Mrs. Roosevelt and Mussolini are getting very close together under the surface of things. It will have to be denied for diplomatic reasons but it is nevertheless true that some extremely confidential notes have recently been exchanged between them.

Exchange

The underlying trouble with the coming London Conference rests on one point, exchange stabilization. European nations privately look on it as a purely Anglo-American problem. France and Italy are quite well satisfied with things as they are.

By EDWARD J. NEIL, Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK—The backdrop of another big heavyweight battle—fantastic credence of crowds and color, thrills and action—slid down to complete the setting for the fifteen round duel of Max Schmeling and Max Baer in the Yankee stadium Thursday night.

All the old essentials were there for another episode in the list of ring struggles that have raged over the years in the big American league ball park, even though this time the scenery lacked the gaudiness of the affluence it knew in the days of Tex Rickard and the multi-million dollar gates.

There is no heavyweight title at stake, the special lure Rickard used to dangle before the eyes of the faithful, but the attractiveness of the young and punishing puncher, one a former champion, the other a reckless headlong giant, seems to have excited the populace as few other battles in years.

Jack Dempsey, Rickard's greatest fighting asset and now his would-be successor as a promoter, believed that his first metropolitan venture would draw a crowd of at least 60,000 and gate receipts close to $300,000, a financial triumph considering the times and ticket prices which ranged from $1 to $10. A complete sell out of the ball park, something that never yet has happened for a fight, would gross $400,000.

Baer Moves to City

Baer, the curly headed Californian, moved into town from his training camp at Atlantic City and Schmeling rested at Lake Swanton.

Baer, only 24 as compared with Schmeling's 27 years, is one of the ring's perfect physical specimens with height, reach and weight on his side. He expects to scale 210 pounds at 2 p. m. Thursday, with Schmeling about 190. But though the Californian has whipped all but Sharkey, Primo Carners, and Schmeling in his rise through the past two years, he still lacks the experience, the defense and the accuracy of the black browed tauton. He is a ponderous hitter, like Firpo, and has never been knocked down, but even the most rabid Schmeling admirers do not believe Schmeling can get his man in the two rounds it took Dempsey to finish the Argentine.

The main bout is scheduled for between 7:30 and 8 p. m. (est).

CLOSE CALL FOR BAER AS AUTO BLOWS TIRE AT 35

She signed the joint resolution of the house and senate submitting a constitutional amendment under which school district taxes may be levied in lands owned by the University of Texas.

Trying To Be Friend Costs Negro Jail Term

The jailer found two lead bottles of home brew in the package. He allowed Hyasaw to make the visit— indefinitely.

the compilation of organized minorities, if it has to make payments which are unjustified and against public policy, then the government is not sovereign and it will not command the confidence of the nation.

No one would wish at this time to see a great conflict between Congress and the President. But such a conflict would be preferable to a surrender by the President. For if he surrendered, every one would know that the bonds of his authority had been broken, and that the victory of one organized minority would give the signal for an assault by all the others.

The position in which Mr. Roosevelt finds himself is not unlike that in which Mr. Hoover found himself four years ago this month. Mr.
 Hoover also enjoyed a high prestige. Mr. Hoover also had called a special session, and had presented it with a program. Then it developed that under the pressure of tariff interests, Congress was preparing to ignore the President and rewrite the whole tariff law.
 Mr. Hoover was offered a chance to fight that move. He did not fight it. That proved to the representatives of special interests in Congress that they could safely ignore him and from that time forward the Hoover administration, though it had an immense Republican majority, was rendered helpless.

Youth's View Of War

The Intercollegiate Disarmament Council recently polled more than 21,000 American college students on the attitude they would take if the United States should get into another war. Nearly 39 per cent of the students who replied asserted that they would never participate in any war. A slightly smaller number said that they would fight only if the United States were actually invaded.

As evidence of a changing attitude on the part of youth toward war, this is extremely interesting.
 Probably, however, it does not represent as much of a pacifistic tendency as appears on the surface.
 Youth is impetuous, vulnerable to strong emotional appeals. It is a safe bet that a good many of these lads who insist they will never fight would find their way to a recruiting station pretty promptly if we actually went to war.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The President Is Challenged

It is generally recognized that while the new provisions for veterans under the Economy Bill cure one of the most scandalous abuses in American political life, the present regulations are imperfect, work some injustices and will need to be amended. The President has been among the first to admit this, and measures have already been taken to work out a fairer application of the law. There is, therefore, no real excuse for the action of the senate in striking at the whole pension reform, unless it is the intention of these senators to revive a pension system which had become intolerably expensive and intolerably unjust.

The President has no choice but to resist with all the power at his command any new legislation which strikes at the fundamental principles of his great reform. It is one of the foundation stones of his whole program. Without retrenchment on pensions, the effective balancing of the budget of normal expenditures will require another tax program over and above the taxes now levied and the new taxes which Congress will have to levy before it adjourns. The balancing of the budget of normal expenditures has been accepted by the country and by the world as the proof that the president of his control of so vital an element of the financial situation, it is deflationary and destructive.

The issue presented is not a matter of dollars and cents. It may well be that some part of the old payments ought to be restored. The issue is whether the President shall restore them after careful examination and with the help of disinterested advisers or whether random Congressional majorities actuated by political panic and the pressure of lobbies shall vote great sums of money regardless of the effect upon the Treasury and upon the whole nation. The essence of sound government finance is to have all the items of expenditure under responsible control. When they are under control, a government can borrow and it can tax for any purpose which it considers publicly desirable. But if a government does not have its expenditures under control, if it has to pay tribute to foreign nations or, under

Miss Sara Freeland Tells How To Remedy Face Depression And Look Prosperous

Girls, an old friend is back.

Miss Sara Freeland, friend of complexions and most decidedly not a saleswoman, is again in the city demonstrating the well-known and fragrant Barbara Gould beauty products for Cunningham & Phillips.

One thing alone is worth the whole trouble of making an appointment and getting beautiful: this is Miss Freeland's notes on what shades of rouge, lip stick and what-have-you, she uses on your particular face.

You know how these representatives do. Put something on your eyes, rub something on your cheeks, apply a red pencil to your lips and you go away looking like you never did before. If you don't care for the results, you don't mind knowing the exact names of everything—unless you want to avoid them. If you do, like your looks and can brave the world with the inward satisfaction of having had a miracle accomplished on your face, then you would like to keep up that miracle. You want to know exactly the name of everything, the shade and what to ask the clerk for; maybe you haven't the money to buy just now, but will later. It's mighty convenient to have the information where you can refer to it.

Miss Freeland has a big assortment of bottles and jars on her dresser. A nice lot of little gadgets to interest you while she is talking around. But the latest thing is how few of them she uses on each face. When you hear her say do this and don't do that, then you realize that Barbara Gould is not putting out a cure-for-all but individual creams.

I believe that of all the things I liked that Miss Freeland did to my face to make it look better was her careful use of red coloring. I went out feeling that I looked the way I wanted to look all the time and not—as I have sometimes—as if my face had been treated like a board, and I really ought to hunt the nearest washroom.

Ask Her Questions
Miss Freeland knows a lot. You can ask her questions about all sorts of things to do with the complexion that have little relationship to creams. She will not try to sell you a remedy for them, all she will even hint that soap and water will work wonders.

Miss Freeland hopes to make Big Spring every spring and fall, at least twice a year. For this reason it is nice to make her acquaintance. If you are the average woman you need the contact to keep up your enthusiasm over your looks and their possibilities. For in good looks, as well as in business matters, a little enthusiasm goes a long way.

Maybe you have decided that you can't cure the world's depression, but one thing is sure you can cure a lot of your own personal depression by getting interested in that eyes, those nose, them face of yours. You might even attain prosperity that way—who knows?

Golden Jubilee Celebration Set By Del Rio Folk

DEL RIO — A Golden Jubilee, commemorating the 50th anniversary of the establishment of a post office in Del Rio, will be staged July 1-6 inclusive.

A varied program to provide entertainment for the six day event will include mid-way attractions headed by the George J. Loos carnival, baseball games, boat racing, bathing beauty revues, dancing, a ball fight in Villa Acuna, Mexico, and many other events in which the people of west and southwest Texas are invited to participate.

The monster celebration is sponsored by the Del Rio and Villa Acuna Chamber of Commerce and the business interests of the two towns have combined to make the affair one long to be remembered.

Del Rio will "take the lid off" for the Golden Jubilee. The mid-way and carnival attractions will be placed on main street, and a veritable fun fiesta will be staged.

Ector Wells May Receive Pipe Outlet

Humble Pipe Line Co. is surveying for a 6-inch, 24-mile pipe line from the Penn pool in southeastern Ector county to Stanolind Oil & Gas Co.'s two producers on the Dick Cowden ranch in northern Ector, it was reported but unconfirmed here yesterday.

Humble Pipe Line Co. at Houston said it was surveying for pipe lines all the time in various places, but that this did not mean the company would lay pipe lines wherever it surveys. It would not confirm the report that it will lay a new line in Ector county.

Two Areas Lack Outlets
For lack of an outlet Stanolind's two producers on the Dick Cowden ranch, inherited from Southern Crude Oil Purchasing Co., another Standard of Indiana subsidiary, have been pinched since they were drilled in. The discovery well came in in Sept., 1930, and No. 1 Cowden shortly afterwards.

Landreth-Texas No. 1 Holt, 2 3/4 miles north of Stanolind No. 1 Holt, a 100-barrel well one mile farther west, also has no outlets.

Last fall L. C. Harrison and others No. 1 F. V. Addie estate opened Ector county's third producing area, making 250 barrels a day, choked. The operators were unable to obtain a pipe line connection and laid a line of their own a few miles south to the T&P railroad, where they built a loading rack. Recently Stanolind drilled in a north offset on the E. F. Cowden ranch.

It is probable that any line laid by Humble from the Penn pool to the Stanolind wells on the Dick Cowden ranch also would provide an outlet for Stanolind No. 1 E. F. Cowden, the wells north of Stanolind No. 1 and 2 Dick Cowden and any other wells drilled in the area. An outlet would stimulate Ector county drilling greatly.

Latest Holt Well May Shoot
Landreth-Texas No. 1 Holt is plugging back from 4,450 to shut off sulphur water which was encountered in drilling to 4,450 feet. Shooting of oil bearing lime between 4,355 and 4,367 feet with 125 quarts is planned.

After the hole was swabbed dry late last week and stood for eight hours 400 feet of oil and 108 feet of sulphur water accumulated. The oil tested 32.5 gravity. It had been reported as only 28 gravity. The well is 600 feet from the south line and 2,025 feet from the east line of section 16, block 43, township 1 north, T&P Ry. Co.

DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XXXII

As Miss Anstice said afterward, Arthur Mackenzie, who was the tall man of the theatre adventure, was "such a perfect gentleman." Miss Anstice had been a bit disturbed after she and Monnie had arrived at the hotel to realize they had driven across town "with a perfect stranger." And such terrible things happened in New York! But it had been the rain and the worry of getting her plum-colored wrap spotted which had plunged Miss Anstice into this darling.

And, after all, nothing had happened. Mr. Mackenzie, quietly assured, had told the chauffeur to drop them at the Splendobilt and take him on to a place that sounded like "The Firefly."

Cleverly, deftly Mr. Mackenzie had eluded from Miss Anstice the fact they were sailing on the morrow. He had smilingly wished them a pleasant voyage. Monnie, sitting demurely in the corner of the huge car, had caught a flash in the man's dark eyes when Miss Anstice mentioned the name of the boat. Their first trip? But how delightful! He wished he might have the—er—the pleasure of showing Miss Corey and Miss O'Dare his favorite haunts in Paris. They would love Paris, he said, in a quiet, assured voice that seemed to brook no contradiction.

The car slid under the dripping awning of the Splendobilt and Mr. Mackenzie forestalled the action of the chauffeur in helping the ladies to alight. A tall, imposing figure in his gleaming black and white, he stood there. But it had been a real pleasure, he was assuring them. He had been charmed. He gave Monnie a slim gloved hand a quick pressure. Her fingers tingled afterward.

"Have you got all your things in order?" Miss Anstice was nervous. They would have to be up early, she told Monnie. One of her pet horrors was the thought of missing a train or a boat. "I shan't sleep a wink," she prophesied. But later Monnie heard her deep and quiet breathing as she herself lay wide-eyed, listening to the rain on the windows.

The city lay below them, an only partially somnolent beast. The hum of traffic, of taxicabs skidding along the gleaming pavements, the hoarse screech of brakes reached her ears. Why had she liked Arthur Mackenzie quickly, on sight she wondered? Was it because he reminded her of Charles? He wasn't the least bit like him, really. Why, he must be 40! But he was nice. There was something definitely attractive about this assured man of the world.

"He's the sort who gets what he wants, always," thought the girl shrewdly. It must be wonderful to go about with a man like that, to be petted, taken care of as if you were a valuable piece of porcelain. Kay would love New York, love the kind of life Monnie had had a glimpse of tonight. Motor doors opening and shutting, rich fabrics, the scent of costly, elusive perfumes on the air.

For the first time since her decision to go with Miss Corey had taken form, Monnie was honestly glad.

"Maybe I can free myself from this obsession about Dan," she thought, dropping off. There had been days when she was certain she had conquered the wild, un-governable anguish. But then a chance look, a word, a quoted line of verse, would set the old pain to throbbing again. Well, she would put half a world between them and perhaps that would help.

They had an early breakfast and were ready a full hour before the time appointed, their bags strapped and waiting.

"The clerk says he's sending up some mail," Miss Anstice announced, turning away from the telephone. Monnie's heart gave a wild leap. A letter—the long-awaited letter might be among them! But there was only a bon voyage note from Kay and another from Charles Eustace. She had to throttle her disappointment. She had been hoping against hope that Dan might send her one little line to take with her to all those strange places.

"Any news?" Miss Anstice looked up from her checkbook.

"No news!" Monnie smiled valiantly to hide the hurt.

She stood on the deck a little later, watching late comers board the ship. Miss Anstice was in her cabin but she had sent Monnie out "to see the excitement." A slim wand of a girl in a coat of hunter's green, her amber eyes starry above the collar of deep brown fur, she drew many eyes. Porter struggled with trunks on the dock, laboring men with brief cases strolled about. There was one bridal party, youthful and distinguished, dressed with careless elegance, making farewells. The girl had a long, pale, aristocratic face. She was wrapped austerely in black crepe topped by a lei of silver flow. Monnie could hear her slow drawl.

"My dear, will you look in the Harris next month. Don't look at Ronnie—those drinks last night were poisonous—"

Remember, Monnie thought, this girl didn't fit the picture of the happy bride. She looked cool, disdainful, far from radiant.

"Good morning, Miss O'Dare." Monnie wheeled, surprised to hear her name spoken in this voice. There, watching her with an expression of faint amusement on his weatherbeaten face, was her good Samaritan of the night before, Arthur Mackenzie.

"Oh, how do you do! You're seeing some one off?"

He shook his head, enjoying her amazement. "No, I'm sailing. Discovered I had some urgent business in Spain and thought I might as well make this boat. It's my favorite."

The girl in the silver fox glanced over her way and Mackenzie bowed to her ironically. Her glance included Monnie and she said something in a low tone to her companions. There was a soft murmur of laughter from the group. Mackenzie took Monnie's arm and she could not resent the gesture so impersonal it was. He smiled down at her.

"Let's get out of this crowd, shall we? Where is Miss Corey?" Monnie explained, conscious of a brightened color and of a quickened pulse. The man made small talk easily and well. His manner was perfect. Ah, she must see this—and that! Were they to be in London for long? His sister, Lady Cassan, was down in Sussex and that was a pity. She would have liked meeting them.

"You'll be at the Berkeley, Miss Corey said?" His nod was comprehensive.

At the companionway entrance they again encountered the girl in the black furs, alone. Neatly she said, giving Mackenzie a half-moon of a smile, "Nice to see you, Arthur."

He hesitated. "Miss O'Dare, Mrs. Faneway."

Monnie acknowledged the introduction shyly and the tall girl bowed, giving her an appraising glance with something inimical behind it. At that instant little Miss Corey appeared from nowhere at a high pitch of excitement.

"Oh, Monnie, my dear, there you are!" Miss Anstice's composure, missing Mr. Mackenzie, was perfect. "Such a nice surprise Mr. Mackenzie. I had no idea, last night—"

"Nor did I!" His smooth tone sounded regretful. "It was a sudden thing. I was just piloting Miss O'Dare around."

Monnie thought she saw a flash of amusement in the tall girl's smile as she drifted away.

"See you sometime, Arthur," the girl's voice floated back. The lean, bronzed young man who had been at her side rejoined her.

"Is that Cornith Candell who just married Harris Faneway?" breathed Miss Corey who always read all the society sections of the newspapers.

"Yes, lovely, isn't she? Her father's my partner."

"Very pretty. Very pretty." Miss Anstice raised the lorgnette she had been training on Belvedere society for 20 years. Privately she thought that Monnie with her delicate, wild rose coloring and slarry gaze was much more delightful to look at than this Faneway girl had style. Now Monnie, with the right clothes and the proper background, would be ravishing. Miss Corey gave Mackenzie a quick glance. She must find out as soon as possible if he was married—

"All ashore," called the uniformed man coming toward them. "All ashore," echoed the men below.

There were the usual prolonged farewells. Handkerchiefs waved from the dock. All at once, with a clamor of bells and a throb of engines, the great ship began to move.

As the trio watched a messenger boy came trotting down the ramp, waving a yellow slip.

"Some beggar's missed his message," commented a fat man beside Monnie. She listened dreamily to the harbor sounds, watching the piers slip past. She was on her way at last to adventure. The messenger boy and his tardy telegram meant nothing to her. How was she to know that Dan had sent her a wire at the hotel and that it had been forwarded to the boat? Dan had said, "Forgive my foolish letter. Waiting to hear from you. Love."

Shipment Of Oil From East Texas Under Allowable

KILGORE (UP)—East Texas oil shipments fell within its allowable Monday for the first time in weeks, Captain E. N. Stanley reported to the Texas railroad commission.

Pipe line runs for the day were 7081 barrels, he said, with a total field shipment of 628,215 barrels. The allowable is 628,000 barrels, but back allowable and runs in the shallow areas give a permitted production of 846,000 barrels daily.

 forts to get to London.
 Mr. Roosevelt decided at the last moment to send the man who is supposed to know more about international exchange than anyone else. The other delegates had sailed. No American boat would leave in time for the opening of the conference.

The President told Sprague to catch the Olympic, a British vessel. Comptroller General McCarl declined to approve an expense voucher. He said it was a violation of law to sail on anything but an American ship. Mr. Roosevelt had whipped the whole of Congress on the Veterans issue that very day, but he could not get around McCarl.

When last seen Dr. Sprague was trying to dig up enough money to pay his own passage. It amused Mr. Roosevelt.

McCarl—
 Mr. Roosevelt's own Cabinet shelved his government reorganization scheme. They convinced him it was too big a job to do so quickly.

That same excuse has been used to block reorganizations since Harding first tried it more than ten years ago. This time it happens to be true. The few executive orders Mr. Roosevelt is now promulgating are only the minor ones on which everyone was able to agree.

The larger plan will be sifted thoroughly during the summer. There is every reason to hope it will be completed in the fall.

Reorganizing—
 The legislative tactics of the administration lately have been shrewd. The opposition is being misled and confounded. The railroad Bill is a case in point. Mr. Roosevelt sent the senate a rail bill he knew could not pass. It needed some labor amendments to get a majority of congressional votes. Rail officials were strongly opposed to these amendments. Mr. Roosevelt said nothing. The senate voted the amendments into the bill. The rail lobbyists were informed those amendments would not get through the House. They let the bill slide along. Mr. Roosevelt still said nothing.

At the last minutes House members asked the President how he stood. He said he favored the labor amendments. The House had to pass them.

Rail men are howling yet. Virtually the same inside tactics were used on the Industrial Control Bill.

When it first came out the National association of manufacturers applauded until their hands ached. They announced three million men would be put to work on a certain day.

But when the house passed the bill it was discovered it contained the CLOSED SHOP. It would unionize industry.

The cheer turned to a moan. Our debtors already have a 20 per cent reduction on their war debt if they pay in dollars and around 30 per cent if they pay in silver. . . . There is more than most creditors are giving these days. . . . It makes default harder. . . . The betting is now two to one that they do not default. . . . Apparently Mr. Roosevelt is working closely with his congressional leaders on the debt subject. . . . He will accept nothing unless the leading Senators give him private assurances that they will accept it as long as Congress is in session. . . . The whole business makes prospects for the London Conference worse than they should be. . . . State Secretary Hull may keep the war debt question off the conference floor but he can not keep it out of the corridors unless a settlement of the June 15 payments is made.

NEW YORK

Securities—

The Securities Bill is going to have several times its sponsors didn't expect.

For one thing it is going to reduce the dividends of a number of companies and possibly curtail their inventory purchases. Heretofore these companies have paid out their earnings freely to stockholders with the idea that new capital could always be raised in the open market if needed by selling securities. Now they will conserve their earnings and add them to capital account for possible future requirements. They have no wish to go through the new routine if they can possibly avoid it. This applies to several prominent corporations and a great many smaller ones.

New York authorities also anticipate the development of financial organizations somewhat along the lines of Commercial Investment Trust. Such organizations would make a business of buying the offerings of small companies which needed capital. That would not be a public sale and would therefore not come under the law. This would eventually lead to a new concentration of tremendous industrial power.

The law hits the little corporations harder than the big because the fixed cost of complying with the law is about the same regardless of the size of the issue. One legal expert has it, doped that a would be needed for complete compliance with publicity requirements.

The legal profession is getting ready for one grand field day in trying out the law. Already a number of test cases covering its different phases are in preparation.

The New York opposition to the bill was not as bright as it might have been. The Investment Bankers' association sent a distinguished lawyer from a Wall Street firm to Washington to oppose it. Being well known as a Wall Street attorney he didn't even get his hat off his shoulder.

Then emissaries from two other prominent New York law firms were sent to see Felix Frankfurter who was rewriting the bill. They cooled their heels in his anteroom for two days and were then told that he couldn't be bothered.

Copper—

The copper people are talking over a neat plan to get themselves out of the hole. The idea would be to ask the R. F. C. for a loan sufficient to carry an inventory of a billion pounds of copper so they can put it aside and forget about it. That would put their production virtually even with current demand and enable them to maintain prices.

The setup closely resembles that of the late lamented Farm Board but they aren't saying so out loud.

Rock Island Lines File Bankruptcy Proceedings

Petition Asks Sanction Of Reorganization Plan Without Actually Adjudicating Line Bankrupt

CHICAGO—The Rock Island Lines, a major unit in the transportation scheme of the Middle West, sought success from maturing debts under the new federal bankruptcy act.

The Railroad Credit Corporation, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation all had pulled the purse strings tight when the Rock Island solicited loans that would have averted receivership.

Directors of the $340-mile line, meeting at New York, found no other way out of its difficulties and authorized the filing of a voluntary petition in United States District Court. It was filed here, shortly afterward, asking the court to give the road the protection of the new bankruptcy act and sanction a reorganization without actually adjudicating the railroad a bankrupt.

This was the second large carrier to petition the Chicago Federal Court under the new law. The Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad instituted voluntary proceedings April 18 and in other Federal Courts five other railroads have availed themselves of the opportunity to reorganize under Federal court chaperonage. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the Missouri Pacific and the International-Great Northern; the Akron, Canton and Youngstown, and the Minarets and Western.

The Rock Island went through a reorganization period 18 years ago, emerging from federal receivership in 1917. It was founded in 1880 as an amalgamation of small Western lines and now operates in 14 States from Illinois to Louisiana and New Mexico to South Dakota.

The immediate maturities to be met were principal and interest totaling $2,100,000, due July 1, and other payments due October and January. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has lent $13,718,000 on collateral the Rock Island and said was worth $40,792,681.

The R.F.C. refused to grant any further loans.

The directors, in a statement issued at New York, said that a reorganization might have been avoided were it not for the large maturities at a time when there is no public market for bond issues. The railroad's earnings on its 1928 stock were $10,621,000 and since have dwindled until the company failed by $10,000,000 to earn its bond interest last year and is still running short of fixed charges this year.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson instructed the line to open a new set of books beginning tomorrow, to file its complete statement of assets and liabilities by Aug. 31 and to make regular, periodic financial reports to him.

Industrial Control Under New Law To Reach Half Dozen Basic Industries, New Plans Disclose

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Administration plans for applying the industrial control bill, about to be passed by congress, call for action immediately in half a dozen basic industries.

Early industries affected probably will include iron and steel, textiles, coal, oil and automobiles.

Those now working out plans believe the start should be made with these six basic industries which employ perhaps 70 per cent of all industrial labor.

Success in these first great industries might be sufficient, some in the administration hope, to make further application of the far reaching measure unnecessary.

This program, as authoritatively outlined in the first article of this series, is based on coercion of industry, but on persuasion and initiative by industry. It is viewed as a drive to put men and women back to work and thereby create new buying power—a reemployment measure.

Price control will enter where it is necessary to protect consumers from pyramiding of additional labor costs. Industries will be urged to cushion increased payrolls, resulting from shortening of hours and raising of hourly wage rates, by economies elsewhere. Where price increases are inevitable, the government will seek trade agreements limiting these to a fair return.

Public support and the cooperation of the industries concerned are vital to success, government officials declare. They feel it would be impossible to make the plan work against opposition of the industries. The hotly contested licensing features, they emphasize, are needed to protect cooperating industries from cut-throats who refused to join in the movement and tried to undersell through sweatshop practices.

The impression is widespread that the administration seeks to set up an industrial czar to direct the business of corner grocersmen in far away villages.

This picture is accentuated by the fact that the man who has been tentatively selected to administer the bill is an aggressive retired army general, Hugh S. Johnson, who for ten years has been in business. He has some of the gruff, hard hitting direct action ways that made Charles G. Dawes a spectacular figure here.

Other Side

But the other side of the picture is this: Johnson was one of the men responsible for putting across the war-time selective draft. Twice before conscription in America had failed. One reason was that government agents went out and tore youths from their mothers' arms. Conscription was denounced as an American. Johnson sold it to the country as a patriotic and democratic way of raising an army. Great ceremony was made over drawing the draft numbers. It was staged so that all could see that it was fair and impartial in operation. The country rallied to it.

The same was true of the war industries board, on which Johnson represented the army. That board had licensing powers similar to those now sought in the national recovery bill. They were used a couple of times. Public sentiment did the job, in both the war industries board and the draft.

The administration hopes R. I. will be the same this time.

Industries will be called in. Some, such as textiles, already have organized and are working out codes. Johnson is selecting his own key men for each industry. Each of these men is to be a man entrained by connections with the industries under his division, a man who knows his way about the business world and whom it is difficult to fool.

On one side of this man will sit an adviser representing the industry; on the other, an adviser representing labor. Johnson's representative will have the authority. Opponents have challenged condone preparatory to making an application of federal funds with which to build such a reservoir. Engineering research would have to be conducted to determine whether there is a feasible, practical watershed in reasonable distance of the city, and whether water would flow from a reservoir into town by gravity.

But, no matter how much work would be necessary the effort would be justified.

There are two reasons why we need a large supply of water stored above the surface, and so situated that pumping costs would be eliminated.

One reason is that such a system could be operated more economically and water rates could be lowered. The other reason is that no town can grow any larger than its water supply and Big Spring will always be limited in proportion to its supply. True, we have enough water so far but some day we may need a larger supply. And, too, the present supply may not last always. With a more dependable and more economically operated system the city would lift from itself a limitation that will definitely prevent any appreciable growth in the future.

Existing conditions in our city government render it necessary to use much of the income from the water department in paying the bonded debt. That is, of course, the real reason why no appreciable reduction in water rates has been possible.

For homeowners who wish to use a large amount of water to beautify their properties, costs are too large for many of them to do so. However, there is another side of the picture. Scores and scores of families owning no taxable property that would pay no taxes of any kind do contribute to the upkeep of the city government through payment of water bills.

It is our belief that if the city could obtain a large, dependable supply of such nature that cost of operating the system could be reduced, and water rates reduced as a result a considerable larger volume of water would be used and the city government's income from that source would really not be lowered to any material extent.

To our way of thinking this is the biggest, most vital, most important problem confronting the city. It is the principal one on which the Chamber of Commerce should interest itself, even if it takes five years.

Planning Honeymoons June Duty Of Airline Ticket Salesmen

Cupid has followed the modern trend and become air-minded for the first time this June, according to reports from American Airways ticket offices all over the country.

Planning air itineraries for business travelers has long been a routine function of airline ticket offices, but recently, there has been a notable influx of blushing couples requesting information on air trips, which, they reluctantly admit, are contemplated honeymoons.

The first report of the flying inclination among honeymooners came from Louisville, where summer arrives a little earlier than in the far northern climes, but the idea has suddenly become contagious and American Airways has instructed its traffic agents to prepare itineraries designed especially for the recently wed.

The most popular destination for Cupid's victims this summer will, of course, be Chicago's Century of Progress, but with Niagara Falls accessible by air line from all parts of the country, its popularity is expected to be maintained.

Athletics And Senators End In 13-13 Tie

White Sox Go Into Second Place—Big Sixth Beats Indians

PHILADELPHIA—The Washington Senators and the Philadelphia Athletics slugged ball to all corners of Shibe park Wednesday but failed to reach a decision when a heavy windstorm and darkness broke up the overtime tilt in the A's half of the tenth inning with the Senators leading 14-13. The score reverted to a 13-13 deadlock.

Founding Goull Claret and Jim Peterson for ten runs in the first two innings, the Senators coasted along with what appeared to be a safe lead until the Athletics cut into the eighth inning with Miller and Bishop and Cramer's single.

Jimmy Fox's eighth home run of the year, coming with two on base, drove in the last three runners and climaxed the uprising.

In the ninth, Washington went two ahead again when Bluege and McKays produced singles in the pinch, but the Athletics came right of the stumps on double by Miller and Bishop and Cramer's single.

Four Of Big Spring Personally Speaking

Make Reservations On Chicago Special

ABILENE—Four persons from Big Spring have completed making reservations and a large number of others have made requests for them on the West Texas section of the special train leaving Sunday morning under direction of G. M. Sandefer, manager of the Simmons University Cowboy Band, for Chicago and four days at the World's Fair.

Those from Big Spring who have completed ticket purchases are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pool, Miss Nell Davis, and Dr. L. E. Parney. The West Texas section, with more than 100 West Texans booked for reservations and an equal number expected to join the party, will leave Sunday morning as part of the Sunshine Special. It will unite at Fort Worth with the special train, reaching Chicago Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Although all reservations must be made through Sandefer at Abilene and will be accepted until the train departs, low rates comparable to those offered from Abilene are available at all stop-points of the Sunshine Special. The top fare from Big Spring is $41.50, this including lower berth single to and from Chicago and use of the berth, the four nights to be spent in Chicago. The glutted condition of Chicago hotels, due to the fact that 800 national organizations have chosen Chicago as a convention city this summer, brought about arrangements for use of sleepers in these hotels. Rooms are virtually unobtainable and delegates to many of the conventions have been forced to seek accommodations in Minneapolis, according to press reports.
