Grandparents go to school!

Students at St. Matthews Episcopal Church School shared activities with their grandparents at the school this morning. Coleton Bolin, a 4-year-old at the school, is assisted by his grandmother, Gladys Henson of Perryton, in making a scarecrow during the class today. Grandparents from across the Panhandle as well as Oklahoma joined their grandchildren in learning what the children are learning in school. Grandparents also demonstrated toys which they played with as children.

Capital murder indictment returned in bait shop slaying

By NANCY YOUNG Managing Editor

DUMAS - Meeting in special session, the Moore County Grand Jury returned an indictment charging John Griffin, 18, with capital murder in the bait shop death of Mary Kelsay, 61, of Borger on Oct. 2. His bond was set at $500,000.

According to a Thursday afternoon press release issued by Moore County Sheriff H.T. "Ted" Montgomery, a second subject, Michael Beams, 20, will be held as a material witness in the case.

Texas Ranger Jay Foster of Dumas, who has headed the investigation, said both Griffin and Beams are from Stinnett.

Kelsay was found dead at Ross' Roost bait shop near the intersection of FM1319 and FM1913 in Moore County with a gunshot to the head, according to law enforcement. She was employed as a clerk at the store. Griffin and Beams were arrested in Las Vegas, Nev., on Oct. 11 and returned to Hutchinson County where they were being held on unauthorized use of a motor vehicle charges, according to Texas Ranger Gary Henderson of Pampa.

Henderson said information received from other officers and people in the community led to Beams and Griffin being sought for questioning in the

"We had to corroborate the information given to us," he said.

An investigation against the pair into stolen guns, forgeries and burglary of a residence is being conducted by the Stinnett Police Department and Hutchinson County Sheriff's Department

According to the release, Montgomery said his office will not comment on related evidence, statements or other matters affecting the case until it is brought to trial. District Attorney Barry Blackwell is in charge of the prosecution.

Texas Rangers have ruled out any connection between the still-unsolved 1999 murder of a 76year-old store clerk in Canadian in Hemphill County and the death of the Borger woman.

Imogene French, 76, was discovered lying dead in a locked storeroom on June 6, 1999, at the Oasis Truck Stop on the north end of Canadian, according to The Pampa News files.

Parents will speak about decision to give son's organs

Mike and Rose Lowery of Pampa are to be guest speakers at a public meeting on organ and tissue donation at 2 p.m., Sunday, at Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan.

The Lowerys are scheduled to speak about their decision to donate their son's organs. Jodie Patterson, hospital liaison for LifeGift Organ Donation Center's Amarillo office plans to discuss donation issues and how donation impacts both donor families and recipients.

Five years ago, the Pampa couple donated the organs of their 15-year-old son, Jackson May, after he died when a rogue tissue in his brain that blocked the flow of spinal fluid from his head.

"When we went to the hospital that morning, I knew he would not be coming home – it was a mom thing," Mrs. Lowery said in a LifeGift newsletter article. "I wanted Jackson to be able to leave a legacy behind, and this is when I approached a nurse about organ donation."

After discussing the idea with her husband and Jackson's three brothers, Mrs. Lowery said the family agreed that donation was the right thing to do.

Career comes unexpectedly

Editor's Note: Paulette Kirksey is one of three women featured "Women in Business" a special feature on pages 5 and 7 in today's edition.

By DAVID BOWSER Staff Writer

Paulette Kirksey hadn't planned a career in the business world. When she was thrust into the world of business, it was under devastating conditions.

But Paulette said she has learned a great deal going through the ordeals she has faced. She said that anybody setting out in business needs to determine what they want out of their lives, set their goals and work toward those goals.

For woman in business, she added, "Always be a lady."

As the last decade of the 20th Century dawned, Paulette was married to Malcom Hinkle, the owner of a commercial plumbing, going to have a good time. heating and air conditioning business and M&H Leasing, an ice machine sales and service company.

They had been married about 10 years when on the July 4th weekend, 1992, Paulette's life changed drastically.

Malcom and Paulette had been at their Rockport home, near Corpus Christi, fishing. As they were leaving that weekend to return to Pampa, Malcom told Paulette that he had some loose ends to tie up, but he expected to do that by the end of the year.

"He said, 'I figure I've got about 10 good years left," Paulette said "He said, 'I can promise you one thing. When we get home, by the end of the year, I'm going to close the plumbing, heating and air conditioning business. We will keep M&H Leasing. Then we are going to run and play and spend that 10 years together. We're just ort, coming home to Pampa. "Malcom had had by-pass surgery at two different times, but we thought he was in wonderful health," Paulette said.

After his death, Paulette met with their attorney, accountant and banker and found out what the loose ends were

"I felt like the last thing I could do for Malcom was try to tie those things up," she said, "and to do that, I was going to have to keep the businesses going."

She went to the office and talked to all of the employees, about 40 at that time.

"I talked to all of them," she said. "I told them exactly what the situation was. I told them that if they wanted to try to keep everything together, I would give it my best shot." They stood with her.

raices" means "return to your roots."

Tony Aguirre, a longtime McAllen resident who is now a successful businessman there, says that idea is helping to fuel a population boom in the Lower McAllen Economic Development Corp Rio Grande Valley. People who left the area a decade ago looking for jobs are returning to fill positions in a growing job market.

Laredo and the McAllen-Edinburg-Mission areas tally fewer than three-quarters of a million residents combined. However, they posted the nation's second and third highest percentages of growth, respectively, for the period between 1990 and 1999, according to Census Bureau figures be built on the second floor, the city manager said. In a letter to Vickie Morton, who manages the utility billing/payment department, THC historic preservation consultant Bradford Patterson said that plan would be detrimental to the character of the building.

"The historic City Hall is a treasure worthy of careful preservation," Patterson wrote. "It is apparent that the city has been a good steward of the building, undertaking rehabilitation work as needed through the years.

Patterson said he will make himself available to help develop a solution that meets the city's needs at the same time protecting the building's Texas Historic Landmark designation.

The decision to combine the payment offices came as a part of money-saving action during the last budget year that included 11 permanent city positions cuts, Eskridge said.

Putting the offices together, and cross-training the employees in all payment functions, will be more efficient and take fewer workers than having separate offices, said the city manager. He noted that cross-training is under way.

Also in the plan for the future is a central computer system that will bring all of the payment functions together on one system.

The drive-in window will be maintained and the central office will be built on the first floor (commonly referred to as the basement) of City Hall, Eskridge said. Some storage space for the police department will be incorporated into the new design and the storage will be moved to the second floor of city hall.

One of the hardest offices for the public to find is probably the most visited one - the utility office, said Eskridge.

He says the payment center will be more open and easy to access making doing business with the city easier for the public.

There will be stair and elevator access to the new payment center that will most likely be fronted by

Eskridge said figures are not yet available for the project's cost but said, "We're talking about a counter, taking out a few walls, that sort of thing ... so we are not talking about major money."

He said once the revised plans are more formalized, he'll have contractors review them and also will submit the plans to the Texas Historical Commission for its review.

interested in computers and pretty adept at working with them, so I combined this interest with my love for graphic design and began producing small Web pages for friends. One of the pages I designed was seen by a large New York advertising company, and it started throwing me clients so I could make some extra cash. Their in-house designer was a whiz with pen and paper, but keyboard and mouse were foreign concepts to him.

Within two months, I was able to quit my full-time job and design full time, and was earning more than before. I loved the work and didn't mind the deadlines. My family seemed pleased that I was doing well in a job I enjoyed.

Three months later, I got a call from the executive V.P. of the firm. He asked if I wanted to be the new V.P. of the newly created computer graphics development department.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

Paulette Kirksey: Savvy in business but still a lady

"The employees, I couldn't have done it without those people," Paulette said. "They're wonderful. They're like my family. They're an extended family. They keep me young."

She kept the plumbing, heating and air conditioning business open for about four years after Malcom died, but the company was involved in major construction projects, and Paulette said that was beyond what she felt capable of doing. Consequently, as employees left over the next four years, they were not replaced.

"Everything was geared toward closing that company down," she said. "When the last employee found a job and went to work somewhere else, I closed the plumbing, heating and air conditioning business.

Paulette said M&H Leasing is something she can handle even though she has customers from Johnson City, Kan., to Pecos, and from Gallop, N.M., to Dallas.

"Our biggest customer is Allsup's Convenience Stores," she Paulette said she has learned to take care of her customers, but she says she wasn't alone, and that was the key to her success.

Even today, after the plumbing, heating and air conditioning business closed down, the leasing company employees are a valuable part of her extended family.

"I am involved in a lot of civic things, but when I'm involved, my whole company's involved," Paulette said. "They've taken on a lot of pretty big projects and I say, 'We can't.' They always figure out a way we can.

Paulette said she's had a lot of help through the years from a variety of people.

"I had wonderful advice from Floyd Watson, from Vanessa Buzzard and from Jerry Wilson," she said. "They all worked handin-hand with me to guide me."

Wilkerson told Paulette that she could run the business.

"He said, 'Just get your feet wet, and you can handle this," Paulette said. "He was such an encourager. He guided me through what I needed to do."

That was important because when Malcom died, the company's license died with him.

Her son, Joe, and one of the employees went to the state capitals in the different states where they did business and got the necessary licenses so they could stay in business. Her daughter, Mary Ann, who worked for another company, came to help.

"When Malcom died, my two children stepped up and said, 'Mom, what ever we need to do to help, we are here to help," Paulette said. "I could not have made it without my two children. I couldn't have made it without my parents saying we'll help you any way we can.

Paulette still remembers the day she went to her father, R.B. "Jigs' Cooke, in tears.

"I told him, 'Daddy, I don't want to go to that office," Paulette said. "He said, 'Polly, you're going to have to go to that office.' He said, 'If I have to, I'll come up there every day and hold your hand, but you're going to have to go."

Her family stood by her. Her don't think I've ever heard them employees stayed with her. Her Malcom died. friends and advisors were there for her.

> "There were a lot of people who helped," she said of those dark days. "Nobody bailed out on me. ed that I was." Nobody left us in a crunch. God worked a lot of miracles."

Today, she runs M&H Leasing with 12 employees.

Personal Services, one of America's fastest-growing small businesses, built its business by employing women from the start. The two women who run the Pampa office, Shelli Styles-Gaviria and Jamilou Garren, are a vital part of the company, according to Melisa Bedunah, owner. Ms. Styles is the area account executive serving the Pampa and Plainview offices, while Ms. Garren is the customer service specialists for the Pampa Office.

Both joined the company during 2000, and have done outstanding jobs, Beduanh said. All of the company's offices are currently managed by women, she added.

Personal Services has offices in 12 Texas cities and maintains additional offices in some client companies. The company was named one of the fastest-growing small businesses in America for 1998 and 1999 by Inc. magazine — one of only 12 Texas companies to receive the honor two years in a row.

According to Bedunah, more and more Americans, many of whom are seeking their first job or re-entering the workforce, are attracted to the benefits they realize from assigned employment:

For a growing number of individuals, temporary employment represents an ideal work solution, Bedunah said. "We're proud to be involved in an industry that provides so much benefit to people, to businesses and to our national economy. And to work so closely with the many capable women in our company is an added bonus."

Pampa woman calls bowling alley 'home'

A bowling alley is a familiar setting to Joann West. She grew up in the business as her mother managed several bowling alleys in southeast Texas.

"I was 10 or 11 years old when my mother (Martha Casciola-Sherrer) started managing bowling centers around southeast Texas," West said. "When I was a teenager, I started working at one of the front desks."

West took about a 10-year break from the bowling business when her husband Ralph was transferred to Borger in 1981. They moved to Pampa two years ago and purchased Harvester Lanes last

Christian living is characterized by change

In a day when great stress is being placed upon adult education in the social, political, economic, industrial and every other area of life, a special responsibility is laid upon the church to become a teacher. The whole world has become a classroom! Through magazines, newspapers, television and radio, learners of every age are appropriating truths, half-truths and "no truths." Out of this maze of learning is coming knowledge that is both enriching and damaging life.

The accessibility to learning is putting many previously had been reserved for comparatively few. If we, in our society, are to avoid developing one-sided or fragmentary personalities, the Christian community must do its part.

Adults in our world desperately need to be led into new areas of religious life and experience as well as new areas of religious knowledge. Many leaders in adult education in the church fear that a chasm to exist? Perhaps we should remember that is the problem of personal growth. education is incomplete when it only equips the adult with knowledge and skill in making a better better life, is essentially a problem of the Christian people into contact with experiences in life that living. There must also be that education which provides the learner with knowledge and skill for a living better.

How shall we live better? In a broad sense, this concerns our problems of living and working together, intelligently and in good-will. While we strive to build a more worthy society, this is the problem of human relations in an individual sense. It's concerning the person himself, it concerns his widening chasm has developed between Christian inner equipment of attitudes and motives, for it and secular adult education. Is it necessary for this deals with the thing he wishes to do and to be. This religion. It is out of a person's concept of Christian continue to take place within you, you can also see principles and values that he determines what the those changes beyond you. There are national and better life is for himself and for the society in which things. " (I Corinthians 13:1 1) For the average person this process is not as easy as it sounds. Not every adult is mature. Moreover, every adult is immature in some respects. Even though a person has grown up in the sense of becoming an adult, he is not yet finished with physical, mental and physiological changes.

The New Testament teaches that man is not grown up but is in the process of growing. The Apostle Paul expressed this idea in a rather penetrating manner when he wrote., " ... I count not myself to have apprehended, I press toward the mark ... " (Phil 3:13-14) It is clearly evident that the scriptures admonish us to continue in learning. Can you think of some other reason for doing so? Consider these reasons:

A changing world makes it necessary to continue to learn as the world becomes smaller with jet travel, space exploration and mass communication. some adults feel overwhelmed and tend to withdraw. Such an isolationist stance may cause these adults to become narrow-minded and prejudiced. Restriction breeds fear and fear conquers the world-mindedness and concern that Jesus wanted us to develop.

This kind of fear also tends to accent man's sense of smallness in a complex and highly technical world. Yet this is precisely the kind of world in which personality and life are developing. The changing nature of our world requires that adults maintain a vigorous idealism. At the same time, they need practical ability for dealing with the realities of life. The Christian believes that the needed power is available through Jesus Christ, who said, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly. " (John 10:10)

Change is inherent in humans — we cannot escape change. Although a person may carry the same name throughout life, he is not always the same person-physically, psychologically, socially, mentally or spiritually. He is a changing person. Are your needs, interests, attitude, abilities and ideals the same as they were 10 years ago? Obviously not!

The changes that have taken place in you have caused you to rearrange your mode of living, to alter views, and to adjust to new relationships. Change and growth cannot be separated from life because they are characteristic of life. An individual has only to look at an old photograph of himself or to read from a diary of school days to see obvious evidences of change. A person can neither sincerely desires to become like Christ. When a deny nor escape the outcome of change inherent in international changes. In our nation the economic and social structure is changing. Labor is develop-"But when I became a man I put away childish ing into a powerful political force. Racial intolerance is culling at the foundations of democracy. A growing conflict between nationalism and international cooperation is emerging. It is unlikely that you will relate yourself to the changing world if you are content to remain where you are in established patterns of thought and actions.

The very nature of learning demands change. Perhaps it is now time for us to consider a definition of "learning." In most definitions of "learning" there are some common words like "change," "behavior," "practice" or "training." Learning could be variously defined. Perhaps an acceptable definition is a change or origination of behavior resulting from experience.

Unfortunately, the psychologists of the 20th Century labored under the false notion that adults were incapable of learning. They believed that outside his own business, an adult could learn nothing after he reached age 25 or so. This mistaken notion was seriously challenged during the early part of this century after very careful and extensive scientific investigation. Psychologists discovered that learning could continue throughout life. Though there may occur some measurable decline in speed or rate of learning ability in advancing years, this decline is due primarily to lack of prac-

Continual use of a person's mental abilities causes them to be of greater value throughout life. Adults can find assurance in the fact that there are certain faculties of the mind that tend to improve with age. Can you identify some of these? Did you think of faculties such as vocabulary, judgment, reason, rote memory and creative imagination? Having recognized that learning is possible as long as life lasts, adults by the millions are involved in all types of learning experiences. These experiences cause adults to differ from their former selves.

In summary, we may conclude that Christian living is characterized by change.

Christian educators believe that a person cannot progress so far down any path of thinking or action that he cannot be transformed by the power of God. Christian conversion is a definite change. The Apostle Paul referred to it as a change to a new life (2 Corinthians 5:17). The search for this new life is a creative act of the mind involving change in the person who learns. After conversion takes place, the Holy Spirit continues to bring change. The believer is instructed in righteousness, convicted of sin, and led to faith and actions. A redeemed adult believing adult submits himself to the Lordship of Christ, the change which occurs in his thoughts

Corn company unable to locate some unapproved grain

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The company that developed a variety of gene-altered corn linked to a nationwide recall of taco shells is trying to recover 9 million bushels of the grain that may be headed to food companies.

The corn, known as StarLink, was not approved for human consumption because of questions about its potential to cause allergic reactions. Federal officials describe the health risk as remote; Starlink is approved only for animal food or industrial uses.

"We're doing everything we can that's humanly possible to try to track that corn down," Aventis CropScience spokesman Rick Rountree said Thursday.

The missing grain represents about 10 percent of this year's crop

Mills nationwide are starting to test incoming corn and unshipped flour for signs of Starlink, said Betsy Faga, president of the North American Millers Association. She was unaware of any positive tests.

Archer Daniels Midland Co., a leading grain handler and processor, began testing deliveries at its elevators a week ago and has turned away "a handful of trucks out of hundreds," said company spokesman Larry Cunningham.

ConAgra Foods Inc., one of the nation's biggest food makers, stopped making corn flour at a mill in Kansas on Oct. 11 because it may have received some of the StarLink.

The corn found in taco shells was traced to a single mill in Texas. Most of the seed for the corn was sold by an Iowa-based company, Garst Seed, and 40 percent of it was planted in the state, the Des Moines Register reported Friday.

This means huge problems for Iowa's more than 150 grain elevators. They're bulging with freshly harvested corn, but so far it's not clear how much of it may have been commingled with StarLink.

"The vast majority of this corn is controlled," Agriculture Department spokeswoman Susan McAvoy said. "We're working with Aventis and vigorously attempting to locate the remainder."

Aventis has canceled its government license to market the crop and agreed to reimburse the Agriculture Department for the cost of buying up all of this year's harvest.

Aventis' inability to find all of the corn leaves food processors up in the air, said Gene Grabowski, a spokesman for the Grocery Manufacturers of America. "Everyone understands that consumer sensitivity on t's issue is highly important even if there is no evisaid. dence of harm

Among the co. | products in grocery stores are taco shells, corn chips, and breakfast cereals.

Aventis was required by the Environmental Protection Agency to make sure that farmers did not sell the corn for food use. Company officials now acknowledge some farmers either were not told of the restriction or forgot about it.

Farmers did not buy the seed directly from Aventis but from seed companies that sold it under license from Aventis, based in Research Triangle Park, N.C. Rountree said there was a "breakdown in communications" between the farmers, Aventis and the

About 2,000 farmers this year grew StarLink, which is expected to account for about 0.4 percent of the nation's total corn harvest.

Each of the growers was contacted by the company and given the option of selling the corn to the government or keeping it on their farm. The grain that has been sold is being tracked through the ele-

"You have a lot of guys who are so mad they don't want to deal with USDA or Aventis, and they don't know what they're going to do about those farmers," said Tom Jennings, an official in the Illinois Agriculture Department.

Iowa's attorney general, Tom Miller, said he is trying to get Aventis to reimburse farmers who lost money on grain that was mixed with the StarLink corn.

StarLink is one of several varieties of corn that contains a bacterium gene that makes it toxic to insect pests.

Former insurance commissioner may have broken law, audit finds dozens of insurance companies accused of wrongdoing rather than fining them, and may have agreed illegally to keep terms confidential, the Bureau of State Audits reported Thursday.

"These practices misled the public," the auditors said. "The department prevented policyholders and consumers from obtaining critical information about the business practices of insurers.

Quackenbush, a Republican elected to a second term in 1998, stepped down this summer under threat of impeachment. He allegedly let insurers avoid billions in fines after a 1994 Los Angeles earthquake by allowing the companies to donate far less to a nonprofit fund instead. The Bureau of State Audits said it

FOOTBALL.

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) - For the first time since 1996, No. 10 Kansas State is coming off a home loss.

The Wildcats (6-1, 2-1 Big 12) will host Texas Tech in a regionally televised contest a week after No. 3 Oklahoma broke their 25-game home winning streak with a 41-31 upset that severely damaged their national championship hopes.

The main objective, besides getting back on the winning track, will be to improve the shabby tackling that allowed Oklahoma ball carriers to break downfield for additional yardage on play after play.

"We have addressed it and put emphasis on it," said Kansas State coach Bill Snyder. "We probably have not been as demanding as we need to be. We have got to put players into a position that they become accountable for their practice habits as it relates to tackling."

Snyder said he counted 17 missed tackles and that the tackling problems have been an issue "since halftime of the (season opener)."

"My concern is that we become a better tackling football team," Snyder said. "If you go back to the press conferences that we have had since the beginning of the season, I think virtually every time I have said that we did not tackle as well as we should. "

Internationals rally in President's Cup

By TIM DAHLBERG AP Sports Writer

GAINESVILLE, Va. (AP) - A day after being shut out in opening matches, the International team came roaring back Friday with some lopsided wins to get back in the Presidents Cup.

Michael Campbell and Retief Goosen won the first match of the day 4 and 3 over Hal Sutton and Paul Azinger, and the International team added a second point minutes later when Greg Norman and Nick Price blew out Jim Furyk and David

Still on the course, Tiger Woods and Notah Begay were 2 down through 12 holes to Carlos Franco and Shigeki Maruyama, while the only U.S. pairing winning a match was David Love III and Phil Mickelson, who were beating Ernie Els and Five points were at stake in the morning best ball matches, and five more in the afternoon alternate shot competition.

The International team trailed 5-0 going into the second day of play after losing all five alternate shot matches on Thursday. But it was apparent early in Friday's matches that this would be anothmuch of the morning the International team was leading in four of the five matches.

"It's a huge boost to our confidence," Campbell said. "It was big to the rest of the team behind us." A day earlier, American players had more problems with equipment and apparel than with the International team. Duval broke a 7-iron and couldn't wear the same shirt as his teammates. Kirk Triplett had on the wrong hat.

On the course, though, everyone matched and everything worked. So well, in fact, that the U.S. team went got a sweep that surprised even the man who may have thought he'd seen it all in golf. "In my wildest dreams I could not have expected 5-0," U.S. captain Ken Venturi said. "We had great shots at the right time."

A day that began with a Maori war dance by New Zealand's Michael Campbell ended with U.S. players smiling and congratulating each other on the 18th green after winning all five of the alter-lenge to the other side - and it was one the Americans eagerly accepted.

tain Peter Thomson said. "They're all going to pull their socks up and play a bit better, with a lower score. And we'll see what happens then."

Three of the matches were decided before the 18th hole, and in the other two, the American pairs needed only to tie the final hole to win.

It reminded Mickelson of a more intense day of international competition only 13 months ago.

"It was a similar feeling that we had Sunday at last year's Ryder Cup, where the idea was win those first four matches, square this thing off and give us the momentum to win the cup," Mickelson said. "By winning decisively, we felt we give our team a little bit of momentum and confidence."

Begay, fighting nerves of not only playing on his first national team but playing with Tiger Woods as a partner, noticed.

"It sort of allowed me to be a little more settled because I was very nervous for the first few holes and for most of the day," Begay said. "I was glad to see we had at least one point."

Begay's play was enough to earn him another pairing with his former Stanford roommate in a best ball match Friday against Maruyama and Behind Woods and Begay were Duval and Love, who were locked in a tight match with Nick Price Campbell and Goosen set the pace early, and for and Carlos Franco. Duval was playing with a borrowed 7-iron after breaking his on a tree, and used it to knock it stiff on the par-3 11th hole.

Duval was also wearing a long sleeve shirt instead of the team uniform, while Triplett, who usually wears a floppy hat, got the wrong baseballtype hat out for the day.

Triplett and Stewart Cink, both rookies, played the best golf of any twosome, making seven birdies in what is an unfamiliar and difficult alternate-shot format for the players. "He may keep that hat because they made seven birdies," Venturi said. "I don't think he knows he had the wrong hat on. I wasn't going to tell him anything. The whitewash was especially sweet for a U.S.

team that some had suggested was not terribly interested in the Presidents Cup, which began only in 1994 as a way to have a national team between Ryder Cups. For one day, at least, it was a much different feeling from the one the U.S. team had two years ago at Royal Melbourne, where the Americans trailed The war dance was supposed to lay down a chal- from the opening matches and sustained a humiliating loss, 20 1/2-11 1/2.

"We've been looking forward to this day," "It was basically a shocker," International cap- Mickelson said. "We were ready. It showed."

It's time for college football 2000 halftime report open offense to perfection. The fifthbest start since their national-title season of 1981. Like Heupel, Dantzler is on the short list of Heisman contenders. 819 yards rushing.

4. Notre Dame: With coach Bob Davie's job hinging on the first five games of the season, the Fighting Irish went 3-2 - beating Texas A&M, Purdue Nebraska (in overtime) and Michigan LoVecchio. Davie's job appears safe, and with the soft part of the schedule remaining, the Irish (4-2) could end up

5. Big East Conference: The so-called weak link of the six major leagues in the BCS family has Virginia Tech at No. has a good chance to play for the national title (the Hokies made it to the title game in '99). Also, Pittsburgh is 4-1, Boston College 4-2 and even Temple has a bowl shot at 4-3 - the most wins

Honorable mention: No. 11 TCU (5-0) and running back LaDainian Tomlinson, the nation's leading rusher; ified for a bowl - which would be their Big 12 Conference for having three 10th in 107 seasons - are ranked No. 18 teams - Nebraska, Oklahoma and Kansas State in the Top 10.

He was right. First, freshman Brett Cimorelli won the job, but an injury sidelined him early on. Matt Munyon took over and missed the biggest kick of the season so far - a 49yarder that sailed wide right as time expired in the Seminoles' 27-24 loss to Miami. He also missed a short field goal earlier in the game, leaving him 3 of 8. In last week's win over Duke, Chance Gwaltney replaced Munyon and hit 9 of 9 extra points - but missed a 37-yard field goal attempt. 2. Penn State coach Joe Paterno:

Entering the season, JoePa needed seven wins to pass Bear Bryant to become major college's winningest coach. His Lions are 2-5 - the school's worst start since 1936. Toledo, Pittsburgh and Minnesota are among Penn State's conquerers. What's wrong? Is it the retirement of defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky after 30 years? Quarterback Rashard Casey's pending legal problems? Not enough talent? Probably a little of all three.

3. Texas coach Mack Brown: His decision not to decide on a starting quarterback may be the reason the Longhorns are just 4-2. The theory seemed to be that sophomore Chris Simms would start, leave shortly thereafter for Major Applewhite, and somehow it would all work itself out and Texas would win, win, win. Well the 'Horns lost at Stanford, then were embarrassed by Oklahoma 63-14. After that one, Brown apologized to Texas fans everywhere for the abysmal effort. Now that Applewhite, last season's co-Big 12 no Big Ten teams in the Top 10 for the first time since 1990. In the SEC, the usual title suspects are suspect themselves: defending champ Alabama is 3-3 after opening the season ranked No. 3; No. 8 Florida lost to Mississippi State and still has Georgia and Florida State to play; and Tennessee is 2-3 with losses to Florida, LSU and Georgia. On Saturday, Alabama is at Tennessee. Purdue, with the inside track to the Rose Bowl, is tied with three others, including Minnesota

Honorable mention: Colorado (1-5); BYU, 3-4 in coach LaVell Edwards' 29th and final season.

BREAKTHROUGHS

1. Oklahoma (6-0): The 41-31 win over K-State has the Sooners in the national title hunt for the first time since '88.
