Third Party Movement Grows as Hoover Dodges Farm Relief Issue

BUREAU CHIEF SAYS NOMINEE IS UNDERSTOOD

Republican Victory Predicted at Office of W. C. T. U.

CAMPAIGNS ARE PLANNED

Democrats Will Try to Counteract Critics in South

INDIANAPOLIS, July 10.—(P)—Herbert Hoover's failure to reply to the telegram sent by William H. Settle, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau Federation, asking the Republican presidential nominee to state his personal stand on the farm relief question will be taken to mean that he is going to stand on the platform adopted at the Kansas City convention, Settle said today.

CHICAGO, July 10.—(P)—Three national minority parties began drawing battle lines today for the November elections.

Each group gathered here in separate conventions—the prohibition party, the Farmer-Laborites and the Jefferson-Lincoln League—but there was a pronounced pre-convention sentiment that the three finally would merge their strength behind a single presidential candidate.

NEW YORK, July 10.—(P)—Establishment of a Democratic campaign bureau in some southern state to offset "an organized effort in several states to defeat the national Democrat ticket" was advocated by Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas in a statement today.

The statement of the Democratic candidate for the vice-presidency follows: "The subjects of concern to me and other Democrats just now are for consideration and decision by the national committee in its meeting tomorrow."

Wishes Thorough Efforts "The selection of a national chairman and the conclusion as to what organizations are required, and how and where they shall be set up are of very great importance. Too much stress cannot be laid on the value of an organization that shall extend its activities to every part of the country."

"I would like to have the committee give attention to the proposal to establish a bureau or headquarters at some central point in one of the southern states for the direction of the campaign in the South. Conditions in that section are very different from those which have prevailed in other national campaigns. An organized effort is in progress in several southern states to defeat the national Democratic ticket, and while the force and volume of this movement is not yet known, I am of the opinion that sound policies should prompt our party managers to meet this opposition decisively and promptly."

Gilpin, employed in the Summer White House kitchen at Cedar Island Lodge, wrote the Milwaukee circuit court that he would be unable to appear to answer charges of desertion and cruelty filed by his wife. He said to do so might cost him his job.

Nobile Crew Is Ill and Nearly Insane, Flier Says

STOCKHOLM, July 10.—(P)—The five survivors of the Italia are ill with fever and most of them show signs of partial insanity, according to word received from the Swedish rescue ship Quetz today. Little hope is held for their immediate rescue. Their morale is low. Lieutenant Einar-Paul Lundborg, who was marooned on the ice near Poyin Island with them for 13 days, said his stay was terrifying. They had very little food and what he got was rather unappetizing. They were reprovived before he was rescued, however.

Lundborg asserted all the survivors were suffering from fever and most of them showed signs of mental aberration. Giuseppe Biago, radio operator was suffering from fever for the last two days before Lundborg was rescued but nevertheless he arose at least twice daily to operate the wireless.

Since Lundborg was rescued last Friday there has been no radio contact with the marooned men, advices from the Quetz said. Other details coming from Spitzbergen conflict with reports of the disaster given out by General Umberto Nobile. All telegrams from the base ship Citta Di Milano, where Nobile is, are being censored. Nobody is allowed to telegram in any language except Italian and all telegrams to Rome are controlled by Nobile himself.

It was learned, however, that Nobile now says the radio was all right from the first minute after the dirigible crashed on May 25. Nobody can explain how the Citta Di Milano and other stations were unable to pick it up until June 9, when the base ship first announced that it had established communication with the survivors.

General Nobile's mysterious statement about the unexpected fall of the dirigible and that the crew was not prepared to conflict with fact that there were 50 pounds of provisions in the navigating cabin for six persons. This was held to indicate that measurements had been taken for a forced landing. Otherwise the stores would have been kept in the dirigible's interior.

Dr. Finn Malmgren and the two men who started afoot for land with him had fifty pounds of stores when they

Wider Right-of-Way Desired—Petition Presented

Pampa citizens who went to LeFors picnicking on July 4 found the road so rough that they started a petition asking Commissioner W. A. Taylor to put the precinct grader to work there. It was pointed out that the almost impassable condition of the road hampered oil field travel and injured local trade and good will.

According to Commissioner Taylor, the grader and other equipment have been rented to the contractor who is throwing up the grade for paving immediately south of the city, leading to the Clarendon road. The equipment has not, therefore, been available for use on the roads in the precinct. "I am doing what I think is best in using the grader on the south road in stead of on the LeFors road," Mr. Taylor told The News. "It is really a waste of time to work on the LeFors road at present, as it must be widened according to the project for which bonds were voted in this precinct."

At yesterday's commission meeting the matter was discussed and an 80-foot right-of-way was decided upon for the LeFors road. It is planned to recondition the road temporarily and to throw up a new grade according to the wider right-of-way when that is obtained.

BIGGEST BROWN DERBY WILL BE GIVEN BY SCOUTS

NEW YORK, July 10.—(P)—Governor Smith will own the largest brown derby in the world. Boy Scouts arranged for the presentation of the head piece at the governor's annual visit to their camp at Bear Mountain this afternoon. The derby is five feet long and four feet high. The rim is flat and wide enough for bicyclists to ride upon.

AND OF JAILS—WELL, "THERE ARE SMILES"

CHICAGO, July 10.—(P)—There are smiles that make you happy. There are smiles that make you blue. There are smiles like those of Jacob Werching.

Which have power to cut five days to two— There are smiles— But the thing of it was, that Werching had been sentenced to five days in jail because the front wheels of his automobile shimmied. Werching insisted the weird motion was a mechanical imperfection; Judge Curran decided it was alcoholic.

The court granted Werching a 48-hour stay of sentence to permit his attorney to business affairs pending intention to incarceration. Werching came back to court ready for the five days involuntary detention. This time how- ever, he was not argumentative. He smiled as he talked with the court, and was pleasantly affirmative to every remark the court made.

Judge Curran pondered. "The city needs the man with a smile," he said. "Because you know how to smile, I hereby reduce your sentence to two days."

Thus was driven home the great truth that the poets of tin pan alley so long have glorified.

Add to the list of those who make sacrifices to maintain their good name, Donald Muir of Anthony, Kas. Mr. Muir from his personal wealth has just completed payment of $10,000 to creditors of the failed Home State bank, of which he was an officer. Every depositor has been paid in full. He gave up the bulk of an estate founded by his father and increased by himself by many years of work and saving.

PRODUCTION IN BIG INCREASE

West Texas Fields Jump Over 30,000 Barrels

TULSA, July 20.—(P)—With production in the West Texas fields jumping nearly 30,000 barrels and several other areas showing lesser increases to offset losses elsewhere, the estimated daily average production of oil in the United States showed a big increase during the week ending July 7, the Oil and Gas Journal will say in its current issue.

For the first time in several weeks a big increase was shown in the Yates field, West Texas, daily production during the last week jumping from 49,597 to 65,405 barrels. A similar increase was shown in the Hendricks area of West Texas.

Oklahoma production continued to decrease, total production for the state dropping more than 5,000 barrels. Practically all this loss was in the Seminole area, as production in other state fields remained stationary.

Changes were slight in other areas in the United States. Arkansas production of light crude dropped about 4,000 barrels. The Texas Panhandle and North Central Texas areas decreased slightly, and production in the Rocky Mountain district was down about 4,000 barrels for the week. California increased about 8,000 barrels.

Total oil production United States July 7, light oil 1,941,461 barrels, heavy oil 403,788 barrels. Total 2,345,249 barrels. Total increase over June 30 23,681 barrels; total increase in light oil, 22,774 barrels.

Smut Prevalence Declared Small

Local elevator men report less smut in the wheat this year than any previous year, in history, considering this year. Smut is not general this year but found in isolated spots.

The recent rain and heavy dew has lowered the quality of the wheat slightly, it is reported, but the yield is holding up nicely. Harvesting is in full swing after being held up by rain, and the trucks are streaming to the elevators today.

Judge J. R. Porter and R. H. Beville of Clarendon are in the city today.

CONTRACT MAY BE SIGNED UP ON AUGUST 13

Commissioners Decide Not to Postpone Work Further

FOUR STORIES ARE PLANNED

Structure Will Be Both Commodious and Beautiful

Contract for the erection of the new Gray county court-house will be let August 13 by the county commissioners, it was decided at a meeting yesterday afternoon. Plans have been practically completed by W. E. Kaufman, local architect. The cost will be about $200,000.

Work on the building will commence immediately after letting of the contract. The structure will be four stories high. The bottom floor will be of butt stone and the rest terra cotta and brick. It will be 86 feet wide by 120 feet long and will stand in the middle of the 120 by 300-foot lot south of the Central high school building.

The main entrance will face east and the other entrances will face south and north with the west as the back of the structure. There will be a small basement under the north half of the building for the heaters and an incinerator to be used in connection with the jail on the top floor.

The interior of the building will be a place of beauty both in structure and design. Up to this time it has cost the architect more than $1,500 to sketch the plans, which are complete to the merest details of finish and decoration.

Upon entering the east door of the building, the visitor will immediately notice the beautifully decorated hall with terra cotta floor and tile wainscoting. Offices lead off the corridor.

Will Have Elevator The north half of the first floor will be taken by the county superintendent and the sheriff's department and will include a waiting room, deputies' room, private office for the sheriff, and a prisoners' room. An elevator will go from the sheriff's office to the jail on the fourth floor, and will also connect with the district and county court rooms, thus having complete privacy for prisoners being taken up for trial.

Another place of beauty will be the district courtrooms on the third floor. The room will be 49 by 59 feet with a balcony and will seat more than 600 persons. As in the floor below the north half of the building will be entirely devoted to court offices, including the district judge's quarters, district attorney's quarters, district stenographer, bailiff and grand jury room. The south part will contain the jury retiring rooms and the district clerk's office.

The top floor of the building will be given over entirely to the jailers quarters and cells. The jail keeper will have a four-room apartment at the rear and the cells and prisoners' quarters will be immediately in front and connecting with the elevator. The building of the cells will be let under separate contract. They will be of special design.

After three unsuccessful elections to remove the county seat from LeFors to Pampa the issue was placed before the voters of the county March 9 and the issue carried by a large majority.

ONCE there was a policeman who stopped a car, offered the driver a cigaret in return for a match, and added a few words about the weather.

We know, for we were stopped, and had that g-l-o-r-i-o-u-s feeling that comes when the well known sinking feeling is caused to disappear.

The scheme is to seek out all out-of-town automobiles and as they stop to give the drivers a friendly greeting and a "Courtesy Card."

This is not a bad idea for any city, large or small. The idea of extending courtesies to visitors is widespread, but it is not followed everywhere.

The traveler's impression of a city is often formed by personal contacts, rather than visual inspection. Who has not left a friendly smile with greater kindness than the most modern metropolis inspired.

Cities are somewhat like persons, and tangible exterior qualities, while important, are ultimately less forceful than qualities within.

The story is being told of a prominent traveler who was visiting West Texas for the first time. Arising on the morning after arrival, he looked at a Panhandle sunrise with its haze of blue being gradually dissipated by a golden reddish flood of color, followed by the appearance of Old Sol.

CAPITOL News

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON — "War is probable—unless the two empires, through mutual sacrifice, seek to reconcile their many conflicting interests."

That's the report of an American correspondent covering the great international struggle for oil between Britain and the United States.

Ludwell Denny, one of the best informed writers in Washington, becomes the first American with an American viewpoint and complete awareness of American policy to produce a volume describing the fascinating, vital oil war which so threatens world peace and motivates so many of the major acts of foreign policy and yet nearly always keeps itself out of the newspapers.

"We Fight for Oil" is the name of the book. Aside from the fact that it comes from our side of the sea, it is today the most valuable of contributions to the oil-war literature because it brings this constantly changing situation virtually to the present hour.

Denny's journalistic career has taken him into the European and Asiatic war zones and subsequently for three years as a correspondent in the State Department here, where he followed closely the concealed moves of this government to safeguard the United States' future against foreign monopoly of the world's oil reserves.

To anyone who hasn't followed the war as Denny has his well documented revelations are likely to be astounding.

Here's a summary: Britain, with the Royal Dutch Shell company under Sir Henri Deterding and its government-controlled Anglo-Persian company, is fighting with our government and our Standard Oil company for the world's reserves.

long commercial and naval supremacy.

The fight centers on raw materials, principally oil because our own reserves are being depleted and both our industrial and naval supremacy now depend on it.

Downing street saw first the wisdom of helping British companies grab the world oil and had perhaps most of it before our government woke up.

Today Standard and Royal Dutch are still fighting, sometimes in public, for a lion's share of Russia's great reserves.

The surface of American-Mexican relations is temporarily peaceful, but unless Mexico makes further concessions there probably will be trouble.

Meanwhile Britain's policy is one of conservation—keeping oil in the ground. Our companies, at home and abroad, seem to be removing and selling the oil as fast as they can get it out.

Britain is maneuvering now for vast tracts close to the Panama Canal. Perhaps these hold oil and perhaps not.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding to ROD HAYES, receives a paper knife as a gift from LILA HARRISH, who had turned Rod away because he was not wealthy.

The feel of the metal chilled Bertie and she thought that it was a dagger to pierce her happiness. She looked across her maid, who was looking at her with a look of surprise to see her so miserable. Bertie turned to her maid and said: "You're so willing and Rod enjoys your efforts so much."

THEY SPENT AN IDEAL HONEYMOON and Bertie Lou almost forgets the shadow cast by the predatory character until they returned and find Lila assuming the role of dictator on the ground that she knows what Rod likes. Rod hides and her mother resent this, but no amount of polite hinting affects Lila's determination to annoy. Finally, in desperation, Bertie Lou says sweetly, "Suppose you come in and cook for me."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

THE honors were Bertie Lou's. It was infuriating to Lila to be told that she'd been discussed by her former sweetheart and his bride.

Rod looked at Bertie Lou in astonishment. He couldn't remember having said anything about Lila's cooking.

Lila's poppy rouge suddenly appeared in strange contrast to the natural color that flamed in her cheeks. Bertie Lou smiled over it.

But Lila wasn't defenseless. She still had a stroke or two left in her sword arm. "I dare say he remembers my devil-food cake," she said with a laugh. "Rod always liked to cut himself a piece of cake, didn't you, big boy?"

Rod began to wince up. Lila's laugh was mocking, reminiscent. He remembered in a flash the slang of a year or so ago, and flushed doubly red. A helpless male between two of the deadliest species.

"I guess I'll help your mother in the kitchen, Bertie Lou," he blurted. "Excuse me, Lila. See you later."

Lila could now leave in satisfaction. Rod's upset gave her a moment of victory. It showed that she still had the power to disturb him. And that, flush, merely one of embarrassment, so closely resembled the flag of guilt that Lila knew it must make Bertie Lou wonder.

BERTIE LOU slammed the door when Lila was half way down the stairs and stood leaning against it, trembling with nervous anger. Bertie Lou dashed away a tear of exasperation and started to the bedroom to take off her traveling dress and get into something cooler and fresher. She could hear the rattle of dishes in the kitchen—it hardly seemed possible that it was her kitchen—and knew that Rod was helping her mother.

She had looked forward with dreaming delight to her homecoming with Rod—a homecoming far, far different from this. She had hoped they wouldn't be met—that they could come quietly to their simple little nest and settle themselves in their own blissful way.

But it was nice to have friends.

BERTIE LOU'S smile vanished and a worried young face appeared in the glass before which she brushed-out her heavy, half-cooked hair.

Rod flushed dully red. A helpless male between two of the deadliest species.

"Don't look such a 'fraid-cat," she adjured the reflection. "Rod isn't a mouse for two cats to fight over. And he wouldn't marry a girl unless he loved her. The dear boy doesn't know it, but he's romantic to the very dawning heart of him. Marriage had to be for him what it is to me—love for two."

She felt better after that and hurriedly pinned her hair into a tight knot so she could bathe her face and neck in cold water. Her mother came into the bedroom while she was in the adjoining bath.

"Bertie Lou, I'm going home now," Mrs. Ward called. "But there's something I want to say to you first."

"All right, Mums, I'll be out in just a minute. Soon's I get a yard or two of railroad right-of-way off my neck."

Mrs. Ward stepped back to the bedroom door and closed it. She had a feeling that Rod might think she was intruding, but she couldn't go before she had spoken to Bertie Lou.

Bertie Lou soon came out of the bathroom, most of her visible beyond the scant limits of an orchid silk brevity set. She unstrapped one of the suitcases and dug out a Condit coat of embroidered pongee and threw it around her shoulders.

"What's the 'quick Watson' stuff, Mums?" she teased, climbing to cover-legged comfort on the chintz-covered bed.

HER mother looked at her with troubled eyes before she took a seat on a chair, refusing Bertie Lou's hand-conveyed invitation to sit on the bed. "Spills a mattress to sit on the edge of it," she said as she had said many times before to Bertie Lou. "You must take care of your pretty things, honey."

Bertie Lou's eyes sobered. "I'm afraid I'll be a bum housekeeper, Mums. But if I make Rod happy..." Her voice trailed away uncertainly.

"Are you happy?" her mother asked, softly accentuating the pronoun.

"You know that Lila worries me, don't you?" Bertie Lou returned as softly. There was perfect understanding between them at that moment. They were closer than they ever had been before. For Bertie Lou was not laughing at life as she'd always done before. One can't fear a great loss until there is something very dear to lose.

"I was afraid she would. You can't be friendly with her, Bertie Lou. I think you'd better tell her the first chance you get that you think it best not to visit each other."

Bertie Lou emitted a short, dry laugh. "Mums, you'd fight the next war with Civil War weapons if they made you chief of staff," she said. "Don't you know that I can't forbid the house to anyone who comes to see Rod? In the new order the house is his as well as mine."

"Well then, let him tell her!" Bertie Lou groaned. "Shades of Queen Victoria! Can you picture Rod doing that?"

"You can tell him so, can't you?" "Wives aren't trusted any more, Mums. We don't want to succeed by stamping out opposition. I'll do everything I can to make Rod love me—but nothing to make him hate Lila."

Mrs. Ward looked worried. "Yes, but honey, you know he must have cared a great deal for her at one time. I can't believe that she won't have some attraction for him still if she cares to exert it. Lila is very pretty in her way, and I've noticed that it's a way the boys seem to admire."

Bertie Lou unpinched her hair and went over to the dresser to do it properly. "Rod says 'I'm not the prettiest girl in the world,'" she said during the process. "I'm not afraid of Lila taking him away from me. But it makes me mad to have her trying to cook up a triangle out of her old love affair with Rod and our marriage. I don't mean a regular triangle, but a silly three-cornered mess that will just keep the town talking and have people asking each other how they think I like being second choice."

THE last words came slowly, reluctantly, as though she hated the sound of them. Her mother regarded her silently for a moment and then got up to go.

"There's a steak and some cleaned vegetables in the icebox for your supper if you feel like cooking it," she said. "But I think maybe you'd better come home with me. You look awfully tired, Bertie Lou."

"Don't worry about us. We're the happiest couple in the world. Lila can't spoil it, and if I didn't have such crazy ideas about wanting things just so I wouldn't care what she did. I wish I had some of her indifference to the rest of the world. She doesn't give a hang what anyone says."

"Well, I never thought you cared so much either, Bertie Lou. You always were pretty up-to-date."

"Oh, about hobs and short skirts and cigarets. But I don't like making a town get out of my marriage, like the latest murder mystery or love nest scandal."

"It can't be that bad," her mother soothed. "But I wish you'd find a way to drop Lila. It can't do any good to let her come right into your home and torment you."

"She is very pretty in her way, and I've noticed that it's a way the boys seem to admire."

Strangler Lewis Has Hard Time Beating Plestina

MINNEAPOLIS, July 10.—(AP)—Ed (Strangler) Lewis had a busy time defending his world's heavyweight wrestling title against Marin Plestina, Chicago, last night. He won, but only after going three falls.

The champion used a series of headlocks to pin the Chicago grappler for the first fall in 27 minutes, 24 seconds. Plestina took the second in 17 minutes, 57 seconds, with a crotch and half-Nelson. The same hold was employed by Lewis to take the deciding fall in seven minutes, 21 seconds.

In taking the second fall, Plestina locked his fists and brought them down with terrific force on the back of Lewis' neck. The blow pitched the champion face forward to the mat and before he could scramble out of danger, Plestina pinned him with a crotch and half-Nelson.

LOVE FOR TWO RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED BERTIE LOU WARD, on the eve of her wedding to ROD BRYER, receives a paper knife as a gift from LILA MANSKI, who had turned Rod down because he was not wealthy. The feet of the metal chipped Bertie Lou, and she thought that it was a dagger to pierce her happiness. Flashed across her mind so that her dreaming anticipation turned to miserable foreboding. But she courageously resolves not to be jealous of Rod's past love affair. His future is in her keeping.

don't want to be meeting a lot of people on the way home." Bertie Lou noted how naturally he spoke of his father's house as "home." Habits were strong with Rod. She wondered about his affections, and the thought brought Lila back to her mind. She wished she were strong-minded enough to forget her.

NO ONE disturbed them; perhaps the absence of a light in their living room discouraged visitors from dropping in. When they slipped out to pay a call to Rod's family the street was almost deserted, except a few blocks south, near the pool room. They walked north and circled the center of town.

It was nearly midnight when they returned to their flat. At the top of the stairs Bertie Lou halted. "Carry me over the threshold for luck," she giggled, and Rod unlocked the door, threw it open and then picked her up bodily and strode into the living room.

HE did not put her down at once. She was light as a feather in his heavily-muscled arms. And her lips were cool and sweet. Rod was enjoying them immensely when a roar of his ha's burst out and the room was flooded with bright light from a dozen flashes. Then someone turned on the electric lamps and disclosed a crowd of young people in festive attire, busily queuing the scene they'd just witnessed.

BERTIE LOU struggled out of Rod's arms and faced them with a sinking feeling of helplessness. However had they got in? Then she remembered that the back door had been left unlocked. Rod had spoken of it at his mother's but they hadn't worried about it.

"Come on, we've got a loving cup!" There was a concerted move to the dining room and Rod and Bertie Lou were swept along. There, in the middle of the small dining room table, was a punch bowl filled with a brownish liquid and floating fruit.

Bertie Lou grimaced over the punch and whispered to Rod not to drink it. "It's vile," she warned. "For goodness sake, let's give them something to eat," she said the next time she had a chance for a hurried word with Rod. "Run down to the delicatessen and get something quick. Before they wreck the place."

Rod slipped out as soon as he could get away. When he returned he was loaded with enough liver-wurst, cheese and other ready-to-eat foods to supply a young army. Marcella came out to the kitchen to help Bertie Lou. "We gave Lila the slip," she confessed the moment they were alone. And then, as she saw the change that came over Bertie Lou's countenance, she realized the tactlessness of her remark.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V "I HOPE that's not a caller," Mrs. Ward remarked as Bertie Lou left the bedroom to see if Rod was answering the door. "I'll see who it is," she heard him say and then Bertie Lou ducked back to scramble into a dress.

In a moment they both went out and found Rod untying a square box that a boy had delivered. "Thank heavens you aren't having company," his mother-in-law said fervently. "Give me my hat, Bertie Lou. Where did I put it? On the phonograph, I think. Here it is. Lock the door behind me and don't answer any more doorbells. The whole town's likely to begin calling on you after supper."

Bertie Lou kissed her warmly and thanked her and then turned back from the door to discover Rod standing over the square box with a strange expression twisting his features into a cross between a grin and a scowl. Bertie Lou came over and looked into the box.

Nothing more impressive than a square of devil-food cake met her gaze. But it might as well have been a scorpion from the way she drew back from it.

"With Lila's compliments," Rod explained, glancing at a card in his hand. "Wishes us happiness."

"Shall we have it for dessert?" she asked quietly, after she had recovered from the surprise it had occasioned her.

"I hate the damned stuff," Rod replied. "Throw it in the garbage pail."

"I can cook that steak to the queen's taste," Rod volunteered. The salad dressing already mixed. We're sure of that, anyhow. And I don't see how we can spoil the melon, but if we do there's still the pie. I wish you were a New Englander. Then I wouldn't have to worry about breakfast."

"You won't anyway," Rod told her. "Just you sit opposite me and I won't know whether I'm eating toast or shoe leather."

Half an hour later he knew he had spoken hastily. For never was shoe leather tougher than that steak. And Bertie Lou's potatoes were a pale, soapy mess. The corn was boiled too hard, but the melon was coolly delicious and the pie made up for all disappointments.

"If you can stand an endless week I'll have mother teach me to cook," Bertie Lou promised. She had a burned finger and a cut thumb, but she had no tears for a culinary fiasco. The idea of a bride weeping over the kind of dinner that lay before them would have made her laugh. The new way was to turn in, tackle and master—well, if not master, at least get a toothhold on the art of cooking.

She made no apologies. Her job when she was single had been to be a good stenographer. That she was. And her engagement had lasted long enough to permit her to take up cooking. She had worked in an office right up to the day before her wedding. And Rod had taken all her spare time. But she made a mental note to repeat the dinner a week later and make it one to be remembered as well as they'd be likely to remember the disaster accompanying the first one.

"I think we'd better go and see your mother," she said when they had finished clearing the table and washing the dishes. Rod, with a crocheted apron, had wiped them with as much pleasure as he'd have had polishing a new car. But the hour was not without accident.

HE couldn't keep his eyes off Bertie Lou's lovely arms plunged deep into a pan of suds—she'd added a half cup of soap flakes to the dish water and the foamy consequence all but flooded the sink—her thick, heavy, gleaming hair and, most alluring of all, the exquisite tura of her deliciously round throat.

As a result of his gloating over having such a darling girl as his own he dropped a cup and broke it. Bertie Lou smiled bravely over it but she felt badly because she knew the cup couldn't be replaced. It was from a set her mother had had when first she was married. "Let's wait until it gets dark before we leave the house," he said in answer to Bertie Lou's suggestion that they visit his parents. "I

Old Teammates Are Near Ruin of N. Y. Giants

BY HERBERT W. BARKER (Associated Press Sports Writer) Perhaps the Pittsburgh Pirates are not going anywhere in particular this year but they seem determined to keep the National league championship in the West.

Bowling over the New York Giants Monday for the third time in a row the Corsairs earned a vote of thanks from the St. Louis Cardinals who took occasion to beat the Boston Braves again and stretch their lead to four and one-half games.

A few days ago, the Giants, with a successful intra-sectional series behind them, were but two and a half games back of the Cardinals and had the strategic advantage of having one less defeat than the league-leaders. Today the shoe was on the other foot. The Cards have dropped 29 decisions, the Giants 30.

Burleigh Grimes was the thorn in McGraw's side Monday. The spitballer, traded to the Pirates for Vic Aldridge, has faced his former teammate three times this year and beaten them every time. The score of his latest victory was 5 to 3. Grimes never was in danger after Lloyd Waner hit a home run with one on in the fifth to give Bush's men a 3 to 1 lead.

Two homers, accounting for five runs, featured the Cardinals' 8 to 1 triumph over the Braves. Jim Bottomley hit his 19th of this year with two on and George Harper found one man on the bases when he poled one out for the circuit.

The Cincinnati Reds, holding the third rung in the standing, drew up to within eight percentage points of the Giants, with their third straight decision over the Phillies, 5 to 4. The Phils out-hit the Reds but Ray Kopp bore down when danger threatened.

Dazzy Vance pitched the Brooklyn Robins to their third win in the five-game series with the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 2. Great fielding by the Dodger infield kept Vance out of trouble.

The American League campaign saw the New York Yankees' lead shaved to 11 games when the champions split a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns while the Philadelphia Athletics were crushing Cleveland.

Herb Fenwick shut out the Browns with six hits in the opener at New York, 4 to 0, but four Yankee hurlers were battered for 20 hits in the nightcap which went to St. Louis, 12 to 6. Heinie Manush got six hits during the day, five of them in the second game. Lou Gehrig was banished from the field for disputing a decision in the closing inning.

George Grant's string of seven straight wins was snapped as the Athletics buried the Indians under a 14 to 4 score, making 23 hits.

Al Thoms' bested Sam Jones in a pitching duel at Washington, the Chicago White Sox galloping away with a 3 to 1 decision.

The Boston Red Sox took both ends of a double-bill with Detroit, 4 to 0 and 4 to 2. Jack Russell bested Earl Whitehill in a pitching duel in the opener. Big Ed Morris, the Alabama find won his 12th victory in 16 starts in the second game.

Mickey Walker Not Enthusiastic for Another Fight

Battling Mickey Walker is apparently unwilling to meet Walter Varner in a return match at the Pla-Mor auditorium Thursday night. After the fight last Tuesday night, which ended in the first round with Walker fouling Varner, both boxers agreed to a return bout.

Following the fight Walker left for Wink and was not heard from until last Saturday when he wired here for money to return to meet Varner. The Pla-Mor management wired Walker that they were sending transportation, but a return wire to Rusty Cahill stated that Walker was not in condition to meet Varner.

The Pla-Mor management has wired Walker that they will give him until July 19 to get into condition to meet Varner, and if he fails to appear on that night his forfeit will be given to some charitable institution. Walker had already taken a count of nine in the first round of last week's fight, and was apparently groggy when he fouled Varner. He has not been beaten in a local ring in his twenty fights and apparently does not want to suffer his first at the hands of the veteran Varner.

Wichita Falls Is Hitting Again in Oldtime Fervor

(By The Associated Press.) The Wichita Falls heavy guns that often were silenced during the first half of the Texas league pennant chase are barking with last year's vigor. They laid down a barrage of long and short base hits Monday, and beat Dallas, 5 to 4, in the opener of a two-game series.

Blankenship started on the mound for Dallas, and got by fairly well until the fifth inning, although he gave up one run in the second. In the fifth, however, the Spudder attack broke loose, drove two runs across the plate, and sent Blankenship to the showers. In the eighth, the Spudders picked up two more runs, one of which was a home run by Jenkins.

An eighth inning rally that netted seven runs enabled San Antonio to defeat Waco, 12 to 7, and step into third place in the percentage column. Both clubs hit the ball hard, however, the Bears getting sixteen safeties and the Cubs twelve.

Behind the great hurling of Paul Wachtel allowed but two hits, and struck out five batters. The Houston-Beaumont game was rained out.

Pitches 36 Balls In Nine Innings; Is It Record?

Is it a world's record? Ed Gober, veteran baseball player. Sunday afternoon took the mound for the Athletes in a game against the Carpenters and in the nine innings pitched 36 balls across the plate.

In the first six innings the veteran pitched 16 balls. The first man up went out on the first ball pitched. The second man singled, and the third man hit into a double play on the first ball pitched. Four double plays assisted Gober in hanging up this record.

The final score was 11 to 8, the Carpenters getting their three runs in the last inning on a walk two doubles and a single. Gober allowed four hits during the game. He was using a slow splitter which the Carpenters were hitting, but were unable to drive the ball any place except into a fielder's hand.

Batteries for the game: Athletes, Gober, and Warwick; Carpenters, Lane White, and Newton.

Paddock Clears His Record With Many Affidavits

NEW YORK, July 10.—The rocky path of Charley Paddock's third bid for Olympic sprint honors has been cleared of its last obstacle.

Exonerated by the registration committee of the Amateur Athletic Union of professionalism, he will sail tomorrow for Amsterdam with the rest of the American team on the S. S. Roosevelt.

Paddock's vindication came after he had conferred with Daniel Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., and Robert Weaver, president of the Southern Amateur Association of the A. A. U., explaining in detail just how his picture-tour was arranged. The sprinter reiterated that he had received remuneration neither for his work in the film itself nor for his personal appearance in theatres showing it. He supported this assertion with affidavits.
