House Passes Railway Measure

Texan Three Hours Ahead Of Old Mark

51 Hours, 34 Minutes Elapses From New York Take-Off To Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—Jimmy Mattern, American round-the-world flier, arrived in Moscow 7:57 a. m. eastern standard time Monday. He planned to remain only two hours. Mattern reached Moscow in fifty-one hours and thirty-four minutes from New York, three hours ahead of the Post-Gatty record.

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Jimmy Mattern, Texas aviator, fighting storms, and fogs which forced him 300 kilometers off his course, landed on Jomfruland, Island, south coast of Norway, at 4:15 a. m. eastern standard time, Sunday. Later he flew to Oslo, and after a brief stop hopped for Moscow. He said he encountered a thunder storm Saturday night. Ice which formed on his plane, almost forced him into the sea.

Jobs

The hungry politicians have quit grumbling to themselves and have started demanding action from the President in person. They have been trooping into the White House quietly the last ten days buzzing in Mr. Roosevelt's ear that they need a New Deal too. They do not like the way some Cabinet officers are keeping Republicans in preference to jobless Democrats. They have pointed out emphatically you cannot build a political organization that way. The President has indicated he will seek to appease their hunger. They expect manna shortly. The Cabinet officer they are shooting at partly is Interior Secretary Ickes. He is running his department as a one-man show. He listened to reason from Postmaster General Farley and others on selecting his assistants. But he has been resisting pressure on the smaller jobs in a way which is very annoying. What is worse he told a politician: "If you want to remove a man you must say something more than that he is a Republican." You can imagine what a big hit a statement like that made with the Democratic office-seekers. Most of the trouble is due to a rather slipshod method of testing the political qualifications of appointees. The Public Works heads gave a job to a Michigan Republican who was defeated in an election out there very recently. A mild old Democrat was dropped from service as publicity man for a government department. He was replaced by an able man who happens to have served once as publicity man for the Republican National Committee. As a result of these breaks an order has been issued to exercise more care and political scrutiny in the selection of men hereafter.

The Helvering boys privately blame their confirmation troubles on the former Hooverite, Henry Allen. They claim they saw Allen's handwork in the objections lodged against the new Internal Revenue Commissioner by Senator Hastings. It is more than a supposition that the income tax returns of all Helvering appointees will be closely scrutinized when he gets in. They tell an inside story of what happened to an up-and-coming young Democrat from the West. He was slated to be assistant Indian Commissioner and came here to take over the job. The boys introduced him to Ickes and others. Ickes took him to lunch. Afterward he was told the appointment could not be made that day. The same thing was told him each day for several weeks. Being a bright young man he figured he was getting a run-around and de-

President Warns Congress 170 Millions More Taxes Needed If Vets' Pay Hiked

Recalcitrant Senate Is Given Renewed Command For Balanced Budget—Warns House Against Senate Vet Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt passed to a recalcitrant senate his command for a balanced budget in a talk with Chairman Harrison of the senate finance committee. The president Sunday night warned the house leaders if they accepted the senate increase in veterans expenditures they must add new taxes to pay for the hundred and seventy million dollars cost. The presidential ultimatum appeared Monday to be slowing up movement in congress that had upset the economy program and industrial control program.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate finance committee Monday adopted the Harrison tax program to finance the $3,800,000,000 public works project in the industrial recovery bill. It eliminates the house proposal to increase tax rates on small incomes.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sharp criticism of Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to the president, for an appeal to the people to stand with the administration in slashing the veterans benefits, was leveled in the senate Monday by Senator Cutting, New Mexico, Roosevelt supporter.

Heavy Vote Is Accorded Rayburn Bill

Federal Coordinator Provided In Far-Reaching Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—Overwhelming house approval was given Monday to another of President Roosevelt's national recovery proposals—the Rayburn measure to improve condition of the nation's railway systems. The bill returns to the senate for adjustment of differences.

Albert Hartman Gets Credit For Another Victory

Albert Hartman is about to earn the title of "Lefty" for himself. Sunday he took the mound against Hartwells and pitched the Giants to another victory. While he had to be given relief in the seventh by Ebbs, he got credit for the win. The Giants gave Hartwells a 2-7 licking, hitting everything two pitchers offered. Errors added zest to the repeated Giant rallies, but Giant fielders were also far from perfect, booting the ball at random.

L. C. Harrison No. 1 Rhotan Stands In Oil

First Test On Nine-Section Block Extends Production Two Miles

Lee C. Harrison, whose strikes as an independent wildcatter have marked drilling activity in West Texas for two years, had another, and the most important from Big Spring's viewpoint Monday in his No. 1 Rhotan, two miles northwest of production in the Denman-Dodge pool of eastern Howard county. Harrison and his associates hold a nine-section block comprising the old Rhotan ranch, south and southeast of Coahoma. Sam Goldman, who now is connected with Harrison's operations, said that the Rhotan strike was one of the most important scored in this section 4, block 30, Texas and Pacific railway company survey. A slight show of oil was found at 2,525 feet. Pay was topped at 2,672 feet with increase in oil to 2,720 feet. Drilling was proceeding Monday from 2,750 feet. The hole stood 1,000 feet in crude Monday morning 18 hours after getting the main pay, and after bailing had continued more than 12 hours. Surface elevation of the well is 2,355 feet. It apparently is running higher on the structure than the producers on the Denman lease of Harrison, which is the nearest production. Harrison and associates hold an option to buy the entire nine section in fee simple in addition to the oil and gas lease. E. T. Allen and Tom Hunter of Wichita Falls are interested in the project.

Regulations Given Tire Dealers Here

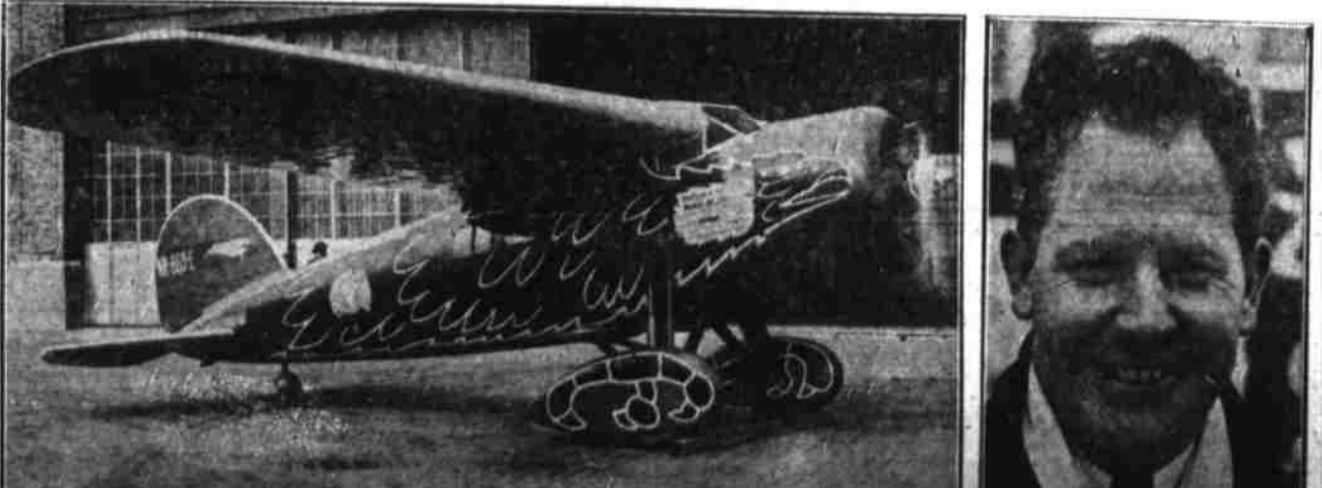

Rubber Association Of America Laws Told By Firestone Man

A meeting of local tire dealers was held Monday at 10 a. m. in the Settles Hotel for the purpose of discussing and explaining the new compulsory regulations of the Rubber Association of America. The meeting was conducted by A. C. Hudson, of Dallas, district manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. The Rubber Association of America's membership included all the major tire manufacturers in the country as well as nearly all others. Mr. Hudson explained in detail the rules and regulations, the purposes of them and the enforcement. A local committee composed of Jack Ellis, Vic Flewellen and C. W. Corley was appointed to attend to the local enforcements and details. Among those attending the meeting were: Y. D. Scates, Vic Flewellen, W. Rance King, Mr. Huntley, Jack Ellis, Tom Slaughter, Mr. Berryhill, Lou Wentz, Mr. Munson, Tom Creighton, Tom Ashley, Mr. Patsch, C. W. Corley, and Hilo Gary.

Sheriff Slaughter Receives New Relic

Sheriff Jess Slaughter has another relic for his collection of western trinkets and curios. Monday he received an old Mexican saddle, some the worse for its many years, from a friend in Marfa. No one could say how old it was. Mrs. Roosevelt said that the president is "feeling just fine." "He works hard but he's in splendid condition," she added. "He's been getting a lot of things done quickly," she was told. "Yes, perhaps all of the things being done may not accomplish everything desired but at least strong."

MATTERN IN SOLO ATTEMPT AT GLOBE-GIRDLING SPEED RECORD

James Mattern, San Angelo, Texas, flier, landed in Moscow, Russia, 51 hours 34 minutes after taking off from New York on an attempt to establish a new round-the-world record, with a solo flight. He landed first on the south coast of Norway, flew to Oslo and thence to Moscow.

First Lady's Smiles Bring Many Cheers

'I'm So Glad' She Exclaims As When Told Mattern In Moscow

More than 1,000 persons greeted Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at 12:30 o'clock when she stopped briefly on her way via American Airways to Los Angeles for a visit with her son, Elliott.

With the Lions Legion Mexican Boy Scout drum and bugle corps, headed by Fred Drew, playing the President's salute, Mrs. Roosevelt stepped from the ship escorted by Vice-President C. E. Smith of American Airways, and was met by a cheering throng that pushed against the barrier near the pit. She waved and smiled, acknowledging personal greetings from a group inside the runway to the airport building with the ease and grace and good nature that has made her so unusually popular since her husband became president of the United States.

Mrs. Roosevelt was dressed "very ordinarily" as one woman put it, in a traveling suit of dark blue silk, with blouse of figured blue, dark blue tailored hat and low-heeled shoes. She wore a corsage of orchids. In the airport building, as she slipped lemons, the First Lady chatted continuously with a group of newspapermen and members of her party. "I'm So Glad" She stopped recounting adventures of her uncle, President Theodore Roosevelt, (you know, I WAS a Roosevelt too, its very complicated, she interjected) as a youth on a hunting expedition in West Texas, to exclaim "Oh, I'm so glad" when told that Jimmy Mattern, San Angelo aviator, had landed safely in Moscow, after stopping in Norway on his attempted solo flight around the globe. She said that she had edited and published adventures of Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt last year and that his account of a hunting trip in that section was very interesting. He had been sent out here with a friend for his health, she said.

George McIntire, Sr., Sterling City rancher, had handed C. R. Smith a Republic of Texas fire department bill, bearing the signature of General Sam Houston, and when Mrs. Smith presented it to Mrs. Roosevelt she showed genuine appreciation, mentioning that her husband was an enthusiastic collector of stamps, coins and old currency and that it would be a valuable addition to his collection. Miss Virginia Cushing, Big Spring high school girl, chatted several minutes with Mrs. Roosevelt, who greeted her warmly. Miss Cushing is a cousin of Mrs. James Roosevelt, son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Miss Cushing's father, W. F. Cushing, Glasscock county rancher, is a member of an old Massachusetts family. He and Mr. Cushing and other members of their family were at the airport to meet the visitor. Mayor J. B. Fickie and Manager C. T. Watson of the Chamber of Commerce greeted Mrs. Roosevelt as she alighted from the ship. She was presented a large bouquet by Wendell Bedichek, president of the Chamber of Commerce. "This was made when buffalo roamed on the Big Spring airport" said C. R. Smith, when he showed Mrs. Roosevelt his piece of currency Mr. McIntire had sent. "This is one of the most interesting parts of the country," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "It has been a long time since I was out to El Paso. Some years ago we used to visit Mrs. Greenway when she lived at Silver City, New Mexico." Mrs. Roosevelt was to stop in Tucson to visit Mrs. Greenway, who is national Democratic committee woman. In the party with her on the special ship flown from Dallas to Tucson by American Airways were Vice-President Smith of American Airways; Amos G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram; Miss Dorothy Smith, sister of Mr. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Waterbury, Jr., of Tyler, Mrs. Roosevelt's cousins who had met her in Dallas, and Bob Pool of the Baker hotel in Dallas, who was greeted here by his relatives, Frank Pool, Miss Clara Pool and Mrs. Fred Keating. Mrs. Roosevelt said that the president is "feeling just fine." "He works hard but he's in splendid condition," she added. "He's been getting a lot of things done quickly," she was told. "Yes, perhaps all of the things being done may not accomplish everything desired but at least strong."

DARLING FOOL

by MRS. J. P. MORGAN

CHAPTER XXIX

Monnie turned the letter over in her hands before she opened it. The thick creamy envelope, the bold black writing spoke to her eloquently of the writer. She smiled to herself, secretly, exultantly. Dan would explain now his long silence. She would know and be reassured.

She went into the house, hallooing to her mother who was in the dining room. Then she sped upstairs, eager to peruse the letter in solitude. Her heart was beating faster. It was almost as if Dan himself were in the room, waiting to speak to her—

"Dear Monnie," (he began) "I've been busy every minute of the time. This is a great country and great people and I like it. Rods 50 miles yesterday. We had a picnic up in the hills. Tonight we go to one of the dances at the best ranch. Everybody's so hospitable. Monnie's there something I want to talk to you about when I get back. I think perhaps after all we'd better hold up our plans a bit—not go ahead with the January. There are reasons. I'll tell you more when I see you. Let me assure you that you are greatly missed.—Dan."

She put the letter down on the dressing table gently. She looked at herself in the mirror, taking off her hat, brushing her crest of bright hair away from the sweep of her forehead.

"Why, then," she said to herself lightly, in a conversational voice, "there's no point—"

She broke off at the sound of Kay's footsteps on the stairs. Quickly she hid the letter in the top drawer.

Kay came in, whistling softly. "Hello, didn't know you were here."

"I got off early, Kay."

"What's up?" The younger sister stared, noting Monnie's brilliant eyes, the flush on her usually pale cheeks.

"I've decided."

"I decided what? Oh, do you mean—?"

Monnie nodded. "I'm going with Miss Anstice."

Not that Monnie told herself, was the idea. Not ever to be still, to allow the biting, stinging memories to intrude. She laughed, she was gay, brittle. Two weeks—in two weeks more she and Miss Anstice would be on their way. It was soon enough—not nearly.

After a feverish night, Monnie had written Dan a letter—a furious, impotent letter which she had later torn up. It was ridiculous to behave in this way. What did it matter? What did anything matter? She told herself she had known from the start that things would fall out this way. She was not surprised. Events had marched to their inevitable climax. Hands had got her man—there was no other explanation.

If she stopped long enough to consider the situation she was overwhelmed with a sort of sick despair. She would not dwell on what might happen if any of the family fell ill while she was away. Kay's salary would help to carry them along, Bill, unusually garrulous for him, had called her aside.

"I'm glad you're going," he said. "Somebody in this family was about due for a break. Don't worry about money."

"What about Angie?" Monnie had to ask. "Is that—?"

Bill's face was blank. "We're coming right along," he told her easily. "Maybe in the spring she'll be free."

"You—you're crazy about her, aren't you?"

Bill looked faintly embarrassed. "Sure. Angie's a wonderful girl. But Monnie thought she caught in his eyes, almost a touch of bewilderment. If Bill had given his promise to Angie, had reflected, wild horses wouldn't drag it away again. She thought of the time:

"The men of my own stock, Bitter had they may be. But at least they feel the things I feel."

She felt a surge of pride in her brother. Angie Gillen was a lucky girl.

Mrs. O'Dare said one night, "Monnie, I've a little money saved that I want you to have. I know Miss Anstice is going to pay you a small salary as a companion but you'll need a few nice things. This is a neat egg. You're to take it and buy some pretty new clothes."

She put a small roll of bills into the girl's hand, Monnie, counting them, found $100.

"Is this the money Aunt Sybil left you?"

"Yes, I want you to have it."

"I can't. You need things more than I do—a winter coat—"

"Monnie!" There was a new note in her mother's quiet voice. "You're to have it. Do you hear? I want you to!"

Three days more. Then two. At length the last night came. In spite of herself, in spite of all her frantic resolutions, the girl found she had been waiting unconsciously for some word from Dan. Perhaps he would hear she was going away. He might see the "Belvedere News" with the account of her plans. Surely someone would tell him, mention it casually in a letter. They would say, "I see Monica O'Dare is going abroad with Miss Cory."

Dan would be affronted by the idea. He would send her a wire. But this was her last night. She had not answered his letter, nor she had heard from him.

"Oh, everything!" This from Kay, pecking and awing the undertone. "Wasn't it sweet of Gertrude to bring those seeds given?"

"Yes," Mrs. O'Dare sighed, "Gertrude's an awfully nice girl. I'm no fond of her."

"Mother, you can't choose Bill's wife for him. Don't you know that?" Kay said, smiling.

"Of course she does. Hasn't she proved it?" Monnie gave Kay a warning glance. "It is too bad about Gertrude and Bill. He used to like her a lot and I know she still cares about him."

"The does Angie," said Kay, bent on mischief.

"We know that." Her mother looked up from mending a slip of Monnie's. "Angie's a good little thing," said Mrs. O'Dare loyally. "Only—well it can't be helped now!"

"It's the ones with the dash that succeed," Kay murmured. "If Gertrude would give that mossy hair of hers a henna rinse and redder her fingernails—if she's use eye shadow and lipstick she'd look a lot better. She's not had looking only she gets herself up to look like Jane Austen."

"You tell her that some time," Miss Anstice said. "Mark, who had come in noiselessly and stood grinning in the doorway.

"You belong in bed, young man," Kay told her brother loftily. "Believe I will tell her, now that you mention it."

"Children, children!"

"Aw, we weren't fighting. Mums, only Kay thinks she knows it all. Mark put his freckled paw beside his mother's thin one.

"We'd better all get to bed," she told her brother. "We've got to get up early. Monnie's train leaves at 8:30."

There was a sharp rattle at the door and Mark blundered to open it. He returned in a moment bearing a square white florist's box. Monnie's heart gave a great leap. Her thought, as always, was that it might be from Dan—Dan who was in far away Wyoming. "Kid Eustace's chauffeur," grinned Mark, "brought it."

Monnie, hiding her disappointment, cut the green tape and lifted from the crinkling paper a cluster of bronze and green orchids, delicate, exotic. Charles had scrawled on the card, "To wear on your going-away day. Good luck."

"They're much too grand for

MIDGET SITS ON MORGAN'S LAP!

A sensation was caused in the senate Morgan hearings when a press agent piloted a circus midget, Miss Lya Graf, onto the lap of J. P. Morgan before the noted financier realized what was happening. The Associated Press telephoto shows the unique scene, with both parties smiling, but the tenor of the incident soon changed when it was discovered pictures had been taken. Chairman Fletcher then made a public appeal against publication of photographs of the affair.

HER Best Friend Told Her!

by buying QUALITY!

It all started about a year ago when her best friend went shopping with her. They went from store to store searching for "Bargains" until her best friend became disgusted and with simple, common-sense talk convinced her that to buy quality was actually cheaper than to buy "cheap" merchandise. Her friend explained to her that she could save time and money by reading the advertisements in The Daily Herald. She now makes up her shopping list before she leaves home and saves half of her shopping time in the hot weather.

Back in those days she and her family had only the things they actually needed. Today, after she has learned to buy quality, she does not have to replace the children's clothing, her own and her own apparel, nearly so often and they have much more than they did a year ago for now when she buys a new garment it's an addition to their wardrobe instead of a replacement . . . and too, they've just traded-in their 1929 model car for a brand new 1933 model . . . about a month ago they bought that new living room suite they had needed for so long . . . and all because, just a year ago, she learned to read the advertisements and to insist on quality.

H. N. Garrett, 89, Pioneer Of Midland Dies

Deceased Came To Site Of Midland In 1882 Before Town Started

MIDLAND — Midland's oldest pioneer, Hiram N. Garrett, 89, was interred at Fairview cemetery Friday afternoon after services had been read by the Rev. Winston F. Borum in the chapel of the Ellis mortuary.

The aged man came to Midland in 1882, before the town was started and two years before the town of Maricopa, which later came to be known as Stanton, was established. He battled Indians and killed buffalo over most of West Texas, as was the father of seven children five of whom survive and made and lost several fortunes raising cattle and sheep.

The minister spoke from a passage in Hebrews: "It is appointed unto all men once to die." He traced the life of the pioneer, showing how he made the mode of living in the West easier for future generations, but how at last he had "traveled the path of all mortals."

Music was by concert of the training school culminated in the first Baptist church Friday night by the graduation of 125 young people, who assisted in the song service. Floral offerings were numerous, and there was large attendance at the services.

Survivors are three daughters, Miss Lizzie Garrett of Midland, Mrs. Gordon Reiger of Grand Falls, and Mrs. Sam Holmes of Midland, two sons, Al Garrett of McCamey and Mike Garrett of Monahans, a grandson, Horace Rankin of Midland, who was reared in the Garrett home. Two brothers, Frank of Arizona and Liss of Sacramento, Calif., and two sisters, Mr. Will Upton and Mrs. Emma Coons, both of California, also survive.

Gold Resolution's Grammar Discussed

WASHINGTON, (UP) — The speedy journey through congress of the administration's bill voiding past promises to pay in gold has been marked by Republican opposition which while futile thus far, has provided its interesting movements.

Rep. Carl Mapp of Michigan, for instance, started quite out a controversy when he observed the resolution was drawn up so hurriedly its title contained a grammatical error.

The grammarians immediately looked up the title and this is what they found:
 "A point resolution to assure uniform value to the coins and currencies of the United States."

That appeared all right at first glance, although some maintained that "currencies" should be singular or that "value" would be made plural.

Unable to reach an agreement on that, the puzzled grammarians went on to the first "whereas," which read:
 "Whereas, the holding of or dealing in gold affects the public interest and are therefore subject to proper regulation and restriction."

There was further argument over whether "holding of or dealing in" required a singular or plural verb.

And so it went. There was no clear agreement on what Mapp could have meant when he referred to the grammatical error. And Mapp, perhaps enjoying confusion he had caused, went off for the Memorial Day holiday and could not be reached for amplification of his views.
