Hutchinson Paper Prints Edition of 32 Excellent Pages

A magnificent, 32-page Rock Island industrial edition of the Hutchinson County News published at Stinnett has been received here. Profusely illustrated and having stories of the principal men and industries of the county, it is an edition which reflects credit upon the business men who liberally supported it with advertising, upon the city it portrays, and upon Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Smith, the editors.

Stinnett, the county seat of Hutchinson county, now is served by the Rock Island railroad, which last month entered the city limits. It is near the county's center, at the northeast corner of the oil district. Its future is helped by the fact that not only is it in a rich oil and agricultural territory, but is mid-way between the Amarillo and Liberal terminals of the new railroad.

Hutchinson county, the official newspaper states, had 1,000 population in 1925, but now it boasts between 30,000 and 40,000 people.

(By Associated Press) FORT WORTH, Dec. 5.—A cattle ranch won in a poker game now is contributing to the education of Texas youth.

The last legal formality has been completed by which ownership of the 6666 ranch, located near Pampa, is transferred to Texas Christian university of Fort Worth. Mrs. Burk Burnett, widow of the late Captain Burk Burnett, deeded the land to the school.

Captain Burnett named his ranch, the 6666, in token of the poker hand of four sixes which brought him the property and elevated him from a cowboy to a cattle baron.

When Burnett and Texas were young, he rode his pony to town one day and went to a saloon noted for its "honest" gaming tables. He sat down at one of the "honest tables," and with several months' earnings from cow-punching, he bought chips for a poker game. The last chip clicked into the pot and the captain-cowboy thought it sounded "taps" for his bank roll. But his luck turned, and he won several hundred dollars. Then an opponent who had lost every cent made a desperate challenge.

"Burnet, I'll play my ranch against your pile," he said. "You're on," Burnett answered. "We'll take a deal and a draw."

On the deal, Burnett got two sixes. He discarded three cards and kept the pair. On the draw, he received two more sixes. The four sixes won the ranch.

The 6666 ranch was the fountain of a large fortune, for the land, located in the Texas Panhandle, later produced oil and gas.

According to T. D. Hobart, the original 6666 ranch, and probably the one mentioned in the above story, is not located in the Panhandle, but downstate. That ranch, however, started Burnett on the way to fame and fortune, and likely enabled him to buy the present Panhandle 6666 ranch from the White Deer Land company. The price was only $2.50 per acre for 107,560 acres, but that was considered a fair price at the time. The ranch land included in the sale was 12 miles on the north and south sides and 14 miles on the east and west. The Empire Gas and Fuel company is drilling a large number of gas wells on the 6666 ranch to feed its mammoth Pampa-to-Kansas City gas line.

They Must Show Cause

The first step to bring to order the confused status of the Fall-Sinclair Teapot Dome case and subsequent jury-tampering charges will be made by the government Dec. 5, when these five men appear before Justice Siddons at Washington "to show cause why they should not be cited for contempt of court." They are Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil man; William J. Burns, head of the Burns Detective Agency, and his son, W. Sherman Burns; Henry Mason Day, alleged "liaison man" between Sinclair and detectives shadowing the Fall-Sinclair jury, and Sheldon Clark, right-hand man of Sinclair.

British and Soviet Fail to Agree

GENEVA, Dec. 5.—It was not possible to reach any basis of an agreement, says an official communique issued by the British delegation at the conclusion of an interview today between Sir Austen Chamberlain and Maxim Litvinoff, arranged to discuss Soviet and British relations.

(By the Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Hailed before the District of Columbia Supreme court on contempt charges today, Harry Sinclair and William Burns and their associates insisted they were well within the law in having the jury in the Fall-Sinclair oil case placed under surveillance.

Henry Mason Day, official of one of the Sinclair Oil companies, said he hired Burns men to shadow the jury at Sinclair's request. He explained that the oil man believed that an improper effort would be made to have the jury return a verdict against Sinclair. Sinclair asked that the case be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Almost as soon as hearings opened with a denial of guilt by the defense, a recess had been ordered to allow the district attorney's office time to study the defendants' replies.

Senate Will Battle Over Elections in Two States

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—A new-born Congress opened its eyes at noon today on Capitol hill to look upon a world full of legislative and political tribulation.

Even the process of inducting new members into office at the opening session, usually a dull formality, is colored this time by the spectacular Senate quarrel over election contests from Pennsylvania and Illinois.

Trouble at the House end of the capitol was less painfully vivid, but not less real. At the moment the opening gavel fell, House leaders found themselves in the midst of a legislative jam, with upwards of 5,000 bills already on file.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The right of representative elect James Beck of Philadelphia to a seat in the House will be contested by the Democrats on the ground that he is not a legal resident of that state.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Nicholas Longworth of Ohio today was re-elected speaker of the House.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Tony Harrison, 13, is orphaned when Jeff Harrison, his father, is shot in a poker game in Caldwell, Kas. He is befriended by

Gordon W. Lillie, a restaurant waiter, by

Joe Craig, foreman of the Bar K ranch, who takes Tony to the Bar K to live, and by

Colonel Titus Moore, owner of the ranch, which is in the Cherokee Strip.

There the shy little boy meets Rita, tomboy daughter of Titus Moore.

The year is 1880, and Gordon Lillie is thinking of joining David Payne, who is agitating for the opening of the Indian territory lands, when he gets an offer of a teaching post in the Indian school in Pawnee.

There he lets his hair grow long and becomes known as Pawnee Bill. After a quarrel with the school superintendent, he hits the man and knocks him out.

CHAPTER XII

Behind that blow had been every ounce of the young man's supple strength. It was a real sleep-producing punch. The superintendent dropped to the floor and in falling struck his head against the window sill. Blood trickled from the cut and he lay like one dead.

Pawnee Bill turned on his heel and stalked out. Furiously he walked, and meditated as he walked. He threw himself down on the bank of Black Bear Creek and tried to determine on his next move.

Finally he got up and made straight for the Indian agent's office. Major Bowman was waiting for him, with an expression of deep concern.

"Bill, you're lucky you didn't kill him. He says you tried to. They've taken him to the hospital and he's charging you with attempted murder."

Pawnee Bill uttered a sarcastic little laugh. "Huh! He's just full of charges of all kinds."

Bowman was pacing up and down uneasily.

"Well," said Lillie, "you're apparently more worried about it than I am. What shall I do?"

"You take my advice and light out of here, Bill, until it blows over. I don't want to see anything happen to you."

"I'm going." Pawnee Bill stuck out his hand.

The other clasped it with his own. "I'll write to you when I hear from you."

With a charge of attempted murder against him, he deemed it best to travel light and travel fast. Accordingly, he was unencumbered with excess baggage when he mounted his horse and turned its face toward the northwest.

Half a day's riding brought him to the Salt Fork of the Arkansas, not far from its confluence with the Arkansas itself, and about 30 miles away from Pawnee. The river was "swimming" at the usual ford and the current looked dangerously swift. He saw a "buggy" approaching him, with two men in it and for a moment he was apprehensive, thinking they might be after him.

"Still," he concluded, "it would be impossible for two men in a rig to travel as fast as I did," and he stood his ground.

The pair climbed out and hailed him in a friendly manner. One of them scratched his head. "How are we going to get across?" he wondered.

A minute or two before their arrival the young fugitive had spied the ferry boat distance upstream, stranded on the south bank. It was impossible for one man to maneuver, but with three it should be no very difficult matter.

"We'll take that ferry," Pawnee Bill said, "and put your buggy and the horse on it. Then we can take our clothes off and push."

This they did. They waded part of the way and swam the rest.

It had been his intention to put Oklahoma behind him as fast as he could, but after parting with the two strangers he headed his horse west, paralleling the Salt Fork upstream.

That evening he rode up to the bunk house of the Bar K ranch.

To Joe Craig he explained his plight. "I don't aim to linger, I'm heading for the Kansas line without delaying to pay party calls."

Craig scratched his head and grinned. "That would seem a right smart thing to do. Bill I'm real grateful that you can't make your visits stretch a little longer. Seems every time I see you you're in a hurry to get some place. Let's see; it's going on two years ago that you dropped in to pay your respects on your way south. Man, how you've filled out!" He appraised the other admiringly. "And all that long hair and everything. . . Couple more years and derved if you won't be able to put my shoulders right on the ground."

"There's twenty dollars, even, that Bill throws him."

Pawnee Bill laughed. "I won't have to wait a couple of years, Joe, I can throw you right now."

Craig looked at him in amazement. "What! Doggone if I don't take some of that cockiness right out of you. Tony," he called, as he caught sight of the youngster coming from the corral, "come here and meet an old friend. You'd hardly know him now, but it's Bill Lillie, and he's got nerve enough to say he can put my shoulders on the ground."

"Any day in the week," Pawnee Bill supplemented with a wink at Tony.

"You'll have to prove that right after supper," said Craig scornfully. "I'll give you the benefit of a rest after being all day in the saddle."

Pawnee Bill nodded. "That's settled, then. Speaking of growing," he added, "look at Tony."

And the boy had grown amazingly. He was fully as tall now as Pawnee Bill, and although he was slender he was far from frail-looking, and he moved about with an easy grace that is unusual in growing boys his age. His skin was as brown as Joe Craig's, for he was a decided brunet type and tanned easily. His hair fell about his head in a confusion of black ringlets and his brown eyes sparkled with vitality and splendid health.

Pawnee Bill professed astonishment. "I never saw such a change," he declared. "How old are you now, Tony?"

Tony said he was "going on 15."

"That," said Joe Craig proudly, "is what the Bar K did for him. . . Come on now, Bill; grub's ready."

He led the way to the cook house, where they were met by the other Bar K riders, straggling in from the range.

"I've got a grub-liner here," Joe Craig explained to the cook, a frowzy looking individual with sour expression and a huge mustache. "He's got a contract on his hands that he got to fulfill as soon as his grub's settled."

Half an hour after supper Colonel Moore came sauntering down toward the bunk house and found Joe Craig and Pawnee Bill calmly sitting to the waist while the other Bar K riders looked expectantly on.

The colonel's admirable control of his curiosity was never more evident. He nodded politely to the young visitor and gave him cordial greeting. "Right glad to see you, Bill. Hardly recognized you at first." He sat calmly down beside Lafe Whitney. "Is a man permitted to bet on the outcome of this little encounter?" he inquired amusedly of Joe Craig.

Craig grinned sheepishly. "Bill and I," he explained, "had a little difference of opinion and Bill just naturally insisted on finding out which one was right."

"Craig's a liar, Colonel," said Pawnee Bill, smiling. "I'm simply saving him a two year wait."

"You spoke about betting. Colonel," spoke up Heck Sherman.

"The odds are two to one that Craig will throw him."

Titus Moore looked casually at Pawnee Bill as he stood, naked down to the belt line, waiting for the word to go. The long-haired youth was built like a wedge, with broad and powerful shoulders and slender waist. His depth of chest was remarkable, and the colonel noted, with suddenly narrowed eyes and pursed lips, the strong neck and the smooth flow of muscles in the upper arm. The young man presented a striking picture; from the hips up he looked, with his flowing mane and splendid torso, like a man from the primitive.

Even so, Craig undoubtedly was the stronger of the two; besides, his strength was of the wiry, tensile kind that is more enduring. He was tall and lean and hard as nails. If Pawnee Bill hoped to win, the colonel was thinking, it would have to be quickly; he would have to gamble on throwing everything into a sudden burst of power, for Craig was built for a long race.

Titus Moore finally spoke. "It wouldn't be polite," he murmured, "to bet against a guest of the Bar K—not at those odds anyway. Here's $20, even, that Bill throws him."

There was a quick scramble among the men to cover his bet. "I'm constrained," remarked Lafe Whitney, "to let my natural courtesy take a back seat while I rake in some easy money. If anyone in this crowd can touch Craig's shoulders to the ground I don't know a jack rabbit from a branded steer."

The colonel smiled. "There's a trick or two about this game you don't know, Lafe."

The combatants came together. Craig reached out his long arms, but Pawnee Bill knocked them down. Again they came together and Craig with a swift movement, got his arms around the other's waist and began to squeeze like a bear. Pawnee Bill's doubled fists were braced against Craig's chest and his back arched against the crushing strength of those long, powerful arms.

Suddenly Pawnee Bill seemed to collapse toward his opponent and for a brief moment there was a resounding thumping of the pressure against his back. But as he fell forward Craig he twisted his body with a quick exertion of strength, turning his back to his opponent. In the same instant his hands went around Craig's neck and clasped firmly. Then he bent forward and pulled downward with all his might.

Craig had been blissfully unaware of the trap set for him by his younger opponent. When he felt himself being pulled inexorably over those broad shoulders and toward the ground, it was too late; he could no more have resisted that downward pull than he could have stopped an avalanche or discoursed on the nebular hypothesis. Down he went in a flying heap, and as he touched the ground a spry young man, a little short of breath but still capable of applying the necessary power where it was needed, pinned—and then sprang lightly to his feet.

In the next chapter Craig lays some plans in Caldwell and asks Titus Moore for that leave of absence.

Oil Fields Lose Men, Not Horses

GARBER Okla., Dec 5.—Man is being eliminated from the oil industry at a faster rate than the horse.

The last crew of laborers displaced by machinery is that of the ditch diggers. A humorous oil company official who started his career as a ditch digger remarked recently that if he were a young man today he would not have the same opportunity to start his quest for success in the business. He pointed out that not a crew of pick-and-shovel men is working in the southwest oil fields today, although more pipes are being laid under ground than at any time since the discovery of petroleum in this section.

A 22-inch pipe line to carry gas from the Texas Panhandle to Kansas City, now is being built by large machines which dig into the earth and make excavations of perfect geometric proportions. Meanwhile motorization of the oil industry is yet to be completed, for trucks cannot go through mud during the rainy season. During the wet summer many trucks were pulled through the mire by horses. Derrick men and rig workers rode to work and ponies instead of flivvers. Because the oil industry must keep its wheels turning in all weather, the horse continues to have his place.

THE new Ford car has been on the market only a few days, but it has already created unusual interest throughout the country. Millions of people got the full details of it last week for the first time and were delighted with the story of its beauty, speed, comfort, safety and low price.

All day long and far into the night, great crowds gathered in hundreds of Ford salesrooms from Maine to Florida and from New York to San Francisco. Never has such interest been shown in a new car. Never has any new car so far exceeded expectations.

People knew that Ford was making a new car. They knew it was a good car. They had read announcements about it. But they had no idea it would be a car like this. Their quick appreciation of it is shown by the record-breaking sales.

Greatest day in the history of the automobile industry

Thousands upon thousands of orders for the new Ford car have been received since last Friday. These, and the advance orders placed with us by motorists even before the car was officially announced, will keep the entire Ford plant working day and night for weeks to come.

Such figures are a clear and unmistakable reflection of the value that has been built into the new Ford car. It is, without question, the outstanding purchase of all time in the light-car field.

It is difficult to believe that so much speed, power, beauty, quiet, comfort and safety can be had at such a low price. It would be impossible if this new car were made by anyone but Ford.

Only Ford could sell such a fine car at such a low price

The low price of the new Ford car and its exceptional performance are the result of manufacturing practices and economies as unusual as the car itself. The new Ford is more than a new automobile. It is a new idea in modern, economical transportation.

By all means, take a little while today to learn about this new automobile. You will know that there is nothing quite like it anywhere in quality and price.

DEAD REBELS—A dead rebel or presidential candidate in Mexico is as desirable in Mexico as a dead bandit in Texas. In both instances, the chief difficulty lay in apprehending and silencing the offenders.

Mexico, with her chief assets in raw resources, found her frontier conditions of lawlessness the explanation of her inability to halt bandit depredations. Material progress, however, has pointed out the way to peace and order. The airplane, which quickly overtakes fleeing bands where no ground force could be effective, has recently been of great use in bombing the mountain stronghold of rebels and robbers.

Revolution of the Mexican type can exist only where the organized government can be harassed by small groups. The airplane should reduce this possibility and point the way toward permanent stability, or at least to guarantee that revolution can be only through concerted effort of an outraged people.

NATURE'S WAY—When you consider it carefully, there is simply no way of explaining how nature devises her marvels, from the tiniest organism up to man as an animal. Nature's combinations employ the most involved laws of chemistry, mechanics, and physics. Moreover, these are combined with directive force ranging from crude nerve impulses to thought itself.

Evolution as a term expressing period-improvement is not a complete theory, and no longer is so considered. Even if many of its phases were true—and it is known that progressive improvement has taken place through the years—this does not even remotely explain how that mere matter, by all the known impulses it receives, has come to use processes and counter processes that only a master, indeed infinite mind, could conceive. There can be contained in the living protoplasm of plants and animals a remarkable tendency which makes for adjustment to environment, and while this, under changing conditions, can give evidence found useful by evolutionists, it is far short of the ultimate in nature's processes.

A little knowledge of nature is a dangerous thing, wrongly used in thinking, but the real naturalist is a philosopher worthy of knowing. And many men get credit for being inventors when they merely are observing some of nature's methods and laws. The submarine is a mechanical fish, but a young German inventor has shown that the submarine is not the only vessel that can use the mechanics of the finny tribe. He watched a trout swimming up stream without movement of fin or tail. The average person would take this phenomena as a matter of course, yet well defined methods are used even by the fish. The closest observation was necessary to discover that water swallowed by the trout was being spouted through its gills with force, similar to the effort of a man pushing the water with his feet. Investigation showed that this method of propulsion supplemented the tail and fin action of many fishes, making possible the surprising speed many of them display.

As a result of these studies, the inventor designed a boat having its screw not in the stern of the vessel, but in front in a funnel under the bow. The water is sucked in rapidly, then expelled through slits opening along the boat's side. The effect was remarkable, for the new design gave a speed of 20 knots on six horsepower, whereas usually five times that much power is required. Steering and stopping are readily accomplished. By removing front resistance, back draughts, and gaining the new propulsion, it is hoped to cut Atlantic crossing time in half.

The principle of the humming bird is sought in aviation, and scores of scientists are seeking others of nature's secrets. Most progress is made through the adjustment for man's needs of factors long ago perfected in nature.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—There is sort of a half-belief over the country that Washington office buildings are teeming with reform societies whose first name is "Anti-."

As a matter of fact, there are only two, the powerful Anti-Saloon League and the not so powerful Anti-Cigarette Alliance, to be found in the local telephone book.

A new one will be found in the next telephone book, however. This is the newly organized Anti-Monopoly League, which proposes to lighten the burden on the family pocket-book and upon business in general by forcing down the prices of gasoline and oil, electricity and anthracite coal.

The league's program to accomplish that happy end is one of the most ambitious to appear on the legislative horizon since the erstwhile Greek dictator Pangalos undertook to regulate by law the length of women's skirts.

It will inject bills into the Seventieth Congress providing for government ownership and operation—or lease under control—of water power and electric transmission lines, anthracite coal lands and oil pipe lines which it regards as the weapon of monopoly in the oil industry.

The officers are: President, George L. Record, a prominent Republican lawyer of Jersey City; Treasurer, W. Jett Lauck, former secretary of the War Labor Board and one-time professor of economics and politics at Washington and Lee University and Executive Secretary Benjamin C. Marsh, the indefatigable veteran political and social welfare worker. Its executive committee includes presidents of most of the railway labor unions, of the telegraphers', glass blowers' and electrical unions, of some of the farmer organizations, Frank P. Walsh, former Mayor Henry T. Hunt of Cincinnati, Jackson H. Ralston, the international lawyer, and other denizens of Who's Who.

Record, the president, is a bitter anti-Socialist, but the league platform begins with the assertion that "private monopoly of natural resources is unjust" and "means high prices to consumers."

"Private monopoly of three great natural resources—water power, anthracite coal and oil, through pipe lines—is extorting hundreds of millions of dollars from consumers every year in excessive prices," says the league.

"Dissolution" and "regulation" have proven futile. Govern-ment ownership and operation or development, or development of operation by lease under strict control, is essential to protect consumers."

Hence, it would leave Congress create a Water Power Board which could construct and operate water power developments, generate and transmit electrical energy and declare transmission lines to be public carriers. It would create a commission empowered to "condemn or acquire" anthracite coal lands and lease them for development on a royalty basis. It would provide for condemnation of pipe lines of the Standard Oil and other companies and create a government corporation to own them.

Beautiful Pageant Is Given Sunday Evening In Christian Church

The Ladies Missionary Society of the First Christian church gave a pageant "Perfect Love," Sunday evening in keeping of Woman's Day which is observed throughout the regions of the Christian church. Mrs. V. E. Fatheree, president of the society, gave a prologue.

The scenes of the pageant were opened with Roy McMillen portraying a pilgrim in a foreign land who could find nothing but misery and unhappiness in life, but comes to the home land where he has been told that the object of his search will be found at the foot of the Cross. There he finds Christianity, whose part was played by Mrs. Charlie Stowell, chained to the Cross.

The Imps of Selfishness, played by the following characters, Ignorance, Charles Thomas; Worldliness, Susie Bell Hickman; Economy, Alice Ingram; Indifference, Max Marbaugh; Hypocrisy, Floy Stanard; Covetousness, Nellie Meers; deny Christianity her freedom. The calls of four voices, the Voice of Childhood, Dorothy Mae Meers, of Helplessness, Josephine Lewis; of the Churchless, H. L. Ledrick and of the Nationals, George Ingram, were then heard.

Miss Mary Joe Harmon, the Angel of Mercy, enters and sits by the right side of Christianity, while the Angel of Records, Bob Brown, sits on the left. The Spirit of Education, Retha Lester, the Spirit of Evangelism, Mrs. Harry Marbaugh, and the Spirit of the Missions, Mrs. De Lea Vicars, enter and ask to unlock the chains of Christianity, but each finds that she does not carry the key.

The Spirit of Womanhood, Mrs. Bill Kinzer, comes to the Cross, and asks Prigim to halt the arrival of seven angels, portrayed by the Missionary organizations of the church, who brings offerings to lay at the foot of the Cross. The chains of Christianity are then loosened, and as she rises the Cross becomes a glow of light symbolic of the freedom of Christianity.

Those sponsoring the bazaar are well pleased with receipts of $120.

During the entire pageant, Miss Addie Lee Smith, played softly on the piano, making the pageant a beautiful scene that could be easily understood by all.

Kansas First Lady

MRS. BEN S. PAULEN

(By Associated Press)

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 30.—The Kansas executive mansion is every Kansas woman's mansion, thanks to the hospitality of Mrs. Ben S. Paulen, the governor's wife.

When a group of women has no suitable place for a meeting the first lady of the state offers her home. Thus she frequently is hostess to lodges, church clubs, war veterans' auxiliaries and kindred organizations.

The fine furniture, the beautiful rugs and the exquisite paintings have been purchased with public funds, and therefore, Mrs. Paulen believes, they are for the enjoyment of every taxpayer's wife or daughter.

Governor Paulen, a banker, gives Mrs. Paulen credit for his success in politics, although she has never taken an active interest in public affairs. Before their marriage in 1900 he ran for county clerk, but suffered the only election defeat of his career. Shortly after their wedding he was elected mayor of his home town, Fredonia.

Old Fashioned Dances Enjoyed—Legion Gives $50.00 to Charity Here

Cowboys decked with ten-gallon hats, chaps, and spurs and pretty cowgirls, also the usual number of farm hands, were present at the 40 and 8 dance at the American Legion hall Saturday night. More than 75 couples enjoyed the old time square dances and the round dances.

Hay and lanterns gave the hall the appearance of a barn and music was furnished by piano and violin. The musicians were Ed and Count Thom, J. O. Jacobs, and Tom Eller. Mrs. R. A. Webb played featured numbers.

Miss May Parsons and Roy Fitch won the prize for the couple coming the furthest. They drove here from twelve miles below Wellington, and were loudly cheered when announced the winners of the long distance contest.

BILLY EVANS Says

Melting Pot for Celebrities

The Notre Dame-Southern California game was certainly the melting pot for sport celebrities from all walks of life. I was kept busy greeting many old-time friends from the ring, diamond and gridiron.

Among those present with sideline privileges were Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, who, when not barnstorming or playing vaudeville engagements, hit home runs for the New York Yankees.

The irrepressible Babe, who has more color than a couple of paint shops, broke into the line with a bang as usual at the proper spot in the play. Incidentally, he showed that he had profited by the football instructions he received last fall.

What do you mean, football instruction? you are not doubt asking. Let me explain. As good publicity for the barnstorming tour which, by the way, was a great success, netting each player about $10,000. Ruth and Gehrig, at various college stops on the way to the coast, and while there, donned football suits and worked out.

Dr. Spears showed them how at Minnesota, Pop Warner, explained the game when they dropped in at Stanford, while Howard Jones, at Southern California, taught the pair a few tricks when they made Los Angeles.

Ruth Gets Big Hand

At one stage of the game when one of Dury's long punts went out of bounds, a big husky chap was seen to arise from his sideline seat and catch the pigskin in the most approved manner, following it up with an accurate lefthanded forward pass for about 40 yards.

Just as the crowd had decided he was some football star of other days, since his physique made it apparent he was an athlete, the announcer surprised the 110,000 by the statement that Babe Ruth, to show his versatility, had just grabbed a long punt from Drury, out of bounds, and sent the ball back into play with a snappy forward pass to one of the officials.

The Babe got his usual big hand when the crowd was wise to who he was, and he bowed his acknowledgment in the usual graceful Ruthian manner.

Ruth is very frank to say that he has no desire to, take up football as a business. The game is too rough, thinks Babe. He would much prefer slugging the ball than getting slug-ged.

On Keeping Down Weight

Prono to take on weight quickly when the daily baseball grind is over. Ruth has packed on about 20 pounds since the closing of the season. However, he isn't worrying about that— says that's an annual fall pastime.

Gehrig, on the other hand, who also puts on weight quickly, is just four ounces heavier than when the season opened. The Babe's weight has been increased because he has thrown caution to the wind as to

This Japanese Is a Star Gridder

The only Japanese football player of varsity calibre on any college team in this country!

That is the tribute paid Mino Yonemura, halfback of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. college football team; by Harry Edgren, its coach. Yonemura was born in this country of Japanese parents. He is 22 years old and lives at Riverside, Calif. He's a modest, retiring youth who takes his football as serious as any American youth. He intends to enter "Y" physical work after graduation in June.

ARMISTEAD LEADS HIGH SCORES OF NATION'S FOOTBALL ARMIES

NEW YORK—The crown for individual high scoring honors during the 1927 football season has been fitted for the flying thatch of Jimmie Armistead, running-mate of Vanderbilt's other backfield ace, Billy Spears, in one of the greatest college attacks anywhere.

Armistead in ten games crossed the opposing goal line 22 times to amass a total of 132 points and beat out all major college scoring rivals. On his heels in one of the closest races of recent years are Joel Hunt, captain and quarterback of the Texas champions of the Southwestern Conference, and Myles Lane of Dartmouth. Hunt scored 129 points in nine games and Lane finished at the top of the Eastern list with 125 points in eight contests.

These three were the big guns in the battle for points, but equal honor, if not as high scoring results, have been awarded to such sectional leaders as Glenn Presnell of Nebraska, in the Missouri Valley Conference; "Shorty" Almquist, Minnesota quarterback, in the Western Conference, and "Chuck" Carroll of the University of Washington, in the Pacific Coast Conference.

Presnell battered his way through opposing lines for 72 points, Almquist tallied 75, while Carroll in eight games had 73 points to his credit his groceries since the season closed, while Gehrig sticks closely to a diet.

Ruth thinks 60 home runs will stand for some time as a major league record. Says he was more surprised than anyone else at breaking his mark of 59. Gives much credit to Gehrig, because he said the pitchers feared Lou more than him and thus pitched to him rather than pass him.

While admitting Gehrig is his greatest rival for swat honors, Ruth says no one is going to take the home run prestige away from him as long as he remains in the game.

"The Yankees are a cinch to win the pennant for at least two years more," is the way Ruth sizes up the pennant race in American League.

with an opportunity or two left to boost his mark.

Up to November 26 this was how the leading scorers compared:

Player	Point after	T.D	TD	F.G	Total
Armistead Vanderbilt	22	0	0	0	132
Hunt, Texas Aggies	19	14	0	0	128

New Ford Viewed by Hundreds Here

Eager crowds have been filling the show room at the Motor company since 9 a. m., when the doors were opened today. At the present time 5,000 people will have seen the Tudor sedan on display by 6 o'clock.

"The New Ford News," a miniature newspaper, was printed and distributed here today.

The show room at the Motor company will remain open until midnight tonight, and an orchestra will be present after 9 o'clock.

That the New Ford with its remarkable speed, power, handling ease, and low price will revolutionize the motor industry is the verdict of local men who last night went to Amarillo and drove to Pampa in the Tudor sedan which has been on display there.

Tom Rose, local dealer; Marvin Lewis, Ernest Medkeff, Dick Crump, and Nathan Jones, the latter a representative of the Pampa Daily News took turns at putting the new car through its paces on the way back. The vehicle was speeded up to 57 miles an hour, and found to take all the bumps with remarkable riding ease. Acceleration at all speeds was especially noted.

Harry Gardner, sales manager of the Cooper-Irwin Motor company of Amarillo, said that 20,000 people by actual count saw the New Ford during the three days it was on display there. Three hundred and seventeen orders were received. Last night the car was with difficulty removed from the floor, and a traffic jam resulted as it was followed out of the city.

A representative of the Ford factory, L. M. Stone, is with the new car to explain fully and authoritatively its fine points.

Work Starts on Sewer Disposal Plant

Material for the new disposal plant in connection with the sewer extension program in Pampa is being hauled to the location today. The new plant will be located on the 40 acres recently purchased by the City of Pampa. The land is the southwest 40 acres of the southwest quarter of section 66, block 3, two miles north of the present disposal plant.

The large Jordan Construction company ditcher commenced operations at the new location this morning and will dig ditch for the 15-inch line to the old plant. The depth of the ditch will vary from 2 feet to 28 feet.

The new disposal plant will be large enough for a city of 20,000 population and the capacity can be doubled at any time by the addition of another unit.

W. M. Hale of Childress is in charge of operations for the Jordan Construction company here.

Mailing Suggestions Given by Crawford

Postmaster William C. Crawford is anxious that the business men and residents of Pampa cooperate with the staff of the local postoffice and mail early. Christmas coming on Sunday means that all mailing must be done by Saturday night, since the following Monday is a holiday at the postoffice.

To assist the people of Pampa the stamp, general delivery, and parcel post departments will be open Christmas morning from 8 to 11 o'clock, and also between the same hours Monday morning. The money order department will not be open.

The sub-station in the First National bank building will be open the morning of Dec. 14 and all outgoing parcels will be taken at that office. The parcel post department in the main office is for receiving incoming parcels only.

Mr. Crawford stated this morning that Christmas mailing has been exceptionally light up to this time, but he expects the rush to commence this week.

Big Wells Ready To Complete for Full Production

The Operators Oil company's No. 1 Jackson in section 88, block B-2, is swabbing today at 2,975 feet and preparing to drill in. This location is about a half-mile east of the Danziger gusher.

It was reached at 2,465 feet with a pay at 2,925 feet.

H. C. Moulton et al's No. 1 J. Morse in the southwest, of the northeast of the southeast, of section 2, block 2, H. and G. N. R. Co. is swabbing in Gray county topped the line at 2,770 feet. The elevation at this point is 2,580 feet.

One million feet of gas was struck from 2,300 to 2,305 feet in lime. The formation looks promising for a nice well between 2,500 and 2,550 feet. The well is drilling ahead at 2,375 feet.

This location is five miles from the Texas Oil company's No. 1 Chapman in section 51, block 26, which was drilled in for 750 barrels a day last week.

The Phillips Petroleum company's No. 1 A. Riley in section 88, block B-2, which struck pay high, is standing with 2,000 feet of oil in the hole after running casing. The well is at 2,950 feet.

Markets

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5—"Time is a cruel ringmaster in the circle of life" but it does not seem in many cases to have affected the policy of livestock producers in using the same business acumen in their distribution and marketing as they do in production.

If a producer will confine himself to the production of a better quality commodity, the demand will be stimulated all along the line and he will prosper by concentrating upon this one effort, provided he allows the marketing of his product to pass through recognized channels which provide all of the necessary machinery for the carrying out of well balanced distribution.

There is an illustration of this in the effort being made this season to contract cattle for future delivery at prices based upon present market levels. Well posted observers have predicted strong and higher cattle price levels, at least for the next few months. Those who have closely recorded the pulse of the market over a period of many years state that they do not anticipate the peak of prices will be reached within two or three years and after the peak is reached, the downward swing should be accomplished in a normal manner.

It is advisable that the cattle producers when contracting cattle ahead, with such a market as is now being experienced, should consider whether or not they have the same opportunity to contract if the swing of the market were reversed and the trend were downward.

Producers view the distribution and marketing of their livestock for only one year. If they did many single years would represent disaster for the industry while many other single years might bring unheard of prosperity. A long period of time must be taken into account to allow the law of average to function and, many years the market has been weak with a lower tendency and producers were not troubled to any great extent by offers to contract their cattle ahead, this being good business from the buyer's standpoint.

Teachers College Is Given $5,000 Fund by D. A. R.

CANYON, Dec. 5—Announcement has just been received of the establishment of a $5,000 loan scholarship at the West Texas State Teachers college, by the Texas Daughters of the American Revolution.

This is the fourth scholarship to be established in state colleges by this body. The first went to the University of Texas. In 1916 the second was awarded to the North Texas State Teachers college at Denton. In 1922 the third was awarded to the Sam Houston State Teachers college at Huntsville. These Teachers college scholarships will be used as loans to worthy students. They are available to junior and senior students only.

The scholarship at Canyon will be administered by a state chairman appointment, it is understood, has not yet been made; together with President J. A. Hill and one other representative of the faculty of the West Texas State Teachers college whom he will choose; and state regent of the D. A. R., Mrs. C. B. Jones of Greenville.

The West Texas State Teachers college is greatly indebted to members of the D. A. R. in Amarillo for this scholarship. It was upon a motion of Mrs. J. L. Smith, a member of the Esther McCrory chapter, that the scholarship was awarded to this college over others which were considered. A large number of the delegates assembled at the state meeting seconded Mrs. Smith's motion, which determined where the scholarship should be placed.

About $400 has already been given to the new scholarship, $205 of this amount having come from the Esther McCrory chapter and its individual members. It will probably be about three years before the entire amount is raised.

The position of the purchaser of cattle who is able to deal at present market prices for future delivery would seem to be a most happy one but the producer's position in a transaction of this kind is not so good.

Close observers with the best obtainable information feel that the cattle market is in a strong position with the likelihood of at least maintaining its present position for some time to come. If the market were weak and the feeling of the general situation pessimistic, caused by unhealthy conditions throughout the country, or some other good reason for a weakening market there might be some argument in favor of contracting cattle for future delivery.

The present situation in the cattle market seems to bring little doubt to those who have made a careful survey of the situation that contracting ahead for future delivery on the part of the producer is not well founded, is uneconomical and very likely to return less for the product than would be received upon the open market in the next few months, when supplies which are now being contracted are ready to move.

December Promises Much Building

C. L. Thomas is erecting a $2,000 frame residence on his property in the Hillcrest addition. Mr. Thomas will build the residence himself.

Building permits issued during the month of November show a decline, but the month of December gives promise of being a record month for building in the city. Several property exchanges have been made during the past month, with building purposes in view.

The building permits issued by the city for the month of November totaled $19,650, of which $10,000 was for the new wholesale grocery building on Tyng street.
