

SMALL VOTE IS PROBABLE FOR PRIMARY

Senate Race May Be Cause for Interest However

"BOLTERS" WILL SHUN POLLS

Love's Withdrawal Took Conflict Out of Situation

BY L. B. DILBECK
AUSTIN, Aug. 24.—(P)—If more than 500,000 votes are polled tomorrow in Texas' run-off primary it will be on account of the close race for the United States Senate.

The only other state races, in which the offices of land commissioner and state school superintendent are at stake, have failed to draw the widespread interest the senate race has.

Another factor tending to cut down the vote is the withdrawal of Thomas B. Love from the Lieutenant-Governor race against the incumbent, Harry Miller. Much of Love's following, comprising a large part of the Democrats' "bolters" their party nominee for president, Governor Alfred E. Smith, is expected to stay out of Saturday's primary.

United States Senator Earl B. Mayfield and his opponent, Congressman Tom Connally, will wind up their campaigns tonight with speeches at Fort Worth and Corsicana, respectively.

More than usual interest is added to their race by the question as to whether former Governor James E. Ferguson, supporting Mayfield, can swing his normal following behind the senator. Both candidates are claiming victory by 75,000 majority.

One congressional race, four for the state senate, and about 20 for places in the House of Representatives are to be decided in addition to dozens of county races.

State School Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs, running for re-election, predicted in a statement today that he would poll "a majority of more than 100,000" over his run-off opponent, W. F. Garner of Nacogdoches.

The race between Land Commissioner J. T. Robinson for re-election and Otis Terrell of Austin, offered no new developments today. Campaigns of both have been confined largely to personal work by themselves, and their active supporters, and use of the mails. Garner and Marrs also have made extensive letter campaigns.

Superintendent Marrs has just returned from a two-week campaign in North and East Texas.

California Trips Sponsored by West Texas Chamber

A delegation of Chamber of Commerce members from West Texas will leave Abilene noon Sept. 1, with B. M. Whitaker, agricultural manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, a letter received here yesterday by Secretary George Briggs stated. The trip will last fifteen days and will include a tour of California to study agricultural problems.

A special rate has been given and the trip will be made by bus. The round trip fare will cost $50, and allowing the same amount for expenses, a beneficial trip will be made at a small expense.

It has not yet been decided whether a representative from the Pampa Chamber will make the trip.

Dr. and Mrs. A. Cole and children returned last night from a vacation trip to New Mexico. They visited Carlsbad Cavern and Santa Fe, and spent several days with Mrs. Cole's brother in Gallup.

The Weather Vane

THE WEATHER: Tonight partly cloudy, cooler in southeast portion; Saturday generally fair.

The Vane: Shiver last night—So did we—read over the cup this morning 'bout boy being killed by "car walking down road"—Leaping Lena?—hard to keep baseball warmed up nowadays—wonder how Harvesters faring this fine grid weather—stockingless craze soon due for migration—great night to oversleep—we did—Old Sol failed us—this is good enough place to record another Channel swim—Miss Laddie Sharp London, did it today—ought to, with name like that.

Commander Byrds' Choice and His Parents

Lucky Boy Saves He will Play a Man's Part Fully

BY NEA SERVICE

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 24.—Paul A. Siple, Erie Boy Scout, is going to "the bottom of the world" with Commander Richard E. Byrd's South Pole expedition and faces two years in the desolate and frozen wastes of the Antarctic, with a band of hardy adventurers, but the least worried about it are his father and mother here.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Siple and confidence supreme is theirs. "My only instructions to my son will be to take with him the Boy Scout manual and an American flag, place them as far south as he possibly can and then come back to me and report," says the father.

"If the good Lord permitted Paul to be selected for this expedition, the good Lord will permit him to return to me," says his father. "I have the utmost confidence in Commander Byrd and I know that he will take care of my boy." And Paul's comment is, "I'm going to play a man's part."

Breaks News to Parents
Clyde Siple, the father, was working at his job in the shops of the General Electric Company here when Paul bounded in, excitedly, with the news that he had been selected from among the nation's Boy Scouts to accompany Commander Byrd's expedition.

"Dad," he almost shouted, "I'm going to the South Pole with Commander Byrd. They've chosen me to represent the Boy Scouts."

The elder Siple wiped his grimy hand with a rag and extended it to Paul. "Put her there, son," he said quickly.

And then Paul hurried home to break the news to his mother. Mrs. Siple looked at her tall, handsome son for a moment and then she flung both arms around him and kissed him, smiling happily through a flood of tears.

"Yes," said Mrs. Siple after the excitement had quieted and the neighbors began to come in and offer their congratulations to Paul. "I have the utmost confidence in Commander Byrd. Really our whole family feels like explorers. Night after night we have pored over the maps of the trip and read the books of Commander Byrd's previous polar expeditions until we feel as though we were all making the trip."

"Thrilled to Death"
Paul, himself, is thrilled over the prospects of the Antarctic trip—and what red-blooded American boy of 19 wouldn't be? He knows Commander Byrd personally because he and five other Boy Scouts met him when they went to New York recently to be personally examined as to their fitness for the trip. It was from the six representing Boy Scouts in all parts of the United States that the final selection was made.

Paul's troop is No. 24 of the Park Presbyterian church.

"He is the most conscientious and dependable Boy Scout I have ever worked with," says Harry E. Praver, Erie's chief Scout executive and the man who entered young Siple in the Byrd contest. "He is not only interested in making a fine record for himself, but in seeing that other Scouts do so, too. In all the Scout tests, he has made the highest possible grades. He has a great ambition to be a Scout Executive."

The tall, heavy set, good natured and unassuming boy has a magnetic personality and affableness that is expressed in The Spokesman, year book of Central High School, of 1928.

"Here is a fellow who is so good natured and fun loving that one can't help like him. We know that he will gather a wealth of friends wherever he may go, with his winning smile and kind ways. Every one of his associates feel him to be a trustworthy friend."

NOW TO VOTE

(EDITORIAL)

The enthusiasm aroused over the second primary will have been in vain unless a majority of voters go to the polls tomorrow. Be sure to vote.

Chief state interest centers in the senatorial race, where tried and true Earle B. Mayfield is pitted against Tom Connally, whose long tenure in Congress has been productive of little worthwhile. Mayfield, on the other hand, has been a most active senator, and his experience and influence should not be lost to Texas.

In addition to being of little influence, Connally has astonished child labor law breakers and club women by opposing their bills. Mayfield has the endorsement of labor because of his sympathetic and fair dealings. He has been aligned with leading Democratic senators on practically every big issue.

Dr. J. W. Hunt of McMurry college, Abilene, who will open a Methodist revival meeting here Sunday, is an outspoken Mayfield man.

Supt. S. M. N. Marrs and Land Commissioner J. T. Robinson lacked only a few votes of winning without run-off efforts, and will be returned to office by large majorities tomorrow. Both are solid, responsible men.

Everyone Invited to Attend Meeting on Roads Monday

Indications are that a large delegation from Panhandle towns and communities will attend the panhandle road meeting to be held at the Chamber of Commerce Monday afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock. In response to letters mailed to all towns in the Panhandle, replies have been numerous and interest is keen.

The meeting is a get-together of good road enthusiasts of this territory in an effort to get the Panhandle "out of the mud." The advisability of forming a Panhandle Highway association will be discussed.

Towns, counties, and the State are working at cross purposes and an association of this kind might tend to smooth out the difficulties now being encountered.

Everyone interested in this vital issue is invited to attend the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Bennett Resigns to Take Position With Tucumcari Chamber

B. Frank Bennett, for the last eight years assistant manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, with offices at Amarillo, announced his resignation from that organization yesterday morning. Mr. Bennett will move to Tucumcari to become secretary of the Chamber of Commerce there.

The office of assistant manager will be filled by J. E. Briggs of Groom, associated with the W. T. C. C. for the last two years as assistant to Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Bennett is well known here, having conducted several membership drives in the city and assisted in all Chamber of Commerce work when called.

"Wrecking Crew" to Take Charge of State Ceremony

The crack "wrecking crew" of the local vulture of 40 and 8 will leave tomorrow for Texarkana, where the mer will be in charge of the "wreck" at the American Legion convention, August 27 to 29. The local team under conductor R. E. Zogg was chosen as the official wrecking crew of the state.

The delegates of the 40 and 8 also will be delegated to represent Kerley-Crossman post at the convention. The convention will be held at the Arkansas post in joint meetings.

The Pampa members of the 40 and 8 to make the trip are: T. E. Darby, Chief de Gare of the local vulture, J. A. Pearsons, Sous Grande Chef de Train of the state organization, Dr. R. A. Webb, commander of the local post, R. E. Zogg, Conductor, O. P. McConnell, J. L. Casy, W. C. de Cordova, C. G. Otterbaugh, Frank Horner, Bester Sills, and L. B. Prohart.

Mrs. J. A. Pearson and Mrs. R. A. Webb will accompany their husbands to the convention.

MESSAGE FROM ROCKFORD CREW RECEIVED BY AMATEUR—ORIGIN IS NOT YET ENTIRELY CERTAIN

Down on Small Island Off Newfoundland, Men Tell of Safety—Oil Feed Failed—Food Is Low

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(P)—Eric Palmer, Jr., of Brooklyn, an amateur radio operator, reported this afternoon he had just been in communication with a station representing itself as that of the missing plane greater Rockford. The message he received confirmed the communication intercepted last night at Chicago.

The message as copied by Palmer read: "Hello, old man, we are on an island about 50 miles north of Newfoundland. Our food supply is getting low. Using wind generator for power for transmission. Talked last night with 9CDJ. Please send help. Rockford, KHAH."

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(P)—Out of the air early today there came a wireless SOS signed "The Rockford Flyers."

It said the Rockford-to-Sweden plane missing since early Sunday morning, was down on a small island off Newfoundland and the flyers, Bert Hassell and Payker Cramer, were safe.

Joy born of what apparently was first definite information of the plane's fate quickly faded, however, when wireless experts began casting serious doubts as to the message's authenticity.

It seemed certain a message purporting to come from the plane was actually broadcast, for two amateurs, one in Chicago, the other in Toledo, O., made independent reports of hearing it. On the other hand it appeared very improbable to experienced radio men that the message was sent from the plane's small set, "KHAH."

"Get word to the Associated Press and our families," said the first message received by R. J. Harris, Chicago amateur, "that we are down on a small island 50 miles off Newfoundland, and are safe."

Told the A. P.
Harris asked the sender who had signed as "The Rockford Flyers," to stand by for ten minutes while he communicated the message to the Associated Press. Harris then returned and reported receiving the following message:

"Our oil feed failed us and we landed on a small island. We are O. K. and safe, but food low. Using a generator for power for communication. Our position is on a small island about 50 miles off Newfoundland."

After receiving this, Harris said he asked the sender to give him a "schedule" for later in the evening; that is, he asked the sender to set a later hour during which communication might be resumed. In answer to this request this message was received:

"We are very tired and need sleep badly, so can't have a schedule tonight. Will call you tomorrow night 9 p. m., central Standard time, or 11 p. m., Eastern Standard Time. Please get word to our families. Best regards to all. (Signed) The Rockford Flyers."

Harris said when he first heard the signals they were "swinging" badly, a condition he compared with "fading" which is familiar to radio set operators listening to distant stations. Very soon, however, the signals became clear, and reception thereafter was simple, Harris said.

It was 12:15 a. m., Chicago daylight saving time, that Harris reported hearing the signals from "KHAH." Joseph E. Williams, a Toledo, O., radio amateur who said he also was in communication with the Greater Rockford, gave the time as 11:30 p. m., to 11:45 p. m., Eastern Standard time, or approximately half an hour earlier than the Chicago operator. The plane, if it was the plane, said it had been trying all evening to get in touch with someone. Williams said when he first heard it, it was calling 9CEJ, a call which might have been mistaken for Harris, 9CEJ.

Among the several amateurs and others who doubted that the message originated from the greater Rockford's set was W. H. Hoffmann, chief radio operator of the Burgess Battery company of Madison, Wis., which installed the set in the plane. Hoffmann said it would have been impossible for the greater Rockford's set to have transmitted on a wave length of 42.8 as both Harris and Williams reported.

Source Is Mystery

Don Mix, another operator of the Burgess company, pointed out, as did several persons in Rockford, Ill., home of the flyers, that neither Hassell nor Cramer was sufficiently skilled in wireless operation to have sent a lengthy message. That either could have transmitted in the expert manner which both Harris and Williams

San Angelo Man Will Drill Test on Section 183

C. E. Elzey of San Angelo, who has acquired a lease on the west half of section 183, block B-2, is building a rig for a test in the southwest of the southeast of the northwest of the lease. He plans to drill through the big gas and down 3,500 feet if necessary.

This semi-wildcat well is on a direct line between the Empire Daurer producer, bottomed about 3,200 feet, and Edwards et al's No. 1 Case, NE of NE of NE of section 182, drilling at 2,800 feet.

This will be Mr. Elzey's first operation in Gray county. He is now located in Amarillo, but will move to Pampa in the near future.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company's No. 1 Thut in the Thut pre-emption survey, is drilling ahead in a hard formation at 2,712 feet after picking up another show of oil and a small amount of gas a few feet higher. A crooked hole and a hard formation have hindered drilling and changed the well from logging with the LeFors Petroleum company's No. 1.

The well is drilling 32 feet below bottom pay in the LeFors well.

The Empire Gas and Fuel company's No. 1 Hexter in section 215, block B-2, is drilling ahead in a hard pink granite formation at 3,225 feet without encountering a show of oil. Several million feet of gas has been bradenhead off.

This important etst is about half mile east of the same company's No. 1 Daurer in section 236, block B-2, making about 50 barrels a day. First show in the Daurer test was encountered at 3,010 feet.

Clinic for Crippled Children Planned

Pampa Lions are making progress on their plan to have a clinic for crippled children here this fall. Mrs. M. P. Downs, community nurse for the Public Welfare association, is co-operating with the club.

Mrs. Downs spoke at the regular luncheon yesterday and described some of the opportunities for work among the crippled and underprivileged children. A major activities committee, composing W. A. Bratton, Roy McMillen, and George Briggs, is giving chief attention to crippled children's plans, and it has the co-operation of a similar committee in the Rotary club. It will likely be possible to bring Oklahoma's leading orthopedic physician here for the clinic.

The club went on record to ask Dewey Young, state representative for this district, to work for the establishment of a state hospital for crippled children.

Guests of the club yesterday included, besides Mrs. Downs, J. L. Chapman and P. L. Hill of McKinney, J. O. Gillham, Thos. A. Fannell, and R. B. Thompson of Pampa, and Judge Newton P. Willis of the 84th district court. Mr. Fannell, associated with the Amarillo College of Music, is here to open a local branch in connection with Central high school.

ROADSTER CATCHES FIRE

Very little damage was done to a Jordan roadster in the Biggs Horn used car lot this afternoon when a short circuit caused a small fire. The fire department answered the call and used a chemical to extinguish the blaze.

said was employed in the message they heard, would be virtually impossible. Mix insisted. It was because of the flyers' lack of radio knowledge. Mix said that a simple code, consisting of letters of the alphabet, was arranged in advance of the flight.

Contradicting the authenticity of the messages, too, were the apparently reliable reports yesterday from Copenhagen that a plane had been seen and heard over the village of Fiskeneast in Greenland. The information was sent by the sheriff there and he said that the inhabitants of the village, as well as of Leichtenfels observed the plane Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Search has been started along the Greenland shores for the flyers, who are believed by the sheriff to have landed somewhere nearby.

Fine Pipe Organ Is Being Installed In New Church

Representatives of the Southern Pipe Organ company of Dallas are this week installing a Wicks fourteen-stop, three-manual pipe organ in the auditorium of the new Methodist church. All pipes, numbering approximately one thousand, will be concealed in special sound-proof chambers. Cathedral chimes will be one feature of the instrument.

The entire organ is controlled by the famous Wicks direct electric action, which means that the organ proper is connected to the console by electric cables only, eliminating all wind connections. The substitution of the electric cable connection for the wind connections with the elimination of vibration and its consequent wear and tear on the instrument, is said to make the Wicks organ the favorite of the greatest organists of the day.

The console will be in the choir loft, immediately behind the pulpit, and the swell openings will be above and to the right and left. The openings will be covered with a grill work which harmonizes in design with the architecture of the auditorium.

The pipe organ is the largest and finest of its type in the state, according to H. A. Niver, who is in charge of the installation. It is $10,000 instrument. A week or ten days will be required for the installation, Mr. Niver said. He is assisted by H. B. Kelly of the Dallas office of the company.

Joe Strother, educational director of the Methodist church, will be organist. Mr. Strother has studied pipe organ with Miss Hammond, organist of the City Temple Presbyterian church of Dallas. He was formerly organist at the Southern Methodist university chapel, Dallas, and for a time was organist at North Texas State Teachers college at Denton. He is a gifted pianist, whose musical ability is well known in Pampa.

STOCKINGLESS FASHION GOES INTO COURTS OF TWO STATES

District Schools to Open Sept. 6

All schools of Pampa Independent School district will open on Thursday, September 6, with registration starting at 8:30 o'clock at all the buildings. Thursday and Friday will be given over to registration and classification of pupils, distribution of books, and assignment of lessons for Monday. Superintendent R. C. Campbell said, Regular class work will start Monday morning.

All teachers will be in their classrooms on registration days, after attending institute at Canyon September 3, 4, and 5. Preliminary work of the registration and classification on Thursday and Friday will eliminate much confusion from the first week of regular school work and save time for teachers and pupils, it is thought.

Pampa Independent School District comprises the city of Pampa, Kingsmill, and Hoover.

Shetland Pony to Be Given Away

The Gordon Stores Company is to give away a pony, saddle, blanket, and bridle in the near future. The pony, a shetland named Betty, will appear on the stage at the Rex Theatre Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Free tickets are being given to the kiddies at the Gordon Stores company on North Cuyler street.

Betty is two years old and a real pet that some kiddies will receive.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Turner and son of Eunice, N. M., are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Munday.

Mrs. Esther Smith made a business trip to Amarillo Wednesday.

STOCKINGLESS FASHION GOES INTO COURTS OF TWO STATES

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—(P)—A showdown on the propriety of girl students coming to class stockingless was in prospect at Lowell high school here today as scores of girl students temporarily expelled yesterday were to return to school.

The girls were sent home by Miss E. Lacoste, vice-principal, who instructed them to return "properly dressed." Several of the girls reported they had protested to the teacher citing a ruling by U. S. Webb, state attorney general, that cleanliness was the only requirement of the state in regard to the clothes of public school students.

The state department of public instruction recently decided to take no action against the stockingless fashion.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 24.—(P)—The question of propriety of the stockless had reached the courts here today.

Mrs. Jonne Wallace filed suit in Oklahoma county district court against a dancing school company and its manager, Thomas A. Hoover, for $5,000.70, charging she was humiliated to that extent when employees of the company barred her from the dancing school because she wore no stockings.

"It is the custom and practice to abandon the wearing of hose and the same is not against the correct rules of society," Mrs. Wallace's petition said.

The 70 cents was claimed as a refund for the price of the ticket Mrs. Wallace said she bought to enter the ball room.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Williams went to Amarillo today to spend several days with friends. Mrs. Williams will go from there to Aste, N. M. for a visit with her mother.

Mrs. P. D. Eller and children of San Angelo are guests of Mrs. Eller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ward.

The reason I have been unable to see any of you the last week is that I was empaneled on the jury and could not get released. But I want to say that I earnestly solicit your support in tomorrow's election, and pledge myself, if elected, to a policy of promptness and efficiency in handling the county's affairs—and if I can't get things done, no alibis, step down and let a better man have the job.

It has been suggested that we need a commissioner experienced in building hardsurfaced roads and court houses. I HAVE HAD EXACTLY AS MUCH EXPERIENCE IN BUILDING HARD-SURFACED ROADS AND COURT HOUSES AS MY OPPONENT. "Use judgment in selecting your commissioner"—Choose a man who will find a way or make one. If elected I propose to get action.

Let's Vote For Progress in Gray County!

WHIRLWIND

COPYRIGHT 1928 BY NEA SERVICE INC. BY ELEANOR EARLY

THE roads about Devens and into Ayer were dusty, and not conducive to romance, but beyond the camp an orchard stretched where leafy apple trees made welcome shadows. A little away from the rest stood a gnarled old tree with twisted limbs and a crotch where two could sit and love. Beneath its shade the lovers clung.

"Darling, darling. . . . When he kissed her, he felt her tears on his lips—salty, tangy—bittersweet. "Darling! DARLING!" He said it over and over.

"How did you, Sybil?" "Eighteen," she told him.

"So young," he whispered. "So little, and so young."

"Old enough." Her lips against his ear were saying.

"No, no, I can't." He held her from him. "I might come back all shot up. I mightn't come back at all."

"Then," she told him bravely, "I'd never forgive myself if I'd let you go like this."

"Angel!" He was kissing her hair.

"Sybil—SYBIL!"

"Oh, John, I love you so."

Before she went they had planned to be married that week.

Sybil drove home with her head in a whirl and her heart full of warm gladness. John would get a furlough. Perhaps the family would let them have the place at Wannan for a few days. That would be lots more fun than a hotel or traveling. And she would get breakfast mornings—popovers and muffins, and puffy omelets, golden brown. There would be wonderful days on the beach. And nights, gloriously long. The world swam in the moonlight, and lie on the sands afterward.

Sybil had a private conviction that a week of love in June was worth a whole month of it in the winter-time. She hugged herself inwardly with little anticipatory shivers. But presently her ecstasy was shadowed by grim forebodings and the fears of a woman for her beloved who lies in danger.

"But I will be brave," she vowed. "And I will make him very happy. Then, if he should have to go, I will send him with a smile."

Poor Sybil, playing with dreams. That night John Lawrence's regiment entrained for Hoboken and sailed the next midnight.

HE LEFT a note for her with a boy at camp. A heart-broken little note, scribbled with a stubby pencil on a sheet of Y. M. C. A. paper: ". . . Goodby, little girl, goodby. Oh, I love you so, my precious wife-to-be. . . I love you, I love you. . . ."

She carried it for months down the front of her dress next her heart. Girls that summer were wearing V-neck blouses cut so low that she could look down and see the folded edge peeping up from the ribbons of her little satin camisole. Whenever she was alone she read it again and again. By Christmas, with kisses and with tears, it was worn so thin it was falling apart. Then Sybil put it in the box where she kept her trinkets, under the pretty blue satin pad that lined the cover. And when she slipped it there, a crushing sense of finality came over her. As if that was the end. As if John Lawrence had perished with his last crumbling protestation, and she would never see him again.

And that night a cable came: "Missing in action."

They tried to busy her up. To sustain their own faltering hopes. "That doesn't mean he's dead, Sybil. Probably he's in a hospital somewhere. Oh, my dear, you mustn't take on like this! Don't give up hope. Everything may be all right."

But Sybil knew better. "He's dead!" she shrieked through her tears. "Dead, I tell you! I know. He came to me in a dream, all blood. So I know, you see, that he is dead."

AFTER the war life had been very gay for Sybil's crowd. John Lawrence was 10 months missing then. "Presumably dead," the record said.

Tad came home, romantically bronzed and "different" looking. Something about his eyes, and the gray streak that ran through his hair. He was very sweet to Sybil, and talked to her of "deathless glory" and "heritages." He gave her a bit of verse of Alfred Noyes that he had clipped from an English paper in Paris, and Sybil carried it in her purse until it crumbled to pieces. But all the time she knew it was a Grand Pretense. The world was full of noble words and fine phrases. People thought they meant them, but they didn't really.

They could tell her John died for humanity till they were black in their faces. She knew he didn't want to die for humanity, or glory,—or anything else. He wanted to live—for her. It wasn't fair. All the talk about "sacred trusts" and "making the world safe for democracy!" People couldn't really mean it, or they wouldn't forget so soon. Nothing seemed to make much difference, except having a good time. Everybody wanted a good time.

Even Tad. He looked so handsome in uniform, with his swagger English cap and his silver shoulder bars. Tad had come home a captain with a Croix de Guerre and two wound stripes. His mother was tremendously proud of him, and wanted him to go everywhere with her. She hated to have him get back to civies, but the second day home he went to his tailor for some new clothes.

"If you knew how I hate the sight of the damn things!" he said of his beautiful whipcord breeches and his gorgeous blouse.

Sybil wanted to wear mourning for John, but the family had dissuaded her.

"Since your engagement was never announced, dear," coaxed her mother, "I really think it would be rather poor taste. Nobody really knows, you see, that you were actually planning to be married."

"But I want them to!" cried Sybil. "I'm so proud of having been his sweetheart. I WANT everybody to know. And 'taste!' What do I care about 'taste!'"

"Can't you try to snap out of it, Sis?" begged Tad. "It isn't doing John any good, you know. He wouldn't want you to take on like this. And it's pretty tough on Mother. You're too darn smart to go dragging 'round like an old woman. It's a good old world, after all. And we're only young once."

He brought men to the house and urged her to make up parties.

THE Eighteenth Amendment had been passed and drinking was becoming lamentably smart. Flasks had come in, and a really daring present for a man to give a girl was an engraved Sacchetti for her bag. Girls had begun to smoke, too. Men were saying you never knew whether a girl would be insulted if you offered her a cigaret or offended if you didn't.

Soldiers everywhere had been mustered out of service and women were still feeling them. Doubtless walked where angels feared to tread, and gobs were household pets. It was eminently respectable for "nice" girls to scrape acquaintance with men in uniform. The marines had become social lions. Everywhere the cheerless maw was sitting pretty. Unless, of course, he happened to be incapacitated or looking for a job.

Club women were beginning to get excited and talk reforms. For a crime wave hit the country. . . . And even the girls were going crazy. They rolled their stockings, and checked their corsets when they went to dances. Eventually they discarded them altogether, but that was not until later.

Cosmetics sprang into favor, and women began to make up like Jezebels.

"The evils of the war" became a sort of slogan. People talked despairingly of "the youth of the land," and wondered what they were going to do about it. Important persons were interviewed on what they thought of the Modern Girl. Desiring to be broadminded, they enlarged her, not knowing what it was all about. And, meantime, she went from bad to worse.

Someone had coined the word Flapper. And the Flappers, little sisters to the War Brides, took to dressing exactly alike. They wore colored skirts of homespun, trayed about the bottom, instead of hemmed. Brilliant little sweaters that they called slip-ons: Flannel-soled shoes—everyone, until then, had worn high heels. And large hats with flat crowns clapped on the sides of their heads. They cut their hair and called it Castle Clips, for Irene Castle, who had lost her hair after a fever and wore what she had left short of necessity.

Brothers of the ex-service men began to grow up. They were, for the most part, a decadent lot, their deficiencies emphasized by contrast. They were called Parlor Snakes, Cake Eaters and Loung Lizards. At first they went in for skimpy, pinch-backed suits with high waists. They cultivated a carriage that rivaled the popular Debutante Slouch, and became Dancing Fools with long hair. When the Prince of Wales visited America they changed their sartorial effects and embraced baggy models.

Girls became independent. Married women who had found work "for the duration of the war" discovered that they liked it. Their incomes often doubled and sometimes tripled the family budgets. Younger girls went to work. Daughters of the "very best families" entered business colleges. Commercial schools became smart, and a working knowledge of shorthand ranked conversational French. Married women, in business and the professions, retained their maiden names. Miss Brown, when she became, legally speaking, Mrs. Smith, remained Miss Brown. Flax sold hands grew slimmer, and about the time the jewellers had succeeded in popularizing platinum, wedding rings were temporarily passe.

There was much discussion about Free Love.

TAD became involved in an "affair." The girl threatened suit, and Mrs. Thorne had a nervous breakdown. The "Young Thorne" became the talk of the town. Everyone knew about Sybil's indiscretions, but her parents. They knew, for instance, that Mrs. Van Dusen had threatened to sue her for alienation of philandering Van's affections.

Sybil had laughed when she heard it.

"They have to prove very specific things in a suit like that," she said,—and I may be an egg, but I'm not THAT kind of an egg."

People knew of Colonel Bixby's infatuation. But they knew, too, that Sybil, when he kissed her one night, slapped his face and told him to go home to his wife. The colonel told it himself, in his cups.

To be sure, Sybil was doing many manner of foolish things. One day she took out a marriage license with Bunny Faxton. The intentions were printed that evening in the papers, and when reporters called at Thorne's place on Beacon Hill for pictures and a story Sybil met them calmly.

"There's nothing to it," she announced. "The crowd was drinking and they dared me. I'm awfully sorry and ashamed. But, truly, it was only a bet."

Of course, the papers played it up. There were front page stories and headlines with Sybil's remarkable statement in red ink. Mrs. Thorne wept, and Mr. Thorne raved. Even Tad showed considerable concern.

"There are some things," he told his sister, "that decent people don't do the line at."

And for three days he treated her with cold disdain.

LOYALLY Tad defended her to their parents.

"She's all right," he said. "She's only acting crazy. Grief has turned her head a little, I think."

"Sorrow should make a woman sner," reminded his father sternly. "It's only fickle girls who take to cures such as Sybil has."

"People will start talking first thing we know," warned Mrs. Thorne, in her innocence.

Sybil was thoroughly miserable.

"I think," she told Tad, "that God really meant me to be a good girl. I've made such an awful bungle trying to be bad."

Girls of her old crowd had become the Younger Married Set. Tad and Sybil were drifting apart.

"It's a couple of eggs," she told him affably one day.

And stretching himself lazily, he retorted good naturedly:

"You are making a bit of a fool of yourself, old girl. Why don't you marry Craig Newhall?"

People that summer had come to regard young Newhall as Sybil's particular property. Most girls would have been delighted at the assumption, for Craig was probably the most eligible bachelor in Boston. Either because he was exceptionally clever, or because of his irreproachable social connections he had been admitted, following his graduation from Harvard, to membership in the finest legal firm in the city.

He was long and thin and brown like coffee with cream in it. And his eyes were amazingly blue. When he looked at her contemptuously, Sybil always thought of a bit of a jingle:

"Blue was the sky, blue as your eye
Which is the terrible reason why
It's easy to live, and hard to die."

Now she glanced curiously at Tad.

"Why, Taddy," she parried, "nobody'd want to marry me. I'm just a—"

Irresolutely she paused. How much, after all, was it wise for a girl to tell her brother?

(To Be Continued)

Sybil had come to accept Craig as a sort of lover, and Tad hears an amazing recital—in the next chapter.

King's Welcome Is Given Tunney by Admiring Irishmen

DUBLIN, Aug. 24.—(A)—Gene Tunney today was in the land of his ancestors and he was accorded a welcome greater than any king ever has received at the hands of the Irish.

Notwithstanding a downpour, thousands of persons waited on the streets to welcome and cheer the ex-champion boxer.

When the steamer from Holyhead arrived at Kingstown nobody was permitted to land until the reception committee, which included John McCormack, the tenor; Major Fitzmaurice, trans-Atlantic flyer, and General O'Duffy, chief of police, had gone aboard to wish the visitor "good night" and a hundred thousand welcomes.

Gene landed amidst the strains rendered by a band of pipers, and entered one of a fleet of decorated motorcars which were waiting to take him to the hotel.

Despite his expressed hope to be allowed to enter the city quietly, the people insisted upon their hero worship and Tunney's drive to was a triumphal procession with the greatest of excitement manifest everywhere.

Hardly had Gene entered the hotel when he received an invitation from President O'Grave to visit him at the government building.

Interviewed upon his arrival at the hotel, Gene said: "I never before have had such a welcome. Look at those thousands out there in the rain. All they can hope for from me is a conversation. They can't even hope for my autograph."

In a quiet moment at the end of the day the former boxer confided to friends that he would be "very glad" and he is able to get back to a retired place to escape public notice.

Abilene Needs But One Game to Win

SAN ANGELO, Aug. 24.—(A)—Both Manager Lee Tullos of Abilene and Pilot Red Snapp of San Angelo planned to send their best array of players into the third game of the West Tex. league playoff here today.

Abilene yesterday united the series by winning 14 to 3 by hammering two San Angelo, on the other hand, was of them home runs by Storti and Roberts.

San Angelo, on the other hand, was unable to solve the offerings of Roberts until the fourth inning, when Higginbotham singled and scored on a two-bagger by Cy Williams.

The game was marred by four errors, three committed by the home team and one by the visitors.

Either Hillin or Cromer is expected to be manager Tullos' selection for today's game, while Jubilo Clements, ace of the Concho's chunking corps who has not yet appeared in the series, is expected to be Manager Snapp's choice.

Abilene needs only to win one more contest to take the series, while San Angelo must take two straight.

Grays Must Win Saturday or "Go Home" Eliminated

Either the Amarillo All-Stars or the Pampa Grays "go home" from the Amarillo Baseball tournament tomorrow afternoon. To judge by the fighting mood of the Grays, they will be "in there" Sunday, battling for the big money.

The local boys stack up against the team that humbled them Monday afternoon 6 to 3 and will be out for revenge. Guber plans to start Gus Ketchum in the box and send his boys in to make scores so that he can pull the veteran and save him for Sunday's battle.

The veteran manager of the Grays will not be in the line-up because of injuries received in Wednesday's game when he strained his ankle sliding into second base. The accident happened the same as a similar one last season, which put Guber out of the tournament.

According to the brand of baseball played this far, it looks like Pampa and the Amarillo Metros, ancient rivals, for the play-off unless Erick upsets the dope.

The Pampa Grays will play the second game tomorrow afternoon, commencing about 4 o'clock.

Spudder Lead Is Helped-Cats and Exporters in Ramp

Fort Worth and Beaumont performed in a facial baseball showdown yesterday while other Texas league teams fought for standings and kept bats ringing a relatively soft accompaniment to the drumming crescendo of hitting by the Cats and the Exporters.

The Shippers and Panthers satiated themselves with bows, Fort Worth finally winning.

While Pitcher Ovingros rode Houston hard, his Wichita Falls teammates answered Wednesday's defeat by bashing out 16 hits for nine runs to the two got by the Buffs. The Spudder lead went back to five and a half games.

The farewell Dallas-Waco engagement of the season went to the Steers, 11 to 7. Another hitting bee was to blame.

Joe Brown donated 10 hits to San Antonio before his charity forced him from the mound and Shreveport lost 7 to 4.

Mrs. L. P. Miller of Sherman is visiting her daughter, Miss Louise Miller, in the Charles Thut home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wynne attended a cowboys' reunion at the T. Anchor ranch near Canyon, yesterday.

Lester Chafin of Wichita Falls arrived here yesterday for a visit of several days with his brother, Robert Chafin, and Mrs. Chafin.

M. D. Ogden and Frank Allday returned last night from Oklahoma City where they attended a radio exposition and school. They were there a week.

Mrs. D. A. Hunt and children and Mrs. H. E. Nicholson and children of Wheeler visited friends and shopped in this city yesterday.

Rules the West

Winning the women's western open golf championship is no novelty to Mrs. Harry Prestor of Los Angeles. She has done it before and probably will do it again before she stows away her sticks. She is pictured here with the trophy won at Chicago recently when she defeated Virginia Wilson of Chicago in the finals of the 1928 tournament.

Lone Star Teams Resting for Day in Little Series

PALESTINE, Aug. 24.—(A)—Texarkana and Palestine were resting today for the resumption of their battle in Texarkana tomorrow for the championship of the Lone Star League.

Texarkana here yesterday tied the series at one-all by winning, 5 to 3, a hard-fought contest not decided until the last man was out in the tenth inning.

The game was a pitchers battle between Bray for the Pals and Mopkins for the Twins, Bray having the better of the struggle until the tenth when Texarkana got men on second and third and Farley, the Twin's shortstop, hit a double down the third base line.

Features of the game were home runs by McClanahan of Palestine and Windham of Texarkana. Both hits were made in the fourth, one man being on base each time.

Texarkana made 10 hits and two errors to 11 hits and two errors for Palestine.

H. Clayman returned yesterday from a three-week visit with relatives in Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. William Lee of White Deer was in Pampa as a shopper yesterday.

Mrs. Grover Morris spent yesterday in Amarillo.

Cardinals Gain Lead When Giants Split Double Bill

BY HERBERT V. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer
Pirate met Giant in a double-header at Pittsburgh yesterday and the only beneficiaries were the St. Louis Cardinals.

While the Giants were breaking even in a dual bill with the Pirates, the Cardinals, without going near a ball park, returned to the lead in the National League campaign.

The even break cost the Giants two precious percentage points, enough to give the Cardinals the lead by a fraction of one point.

McGraw started the day right at Pittsburgh when Benton, aided by Scott, pitched the Giants to a 6 to 3 win in the first engagement. In the second, however, the Corsairs unleashed a terrific batting offensive that swept the New Yorkers into a dismal 13 to 3 defeat.

Cincinnati, taking two from Brooklyn, 2 to 0, and 6 to 1, leaped over the idle Cubs into third place and served notice they are not yet to be counted out of the race. The Reds trail the leaders by only three and a half games.

The Philadelphia Athletics, beating Cleveland 3 to 1, slipped up to within four and a half games of the American League leaders, the New York Yankees. Grove was in his best form for the A's, allowing eight scattered hits and fanning eight.

For the fourth straight day Detroit downed the Boston Red Sox by one run, this time by 2 to 1. Owen Carroll, giving only six hits, chalked up his 14th victory of the season.

Fred Marberry held Chicago to five hits and the Washington Senators made it two out of three from the White Sox, 4 to 3, in 11 innings.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kasiski left yesterday on a vacation trip to Colorado. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. Darnell of Tonkawa, Ok.

WILL YOU HAVE E. S. GRAVES

for your next SHERIFF and TAX COLLECTOR

For the Sheriff's office you want a competent law-enforcement officer. But don't forget the "Tax Collector" part of the work. More than $400,000 must be collected, honestly and fairly to all concerned. And this makes the office one of the most responsible business administration jobs in the county. Did you ever get your tax matters in a snarl? If you have you should be strong for a man who has proven conclusively that he can handle a big tax job right.

Right now the county's tax-collection records are being audited by a commercial firm of Auditors. Before you vote, step into the courthouse and ask them just how big a job the Tax Collector has and how it is being handled in Gray county. They will tell you that THERE ARE FEW COUNTIES IN THE WHOLE STATE OF TEXAS WITH TAX COLLECTION RECORDS AS ACCURATELY KEPT AS THOSE OF GRAY. Will you vote to keep them in that condition?

"BUD" The Sheriff

This Has Happened

"Bud," an Irishman, is born and raised in a pioneer environment in Bosque county, Texas. At the age of fifteen he hires out on a cattle ranch in Hopkins county and serves an apprenticeship of two years. Returning to his home at the end of this time, he meets Daisy Belle Adams. Three years later he marries her. After three years as a tenant farmer, Bud is employed by a large cattle company near Fort Worth to take charge of their ranch. He holds this position for eight years, then runs a dairy and farm in the same locality for four more years, then Furneaux Bros. employ him to take charge of their cattle and farming interests in a Panhandle county. Bud has hardly moved in to the new community before the job of county commissioner is forced upon him. Improved road grading machinery is purchased.

Now On With the Story

CHAPTER IV

Doing one job well seems to be a sure-fire way of getting a harder one. Many people felt that the sheriff of the county in which Bud now lived was not the efficient officer they needed. So friends of Bud insisted that he run for sheriff of the county. The race was hotly contested, Bud winning by around 78 votes. A couple of robbers initiated Bud into his new job. The second day after he was sworn in as sheriff, a bank in a small town of the county was robbed of $2,000. The initiation was not so successful for its perpetrators, however, for they were caught within 10 miles of the scene of the robbery and all of the money except about $100 was restored to the bank. Naturally, Bud's prestige as a sheriff did not suffer any from this affair.

National prohibition was then a comparatively new thing; not so new, however, but what a number of stills had begun to operate in the county. Bud and his deputies waged a determined war on them and, today, Bud proudly says that he is sure not a single still can be found operating in his county.

Horse stealing still had to be contended with at this time. Bud remembered clearly those two men he had seen hanged back in Bosque county when a youngster. He had an imbred dislike for such gentry and, soon after he took office, the county was clean of their activities. Their modern successor, the automobile thief, has fared little better. During the eight years Bud has held the office of sheriff, automobile thefts have been comparatively rare and a large percentage of the cars stolen have been recovered. In connection with the automobile licence department of the county, Bud had a system of records installed which is a model of efficiency in assisting officers in the recovery of a stolen car. Few counties in the state have as good a system.

Being sheriff of one of the largest counties in the state did not prevent Bud from continuing as manager of the farming and ranch interests of his original employers, Furneaux Bros.

Their affairs have prospered under his hands and today he manages for them one of the best ranch-farms in the county.

Many officers find it necessary in the performance of their duties to shoot an alleged criminal. Bud is proud of the fact that, although from childhood he has been familiar and expert in the use of pistol and rifle, it has never been necessary for him to fire at any man or even draw his gun. To many people, this would indicate a higher degree of courage than is called for in the case of the officer who shoots his man and asks questions afterwards. There is quite a body of public opinion that holds that the officer who has a reputation as a killer—with several notches on his pistol—is much less courageous really than the man who handles the duties of his office without taking life.

Traces of oil had been found in the county soon after Bud arrived, but for various reasons the oil development was held off until about January 1, 1923, when drilling activities began in earnest. With the oil boom came that tide of adventurers, gamblers, crooks, bootleggers and all the scum and riff raff that follows in the wake of the lucrative oil business.

Then it was that Bud demonstrated beyond a doubt that the people of his county had chosen wisely in entrusting the protection of their homes to his hands. Organized crime never was allowed to lift its head. Although the rangers have been sent by the state government to many oil communities, it was never necessary to send them to his county.

Prohibition agent Tyson said to Bud of his law enforcement record in the county: "In the many years I have served as prohibition officer, I have had to work in many of the oil counties of Texas and wish to state that a county as well advertised by the crooks and gamblers, as well as by the better class of people interested in oil and related industries, the comments of all are alike: Don't go to—county if you want to deadbeat or sell booze, for the old man is entirely too tight. I know this to be true, for my work with you, I have found it so and I know that the record of crime in your district is clearer than in any other district in Texas or Oklahoma. These facts speak more ably for you as sheriff of the county than could I or any other man."

The largest law violation to occur to date during Bud's career as sheriff was that of the robbery of one of the large banks on March 31, 1922, when a loss of $32,000 was sustained. Of the five men who committed the crime, three are now behind the penitentiary walls.

Four times the people of the county have elected Bud to be their sheriff. After the first race, in which a man who had held the job for several terms was his opponent, there has never been a close race for the office. A majority of the people of the county have felt that, having secured a courageous, efficient official such as Bud has proven himself to be, that it would be unwise to risk a change in so important an office. This feeling is particularly strong at this time, when the oil boom is still on and conditions could easily become critical without a firm hand to control would be law violators in the county.

Bud comes up for reelection tomorrow. If you have not already guessed his identity

NEW YORKER
AT LARGE

BY G. O. SEYMOUR
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK (AP)—It was the dingier side-streets of lower Manhattan that saw the passing, some years since, of the last of the "milkmen's movies." Into cheaper theaters where the films flickered all night and gave way to new programs each dawn, came not only homeless wanderers, glad of a chance to begin and end their slumbers by seeing a movie show, but dwellers in congested tenements who preferred spending the night in a theater to fighting for their share of the family mattress. The all-night movies vanished, one by one, as exhibitors tired of their "flop-house" audiences and found bigger profit in fever and better shows.

At The Stroke Of Twelve

Now the shows that begin at midnight are coming into vogue again, but in greatly different guise and in the center of the amusement sector.

One of the biggest motion picture theatres is giving a show every night at twelve, with all the furbelows of the regular performances. Another presents a midnight program whenever audiences are running close to capacity or when some special event keeps the crowds late in Times Square. At least one notable motion picture premiere was a midnight event, and gained lustre thereby.

The stage, too, is experimenting with midnight shows. Two negro revues have launched occasional special performances at the hour when ushers usually are looking under seats for lost vanity cases and forgotten Panamas. The cast which revived "Ten Nights in A Barroom" capped its burlesque capers by presenting that opus in Roman dress to a twelve o'clock audience. When Mae West found her "Diamond Lil" the summer hit of the town she trod the boards a time for two in extra presentations while the clock struck one, and two, and even three.

For The Profession

The midnight show was inaugurated, without much fanfare, for the benefit of actors whose duties kept them from seeing contemporary diversions at normal hours. Some players preferred a midnight show to a special matinee, both to play and to witness. When Broadway habits, unwilling to go home until the last light goes out, began to clamor for admission, seats were put on sale to the public, which now drifts in increasing, if not yet formidable numbers toward box offices which are still doing business at midnight. Kellogg Arrives in France While Crowds Await Him

HAVRE, France, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Secretary Kellogg landed on French soil early this morning to be received by Mayor Meyer of Havre and a crowd of people lining the dock which was decorated with the flags of nations that are to sign the war renunciation treaty in Paris Monday.

The Ile de France, aboard which Mr. Kellogg made the trip from New York, entered port at 2:30 a. m., while the secretary and other passengers were asleep.

Mr. Kellogg disembarked at about 7 a. m. and upon landing was greeted by Mayor Meyer who presented him with an artistic gold fountain pen donated by the city to use in signing the treaty. He expressed thanks for the gift.

Mr. Kellogg left for Paris at 7:30 on a special train placed at his disposal by the French government.

Michael J. McDermott, chief of the current information section of the state department, who is accompanying the secretary, announced Mr. Kellogg would sail from Havre for Dublin Wednesday

International Sunday School Lesson

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

GENERAL TOPIC: Paul in a Roman Prison.
Scripture Lesson: Acts 16: 19-34.

19. But when her masters saw that the hope of their gain was gone, they laid hold of Paul and Silas, and dragged them into the market place before the rulers.

20. But when they had brought them unto the magistrates, they said, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city.

21. And set forth customs which it is not lawful for us to receive, or to observe, being Romans.

22. And the multitudes rose up together against them; and the magistrates rent their garments off them, and commanded to beat them with rods.

23. And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailer to keep them safely.

24. Who, having received such a charge, cast them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25. But about midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns unto God, and the prisoners were listening to them:

26. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison-house were shaken; and immediately all the doors were opened; and every one's bands were loosed.

27. And the jailer, being roused out of sleep and seeing the prison doors open, drew his sword and was about to kill himself; supposing that the prisoners had escaped.

28. But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.

29. And he called for lights and sprang in, and, trembling for fear, fell down before Paul and Silas.

30. And brought them out and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

31. And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house.

32. And they spake the word of the Lord unto him, with all that were in his house.

33. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized he and all his, immediately.

34. And he brought them up into his house, and set food before them, and rejoiced greatly, with all his house, having believed in God.

Time: A. D. 50.
Place: Philippi, the market place and the jail.

Golden text: Rejoice in the Lord always: again I say, rejoice.—Phil. 4:4.

Introduction
"The gospel in Europe started at a woman's prayer meeting, progressed through a prison, and was cheered on by a song. It carries for us the lessons that righteousness and 'flowery beds of ease' are not natural comrades and that a radiant religion can transform a prison into a palace."

Paul wrote to the church at Philippi one of the gladdest letters ever written. It contains the words joy and rejoice thirteen times in four short chapters.

ters. He was in a Roman prison now, but still singing. Did he recall that midnight song?

A Slave Girl Cured
Paul and Silas, Timothy and Luke seem to have visited habitually the "place of prayer" in Philippi where Lydia, the first Christian convert in Europe, was won to the Saviour. One day, as they were on their way thither, they encountered a poor, demented slave girl, whose strange, half-coherent utterances were used by her owners as a species of fortune-telling. She followed after them, and shouted that they were servants of the Most High God, proclaiming the way of salvation. But Paul would not receive tribute and aid from demons; so in the name of Jesus Christ he bade the evil spirits come out of her, and in that very hour the slave girl was restored to her true self.

The Heathen Masters Enraged, v. 19
Instead of rejoicing over the inestimable blessing that had come to the girl, these selfish men were enraged because they could no more make money out of her misfortune. "They laid hold on Paul and Silas, and dragged them into the market place before the rulers. Nothing is said of Timothy and Luke, for Paul and Silas were the active heads of the party, the spokesmen, and they alone were held responsible. The market place or forum of an ancient town was the heart of its life.

Paul and Silas Cruelly Beaten, v. 22
"And the multitude rose up together against them." It was a mob, with all of a mob's unreasoning passion and determined prejudices. "And the magistrates rent their garments off them." The garments of Paul and Silas; the Greek implies that they were stripped naked. "And commanded to beat them with rods." Paul suffered this form of punishment three times (2 Cor. 11:25). It was a cruel infliction cutting deep into the bleeding flesh, and often leaving the victim permanently maimed. "And when they had laid many stripes upon them." The Jewish practice was to give forty less one (2 Cor. 11:24), but we do not know how many blows were given by these colonial Roman magistrates.

Paul and Silas Imprisoned

"They cast them into prison, charging the jailer to keep them safely." Jails were none too secure in those days and jailers moreover, might easily be bribed. "Who having received such a charge; cast them into the inner prison." The inner prison was back of the outer prison, with no exit except through it. Perhaps it was below the outer prison, with no opening

The Boulder Dam Issue

The Hoover candidacy has, or will bring out the issue of Boulder Dam, since residents of Northern California are trying to make their support contingent upon the Californian's endorsement of the project.

What and why is Boulder Dam? The Swing-Johnson bill would appropriate $125,000,000 for the construction of Boulder Dam, on the Colorado river in Arizona and Nevada.

The dam would furnish water for irrigating many acres of land. It would give Los Angeles a huge water supply and a marvelous hydro-electric power plant.

Chief support comes from Los Angeles, from Hiram Johnson who uses the issue for campaign purposes, and of course the persons who would benefit from the water and cheap power.

Opponents of the dam flay Los Angeles because of her powerful lobby working for the dam. They contend with a proposed dam at Topoc, in the Mojave valley, which they claim would meet irrigation and flood control purposes and cost but $15,000,000.

Government invasion of private activities always presents a danger. The policy is communitistic, and might logically be continued to any type of business.

The Swing-Johnson bill for Boulder Dam is so clearly provincial in its intent that Congress should reverse the process and ask why should the dam be built at Boulder at all.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—New York recently broadcast a warning to people who planned to go there and settle, urging them to bring sufficient money and not to depend on getting a job right away.

Washington hasn't issued any similar warning, but it should.

Thousands of people have been flocking in this summer with the intention of settling here and with the apparent expectation that jobs were here yearning for them.

The office of the U. S. Employment Service on Pennsylvania Avenue has received many applications for work from 78,000 persons within the last year and estimates that 50,000 or 60,000 were new arrivals in the capital.

At the Washington office of the Democratic national committee, your correspondent was recently told, 500 persons had come in looking for campaign jobs within a fortnight.

The Republican headquarters here, which is running the G. O. P. show, tells a similar story, probably with more applicants there because of its great activity.

Many of the applicants who bring letters from political friends, but these are seldom able to accomplish anything for the bearers, who must either return home or remain here looking for other work, which is scarce.

The government's big new building program is attracting other large groups of unemployed from other cities and the creation of a new federal bureau always brings a squad to town seeking to fill the new jobs.

Many college students come in the summer to dig in somewhere so they may be in a position to work their way thru the various institutions here when fall terms begin.

to them. Often however, they find themselves out of luck and in direct competition with 1,000 graduates from Washington's high schools and business colleges.

A considerable number of tourists apparently are so fascinated with Washington that they pull up stakes and come here to live without sufficient thought of how they're going to do it.

into it except a hole in the floor of the outer prison through which the unfortunate prisoners were dropped, as was the case with Jeremiah (Jer. 38:6.) The outer prison was so vile it would not be tolerated in any civilized land today, but the inner prison was foul beyond our imagining: no light, no fresh air, slimy, damp, noisome, full of the most disgusting odors, and swarming with vermin. It was the breeder of disease, and was in every way abominable.

Paul and Silas Sing in Prison, v. 25
 "But about midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns unto God." The awful circumstances prevented sleep, but the missionaries could still pray and sing psalms; their psalms were prayers, and at the same time praise. "And the prisoners were listening to them." It must have been a strange sound indeed, this voice of praise and prayer and song in that abode of misery. We may be sure, too, that the missionaries did not miss the opportunity of telling their fellow prisoners about their Saviour, who came "to proclaim release to the captives, to set at liberty them that are bruised" (Luke 4:18, 21.)

The Prison Doors Opened
 "And suddenly there was a great earthquake." A fearful earthquake at the world's Redeemer hung dead upon the cross (Matt. 27:50-54) testified to the sympathy of the created globe with its Creator. In the first days of the church when Peter and John had been warned by the Sanhedrin not to preach or teach any longer in the name of Christ, the prayer meeting of the disciples which followed received God's witness in the form of an earthquake (Acts 4:31). "And immediately all the doors were opened; and every one's chains were loosed." The prisoners' chains were fastened to staples in the walls, and these staples were loosened as the walls cracked, and fell out, so that the prisoners were entirely free to leave the prison.

Jailer About to Kill Self.

It was death for a jailer to let his prisoners escape; see Acts 12:19, where the penalty was enforced after the angel had released Peter from the prison in Jerusalem; compare also Acts 27:42, the soldiers desiring to kill their prisoners rather than run the risk of their escaping and so putting the lives of their guards in jeopardy.

From what did the jailer wish to be saved? He must have become conscious of his personal sins. Perhaps the earthquake aroused his conscience. Perhaps he had heard Paul preach about the wages of sin, which are death. He may have heard the demoniac girl shouting after Paul and Silas. "These men proclaim the way of salvation." However it happened, the jailer asked the one question best worth asking by every man, and he asked it of the one man in all the world most capable of answering it wisely.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus"

"And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house." Here is the essence of Christianity. Here is all we need to know for our eternal happiness and safety. Peter at Pentecost made a very comprehensive answer to virtually the same question (Acts 2:38), but, through his was a wonderful summary. Paul's simpler reply has the essentials. Everyone can understand what believing on the Lord Jesus means; simply accepting what Christ says about himself and what he bids us do. All who do this will be saved from their sins.

The Jailer's Baptism

"And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes."

They had been thrust into the inner prison with their bleeding wounds uncared for, and with no means of caring for themselves. "And was baptised, he and all his, immediately." Here we see the earnestness of the jailer. He was a man of action. Having just had an impressive warning, he realized that there is no time like the present for the doing of any duty.

Following Christ in Misfortune

"In the melody of the imprisoned evangelists was verified the saying of the Patriarch Job, 'God owner Maker giveth songs in the night.' There is no depth of sorrow in which his love cannot reach and cheer his servants. The Christian may be a prisoner in the dungeon of the enemy or a bond-man under the lash, whatever be the weight of the burden or the thickness of the gloom. God can infuse joy and consolation, and peace, and hope, and sweet submission, and unwavering trust"—Bishop Alfred Lee.

Why Have a Fair Anyway?

Mr. A. You say that we should have a fair in Pampa. Why so?

Mr. B. Fairs have always been the best means of encouraging better livestock, poultry, and farm crops.

Mr. A. I don't see how that a fair at Pampa would have this effect. Please tell me.

Mr. B. There is a natural instinct in the human mind to love to own and show the best of anything. If you had an excellent beef, dairy, or dual purpose cow would you not take pride in exhibiting her to your friends?

Mr. A. Yes. But what has this got to do with a Pampa fair?

Mr. B. Well, this same law applies not only to livestock but to poultry and field crops. Then, if we have a fair at Pampa this year and several good animals, crops of poultry, and samples of field crops are shown and in a prize, won't this be a means of educating the people to know a good animal, chicken, or sample of crop?

Mr. A. Yes. I believe that it would have this influence. But we have schools and colleges to educate the people. Why not leave it to them?

Mr. B. For the good reason that it would neither be practical nor wise to have all the people stop and enter school or college. And the fair offers a very good agency to bring the best of everything for study to the people who cannot attend school or college.

And then, people enjoy friendly rivalry which is afforded by a fair. Again few people would know about whether very excellent livestock, poultry, or field crops were produced in a certain section unless it has been compared with others of its kind and declared by competent judges to possess certain desirable characters to a greater degree than the others of its kind. Again, how can man improve a thing until he is caused to see just what improvements are needed?

Just a few decades ago, our dairy cattle were not half so efficient producers of cheap human food as they are today. So with other livestock. And do you know what brought about this desirable change? "No?" Well may I tell you that it was largely the agency of fairs that has wrought this desirable change? I think that I would not exaggerate on stretch the truth in the least to tell you that the organization of fairs from almost the beginning of the historic age, has had more influence in bringing this about than all other agencies put together. I believe that we might say truthfully that all improvements in livestock, poultry, and field crops would soon cease if it were not for the organization and maintenance of fairs scattered over the country and finally concentrated at some large center as the State Fair at Dallas, The Fair Stock Show at Fort Worth, The National Dairy show at selected cities throughout the United States and the world.

Perhaps we would never have had a Segis Pietertie Prospect, a cow that gave more than 37,000 pounds of milk a year, if it had not been for fairs.

Doubtless neither would we have had a Lady Eggyline, a hen that laid 315 eggs in 365 days, if it had not been for the stimulating agency of fairs. Neither would we ever have had a sow that would have given birth to a litter of pigs that would produce 3698 1-2 pounds of pork at six months of age.

For too well many of our older people remember when it was thought that a hog must be two or more years of age before he was thought large enough to kill for meat. In fact few hogs under two years of age would weigh

Week-end Trips Mean Happiness

When You Drive with Magnolia Anti-Knock Gasoline

When Saturday comes, bringing to many business workers a half-holiday, the highways beckon to every family possessing a car, and promise good times ahead. Over Sunday is sufficient time to drive from almost any place in the Southwest to a nearby lake, stream or camping place to enjoy a picnic, fishing, hunting or other sports and return in time for duty Monday morning. The change of scene and activity refreshes the worker. Children grow rosy-cheeked and strong from play in the great outdoors and mothers gain relief from the tedium of household routine. Your car represents a valuable investment. Let the family car pay you generous dividends in added health and happiness from week-end outings rather than be only an item of expense and depreciation.

The illustration above shows a picturesque bluff overlooking the highway near Fayetteville, Arkansas. Views of equal grandeur varying greatly in character are to be found throughout the Ozarks. The mountain heights, the rolling prairie and the far-flung plains invite you with views of equal beauty.

Make sure of unquestionable performance from your car for the full enjoyment of your week-end trips. After looking to its mechanical condition, visit the Magnolia Man. Guiding Your Child

BY MRS. AGNES LYNE
The small child lives in a world whose purposes are generally too complex for him to understand, and whose objectives are not those with which he can thoroughly identify himself. His days follow an orderly routine conceived and executed for his benefit by an adult mind. He learns to dress himself in time for breakfast, hang up his clothes when he comes in from play, take his nap without a murmur and to pile his toys away neatly on their shelves. This training is an essential part of his education, but it is nevertheless alien to his natural impulses and fatiguing to his spirit. It makes him aware of his littleness and his ineffectiveness as compared with the adult who directs his life. It is therefore of the utmost importance to help him sustain his poise and develop his initiative by treating with respect his spontaneous enterprises. No attempt should ever be made to improve them from the adult point of view.

Too often the child executes what seems a first rate airplane or a very fine doll dress or a splendid system of car tracks only to have his achievement scarcely appreciated by the grown up to whom he proudly exhibits it. Instead he is told as likely as not that the airplane won't fly, the dress lacks sleeves or the car tracks have no switches. The play world in which he is at home and where he finds an outlet for his creative impulses is thus rudely exposed to the full blast of adult criticism.

One tactless comment can so impress a child with the pitiful inadequacy of his achievement that all his joy in the thing he has done and with it a score of things he might have done are killed in an instant.

Since learning to live involves so much that is disciplinary, so many situations in which the child must feel his inferiority to the grown up, it is vital that his play, at least, be free of the intrusion of adult standards. The grown up who enters the play world must do so in the spirit of equal companionship, ready for once to put

Negro Escaped Fire But Is Captured—House was Burned

NACOGDOCHES, Aug. 24.—(AP)—W. L. Thorn, negro, who inexplicably escaped cremation yesterday when his house was burned after he had refused to come out and submit to arrest for the killing of Deputy Sheriff John Hargis, shot as he participated in a liquor raid on the negro's home, was held in the Lufkin jail today as a precaution against violence.

The officer's companions gathered about the residence as it flamed, waiting for Thorn, wounded, to appear. In some manner, he fled the building without attracting attention and later was found crouching in an adjacent patch of weeds. Sparks from the fire ignited a nearby tree, which was destroyed.
