CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—(P)—Five robbers held up two bank messengers in a taxicab today, robbing them of $19,000 in cash and negotiable papers, as the messengers were transferring the money from the Service State bank.

Armed with pistols and rifles, the five robbers riding in a blue sedan drove alongside the taxicab and crowded it to the curb. Covering the messengers and the cab driver, the robbers grabbed up the satchel containing the money and sped away.

The messengers were taking the money to the Union Trust company.

Greater Rockford S. O. S. Reported by Radio Amateur

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—(P)—Hours have lengthened into days without word from Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, trail blazers of the Arctic airways.

It is certain that their monoplane, the Greater Rockford, had been down since Sunday, for its fuel supply would long since have been exhausted. That it succeeded in reaching some lonely landing place on the Greenland coast was the buoying hope for those anxiously awaiting word; that it had dropped into the sea somewhere off Cape Chidley, Labrador, was the ever growing fear.

Donald McMillan, Arctic explorer now at Nain, Labrador, wirelessed the Associated Press last night that if the plane is down in open water "there is no possibility of the flyers getting ashore."

The McMillan message was sent from the field radio station WNP of the Rawson-Field museum expedition and received by station 9 AFA, operated by Ralph Brooks, amateur operator at Calumet Harbor, Ind.

McMillan corroborated what had previously reported by Dr. W. H. Hobbs from Mt. Evans, Greenland: that weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable for flying for the past few days. Dr. Hobbs, heading the University of Michigan expedition now at Mt. Evans, had cooperated in making arrangements for the Greater Rockford's landing on the mile flight from Cochrane, Ont., which was started at noon Saturday.

Although several amateur wireless operators reported hearing the Greater Rockford's signals at 4 a. m., Central Standard time Sunday morning, only one, F. L. Hall at Stamford, Conn., told of hearing anything besides the plane's call letters and the letter "R," which indicated its position as 75 miles off Cape Chidley. Hall said the letter "R," which was a pre-arranged code signal, was followed by six repeated S O S calls. The distress signals, Hall felt sure, were from the plane. Hall said that a message was sent after the call, but that interference prevented his getting it.

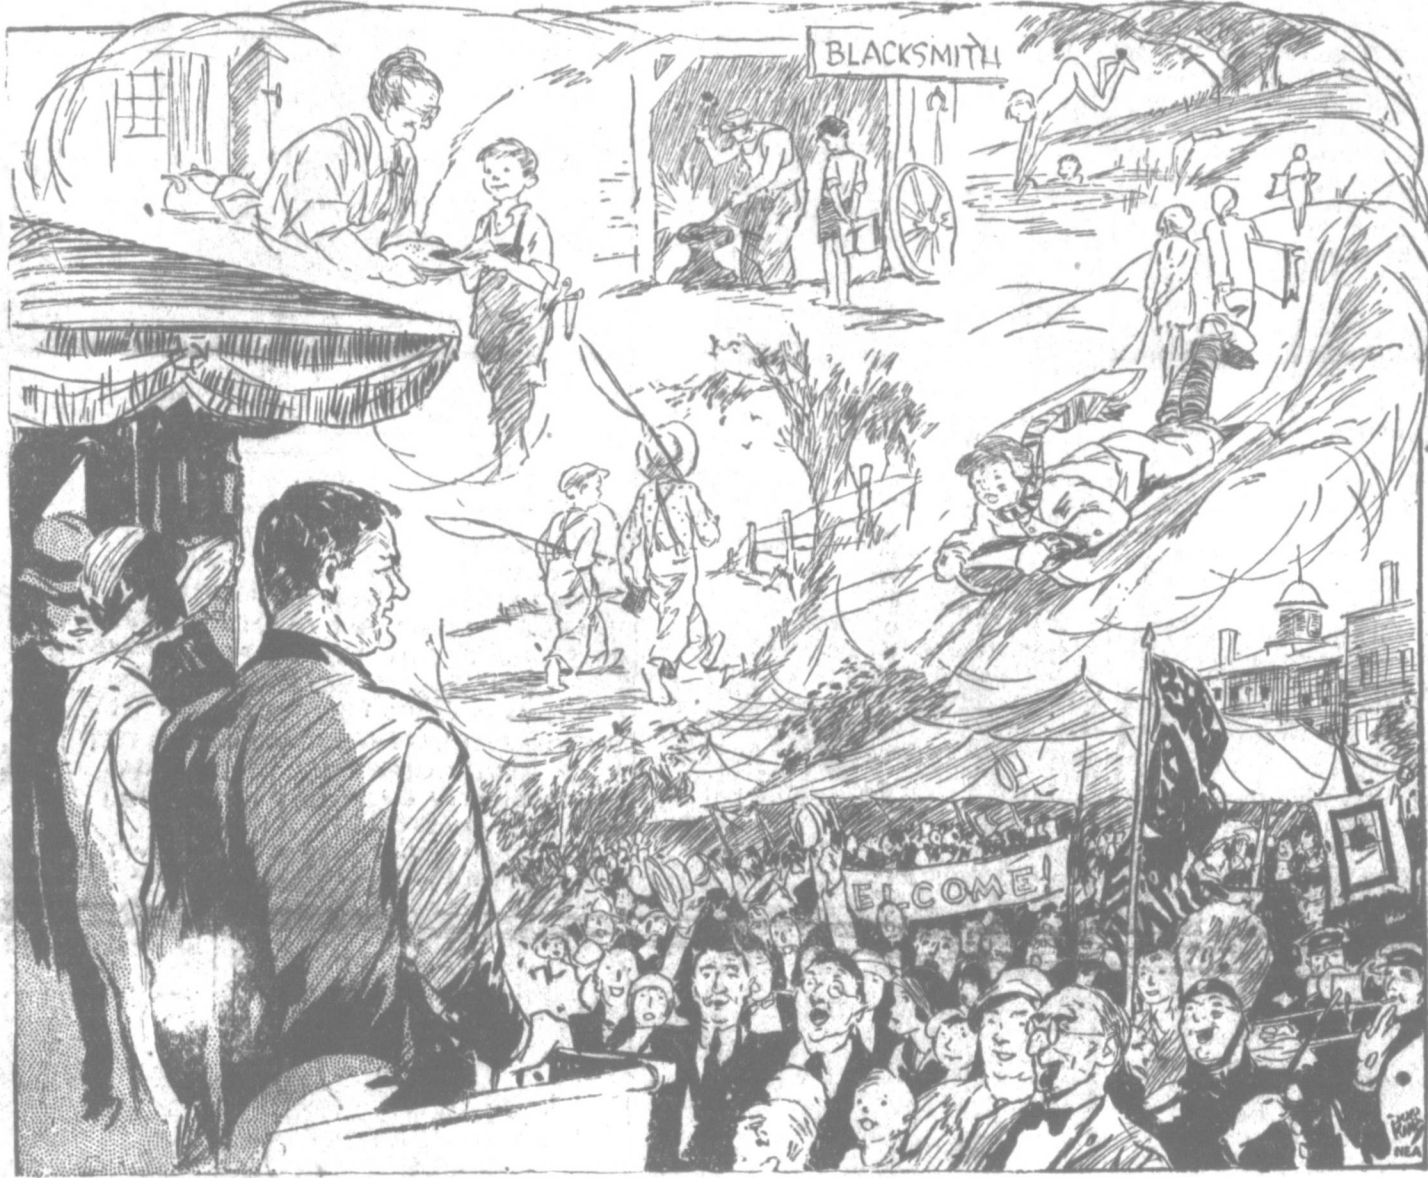

Canadian government planes and the United States coast guard cutter Marston had started a search for the airplane today.

The Danish government also had been asked by the Washington government and by the Rockford, Ill., Chamber of Commerce sponsoring the Hassell flight to lend its assistance in the search.

MOMENTS HERBERT HOOVER WOULD LIKE TO LIVE OVER

The home-coming of Herbert Hoover at the little village of West Branch, Ia., has inspired Joe King, staff artist for this paper and NEA Service, to draw the above sketch on "Moments That Herbert Hoover Would Like To Live Over Again," with apologies to J. R. Williams, the artist who draws moments that lots of us would like to live over again in "Out Our Way."

King has pictured here some of the moments in Hoover's boyhood at West Branch that Hoover tells about, himself.

Hoover, after 40 years, still remembers Aunt Millie's famous apple pies, for Aunt Millie was a real cook. "I am able to say now," Hoover says, "that if all the cooks of Iowa were up to Aunt Millie's standard then the gourmets of the world should leave Paris for Iowa, at least for Cedar County."

And the blacksmith shop of Hoover's father? "I have the brand of Iowa still upon me," says Hoover, "for one of my earliest recollections is stepping barefooted on a red hot chip at my father's blacksmith shop, The scare of which I still carry."

And the old swimmin' ole down by the railway tracks? "It's still operating efficiency," says Hoover, "albeit modern mothers probably would compel their youngsters to take a bath to get rid of the clean and healthy mud."

And Cook's Hill, where the boys coasted on their sleds in winter? "We slid down at terrific speed with our tummies tight to the home-made sleds," says Hoover. "It's still a good hill and the old method of thawing out frozen toes with ice water needs no improvement."

—And—oh, yes!—the fishing! "Our compelling lure was a segment of an angle worm and our incantation was to spit of the bait. We lived in a time when the fish used to bite instead of strike—and we knew we had a bite when the cork bobbed. "Moreover, we ate the fish."

These are some of the boyhood memories that fill Hoover's visions as he returns to West Branch—and why not? He has received the great honor of being nominated for the presidency, but we'll bet he would trade it for those boyhood days at West Branch—if he could!

Oil Production Hikes as Sooner Fields Increase

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 21.—(P)—With Oklahoma and West Texas fields showing the way, estimated daily average production of crude oil in the United States increased 66,479 barrels during the week ending August 18 and the Oil and Gas Journal will say in its current issue.

Increased activities are beginning to make the Seminole area look like the sensational fields of old. Seminole daily production increased more than 46,000 barrels. The St. Louis-Pearson area had an increase of approximately 13,000 barrels, but Allen production remained practically steady. Production in other Oklahoma areas was practically unchanged.

West Texas production gained about 16,000 barrels, with production in every section of that area reported on the increase. The total daily average for the past week was 351,995 barrels as against 325,750 barrels for the preceding week.

Methodist Pastor at San Antonio Is Killed by Truck

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 21.—(P)—The Rev. Joseph F. Webb, 57, pastor of the Prospect Hill Methodist church, was almost instantly killed Tuesday when struck by a truck as he alighted from behind a street car here.

FINLEY TO RETURN SOON

B. E. Finley, in a letter to The News, expresses his appreciation of the paper and says he reads every issue with great interest. Mr. Finley, who is president of the First National bank, is in Manitou, Colo., for his health, but expects to return to Pampa before Sept. 1. He is very enthusiastic about Manitou as a health resort, finding his health has improved much during his stay there.

AUSTIN, Aug. 21.—(P)—State Commander Walton D. Hood of the American Legion declared here today that names of Texas negro world war soldiers executed in connection with the Houston camp race riot will not go on the state memorial tablet to be erected here in commemoration of Texas' dead in the war, if he has anything to do with it.

The names were included in a list of about 5,000 Texans furnished the memorial tablet committee, of which Hood is a member, by the adjutant general's department.

The committee, headed by Governor Moody, met today to consider the letting of a contract for the tablet, for which the 40th legislature appropriated $5,000.

Adjutant general R. L. Robertson told Hood that names of the Texas negroes executed are marked on the list, which includes all persons losing their lives in any manner during war service.

The tablet will be erected at Texas university memorial stadium.

Hard Formation Is Encountered in Prairie's A. Thut

The Prairie Oil and Gas company's No. 1 Thut in the southwest corner of the Thut pre-emption survey, is drilling ahead in a hard formation at 2,685 feet with a show of oil a few feet higher. The well, although a north offset, is not logging with the LeFors Petroleum company's gusher, which picked up first pay at 2,675 feet and was completed for 2,500 barrels at 2,680 feet.

The hard formation through which the Prairie company is drilling was not encountered in the LeFors test. The well logged with the LeFors company producer until the deep lime was encountered, however.

The Roxana Petroleum company's No. 1 Shaw in the southwest corner of section 5, block 1, is setting 10-inch casing at 1,800 feet and preparing to drill ahead.

The Roxana Petroleum company's No. 1 Lester will be in the southwest corner of the southwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 1, block 1 A. C. H. and B. survey. The rig is being built and the well will be spudded in immediately.

The Shamrock Oil company has made a location for its No. 1 Dial in the north west corner of section 49, block 25, H. and G. N. Survey. This is the first location in that section and is a half mile east of production.

Cooks, Waiters Union Refuses to Accept Wage Cut

With two exceptions, the larger restaurants of the city have announced reduced wage scales for cooks and waiters, and some have suspended service pending employment of new help.

The local cooks' and waiters' union refused to accept the new scale, and in a meeting of the grievance committee and restaurant owners yesterday afternoon no agreement was reached. Gibson's and the B. & C. cafe have contracts under the old scale, which is $30 per week for waiters, $22.50 for waitresses, and $42.50 to $50 for cooks, with board. The scale proposed by a majority of the restaurants, including Ham's, Rainbow, Bonney's and H. & H. is: Waiters $25, waitresses $18, and cooks a reduction of $8 per week, with board.

The local union spokesmen declared the proposed cut too drastic and that it brought salaries "below a living wage." Tip Turner is president of the local, and O. P. Erwin is secretary.

Restaurant owners announcing the cut asserted that the old scale was made during boom days and that a readjustment is in keeping with scales in nearby cities.

Amarillo Man May Number Residences

M. D. Michael of Amarillo is negotiating with the city to furnish street signs, and place them, and number the residences and business houses of the city. The matter will be discussed at the first meeting of the city commission upon the return of two commissioners, who are away on business.

Mr. Michael was brought here by the Chamber of Commerce, which is working to obtain free mail delivery which cannot be accomplished until the houses are numbered.

SOMERVILLE PAVING COMPLETED

Paving operations were completed on the north four blocks of North Somerville street this morning and work will commence on West Francis avenue this afternoon, according to officials of the Stuckey Construction company. North Somerville street was paved with 5-inch vibrolithic as far as Francis avenue. The rest of the street will be paved with 6-inch materials.

Because of the heavy traffic, Francis avenue also will be paved with the 6-inch.

Persons Injured

McCRACKEN, Kas., Aug. 21.—(P)—Three trainmen are dead and eight other persons injured, two seriously, as the result of a head-on collision of "The Westerner", Missouri Pacific passenger train, near here last night. The injured included five passengers.

The dead:

P. H. Young, Hoisington passenger engineer.

Bert Klina, Hoisington, freight brakeman.

F. E. Peughn Hoisington, freight engineer, suffered a broken right leg, internal injuries and cuts. Mayer Vandergrif, Denver, who was riding on the coal car of the freight, was injured internally.

The wreck was caused, it was reported by a misunderstanding of train orders. The passenger train was reported to have been ordered on the side here, but passed McCracken on the main line ahead of its schedule.

Herbert Hoover Is Back in Town Of His Boyhood

WEST BRANCH, Iowa, Aug. 21.—Herbert Hoover arrived at the village of his birth at 7:25 a. m., today to deliver a second prepared address of his campaign.

For a day he will turn aside from things political to mingle with the folks who were his boyhood chums; to visit anew the scenes of his barefoot days; the house where he was born, and other familiar spots in the village his forebearers founded back in the fifties.

But as evening shadows lengthen he again will be to all alike the presidential candidate, sending a second message to the nation over the radio, a message dedicated primarily to the farmers of the Corn Belt.

Visit of Hoover to the place he quit two score and four years ago is the occasion for a family reunion, with Mrs. Hoover and the two sons, Herbert, Jr., who came out from the East to join his parents at Dodge City, Kansas, yesterday, and Allan, gathering together around the breakfast table in the modest house where the Republican nominee was born.

This house is now owned by Mrs. host for the morning meal. At luncheon Jennie Scellars, who will be their host for the morning meal at luncheon. The Hoovers will be the guests of Mrs. O. O. Yoder, second cousin of the nominee, while they will have dinner and spend the night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Branson. Mrs. Branson also is a second cousin of Hoover.

After breakfast, the commerce secretary will visit the graves of his mother and father, Jesse and Hulda Hoover, in the West Branch cemetery on a hilltop not far distant from where tonight he will speak to the thousands who have overrun the little town in anticipation of his arrival.

Music Teachers Arrive for Work

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Fannell, who will be in charge of musical activities of Central high school and the extension branch of the Amarillo Business college, have arrived here to begin planning their fall program.

Both are experienced and capable musicians. Mr. Fannell is a tenor of note and in addition to teaching voice will have charge of band and orchestra. Mrs. Fannell teaching piano and organ. Miss Lora Harrell, who will teach violin, is expected to arrive soon.

Gibson Employee Is Badly Injured At No. 1 Bowers

Joe Megason, 27 years old, is lying in the Pampa hospital in a critical condition suffering from severe head injuries received while at work yesterday morning.

The injured man, an employe of the Gibson Oil company, had completed greasing a belt on the company's No. 1 Bowers, now making about 150 barrels a day, when he fell into the belt and was crushed about the head.

He was immediately rushed to the hospital, where it was thought his injuries were fatal, but late reports today are that he is somewhat improved. He is a married man and has been residing at Bowers City.

Word was sent to his parents in DeKalb, Texas, and they are on their way here.

Paying Them Off

New Orleans has had and is having quite a shake-up in the police department. Charges of official protection for "joints" of all kinds appear to have been substantiated.

Protection is being engrafted upon the law enforcement machinery of the nation as a definite and very common practice. Thousands of men are not in office for the salaries legally provided, but for the pay-off they obtain from month to month by reason of overlooking certain violations.

Many men of good character, as the world commonly defines it, receive their regular blood money that is the price for official negligence. It is not a difficult thing to hoodwink the public by staging occasional raids, some of which are "fram+d" for the purpose.

Out of the great good that prohibition has wrought has come the enrichment of officers who play the bribery game and the enrichment of gangsters who formerly depended upon petty thievery and occasional big "jobs." Crime is serious in any form, but when plying a trade which gives wealth to interest higher types of crooks it is a real menace to government.

Wealth has made criminals more bold and has given them funds with which to buy the best weapons that science affords. Lawyers are paid big sums to defend members of the gangs when caught. And the powerful crime rings of the bigger cities find their strength awesome to the business men of the foreign districts.

Violence which reaches into the high places, making the presiding judges fear for their lives or those of their families, must be rooted out of American government. Its use has gone surprisingly far already.

Service and Pay

Newspaper men are not human, to answer a recent query. For instance, they work over time day in and day out, boosting those who appreciate it and those who do not.

But newspaper men will continue to pile up services for those who do not pay for them, and enjoy the plaudits of those who seem to be blessed with the ability to appreciate. In no other profession do extra services bring such small remuneration from the persons served. Is it a murder on the coldest, meanest day in winter? Then let the newspaper men brave the storm that they may sell the big story for the same price as an AP dispatch from Timbuctoo.

But the remuneration is in thrills, the satisfaction of giving the public its news, and the little delights which only a journalist knows as he takes the paper, damp with ink used in his story, from the roaring press. The teacher talks of service, but delivers no more than the newspaper man.

The modern journalist is more independent about some things than his predecessor. He has the courage to keep his hands clean when others sling mud. He finds the sweet with the bitter. He does less of other people's dirty work.

This tirade is inspired by the Higgins News. We don't know of a more community serving couple of newspaper folks than Mr. and Mrs. Shaw—"L. D." and "Mollie." Editorial "we" is accurate in the Higgins News. Says this week's issue:

"We honestly believe that Higgins has more cars to the square inch, according to its size and population, than any town in the State. That is saying something. But when the cars get strung out and go chugging along on Main street kicking up all the dust in creation, it would seem as if the cars were like the sands of the sea. If cars are an indication of prosperity, then this part of the country is exceedingly prosperous. Come to Higgins and watch the procession milling around and dodging the bumps."

That's the small town for you. And the small town editor.

WASHINGTON—Despite all the bolts from the two party tickets reported from day to day, the party organizations seem to be standing the strain.

One has yet to observe any political office holder turning down the choice of the party which gave him his job. Most of those who have deserted Smith are ex-senators, ex-governors, ex-bosses.

On the Republican side one observes that even the ex-boys are sticking to Mr. Hoover with loyal unanimity. The Republicans always did have a superior ability to close ranks with healed wounds a fter every internal fuss. Thus, one has to look outside the ranks of politics to find the Republican bolters.

If the farmers happen to prove sorer on the administration than they are currently supposed to be, the leaps of men like George Peek a n d Frank Murphy into the Smith camp may prove to have given impetus to a trend in some farm states toward the Democrats.

The fact that John J. Raskob and Pierre du Pont are now working Democrats indicates Big Business isn't afraid of Smith. It has been pretty solidly Republican for many years and has no reason to desert the party now.

On the other hand, the recruiting of a few important business men under the Smith banner has chilled some of the progressive leaders, who begin to feel that one party is as reactionary as the other.

The outstanding progressive to date who has thrown Smith over for Hoover is ex-Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma. It is not supposed that his influence will be felt, as he has long been out of Oklahoma politics. Smith, with his uncanny faculty for spearing his noisiest enemies, rather dulled the edge of Owen's slash at Tammany when Owen virtually admitted that he had sought Tammany support for his presidential candidacy in 1924.

Probably the most important Democratic bolt was not a bolt at all, but the resignation of Senator Furnifold Lendell Simmons of North Carolina from the Democratic National Committee. Simmons has run the politics of his state for 30 years and Smith's nomination, in the face of his hatred of Tammany, was a severe blow, aided as it was by insurgents in his own state. But although his machine at home has been reported as in something of a panic, it is pretty certain to fight tooth and nail for the ticket in order to save its state control.

There is nothing on the Republican side to match the Simmons case. Men like Senator Hiram Johnson, Charlie Curtis and Jim Watson have roared their curses at Hoover in the past. But look at them now!

Nearly a billion and a half is being spent on the roads of the United States this year, but we haven't noticed any fund for the prosecution of the fellows who take their highways at 10 miles the hour, and straight down the middle.

We're not skeptics, but we're beginning to doubt just a little if there's any great load of news in the usual Monday story headed "Coolidge Spends Quiet Sunday."

A headline says, "Radio Voice Lures Wife Away From Home." Gentleman, this thing is getting to be a terrible peril.

TWINKLES

You're right; we didn't think it of the Grays either. It is our guess that they will snap out of it Wednesday, however.

Airplane accidents get a city's name in the news, and to look at it that way, Pampa will have to have a few planes to get that kind of publicity. Silence is often good publicity, however.

Handing down mama's dress to daughter doesn't mean that what it used to.

Water has been declared not subject to trespass. The family with a flying boat ought to feel rather cocky when the irate land owner stands on the bank and says "Get Out."

Al is getting the country told about prohibition. It's bound to be strong strategy, good or bad.

We are for public improvements because they improve the public. Every person is better off for having things of which to be proud.

CHURCHES

MANY ATTEND REVIVAL

The revival now in progress at the Church of Christ is going beyond expectations. The largest crowds ever attending this young church in our city are enthusiastically and eagerly taking in the sermons given by Evangelist Merritt. The song service which is engaged in by the entire congregation is being earnestly rendered.

Sunday morning there were five to come forward. Both Sunday school and church showed a good increase over the previous Sunday. Monday night the sermon was one of great interest. The subject was "A Spoiled Captain." He showed Naaman to be a man of attainment and wonderful achievement, a loving character and one of great worth. "But he was a leper." This was the speaker drew some very practical lessons for the people today. He showed that relationship with sin was very much like that of Naaman and his leprosy. The sermon was well spoken and well placed and the assembly appreciated it. Sunday night's subject was taken from the trial and condemnation of Christ. The exact words were "What Shall I do With Jesus Who Is Called the Christ?"

The speaker pointed out that when Christ is being preached to people who are accustomed to think in other lines than that approved of God, Christ always appears as a strange character and what is preached about him when it is the truth is "certain strange things." It is good when people seek after the meaning of these strange things.

The people demanded that Christ should be crucified. And this people in the same "common people" who once heard him gladly, care should be taken that men and women should not get when they hear the Christ that they will not soon be found to be against Him.

God demanded that He should be crucified. For how else could the scriptures be fulfilled? How else could the sinner be saved? He is the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Pilate was actuated by political motives and man who is in the clutches of such is apt to permit anything.

But the real demands were made upon the Christ because men and women are lost and this was God's way of redemption. Do you think it was the madness of the rulers then who caused him to be put to death? Not yet because their were vile hearts there who revealed in such cruelty. He died on the cross in order to save our condemned souls. In the words of Isaiah "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we were healed."

The multitudes were sure they wanted Him crucified. None of us would demand it. Pilate's wife suggested neutrality. Too many of us are trying that. It is a delusion. Pilate tried to come clear of the whole matter and indicated it by washing his hands before them all. They were willing to accept the guilt if guilt there was. God that people today are trying to get thus. But it was these sins you and I have committed that caused Him to be put to death and whether we want and the more guilty if we do not accept Jesus had said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me," the cleanser He offers in His blood.

"THEY SHALL REAP THE WHIRLWIND"

Life—and public opinion—had a way of treating Sybil Thorne badly. From the time she was 18 the newspapers of Boston devoted considerable first page space to pictures of her and recitals of her madcap adventures. She was beautiful, irrefragable and socially prominent. People like to read of Sybil Thorne.

When the war came it brought to Sybil a beautiful love for a soldier boy, John Lawrence. The same war took him away, and Sybil became disillusioned. "Modern youth" was just beginning to get itself talked about and young people had to be extremely rare to satisfy their critics.

Craig Newhall, Boston's most eligible bachelor, fell in love with her and to please her dying father, Sybil finally accepted him. . . not that Sybil didn't care for Craig but she still carried in her mind the sweet memory of her first girlish love for the boy who went to France.

When her father died, Sybil took a trip to Havana to quiet her mental misgivings about marrying Craig. On shipboard she met Richard Eustis—a tragedy that under soft skies at sea seemed to Sybil like a heart-consoling romance.

Under Eustis, Sybil made the mistake of her life. A heartbreaking soul-wrecking tragedy. A modern fulfillment of the Biblical allegory.

"They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind." "Whirlwind" is a powerful first novel, written especially for newspaper publication by Eleanor Early. It is a scintillating story of so-called "Modern youth," that, while not overlooking its faults doesn't pass over its virtues and handicaps.

"Whirlwind" begins Thursday, August 23, in The Pampa Daily News.

Rod will not consent himself to Lila, who gets tired of waiting and wanders off to sea with her. He repudiates her also loyalty to her husband and she finally tries to avoid old Lila. Both women try to find him in vain.

Bertie Lou secures a position, expecting Rod to get a divorce. Lila's cunning scheme to secure Marco's attentions although she refuses to marry him. She decides to buy her house that she and Rod had shared when they were first married.

When the house is furnished, she decides to sell it and is surprised when Rod answers her. Acting through her friend BESSIE, an agent, she arranges to let Rod live there as a tenant.

"Think so well until Bertie Lou finds that Lila has called on Rod here," Bertie Lou denounces Lila, who informs her that she is through with Rod forever; also that he had left her because of jealousy over Marco, after having seen them together that morning. This explains many things to Bertie Lou and she plans a little surprise party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLVII
"HERE'S a letter from your caretaker," Bessie told Bertie Lou when the latter came into her room. "It was downstairs. I guess you'd better open it."
A moment later Bertie Lou announced that Mr. Brown was quitting. "Well, I think it's a good thing," Bessie declared openly.
"Yes, it is," Bertie Lou admitted. "It makes it easier for me. I won't have to tell him to go."
Bessie brightened. "So you were getting on to yourself, were you?" she said.
Bertie Lou smiled. "I haven't been kidding myself, Bessie," she answered. "But before Mr. Brown leaves Moonfields you've got to help me prepare a surprise for him."
"I'd like to know who's going to help prepare a surprise for me," Bessie demurred. "Because someone will have to use influence or I'll never have the surprise of getting past Saint Peter at the gate. I'm as full of lies as a porcupine is of quills."
"Just a few more little ones," Bertie Lou pleaded, "a good cause."
"What cause?"
"Mine . . . and Mr. Brown's."
"I'm . . . Say, don't you ever give Mr. Palmer a chance to bat? That guy could hit a home run with me any day."

BERTIE LOU had no time to talk about Marco. "I want you to send Mr. Brown a telegram," she said excitedly. "No, wait a minute, we can telephone to one of the neighbors. Do you know the name of the people next door?"
"Sure, it's Neighbor," Bessie grinned. "No foolin'."
Bertie Lou jumped up and hurried out of the room. "I'll get the telephone book," she called back, "and we'll see if they have a phone."
Soon she was back with the directory and they looked for the name Neighbor under the listings for Moonfields. It was not there. Then they went down to the telephone— it was in the lower hall— and asked for the information operator. She gave them the number.
Bessie good-naturedly transmitted Bertie Lou's message to Rod, though she pretended to be distressed over doing it.
"Never mind," Bertie Lou consoled her. "This will be the last time, Bessie. And you've been a darling. I won't forget it."
"Not even when you're Mrs. Marco Palmer?" Bessie teased.
"You and Marco seem to have that all settled," Bertie Lou smiled.
"Persistence wins, they tell us at the store," Bessie retorted.
Bertie Lou looked at her like one who has suddenly come face to face with an undeniable fact of terrifying import. Would Marco finally break down her resistance? She had thought he never would bother with her again after the sudden leave she had taken of his party on Long Island. But, though he complained of it, it had made no difference in his determination to marry her.
However, why worry about that now, she asked herself. Before anything of the kind could happen she would have her hour with Rod. She wouldn't think of anything else!
"You won't fall down on this!" she asked Bessie doubtfully.
Bessie bridled. "I'm a perfect liar," she boasted.
"Yes, you've gone beautifully," Bertie Lou assured her. "But you aren't in sympathy with Mr. Brown. You might make him suspicious if you aren't careful."
"Don't worry, I'll tell him just what you said."
And she did.

THE next day Rod came, in answer to the telephone summons. He understood that the owner of the cottage had read his letter and wanted to see him in regard to his resignation from his job.
But the owner was away, and though he looked searchingly at Bessie as she told him this, he found nothing in her expression to arouse his suspicions about the business.
"That's odd," he said. "I always seem to just miss him. He's kind of an elusive bird, this Mr. Baker."
Bertie Lou, too, had assumed a name. For his benefit. She feared he would hear her own from her neighbors. She did not know them, but she surmised that they would inquire about the ownership of her cottage. Fortunately, the houses next to hers had been started later. She prevailed upon the development company to keep her name a secret and call her Mr. Baker. She took a chance on Rod hearing it from those who had leached it before she had any reason for concealing it.

Another circumstance in her favor was Rod's desire for solitude. He did not care to mingle with the fast growing population of Moonfields, so he missed hearing people say that, "it's Baker who owns that place with the lovely flower beds; I thought it was Dwyer, or something like that."
"He's a busy person," Bessie apologized, "and he's awfully sorry to inconvenience you. He left your railroad fare both ways."
Rod took it. He couldn't afford to be called out on a wild goose chase, not with just a few dollars left of the money he had borrowed from Tom Fraser.
"And he'll see you sure before you leave," she promised earnestly.
"But I'd like to go tomorrow," Rod replied. "I've found a position that requires overtime so I can't stay with Mr. Baker. And of course if I'm not there evenings there's no use my being there at all."
"The owner will fix everything up all right," Bessie proclaimed. "Go ahead and make your plans."
"But I don't like to leave the place unprotected," Rod insisted. "Are you sure Mr. Baker understands that I want to leave immediately?"
"Sure I'm sure. But we'd like to know that we can get in touch with you tonight. You will go right back to Moonfields, won't you?"
"Yes, I'll be on the job until tomorrow evening," Rod told her.
"Maybe," Bessie said to herself. Then, to Rod: "Mr. Baker may call up and I'll tell him you went out again, on the first train."

"MR. BAKER" did call up, from the neighborhood Neighbor's house, and what she heard sent her flying back to her own cottage to plunge into the preparations that had engaged her before she put in the call to Bessie.
She stopped in the kitchen door and sniffed. Spice cake! Rod's cake! If he came before it was out of the oven he ought to be reminded of happier days. But he couldn't, of course. He had just left Bessie. She smiled over Bessie's grumbling for having to spend her Saturday afternoon waiting for Rod, while Bertie Lou went out to Moonfields.
But Bertie Lou had done some waiting herself. It had been necessary to spend a long hour in the stores that fronted the station, taking her time over her purchases, before she saw Rod come swinging down the street in a hurry to catch his train to New York.
After that she had moved in a whirlwind of activity—except for the moment when she had stood in a clothes closet and pressed her face to the old suit that hung there. One suit! And Rod liked good clothes. Oh how she hated Lila!
She opened the oven door to look at her cake. It was flat as a pancake! There was only one explanation: In her excitement she had forgotten to put in the baking powder. Well, it had filled the house with a delicious odor anyhow. Maybe, if she hurried faster she could bake another one. But first she must finish in the living room.

It was too warm for the fire that Rod had pictured himself dining before, but they would have the refectory table. And on it she laid a great sheaf of roses.
Either flowers from Rod's gardens, filled the fireplace and every other possible space. It was too bad she couldn't have a merry blaze crackling away, but the smoke would have warned Rod that some queer things were happening. She did not want him to know anything about it until he opened the door.
Which door did he generally use? she considered. It was likely that he did not confine himself to the rear entrance . . . he was not a regular caretaker.
HE had been told to use the entrance house. And Bertie Lou could see that he had done so, although everything was neat and clean as a pin. A few old books, from a second-hand store, she supposed, were strewn about the living room. And Rod's pipe was there, on a brass smoking tray. The sight of that tray had given Bertie Lou a happy moment, until she remembered that it was of little intrinsic value. She had given it to him before they were married.
Rod had, apparently, sold or pawned most of his belongings. He might have left them some place, of course, but Bertie Lou doubted it. At least he had brought nothing of any particular value here with him.
Going through the house had been a keen delight. She had not been in it since Rod's occupancy, though she had been at Moonfields several times and had seen him, from hidden vantage points. It thrilled her now more than ever, because it had actually sheltered the man whose dream had inspired her to buy it. It seemed to have brought them closer together—to make their parting sweeter, though infinitely sadder.
Bertie Lou shook a tear out of her eyes. She would not spoil it, she told herself impatiently, by crying. That could come later, when there was nothing else to do. Just now she must think only of nothing everything she would do if nothing had happened to her happiness. She must be the busy, contented young wife, preparing a special dinner for her lover husband. To celebrate a wedding anniversary, perhaps.
And why not? They'd never had one. And in just a few more weeks it would be their second wedding day. Bertie Lou wished she had time to make a bride's cake. No, that would be too suggestive. It was a secret celebration, the anniversary part, anyhow. Rod wasn't to know anything about it. To him she would make it appear—well, just a dinner.
She went on with her work, her pleasant tasks, growing more and more excited and trying harder and harder to be calm, until she heard a key in the front door lock.
She felt her heart flutter and turn over.

Police Shake-Up in Chicago Looms as Evidence Is Found

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner today said the special grand jury investigating election frauds was reported to have "definite evidence" that police captains and higher officials had received contributions of money from vice interests.

The special August grand jury convening today summoned several police captains to gain information regarding gambling resorts whose activities have continued.

The Examiner said it learned an investigation had uncovered evidence showing that vice resorts had paid sums ranging from $300 a week for police gambling wheels to $5,000 a week for more extensive establishments.

Orders for another shakeup of the city's police forces were issued last night by deputy commissioner John Stege, in charge of detectives. Five hundred members of 105 crime squads were reassigned, 11 men were removed from the detective bureau and three extra supervisory squads were created by his order.

C. V. Gott and daughters, Mrs. Thelma Ferrington and Winifred, returned yesterday, after spending a week with relatives in Oklahoma City.
