PRMC closing doctor's clinic after 40 years

By NANCY YOUNG Managing Editor

Pampa's Medical and Surgical Clinic will close at the end of June. Thousands upon thousands of patients have passed through the clinic doors in the forty-odd years the clinic has been in operation.

Mike Munnerlyn, Chief Executive of Pampa Regional Medical Center, said the cost of operating the clinic with only one physician is more than the hospital can afford.

Dr. Bruce Harrow is the only physician who currently has an office in the building at 1701 N. Hobart following the retirement of longtime Pampa physician Dr. Raymond Hampton. He retired in "One doctor cannot support the cost of the operation," said Munnerlyn. He said the building was built as a multi-physician office in the 1950s and has 5,300-to-5,400 square feet. He said the physical layout of the building coupled with the amount of square footage make it impractical to support a lone physician.

Munnerlyn said he has offered relocation assistance in Pampa to Harrow.

Dr. Harrow told The Pampa News Friday he plans to remain in Pampa. He said he is actively searching for another office building in the community. The doctor said he and the clinic staff were told by Munnerlyn during a clinic staff meeting on May 16 that the clinic will close June 30.

He reported that Munnerlyn told the clinic staff the hospital will place the employees in other positions within the hospital as posi-

Groundwater protection for Pantex ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Bill Richardson on Friday ordered new sampling of wells along the boundaries of the Pantex Plant near Amarillo following trichloroethylene groundwater contamination of the Ogallala Aquifer.

He also ordered better communication with nearby communities, noting that it was nine months after the contamination occurred before plant officials got the word to the public.

"We need better communication with Pantex Plant neighbors, especially those who depend on the Ogallala Aquifer for their water," Richardson said. "We have a responsibility ... to make environmental, safety and health information readily available, and to listen and learn from people affected by our operations."

Richardson ordered a modification of the plant's groundwater protection plan to provide a more comprehensive monitoring of groundwater quality.

Area jobless numbers

The latest unemployment numbers show Pampa with a 5.2 percent jobless rate during April, down from 5.5 percent in March.

Countywide, the figures are similar with 5.4 percent of those who want work unemployed during April as compared to 5.6 percent in March. Statistics from the Texas Workforce Commission show Borger and Hutchinson County's out-of-work population to be slightly higher than Pampa and Gray County. Borger had 6.9 percent unemployment in April and Hutchinson County had 6 percent. Areawide, Gray and Hutchinson were among the counties with the highest unemployment figure. April numbers from some nearby counties include Ochiltree, 2.6 percent; Armstrong, 1.6 percent; Carson, 2.6 percent; Hemphill, 2.2

percent, Roberts, 1.3 percent and Wheeler, 3.7 percent. Statewide April unemployment was 4.5 percent compared to 4.6 percent in March.

Dr. Harrow and the clinic staff are hospital employees and receive salaries and benefits from the hospital. The hospital also provides clinic equipment and supplies.

The doctor came to Pampa in October, 1998. He has previously had medical practice in Venice, Fla., Utah and Wisconsin. He said he has no plans to leave Pampa and is busy trying to get an office established by the end of June.

He said not only is he seeking an office site, but he is working to get his own insurance billing numbers established which he said normally takes nine months. He also said he is trying to get equipment, supplies and a staff for his practice. He said he will start small.

He said his contract is a no-cause contract and he will be paid for another 90 days.

Dr. Harrow said the hospital administration mailed letters to patients of the clinic on May 17 notifying them of the office closure.

KES,

Hello, on behalf of the senior class of 2000 I would like to extend a warm welcome and thanks to all of the parents, family, friends and faculty for honoring us with your presence tonight. To these people we hold a deep sense of gratitude for everything we have received from you. Thank you. We have been living with our parents for the past 18 years and been in school for the past 13 years, during this time we have been the beneficiaries of countless gifts. Our parents have taught us how to love, respect and honor others and ourselves. They have blessed us with their time and complete support. For this, we can never repay them. Our teachers have taught us our ABC's and 123's and everything else that they tell us is important. They have taught us the importance of making learning a lifelong process and given us practical life advice. We also owe a big thanks to our friends and family for supporting us.

When you look at the world you can categorize and label people in many different ways and groups, but when it comes right down to it ... there are just two groups. The givers and the takers. We as sons and daughters and students have been takers for our whole life. Yes, we have given back to an extent but for the most part, we have been getting and not giving. It has been said "We make a living by what we get — we make a life by what we give." I believe this to be true. I have found that I am happiest and most content when I am serving others. This seems to be contradictory but to serve and give to others is actually to learn and grow more than you ever could trying to hoard all the wisdom you have been given in attempts to become the best. You could ask anyone who has ever taught and they would tell you that they have learned as much from their students as they have taught. This is a hard sentiment to describe with words; it is one that must be learned from experience. So I challenge you not to be selfish and spend your life only taking but give and give willingly then will you truly gain. "For giving opens the way for receiving.

Recently I was asked by someone what I thought was lacking in the world today. After thinking about it for a moment ... I knew the answer was respect. There seems to be a lack of respect for individuals, authorities and God himself. The majority of the people are out for number one and are only trying to make themselves look better. They are willing to hurt themselves, they are willing to hurt others, and they are willing to ignore their Creator and Savior to become the best. Now, not all the problems of society would be fixed with respect but many would be improved and we would be heading in a better direction. Without respect for authorities, kids bring weapons to school and threaten their teachers; without respect for themselves and the consequences, they use those weapons; and without respect for God they take their classmates lives. Don't get me wrong, there is a lack of respect throughout society and I am not picking on the school system but this is what I have been around the most and have seen up close. Until the parents teach respect to their kids, there are going to be problems. There will be no concern for human life and there will be no helping your fellow man but just looking out for number

STACEY'S MARK by Shannon Sehorn Stephens in memory of Stacey Kaye Sehorn

She was born when I was six years old Someone to play with, to care for, to hold. I thought her the most precious gift of all This baby who "sissy" I couldn't finally call. She was my real live doll from the very first day But I didn't see the full role in my life she would play. For on that day in April a miracle did start When she placed her handprint upon my heart.

She grew up to be my most cherished friend One to be by my side till my life would end. But all too soon she was taken away And for what reason I cannot say. But death ends a life, not a bond It grew strong in her lifetime and endures beyond. So although it may seem we are far apart Her handprint still glows upon my heart.

Life's path has it ups, its downs, and its bends And in only nineteen years her journey would end. All the memories she left in just a short while Are the reason I cry and the reason I smile. They hold so much joy, they hold so much pain, But safe inside me they will always remain. For in me she left a work of art With her handprint drawn upon my heart.

Those memories end on a dark day in May When so much from me was taken away. She was my safety for the future, a link to my past, A lifelong friendship I expected to last. I said it was she I couldn't live without So how I will do so is in doubt. Maybe the answer I'll find in part In that lasting handprint upon my heart.

Maybe her handprint will see me through Remind me of what is precious and true. Qive me the strength to love and not to fear Of holding on tightly to all those I hold dear. Inspire faith that our lives have a purpose and plan And that one glorious day I will see her again. When we will join for all time at heaven's gate And these long years on earth will seem worth the wait. For now she'll live on inside me and carry me through And I'll tell her story so she will live on in you. That will be her legacy, her mark... That beautiful handprint upon our hearts.

The truth suffered in Kosovo war claims

■ Military triumphs apparently were exaggerated.

A report in a recent issue of Newsweek magazine on a damage assessment done after the Kosovo war suggests that the old saw, "In war, the first casualty is truth" retains all too much validity. According to "a suppressed Air Force report obtained by

Newsweek," John Barry and Evan Thomas reported, "the number of targets verifiably destroyed was a tiny fraction of those claimed.'

Remember the jubilant news conference held after victory was declared last June with U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen and joint chiefs Chairman Gen. Henry Shelton? "We severely crippled the Serb military forces in Kosovo by destroying more than 50 percent of the artillery and one-third of the armored vehicles," crowed Cohen. Shelton put numbers on the boast, saying NATO's high-altitude bombing campaign had destroyed "around 120 tanks," along with "about 220 armored personnel carriers" and "up to 450 artillery and mortar pieces."

The actual numbers, as reported by a Munitions Effectiveness Assessment Team sent to inspect bombing sites in helicopters and on foot: 14 tanks, not 120; 17 armored personnel carriers, not 220; 20 artillery pieces, not 450, according to Newsweek. Out of 744" confirmed" strikes by NATO pilots, the Air Force investigators, who spent weeks combing Kosovo by helicopter and by foot found evidence of just 58

The Serbs turned out to have been rather skillful at "spoofing" bomber pilots. "The Serbs protected one bridge," Barry and Thomas wrote, "from the high-flying NATO bombers by constructing, 300 yards upstream, a fake bridge made of polyethylene sheeting stretched over the river. NATO 'destroyed' the phony bridge many times." .

The most disturbing aspect of the Newsweek story was the assessment that "air power was effective in the Kosovo war not against military targets but against civilian ones. Military planners do not like to talk frankly about terror-bombing civilians, but what got Milosevic's attention was turning out the lights in downtown Belgrade: Making the Serb populace suffer by striking power stations — not 'plinking' tanks in the Kosovo threatened his hold on power."

The exaggeration about destruction of military targets provides a bookend to exaggerations that set the stage for the war. Before the bombing began, U.S. and NATO spokesmen insisted that "ethnic cleansing" of Kosovo Albanians was occurring on a massive scale. Estimates of 10,000 or more civilians murdered by the Serbs were bandied about to justify starting the bombers on their way. After the war, NATO investigators uncovered evidence of about 3,000 Kosovars killed by Serbs, with a significant amount of the slaughter occurring after the bombing had begun. By comparison, between 3,000 and 5,000 Serbs, most of them civilians, were killed by NATO bombing attacks.

These "after-action" reports should reinforce Americans' natural skepticism next time our leaders want to involve us in a war. It is hardly unique to the United States or to NATO that once the wartime propaganda drums start beating, there is a strong tendency for anything resembling truth to fly out the window.

Economic misunderstandings Reporter Tristan Mabry reports Hurricane

The statist claim that a strong government is needed to protect the "weak" against the "powerful" is usually accepted as a matter of faith. But given just a tiny bit of thought, the claim turns out to be hogwash. Dr. Donald Boudreaux, president of the Foundation for Economic Education, based in Irvington-on-Hudson, N.Y., demonstrated that nonsense in the foundation's December 1999 issue of Ideas on Liberty.

Do free markets favor the so-called powerful over the weak? Boudreaux says no. Microsoft CEO Bill Gates' wealth is about 600,000 times greater than mine, but Gates has no more power over me than I have over him.

You say, "Balderdash, Williams, you're up against a multibillionaire!" Well, let's see. Can Bill Gates take my car? What about my home? Can he dictate how and where my children are to be educated? Can he force me to associate with people with whom I'd rather not associate? If I want to use Microsoft software, I must buy it from him just as if he wants me to mow his lawn or give him economic counsel, he must pay me. Of course, both of us are free not to contract with, speak to or have anything to do with one another. So where is the power the rich have over the non-rich?

Boudreaux says, "A person (or an institution) is powerful only insofar as he can use autho- You're right but look at the headline in the Sept. rized force to compel others to act against their wills." Gates can't force me to do anything I May Leave Robust Economy in Its Wake."

Floyd "may actually have churned up some economic activity." Marilyn Schaja, chief economist at Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York, is quoted as saying "the storm may actually give the economy a boost." Dr. Thomas J. DiLorenzo, professor of economics at Loyola College in Maryland, writing in February's "Ideas on Liberty," says that kind of thinking is a classic example of economic ignorance. Yes, the hurricane will create some jobs, just as smashing automobiles windows does, but it will destroy others. That's because the money used for the repairs had to be diverted from other job creation uses.

Another example of this fallacy is when politicians, Chambers of Commerce and labor unions produce the self-serving argument that municipal stadium construction creates jobs. Yes, more jobs are created in the construction industry. But since there's no Santa Claus, government had to tax people. Had the people not been taxed, they would have spent (invested) the money elsewhere. Where they would have spent (invested) that money, and didn't, represents jobs that were not created.

Good economics training gives us ammunition to corner charlatans, demagogues and quacks. Maybe that's why the nation's statists don't want economics as a part of our educa-

News media is failing to do its duty

If I had to name one thing that is the biggest threat to America continuing as a free society, I'd have to say it's my colleagues and me the press. We are failing in our duty.

William Randolph Hearst stated that duty succinctly some years ago: "According to the American principle and practice the public is the ruler of the State, and in order to rule rightly it must be informed correctly."

The operative word is "correctly." It is impossible for American citizens to form intelligent judgments of their elected officials without a steady flow of correct, unbiased, unsensationalized news of their governments at all levels. Most Americans simply do not get that from either newspapers or television. If you do, then you are one of the lucky few, and you ought to express your appreciation.

Unfortunately, the trend is toward newspapers that devote far more space to entertainment news than to their own state legislatures. Americans are far more informed about the lives of essentially useless people in the entertainment industry than they are about the daily conduct of their elected offi-

Take this little test. Read your newspaper 365 days and, at the end of that time, ask yourself. Do I know what my congressmen did during the past year? Do I know what my U.S. senators did? Do I know what important new laws my state legislature passed? Can I feel confident that I am informed as to the workings of my local government?

Thomas Jefferson keenly appreciated the necessity of a free and responsible press, but even he, in his day, became deeply depressed by its poor performance.

"At present it is disreputable," Jefferson said, "to state a fact on newspaper authority; and the newspapers of our country by their abandoned spirit of falsehood, have more effectively destroyed the utility of the press than all the shackles devised by Bonaparte."

On another occasion, he wrote to a friend, "The man who never looks into a newspaper is better informed than he who reads them; inasmuch as he who knows nothing is nearer to the truth than he whose mind is filled with falsehoods and errors. It is a melancholy truth that a suppression of the press could not more completely deprive the nation of its benefits than is done by its abandoned prostitution to falsehood."

A century later, H.L. Mencken, himself a newspaperman, could still say, "The average newspaper, especially of the better sort, has the intelligence of a hillbilly evangelist, the courage of a rat, the fairness of a prohibitionist boob-jumper, the information of a high school janitor, the taste of a designer of celluloid valentines, and the honor of a police-station lawyer."

Some years ago when I was on the other side of the fence and working in state government, I quickly realized that the members of the press had absolutely zero interest in the workings of government. Their attitude was that unless there is a controversy or scandal, don't wake me up.

If anything, this attitude has gotten worse. And it has a demoralizing effect on good public servants and good public officials. Of course, the press's attitude delights the bad officials. They know that the members of the press are too lazy to dig out any of their shenanigans.

Unfortunately, the news media seem to prefer propaganda campaigns to straight report-ing. The political agendas of the national government and the national press are identical. The press has become the junkyard dog of the political establishment. You'd think someone who intended to sell his soul would want more than a bone and a pat on the head, but that's probably a fair price considering the state of the souls in question.

NEW YORK (AP) - Patrick Stewart has generated huge publicity for the Broadway show in which he's starring — by accusing producers of failing to promote it.

But now he must apologize for the angry speech he gave during curtain calls of Arthur Miller's play "The Ride Down Mt. Morgan."

A disciplinary panel of Actors Equity has ruled that Stewart, known for his role in television's "Star Trek: The Next Generation," must offer a formal apology to the Schubert Organization.

Its producers had filed disciplinary charges against him after the impromptu tirade at two performances last month. Stewart said he felt 'frustrated and helpless" by their failure to promote the play.

The panel heard hours of testimony to determine whether his behavior was unprofessional. The producers said they had spent $1 million to promote the production, which received good VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Reggae star Ziggy Marley canceled a planned performance in Austria to show his opposition to a far-right party in the federal government.

Marley, son of Bob Marley, was to have performed June 17 at the annual Spring Vibration Festival in Wiesen. Festival spokesman Alexander Swoboda said Marley's agents informed organizers of his cancellation.

Marley "does not want to play in a country with a Nazi in the government," Swoboda said, citing a statement from the agents.

He was apparently referring to Joerg Haider, the former leader of the Freedom Party, whose past comments in praise of the Nazi era contributed to a decision by 14 European Union countries to impose sanctions on Austria.

Dozens of musicians and other performers have canceled participation in Austrian events to show their opposition to the Freedom Party and its participation in government.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Wilson Pickett was the big winner at the annual W.C. Handy Blues

Pickett won Handys in three categories: soul/blues male artist, soul/blues album and comeback album for "It's Harder Now." Rufus Thomas and Tracy Nelson were hosts for Thursday's show at The Orpheum Theater beside the Beale Street entertainment district. The awards are named for W.C. Handy, a blues pioneer who performed on Beale Street in the early 1900s. They are given out by The Blues

Tracy Rogers of Wausau, Wis., is putting less expensive fuel in his sport utility vehicle these days, but isn't cutting back on travel plans.

The AAA auto club predicts a record number of Americans will travel this Memorial Day weekend, which marks the start of the summer travel and tourism season. Of the total, 28.4 million will drive 100 miles or more, an increase of 3 percent over last year, and 6 million will travel by air, bus or train during the three-day holiday. Rising fuel prices appear to weigh little on Americans' travel plans this summer, as record-low unemployment and rising wages are buoying spirits amid other uncertainties.

The Travel Industry Association of America said it expected 237 million Americans to travel this summer, up 3 percent from 1999. A survey it conducted last month indicated 54 percent of summer travelers said they wouldn't be influenced by gas prices. The rest said they'd travel but with a few concessions, such as shorter trips, fewer trips or trying to find less expensive lodging and food.

Sylvia Canfill, a part-time con-tractor working at Bell Atlantic in Boston, said she and her husband wanted to go to Las Vegas, but decided to go to either Atlantic City, N.J., or the Foxwoods resort in Ledyard, Conn.

Gas prices, meanwhile, seem destined to rise above the current national average of $1.53 per gallon as supplies already are tight at the start of the peak summer driving season.

Prices of gasoline in commodities markets, which do not include retail markups or state and federal taxes, are approaching nine-year highs, rising above $1 a gallon on Thursday for the first time since early March.

Fred Leuffer, an oil analyst at Bear Stearns, said the Memorial Day weekend throng, coupled with the tight supplies, could push retail gas prices up an additional 8 cents to 10 cents per gal-

"As drivers hit the road this summer, they're going to take a big hit in their back pocket," Leuffer said.

Still, Bruce Bentz, an owner of Capital R.V. in Bismarck, N.D., said he doesn't think higher gas prices will stop people from hitting the road.

change their lifestyles because of a couple of hundred extra dollars anymore," Bentz said. "Gas prices have really been a nonissue — surprisingly so.

Taressa Williams, a 37-year-old graphics specialist from Des Moines, Iowa, planned to drive 240 miles this weekend to visit relatives in Minneapolis. She said she didn't give much thought to the higher costs.

"Yeah, it costs me more to fill my tank, but it's not stopping me," she said. "I get good mileage on my car ... Whatever it takes to fill my tank."

One factor that could be easing the pinch of higher fuel costs is that most other vacation costs have remained steady compared with last year, said Jerry Cheske, a AAA spokesman.

"According to our guide books, lodging and meals still cost $213 a day for a family of four, the same as last year," Cheske said.

For some, cost just isn't a factor. Gordon Elster, a South Dakotan who was on his way to North Dakota's Theodore Roosevelt National Park, seemed to have the kind of attitude tourism officials hope for.

"We were going to go, no matter what," he said.

Two say they'll work for bipartisan drug plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Republican Wyden already has introduced Medicare drug and a Senate Democrat said today they will work legislation in the Senate, along with Sen. prescription drug benefits to Medicare this year. Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., a key architect of a House GOP proposal outlined earlier this spring, teamed up today with Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who has been working on the issue with moderate Republicans in the Senate.

"This is not a rogue effort," said Thomas. "Senator Wyden and I will consult fully and inform fully our respective leadership.

The two said that preliminary discussions with party leaders and other lawmakers have uncovered common ground on the issue beneath recent political posturing.

For example, they said there is general agreement that prescription drug coverage supported by government dollars should be available to all senior citizens through a program run by the Health and Human Services Department, and that out-of-pocket costs should be limited. Also, Wyden and Thomas said there is growing consensus that drug companies should have to pay a "return on investment fee" to help support the new program when they profit from medicines through government-funded research.

The two lawmakers stressed that reaching compromise will require cajoling and diplomacy,

"The fact of the matter is that if prescription drug legislation does not get bipartisan, bicameral quickly, it is headed bye-bye for this session of Congress," said Wyden.

together for a bipartisan compromise plan to add Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, that is similar to what House Republicans proposed.

Both plans would have private insurance companies sell drug policies to retirees and provide government subsidies to help cover the costs.

House Republicans say their plan, still being developed, would offer direct subsidies to lowincome senior citizens, as well as financial support to help insurance companies develop new drug policies that would result in more choices and lower prices for all senior citizens.

The Wyden-Snowe plan would offer a sliding scale of direct subsidies for drug insurance to all retirees, with at least 25 percent of everyone's premium paid by Medicare. Wyden's bill also calls for a new Medicare board to set standards for the private drug plans and oversee enrollment in them.

President Clinton and Democratic leaders in Congress have criticized the House GOP approach, saying it lacks guarantees that affordable, quality benefits would be available to all senior citizens.

Instead, Clinton and most Democrats want a drug benefit run by Medicare that any retiree could choose to add to the program's basic health coverage for an additional cost of about

Republicans have criticized that plan as overly bureaucratic and say it does not do enough to harness market forces that could lower prices while providing a wider choice of benefit pack-

Letters to the editor

One wrong word ruins evening for prom-goer

To the editor,

I have just graduated high school. Most people would think that the last few days of my senior year would have been some of the greatest days of my life. Wrong. Since the night of prom, I have not been able to enjoy the last few days of high school due to the fact that I have been trying to control myself and avoid the campus police officer and assistant principal.

Because of the absurd events of prom, my date and I were forced to leave, ruining one of the most important nights of my life forever. At about 11:30 p.m., my date and I were trying to decide whether or not to leave because another friend that was with us wanted to go.

I wanted to keep things under control so I said fine we can go, and got up to have my car brought back. My date followed me out and said, "Don't go, I know you want to stay, I requested some song we can dance to." I said, "All right, but what about my friend." He said, "Well figure out what your going to do, I'm going back in here. It doesn't matter to me, I'm just tired of hearing people bitch." This was said as we were walking from the Heritage room into the lobby. The campus cop jumps up and shines the spotlight in his eyes and said, "This isn't the street, you're out of here."

Needless to say, due to the fact we came in my car we all were forced to leave.

Some who read this may feel this was just treatment. But before those of you pass judgment let me present a new side to the story. The "vulgar' word is printed in the literature books used by high school students. The word is in several movies available in the high school library for students to view for recreational purposes. And furthermore, the word was played in songs at prom just hours before we were asked to leave because of it. Also no one can tell me that we were the only people to use that word or other similar words at the prom.

From my understanding, the administration and campus police are here to protect the people pre-sent at school and school functions, and to help promote and control the learning environment. Considering the fact there was no learning accruing that night, except for the fact that I learned a lot about human nature. Also, I can not see how they were protecting students or faculty. One or two sponsors and we were the only people present who could have reasonably heard the event.

I feel this was a very minute reason to ruin this night for me. After he left and I returned to get some things I forgot in the bathroom, I came in crying and tried to reason with both of them. All I got from the police officer when I asked if there was something else he could have done, like a warning, I got, "Well, I could have written him a citation." Which I can only imagine what the court case would be like for that.

nothing I can do, it's out of my hands. Well, there is I there is unfortunately very little we can do for only an hour left, you aren't missing that much." In response, I would like to say I did miss a lot, I missed a part of my life that can never be replaced. Instead of spending the last dance in a memorable moment with my boyfriend, I spent it in tears. So I have to ask, was that one word really that tremendous of an offense?

Jurors send message throughout county

As Memorial weekend approaches, we face the first anniversary of the tragic death of our beloved daughter and sister Stacey Kaye Sehorn. As monumentally painful as that is, we feel compelled to offer our gratitude to the people who have supported us this past year and through the trial and to those who tirelessly labored to see justice served in

Prior to the May 1999 wreck that brutally took Stacey's life, we had no personal experience with the workings of our justice system. Although it was our own child whose life was taken and our family that was forever violated, we learned that the State of Texas would have the sole responsibility in the criminal case against the repeated drunk driver who caused Stacey's death, and that we had no legal role in the process.

We felt like bystanders in our own personal tragedy. Then we began to lose faith in our local government when we learned that less than two days before the fatal wreck, the driver was brought before the court of Judge Richard Peet by County Attorney Todd Alvey with repeated DWI charges and, despite this, was returned to the streets, resulting in the death of our child a matter of hours later. We were left wondering who in our government cared enough to uphold the law and protect our cit-

These were our concerns until we met John Mann, District Attorney. We found, that although some in our local government may not faithfully uphold their oaths of office, John Mann is a true professional who goes above and beyond his duty as District Attorney. Mr. Mann did not allow us to feel like bystanders. He made it a point to be there for us and answer questions we had even when it must have been inconvenient for him. He even went so far as to join us in our home before the trial to talk about Stacey and look at her room and her things in an effort to get to know her as a person, not just the victim in this case. Did he have to? No. He had no obligation to include us in any way.

His obligation was to prosecute an intoxication manslaughter case, not to spend hour upon hour helping our family. During the trial, when the defense attorney Mike Warner attempted to get us thrown out of the courtroom, Mr. Mann fought for ould be like for that.

Our right to be present. We appreciate so much that Judge Stephen Emmert allowed us to remain.

Stacey now, and we would have been devastated if we were not allowed to represent her during the trial. So we offer this public expression of respect and gratitude to John Mann as well as to Leslie Breeding, his assistant in this trial, along with the entire staff of the District Attorney's office.

We would also like to thank the men and women of the Department of Public Safety, the Pampa Police Department, and the Sheriff's Department who were on the scene of the wreck, many of whom were there in the courtroom until the very end to show their care and support. We profoundly appreciate their efforts the night of the wreck to ensure the survival of Stacey's friends, Shawn Reames and Nakisha Horton, until emergency medical personnel arrived. As they should have, they put the lives of Shawn and Nakisha ahead of taking any pictures for evidence, as defense attorney Mike Warner would have to did not be the state of the st would have had them do.

We also want to thank our friends and family who comforted us by their presence in the courtroom, Ann Hamilton of the Tralee Crisis Center who stood by us every step of the way, and Bennie Earhart of M.A.D.D. who assisted us throughout the week. And to the mother, sister, grandmother and aunt of Justin Sober, we thank you for your and humiliate offenders. expressions of compassion at the trial that was healing for us through this difficult time.

We also offer our extreme gratitude to the 12 men and women of the jury who sacrificed their time and energy to see that justice was served in the death of our precious Stacey. We hope they sent a message that in the future DWI will not be tolerated in Gray County and hopefully that message will help in sparing the lives of many others and the

Don't trust someone under the influence

I'm sure there are a bunch of people in Pampa who I do not know who want to know how I feel about the verdict to the Sober case.

I am somewhat pleased. I was in the courthouse all week going nuts because I couldn't go into the courtroom to find out what was going on. I was so stressed out all week and didn't take care of my TDCJ, for who can understand an organization body and started getting sick Thursday.

I wish I would have been in the courtroom when the jury said "guilty" and saw the look on Justin's face. I am pleased because even though he once was a friend of mine he robbed me of my most cherished gift of life. Stacey Kaye Sehorn.

The assault charge on me has not been brought to court yet so this is just the beginning for me. But I could care less if he just walks away from the Maybe if TDCJ would remember that their job is to assault charge on me. I survived and my body will heal. Even if my body does not heal I've lived with and decide to punish offenders for the crimes that it for a year so I'll deal with it. I wanted him to pay for what he has done to Stacey. No, she wasn't a perfect angel but she set her goals for doing what most people do not do, helping people. I was a very bitter person before and she opened my eyes and made me realize I wanted to help people, too. She got me a job helping the mentally and physically challenged people. I loved it. It made me a lot nicer because it made me realize that there were people who were not as lucky as we

Linda and Darrell Sehorn said that maybe one day they can find it in their hearts to forgive Justin. I hope they can. I personally can never forgive him their crime. until the day he comes to me to say, "I'm sorry, I did

When I wrote that letter that said, "I hate Justin," I was still in the hospital and, yes, I felt anger towards him. I was doing three hours of therapy in the mornings and three hours in the afternoon. That was very painful. The pain was so intense there were a lot of tears. I do not "hate" Justin now. I pity him. I don't see where he has learned his lesson. He killed someone that, yes, I do believe he cared about and showed no remorse. If he cared that she died, he wouldn't have gotten behind the wheel while intoxicated again.

That's how I feel. Keep in mind that when you get in a vehicle with the driver under the influence of alcohol you are trusting that person with your

I'm sure the people of the Texas Panhandle have heard all the stories of violence within the Texas Department of Criminal Justice System. You may even remember the system-wide lockdown last March that was called for by TDCJ director, this was so that they could look for weapons on all facilities. Now, the question is did they find anything or was this just another way for TDCJ to try TDCJ officers are saying that they wanted pay raises, but may be the public should ask if these correctional officers really deserve a pay raise. They claim that their job is hazardous and dangerous. If that is really the case, then why was there only 2,044 cases of assaults against staff, that is out of a population of 120,000 plus, that is only 1.7 percent of incidents per offender population.

Is that a system of uncontrollable violence? Do you think they should receive a pay raise or not? I know that most of the people reading this letter are related or know an individual that works for TDCJ, so your view my be biased. You are probably saving that I'm biased because of my present location and may be you are right, but at least I know when I'm being feed a line of malarkey.

Maybe you as the public should ask why there has been the violence within TDCJ lately. You could ask your local facility warden to hear what be says, but it is not likely that he will know, unless he is the one causing problems by taking what privileges and dignity they have. You may say that it is good that offenders have no privileges, that they should suffer for what they have done. If that is the case, then you are not a Christian and not worthy of being called a human being. Lets face it, how is treating an offender like an animal going to change that individual for the better?

whose budget for this fiscal year is $2.3 billion to house 120,000 plus offenders and all of the parolees.

If TDCJ says things are bad now, what are they going to do this summer when the temperature reaches upwards to 100 degrees. With TDCJ continuing to limit offenders limited freedom then there will of course be more incidents of violence. house offenders for the time they spend in TDCJ brought them into TDCJ maybe they would not have as many problems as they do.

I know that most of you will ignore what I have to say and that is fine with me because at least I see what is happening with TDCJ and before you pass judgment on offenders maybe you should think about the 560 TDCJ employees that were arrested in 1999 and those were only the one that were caught. Now can you say that the complaints that offenders bring against staff are all bogus or are you denying that those you know might be violating the law because they can get away with it? I will accuse no one by name unless I have proof of

This offender would like to know what the people of this state are going to think when they wake up one day and there is a security fence around this state, because is that not they way this state is heading. Think about; how many citizens of this state now have a TDCJ number.

PROPERTY TAX PROTEST AND APPEALS PROCEDURES

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these appeals procedures if you have a concern about:

* the values placed on your property

* any exemptions that may apply to you

* the cancellation of an agricultural exemption

* the taxable status of your property

* the local governments which should be taxing your property

* any action taken by the appraisal district that adversely affects you

Informal Review

The first option a taxpayer may use to protest a value is to visit the chief appraiser or a staff member. Records on individual properties are available for review by every taxpayer. This informal review is to the benefit of the taxpayer, as many protests are resolved at this level.

Review by the Appraisal Review Board

If you cannot resolve your problem with the appraisal district staff, you have your case heard by the Appraisal Review Board (ARB).

The ARB is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals or other concerns listed above. It has the power to order the appraisal district to make necessary changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline the ARB will set your case a hearing. You will receive written notice of the time, date and place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make a decision =based on the presented evidence. NOTE: You should not try to contact ARB members prior to the meeting. The law requires ARB members to sign an affidavit saying that they have not discussed your cases prior to the ARB meeting.

Review by District Court

After the ARB decides your case you will be sent a copy of its order by certified mail. If you are not satisfied with the decision, you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's decision.

You may obtain more information by contacting the appraisal district at the address or phone number below or by contacting the State Comptroller at the following address:

Farm, environment groups criticize large hog farms study

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Farm and environment groups are criticizing a university study that concluded large-scale hog farms are not as harmful to local economies as many believe. The six-state study by a University of Nebraska-Lincoln researcher concluded that large hog farms do not hamper retail sales, lower incomes, increase poverty or lead to fewer farm jobs. However, the study said populations dropped and property taxes were higher in counties that include large swine operations.

Critics said the findings were flawed because of fundamental statistical and analysis problems, and that its conclusions should be ignored.

Much of the study's data is not relevant sity. because it was from the years 1977 to 1992, they said. They also said the definition of a "large" hog operation was too broad, including farrow-to-finish operations with as few as 150 sows.

The study, finished in March, was led by University of Nebraska-Lincoln sociologist John Allen. The study explored pork production in 36 counties in Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Indiana, Missouri and North Carolina over 15 years from 1977 to 1992.

He said he used that data because it was the most recent available when the study began in 1995. He also said his research was reviewed by other professors at the univer-

Mozzarella expected to be No. 1 cheese

MILWAUKEE (AP) - If current production patterns continue, mozzarella will overtake cheddar as the nation's No. 1

That has cheesemakers in Wisconsin and elsewhere converting production to mozzarella - a mild, stringy cheese prized by pizzamakers.

"It's all been driven 90 percent by the growth of the pizza industry," said Matt Mathison, Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board production specialist. Mozzarella production increased 29 percent nationwide from 1993 to 1999, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Overall cheese production increased 22 percent during the same period and cheddar increased 19 percent.

Mozzarella accounted for 32 percent of total U.S. cheese production in 1999, compared with 30 percent in 1993.

Need a beef recipe?

Know how to change those computer bytes into delicious dinner bites? Visit the Texas Beef Council's searchable recipe web site at www.txbeef org. It's the Internet surfer's stop that transforms cooking dilemmas into meal solutions.

TBC launched its new web site especially for working mothers who arrive home after a hard day's grind and still have to feed a hungry family quickly and nutritiously.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, approximately 43 million adults use the Internet on a regular basis. The vast majority of these adults-28 million persons-access the Internet from their homes for information. So TBC decided to provide digital access to hundreds of beef recipes that can help solve the nightly meat dilemma for America's working moms. Each recipe on TBC's web site offers a meal solution that combines flavor and ease of preparation. It's a way working mothers can use the digital age to get entrees on the table with the same confidence their grandmothers had with printed cookbooks.

To access the TBC recipes, all you need do is click on the web site's "Recipe Book" section. From there, you can browse until you find the right meal idea.

Or you can type in a particular cut, cooking method, or dish. In seconds you have a list of recipes, each with ingredients, instructions, and time of preparation.

For those who like variety but don't have the time to surf, the web site makes the decision for you. The "Recipe of the Week" always highlights a delicious beef recipe made from a number of easy-tofind ingredients.

LETTERS Million Mom March: What now, Mom?

Sponsors of the Million Mom March say that school shootings will decline when more gun laws are enacted as a result of the March pub-

The march is over, and there are still about 200 million guns and 20,000 gun laws, and those doing the shooting continue to ignore all 20,000 laws. The mothers are in denial, and blame everyone and everything except their own children. They have not yet discovered that their children are pulling the triggers on those guns.

The mothers must now decide to rid our nation of 200 million guns, or rid the nation of irresponsible and immoral children, or both. Either one is a 40 or 50 year job.

What now, Mom? Wm. J. Ragsdale Pampa

"Beans, beans, the magical fruit" ... We all know the words to this school-yard rhyme, though if you are a vegetarian at Texas Department of Justice's Rufe Jordan Unit here in Pampa you will soon grow tired of the physiological effects ascribed to this infamous

The food service department on the Jordan Unit is both persecutive and discriminatory in their practices towards inmates who, because of their religious beliefs, require a strict vegetarian diet. While food service is mandated to provide replacements for menu items that vegetarians are unable to eat due to religious constraints, time after time they have refused to conform to these established policies.

Food service has even been unwarily serving prohibited animal products to the vegetarians as a hidden ingredient in many of their menu items thus egregiously violating every imaginable professional ethos. The vegetarian population has filed many grievances and received assurances from unit administration that many of these issues will be corrected. But so far these promises have been empty.

At the same time, the food service department is more than willing to "cow-tow" to the religious groups who don't eat pork, offering substitutes like sliced beef and burgers. They compound their obsequiousness towards these sects by serving extra condiments and special breads so that the non-pork eaters' burgers and such are not only tasty but aesthetically appealing. And yet at each meal there are many foods on the diet line that would not only provide variety in a vegetarian diet (fruits, green vegetables, etc.) but the necessary nutrition as well though because of the obstinacy of the food service department these items are denied to us vegetarians. So, for the most part, the only food available to us is beans.

No matter how you may "feel" This is not a matter to "toot" about Maybe this letter will help us out if not we will "just eat our beans at every meal." Ralph J. Bianchi Jordan Unit TCI has expanded its neglect to the local community and the ecosystem. How? TCI is flooding the sewage with hazardous chemicals. Five-gallon buckets full of diluted adhesive (Latex glue) are being "flushed" down toilets and into the environment.

Imperial Adhesives manufactures #11905, Latex Glue. The Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS), recommends the following measures under Section VII — Spills, Leaks, and Disposal Procedures: Prevent run-off to sewers ... If run-off occurs, notify proper authorities that a spill has occurred ... Dispose of material in accordance with local, state and federal regulations ...

TCI's neglect has now reached the community in addition to inmate labor. My crusade continues; will yours begin? Ronald Graning

Wartime stories of love, commitment need sharing

To the editor,

Would you please help us with a very special project? Please print this letter in the editorial section of your paper.

We are producing a television program series highlighting the relationships between World War II military personnel and their loved ones back at home. While numerous films and documentaries have captured heroes, battles and the brutality of war — few, if any, have focused on the relationships that suffered, endured, even thrived after wartime years of aloneness, hardship and hoping against the

We are currently collecting stories of the "everyday" heroes during WWII — the many men and women who kept their families in tact despite the hardships of war. We want to share reminiscences that teach us how they coped. How did their love and commitment survive? How did they keep hope alive? Where did they find their strength? How did these veterans, upon re-entry into civilian life, adjust to physical injuries and often, emotional trauma suffered at the war front? What was the reunion like for these family members who had been apart for years?

Our goal is to give a platform for these wartime heroes — both the veterans and their families — to benefit from the wisdom of those who lived, loved and hoped during the years of World War II. We believe their stories would call this generation to a higher standard in our commitments, character and relationships.

I know this generation of veterans and their spouses are passing from us and we have missed opportunities to talk to some of them directly. But, hopefully, those who have gone will have stories still alive in their children.

If your readers would be interested in our project, if they have a love story to tell, if they desire to share the lessons they learned during an amazing time in our country's history ... or if they know someone who does ... would you please print our contact information so they can reach us? Thank you.

TASS to conduct mid-year national agricultural survey

AUSTIN — How many acres will be planted to cotton? What effect will prices have on this year's seeded acreage? Will there be water for irrigation this year? Will the recent rains mean better weather conditions and a better growing season ahead? Will many Texas cattle producers continue reducing herd sizes? To gather reliable, objective information to address these and other agricultural questions, the National Agricultural Statistics Service of the USDA will soon begin surveying farmers and ranchers on their mid-year

There is always speculation about each new crop season, and agricultural producers are the main source for the facts. If producers speak up and answer questions about their 2000 crops, some of the uncertainty in the agriculture marketplace can be reduced. The TASS will begin conducting the mid-year surveys on May 30. A TASS representative will contact local producers sometime between May 30 and July 16. These surveys are particularly vital because they will provide the first clear indications of the potential production of major commodities in 2000.

The information these surveys provide is widely used. Producers rely on the data to make valid production, marketing and investment decisions. Industry analysts, extension agents and farm organizations use the information in a variety of ways that benefit farmers.

"We safeguard the confidentiality of all survey responses," State Statistician Robin Roark assures farmers and ranchers. "Information from individual operations is combined with other responses to provide the needed summary data. We work with Texas farmers and ranchers to provide meaningful, accurate, and objective statistics to help keep Texas and U.S. agriculture informed."

For copies of NASS or TASS reports containing these or other data, visit the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service website at www.io.com/tass or call 1-800-626-3142.

HOUSTON (AP) — Kenny Western the Conference pitcher of the year, struck out eight and walked two while leading second-seeded Rice past third-seeded Texas Tech 5-2 on Friday in a first-round NCAA game. Rice (41-21) will play at 4 p.m. Saturday against the winner of Friday's game between Princeton and Houston. The losers will play at noon Saturday in an elimination game.

Baugh (12-2) pitched his eighth complete game of the season. He gave up nine hits, all singles — four by the Red Raiders' Chaz Eiguren.

BASKETBALL

PHOENIX (AP) — Point guard Jason Kidd signed a one-year contract extension with the Suns, through the 2003-04 season.

Kidd won the NBA assists title the past two seasons and led guards in rebounding. His 9.3 career assist average is fourth in NBA history. In his sixth NBA season, Kidd averaged 14.3 points, 10.1 assists, a career-high 7.2 rebounds and 2.0 steals.

HOCKEY

DALLAS (AP) Visualization. Golfers use it, and Dallas Stars coach Ken Hitchcock sounds like he wants his team to try it in tonight's Game 7 of the Western Conference finals the Colorado against Avalanche.

"I really believe that this is now a situation where the body will go anywhere the mind wants to take it," Hitchcock said.

The winner of tonight's game advances to the Stanley Cup finals against East winner New Jersey. The series begins Tuesday night, with the Devils playing host to the first game.

Whatever the Stars did last year worked great as they rattled the Avalanche 4-1 in Game 7 of the conference finals. Dallas went on to win the Stanley Cup in six games over Buffalo.

Colorado won the Cup in 1996 and still has many key players from that team. One newcomer is Ray Bourque, who made the finals during his two decades in Boston, but never won a championship.

Coming off a goal and an assist in Game 6, he's fired up for the winner-take-all finale. "That's why I came here, to be in that situation," said Bourque, whose emotions fired on a postgoal fist pump. "I'm just thankful for the opportunity to compete and to get this far."

Dave Andreychuk, also acquired from the Bruins in the Bourque deal, also had a big impact in Colorado's 2-1 victory Thursday night. His first-period hit knocked out Stars defenseman Richard Matvichuk, who KO'd several Avs last postseason.

Matvichuk suffered a concussion, but is expected to play tonight.

Hitchcock was not among those calling for Andreychuk to be suspended. But he would've liked the officials to have done something about

"Anybody who saw the game knows it should've been a penalty," he said. "If we're going to lose a player, then it should be at least some advantage for us to go on a power play for however many minutes.

Colorado coach Bob Hartley said he watched the tape Friday and saw a clean

"Andreychuk is coming to finish his check," Hartley said. "Here is a guy of 6-5, Mantvichuk goes down a little bit and Dave's forearm goes off his shoulder and pops him on the cheek."

Hartley also defended the physical play between the two Western Conference rivals.

At Groom, Carrie Davis works out on the hurdles just prior to leaving for Austin and the state meet.

When the Class 1A state track meet was over, Groom senior Carrie Davis had done some things most high school athletes can only dream about.

It was Davis' third consecutive trip to the state meet. She had won bronze medals in both the 300 hurdles and high jump as a junior. That would be just a warmup for this year.

Davis was literally a one-girl track team this year, coming close to winning a school championship all by herself. She medaled in four individual events, setting a new 1A record in the high jump with a 5-9 leap. She broke the old mark of 5-8 1/4 set two years ago.

She was second in the 300 hurdles and third in both the triple jump and 100 hurdles. Her times in the 300 hurdles (45.30) and 100 hurdles (15.32 were personal bests.

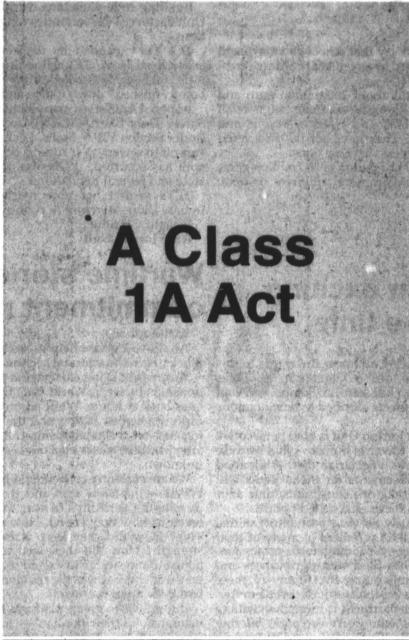

Davis, who is going to the University of Texas at Arlington on a track scholarship, earned 30 points to become Class 1A's high-point girl at the state

Her point total put Groom in second place in the team standings behind Karnack's 46 points. She was Groom's only state qualifier.

At the end of the day, Davis posed for a photograph at Mike A. Myers Stadium.

She displayed a runnerup team plaque, a gold medal, a silver medal, two bronze medals, and a big smile.

It took Davis only one day to accomplish all of these amazing feats. The memories will last a lifetime.

In Austin, Carrie Davis displays the second-place team trophy and her four individual medals.

Fantasy Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -They may look like the real Texas Rangers, but those uniformed baseball players at The Ballpark in Arlington this weekend paid to play for fun.

One glance and it's easy to realize they look like the real Rangers because of their regulation uniforms and not their playing ability.

More than 40 men and one woman paid $2,995 each ($500 more for those who needed hotel accommodations) to take part in the Texas Rangers Fantasy Camp, unusual in that it is being held at the actual major league stadium during the season.

"It is more than worth it. I would have probably paid double," said Jason Bramlett, 30, a small business owner from Hurst. "This is something you think you can only imagine being a part of."

All of the campers get the opportunity to be close to former Texas Rangers greats taking part in the camp. Some get to act out their unfulfilled childhood dreams of being a major-league player and others get to briefly revive a career cut short.

In 1965, Carl Haddock, 56, of Springtown, Texas, was in his first season as a minor-league pitcher in North Carolina for the New York Mets when he was called to military duty in

During the four-day fantasy camp, which ends Sunday night, Haddock was back on a pitcher's mound for the first time since returning from Vietnam.

"I hadn't done it in a long time so I thought I'd come out here and see what it'd be like again — and see if I still had the stuff," Haddock said. "I will be able to say I did pitch in the Ballpark off the mound."

Haddock struck out a couple f batters in his first outing the weekend, even with a pulled hamstring and his already sore arm.

"About a minute and six seconds into the deal after exercises and stretching, I pulled the hamstring real good," Haddock said. "I'm sore now, so I don't have to wait until next week."

As Jim Sundberg, the Rangers Gold Glove catcher (1974-83 and 1988-89), put it while watching Haddock pitch: "He won't be able to pick his nose tomorrow."

The ribbing from coaches and fellow players is part of the experience for the campers, who each got an authentic Rangers uniform - name and number included — and a personalized wooden bat.

The real fun was acting the part of a major-leaguer.

In addition to playing games on the field against each other and against the camp instructors, the campers got to hang out in the clubhouse. They were even subjected to a kangaroo court, a common way for big-leaguers to fine each other for anything.

"No mercy. I'm hurting already and they want to hurt my pocketbook too," said Haddock, fined $3 by the kangaroo court for pulling his hamstring.

Sundberg, Gaylord Perry, Fergie Jenkins and Mickey Rivers were among former Ranger players serving as instructors during the camp. Hall of Fame strikeout king Nolan Ryan, who had heart bypass surgery April 23, visited campers on Friday.

"I've followed baseball all of my life," Bramlett said. "Nolan, that's the main reason I came out here. Also the chance to meet Gaylord, Fergie, Jim Sundberg and other greats."

Bramlett hasn't played organized baseball since he got out of high school in 1988, he said. The slow-pitch church softball he has played since isn't the Sundberg said it was enjoyable to be around campers so energetic and enthusiastic about their opportunity. It's not making him miss baseball though.

"I put it behind me quite a few years ago," Sundberg said.

Sweet potatoes aren't yams ...

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) -One thing about sweet potatoes: Purists don't call them yams, terming it a widespread misnomer. Another thing: They're very good for you. And third: Certain varieties grow easily in the North.

Of different botanical families, sweet potatoes originated in tropical Peru and Ecuador while true yams, less nutritious, came from Africa and can't be raised in the United States because our growing season is not long enough. They're imported from the Caribbean.

The confusion in names reputedly traces back to an adman who coined "Louisiana yams" 50 years ago to make sweet potatoes grown in that state sound attractively dif-

Seen side by side, they don't even look alike, the sweet potatoes generally having smooth skin and orange color while the yams are brown and scaly. One claim to fame of the yam is that birth control pills are derived from it.

Nutritionally, sweet potatoes are rich in beta carotene providing the Vitamin A that is good for vision, among other things. Yams are low

Years ago, sweet potatoes were deemed a Southern vegetable ungrowable in northern gardens because of frosts. But then varieties were bred that could make it in the North. Development of black plas-tic mulch and row covers helped warm the soil and speed the grow-

Georgia Jet, maturing in 90 days with high yields, is a variety much recommended for Northern growing. Its flesh is moist and deep orange. The variety is offered at $9.95 for 25 plants by Park Seed, 1 Parkton Ave., Greenwood, S.C., 29647-0001, Tel. 800-845-3369, www.parkseed.com. shipped bareroot at the right plant-ing time for the customer's climate.

Another 90-day plant grown in northern areas is Louisiana-developed Centennial, also offered by Park at the same price.

sprouts grown from the previous year's crop of sweet potatoes. They're also called slips or draws.

Some veteran gardeners grow their own slips, but if you're new to raising this vegetable, or pressed for time, the easiest and fastest route is to order the plants from a supplier.

After the planting site is softened by tilling to a depth of at least eight inches, pile the soil up in a series of ridges about eight inches high and a foot wide to give the roots plenty of room in which to grow. You space the plants in these ridges about a foot and a half apart and deep enough to cover the roots up deep enough to cover the roots up to the first leaves.

You should water first with a high-phosphorous starter solution and then plentifully for a few days. Southern varieties take four frostfree months to mature.

In the North, as noted, you have about three months without frost, starting from when the ground is warm enough, which means late May in my area of southern New York.

To harvest, you dig the roots up carefully. Harvest time in the South and central states runs from late September to the middle of October. In the North, do it before you hear frost warnings.

If you have a successful harvest and want to try growing your own slips the following year, store some of the best looking of your potatoes in a warm, well-lit area. (If you don't have your own potatoes to work with, you can look in the supermarket in late fall for some nice candidates to store away.)

They'll likely have begun to sprout at one end about the time you're ready to pot them next year. That's about 90 days before your first frost-free date. Put them in containers filled with soil, with the apprenting and kept above the soil sprouting end kept above the soil surface. In three months, if everything goes well, you should have slips good enough to plant in the garden.

New group promotes 'quintessential' poet Robert Frost

By MIKE ECKEL Associated Press Writer

OLD BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) - Ask a hired man or a housekeeper or the watchman on his beat. This is hallowed

The cemetery of the Old First Church in Old Bennington is where poet Robert Frost is buried.

Shivering in the early spring breeze, Carole Thompson and Lea Newman, a former aluminum saleswoman from New York City and a retired English professor from Bennington, read the epitaph on the coffin-sized granite slab: "I had a lover's quarrel with the world."

Neither Thompson nor Newman has a quarrel with the man buried in this Protestant cemetery: this paradox who called himself an Old Testament Christian, but whom scholars consider an atheist.

These women have only passion for Vermont's first poet laureate and his ation for him through a Web site and

Frost has been described as the Homer of New England, a cranky

The matter, if her transubstantiation succeeds, will be a new national group to celebrate Frost. The group wants to promote his poetry, not strictly as iambic feet and rhyming verse, but as insight into human nature.

"We want to appeal to the average reader, to those attuned to his poetry you know, Frost enthusiasts," she says. Thompson's group is The Friends of

Robert Frost, which came into official existence exactly 151 years after the poet was born. Though they gathered as a simple discussion group two years ago, the Friends this spring began the process of becoming an official nonprofit organization. They count Frost's two granddaughters among support-

The group has set goals: to democratize Frost, by fostering a wider apprecidiscussion groups at schools and libraries.

"Frost is so accessible," says those New England places and people who inspired Frost. "We want to make his presence more visible to the general reader." Thompson, however, is not a scholar. She sold aluminum in New York City snowy evenings, stone walls and pithy for three decades. Like countless other high school students, she was turned off by Frost, and poetry in general. But after moving to the southwestern Vermont hills where Frost lived for 20 years, Thompson rediscovered his

> Now her passion for Frost causes her to forget directions and miss turns when driving around town. It has also caused her to be elected The Friends' first president, and she's eager to promote Frost's poetry.

"After being in aluminum for 30 years, he's an easy sell," she says.

Besides discussion groups, the group also intends to preserve or simply protect four homesteads north of Boston where Frost lived as an adult. Frost appreciation groups already gather in several states. More formal groups, such as the Robert Frost Society that has been around for 25 years, take an academic approach to his poetry. Even schools where Frost taught or lec-Harvard, tured — Amherst, Dartmouth, Middlebury — have vied for his legacy, claiming letters, writings, or even his ashes.

Of course, says Jay Parini, author of a 1999 biography of Frost, that's expected, even intended.

The competition doesn't deter the group's founders.

"Popularity is not necessarily a bad word," says Newman. "The goal for us 40 places, Thompson says, the group is is to enrich the experience of his poet-

Lesley Lee Francis, one of Frost's several grandchildren, says there is definitely a place for the non-academic approach to his poetry.

'Academicians are out of touch beyond the academy, and that's a problem. Frost himself was very much outside of the academy," says Francis, a professor of Romance languages and literature now retired in Arlington, Va.

This group, she says, may help "bridge the gap between the academic

Boy Who Found Penthouse Is Now in Parents' Doghouse

DEAR ABBY: Please help! I caught my 11-year-old son sneaking in my bedroom going through my husband's drawers, and he found a Penthouse magazine. (The only one in our house, I might add.) My husband and I are both extremely upset over this, but don't know how to handle it. First, my son has lost our trust by going through our room when we weren't home, and second, he lied about it. Lastly, we are concerned that he was exposed to that kind of material. There was much more in that magazine than anyone should see.

I feel that our son has lost his innocence, and my husband and I are both distraught at the thought of it. How do you punish a child for this? I understand the curiosity his class is in the middle of "family life experiences" this week. My son is generally a good kid, other than the fact that when he does something wrong, he tends to lie his way

Lest you think you're the only parents with this problem, read on for one that arrived the same day as yours:

Playboy magazines in a sealed box in our attic. One day while putting the attic recently.

I went upstairs to his bedroom and asked him if he had been in the attic and had removed the tape from box that held some magazines. I told him that all I wanted was a truthful answer. I told him that when he answered, I would know if he was telling me the truth. He asked, "Dad, how can you tell?"

ask you to stick out your tongue. If you're not truthful, your tongue will have spots on it." Then I asked him if he had removed the tape from the box in the attic. He replied, "No." I said, "Stick out your tongue." After he did, I said, "Uh-oh!"

He stood there looking up at me with his hands on his hips and said, "Dad, that was from the last time."

B.W. IN HURON, OHIO DEAR ABBY: Last year, my boyfriend's parents gave me a large, expensively matted and framed picture of him and me for my birthday. Our relationship ended several months ago, and I am debating whether it would be appropriate to return the picture. It has been sit-

How do you dry flowers? Let us count the ways

By GEORGE BRIA

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — A bouquet on my dining room table is living a charmed life.

"Living" and "life" may seem like the wrong words since all the flowers are now dead. But it's a fact that they're as attractive today as when the bouquet arrived more than a month ago in its fresh-cut glory.

With no work on my part, I've seen a day-by-day transformation of one kind of beauty into another that is lasting longer. A vase once evocative of a midsummer garden now is hosting a dried flower arrangement looking like a museum

Mimosa, still golden, cascades over the sides. There are roses of various colors, hydrangea blossoms, some kind of pittosporum and asparagus ferns, all pleasing the eye in their preservation. Nothing, so far, looks deteriorated.

This has happened, as I've said, without any flower arrangements can involve much expertise

In my long ago youth, dried flowers were something romantic that you chanced upon in an old book that hadn't been opened in years. The leaf or blossom may have been put there just as a bookmark, but you also wondered whether there was a story to it and if it was happy or sad.

They were called "pressed flowers" and indeed pressing is still one of the methods used for preserving flowers. But the results are flatly twodimensional, even though color is retained, and you may want more body.

Depending on the plants, this can be achieved in various ways, such as air drying, oven drying, microwaving, and freeze drying, or with desicpainstaking, but the bonus is that dried flower of World War II from Italy.

Anyone wanting to explore the craft will find a good guide in Alex MacCormick's "The Dried Flower Arranger" (Firefly Books, paperback, 1994, $17.95.) The 144-page book, first published in Britain, contains excellent full page photographs in color and it provides lists of plants suitable for the various drying methods and ways of displaying them.

Assuming you're drying flowers that you grow or pick yourself, MacCormick lays down four basic rules: Stalks must be cut cleanly and at an angle; don't cut when flowers are wet or in midday sun; cut flowers before they come into full bloom; and avoid imperfect or damaged matericants and glycerin.
