SPEAKS ONLY FOR SELF, HE TELLS SOLONS

Tariff Revision Held Very Essential Factor

DISPUTED FEE IS OMITTED IN PLAN

Federal Board Would Have Extensive Powers

WASHINGTON, April 3. (P)—Secretary Hyde told the senate agriculture committee today the immediate need for assisting agriculture is to pass the McNary bill at the special session. Mr. Hyde proposed a broad relief program including governmental assistance in marketing, revision of tariff on agricultural products development of inland waterways. This he said would require a period of years and could not all be carried out in the special session.

Asked by chairman McNary if the bill he introduced last fall which did not contain the controversial McNary-Haugen equalization fee provision would meet the immediate requirements, Secretary Hyde replied passage of a bill similar in content to this measure appeared to be the clear mandate of the country.

A strong federal board, he said, was necessary, with authority to loan money to stabilization agencies to take up seasonal surpluses and feed them out of the market slowly to maintain a more constant price level.

The secretary was questioned closely by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, as to what he would suggest to take place of the equalization fee as a means of defraying possible losses in the handling of crop surpluses. Mr. Hyde replied the federal board should be created with sufficient authority to work out all of the multitude of problems involved in the farmer's troubles. The secretary read his views from a prepared statement. Although he had had a long conference with President Hoover last evening, he emphasized he was speaking for himself alone.

FIRST MURDER TRIAL IN LONG PERIOD OPENS

PARENT-TEACHER CONVENTION IS SET IN MOTION AT LUNCHEON AS MRS. C. E. HUTCHINS PRESIDES

State and district officers of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations set in motion the three-day annual conference of the eighth district and gave a deeper, fuller meaning to the parent-teacher movement and its purposes, as they spoke to an interested audience at noon today at a luncheon in their honor.

With Mrs. C. E. Hutchins, local general chairman, presiding, each officer introduced herself, giving her office and the name of her home city. She then told in one sentence what Parent-Teacher work means to her. Short succinct, and original, these expressions were as varied as the several personalities, yet through them all ran one common thought—the wish to serve.

In each was a beautiful sentiment and together these expressions were an almost perfect explanation of the purposes and realizations of the parent-teacher work. In the order given they were as follows:

Mrs. Noyes Darling Smith, Austin, state president: "Parent-Teacher work means to me the most splendid opportunity for doing something for somebody else."
Mrs. J. M. Crain, Claude, district president: "It means to me the making of each locality the best place for all of us to reside."
Mrs. Emanuel Toomin, Fort Worth, state chairman of humane education: "To me, Parent-Teacher work means an understanding parenthood, with closer relations between parents and teachers."

Mrs. J. W. Sanders, Amarillo, district fifth vice-president: "The Parent-Teacher organization is to me one of the greatest educational institutions; for it educates parents, and parents above everyone else, need education."

Two major changes in the convention program were announced today by Mrs. J. M. Crain, district president. Mrs. Emanuel Toomin, state chairman of humane education, who was scheduled to speak Friday on "Humane Education," will speak tomorrow morning on the same subject. H. T. Bruten, president of Clarendon college, also scheduled to speak on Friday, will deliver his address "Sound Health" tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. Toomin will speak to the school children at 11:15 tomorrow morning at the Central auditorium, with the purpose of organizing Junior Bands of Mercy, with definite humane program.

Mrs. T. J. Page, Claude, corresponding secretary of eighth district: "The Parent-Teacher movement seems to me the practical application of the highest principals of religion."
Mrs. W. R. Ellis, Panhandle, district recording secretary: "The Parent-Teacher association means to me cooperative mother love for your child and mine."

Mrs. J. T. Sims, Clarendon, first president of the eighth district and "mother of the Parent-Teacher association in the Panhandle": "Parent-Teacher means to me association with big minds and with our teachers and children."
Mrs. B. W. Baer, Texline, fourth vice-president: "The Parent-Teacher association means to me cooperation."

MEASURE NOT VALID UNDER LAW IN TEXAS

Holds City Cannot Go Contrary to Old Statutes

GREENVILLE IS DENIED COURT

Moody Unable to See Need for Appeals Body

AUSTIN, April 3. (P)—Governor Moody today vetoed the Sunday movie picture show bill and the measure which proposed to create a court of civil appeals at Greenville. The picture show bill would have repealed a portion of the Sunday blue laws which have been on the statute books for many years, to allow showing of theatres on the Sabbath after 1 p. m. Most cities are now disregarding the law, proponents of the repeal stated.

Another measure which would have permitted a co-insurance clause to be inserted in policies on cotton, grain and other products in the process of shipping or storing also met with executive disapproval and was vetoed. The governor said he thought the measure might undermine faith in fire insurance underwriters.

The motion picture measure was blue-penciled because he believed it invalid, the governor explained. He declared the measure, as written, would have legalized operation of theatres on Sundays in any incorporated town unless a city council, by ordinance prohibited acts allowed by the bill. Citing statutes covering this phase, the governor maintained the legislature could not authorize a city council to pass an ordinance suspending a general law.

In refusing to sign the Greenville court bill, the chief executive said that he did not agree that the necessity existed for another court at the present time.

Cox Will Stop Trash Dumping on Main Highways

A reward of $10 will be paid by Commissioner Lewis O. Cox of precinct 2, to the person who gives information leading to the apprehension of those dumping paper, cans, bottles or refuse of any kind on any public highway or traveled road in this precinct.

"This thing of dumping loads of refuse along the side of the roads in this precinct has got to stop," Commissioner Cox said this morning. "We have a city dump ground for all such material."

"Some of our main traveled highways are covered with piles of paper, cans, bottles and other trash lying in the bar-pits. Rather than pay a few cents to have their trash hauled away, residents take it out and throw it along the highways," the commissioner continued with considerable heat.

Pampa's Biggest Used Car Sale Starts Tomorrow, Dealers Say

Pampa automobile dealers will begin tomorrow the largest used car sale ever held in Pampa. Approximately 200 used cars will be located on the vacant lots south of the old and new Schneider hotel and offered for sale beginning tomorrow. All cars are in good condition and in a big price range. The sale will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday this week and the same days next week. At 3 and 7 o'clock each day cars will be auctioned to the highest bidder.

Eight dealers are co-operating in the sale. Salesmen of the dealers will be on the grounds to show the cars. Tradesmen will be accepted and what the dealers characterize as a liberal allowance will be given on used cars. The dealers are using this opportunity to acquaint the people of the Pampa trade territory with the fact that local dealers are in position to furnish almost any kind of used car at prices that are lower than in most Texas cities.

"It's Like This—"

PAMPA "WHEAT CITY OF THE PLAINS" AND OIL CAPITAL OF THE PANHANDLE, today welcomes the delegates of the eighth district of the Texas Congress of Mothers and P.-T. A. associations.

Pampa wishes it known in the beginning that this is not "an oil town", but a permanently constructed, progressive community of home-loving American citizens. The oil has wrought wonders, changing a thriving country town into a city of 9,000 inhabitants, but there is no smell of gas and no noise of clanking oil machinery in Pampa, and the imporing of wealth has been manipulated so as to avoid the mistakes of many cities to which oil comes.

Pampa, therefore, is in a position to welcome the delegates in the spirit in which they come. Pampa is proud of her schools and takes great interest in her children. The 2,100 pupils have good facilities in the four ward schools and high school building, together with one of the best gymnasiums in this section. Scholastically, the system is on the All-Southern list of accredited schools and has 34 units of affiliation. Pampa ranks seventh in the state in proportion of wealth per scholastic.

The local P.-T. A. groups are representative types and have continuous activities for the benefit of teachers, pupils, and the parents themselves. Thrice welcome then, delegates; the city is yours.

The Parent-Teacher association has won a dignified place in American education. Formerly looked upon as an organization formed to criticize the teachers and make the strong arm of the parent felt, it is now regarded as the teachers' ally, and the parent is more schooled than schooling.

Parenthood is granted no masters degree by Mother nature. Nature's undefiled instincts bear the wisdom of the ages, but that wisdom is incompetent in the face of the complexities of modern life. The parent may be equal to the task of rearing their child through infancy, but when he reaches the outer world problems arise thick and fast.

Th parents must be educated with the child if for no other reason than to be in a receptive mood for the instruction given them by the teachers and the school nurse and physicians. Moreover, the principles of pedagogy are by no means fixed, and the methods used in the childhood of the parents are not those approved at the present.

The rigid continental education which made children act like miniature men and women with all the stiffness and unnatural repressions of adulthood, was broken by the experiments of Pestalozzi, Rousseau, and the more modern school of philosopher and teachers, but parents sometimes fall into the ancient practice of treating their children like grownups.

The proper education of the child in all ages is a highly scientific study, hence the parents who enter sympathetically into the teaching program and home cooperation have plenty to learn. The psychology of learning, of adolescence, and the ramifications of these subjects provide fascinating studies.

Furthermore, the P.-T. A. member finds much to do in helping with general school activities, such as providing lyciums, entertainments by home talent, furnishing pictures and playground equipment, and enlisting general community support for school projects.

The delegates who are arriving in Pampa today are primarily interested in the welfare of the child. This interest commends them and their program to the entire community.

TWINKLES

Old Twink welcomes the P.-T. A. delegates, and begs leave to raise the question, "Are gentlemen parents?"

We suspect the answer will be that, insofar as P.-T. A. is usually concerned, men are not parents. The males of the species are prone to leave many important side issues to the ladies, and the latter, fortunately, are carrying on the work.

Twink barely escaped being a teacher. In fact, he might have become a teacher when he received a permanent certificate had he not arrived at the permanent conclusion he would have been a poor teacher. Perusal of this page, however, might suggest that he has never quite abandoned the teacher's attitude.

"Fords Collide on Hitt Street" says a Missouri paper. Maybe we'd better change the name of our Somerville to Hitt to harmonize recent tendencies.

There's one redeeming feature about Panhandle winds—they do not attach themselves to many leaves, although in the fall the familiar "tumbleweed" is quite annoying.

Moody Praised for Wirtz Bill Veto

AUSTIN, April 3. (AP)—Having vetoed the anti-bolter bill, Governor Moody today planned to clean up all remaining measures left by the legislature.

"Welfare of the state and welfare of the party" were cited by the governor in disapproving the bill designed to punish democrats who left the party last fall.

Governor Moody, who disapproved of the candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, but who voted for him, was receiving congratulations from places far and wide.

Last night Senator Thomas B. Love of Dallas, leader of the anti-Tammianites, sent Governor Moody a message praising him for his action. Senator Love had given notice on the floor of the senate when the Wirtz bill came up that if it were enacted into law it would drive from the democratic party a majority of the members of the organization. He threatened organization of an independent movement to drive the "Tammianites" from power.

"Bill" Thompson Forces in Victory

CHICAGO, April 3. (AP)—Forces of Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson won nine out of 11 aldermanic positions decided by voters yesterday and retained a firm grip on the city council.

The victory in the February 26 election, coupled with that of yesterday, gives the mayor and supporters on his "America First" patrol 36 out of the 59 votes in the city council.

The vote was tight and the election was one of the most mild-mannered in years. The only violence reported to police was the slugging of Policeman William Hanke, investigator for the state's attorney's office, who tried to disperse a crowd of loiterers near a polling place.

FRIENDS OF SOUTHERN CROSS FLIERS HOPEFUL

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 3. (AP)—Friends of the missing Southern Cross aviators today hoped for a fortunate circumstance to overcome the otherwise almost certain hopelessness of their plight.

Only extreme good fortune, most thought, could eliminate the rescue of Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith, his pilot, Charles T. Uim, and the two men with whom Sunday flashed a mysterious message to the world and disappeared somewhere east of Wyndham, Western Australia.

Did You Know That—

Dempsy, the promoting man, copied another sneak on the Garden . . . When he signed Izzy Schwartz and Spider Pladner for a flyweight championship match . . .

By DeWITT MACKENZIE (Copyright, 1925, Associated Press)

The first grey streaks which heralded a sunless dawn were just beginning to rear themselves mushroom like into the sky from the far off edge of the sinking sea of mud called Flanders.

Down to the south of the Ypres salient, in this cockpit of Europe, the British front line trenches over a stretch of perhaps five miles were manned with grim lipped, silent soldiers who were waiting for the signal to "go over the top."

There was scarcely a sound within the trench itself. Occasionally a German shell found the British front line—a moment of living hell, moans, and then silence.

Within the trench was silence, but out in front, and just in back, was a ceaseless crash of splintering steel.

For hours the British gunners had been bombarding the enemy in preparation for the infantry attack. A tiny bit more light was all they needed.

Then would come the British barrage, behind which Tommy Atkins would make his way blindly out across no man's land to do or die.

No man spoke. No man looked at his comrade. No man had slept for 24 hours—a day and a night in the crater of a seething volcano. They were shell shocked and exhausted, and only raw nerve kept their tired bodies erect at the parapet. Man could have screamed with the anguish of it, but the horrid nightmare held their throats in an unrelenting grip.

The broad shoulders of Captain Bob hunched against the trench among his dial. His eyes were on the illuminated dial of his wrist watch, counting off the seconds and minutes. His men saw the big fellow standing there as they had seen him scores of times before—calm and steady. It gave a fellow courage just to look at Captain Bob.

But Captain Bob was far from being as calm as he appeared. He was waging a nightly battle with himself as he stood there counting, counting—God how long would it be before the hands of his watch touched the zero hour?

Something queer had come over Captain Bob, something he had never experienced before. His nerves were playing havoc with him. He was filled with terror—stark horror of that coming rush out across no man's land. He, the hero of a hundred fights, was afraid. He tried to crush the feeling, but it would not down. And not only was he afraid, but he was suffering that greater torture—fear of being afraid.

Two minutes more and he would be giving the signal, would have to lead his men into action. Could he make it. He tried to pull himself together.

Came the great moment. Captain Bob raised his hand. With a cry his men swarmed over the top of the parapet. Out there ahead the welcome British barrage crashed down and began its steamroller progress.

But Captain Bob didn't move. He slumped weakly up against the wall of the trench. Tommy, standing next him, Captain, hesitated in surprise and terror seized him, too. The sergeant majors quick eye caught the situation.

"Over the top, you bloody—", he snarled at Tommy. "Or I'll shoot you through the guts."

The sergeant leaned over his captain.

"What's the matter, sir?" he asked. "Get hit?"

Captain Bob shook his head. "I—just can't make it, sergeant major," he whispered. "I'm done. My nerve is gone."

The sergeant bared his teeth. He didn't like the captain, anyway.

"For tuppence I'd shoot you, too, you yellow swine," he grated. "But I'll leave you for the firing squad, you—"

The assistant provost marshal of Cassel tucked the order into his tunic pocket and sighed. Another trip to the front line to arrest a man for cowardice; another court martial; another firing squad.

The A. P. M. didn't like his job. It was a captain fellow this time, too, a Captain Bob. What a play! The A. P. M. wondered who Captain Bob might be, and sighed again as he started on his unwelcome journey.

The sergeant major found the A. P. M. along the trench and finally pointed out a broad back down the line.

"There's your man, sir," said the sergeant, and he licked his lips.

The A. P. M. walked up and tapped the captain on the shoulder and announced:

"I've come for you."

By DeWITT MACKENZIE (Copyright, 1925, Associated Press)

The colonel glowered over his nose glasses and added a word:

"That's all you may go. They need you back in the trenches. Better stop at La Belle Sauvage for 24 hours, though and get rested up. Get some good food and get some good wine. Laugh. And next time you're on leave drop in and see me."

"Shut up, sir," snapped the colonel. "I'm talking. What really was the matter, anyway? You've been over the top a hundred times. Old tummy give out on you? Nerves just sort of snap? That's it. Had is myself plenty of times. Funny what a stomach will do to a fellow what? Leave him without warning sometimes. And damn it, a man can't fight without a stomach. It's a fact."

"The black apron, national badge of French school children, is under fire and has been forbidden in one Paris school."

"I beg your pardon," said the A. P. M. "but I've made a mistake."

"Oh, no you haven't," replied Captain Bob quietly. "I'm your man. You want me for cowardice. I'll come along if you are ready."

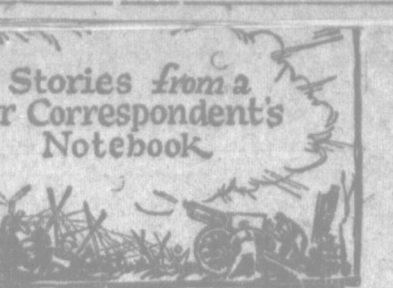

Captain Bob faced his superior officer with a crash of heels and then stood at attention, eyes straight front.

The gray haired colonel tugged at his stubby moustache and glowered, just as he had done a thousand times before at this lad whom he long had known and loved.

"Admit it all, man, don't stand there like an Egyptian dummy," growled the old chap. "Sit down and try to look intelligent. What's all this anyway? They tell me you're afraid of Germans. That so, what?"

"I—that is—yes, sir," replied the unhappy captain. "I refused to go over the top."

"Refused, dammit, refused" roared

THIS HAS HAPPENED SHANDSONE HARRY BORDEN is not between one and four o'clock Saturday afternoon. RUTH LESTER, his secretary, finds his body Monday morning sprawled beneath the stairway window of her private office.

McMann's detective viewpoint, questions the following suspects: BEN BORDEN, HENRY MANNING, a stranger wife and mother of his two children; RITA DUBOIS, Borden's club secretary; and JACK HAYWARD, Ruth's fiancé, whose office is across the narrow stairway from Borden's.

McMann's belief is Jack's guilt is strengthened by Jack's admission that he returned to the second floor Saturday afternoon, and by the testimony of MICKY MORAN and OTTO FEILIGER, elevator boys who saw Jack, Jack's friend, unwillingly admit having heard Jack threaten Borden's life Saturday morning.

McMann questions BENNY SMITH, Borden's office boy; ANNE BORDEN, Borden's secretary; MARY SIDY and LETTY MILLER, seventh floor scrubwomen; CLEO DUNN, Borden's stenographer; and JAKE BAILEY, his butler.

MARTHA MANNING is brought into the case by Ruth Lester, she was arrested by Jack's admission that he returned to the second floor Saturday afternoon, and by the testimony of MICKY MORAN and OTTO FEILIGER, elevator boys who saw Jack, Jack's friend, unwillingly admit having heard Jack threaten Borden's life Saturday morning.

that Borden's dead, Walters can freely admit that his precious client ought to have been in jail years ago.

"By the way," Ruth began casually, "have you found any trace of the old man who came to see Mr. Borden Saturday morning? The poor old thing who muttered he'd get even with Mr. Borden for having ruined him?"

"Well, as a matter of fact, we haven't spent much time on the old bird," McMann confessed. "We had nothing to go on but your meager description, and there's no evidence at all that he came back Saturday afternoon. The elevator operators are sure of that much."

"I just thought I'd ask," Ruth apologized meekly. "I then she changed the subject. 'I suppose Mr. Walters knew all about Martha Manning and her son—Borden's son?'"

"Naturally," McMann agreed. "She's even called on Walters to get him to use his influence with Borden, but Walters admits he advised his client to fight the case if the woman carried out her threat to sue for support for the child. He did, however, advise Borden to create a trust fund for the boy, but Borden got his back up because the woman was hounding him to do it. A stubborn devil—as well as a good many other kinds of devil," McMann added. "But personally, I'm glad he was a vindictive devil as well, for I intend to earn that five thousand."

"By arresting Jack Hayward?" Ruth asked, smiling. McMann hesitated, looked as if he did not relish the thought of wiping that cheerful smile off a face whose beauty and sweetness had made his grim business a little less unpleasant than usual. "It's—uh, Miss Lester, but damned if there's any other course open to me, Police Commissioner Weeks let me hold up the arrest last night, because of his old friendship for your father and his sympathy for you—"

"And you pleaded for more time because you knew your case against Jack was more full of holes than a sieve of Swiss cheese?" Ruth interrupted vehemently. "And nothing that has developed today has strengthened your case against him? Rather, everything has weakened it!"

"If you mean the Manning woman's story, I don't agree," McMann argued reasonably. "I consider that Martha Manning left us exactly where she found us—even if I did catch her in a lie or two. I think it's a pretty safe bet that she sees here Friday night, and left those fingerprints. And we have no more evidence that she was here Thursday than that your death-threat-muttering old man came back. That's right, isn't it?"

"Yes," Ruth agreed. "Of course, I've got a man devoted to keep an eye on her, but I don't expect anything to come of it."

"And you still don't think Rita did it, that she only robbed the dead body?" Ruth asked, still in that meek, yet-a-big-clever-detective tone. "I'm only a little girl."

"A CASE against Rita would be more full of holes than your piece of Swiss cheese; it would be a sieve," McMann retorted positively. "As far as murder goes, I mean. But as for robbery—she'll do a nice little stretch for that, unless she knows the jury for an acquittal, with those black eyes of hers. Which she probably will," he added with gloomy cynicism. "But of course you'll have done your duty," Ruth sympathized.

"So you see where all this leads us," McMann summed up, almost apologetically. "Mrs. Borden had already got her check. No reason at all for her to come back and shoot her husband, because he'd said a sarcastic word or two to make her cry. Besides, the elevator boys swear she didn't come back, and I can't see her walking all the way up six flights of stairs, with cold-blooded murder in her heart—especially since it's pretty evident that she loved her husband, rotten though he was. Hayward's the only suspect left, now that the office boy is out of the picture. And speaking of Benny reminds me of a bad turn the poor kid did you when he was willing to confess to murder to help you."

Ruth was startled. "Benny? What do you mean?" "Just this," the detective began slowly, with dreadful significance. "I think the kid was telling about as much truth as lies. What became of your gun and who closed this affair?"

"I thought you had explained that, satisfactorily to yourself at least," Ruth interrupted spiritedly, "by demonstrating that Jack could have closed it from his own window by using the windowpane."

The detective grinned. "It could have been a good trick—and maybe that's how it was done. But let's suppose that Benny did come back Saturday afternoon—a second time, I mean."

"To murder Mr. Borden?" Ruth asked scornfully. "Oh, no! For the same reason he came back the first time—to borrow your gun for target practice. I don't believe it was gone out of your desk when he came back the first time, but that Borden bawled him out for meddling in your desk and sent him packing—just as both Benny and Minnie have said."

"But Benny knew Borden was going to Winter Haven on the 2:15. Not knowing Borden had been killed, the kid sneaks back, and walks up the stairs as he said he did, so that he won't be seen and questioned, possibly caught, with the stolen gun. He has his key. He comes in, finds the gun gone, and goes into Borden's office to see if it is there. He finds Borden dead, and the gun some distance away. No powder burns on the man's vest, so the kid, used to firearms as he undoubtedly is, knows that Borden has not committed suicide."

"He thinks first of you. I got it out of him yesterday that he had overheard Borden making love to you and your scream. He thinks you did it, and takes the gun to protect you. Then he notices the open window and wonders if it could have been Hayward, who, he knows, has seen and overheard the love-making and scream business, too. Furthermore, Micky Moran has admitted that he told Benny, on the kid's first return, about your scene with Hayward at the elevator at 1:20, when Hayward again threatened Borden's life."

"He closes the window—in case it had been Hayward who did it—Hayward whom you're in love with, and who must therefore be protected, too. With your gun accounted for, and the closing of the window, and with Rita to rob the dead body of the money that was missing, I can't see a flaw in my case against Hayward—and I'm mighty sorry for your sake."

RUTH hunched aside his sympathy. "And you think you can force Benny to admit to being an accessory after the fact, when he was so anxious to protect me and the man I love that he would confess to murder?"

McMann shrugged. "I've simply laid all my cards on the table. I wanted you to know why it is my duty to arrest John C. Hayward for the murder of Harry Borden."

The girl went very white. There was no mirth, no assumed meekness in her eyes or voice now. She rose, and steadied her trembling body against the desk. "Mr. McMann, you've been so good—so wonderfully kind to me. Won't you please grant me one more favor? Won't you promise not to arrest Jack before five o'clock today? I can't explain now, but if you will let me leave here now, with permission to be gone not more than one hour, I promise you will not be sorry."

The girl's intense earnestness apparently touched the hard-bitten detective. "One hour? . . . All right, Miss Lester, but on condition that you do not go to the hospital and do any more vamping on poor Benny."

It was a quarter past three when Ruth Lester left the Starbridge Building on her unexplained mission, and just four o'clock when she returned, her cheeks rose-pink again, her eyes luminous with victory. Just outside the entrance to the building she paused, and took from the pocket of her dress the four tightly folded sheets of what she had ruefully admitted to Detective Birdwell sounded "a lot like fiction." In a blank space on the first page, opposite the numeral 4, she wrote in the answer to the question which she had gone out to ask . . .

"An' again it is proved—'truth is stranger than fiction,'" she murmured exultingly, as she refolded the typed sheets and returned them to her pocket.

IN the lobby of the Starbridge Building she ran plump into just such a bit of drama as every big-city dweller lives in the hope of witnessing and so seldom does. A uniformed policeman and a plain-clothes detective—one of McMann's innumerable assistants on the Borden case—were struggling with a frenzied young man, a quite magnificent young man, or crow-black hair, jet eyes, perfect features, olive skin and, immeasurably elegant clothes. A young man who was cursing violently in a foreign language.

"What is the matter?" Ruth cried, above the hubbub, and the detective, who had just succeeded in thinking his wrist with that of the foreigner, volunteered the answer: "A bird the whole department's been looking for, Miss Lester, and we find him here! Yes, ma'am! Walked in not five minutes ago, and I spotted him. When I told him the police want him, he draws a gun on me—says he come to kill his pretty partner-leather head!"

Ramon Romero! Rita Dubois' dancing partner at the Golden Slipper and her husband's dunder, Ruth Lester followed the trio into the elevator, the crowd having been roughly forced back by the uniformed policeman.

ALL THE OIL THE TINY MOTOR WILL EVER NEED IS SEALED WITHIN THE MOTOR HOUSING

ONE OF THESE SNOW-WHITE CABINETS WILL BE ADDED ATTRACTION TO ANY KITCHEN

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

THERE IS AN EXACT STYLE AND MODEL THAT WILL SUIT YOUR NEED FOR REFRIGERATION PERFECTLY

YOUR COOLING PROBLEMS SHOULD AND WILL END THE MINUTE ONE IS INSTALLED

The engineers and scientists in the General Electric laboratories worked for fifteen years perfecting this design—worked to develop a refrigerator that would be thoroughly efficient and virtually trouble-proof.

By the very nature of the design, the entire responsibility for satisfactory performance rests with the manufacturer. Every part of the machinery is built, tested and retested in the General Electric factory.

The assembled mechanism is sealed in this electrically welded casing which sets directly on top of the cabinet. It is then put through a final test.

You never see the machinery—we never see it. No one is responsible for it except General Electric and they guarantee its absolute efficiency.

When the refrigerator is delivered, all you need to do is plug the cord into any electric outlet—just as you do your fan or iron. Automatically, quietly, economically, this mechanism which you never see and which you need never think about, gives you perfect refrigeration.

Come in today and see the various models. Easy payments can be arranged, if you prefer.
