Taxes
Everyone in the government except the out-and-out progressives wanted a sales tax instead of these new income levies. They said so frankly in private conversations. Yet no one dared openly to speak a good word about it.

The reasons are largely political. Mr. Roosevelt manifestly could not champion a sales tax—he once called it horrible. Congressional democrats would not take the responsibility for it because most of them helped kill that form of taxation in the last tax bill.

Even at that you came rearing to getting a sales tax then you will ever know. At one time in the house the leaders were toying with the possibility of championing the tax. They understood Mr. Roosevelt would approve it if they took the responsibility.

They would have gone through with that idea had not a check of the senate shown it would be useless. The senate would stand for the tax only if Mr. Roosevelt demanded it. Too many senators came from states which have a state sales tax or are planning one.

This is based on the supposition that the new taxes probably never will help add anything. The rates go into effect on this year's taxes but you do not pay until next March 15. If the eighteenth amendment is repealed sufficiently before then the administration is supposed not to enforce the new levies.

All that can be changed by a business improvement. We may yet receive higher revenue returns from existing taxes this year than we have been expecting. Continuance of even fair business the rest of this year would turn the trick.

Exchange
The job of this new financial adviser O. M. W. Sprague is to keep the dollar down, not up. He was called into service because the boys here were novices at handling foreign exchange and do not know what to do.

Word was passed out immediately from no less an authority than Treasury Secretary Woodin that we would not need a stabilization fund like Britain to keep the dollar from being respected so highly abroad. How Sprague will work is his own secret. If he told it probably no one would understand.

"The King Of The Jungle" Heads Ritz Five-Unit Road Show

One Feature Added To New R-R Program

Buster Crabbe Star Of Picture; Technicolor Revue Offered

Exceeding by one unit the number generally in such special programs, a new R & R Road Show Program of five units is to be presented at the R & R Ritz for two days, commencing today.

This unit program is featured by Paramount's production of an original story by Charles Thuley Stoneham, "The King of the Jungle," a romance of strange adventure. Supporting units are Vitphone's technicolor musical comedy revue, "Northern Exposure," the first of a new Music Masters Series, this one featuring the glorious Southern melodies of Stephen Foster, viz: Swannee River, My Old Kentucky Home, Old Black Joe, Uncle Ned and others; a Walt Disney Silly Symphony in technicolor, entitled "Babes in the Woods"; and what subject of timely interest, the News Reel.

One is asked to believe nothing he sees in "King of the Jungle." It is an imaginative romance produced purely for entertainment purposes, and is said to meet this purpose very neatly in depicting the story of a lad who was reared by a lioness with her cubs in the jungle, to become a leader of lions in their jungle forays. With several of his lion companion he is captured and sold to a circus for exhibition in America. Upon reaching those shores he eludes his captors, becomes willing captive of a beautiful young woman who returns him to the circus and herself joins it that he be there to protect his jungle friends, and tries, under her tutelage, to adapt himself to the ways of civilization.

Chaos rages rampant when the circus catches fire and fire-crased lions, tigers, elephants and other wild beasts rage through the city overturning buses, smashing stores, wrecking, destroying, terrorizing the populace. The Lion Man thinks first of the girl, and with her in his arms attempts to turn the tide of destruction. It is a superhuman task accomplished with high resolve forming a climax of such gripping thrill as is seldom one's portion.

Buster Crabbe, Olympic swimming champion—tall, handsomely featured, magnificently proportioned, plays the title role. And Frances Dee, selected by Maurice Chevalier as leading lady in "A Playboy of Paris," is an excellent foil with her fragile beauty for the handsome, brawny Buster Crabbe. Somewhat more than two hours of entertainment of the sort made to order for family theater parties is promised by Manager Robb to those who attend performances of this new five unit road show program.

Laurel And Hardy Outstanding Comedians Of Screen, Appear In Feature-Length Play At R - R Ritz

Laurel and Hardy, conceded to be the most popular comedians on the American screen, make their latest appearance in a feature-length comedy in "The Devil's Brother," a story of a pair of rollicking bandits, based on Auher's famous comic opera, "Fra Diavolo," to be shown at the R & R Ritz theater Wednesday and Thursday.

The picture is reported to be the most ambitious yet undertaken by the noted laugh pair of "Pardon Us" and "Pack Up Your Troubles," its cast including such outstanding names as Dennis King, the noted singer and stage star; and Thelma Todd, who has contributed to the humor of a long list of screen productions.

Also involved in the hilarious incidents of the latest Laurel and Hardy opus are James Finlayson, Lucille Brown, Arthur Pearson, Henry Chandler, Nena Quartzo, Wilfred Lucas, James C. Morton and Carl Harbaugh. The screen adaptation of the comic opera was made by Jeanie MacPherson and the picture was produced and directed by Hal Roach with Charles Rogers assisting.

The story of the two friends who turn bandits in retaliation for being robbed of their life savings just when they meant to retire is reported to be permeated with humor from its very opening reel to finish. For instance, Hardy is captured by a bandit gang and is sentenced to be hanged. Laurel is given the hangman's assignment.

Laurel and Hardy fill with a couple of milkmaids. Laurel waves a red handkerchief. A bull gets the waving invitation and charges. By mistake Laurel takes a drink containing a sleeping powder and presently falls asleep on his feet. Since it is necessary for him to keep awake in order to perform the function of man-servant to Diavolo, the bandit chief, Hardy has a tough time saving him from being killed.

During a seemingly dull moment, Laurel becomes restless. He begins fumbling with his hands. He originates what is called the "kneesy, earry, nosey" game, and soon the entire household, includ-

'Sign Of The Cross' Comes To R-R Queen

DeMille's Masterpiece Opens Today For Three-Day Engagement

A new romantic team makes its bow to film fans in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Sign of the Cross," opening today for a 3-day showing at the R & R Queen Theatre.

Fredric March and Elissa Landi are the lovers in Nero's drama of the stirring events of Nero's reign in imperial Rome, the story of Nero's persecution of the hapless Christians discovered making the "sign of the cross," by his myriad spies.

It is the first time March and Miss Landi have played together. March is a Paramount star and Miss Landi, "borrowed" for this picture, has spent her days on the Fox "lot."

March has the role of the virile, handsome Prefect of Rome, second in command only to Nero, who falls in love with the innocence and beauty of a Christian girl and who walks hand in hand with her to meet the fierce Numidian lions—and death—on the sands of the Circus Maximus arena.

DeMille has used all the vaunted spectacular trappings for which he is noted, reports from Hollywood declare.

ing the soldiers, are fumbling all over themselves in order to master the simple process of mingling knees, ears and nose together.

They're Under Suspicion

Meanwhile Dennis King, the bandit king, fights with Lady Pamela (Miss Todd) and steals her money. There is a hue and cry for the bandit's scalp. In an effort to save an innocent person from being accused of the theft, the comedian find themselves looked upon with suspicion.

And when they are captured by the soldiers who also have the bandit chief under control. They are sentenced to be shot. The future looks grim. No hope in sight. Not a friend among a thousand people.

How they come through these complications and how they help effect a reconciliation between the young lovers, in addition to numerous other ticklish moments, serve to make "The Devil's Brother" one of the funniest of the Laurel and Hardy laugh epics.

THURSDAY One Day Only

Perfect Talking Pictures

Miss Ralston And Rathbone To Show here

'After The Ball' Wednesday And Thursday Queen Picture

Ether Ralston, whose latest is the leading feminine role in "After The Ball," is not only entirely American she is also entirely theatrical. For she was born at Bar Harbor, the fashionable summer haven in Maine, and is a member of that theatrical family that in past years was known from coast to coast as "The Ralston Family, Metropolitan Entertainers." May Howard and Henry Walter Ralston are her parents, and the heritage they passed on to her has been carried to heights of which they never even dreamed.

At the age of two years little Ether was already stage-wise. The glare of the footlights was nothing new to her, and playing before an audience was nothing more than the order of the day. With that start she has come ahead so that now her name is one of the best known in the cinema world.

Mingling her professional appearances with the teaching of a tutor and alternating both with attendance at school in Washington, D. C., Ether was preparing herself for a really full career. She appeared in a number of classics including the Shakespearean, and when she had garnered enough experience, made her break into motion pictures. For seven years as a free-lance actress, she was in such great demand among screen directors that she played at practically every one of the major movie studios in Hollywood. The performances that are best remembered are perhaps those in "Peter Pan," "Beggars on Horseback," "The Best People," "The Goose, Hangs High," "The Little French Girl," "Children to Divorce," "Fashions for Women," "The Case of Lena Smith" and "The Southerner." It was during the last three or four of these productions that Miss Ralston became a full-fledged star.

As the leading player in "After The Ball," which is a Gaumont picture presented by Fox Film, Miss Ralston is said to reach the height of her career. She has the role of a diplomat's beautiful wife who almost causes international complications through an innocent romance.

Baril Rathbone is seen in the leading masculine role opposite her in the supporting cast including Marie Burke, Jean Augustine, Geo. Curson and Clifford Heather. The direction of "After The Ball," which starts at the Queen Theatre on Tuesday, is by Milton Rosmer with music and lyrics by Otto Stransky and Clifford Grey.

Ritz Offers Variety Of Features

A BEDTIME STORY

New Death Method Witnessed By Wild Beasts From Cages In New Film Sensation Coming To Ritz

The wild beasts of the zoo—snarling behind the bars of their cages in the Carnivora House—are the witnesses of the screen's newest and most ingenious death method in Paramount's "Murders in the Zoo," which will be shown Thursday only at the Ritz Theatre, featuring Charles Ruggles, Lionel Atwill, Kathleen Burke (the Panther Woman), Randolph Scott, John Lodge and Gail Patrick.

A new insidious killer slithers across the screen in this terrifying drama of death upon death. It is the fatal Green Mamba, scourge of the jungle, feared alike by men and beasts on the Dark Continent from whence it comes to give screen audiences the merry old jitters.

But the Green Mamba is merely the living symbol of the machinations within the distorted mind of Eric Gorman, played by Lionel Atwill. He portrays one of those "bring 'em back alive" animal collectors who, more often than not, sends his human opponents home dead.

It is his insane jealousy of all who looks upon his beautiful wife (Kathleen Burke) that is responsible for his evil purposes and still more evil actions. When, in the opening sequence, he sees a man's lips together because this friend dined in a drunken moment to kill Atwill's wife, the audience wonders what more imposing punishment may be devised for the man's later victims.

Charles Ruggles furnishes the comedy relief most effectively. He thoroughly enjoys the role of Peter Yates, dithering press agent to whom animals are anathema, yet who, nevertheless, grabs the berth of exploitation man for the zoo as his last chance. It is his public-minded brain that evolves the strange idea for the benefit banquet in the animal house, attended by "languishing ladies and multi-millionaires" at which one of the many killings takes place. As far as Ruggles is concerned, it all comes out in the end, for in a well-mottled condition, he gets up enough courage to sock a lion in the nose and is mighty proud of his new-found courage.

Besides the Green Mamba, voracious crocodiles and bone-crunching pythons play other roles in the many killings within the zoo's walls.

Atwill wins the chills and fever award for his intense portrayal, but it's the picture's inherent suspense that really gets you. Fine work is submitted by Randolph Scott in the role of Dr. Woodford, research scientist at the zoo, in love with the curator's daughter, Jerry Evans, played by Gail Patrick.

The picture's check full of action from the opening murder to the closing roars of the loosed lions, tigers, panthers and leopards who unwittingly provide the only possible satisfactory conclusion to "Murders in the Zoo."

Chevalier At The Ritz

Helen Twelvetrees Plays In 'A Bedtime Story' Opening Friday

Maurice Chevalier's latest starring picture, "A Bedtime Story," has been booked for the Ritz Theatre, and will open there Friday. The famed French star's posturing lower lip and straw hat are set off against a background which includes Helen Twelvetrees, Edward Everett Horton, Adrienne Ames and Baby Leroy, the year-old youngster who won himself the role in the picture in competition with a thousand other babies his own age.

"A Bedtime Story" is the tale of a new Chevalier—a Chevalier, who rises in a big way for the "babies." But, in this case, it's the one-year-old babe he's interested in, and not the feminine type he pursued, and been pursued by, in previous pictures.

Chevalier is cast as a Paris man-about-town, carefree and irresponsible. On his return from a voyage to Africa, he finds an abandoned child in his car and becomes so intrigued and delighted by it that he decides to keep it while he awaits the arrival of a nurse to take care of it. He and Edward Everett Horton, his valet, play nursemaids themselves, getting into one amusing difficulty after the other. Meanwhile a number of women with whom he has had dates wait and wait and wait for him to put in an appearance.

The nurse finally arrives. In the person of Miss Twelvetrees, an American girl stranded in Paris. She's soon in love with the baby... and with the baby's protector. The picture comes to an amusing climax when Maurice, Miss Twelvetrees, the baby, and Horton go to the house of Maurice's fiancée for a weekend. The events that follow lose him Miss Twelvetrees, but bring things to a whimsical end.

Norman Taurog, director of such films as "Skippy" and "The Phantom President," was in charge of the filming. Chevalier sings several songs.

It was said about a mousetrap And Now it is True About a Car!

Remember the old saying, "Make a better mousetrap... and the world will..." and so on? Well, after all these years, there does seem to be something to it.

Pontiac sales are ahead of last year—and still growing

You will admit that, in a year like this, that means the car must have something. Something that people want.

Now, Pontiac does offer a lot for the money. And its price is low.

Pontiac gives a big, beautiful package of Balanced Value.

What does that mean? Simply that Pontiac gives you Economy—but not at the expense of other qualities. It gives also Durability, Comfort, Safety, Performance and Appearance. It gives all-round Balanced Value for the owner.

It means that the car wears evenly through tens of thousands of miles of use. And at the end of two or three years it gives extra dividends in the way of higher trade-in value. Fisher bodies have Fisher No Draft Ventilation. Pontiac is a typical General Motors Value—a good car to buy.

Capital Echoes With Demands That Secretary Woodin Resign

Robinson Renews Demand For Recall Of Norman H. Davis, Ambassador-At-Large, Who Says He Won't Resign Under Fire

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, (UP)—Capitol Hill echoed with a demand that Secretary William E. Woodin resign, as word circulated that the musically-inclined head of the treasury was on all five lists of "friends" whom J. P. Morgan & Co. invited to buy securities at bargain prices.

Woodin was on all three lists disclosed thus far in the senate investigation of Morgan & Co. Two more lists await later publication. Senator Wheeler, Dem., Mont., who helped beat down opposition to Franklin D. Roosevelt at Chicago, was in the lead in the fight against Woodin.

"Secretary Woodin should resign," he declared flatly.

Senator Robinson, Rep., Ind., renewed his demand for recall of Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's personal ambassador in Europe, as it developed Davis not only is indebted on a personal loan from the Morgan bank, but was on one of the stock lists.

Revelation that Carvin Coolidge was a preferred purchaser of 4,000 shares of stock in Standard Brand, Inc., startled the investigating committee. So did the fact J. P. Morgan, who paid no income tax in the United States in 1930-31-32, was a heavy contributor to the British exchequer under the English inland tax law.

Spurred by the Morgan tax disclosures, the House Ways and Means committee moved to amend the pending tax bill to plug up some of the leaks by which wealthy men escape income levies.

Washington is alert for more big names on the bargain stock lists. The investigation has taken a political twist. Ferdinand Pecora, senate committee counsel, by repeated questions has brought out the political connections and influence of many of those whom Morgan & Co. let in on the "ground floor."

GENEVA, (UP)—Norman H. Davis, United States chief delegate at the disarmament conference, does not intend to resign under fire though for months he has wanted to retire, the United Press learned in seeking Davis' reply to senatorial attack on him in connection with the revelation he owed money to J. P. Morgan & Co.

Davis would make no statement regarding the senatorial inquiry into Morgan's affairs, or the news he was one of those on Morgan's preferred stock lists.

But it was learned he will not resign in such circumstances as might make it appear he was resigning because of the hearing or the attacks on him.

(Davis was quoted as saying to a London Daily Herald correspondent that he had no apology to make for his loan from Morgan, because it was a commercial loan for which he gave security and most of which he had repaid.)

Davis has contemplated resigning as soon as the disarmament conference work is cleared up, and it is possible he might resign at once if the conference adjourned before the World Economic Conference at London June 12.

Attack On Mortgage Moratorium Statute Sent To High Court

FORT WORTH, (UP)—A case attacking constitutionality of the Greathouse Mortgage Moratorium law was certified direct to the second court of civil appeals here for an early ruling.

The suit is that of E. E. Morrow, Grapevine banker, against W. Boyd Corbin. Morrow asked foreclosure of a $1,400 mortgage on land near Grapevine.

By certifying the case, 67th district court Judge Walter Morris avoided allowing a 30-day period for appeal, required had he made a decision.

Hundreds Ask Information On World Fair Trip

ARILENE—West Texans are becoming World's Fair minded.

That is the conviction of G. B. Sandefer, manager of the Simmons University Cowboy Band and tour director of the West Texas section of the All-Texas special train scheduled to leave June 11 for four days at the World's Fair, Chicago. The conviction comes from the deluge of requests for information which has been pouring into Sandefer's office since announcement a week ago of the West Texas section.

Nearly 100 requests for information Friday brought the total for the week to more than 300. At the present rate of daily increase the number is expected to exceed 1,000 at the expiration of the time limit for making reservations Sunday, June 18.

With the information requests is a trickle of reservations which likewise is gaining momentum daily. These totaled fifteen today. The first came Thursday from Stanton, 150 miles west of Arilene on the T. and P. These were followed by reservations from Big Spring, Midland, San Angelo, Cisco, Eastland, Albany, Tuscola and Sweetwater.

The West Texas section will be concentrated at Arilene and will leave at 8:40 a. m. Sunday, June 11th, as part of the Sunshine Special, the T. & P. crack passenger train. It will unite at Fort Worth to permit the Marshall, Elysian Fields and Southeastern railway, of Texas, to borrow $60,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, holding the road had not given adequate assurance of its ability to repay such a loan.

TOM MOONEY IN COURT FOR SHORT-LIVED TRIAL

flow of American long term capital, then those who direct this monopoly are chargeable with that obvious misinvestment at home and abroad which happened during the '20s. If, on the other hand, there is sharp competition, then it is most likely that the basic cause of the misinvestment of capital lies in the waste and disorder of an unregulated and blindly competitive system.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Pecora will make a clear demonstration as to which of these two equally undesirable, but essentially different, conditions confront us. For until we know the answer, we do not know whether our task is to break up a monopoly, to regulate a monopoly, or to control, as we are now beginning to do industry, a destructive competition.

This seems to me the essential line of the inquiry, not only with a view to fixing responsibility for what has happened in the past but with a view to reforms for the future. Moreover, until the truth on this point has been developed, there is really no standard by which judgment can be passed on the conduct of the various banking houses.

right here in the United States for particular industries. It follows that if there is a monopoly, the monopoly has been badly directed. But if there is chaotic competition among the issuing houses, then a wholly different set of questions needs to be asked. What one would want to know then is whether the bankers were honest according to the prevailing code, whether they were as prudent as it is possible to be under competitive conditions, whether they were as far seeing about the whole situation as men of their standing ought reasonably to be expected to be.

It is in the light of one or the other of these two general diagnoses, whichever is the true one, that not only the whole problem of investment banking but the individual records of individual houses should be studied. By proceeding in this fashion the Committee will not only be able to put blame where it belongs and not put it where it does not belong, but it will furnish a foundation for the reforms, either by law or custom or both, that are clearly necessary.

Pure Food And Drugs

A dispatch from Washington says that revisions of the federal food and drug law to provide a way of penalizing advertisers who mislead consumers is being seriously considered by administration leaders.

A number of people have pointed out that the existing law contains a number of loopholes. An unscrupulous manufacturer can take advantage of these to deceive the public very seriously.

And it is not only the public that needs protection; it is the reputable manufacturer and the reputable advertiser, as well. Most firms doing business under the food and drug law do not need to be restrained. They suffer as much as does the consuming public from the fact that a conscienceless few take advantage of the laws weakness.

Robert Piner, C. W. Cunningham, Fred Stephens and Lib Coffee have returned from a several days' fishing trip on the Llano river near Mason. They report fair luck.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The investigation of Private Bankers

In the first two days the Senate investigation of the private bankers produced a vivid illustration of the well known vice of the capital gains and losses section of the income tax law and has exposed conspicuous examples of the system of favoritism to insiders which is so very common in business, but yet so very shocking. It is a system which can be explained but can not be defended, and if this investigation did nothing more than to outlaw the system by force of public opinion, it would have done a most useful work. But it has an even larger task to perform, and that is to throw light upon the management and control of the capital market. In the mass of the testimony it is difficult as yet to discover whether the committee and Mr. Pecora have any clear plan of investigation into this subject.

There is a very great deal that it is most desirable to find out about the function and practices of the large private banking houses, about their place in our economic system, and about public policy in regard to them. The present investigation is an unusual opportunity. The bankers themselves, as any one can see from the testimony of Mr. Morgan and of Mr. Whitney, are in a mood, which is unprecedented, to remove the veils of mystery which surround them. There is an Administration in office and there is a Congress which are gan & Co.—or whether the business is in fact highly competitive and dangerously chaotic. In developing public policy, and in fixing personal responsibility, it is of first importance to know which of these two diagnoses is the true one. If there is a monopoly which directs the obviously not afraid of new departures in public policy. All that is lacking is the knowledge to formulate reforms, and that knowledge it ought to be the business of Mr. Pecora and his committee to supply. It is clear enough, I think, why this inquiry has been undertaken. The chief function of the large private bankers is to direct the flow of the people's savings into long term investments in securities. They transact other business, but this is their principal role in the economic life of the country. Now, in the period up to 1929 a very great volume of securities, representing loans to domestic corporations, to local governments, and to foreign corporations and foreign governments, were issued through these houses and sold to the public and to institutions which are trustees of the people's money. On these securities there have been heavy losses. The fundamental question, therefore, is whether the system under which savings are converted into capital investments is properly managed and sufficiently regulated.

In seeking an answer to this question the first thing that would need to be explored is whether the business of long term capital investment is in fact a monopoly—whether, in other words, there is a Money Trust directed by J. P. Mor-

BARGAIN DIZZY

Buying is bewildering these days. The windows and shelves of many stores are filled with unfamiliar packages bearing "bargain prices" that are temptingly low. Clerks frequently urge you to try something "just as good" as the dependable brands you know and ask for. But it takes more than a low price to make a bargain! More than a clerk's promise to give you quality! The safe bargains to buy now are the products made by manufacturers who have reputations to uphold. Brands which you know—either through your own experience or by their advertising. Remember this whenever you shop: "Just-as-good" brands must usually be made cheaper to sell for such a cheap price. All too frequently, the only reason they are urged upon you is because they pay maker and dealer more profit than other products which are better known and of better quality. And don't forget this: Many of the familiar, reliable brands now cost less than they have in years. But only the price is lower. Quality is still high.

DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XXII

Sandra, in a deep chair of stick with cushions daintily striped in yellow and orange, leaned back and regarded her caller thoughtfully.

"I think you're perfectly right, Geraldine," she observed, lighting a cigarette with a flick of her long, slim fingers. "I think people are talking and it would be well to get him away."

"But that's just the trouble," protested Dan's sister who, lean and vigorous in her white linen riding outfit, lounged in the porch swing. "He won't go. Mother wants him to go to Yosemite with her. He says he's too busy. Then my cousin May wrote us about his dude ranch. It's what Dan has always been crazy about—and I thought if you'd go along we could make up a party."

She left the sentence hanging. Sandra's eyes sparkled.

"It would be fun," she said with enthusiasm. "You and I—and Danny and perhaps Lansing Waterman. He gets home next week. I wonder—" her eyes narrowed, considering. "I wonder if Charles Eastace could be persuaded to go, too."

"My dear!" Geraldine's laugh held a touch of malice. "That would be perfect if we could swing it. Two birds with one stone."

"Leave it to me!" Sandra got to her feet, smiling. "I'll see what can be done."

Geraldine's voice held a note of envy.

"You're a wonder," she breathed. "If you can do it, mother will be everlastingly grateful. What she says, of course, is that she could put her foot down—be firm with Dan about seeing her so much—but she would just make him mullish. You know how he can be! Just that touch of opposition," averred Geraldine wisely, "might lead to something serious. Where?"

Sandra finished the sentence for her. "Whereas," she cried gaily, "we lure Danny off to this delicious place, have a grand time and meanwhile he forgets all about the girl back home."

"Exactly!" Geraldine's face was a brown face, so like Dan's but without the touch of softness which would have made her, as a woman, irresistible, flushed with excitement.

But they reckoned without their host this time. Dan was mullish, refusing to leave Belvedere for any prospect, however alluring. His father, consulted as to plans, brought pressure to bear, summoning Dan to his private office one golden August morning.

Dan liked and respected his father. The keen-eyed, graying man usually kept his hands out of household affairs, preferring to let his wife decide such matters. This time, however, he had not been allowed to choose the line of least resistance. There had been a conference in Mrs. Cardigan's dressing room the night before. This interview was the result.

"Dan, what's this I hear about you not wanting a vacation with mother and the folks?"

Dan squirmed uncomfortably. "Had enough vacation. Thought I'd stick around and see how things are going. I know they haven't been so good for us lately—"

His father interrupted, rather testily. "Never mind, never mind! It seems your mother's set her heart on this trip and wants you along. I don't know what the notion is, exactly. Bears, maybe. You're to save 'em from dangers on this dude ranch." His eyes twinkled.

"Those places are safe as Main street," Dan muttered, sullenly. "Don't see why I have to go tramping off with all those women. Anyway, they'll have plenty of protection. Lance Waterman'll be there and both the Franklin kids. They're grown up now. As for bears," his tone was contemptuous. "Gerry and Sandra can handle a gun as well as I can."

"I know that. I know that." His father's voice was a rumble deep in his throat. It made the old man uncomfortable to lecture Dan this way. No sense to it, at all. It was rank foolishness, spending all that money on a trip with the market the way it'd been. He was worried about money, no mistake about it. No good suggesting it to Mother, though. She'd just flare up and tell him he ought to manage things better. Well, maybe he should have done that. Worried about money, that made him think of something else he'd been meaning to speak to Dan about.

He cleared his throat, embarrassed. "Dan—us—what's this I hear about you and Sandra?"

"Me and—?" Dan looked blank for an instant, then smiled. "I'm sure, Dad, I don't know what you've heard."

"Mother thinks Sandra's pretty sweet on you. Now don't get sore, boy. You know how mothers are. Mother'd be mighty pleased to see you make a go of that and so I might say, would I, Sandra's a fine girl, you know. Slick as a race horse—lots of spirit. Now don't misunderstand me, Dan, but she's got lots of money. What passes for a fortune these days. Her father's a shrewd business man and he's done some smart investing. Sandra's all he's got."

Dan had turned in his chair, was looking unseeing out the window. He did not reply.

"It would be a fine thing for you, every way you look at it," persisted the old man. "I'm not saying this without having given the matter thought." He glanced casually at the silent young man. "Well, I'll say no more. I won't bother you about it now. Only the business part what I hoped it would be, son, to pass along to you. You've been brought up to like expensive things, I'd be the last one in the world to suggest you should marry a girl for her money, but there's no question of that in this sense. No man in his senses could help admiring Sandra."

He waited for affirmation and Dan accorded it, grudgingly. "I suppose not," he said.

"Good, good! I'm glad you feel that way about it. That's way I agreed to talk to you about this trip. It would please mother, it would please Sandra, and most of all, it would please me. How about it?"

"Let me think about it, Dad!" Dan pleaded awkwardly.

"Certainly, certainly." Both men were on their feet now, relieved that the interview was at an end. "But don't make up your mind without thinking about what I've said."

When Dan met Monica that night he told her of it—baldly, not sparing her.

"Dad wants me to go west with Sandra and the crowd. He thinks I ought to fix it up with Sandra—make a go of it."

He could not see how white she had turned in the darkness. Her voice, when it came, was cool, a trifle distant. "What are you going to do about it?"

Dan felt particularly badgered that day. He was thoroughly out of temper. Monnie's dispassionate gentleness only served to irritate him further. He said what he had not meant to say—what he did not really feel.

"Oh, guess I better string along with them, just to please Mother. It might be fun."

Monnie withdrew her hand from his arm where he had tucked it only a moment ago.

"Go by all means if you feel like that," she told him. Her heart was very sore. It was full to bursting. Things had gone along too smoothly of late, she reminded herself. Dan had been so sweet and considerate. She had felt so secure, so happy, with the knowledge of their secret truth deep in her heart, with

Metcalfe Placed On Interstate Council

AUSTIN—Representative Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo has been named by Speaker Coker Stevenson as delegate to represent the Texas House of Representatives in the interstate assembly of the American Legislators Association. He was also named by the association as chairman of the house council, consisting of five members of the Texas house, representing Texas in the national council.

The assembly is composed of a delegate from each house of the legislatures of the various states, and one delegate appointed by the governor of each state. It is primarily concerned with the elimination of duplication in matters of taxation between the several states and the federal government.

It has been successful already in securing the inclusion in the report of the U. S. committee on finance of the conclusion that after June 30, 1934, the federal government shall withdraw from the field of taxation of gas and leave this to the several states. Incidentally this was done on the suggestion of Senator Margie O'Neal of Texas, who represents the Texas senate on the commission.

Former Ford County Sheriff Convicted And Given 7-Year Sentence

QUANAH—Que F. Miller, former sheriff and tax collector of Ford county, was convicted Thursday of misappropriating public funds and given a seven-year penitentiary sentence. Defense counsel expected to file an appeal.

The case, involving an alleged misappropriation of approximately $16,000, was brought here on change of venue from Crowell, the county seat of Ford county.

Thursday's sentence was Miller's second conviction on the charge. He was given a four-year sentence at the first trial in October 1931, at Crowell, but the Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the decision, pointing out defects in the judge's charge to the jury. Another case is still pending.

Miller also is under a Federal charge of counterfeiting conspiracy at New Orleans, alleging possession

NEW YORK By James McCallin Devaluation— Dollar devaluation is not as dead as you might think. Private discussions in advance of the Economic Conference are aimed at a working agreement with the British on currency stabilization.

Financial New York is not nearly so frightened at the prospect as it was a few weeks ago. You can expect howls of outraged protest if action is taken but they will be chiefly stage effects to convince the western inflationists that they have been given what they want.

Insiders hear that one of the proposals under discussion between treasury experts here and abroad is a general writing-up of gold to around 140 shillings per ounce.

You can expect our attitude at the Economic Conference to be cooperative but we will politely decline to play doormat for French and British theories.

There will be plenty of yells for more active inflation before the summer is out. Wheat speculators have started already. A group which had a 20-point profit howled murder at the recent five-cent reaction.
