Recent Flood Relief in This Country Gave Prominence

Herbert Clark Hoover, secretary of commerce in the cabinets of Presidents Harding and Coolidge, loomed as a strong possibility for the republican presidential nomination shortly after President Coolidge in August, 1927, issued his "I do not choose" statement.

At that time the commerce secretary was enjoying a renewed prominence throughout the country because of his administration of relief measures in the flooded areas of the Mississippi Valley, where his activities served to recall his relief work during the World War.

From the start the Hoover strength throughout the country appeared to be greater than that of other candidates for the nomination. Some of his political opponents in his own party raised issues to question his qualification or eligibility for the nomination, but few of these issues persisted for long.

There was brought up Mr. Hoover's connection with a case decided in the British courts in 1905 in which was involved a Chinese mining property. It was averred that Hoover, who was general manager of the enterprise, had made a fortune out of it and that there was some question of his integrity in connection with the manner in which he had accumulated it. These charges were answered by Representatives Free of California, who read into the House record documents and letters which exonerated Mr. Hoover from any improper action, praised him for his part in the litigation and quoted his testimony to show that he helped to restore the property to its rightful owners.

Among those who came to the defense of Mr. Hoover at the time was Tang Shaoyi, a former premier of the Peking government, who had been interested in the mining property. He said:

"Hoover took away from China far less than he had honestly earned, while he left in China the high respect and esteem of all who knew him."

The Chinese statesman also praised Mr. Hoover for his activities during the Boxer uprising, which he said, resulted in the saving of many lives, including that of Mr. Tong's daughter, now Mrs. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese diplomat.

A religious issue was suggested when it was recalled that he and Mrs. Hoover had been married by a Catholic priest. A question of his eligibility for the office of president was raised, based on the provision of the constitution requiring 14 years' residence within the United States.

Late in 1925 the commerce secretary began a campaign against the high price of crude rubber, which he repeatedly charged was due to the extortionate policy of the East Indian combine. This combine, it was further charged, had obtained the support of the British government in quoting a figure of one dollar a pound for its output.

The campaign was the subject of much discussion and comment on both sides of the Atlantic. By the middle of February, 1926, crude rubber prices were quoted around 65 cents, or

FORMER KAISER WAS EMPEROR 40 YEARS AGO

Only One Son Present at Birthday Observances in Holland

DOORN HOLLAND, June 15.—(P)—Forty years ago today Wilhelm Hohenzollern became German emperor.

In commemoration of this occasion, the former Kaiser this morning conducted special devotional services.

At one o'clock there was a special dinner attended by members of the immediate family and several intimate friends.

Of the former emperor's children, only his eldest son, Prince Frederick William, the former crown prince, had arrived today.

While on Wilhelm's birthday and other festive occasions there usually has been a deluge of letters and telegrams, today comparatively few arrived and this was explained on the ground that the present occasion is a rather painful one.

Lions Do Great Work for Crippled Children of Plains

Forty crippled children have been sent and thirty are now ready to go to Oklahoma City for treatment. It was reported by Miss Medora Duncan, nurse for crippled children, at a district meeting of the Lions club held yesterday afternoon at the Schneider hotel.

She also reported that $4,000 had been spent on the crippled children, but that there was a great need for additional funds to carry on the work. Interest in this work gaining momentum among the various clubs, stated L. E. Duncan, president of the Pampa Lions club, and a resolution was passed at the group meeting favoring the selection of one member of each club to devote time to the cause.

Lionism is the fastest growing organization in the state, according to figures on its growth given by G. G. McBride of Borger, district president. Last year five new clubs were organized in Texas; this year, sixty new clubs already have been organized, making a gain of 1,200 per cent over the previous year.

Membership has increased from 4,200 to 6,000, McBride said.

Representatives from Borger, Pampa, Clarendon, Wellington, Dalhart, Amarillo, and Follett were at the meeting. The presidents of each club represented were called on for a short talk.

G. G. McBride, Borger, was re-elected by acclamation as group chair man, and I. M. Smiser, Borger, was re-elected group secretary. Dalhart was selected for the August convention city.

School Site Is Chosen and Four Teachers Elected

Twelve lots on Browning avenue and lying between Sloan and Hazel Sts. were purchased by the school board at its regular meeting last night from C. P. Sloan. They will be used as the site for the East ward school building to be constructed this summer.

A site for the West ward school has not been contracted yet, Joe Smith, board secretary said.

Four teachers were elected at the meeting. Miss Jane Singleton of Amarillo was elected for the fourth grade. Miss Singleton is a student in the West Texas State Teachers college, where she has completed two years of college work.

Miss Cleo Snodgrass and Miss Opal Snodgrass, sisters from Floydada, were selected for the second and third grades, respectively. They are degree teachers.

Miss Stella Rogers, student of the University of Texas, will teach in the Junior high department, and Miss Nellie Winston of Weatherford was also selected for the Junior high.

Smith Concert Is Grouped About the Spirit of Southwest

A small but exceptionally appreciative audience last evening enjoyed a concert at Central high school auditorium presented by Mrs. Charles Franklin Smith of Amarillo, assisted by Mrs. Harvey Crudgington, pianist, of the same day.

Mrs. Smith, talented contralto, reminds one instantly of the immortal and in tone qualities. She started the program with Caro Mio Bene (Giardini) and Im Kahne (Grieg)—numbers which brought ample expression of the technic and tonal adequacy of the artist.

The last of the first group, however, came nearer the theme of the program. It was "Trails" (Philleo), a tribute to the pioneer, in appreciative and almost hymnal melody.

Other parts of the program, of a recitative nature in the fine old sacred classic, "brought out the resonant lower tones Mrs. Smith, in pleasing informality, told of her love for the songs and emphasized their themes.

In the latter part of the concert, the artist turned to folk lore of the South and Southwest. She declared that the folk songs must be saved if this country is to boost the music and literature that other countries have. She

ADOBE WALLS BOY SCOUT COUNCIL TAKEN FOR NAME

Buffalo Wallow Title Duplicated Elsewhere—McIver Is Executive and Pampa Is Headquarters

Pampa was selected as headquarters for the Adobe Walls council of the Boy Scouts of America at a meeting at the Schneider hotel last night. The name was changed from Buffalo Wallow council to Adobe Walls council because of there being a similar name, Buffalo Trail, in Texas.

All towns in the council except Canadian and Groom were represented at the meeting and the district includes all of Garson, Roberts, Hutchinson, and Hemphill, and the upper parts of Gray and Wheeler counties. Pampa was selected as headquarters because of its central position.

Of the $7,500 budget to be raised by the council, $6,037.50 was reported raised. Pampa and Borger were the only towns reported to be behind with their quotas, and the representatives of these places pledged early completion of their drives.

Standard constitution and by-laws and standard statement of policy were adopted at the meeting, and it was agreed that no indebtedness shall be incurred except what can be paid

Local Contractor Will Build New Baptist Church

John T. Glover, local contractor, was awarded the contract for the construction of the new $100,000 Baptist church here last night at a joint meeting of the deacons, board of trustees, and building committee, according to Rev. D. H. Truhitte, pastor.

By the first of next week those present at the meeting expect to raise $16,000, making a total $40,000 in cash in order to secure a loan on the balance. As soon as the money is raised, the date for actual construction will be set, Rev. Truhitte said.

The building, not including the fixtures and pipe organ, will cost $64,700.

W. H. Lightfoot, Amarillo architect, has all the plans drawn except subcontract specifications. Those will be completed in 10 or 15 days.

Optimistic over an early adjournment, the New Mexico delegation had made reservations for the trip home today.

Platform Coolidge Style

Once it has come to an agreement on the vice-presidential nomination, the convention will be ready to adjourn and go home. A few hours before it made its choice for head of the ticket it had completed adoption of a platform modeled on the Coolidge style of political architecture with a few extra buttresses to fortify it against the special strains of this particular presidential year.

How serious the farm relief dispute may yet become was a subject of speculation everywhere as the delegates prepared to separate.

After sending his message of withdrawal to the convention Mr. Lowden boarded a train for his home at Oregon, Ill., without making a further statement or sending his congratulations to the successful candidate. Some of the other farm leaders who had tried in vain to put the party on record as favoring the principles of the McNary-Haugen bill said they were preparing to carry the battle to the Democratic convention meeting in Houston on June 26.

The administration farm plank, which led to Lowden's withdrawal, proposes a program of "economic equality" for the farmer but makes no mention of the McNary-Haugen bill or its equalization fee. This plank was given a three-to-one preference vote by the convention itself. In this

The melons were among the first to be received here this season, and The News force can vouch for their excellence. The treat was greatly appreciated.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON — There is nothing new about the charges of Senator George W. Norris that southern delegates to the Republican national convention are bought and sold.

The system by which they are bought by money and patronage to control nominations has been a scandal ever since the Civil War.

During the recent meeting of the Republican national committee to decide the various contests raised by rival southern Republicans over the delegate seats, one writer referred to the process as "the very nastiest phase of American politics."

These contests represent only fights between a few white men, some of them survivors of the old carpet-bagger type, and a large group of negroes over the federal patronage below the Mason-Dixon line.

Because there is no Republican party in most of the southern states and hence no machine that has to be recognized except for expediency's sake, the contests are not decided on their merits.

It isn't fair to say that all southern delegates to Republican conventions are bought with money.

every so often a postmaster kills himself when the demands of the negro leaders become too exacting.

St. Louis Cardinals' Ringing Bats Give Cincinnati Worry

(By The Associated Press.)
With each passing day the triumphant song of the red birds of St. Louis—a symphony of base hits—rings more plainly upon the ears of National league pennant contenders.

His pitching staff again in working order, Bill McKechnie who once managed the Pittsburgh Pirates to the pennant and then to a world's championship, has the Cardinals headed in the same general direction.

The Cincinnati Reds still were at the top of the heap Friday but their advantage over St. Louis had shrunk to half a game.

The Reds lost ground Thursday when they were washed out by rain at Philadelphia while the Cardinals were making it four in a row over the Boston Braves, 3 to 2.

The New York Giants are finding the Western clubs just as tough to beat at the Polo Grounds as they were west of the Alleghenies. Still smarting under the sting of three beatings from the Reds, McGraw's men found the Pittsburgh Pirates no more to their liking, the Corsairs pulling out a 4 to 3 victory in 11 innings.

Paul Waner's single in the eighth tied the score and his sacrifice fly, after Sparky Adams had tripled, accounted for the winning run.

The Chicago Cubs drew up to within six percentage points of the third-place Giants by taking over Brooklyn, 7 to 3.

The New York Yankees maintained their wide margin in what has been called the American league race, with a hard fought 4 to 3 triumph over the St. Louis Browns. Tony Lazzeri's homer with two on in the third proved to be the blow that gave Herb Pennock his 10th victory of the year.

Three runs in the eighth inning enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to beat Cleveland, 9 to 8, and keep pace with the Yankees although at a discreet distance to the rear.

Washington won its seventh victory in its last eight starts by taking Detroit into camp, 8 to 3.

Alex Metzler's double with the bases loaded in the fifth gave the Chicago White Sox a 5 to 4 verdict over the Boston Red Sox.

Batters Turn on Pitchers in Texas League Thursday

(By The Associated Press.)
The big guns cut loose along the Texas league front Thursday as the sluggers in nearly every game replied to the recent challenge of the pitchers with a barrage of base hits. Several pitchers turned in good accounts but most fared none too well.

The Houston Buffs, leaders of the loop, were handiest with their bats, drove out twelve safeties off Phillips of Beaumont, and defeated the Exporters, 7 to 2. Lindsey held the Exporters to seven scattered blows and recorded his thirteenth victory of the season.

Waco and San Antonio staged a contest full of lusty hitting with the former having the edge in total biggies, eleven to ten. The Cubs got three runs in the first game, but Slim Love tightened up while the Bears made their hits frequent and timely, and San Antonio won, 5 to 3.

Wichita Falls had their batting eyes working defeating Fort Worth, 4 to 2, and administered his first defeat of the season to the veteran Paul Wachtel one of the Cat pitching aces.

Dallas Steers defeated Shreveport, 5 to 3, in the first game of a double header, and the Louisiana men took the second, 13 to 0.

Big Crowd Sees Interesting Battles Thursday Night

Fight fans got just what they were looking for at the Pla-Mor last night. One of the best, if not the best, cards that has ever been arranged for the local ring displayed a wide range of flistic skill that kept the large crowd well entertained till 11:30 o'clock.

In the double main event Walter Varner, 154, the Pride of Roxana, won Young, 157, of Tulsa, Okla., and Jack Doss, 149, of Pampa, made quick work of his ten-round schedule with Roy Fisher, of Comar, Okla., when he chopped his opponent down early in the third round. Fisher has another year in high school football and is boxing for nothing in order to maintain his amateur standing, the referee announced before the bout.

Varner's excellent fighting condition his speed and accuracy, and his ability to duck and dodge heavy swings of the occasional vicious Young gave him a safe margin from the beginning. Young failed to land a damaging blow and his plunging, terrific swings were wide of the mark. It was well that Varner kept out of his way.

Varner, though a clever boxer, did not carry a knockout punch in his repertoire. In the seventh round Young was groggy and took blow after blow from the speedy Varner but he stayed on his feet by sheer grit.

Each fighter took his time in the first round, feeling out his opponent's style, and the round went to a draw. Varner took the second by a shade, but in the remaining eight it was Varner's fight clear through, and every round was practically the same.

The other main event between Doss and Fisher started out like it might be a close match, but Doss experience, coupled with his mighty short left jab soon weakened his opponent, making him an easy mark.

A heavy left to the right jaw in the third round sprawled Fisher on the mat for the count of ten. A previous blow, however, had left him stunned at least a minute before he was floored. The first round was a draw, and the last two went to Doss. Credit must be given to Jack Morrison, 130, Borger, and Kid Roberts, 122, also of Borger, for one of the most entertaining and lively battle of the program. Although Morrison had a sufficient margin of weight and skill to net him five of the six rounds, Roberts fought with a determination and grit that made him a favorite with the fans. For awhile in the fifth round it began to look like Roberts was coming back strong, but his failure to hold up in the sixth round gave Morrison a decisive victory. Jimmie Hudson of Amarillo challenged the winner, and a bout between him and Morrison will be scheduled in the near future.

Interesting preliminaries were fought between Curtis Simpson and "Andy Gump," both of Pampa, and Floyd Moore and Kid Ritchie, both of Borger. Simpson took the last of the three rounds scheduled, thereby winning the fight by a small margin. The first two rounds were fought to a draw. Moore and Ritchie fought their four round bout to a draw. Moore took the first two and Ritchie the last two.

Hornsby Suspended For Five Days on Misconduct Charge

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Charged with responsibility for the bottle throwing that marked yesterday's game between the Braves and St. Louis Cardinals at Boston, Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Braves, today was ordered suspended for five days "for inexcusably bad conduct on the ball field." The suspension was announced by John A. Heydler, president of the National league.

In the reports upon which the league executive based his action Hornsby was held accountable for arousing fans at Braves field to the point where they directed a barrage of pop bottles at Umpire Pfrman. The disturbance occurred in the fourth inning and followed the banishment of Hornsby from the game by Pfrman for protesting the umpire's calling him out on strikes. Pfrman was unhurt by the bombardment.

SADLER'S SHOW BACK AND POPULAR AS EVER

Harley Sadler and company, playing new bills every other night, are providing something different in entertainment here this week. They will remain all next week.

Several factors make the Sadler company unique in its class in this section. One is Sadler himself, comedian extraordinary but all-round West Texas as well. Sadler was one of the men influential in boosting the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in its early history.

In choosing entertainment for West Texas, he has derived and acted upon definite principles. He believes the people of this section wish action, comedy, and vaudeville of the better type. He has repeatedly emphasized that a show can be clean and be successful. He has learned that the masses of the people like a play with a moral subtly drawn.

He is back again, with a troupe whose faces are almost as familiar in the Panhandle as those of the presidential candidates whose names have been emblazoned in headlines of thousands of newspapers and magazines. The cowboy band and orchestra is better than ever, the between-act bills have been strengthened, and the pageantry for which the show is famous is just as clever. And by the way, the juggling and bag punching acts are of real big time calibre, and educational too.

When A Girl Loves

WHAT HAS HAPPENED VIRGINIA BREWSTER, after losing both father and wealth, consents to make her home with CLARISSA DEAN and her father. DEAN plots to separate her from her fiance, NATHANIEL DANN, but falls and later is forced to pay blackmail to a MRS. FARLEY or face a scandal. CLARISSA becomes jealous of her and VIRGINIA resolves to leave, but DEAN insists that she marry him. When she refuses, he threatens to reveal the fact that her father cheated her out of $100,000 in a bootlegging deal. Recklessly, she promises to marry him in one year. VIRGINIA leaves but has to give a ring to her father until she can find a position. She goes to NIEL'S studio, but her joy at seeing him is clouded because she dare not reveal her financial need or her promise to DEAN, and also because of the familiarity with which his model, CHIRI, treats NIEL. She seeks work through an agency but without success. Upon arriving at her hotel one evening, she finds a note from DEAN and wonders how he learned her address. NIEL takes her out to dine and on the way home VIRGINIA notices a man whom she has suspected of shadowing her for several days. Next morning she calls on a broker friend, OLIVER CUTLER, who has promised to help her. His secretary suddenly seems aloof after having been friendly to VIRGINIA at first. A call from the agency brings hope. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX. MRS. PHELPS flushed slowly under Virginia's straightforward question and her glance slipped uneasily away from the girl's face to the glass-topped desk. "I'm not really trying to discourage you," she protested lamely; "but I've been thinking about you and it seems . . . well, a bit absurd for a girl of your position to be subject to such—er, indignities as you met at the Gernsners." "There were no indignities," Virginia stated gravely. "Mrs. Gernsner lost her temper. It's true, but I'm sure she felt she had sufficient reason to do so. And as far as my position is concerned, . . . it is that of a girl who must take whatever comes to her in the effort to get work." "That's just the point I wish to make, my dear. Is it necessary for you to get work? Don't you think it would be more becoming if you allowed your friends to assist you?" A frown appeared on Virginia's forehead, to be quickly followed by raised eyebrows. She smiled coldly and shook her head. "I assume you have been in communication with someone who has advised you against helping me," she said stiffly. "May I ask who it was?" Mrs. Phelps lifted her chin a trifle. "I am telling you what I believe is for your best interest," she answered evasively. "You have no idea, I'm sure, what it will mean to you to undertake to earn your

International Sunday School Lesson

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

GENERAL TOPIC: The Crucifixion. SCRIPTURE LESSON: Mark 15:22-26, 33-39.

22. And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull.

23. And they offered him wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not.

24. And they crucified him, and part his garments among them, casting lots upon them, what each should take.

25. And it was the third hour, and they crucified him.

26. And the superscription of his accusation was written over, The King of the Jews.

27. And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.

28. And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, Eloi, Eloi, lamassabachani? which is, being interpreted, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?

29. And some of them stood by, when they heard it, said, behold he calleth Elijah.

30. And one ran, and filled a sponge full of vinegar, put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let be; let us see whether Elijah cometh to take him down.

31. And some offered him a sour wine, and he drank it.

32. And when he had said, I thirst, there stood a veiled man, and he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

33. And when he had said, Truly this man was the Son of God, he died.

34. And when the centurion, who stood by against him, saw that he gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

35. And when the centurion, who stood by against him, saw that he gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

36. And when the centurion, who stood by against him, saw that he gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

since it is not known where Pilate's palace was or where Jesus was crucified. A tradition no older than the twelfth century points out the road now called the Via Dolorosa or Sorrowful Way, which extends from the Tower of Antonia to the church of the Holy Sepulchre.

"Golgotha" or "Calvary." "And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull."

The Hebrew (Aramic) word meaning "a skull and 'Calvary' is the English form of a Latin word of the same meaning. The name having the shape of a skull, perhaps with two caves in its side which looked from a distance like eye-sockets. A continuous tradition from the time of Constantine declares that Golgotha was situated where the Church of the Holy Sepulchre now is, in the northwest quarter of modern Jerusalem, but the city wall of Christ's time may have closed this region.

"And they crucify him." Crucifixion is one of the most horrible deaths invented by cruel man. From the mention of the inscription placed above Christ's head, it is clear that the cross was of the traditional form, an upright with a cross-piece a foot or two down. To the latter Christ's outstretched hands were nailed, while his feet, placed together were nailed to the upright. Between his hands and his feet was probably a rough projection on which his body rested. On such a cross the naked body was left to hang sometimes for days, till the loss of blood, the pain of the festering wounds, and above all the torture of thirst, brought the welcome release of death. "And part his garments among them, casting lots upon them, what each should take." A quaternion, or four Roman soldiers, in command of a centurion, kept guard over each of the three prisoners, to see that their friends did not cut them down and take them away. The clothing of the condemned was a perquisite of the soldiers. Separating Christ's other garment into four parts at the seams, they divided it among them; but when they came to his inner garment they found that unlike a priest's robe, was woven in one piece throughout, having no seam. If they had cut it into four parts they would have ruined it, and so they cast lots for it, thus unwittingly fulfilling the prophecy of Ps. 22:18. They part my garment among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.

"It was the Third Hour." v. 25. "And it was the third hour, and they crucified him."

2. The word of Restoration, spoken to the repentant robber: "Verily, I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Luke (23:44).

3. The word of affection, spoken to Mary, his mother, and to John, his beloved disciple, commending her to his care: "Woman, behold thy son." Behold, they mother" (John 19:26, 27).

4. The word of Descension, uttered in the darkness which shrouded the earth and in the deeper gloom which filled the Redeemer's soul: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Mark 15:34).

5. The word of Physical Suffering, spoken after the fever of his wounds under the burning sun had parched his body beyond endurance: "I thirst" (John 19:28).

6. The word of Achievement, spoken at the close of his sacrificial sufferings: "It is finished" (John 19:30)—one word in the Greek; it has been called "the greatest single word ever uttered."

7. The word of Committal, spoken just before the Saviour rendered up his life: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23:46).

"This Man was the Son of God." v. 39. "And when the centurion, who stood by over against him, saw that he so gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God." The centurion was in charge of the Roman soldiers, and stood facing the three crosses to see that the decreed punishments were carried out. Like all they crucified him." Sunrise was reckoned as beginning the day, and it occurred at about 6 o'clock at this time of year. The third hour was therefore about 9 o'clock in the morning, as we reckon time.

"The King of the Jews." v. 26. "And the superscription of his accusation was written over, The King of the Jews." Pilate himself prescribed the title, in grim sarcasm against the Jews. The priests asked him to change it to a statement that Jesus had claimed to be king of the Jews, but with the obstinacy of a weak man Pilate held to his petty revenge for being forced to do a great wrong. John tells us that the inscription was written in three languages—the official Latin, the common Greek, and the Hebrew which even an unlearned Jew could read. Thus Pilate's spite in reality proclaimed the universality of the Gospel, that Christianity was to go "into all the world," as Christ had commanded.

The Seven "Words From the Cross." 1. The Word of Forgiveness, spoken at the height of the agony, when the cross, bearing the tortured Saviour, was lifted up and dropped with a horrible wrench into the socket prepared for it: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34).

2. The word of Restoration, spoken to the repentant robber: "Verily, I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Luke (23:44).

3. The word of affection, spoken to Mary, his mother, and to John, his beloved disciple, commending her to his care: "Woman, behold thy son." Behold, they mother" (John 19:26, 27).

4. The word of Descension, uttered in the darkness which shrouded the earth and in the deeper gloom which filled the Redeemer's soul: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Mark 15:34).

5. The word of Physical Suffering, spoken after the fever of his wounds under the burning sun had parched his body beyond endurance: "I thirst" (John 19:28).

6. The word of Achievement, spoken at the close of his sacrificial sufferings: "It is finished" (John 19:30)—one word in the Greek; it has been called "the greatest single word ever uttered."

7. The word of Committal, spoken just before the Saviour rendered up his life: "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit" (Luke 23:46).

"This Man was the Son of God." v. 39. "And when the centurion, who stood by over against him, saw that he so gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God." The centurion was in charge of the Roman soldiers, and stood facing the three crosses to see that the decreed punishments were carried out. Like all the centurions mentioned in the New Testament, this Roman appears to have been a man of noble character, ready to respond to good influences. He was tremendously impressed by the heroic and majestic bearing of Jesus, so different from what he was accustomed to see in his prisoners, and by the supernatural accompaniments of his death. He had caught up the words, "the Son of God," from bystanders, and he was ready to believe that Jesus was more than a man.

Accept the Atonement "The Christian life begins at the foot of the cross; first the reconciliation, the great forgiveness, the full atonement; then the imitation of Christ."—Rev. J. G. Simpson, D. D. "Whoever will let him come" "Now is the accepted time." Today, if he will hear his voice, harden not your hearts. Flee to the refuge. The flag that flies from his rampart bears yet, in glad, golden letters, the divine-dictated motto, "Whoever will, let him come."—William Arnot.

Hoover--

45 cents below the level reached during the speculative operations. In some quarters it was contended that the drop was an indication that Hoover, virtually had won his fight against the British monopoly.

Meanwhile the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce conducted an investigation of the control of crude rubber. In a report made in March, 1926, it sustained Hoover's charges respecting British manipulation of rubber and declared that in three months Americans had paid $100,000,000 over fair prices.

Hoover's name first commanded general attention in the tense days of August 1914. The swift German onslaught brought home the fatal significance of war to legions of Americans; pleasure seekers, tourists, and students, who annually scatter across the European continent. In the first clash, while the armies of the nations of the Old World mobilized for "Der Tag," these hapless visitors found money almost worthless and bank credit entirely so. In darkened cities out of which trains no longer ran, or countryside denuded of shelter and subsistence, where the stranger and the alien could look neither for tolerance, nor assistance in escaping.

The news of their predicament had barely begun to trickle when newspaper readers generally learned also that a hastily formed American relief committee in London, headed by a man named Hoover, had assumed the responsibility of getting them away. The task, it appeared, had been performed with unexpected swiftness the success, and for Mr. Hoover there ensued a decade of high pressure performance, of ever widening responsibility, that at the height of war made him chief of the efforts of the Allied countries and the United States to sustain their populations and their armies. Cessation of war did not end his activities, and he remained one of the foremost figures in American political life, undertaking major duties in connection with the food provisions for the exhausted people of half the area of Eurasia, and eventually serving with recognized distinction in the cabinet.

Hardly anything but the social upheaval of the war could have brought to the front rank of American political life a personality at once so curiously gifted and so constrained. Through an almost intuitive grasp of group psychology was one basis of Mr. Hoover's success, first in organizing industry and later in meeting the huge emergencies of famine and pestilence, his contacts with strangers always exhibited him as impressive, drawn, individual, incapable of demoralization and devoid of impressiveness.

Similarly, the adventure of listening to him reading dogged persistence a most meagre but tedious speech created ecstatic thrills for very few. Yet those who were at hand during his many crises of conflict will hardly forget the bewildering transformation that pressure produced in his customary demeanor. In the clash of a conference, or under the hammering of hostile cross examination before a major public tribunal, the masking manner fell away as a scabbard leaves a sword blade, and there came into action a man curly incisive as to speech, cooler commanding unsurpassed knowledge of men and matters and science, and brilliantly aggressive in the display of capacity and will to dominate.

Those who read Mr. Hoover's output of reading on any subject likewise will stumble across some nugget of by-product humor most naturally if incongruously adjusted to the solemn fact he mostly treated. And much of pungently phrased and highly vivid his written matter is shot through with brief epigrams setting out some conclusion built from his unflinching insight. His intimates valued beyond price the odd half hours when, speaking in monotone over a smoldering cigar, he would give way in reminiscent mood to the impulse to recount marvellous tales of struggles with devil doctors in China, romantic hunts for underground mineral treasure, or personal experiences with war makers and revolutionists.

Even in his amusements, Mr. Hoover departed from common standards. He fished sometimes in desultory fashion, and motored even considerable distances. On many occasions, as well, participants to such a tour had the experience of watching a cabinet member, more than a little muddled as to trousers and shirt, supervising the efforts of a pack of absorbed youngsters in constructing a miniature dam across some small Maryland or Virginia creek.

Radio possibilities early caught his initiating instincts; its regulation fell into his department, and he gave its popularization the powerful impulse of his genius for riveting public attention. He went through all the phases the broadcasting devotee exemplifies, a couple of years ahead of the pack, even to doing his listening in through a homely and inexpensive crystal set that matched the facilities most widely used.

Mr. Hoover's passion for order and organization, extending even to the minor matters of personal outfitting, served to release his time and energy for application in an extraordinarily wide field. Early in life he found the selecting of clothes a nuisance, and consequently standardized his attire to a set of dark blue suits and hard hats, samples of which he kept parked in a half dozen strategic points around the globe, ready to don when the habiliments currently serving gave way to wear and weather. On assuming office he put a clipping bureau methodically at the work of assembling all the adverse editorial criticism of his conduct for his attention; blandishment and praise was left unread. Always a student at heart, he had a daily bundle of papers, articles, and discussions of scientific, economic, or political subjects set aside for his home reading at the late hour just preceding sleep.

His own grasp of the theory and practice of getting things done, linked with the executive talent for finding and inspiring helpers, put him above the pressure of routine in merely running a government department, and six months after he entered the cabinet he emerged from a preliminary expending and renovating of the bureau particularly assigned to him, free for additional duty.

He was always thereafter snuffing the breeze for scent of new things to do, and occasioning some heartburnings among cabinet associates by reason of the showing that "Hoover was always ready to slip over into anything anywhere."

Through a door of his office in the commerce department there was dug when he assumed the post a tiny opening, inconspicuously placed and covered by a slide, that a discreet secretary might observe the status of affairs within. A glance through it always disclosed Mr. Hoover, in the rare moments when he was unoccupied at his desk striding unhurriedly but with persistence to and fro across the room. There was much about him to give the impression of controlled restlessness as of a man conscious that emergency would give him delightful use of facilities otherwise nearly latent.

The was was the occasion of the introduction of Mr. Hoover to the general public, but his career and accomplishment had been much beyond ordinary long before. Born in West Branch, Iowa, Aug. 10, 1874; the son of a blacksmith and a Quaker mother, he had been orphaned by death of both parents before he was seven years old. Relatives with whom he then made his home moved to Oregon, and at 13 years he was faced with the task of earning his own living as a boy worker in truck gardens, and later in city offices.

Bent upon obtaining an education, Mr. Hoover worked his way into and through the then newly founded Stanford University in California, emerging in 1895 with a degree in mining engineering and geology. In the succeeding 20 years, first as mine laborer, then as mine manager and operator, in all the deserted places of the world where mineral wealth is found, he made for himself a unique reputation and a large fortune. To admitted technical proficiency as an engineer—his books and monographs are standard textbooks in colleges today—Mr. Hoover combined proven ability in organizing and financing, and became identified with a group of offices in London and New York who engaged in mining and metallurgical enterprises in most of the quarters of the world.

From West Australia he had gone to China, and was engaged in the development of coal and iron deposits when the Boxer rebellion cooped him up with other foreigners in Peking, where he underwent the siege of 1900. Before the Allied troops relieved the legation prisoners, he had organized his first food relief, for Chinese and other refugees. He built a port there later, for the owners of the mining properties, and thereafter in Burma, Russia, Alaska and Mexico, initiated or directed enterprises which were for the most part successful. In 1913, it was estimated that 175,000 men were employed by the corporations for which he was acting as executive engineer. He maintains his connections with scholastic and research activities as well, and found time during the period to translate, with the collaboration of his wife, "De Res Metallica," a Latin work which is the earliest known treatise on mining. He had married in 1899 Miss Lou Henry, a Stanford schoolmate, and had two sons, Allan and Herbert.

From the work of the American relief committee that extricated the American tourists of 1914, Mr. Hoover was drafted immediately to a far greater task—the effort to feed and supply the Belgian population. He helped organize the Commission for Relief in Belgium, and took its leadership. It was not suspected at the time how far that task would develop; when the work wound up at the end of the war there had been expended mostly under Mr. Hoover's direction, $1,500,000,000 advanced by loans from allied governments or given by charity. It was operating a fleet of 200 steamships, and the people of northern France and Belgium had existed during four and a half years only by its functioning.

When the United States went into the war, President Wilson promptly appointed Mr. Hoover food administrator for the United States, though the latter remained in charge of the Belgium commission. In taking the post which war time experience in other countries had proved one of the most difficult to hold, Mr. Hoover told friends he "expected to die on the first barbed wire entanglements." His success, however, soon was conceded universally. On the war boards which supervised the nation's task of munitioning the vast army and navy created for the struggle, he became a dominant figure, and at the moment of the armistice, his organizations functioned to supply and feed the exhausted city populations of even the defeated Central powers.

While the peace conference was going on, the American Relief Administration, which Mr. Hoover headed, was feeding children in 23 different nations, and adults in half as many. It coped with typhus epidemics, and in many places almost took over government temporarily. Governmental credits, charitable donations, and utilization of surplus war supplies were all involved. As late as 1921, there was still some localized organization for feeding of children, and Mr. Hoover then a cabinet member was able swiftly to expand this remnant of the relief machinery when famine in Soviet Russia led to congressional appropriations to help a starving population there. This last of the enterprises which he operated for supplying food to famished people on a large scale did not wind up until 1923.

No part of the war activity had attracted more attention than the Hoover relief enterprise, in the United States and abroad, and when in 1920, the season for presidential politics opened, his name was early bruited about for the foremost political honor the nation can give. There was an embarrassing interlude, however, when it appeared that his long life in the engineering field and his later war work had deprived him, of any par-

Hoover---

Hoover political status whatever. Workers in his behalf had difficulty in settling upon a political party in which to join to forward his interests, and for a time he was proposed as both a republican and a democratic presidential nominee.

When President elect-Harding, some months later, offered him the post of Secretary of Commerce, he accepted after stipulating that he was to have a free hand in reorganization of his department.

In addition to operating his own department, Mr. Hoover served on the American debt commission and advised the White House on many important questions of policy.

Organization of campaigns to reduce waste in industrial operations, to prevent accidents in traffic, and the conserve fisheries were among minor activities he undertook. The commerce department, under his leadership, took an interest in a far wider area of government and industry than ever before.

Mrs. Hoover ably seconded her husband's temperament in organizing a simple mode of living. He had much wealth, though there was never advertisement of it. He occupied an expensive but modestly furnished Washington house, in the same block with the residence of the late President Wilson.

Memberships In Auto Club for This Year Being Taken

H. M. Garnett of Amarillo, connected with the American Automobile Association through the Panhandle Auto Club, a part of that organization, is here this week taking the annual memberships of local men.

Last year there were 70 local members. The Thut-Saunders Motor company has been designated as the official garage for the year, and John Studer is the official attorney. In order to better the service locally, an information bureau has been opened at the Chamber of Commerce, where road maps and road bulletins will be available to tourists.

There are 1,046 Auto clubs in the American association. Membership is obtained on a $10 a year basis. Affiliation entitles the members to free emergency road service within a radius of 20 miles or according to service contracts—day or night, such as starting cold motors, changing tires, delivery of gasoline, towing out of mud, towing to town of wrecked cars, etc.; free legal advice on traffic rules and regulations, collisions, or anything pertaining to automobiles; free road information and maps, assistance in locating stolen cars; legislative protection; automobile travel policy; radiator emblem and identification card; and safety work.

within 30 days. No overdrafts are to be permitted, and the financial interests of the council are to be run on a "hard boiled" business basis, E. E. Voss, regional executive, stated.

Adobe Walls council now consists of eight troops and 180 Scouts, it was revealed at the meeting, and the objective for the fiscal year is 20 troops and 500 members.

E. D. Melver was employed by the council as Scout Executive for the fiscal year. Other officials elected were Scott Barcus, Pampa, scout commissioner; J. Sid O'Keefe, Panhandle, president; Jepp Todd, Canadian, first vice-president; C. W. Curtiss, Borger, second vice-president; M. M. Craig, Jr., Miami, third vice-president; T. E. Rose, Pampa, fourth vice-president; Bob McCoy, White Deer, treasurer; and M. K. Brown, Pampa, national council representative.

Other members of the board chosen as representatives at large were Roy M. Walker, Panhandle; George W. Briggs, Pampa; G. G. McBride, Borger; E. O. Sheets, Borger; Hugh Patton, Borger; T. E. Keeney, Miami; H. S. Wilbur, Canadian; Sam Allison, Canadian; J. W. Knorrp, Groom; Jim Miller, Borger; and Tom Brabham, Pampa. These members are to meet monthly at the various troop towns.

Jepp Todd, M. M. Craig, and T. E. Rose were appointed as a committee to choose a site for the summer camp. An application was made for a charter from the National council. If granted, the charter likely will be presented by the Washita Valley council, Voss stated.

sang Deep River (Negro). Beware of the Hawk (Indian), Chinita (Spanish), and Anna Laurie, and graciously added a number of spirituals, including Golden Slippers, Go Down Moses, Swing Low Sweet Chariot, and Heab'n.

Besides accompanying Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Crudgington presented well played piano selections. A popular local addition to the program was a whistling solo by Miss Lula Hutchins, one of the most difficult she has given here. She was accompanied by Mrs. Tom W. Brabham.

The concert was sponsored by the Women's Study club for the benefit of the Pampa library which recently was launched.

Republican---

message of withdrawal, read to the convention in place of the speech that was to have placed him in nomination. Lowden said that in his opinion the plank adopted did not contain the guarantees agriculture must have to save it from ruin and was so disappointing that he would not care to be a candidate on the platform as it stands.

Lowden Gets Votes. Lowden's elimination was followed by the accession of many of his delegates to the Hoover standard, although 74 of the 250 or so that had been credited to him stuck to the captainship ship and voted for Lowden despite his withdrawal. Out of the total of 1,084 votes cast, Hoover had in the end 837 with only 542 needed to be nominated. Most of the rest were scattered among Curtis, Watson and Norris with none of the having enough to match Lowden's 74.

Despite further personal word from President Coolidge that he did not want his name before the convention he was nominated formally by Representative Ralph Cole of Ohio and 17 votes were cast for him—13 from Illinois and four from Ohio.

The nomination was voted by a convention which had undergone a great change since its drab and uninteresting opening last Tuesday. The Hoover people came to the night session manifestly determined to make a jubilee of it while the remnants of the opposing coalition, realizing the battle was all over, were plainly disposed to keep a stiff upper lip and see it through.

SMALL HOUSE BURNS

A fire originating about a stove pipe swept a small house on South Frost street early today, destroying the furnishings and badly charring the walls before the fire department could string the hose.

There was some delay at the station when the drive chain on the big truck slipped off. The owner of the damaged house is a non-resident, and his tenants lost most of their belongings.
