will be that of the Big Bend District at Balmorhea. Both of these meetings will probably be held in July or August, thus assuring a good delegation of vacationists.

The Heart of Texas gathering for 1928 goes to Lampasas. Two towns in the northern territory of the West Texas chamber of commerce will be next hosts, Spearman entertaining the new Trans-Canadian District, and Pampa entertaining the Panhandle-North Plains region.

Decatur will be the last convention host. Sharing this with Merkel, both towns being scheduled to entertain

Otis Rogers Says Wife Acted Queerly After Marriage

(By Associated Press) LA GRANGE, Dec. 12—Otis Rogers took the stand here today in behalf of his wife, Mrs. Rebecca Rogers, charged with robbing the bank at Buda, and said his wife had acted strangely many times after their marriage.

The defense is basing its case on a plea of temporary insanity.

League Council Adjourns After A Satisfactory Session

(By Associated Press) GENEVA, Dec. 12—With four international problems, including the Polish-Lithuanian controversy, on the way to settlement as a result of its deliberations, the forty-eighth session of the council of the League of Nations adjourned today to meet again in March.

Girl Says Boys Nationalists in China

(By Associated Press) EL PASO, Dec. 12—Police are investigating the story told last night by Mildred Stringer of Chicago, that she said she was with two boys who, she said, were responsible for the death in Amarillo of a drug clerk in a hold-up.

The names of the boys were not made known.

Playlet to Be Given Thursday at C. of C. Meeting

"Manager by Proxy," a playlet designed to explode the theory that just anybody can run a Chamber of Commerce, will be presented Thursday evening during a membership session of the local organization.

A number of local men and women will begin rehearsals of the farce this evening. Before this stunt, a buffet lunch will be served to those present. A short business session will conclude the meeting.

All local people are invited to attend his meeting, which will commence at 7 p. m. One of the matters to be taken up is the appointment of a nominating committee to nominate 28 persons for directors in 1928. Of this number, the membership of the Chamber of Commerce will select fourteen to serve under the Board of City Development plan provided by the new city charter.

Rotarians Buy High Grade Gilts for Farm Boys

Professor J. L. Lester and Scott Barcus have contracted with Allie Byrum, farmer near Kingsmill, to purchase nine weaned gilts to be given by the Pampa Rotary club to farm boys attending the agricultural classes at the high school.

Each of the nine boys chosen will be given a gilt to raise under instructions from Professor Lester, with the understanding that one gilt from the first two litters will be given to the Rotary club, which will in turn donate them to other boys.

The gilts are of the famous Jay-hawker strain and their sires, owned by Mr. Byrum, took first prize in that class at the Tri-State fair this year. Registration papers are being prepared in the names of the boys chosen to receive the gilts, which will be delivered the latter part of this week.

The local Rotary club is endeavoring to interest the farmers in the community in diversification and to interest their sons to remain on the farm and have early training in farm work.

Cooperation Asked by Pampa Lions in Toy Drive

"Will you help?" This is a question asked this week by the Pampa Lions club, which is sponsoring the gathering of old toys throughout the city so that all the poor children of Pampa will be sure to be remembered on Christmas.

The plan is to have toys ready for a truck which will call at local homes next Monday, December 19 and assemble the playthings at a central point—possibly at a community Christmas tree, for distribution. It is desired to have the toys in as good state of repair as possible, but even broken toys will be welcomed. The Lions club has hired a mechanic to do whatever repair work is necessary, and the cooperation of local people will make the drive a success.

Those who have old toys are asked to gather them for collection, then call Lion Duncan at telephone 152 or 156-W, or Lion Clark at 375 or 311-J, and the truck will be sent for the gifts.

JOHNSTON HAS STATE TROOPS ABOUT CAPITOL

Would Halt Proceedings Pending Court Decision

HEARING IS SET FOR TOMORROW

Machine Gun Unit Is Called to Prevent Session

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 12—Three companies of the Oklahoma National Guard, including a machine gun unit, stood guard today at the state capitol to halt the convening of the self-called session of the House of Representatives, which was to receive five impeachment charges against Governor Henry Johnston.

A proclamation ordering Adjutant General Charles Barrett to prevent the meeting was issued this morning by Governor Johnston. The announced purpose of calling out the National Guard was to hold the legislative situation in its present state until its legal status can be finally determined by the courts.

(By Associated Press) OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 12—Prevented from meeting in their chambers at the state capitol by National Guardsmen, the majority of members of the House of Representatives went to a local hotel, convened, discussed the situation, and recessed until tomorrow, E. P. Hill, speaker, announced today.

Charges voted against Governor Henry Johnston and Harry Cordell, president of the state board of agriculture, by the House committee were not discussed at the hotel assembly.

It was learned from an authoritative source, however, that the legal advisory committee was drawing up charges in legal form for presentation before the House.

More than half of the members of the House were in hotel lobbies and they declared they were here to stay until the situation is cleared.

Parcels Must Be Plainly Marked With Return Address

All parcels must be properly wrapped and marked with a return address or the post office will refuse to accept them for mailing. A notice was received at the local office this morning instructing the officials to enforce these instructions, issued by the postmaster general.

Also, all parcels must be addressed before being brought to the postoffice, as the employees are instructed not to address parcels for senders at this busy season. The addresses must be written in ink and printed if necessary.

Commencing Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock all outgoing parcels will be received at the sub-station in the First National Bank building, one door east of the Western Union office. This station is for outgoing parcels and nothing else. First class mail, stamps, money orders, and incoming parcels will be handled at the main office.

Christmas mailing is becoming brisk, Postmaster Williams Crawford says, and the people of Pampa are co-operating with the office in splendid fashion. One of the largest months of the year is expected in the money order department. More than $2,000 worth of orders were issued from the local office Saturday.

NEA FICTION

BY ERNEST LYNN

THE STORY THUS FAR

When Jeff Harrison, gambler, is killed in a poker game in Caldwell, Kas., his 18-year-old son, Tony, is taken to the Bar K ranch in the Indian territory by Joe Craig.

There Tony is welcomed by Titus Moore, owner of the Bar K brand, and his little daughter, Rita. Another who has befriended Tony is Gordon W. Lillie, who later becomes known as Pawnee Bill when he teaches school at the Indian reservation in Pawnee.

In the months that follow, reports come to the Bar K of the activities of the now notorious Benton gang. Tom Benton being the murderer of Jeff Harrison.

CHAPTER XVIII

On a day late in September five men rode up the main street of Wellington and halted in front of a little bank. Three of them dismounted; two of these walked inside the bank and the third remained outside and leaned carelessly against the building.

Two men were loafing on the porch of the general store next to the bank, and to the bank, and to these the one who slouched so carelessly addressed a low-voiced remark.

"Just sit the way you are and keep on talking like nothing's going on."

The idlers looked up in surprise. It was a hot day and they had found it pleasant to sit in the shade and chat about the crops. They blinked in puzzled fashion at the dark-skinned, thin-faced man who had spoken and then, their eyes encountering the two mounted men across the street, swift comprehension dawned in their faces and they sat as if stunned.

"It won't be more than two or three minutes," the thin-faced man continued; "and they you can go home and tell your kids you saw a bank robbery." He patted the gun at his hip. "The first one that tries to get up or raise his voice'll git something that's bound not to do him any good."

The men on the porch of the general store turned a shade or two paler and made heroic efforts to continue their conversation, just as if nothing out of the ordinary were happening. The thin-faced one smiled contemptuously and winked at his companions with the horses.

Inside the bank, a big bearded man produced a gun and walking directly to the cashier, demanded that he open the safe and hand out all the money.

"My partner here," he said, indi-

"Now then," cried the one who had shot him, "you two sit where you are or you'll git the same dose."

cating his companion, "has a bag in one hand and a six-shooter in the other. When all the money's corralled you kin stek it in the bag. We don't care much for the silver; give us all your bills."

Three minutes later, the pair backed toward the door and the bearded man delivered a parting admonition. "Don't anybody move outside the bank for five minutes and you'll all keep your health."

Then they calmly stepped into the street, their retreat covered by the man who had remained just outside. He allowed them to mount their horses before he sprang to his own saddle. At that moment the proprietor of the general store, attracted by the presence of something unusual outside, stepped to the door with a rifle in his hands. Before he could raise it to his shoulder or jump back from the doorway, the thin-faced man had fired. The storekeeper fell forward with a bullet through his heart and lay twitching and quivering on the floor of the porch at the feet of the two farmers.

"Now then," cried the one who had shot him, "you two sit where you are or you'll git the same thing"

"Why in hell do you talk so much?" the bearded man demanded curtly. "Come on; you're wasting time." He dug vicious spurs into his horse and was off, the others at his heels.

Fifteen minutes later they thundered past the Lillie-Settler four mill. Al Lillie, brother of Pawnee Bill, saw them pass and was instantly suspicious; so much so that he ran for his revolver and emptied it in a futile stream of lead at the flying figures.

"Out of range!" he exclaimed disgustedly. "Shouldn't have left my gun so far away." He summoned his father and the two of them rode into Wellington.

The outraged citizenry pursued the bank robbers for hours, but returned late that night empty-handed and word went out to Wichita, Caldwell, Arkansas City, Hunnewell and other towns to be on the lookout for the Benton gang.

Joe Craig, when he heard of it, cursed fluently. A month later a Rock Island train was held up and several thousand dollars taken from the express car. This band, too, was led by a bearded man.

A letter from Pawnee Bill, post-marked Pawnee, informed Craig that the notoriety of the Benton gang had spread to that part of the country and that several of its members had been seen in the vicinity of Pawnee.

"At least, folks seem to think they belonged to the Benton gang. It's pretty generally thought that they have a hide-out down in this part of the country."

Concerning himself, Pawnee Bill wrote that the cattle deal had been completed. "Except for the sale. My stock is up near Washington for the winter. Instead of buying Texas cattle I bought down in the Chickasaw Nation. Seven of us started out for Texas, and down near Okmulgee we ran into a bunch of Creek Indians. They were on the warpath, although I didn't know it. They halted when they saw us and looked us over without saying a word, and I, like a fool, tried to swap a mule for one of their horses.

"They wouldn't answer me, but sat there for a few minutes more and then rode off. When we reached Okmulgee, deputies were being sworn in to go out and get the Creeks. I guess I was pretty close to losing my scalp.

"About the cattle. Down near the Texas border we ran into a cow-puncher named Billy Dunlap. He'd been down in Texas on the same business we were on and he said that talk about a drought in Texas was a lie. He insisted that better cattle could be had in Oklahoma, and more reasonable. The Kansas farmers with me wouldn't believe him and insisted on going ahead, but I went with Dunlap. I bought a hundred head from Tandy Walker, a Chickasaw Indian who used to be an officer in the Confederate army. Dunlap bought his at the same time and we drove them up the Chisholm Trail to Kansas. I paid six dollars a head and expect to make a nice profit. Meanwhile, though, I've got to make some money while my cattle fatten, so I'm back in Pawnee for a while as interpreter.

"I might decide to go in the show business with Buffalo Bill. I guess I didn't tell you about it, but while I was here before I roomed for a while with a young fellow named Charlie Burgess. He's the son of the Burgess who spent so many years with the Pawnee in Nebraska and finally brought them down here. Charlie's working for Buffalo Bill, and he was down here to see if he could get hold of half a dozen Pawnees for Cody to put on in a Wild West show.

"Major Bowman wouldn't let him take any Indians without permission from Washington, and he couldn't get permission. It seems that Charlie notified Buffalo Bill that there was a young man down here with long hair, who could make up like an Indian and do their dances and who seemed to be a great friend of the Pawnees. So Buffalo Bill writes me to bring along some Indians and join him. I found the letter here in my old rooming house. It had been laying around for two or three months. I wrote to Cody, and he says it's too late to do anything this year, but he wants me to line up some Indians and go with him next spring. I'm not aiming to get permission from the government. I guess I'll take the risk.

"Why don't you and Tony saddle up some day and come down to pay me a visit? I'm thinking it would be a great thing for the boy to spend a little time down here among the Indians. You know how kids are. Anyway, I'm right fond of Tony and I'd sure try to show him a nice time."

Craig showed the letter to Tony Harrison, and the boy expressed a keen desire to pay Pawnee Bill a visit.

"Dunno," said Craig, scratching his head. "Better see what the colonel says."

"Of course," declared Titus Moore, and smiled. "Two years and more of ranch life must be sort of monotonous to a boy that's been used to traveling like you, Tony. I think it's a good idea, Craig, you go

BIOGRAPHY OF DOYLE WARD

(From The Spotlight)
To give a good description of a student in our school, is quite a proposition for an educated fool.

As the one whom I'm describing is of very great renown. It's pretty hard deciding what to write of such a clown.

"Doyle," said his mother, "Is the name that he shall bear. And I'm sure there is no other that he'd be more proud to wear."

so with greatest celebration He was christened Doyle Ward, And received felicitations From his uncles and his aunts,

He was quite a model boy 'Till he grew to be a man. Never broke a single toy, Never stole his mother's jam.

Never chased the village damsel; He loafed around the town; Always wore his winter flannels When the snow was on the ground felt his father's wrath. He'd like to be a preacher and moe all the day. and his English teacher- his time away.

Daily fed the pigs and chickens Gave the dog his yearly bath. Didn't get a single lickin'.

He wanted to fame and money And in earning found a way, Though his face was rather funny And his mind was in decay.

He was filled with understanding Of the evils of the day. And his mind was then expanding In a horizontal way. —Berlin Black, (Senior).

BREXER RABBIT'S COURTSHIP When I was in the year of twenty, And my hair was curly and brown, I loved a lady bunny, The sweetest in the town.

Her eyes pink as any rose And even pinker was her nose; Still pinker were her ears inside And how I wished her for my bride!

When she was sweet sixteen I gave her an everyday ring; And later bought a lovely wedding ring; So we were married in the spring.

But oh it hardly seems to me That it was back in eighty-three. I wore my wedding hat that day, When I was, frisky, young, and gay.

My dear old wedding hat I've worn for forty years; I've smiled and laughed beneath its brim, And sometimes shed some tears. —Harry Jeffus (Fifth Grade.)

SPYING ON SIS

Ma said for me to go to bed, I told her I was no sleepy head. So when sister's fellow came I thought I'd play a game; And the first thing I did, Of course—I hid Right under sister's chair With no room to spare; The first words I heard, "Do you love me dear?" I pricked up my ears, and began to hear. Oh! see then mother's call Almost made me bawl. She said, "Where's brother, Paul?" Oh! shoot, that spoiled it all.—Theo Post (Sixth Grade).

WHO PAYS?—"The merchant that loses business through not advertising has such a high overhead and unit sale cost that he cannot possibly sell goods as cheaply as the store that increases its sales and reduces its cost with advertising," says an authority.

In other words, the merchant who advertises does not really pay his own advertising cost, but his competitor who does not advertise pays it for him through surrendered profits, other things being equal. Every merchant in business pays for advertising, whether he uses it or not.

The authority quoted above continues:

"You have perhaps wondered how some stores can afford to spend such enormous sums for advertising. That is easy to fathom. Their competitors, who don't advertise, and whose business they take, pay for their advertising.

"Say the Smith family is a customer of yours. They have $60 they intend to spend with you. They read the advertising of your competitor and are induced to spend it with him instead of with you. The other store makes 20 per cent, or $12 on the sale. It will deduct, we will say, $1 advertising cost and have $11 left. The advertising has really cost them nothing. They got back its cost and $11 profit they would not have had but for their advertising.

"Who paid for this advertising? Not the advertiser, for he got the cost back and a big profit besides. Did the purchaser pay for it? No, he paid only the regular price." Then who did pay? The merchant that did not advertise paid for his competitor's advertising. And he did not only pay for the other fellow's advertising, but he paid out of his cash drawer the profit his competitor made on the sale. The merchant that doesn't advertise pays the advertising bill for the one who does; he pays in loss of sales and loss of profits.

Despite the fact the the New Ford was "news" and the people would have seen it with less advertising, Henry Ford broke all short-campaign records by spending $1,300,000 in 2,000 American daily newspapers in five days. In conjunction with Ford's official advertising, local dealers spent $250,000 more.

Ford has no intention of charging this advertising directly up to the purchasers of the new automobile. He intends to subtract that amount and more from competitors who will surrender sales to the Ford organization. The new car will sell at the lowest price possible, and advertising is to bring volume and lower overhead.

In any business where volume can be attained, the buying public will do well to patronize consistent advertisers, whose turnovers enable them to quote low prices on quality goods and make a small profit on many units rather than a greater profit on fewer units. And the greater the volume of sales, the greater the variety to pick from. It pays to advertise and to patronize advertisers.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—From all the international discussion in recent weeks of the possibility of abolishing war, comes no indication that the world will do more than nibble at the edges of the problem of permanent world peace.

The situation boils down to the questions of how war can be ended and why it won't be. There are certain fundamental causes of war which are generally camouflaged when a war gets going. Imperialism, inspired by greed for trade, natural resources and territory, has been named as the worst.

No one seems to be proposing a general elimination of the causes of war, and it might, in fact, prove impossible, for certainly no nation is going to give up the fruits of its imperialistic policies in the past and the prospects of a drastic reform of the international economic system are dim. An allocation of the world's natural resources has been suggested, but no one seems interested. The remedy is being sought in plans designed to keep the causes of war from operating.

Getting into the realm of practical possibilities, it quickly becomes apparent that the remedies employed to date haven't worked. The world fought a "war to end war" and today there is as much war talk in Europe as ever.

Disarmament conferences have gotten nowhere. The Washington arms conference has since been interpreted merely as a British naval victory, although at the time it kept peace in the Pacific; it limited large battleships and the same old problems remain, with cruisers, submarines, airplanes and land forces still unlimited. The recent Anglo-American-Japanese cruiser conference at Geneva flopped and the League of Nations' various efforts toward disarmament and peace seem to have proved equally fruitless.

Equibalanced reduction of all armaments, if ever achieved, may be a step in the right direction and will save money during peacetime, but the prospects of a fight are just as good whether each of several men have one gun or two.

The league has done good work in heading off some small wars, some of which might have spread if allowed to go on, but its efficacy in the face of another world war like the last remains to be proved.

Pacts binding nations to boycott the aggressor nation in future wars have been suggested, but nations always claim to fight only for defense and even the question of war guilt in the great European struggle which began 13 years ago remains unsettled. Anti-aggression pacts might force the United States to abandon its neutrality even in cases where only a hair-line existed between aggression and non-aggression. They seem to leave the way open for and even to encourage all sorts of camouflage and skulduggery by scheming nations.

Soviet Russia's proposal at Geneva for universal disarmament was too good to be true. No other nation has embraced it and it is to be considered in the light of the fact that Russia herself always is happy to stir up a bloody internecine class war elsewhere when it can be done.

Imperialistic nations have too much at stake to agree to anything like that, and imperialistic nations are in the saddle. At best they would demand an enforced permanency of the status quo.

Could Britain withdraw from China, India, Egypt and other lands rather than wage war against native populations demanding autonomy?

Could Japan and France abandon territories or spheres of influence where they now hold their positions by armed forces?

Could the United States even accept the proposal scheduled to be made at the Havana Pan-American conference forbidding armed occupation of one American republic's territory by another—could she withdraw from Haiti and Nicaragua and promise never to do it again? Would Italy abandon her Fascist dreams of power and territorial expansion?

A general affirmative answer is impossible. The great powers cannot yet be expected to give up the old game of gobbling the weak which has been played since the beginning of time and complete disarmament would mean their loss of a large part of the world now ruled as conquered territory.

TWINKLES

Bright little folks are hinting to Santa what they want for Christmas. And some of the bigger ones are hinting about what they don't wish.

Mottos are often dumb, like axioms. If trifles made perfection, State Press and this paragrapher would run off several perfect books annually with these little things.

If some people were as careful of themselves as they are of their names, they would make better posterity.

Where there is smoke there is fire, but a smell of liquor doesn't justify a search without a warrant. That's American liberty via the law, says a late decision.

We get the rag ends of these snowstorms, but it seems Old Jue rings out the things before they get here. Maybe Santa will bring us a snow ere the New Year.

"Llano Estacado" is to be the name of a book through which Tech pros will refute the idea of "staked plains" as a barren country. History is a great thing, but we Pan-handlers have to rewrite many of the chapters to get ourselves in the picture at all.

BILLY EVANS Says

Fournier Solved Johnson

Walter Johnson is to manage the Newark team of the International League next year. His first baseman will be none other than the hard-hitting Jack Fournier.

On the surface there doesn't appear to be anything about the above statement. However, if you discussed the matter with Walter Johnson he would probably tell you he much prefers having Fournier on his team than in the lineup of the opposite.

The reason you ask. Here it is: When Walter Johnson was the outstanding pitcher in the American League no batter in the organization took more liberties with his stuff than Fournier. No matter what his average was, Fournier always found the great Walter to his liking.

"Fournier is the toughest batter in the American League for me to work on," Johnson told me several years ago.

Perhaps that explains why Johnson secured Fournier for Newark the moment he outlived his big league usefulness.

Squawks on Decision

Soldiers' Field in Chicago appears to be a tough spot for the officials in charge of the big sporting events that have been staged there in the past year.

The latest squawk comes from Morley Drury, captain of Southern California's great football team. Drury is one of the best football players I have seen in action in years. It is unfortunate that he had to get mixed up in the dispute over the umpire's decision.

Drury claims Notre Dame got a long count which put Southern California on the short end of the score. Had the umpire ruled a safety on the play in question Drury's team would have won, 8-7, instead of being defeated, 7-6.

If the squawk did nothing else, it wised up a lot of fans to the control and possession of the ball thought, as differentiating between just a fumble or a free ball.

Field Must be Jinx

Just a few months prior to the disputed football ruling we had the referee of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in a peck of trouble because of his manner of tolling off the seconds after Dempsey had dropped Tunney to the canvas.

The motion pictures made it bad for the officials in charge of the championship bout because his method of counting over Dempsey was the opposite to his style when Tunney was on the floor.

This feature of the now much discussed battle has never been explained in detail by the referee and I have always believed it would tend to set him right if there was a satisfactory solution that he could present.

It was a strange coincidence that just one year ago on the very day or which the Notre Dame-Southern California game was played a squabble took place in the Army-Navy game played on the same field.

It will be recalled a Navy back fumbled and an Army man recovered, converting the play into a touchdown. There was an argument that the Army man had kicked the ball a matter of some 20 yards before he finally picked it up.

The officials ruled otherwise, but the slow-motion pictures merely confused the situation. Three big sports events inside a year, all featuring a questionable ruling, makes Soldiers' Field look like a jinx for the officials.

Weight Advantage of Whittington Is No Worry to Page

Walter Page, Kansas' fastest welterweight, arrived here yesterday and is in great shape for his battle with Fred Whittington tonight at the Pampa Athletic club. Whittington will have a slight weight advantage over the Kansas battler, but that makes no difference he says.

H. E. Ripple, Page's manager, says that his boy is going to put up the best battle the fans of Pampa have seen and all the local boxing fans know that when Fred Whittington is in the ring a real battle will be the result.

Ripple has with him Tommy O'Brien, middleweight champion of the northwest, who last week defeated Chief Jack Elkhart of Chicago and Peter Gaudes, world's champion junior flyweight, who has a challenge out to meet anybody in the world at 105 pounds. These boys will be introduced from the ring tonight.

The semi-final introduce Rip Blake of Shamrock, who will meet Young Burke the Breckenridge slugger in eight rounds. Frankie Farrell and Jimmie Hudson will provide the entertainment in the six-round special event. Farrell has come out of his slump and is putting on some good exhibitions winning from Lefty Roberts by a knockout last week.

The hundred-pound youngsters will be the early contenders in the best card yet introduced by matchmakers Bickley and Bolen.

He smiled broadly. Craig grinned. "You just watch me ride herd on him, Colonel. I've promised him a couple of deer on our way down. We'll just sort of amble along and see what hunting we can find. Tammany-- many. Since women came into Politics they have had a share in Tammany's activities, and teas in the society clubrooms have altered the social program of which Fitz Green Halleck, the poet, sang a century ago: "There's a barrel of porter in Tammany Hall, And the Bucktails are swigging it the all day long. In the time of my youth 'twas a pleasure to call For a seat and cigar 'mid the jovial throng." But Tammany today still knows its followers, cares for its friends in need and walks arm in arm with the common folk from which it sprang. And it knows where its political strength lies, almost if not quite as well as in the days of Richard Croker and Big Tim Sullivan. Sullivan, the story goes, met Croker in Tammany Hall the night before election and told him: "Our vote in the Sixth will be 5,367." It turned out to be only 5,364, and Big Tim went to Croker apologizing. "I'm puzzled and astounded," he said. "There was Peter Mahoney, the republicans gave him a $1,200 job and he took it. There was Jim O'Brien, he was too sick to get to the polls. But where the other vote disappeared to I can't tell for the life of me." Croker forgave him and told him not to let it happen again. There is one man in Tammany to whom the movement of headquarters is not a new experience. He is John R. Voorhis, 97-year-old grand sagem of the Tammany society. He remembers when the hall on East Fourteenth street was democrats met there in 1868, for the first national convention held by the party in New York to nominate Horatio Seymour for the presidency.

P. Williams of Mineral Wells hope to oust Lynn P. Talley as governor of the institution.
