Seasonal Bargains to Feature Next Pampa Trade Day

PROFITS NOT AIM OF LOCAL BUSINESS MEN

Only This City Is Making Specials Attractive

NEXT WEDNESDAY IS OCCASION

Limit To Be Placed on Purchases This Time

Still greater inducements are being offered for Pampa's next Trade Day, Wednesday, November 9.

Approach of the holiday season gives merchants an unusual opportunity to make their stores and their wares attractive. A casual reading of the "specials" to be advertised in the Daily News Monday reveals bargains of remarkable worth.

So much have the business men put into their profits on this day of all bargain days that it will be necessary for them to limit the amount per customer to prevent possible abuse of the privilege. This assures every one who comes to Pampa next Wednesday of the opportunity of obtaining his share of the money-saving specials.

As winter nears, buyers are thinking of cold weather clothing and foods. The specials for November 9 have been selected with this fact in mind, and consequently much seasonable merchandise is listed. This fact alone should, it is believed, make next Trade Day a mammoth one.

There also will be other fine bargains, some bearing on motoring, some on Thanksgiving, and some on personal appearance. There is something to appeal to every member of the family. So popular has Trade Day become that a number of business men not having specials are contributing their part in welcoming Trade Day shoppers.

Nearly every town in this section is trying some kind of trades day, but there is only one TRADE DAY, and that is Pampa's. Whereas other cities place the stress on drawing contests or inferior entertainments, Pampa prefers to place the inducement where it is most appreciated—in the bargains which everyone may enjoy.

CITY MANAGER PLAN LIKED IN TEXAS CITIES

Letters Say People Are Entirely Satisfied

"OPPOSITION DISAPPEARS"

Better Returns Claimed for Money Spent at Temple

Letters received from many cities commending the city manager plan of government are too numerous to publish in full. In response to letters of inquiry sent out by the Chamber of Commerce, more than twenty Texas cities were heard from.

Pampa citizens will vote next Tuesday on a new city charter which included the commission-manager plan. Some extracts from letters are presented:

Waco—"The City Manager plan is the best that you can adopt."

"A great deal better results obtained for the money spent."

"For many years I have been in favor of the city manager plan. Since seeing it in operation I am still an ardent advocate of it."

"For two successive years our city has operated in excess of $30,000 under the budget."

"Our city is in better condition financially, morally, and politically than it probably has ever been before."

Tyler—"I say without reservation that our people are entirely satisfied. I believe that any city is overlooking an opportunity by delaying the adoption of the modern form of government that the commission-manager plan offers."

Terrell—"Terrell is well pleased with the City Manager plan and could not be induced to return to the aldermanic form. 'Any city of any size requires all the time and ability of a good man to manage and direct its affairs.'

"Your city is the biggest business in the county and worthy of the entire time and support of its most competent and capable business man."

Temple—"This City Manager is not subject to changing political conditions. 'There are those who did oppose the new form and will continue to do so but they become fewer each year.'

"Under the old system the city was always behind in its current funds. Not since this plan went into effect have we had an overdraft."

"We are getting better returns for our money."

Taylor—"We have had the City Manager plan for 10 or 12 years and are well pleased with it."

"Under this system we have been able to make civic improvements under a definite plan covering a period of years."

Stamford—"We are perfectly satisfied with the plan. We would not think of changing."

San Angelo—"I think it is the only business-like and practical manner in which to handle the city's affairs."

PROCLAMATION

"In observance of Armistice Day, November 11, it is fitting that we should cease our labors for a period on this memorable occasion."

"Therefore I, F. P. Reid, mayor of the city of Pampa, call upon and urge all local business men to close their stores and businesses between the hours of 10:30 a. m., and 5 p. m., on Armistice Day."

Joe Dundee May Lose Title After Failing to Appear

(By Associated Press)
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 4—Ace Huddkins, Nebraska fighter, today claimed the welterweight championship, while the recognized titleholder, Joe Dundee, faced possible discipline by the California boxing commission which called their scheduled title fight last night no contest.

The decision was made because Dundee did not appear. It was announced that Dundee would not appear until a $60,000, alleged to have been guaranteed him by the promoter, had been paid. Police reserves had to be called out to keep order among the 16,000 fans who had gathered to see the fight.

Have You the Murder Solution?

Guesses as to the identity of the murderer in the Benson Murder Case are being received by the Daily News, and, as might be expected, the author has deceived most of the readers.

So many persons have been involved in the mesh of circumstances that only the logic of a Philo Vance can select the guilty one and fasten the guilt upon that person.

Your guess is as good as any. Mail your guess, with not more than 150 words stating your reasons, to the Daily News at once. The two best reasons will be published in the News, and prizes of a year's subscription or extension and a six-month subscription will be given these winners.

MISS ST. CLAIR

gestion," said Vance.

When we arrive Markham announced over the house-telephone that he had come on a vitally important mission; and we were received by Miss St. Clair without a moment's delay. She was apprehensive, I imagine, concerning the whereabouts of Captain Leacock.

As she sat before us in her little drawing-room overlooking the Hudson, her face was quite pale, and her hands, though tightly clasped, trembled a little. She had for much of her cold reserve, and there were unmistakable signs of sleepless worry about her eyes.

Vance went directly to the point. His tone was almost flippant in its lightness; it at once relieved the tension of the atmosphere, and gave an air bordering on inconsequentiality to our visit.

"Captain Leacock has, I regret to inform you, very foolishly confessed to the murder of Mr. Benson. But we are not entirely satisfied with his bona fides. We are, alas! awash between Scylla and Charybdis. We can not decide whether the Captain is a deep-dyed villain or a chevalier sans peur et sans reproche. His story of how he accomplished the dark deed is a bit sketchy; he is vague on certain essential details; and—what's most confusing—he turned the lights off in Benson's hideous living-room by a switch which positively doesn't exist.

"Consequently, the suspicion has crept into my mind that he has concocted this tale of derring-do in order to shield someone whom he really believes guilty."

He indicated Markham with a slight movement of the head.

"The District Attorney here does not wholly agree with me. But then, of course, the legal mind is incredibly rigid and unresponsive once it has been invaded by a notion. You will remember that, because you were with Mr. Alvin Benson on his last evening on earth, and for other reasons equally irrelevant and trivial, Mr. Markham actually concluded that you had something to do with the gentleman's death."

He gave Markham a smile of waggish reproach, and went on:

"Since you, Miss St. Clair, are the only person whom Captain Leacock would shield so heroically, and since I, at least, am convinced of your own innocence, will you not clear up for us a few of those points where your orbit crossed that of Mr. Benson? . . . Such information cannot do the Captain or yourself any harm, and it very possibly will help to banish from Mr. Markham's mind his lingering doubts as to the Captain's innocence."

Vance's manner had an assuaging effect upon the woman; but I could see that Markham was boiling inwardly at Vance's animadversions on him, though he refrained from any interruption.

Miss St. Clair stared steadily at Vance for several minutes.

"I don't know why I should trust you, or even believe you," she said evenly; "but now that Captain Leacock has confessed,—I was afraid it was going to, when he last spoke to me,—I see no reason why I should not answer your questions. . . . Do you truly think he is innocent?"

The question was like an involuntary cry: her pent-up emotion had broken through her carapace of calm.

"I truly do," Vance avowed soberly. "Mr. Markham will tell you that before we left his office I pleaded with him to release Captain Leacock. It was with the hope that your explanations would convince him of the wisdom of such a course, that I urged him to come here."

Something in his tone and manner seemed to inspire her confidence.

"What do you wish to ask me?" she asked.

Vance cast another reproachful glance at Markham, who was restraining his outraged feelings only with difficulty; and then turned back to the woman.

"First of all, will you explain how your gloves and hand-bag found their way into Mr. Benson's house? Their presence there has been preying most distressingly on the District Attorney's mind."

She turned a direct, frank gaze upon Markham.

"I dined with Mr. Benson at his invitation. Things between us were not pleasant, and when we started for home, my resentment of his attitude increased.

"At Times Square I ordered the chauffeur to stop—I preferred returning home alone. In my anger and my haste to get away, I must have dropped my gloves and bag. It was not until Mr. Benson had driven off that I realized my loss, and having no money, I walked home. Since my things were found in Mr. Benson's house, he must have taken them there himself."

"Such was my own belief," said Vance. "And—my word!—it's a deucedly long walk out here, what?"

He turned to Markham with a tantalizing smile.

"Really, y' know, Miss St. Clair couldn't have been expected to reach here before one."

Markham, grim and resolute, made no reply.

"And now," pursued Vance, "I should love to know under what circumstances the invitation to dinner was extended."

Banker Urges State Income Tax As Solution of Revenue Problem

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 4.—The state income tax was suggested as the key to the problem of providing the additional revenue that modern administration demands by Thornton Cooke, chairman of the committee on state taxation, American Bankers' Association here recently.

Cooke, who is president of the Columbia National Bank, Kansas City, spoke before the National Bank Division of the Association. He warned the delegates against an attack in Congress on the present restrictions on taxing national bank shares.

State tax commissioners, seeking additional sources of revenue, he declared, might be expected to ask for a lightening of the federal restriction which requires that national bank shares be not taxed higher than other moneyed capital.

"Congress should not allow their profits to be minimized and their capital curtailed as they surely would be in many states if it became possible for the legislatures to tax banks by themselves," he declared. "The argument of local convenience must give way to the argument of national welfare; we must not weaken our national banks."

"For a solution of the problem in a large way, can we find anything better than the state income tax?" Cooke said. "For the banks, that would be the ideal way out of the conflict between state and federal laws."

"The state income tax seems to work fairly well in most of the states that have adopted it. In a few states business men are reluctant to consider its establishment, for fear that industries would then locate elsewhere. No state wants to handicap itself in business competition. But if the advantages evident in the income tax from many points of view should lead many states to adopt it there would be no question between of advantage or disadvantage by reason of their tax systems."

"The chief argument for the income tax is, of course, its equality. Another is its flexibility. More readily than any other tax, it can be adjusted to the varying requirements of the public service."

The old general property tax system, Cooke said, "has too long been an incitement to evasion, a penalty for success and a brake on progress."

Girl, May Become Concord Mayor

CONCORD, N. H.—Miss Helen Gwendolyn Jones, 24-year-old Concord girl, may be the next mayor of this city, capital of New Hampshire. Miss Jones is the first woman in New Hampshire ever to be nominated for mayor.

Although unversed in practical politics, she defeated two other candidates and ran second only to the present mayor, Fred N. Marden, in the primary contest. On November 8 she and Mayor Marden will be the candidates for election. In the meantime an intensive campaign is in progress that will make new political history in Concord.

Miss Jones was graduated from the University of New Hampshire last June and intended to enter the Yale Law School this fall.

When the vacation season closed she startled the voters by announcing that she was a candidate for the mayor's chair.

Miss Jones now must overcome a political tradition here that the high man in the primary is slated to win the municipal election.

Vance prevents Markham from arresting Leacock when Pfyfe's statements strengthen the case against the captain. It is brought out that Pfyfe had forged Alvin Benson's name to a check. Paula Banning admits having loaned Pfyfe her jewels to put up with Benson as security. Leacock confesses to the murder, but Vance tears the confession to shreds, exposing it as a lie to protect Miss St. Clair.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XLV

(Wednesday, June 19; 4:30 p. m.)
"The quest for enlightenment upon which we are now embarked," said Vance, as we rode up town, "may prove a bit tedious. But you must exert your willpower, and bear with me. You can't imagine what a ticklish task I have on my hands. And it's not a pleasant one either. I'm a bit too young to be sentimental, and yet, of y' know, I'm half inclined to let your culprit go."

"Would you mind telling me why we are calling on Miss St. Clair?" asked Markham resignedly.

"Not at all. Indeed, I deem it best for you to know. There are several points connected with the lady that need elucidation. First, there are the gloves and the handbag. Nor poppy nor mandragora shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep which thou ow'st yesterday until you have learned about those articles—oh, what?—Then, you recall, Miss Hoffman told us that the Major was lending an ear when a certain lady called upon Benson the day he was shot. I suspect that the visitor was Miss St. Clair; and I am rather curious to know what took place in the office that day, and why she came back later.

"Also why did she go to Benson's for tea that afternoon? And what part did the jewels play in the chat?—But there are other items. For example: Why did the Captain take his gun to her? What makes him think she shot Benson?—he really believes it, y' know. And why did she think that he was guilty from the first?"

Markham looked sceptical.

"You expect to tell us all this?" "My hopes run high," returned Vance. "With her verriy parfit gentil murderer, she will have nothing to lose by unburdening her soul. But we must have no blustering. Your police brand of aggressive cross-examination will, I assure you, have no effect upon the lady."

"Just how do you propose to effect your information?"

"With sorbodezza, as the painters say. Much more refined and gentlemanly, y' know."

Markham considered a moment. "I think I'll keep out of it, and leave the Socratic ctenctus entirely to you."

POTASH DEVELOPMENT INSURES SUPPLY WITH AGRICULTURAL NEEDS

WASHINGTON.—Through a cast-off bar of soap American agriculture has been assured of all the potash it will ever need in fertilizer.

The circumstance is as colorful as its effect is important, and it is the key to development of Searles Lake, in California, as the nation's foremost source of muriate.

Dr. J. E. Teeple, consulting chemist for the American Potash and Chemical Corporation, surveying the possibilities of steam evaporation to isolate potash from the lake's vast store of saline substance, found it necessary to develop catalytic agent that would circumvent foaming caused by organic matter carried to the lake from its own watershed. Attempts were made with cholesterylin, absorbent carbons, ether, layers of oil and other materials. All were discarded when it was learned that soap, given itself to foaming properties, not only reverse the usual performance but held salts in equilibrium at various temperatures.

Searles Lake really is no lake at all. It is approximately 30 square miles of crystalline solids, 75 to 80 feet deep and firm enough to support the heaviest automobile. Under the ice-like surface coagulated deposits make room for a brine that seeps into pipe lines rapidly enough to supply factory pumps with four tons every minute. It is estimated the brine will not be exhausted for more than a century.

"This notable production of potash," Dr. Teeple says, "has removed the danger that America will ever suffer a potash famine—a danger often threatening this country. In time of stress it easily would be possible within a year to build plants on this one lake that would supply all of America's potash needs."

At present the United States produces about 25 per cent of the potash it uses, the remainder coming from old established beds in Germany and France. Searles Lake furnishes 55 per cent of the American product.

"We have plenty of possible sources of potash in the United States," Dr. Teeple declares, "but not a great many profitable ones. No doubt there are beds of potash in Texas, and possibly in New York, Michigan, and Ohio, where there are well-known salt deposits. But, whether they are beds that are commercially workable at competitive prices cannot be answered at present. The aluminate deposits in Utah probably can be worked to advantage ultimately."

Potash beds have been found in the deserts of Texas and New Mexico at times as deep as 700 feet, but the beds are considered too far from the center of consumption to offer practical development. The green sands of New Jersey are full of potash, and there is sand in millions of tons, but the absence of a contingent by-product comparable to the borax commercialized with potash at Searles Lake makes exploitation an expensive undertaking. One company is at work on the green sands, however, as a result of discoveries made by Dr. J. W. Thirrenline, of the Department of Agriculture.

Tomato catsup and thick mayonnaise, mixed half and half, make a delicious dressing for plain lettuce and some other salads.

Admiral Grayson Gets His Turkey,
But Finds it Tethered to Tree

WASHINGTON—Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson has a reputation among his friends as a great hunter but a poor shot.

The story is beginning to go the rounds about a hunting party given by B. M. Baruch on his estate in South Carolina, at which the admiral was given a practical demonstration of his friends' opinion of his marksmanship.

Elaborate plans were laid for the hunt and Admiral Grayson was told glowing stories of the abundance of wild turkeys in the neighborhood, receiving minute instructions on how to make a kill.

But after ploughing through the forests for hours, the admiral's game bag remained empty and he had started the homeward trek when suddenly the sharp call of a turkey gobble sounded.

The other hunters stood back to permit the admiral to stalk his prey. Soon the woodland resounded with the report of both barrels of his gun, and the admiral rushed forward to claim the prostrate fowl.

As he picked it up, however, he found to his amazement that the turkey's leg was tied with a string to a sapling and the fowl was distinctly of the barn yard variety. To make matters even worse, the leg bore a card inscribed:

"With the compliments of B. M. Baruch."

Ancients Knew of Anesthetics, Lines from Homer's Pen Reveal

CHICAGO—The first use of an anesthetic known to man probably was described in the writings of Homer.

A study of the history of medical science, completed in the library of the Chicago branch of the University of Illinois medical school, reveals the passage.

"Presently she (Helen) cast a drug into the wine, whereof they drank, a drug to lull all pain and anger and bring forgetfulness of every sorrow. Whoso should drink a draught thereof, when it is mingled in the bowl, on that day he would let no tear fall on his cheeks, nor though his mother and his father died, not though men slew his brother or dear son with the sword before his face and his own eyes beheld it."

The study traces the evolution of the use of anesthetics from the days when a patient was tied to a table. It was not until 1842 that a general anesthetic was used with any degree of success.

In 1841 Dr. C. W. Long of Georgia conceived the idea that sulphuric ether might be used for surgical operations. A year later he carried out his idea successfully.

It was shortly after that W. T. G. Morton made the discovery that teeth could be pulled painlessly while the patient was under the influence of ether, and in 1846 he performed such an experiment with success.

"It was so astounding," says the history, "that he prevailed upon the chief surgeon of the Massachusetts general hospital to allow him to demonstrate the anesthetic before a clinic of eminent surgeons, and from then on its use became general."

The first record of local anesthesia comes from the works of Pliny, who related that the Egyptians applied to painful wounds a species of rock brought from Memphis, powdered and moistened with sour wine, which probably produced carbonic acid gas.

High school gymnasium.

REALLY NEEDED — That Pampa students keenly feel their needs is shown in an editorial in this week's Spotlight, the student newspaper prepared by the pupils themselves.

We refer to the plea for a high school gymnasium. It is indeed regrettable that in its rapid growth Pampa has not been able to include a gymnasium. Granting that athletics is a wholesome activity, it follows that a place should be available for indoor exercise and recreation during the months when Panhandle breezes make outdoor play almost impossible.

Basketball has become a very popular game, but it is basically an indoor activity, and it has caused scores of churches to include large gymnasiums in their physical plants. The gymnasium as a social and recreational center should be a part of every community's assets. As a necessity, we would place it above parks. Every school makes an effort to have an auditorium large enough to seat all its pupils. Such an auditorium has many uses. Yet a good gymnasium is no less valuable, because it becomes a place for indoor athletics, gymnastic training, receptions, parties, pageants, and other activities which cannot be adequately presented elsewhere.

Consider that athletics as a target for criticism involves largely outdoor games. You do not hear objections to gymnastic training which makes for symmetrical development and which in the form of class work includes every student. Athletics, it will be admitted, should include the whole school and should be adapted to the needs of various types of individuals.

We submit that girls' athletics is as important as games and drills for men, that Pampa high school should have a director of women's athletics, that regular classes and required recreation should be available for the girls, and that the boys should not get all of the funds for coaches' salaries and equipment. Of course, this means a gymnasium. It means a large, well-aired and well-lighted room, equipped with recreational and gymnastic devices, and having shower baths adjacent.

We speak of shower baths for a reason, and that is because it is a violation of all training rules to allow a man hot with exercise to ride several blocks in a cold wind. Moreover, many coaches rightly refuse to let their men, scantily clad, alternately perspire and chill in the outdoor basketball game. It is dangerous.

These things are well realized by the school board. The members desired a gymnasium, both as a basketball plant and as a classroom for a program of indoor athletics, but the imperative need for recitation rooms caused the idea to be dropped for the present. It should be known, however, that it has been the purpose of the school trustees not to raise the school taxes in the independent district, but to let the increased valuations pay for the improvements. The voters should therefore realize that within a short time it will be possible to pass a bond issue to construct a gymnasium-classroom annex without increasing the tax rate.

We feel sure that when the next bonds are voted the trustees will gladly include the building so much desired by the students—a modern gymnasium.

SCIENTIFIC—Persons of a scientific attitude refuse to be so alarmed over Malthusian doctrines, maintaining that if food, oil, rubber, or other necessities become scarce, science will find a way to produce these things synthetically, or that improved culture will increase the outputs.

In a sense, this has been done already. Many of our fruits in their original state would not support a very large population, yet the improved varieties are quite different. The production per tree has been multiplied many times.

The control of mind over matter, then, may be expected to offset growing needs. Edison is turning from mechanics to plant life to seek a rubber plant which will produce quickly in America. His is not an impossible task.

A Texas University professor has discovered that electricity will speed up plant production, and he will try to stimulate cotton plants until he obtains the character desired, namely a short growing period which will overcome the boll weevil menace. That would be a blow to the weevil, whose life is well ordered. However, nature is a thoughtful force, and if all cotton were raised in a shorter time, the weevils in a few generations might re-order their cycles.

It may be seen by comparison that nature is ready to alter her course if necessary, and man should not hesitate to do this voluntarily if there is something to be gained by it.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Down at Staunton Military Academy, some of the boys began telling young Lamar Pickett that prohibition was a flop.

Haw, haw! Lamar happens to be the son of the renowned Mr. Deets Pickett, research secretary for the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals. Mr. Pickett probably know as much about prohibition as any other man in the United States. One of the best things he does is to tell people all about it.

"Dear Dad," wrote Lamar, "I wish you would send me all the data on prohibition you can rake up. Some of these boys claim that prohibition is a big flop. One fellow claims that the United States government has published statistics admitting that there are 200,000 bootleggers in the United States. Is that right?"

"Particularly, have you any statistics regarding Buffalo? My roommate says there is more hooch being sold there than ever before. Please try to send this information as soon as possible.

"LAMAR."

Mr. Pickett began by telling Lamar that it was a promising indication for the future national welfare when boys began to discuss great public questions independently among themselves. Here are some of the things the Staunton boys have been hearing lately from Lamar:

"Prohibition came after one hundred years of discussion and experimenting with many other methods of handling the liquor traffic and liquor evil. The liquor traffic corrupted the political organization in the cities and the nation. This corruption became perfectly amazing, so much so that an investigation by a Senate committee during the war period revealed that brewers were actively hostile to the interests of America in an organized way.

"Submission of a constitutional amendment was preceded by thousands of prohibition victories in local option elections and state elections.

"Certain people, sections and communities refuse to accept this verdict in regard to the question, although it has been reached by exactly the processes outlined by the men who made the American republic. The majority of the people in New York City, and other great cities where large masses of immigrants from Europe have been kept uninformed in regard to American institutions and ideas, led by some of their great newspapers, have tried to break prohibition down."

Menus for the Family

BREAKFAST—Baked pears, cereal, cream, broiled cottage ham, creamed spinach, whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Baked rice and cheese, French endive with French dressing, floating island, milk, tea.

DINNER—Stewed chicken, grilled sweet potatoes, creamed onions, stuffed pear salad, fruit jelly with whipped cream, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

A breakfast dish of broiled ham in a border of creamed spinach is most attractive to look at and delightfully wholesome. Small growing children must have plenty of vegetables in their diet and any easily digested appetizing dish can well be included in the breakfast menu.

Baked Rice and Cheese

Two cups boiled rice, 2 cups canned tomatoes forced through a sieve, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons minced sweet pepper, 2 tablespoons minced celery, 2 teaspoons onion juice, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup grated cheese, 4 tablespoons buttered crumbs.

Combine rice and tomato pulp. Mix thoroughly and add salt, pepper, celery and tomato juice. Mix well and stir in melted butter. Place a layer of the mixture in a well buttered baking dish. Cover with a layer of grated cheese and continue layer for layer until all is used, letting the last layer be of cheese. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve from the baking dish.

BREAKFAST—Stewed prunes, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, creamed potatoes, oven toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Timbales of cauliflower with tomato sauce, toasted cheese sandwiches, chilled apple sauce, chocolate squares, milk tea.

DINNER—Roast Chicken, gravy, mashed potatoes, broccoli in Hollandaise sauce, grapefruit and endive salad, coconut custard pie, milk, coffee.

Broccoli belongs to the cabbage family and is quite delicate in flavor. It contains more fat than cabbage but less mineral salts. Let stand head down in cold salted water for an hour before cooking. Boil gently in salted water until tender and drain thoroughly and immediately. If left in the water after it is done, it will break, lose its color and become wilted.

Chocolate Squares

Two squares bitter chocolate, 4 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, 1-2 cup flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 cup broken hickory nuts.

Melt chocolate over hot water. Add melted butter and stir well. Add sugar and stir until thoroughly mixed. Beat egg slightly and stir into mixture. Mix and sift flour and salt and stir into first mixture. Add nuts and vanilla and mix well. Spread on an oiled pan and bake in a moderate oven and mark off in squares. Let stand in the pan until cool. The squares will harden as they cool.

WOMEN TO END DUPLICATION OF WORK BY ORGANIZED WOMEN

NEW YORK—Efficiency is becoming the watchword of women's organizations and in their efforts to attain this goal, even rival groups are cooperating.

Leaders of the most influential women's clubs of this country have agreed to discuss ways and means to avoid duplication of effort. At present, many of them have programs concerning welfare of women and children, politics, junior education and general cultural activities of women, which though interesting and valuable are repetitious.

Delegates from 34 organizations comprising the National Council of Women of the United States will attend the 14th annual convention at which its president, Dr. Valeria H. Parker of New York, predicts a co-operative program will be adopted. The meetings are to be held at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel from December 5 to 10. More than 300 women from all parts of the United States will assemble.

"At a time when sinister forces are endeavoring to create suspicion and antagonism between citizens of differing races and religious faiths," says the Dr. Parker, "the National Council of Women of the United States has an important duty to fulfill in binding more closely the women of its many large and powerful organizations. We want them to see the possibilities of an association which, without interference in specific programs and activities offers nevertheless, a clearing house for a comparison of the accomplishments and for the prevention of duplication of effort."

The convention plans three subjects as keynotes of the discussion. They are, the importance and activities of the Children's Bureau; contributions towards the welfare and progress of our country made by women in forty years of organization, and the aftermath of the Mississippi valley flood and its relation to family welfare.

The evening sessions of the conference will be of interest to the general public. On December 6th there when the following club president will speak:

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, American Association of University Women; Mrs. John D. Sherman, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Lillian Clayton, American Nurses Association; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, National Association of Colored Women; Mrs. Robert E. Speer, National Board of Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Joseph Friend, National Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. Lena M. Phillips, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. J. Walter Friedberk, National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods; Miss Belles Sherwin, National League of Women Voters; Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., Needlework Guild of America; Mrs. Frances E. Burns.

Under the auspices of the National Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley of New York is arranging a musical program for Dec. 7. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will be chief speaker at a mass meeting Dec. 9.

Ricard McGuire of the Gordon Stores is again at work after several days illness in the local hospital. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Coffee and Harry Younger were in Amarillo Wednesday on business.

RUTH HURST

(By Associated Press.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Though the identity of the "lone-star" extra girl who averaged five days work a week for six months has been kept a secret by the casting corporation through which the movie studios hire their "atmosphere," there is one newcomer to Hollywood whose employment record for the past two months is nothing to sniff at.

She is Ruth Hurst, a little dark-haired, brown-eyed girl from Atlanta, who came west to live with her mother and sisters after four years on the stage with Fred Stone in New York. During the approximately two months Ruth has been working in films she has averaged more than six days a week in front of the camera, and she could have worked more if she had been able to be two places at once.

In choosing curtains for the living room, select a fabric that will stand light and laundering. The colors should tone in with the other furnishings in the room without making the windows too conspicuous.

Cottage cheese is delicious in salads. Pile it lightly on lettuce leaves or shredded cabbage. Add a colorful garnish such as diced pickled beet, strips of pimiento, chopped green pepper, or sliced raw tomato. French mayonnaise, or bottled dressing. Or for a more elaborate salad, mix the cheese with nuts or olives and form into balls or mold in cups. Cottage cheese also combines well with fruits, fresh, stewed, or canned in salads.

Tuesday is better than Monday for wash day. A day is needed in most homes to straighten up the house after Sunday's relaxation. To look over the clothes, mend them when necessary to prevent larger tears, remove unusual stains, and put the white clothes to sea. Then an early start can be made on the work on Tuesday.

CHILDREN OF RANGES GROW UP IN SADDLES, RIDE LIKE VETERANS

Youngsters in the southwest learn to ride as soon as they learn to walk, and are helping on the range long before they reach their teens. The two maids above are members of a feminine polo team at San Angelo, Texas, made up of girls who have been riding since childhood. Below is young Joe Stocks of San Angelo, a horseman at the age of three.

STAMFORD, Texas—The qualities which made for pioneer hardihood are being bred into the bones of the younger generation of the range country.

Children begin at kindergarten age out here to learn self-reliance, by being allowed to take part in grown-up affairs. Everywhere they are riding horses and doing the work of the range with the cocksureness of their elders.

Recently Roy Spires, Jr., 5 years old, was helping his father load 20 cars of cattle at Maryneal. The horse that the diminutive rider was astride heard the puff of a train and wheeled suddenly only to see another train and whirl again. Roy, Jr., was dumped unceremoniously on the ground. It was a hard fall, but he climbed back on his mount and continued working, with not a word to his father.

The lad has been riding since he was three, and his nine-year-old sister works cattle like a seasoned hand. "She has a lot of sense about cattle," her father says.

O. W. Cardwell of Junction has a family of seven children, every one of whom rides a horse and helps on the ranch. He puts them on horse back when they are about 3 years old and his boys, 9 and 10 years old now, are playing polo with the cowboys on the range.

Tommie Smith, 10-year-old daughter of a Crockett county ranchman, has been riding since she was three, and for the last year or two she has been riding range with her father, who admits she can spot an ailing sheep as quickly as he can.

In San Angelo a group of young women who have been riding horses almost since infancy, have formed what is believed to be the only amateur polo club in the west composed entirely of women.

Touchdowns Lighten Dad's Pocketbook

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Jimmy Armstead, Vanderbilt backfield star, is a son after his father's heart—and, figuratively, after his pocketbook.

At the beginning of the football season, Wirt Armstead made a "sporting proposition" to his son that for each touchdown he scored a $5 bill would be added to his allowance.

But after Jimmy scored five touchdowns against the University of Chattanooga and four against Ouchita College, Father Armstead had a hasty talk with Jimmy and ruled the $5 would apply only against Southern Conference teams, while $2 would be the reward for all others.

Jimmy rolled up 78 points in five games to claim national limelight as an individual scorer.

Semi-Pro Stars Go to Big Show

ST. PAUL—Through the interest of St. Paul sportsmen, Minnesota has a system of naming a state championship semi-pro baseball team which apparently has advantage for fans, players and organized baseball as a whole.

Every fall, pennant winner and runner-up in a dozen state leagues engage in a state tournament at the St. Paul American Association baseball park. This gives the rural players the thrill of playing in an AA park, affords a change of baseball diet for Twin City fans and saves the ivory hunters much hard work incident to scouring the country-side.

Squash King

too much dependence has been centered on the elusive Mr. Gilbert.

Watching the Wolverines in action, three players, Oosterbaan, Gilbert and Baer stand out. In the Illinois game, Oosterbaan was not at his best, Baer played himself out and was forced to retire in the final period, while Gilbert could lend but moral support from a seat on the sidelines.

The failure of these three stars to function in high, perhaps best explains the upset of Michigan. In conclusion, don't forget that a potentially great Illinois team trimmed them.

Pear salad is unusually good. Either fresh or canned pears may be used. If using canned pears, drain the fruit, but save the pear juice for a fruit punch, with lemon or orange juice added. Wash and chill the lettuce so that it will be crisp. Arrange the pears on the lettuce, sprinkle with grated cheese and garnish with salad dressing. Fresh pears must be pared and cored just before serving or they will discolor.

"Big League" Hockey Starts Season With Four New Managers

NEW YORK—Four new managers will pilot teams in the National Hockey League, whose season of 44 games opens on November 15, the other six teams standing pat on the mentors who directed them during the 1926-27 season.

Two of the new pilots, Wilfred "Shoray" Green, of the New York Americans, and Jack Adams, of the Detroit Cougars, have had playing experience of several years in the major leagues, but Barney Stanley, the new pilot of the Chicago Black Hawks, and Connie Smythe, who will be in charge of the Toronto Maple Leafs, are making their first big league appearance.

Stanley has played most of his hockey in western Canada. Last season he managed the Winnipeg Maroons in the Central Hockey League. Smythe is well known as the manager and coach of the University of Toronto sextet, International intercollegiate title holders.

Shorty Green's playing days came to an end last spring when he suffered a serious injury in a game with the New York Rangers. He underwent an operation and a kidney was removed. This year he succeeded Newsy Lalonde, veteran Franch Canadian player-manager, on the bench. Shorty starred at right wing for the Hamilton Tigers before joining the Americans.

Adams, who was with the world's champion Ottawa Senators as substitute center last season, will succeed Duke Keats as manager of Detroit. Art Duncan started last season as manager, but Keats was in charge when the season ended.

In nearly two decades of professional hockey, Adams has starred with two world's champion teams—the Toronto St. Patricks and the Ottawa Senators—and also has played with the Vancouver Maroons, runners-up for the world title several times.

Stanley is succeeding Pete Muldoon as manager of the Chicago Black Hawks. He has attained a good reputation as a hockey leader in western Canada, whence most of the Black Hawks were recruited.

The Toronto fans expected a great deal from Connie Smythe because of his success in the intercollegiate ranks.

Other managers are: Art Ross, the Boston Bruins; Dave Gill, Ottawa Canadians; Eddie Garard, Montreal Maroons; Odie Cleghorn, Pittsburgh Pirates, and Lester Patrick, New York Rangers.

BILLY EVANS Says

Star Hard to Replace

Take one star out of the lineup of a major league club and it makes a tremendous difference. I could enumerate a score of such cases.

No second baseman has ever been able to fill the shoes of Eddie Collins when injury or illness has made it impossible for him to play.

A lot of outfielders have essayed at various times to take Tris Speaker's place, when for some reason he has been unable to play, but none has delivered in his incomparable style.

When Walter Johnson was in his prime, there never was a pitcher who came even close to taking his turn on the rubber as the ace of the staff, when Walter was ailing.

All of which simply proves that one star can either make or break a ball club.

Gilbert Was Missed

While I have always realized that such a happening holds good in most sports, not until the Michigan-Illinois game did I fully appreciate what an outstanding gridiron performer meant to the success of his team.

Louis Gilbert, sensational half-back of Michigan, was unable to play against Illinois. Michigan was beaten. Possibly the result would have been the same had Gilbert played but certainly it would have not been so easily accomplished by the proteges of Rob Zuppke.

Gilbert was operated on for an infected arm a few hours prior to the game. The Michigan coaches, while realizing what his absence meant, placed his welfare above the desire to win from Illinois.

Against Ohio State, with Gilbert starring, Michigan looked like a great team. With Gilbert on the sidelines in the Illinois game, Michigan looked very ordinary.

Michigan's offense in the Illinois game never functioned properly, making it seem that much of it was built up around Gilbert.

Explains Michigan's Defeat

Michigan missed Gilbert in almost every department of play. Illinois enjoyed a decided edge in punting, which might not have happened with Gilbert in the game. His punting against Ohio State had the Buckeyes constantly on the defensive.

Michigan's passing game carried little or no deception, quite the contrary of the previous games in which Oosterbaan alternated with Gilbert in hurling the passes.

In running back punts, Gilbert was also sadly missed. All in all, Michigan was simply lost without him, making it seem that possibly
