"It's Like This—"

CITY ATTORNEYS in their recent Austin convention decided to propose an amendment to the "home rule" provisions of the state constitution. One of their members said "some amendment should be drafted to put all municipalities on their own responsibilities without being interfered with by limitations fixed by the general statutes."

A tentative amendment would authorize cities having more than 5,000 inhabitants to adopt or amend their charters by majority vote and empower their governments to "levy, assess, and collect such tax as may be authorized by their charters."

The present constitutional provision is that the tax levy may not exceed 2 1/2 per cent of the taxable property. While the limitation prevents free action and in many instances keeps cities from bonding themselves very heavily, it makes bond houses have confidence in the paper they buy and protects their interests. Perhaps the limit should be raised, but that cities should be placed entirely upon their charters seems rather doubtful.

WORTHY of support is the plan of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society, of which our own T. D. Hobart is president, to erect at Canyon a museum building to house the relics and records of the organization.

The Historical society was organized in 1921. It is chartered under the laws of Texas and has achieved recognition through sustained efforts to realize its two-fold aim: to collect relics and to assemble historical data. So large have the Society's collections become that a museum to house the relics, mounted animals, old newspapers, books, and manuscripts is necessary if the people are to be served. No museum is really valuable unless its material is accessible to students and others interested.

A committee composed of H. E. Hoover, Canadian; T. D. Hobart, Pampa; L. Gough and Thomas F. Turner, Amarillo; and J. A. Hill, Mrs. T. V. Reeves, and J. Evetts Haley, of Canyon will direct the raising of $50,000 to build and equip the museum. This group is soliciting the interest and contribution of every oldtimer of the Panhandle. A picture of each pioneer in whose name a contribution is made will appear in the building.

Here is an opportunity for those who take pride in the history of the pride and in the contemporary development.

LATERAL roads should receive some of the revenue from the gasoline tax, in the opinion of Senator J. W. Stevenson, of Victoria.

He figures that much of the gasoline purchased is used in travel on lateral roads, therefore it is not fair to the rural peoples to spend all the gasoline tax funds on cardinal highways.

Under the statewide bond issue plan, however, building of lateral roads would be primarily a county function, since no property levy would be made for state highways. However, the amendment authorizing statewide bonds should not bind the highway commission to cardinal highways merely, although the policy of the commission might be limited to the main thoroughfares in the first program.

BY ALLENE SUMNER
WASHINGTON—Peanut purveyor to five presidents and a sixth one on the way is the proud record of Steve Vasila-kos, whose neat but not gaudy peanut cart has hugged the White House fence for nearly 20 years.

Rosy days lie in wait for Steve right now, for Herbert Hoover, sixth presidential customer whom he will know, has already signified his interest in the goober, and during his Washington life has often stopped at Steve's stand for his bag of fresh roasted peanuts.

But if you think Steve's going to upset the destiny of nations by telling you whether the president-to-be likes his goobers hot or cold, well medium or rare roasted, you have another think coming.

He Keeps Quiet
"Best not to talk too much in this business," says Steve, a speculative eye upon the big house beyond the iron picket fence. "Big men don't talk much. Steve don't talk much."

Steve's peanut, popcorn and candy stand has done its stuff through the rain and shine of five presidents. He remembers the day "Big Taft he come t' White House. I just new then. Sure, he like peanuts. He like candy, too. That's why he so beega man. Pretty soon he have only one boofsteak for breakfast instead of two and then he pass by stand when he go for walk and only laugh at me when I shake peanut bags at him."

His favorite president? Again Steve proves that his 20 years as peanut purveyor to presidents have taught him much.

"All nice fellas—very nice fellas—all in different way", he said.

"Wilson he very nice fella; Harding he swell guy. Taft, great old boy; Roosevelt, one mighty nice guy. Coolidge, all right, and this Hoover, say, he's grand. He eat three or four bags peanuts to once."

Steve has seen all the First Ladies, too. He "can't remember" whether they all bought peanuts and popcorn and crackerjack of him or not. But many a passerby has seen Mrs. Coolidge stop for a bag of peanuts for the White House squirrels when returning from a walk.

"It's a very good corner", he says, thereby indicating that the great of the earth passing by and into the White House yard have their peanut passions even as other men.

"Queen Marie? Sure, I saw the queen. I've seen 'em all," says Steve, pouring some popcorn into the hopper. "Give me /merican ladies every time."

One knows that locked within Steve's breast is many a tale of the great who have entered the nation's most famous gate for the past 20 years. But try'n get 'em out!

"Beg men don't like to have all the things they say told!" says Steve, offering a bag of peanuts to one who is neither a president nor a First Lady. And that seemed to be that.

"You can say this", says Steve. "Eat lots of peanuts and popcorn and get to be president. Makes you smart!"

Crippled Children's Appropriation

An attempt will be made to secure a $200,000 appropriation at the coming session of the State Legislature to carry on the work of the crippled children's service at the University Hospital. The importance of this appropriation is not second to any that will come up before the legislature.

The people of Missouri are beginning to realize the seriousness of the crippled children's problem in the state. Previous to the appropriation of $35,000 made nearly two years ago, nothing at all had been done by the state in the way of meeting the situation. While this first appropriation was welcome, its main virtue lay in the fact that it was a beginning. But its inadequacy to meet the needs of 15,000 crippled children in Missouri who are dependent upon state aid for assistance in their plight is only too evident.

The seriousness of the situation may be realized by a statement of Dr. Kenneth Coonse, head of the crippled children's service here, when he says that if all the hospitals with facilities for the improvement of crippled children were operated at full capacity, the facilities would still be inadequate to handle the problem.

The $200,000 which is being asked over a two-year period would provide for the building of a convalescent home and the work at the University Hospital. The convalescent home would be an adjunct of considerably more value than the cost would indicate, because it would decidedly increase the work which could be done at the University Hospital. Under present conditions, a child who has undergone an operation must spend his convalescent days in the University Hospital. This period in the child's improvement could be passed in a convalescent home, and the room which the convalescent requires at the hospital could be utilized for the treatment of other cases, thus considerably increasing the efficiency of the hospital facilities here.

The great majority of the children who need state aid will grow up and become state charges if the state does not do its best to solve the crippled children's problem as quickly as possible. For $300 spent now the state can make a useful, intelligent, physically fit, and economically independent citizen out of a crippled child, who, if left unaided, will require that much for one year's upkeep in a state institution in later years.

The seriousness of the situation is each year growing more acute. Each year an additional number is added to the already large group of crippled children. If we do not take care of the problem now when it can be done at a very small cost, we will pay for it later at an immeasurably higher figure.

The state has facilities for the partial alleviation of the problem at the University Hospital which are going to waste. With the construction of a convalescent home and sufficient funds to operate the crippled children's service here at full capacity, a great step would be taken toward the solution of this problem. The overhead expenses for treatment here is slight because of the nurses' training school of the University and because of the excellent staff of doctors which are in the employ of the state already. The main costs in the correction of the crippled child here are for sustenance and the purchase of braces and other appliances for corrections. For the lack of a relatively small sum of money, beds, nurses, surgical operations, have been going to waste for some time. There is a further advantage at the University Hospital in that facilities for the educational advancement of the crippled child are available at no cost because of the student teachers available from the School of Education.

While it is unfortunate that requests for money must be made as a rule upon the worthiness of the appeal from an economic standpoint, perhaps in this case, the economic desirability of the appropriation serves to show the acuteness of the problem as no appeal from the humanitarian point of view could do. When for $300 we can make a useful citizen out of each one of the children who will inevitably become a state charge without it, it seems most unwise to delay the solution of this problem further.—Columbia Missourian.

Cardinals Will Show Better Club If Changes Help

Associated Press Staff Writer.
 ST. LOUIS, Jan. 8. (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, National league champions, will start the 1929 baseball season with a new manager in Billy Southworth, a revamped infield, and possibly one change in the outfield. Although eight players have been disposed of since the club captured the 1928 pennant, the prospects are the start of the new race will see all but two of those classed as regulars in Red Bird uniforms. These are Walter Maranville, shortstop, sold to Boston, and George W. Harper, outfielder, traded to the Braves.

All mainstays of the 1928 pitching and catching staff are to report for training this spring. The hurlers are Grover Cleveland Alexander, Jess Haines, "Wee Willie" Sherdel, Clarence Mitchell and Fred Frankhouse. James Wilson probably will again carry the burden of catching.

Plint Rhem, on the bench much of last season, has been shunted to the minors, but "Wild Bill" Hallahan is to report from Houston and Herman Bell from Rochester to bolster the pitching staff.

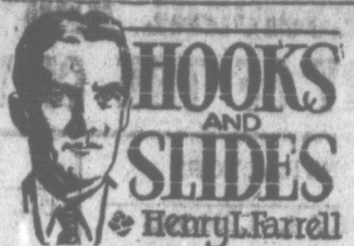

Tommy Thevenou, shortstop, has been traded to the Phillies and Charley Gelbert, youngster from Rochester, is slated to fill the gap at short left by the departure of Tommy and Maranville.

Charley Sefp, a young second baseman from Houston, is expected to replace Frankie Frisch at second. Frisch volunteered to move over to third to make room for Sefp. He did this, it was explained, because Sefp can play no position other than second effectively. Andy High and Roscoe Holm, who played third last season, will be retained; Holm probably as an outfielder and High as a utility third sacker.

Under present arrangements, Jim Bottomley, first baseman, is the infielder of last season's team who will return to his old post.

Manager Southworth has announced he will be a candidate for a regular place in right field, replacing Harper. However, young Ernest Orsatti, Minneapolis star, is expected to give the boss a contest. Taylor Lee Douthett and Charles Hafey, slugging regulars of last season's outfield, probably will be back in their old positions.

When the Cardinals go to camp they will be greeted by a new head coach, Earl "Greasy" Neale, former star outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, obtained to replace Jack Onslow, head coach under Manager Bill McKechnie last year.

HOOKS AND SLIDES Henry Farrell

He Ain't No Wow
 All this talk about George Godfrey being such a wow of a fighter is going to make another Harry Willis out of him. That is, all the chatter is going to get the customers to thinking that he is a great fighter and the uncrowned champion.

Willis became a very rich man. Smart old boxing men knew he couldn't fight a lick, but the public thought that even Dempsey was afraid of him. The result was that Harry, with the mantle of the persecuted around him, was able to fight bums that no other fighter in the country could get away with. When the chance finally came for Willis he was plastered and then the customers decided that he never was a fighter. The history of the Godfrey case probably will be written in the same fashion.

Just a Big Fella
 Personally we don't believe that Godfrey is even a good fighter. Size is the only asset he has and beef and bulk don't make a man a champion. He's old and slow and he is too long on his career to learn to be a fighter if he didn't know how way back when he was Dempsey's sparring partner.

Godfrey is a nice fellow and Jimmy Dougherty, his manager, is a prince. I hope they make a lot of money. But I am not going to be any part of a ballyhoo that sets him up as a martyr.

"If Godfrey is so terrible, name someone who can beat him," you might ask.

Well, we'd like to see Godfrey beat that K. O. Christner fellow and Christner certainly is not a great fighter.

 Supposing what would have happened if Knute Hansen had gone through with his plans and had fought Godfrey. The match was made and Hansen took on a warm up match with Christner and was knocked out.

If Hansen had gone right into the Godfrey match it is quite likely that he would have been knocked out and then there would have been a tumult that he was the champion because it hadn't been so long since Tex Rickard and Dempsey had said that Hansen was the greatest of the heavyweight contenders.

Even though Christner, who throws his punches like Jim Duncan used to

Football Injuries May Prove Fatal to Fort Worth Boy

FORT WORTH, Jan. 8. (AP)—James R. Roberts, 15, may die because he didn't tell his mother of injuries he received in a high school football game, fearing she would order him to give up the sport.

James, for whom more than 20 men have offered blood, was hurt two months ago. Abscesses and pneumonia resulted, and today he lay in a hospital here with death imminent. One mastoid operation has been performed and physicians announced another would be attempted.

The boy's mother feels that his failure to tell her he was hurt will cost him his life. "If James only had told me that he had been hurt in the game," she said, "something could have been done and then we surely could have saved his life."

But James failed to tell her. He thought "she would make me quit playing football."

C. E. Newton will submit to a blood transfusion for the youth; Jack Johnson has given a pint of his blood.

Did You Know That—
 Barney Dreyfuss says he once worked in the same bank in Karlsruhe, Germany, with Otto Kahn. . . . And that he once made a trip from Paducah in a freight car with 2,000 barrels of whisky. . . . And all that he had to do was to guard the consignment papers. . . . The Boston Red Sox have to buy a church outside their ball park. . . . The new law won't let them play Sunday baseball within 1,000 feet of a church. . . . And the church is within the distance. . . . The experts who saw the fight say that Joey Saragor fouled Tod Morgan badly when he beat him the other day. . . . Joe Dugan's contract called for $12,000 a year. . . . And that's why so many of the magnates didn't want him.

Back in the days when it was legal to drink a beer the New York ball players used to drink beer at the Amsterdam Inn up near the Polo Grounds. . . . There weren't any club detectives at the time and the boys were allowed to stay up late in the garden behind the inn. . . . The kitchen in the inn closed at midnight and when the boys wanted to eat later they had to go elsewhere. . . . They knew a popular little spot on 145th street near Broadway. . . . It was a little one-arm-hole-in-the-wall joint where a young singing chef made a mean hamburger plastered with onions and pickles. . . . The chef sang and dished out wisecracks while he was chafing and then showed out the sandwiches through a hole, came out from behind and served them. . . . And the chef who did this was Jack Mulhall. . . . The fillum fellow.

ARKANSAS FIVE EASILY DEFEAT T. C. U. QUINTET
 FORT WORTH, Jan. 8. (AP)—Arkansas University's basketball team, Southwest conference title holders, meets the Texas Christian University five here tonight in the second game of the series, well on the way to a fifth consecutive championship.

The Razorbacks played above the Christians' heads last night to win 41-24 and maintain a perfect percentage with all three of their conference games won.

Browne Windows Do Away With Costly Mechanism

Usually court buildings offer the most difficult problems for ventilation and frequently large sums are spent on patented mechanical devices for solving this problem. This apparatus is generally discarded in a short time because of the difficulty in keeping it in working condition, and they fall back on the old method of ventilation only from the windows.

In the Gray county court house, this problem has been solved very simply, without any costly mechanism, by the specification of BROWNE windows which afford ample and perfect ventilation in a natural way with the added cost of expensive mechanical apparatus, where atmospheric conditions are such that it is necessary to condition the air by mechanical means BROWNE windows cooperate with and supplement the system.

With this window closed, infiltration is practically nil. It has been tested by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers under a 140-mile wind velocity, along with 50 of the best known windows, "BROWNE" standing at the head of the list, far superior to all others and not admitting enough air to effect a candle light. They have been used extensively because of the unparalleled resistance to extreme climatic conditions, including sand storms which prevail in this state.

It is authentically reported that the BROWNE window is the only window on the market that has passed through the rigid laboratory fire test, as applied by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, that would operate after the test was applied, indicating the scientific construction. It is also interesting to know that the wool felt weather-stripping is regarded by Fire Engineers as an additional fire retardant. The felt-to-metal contact allows room for expansion and contraction of the metal, and it is interesting to know that the wool felt weather-stripping only charred and did not flame nor leave its position during this test.

The Browne window operates smoothly, easily and noiselessly at all times. Without physical effort the sash may be opened to any desired angle, giving perfect ventilation without draft when only slightly opened, and 100 per cent

Nurmi Is Expected to Run Soon

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. (AP)—Track and field followers are looking for Paavo Nurmi, Edwin Wide and Percy Williams to give spice to what otherwise might be a stale, unprofitable indoor season.

With Lloyd Hahn apparently out of the competitive picture, Joie Ray turned professional and Dr. Otto Peltzer in foreign parts, three of last year's greatest drawing cards are out of the deck.

Williams, the Olympic sprint champion from Vancouver, is down on the books to compete in the Millrose A. A. games next month but neither Nurmi nor Wide has announced plans. Most observers, however, believe both will don running shoes within a month. Nurmi, in fact, may get into action before the end of January. Wide said a few days ago he would need at least five weeks to get into shape.

J. A. Lard, who has been in a local hospital the last week, returned home today. He has had influenza.

Mrs. Jack Stevens of Groom, a patient in a local hospital, was reported much improved today.

Wellington Buys Street Sweeper

WELLINGTON, Jan. 8. (Special)—Wellington has purchased a street sweeper with motor maintainer, the total cost of which was $9,500. The sweeper is in operation and there is a noticeable improvement in the appearance of the streets. The city council recently passed an ordinance requiring that vehicles parked on the streets at night be moved to the middle of the street before the hour for cleaning the streets.

Former students of Texas A. & M. college and the College of Industrial Arts held a banquet in Wellington on Dec. 27. The banquet was attended by large representations from the two schools and the branches, Tarleton and Arlington. Place cards for the occasion were miniature cadets and C. I. A. girls in uniform.

J. O. Gillham, who underwent an operation Sunday evening, following an attack of appendicitis, today was reported to be improving rapidly. He is in the McKean & Connor hospital.

Miss Esther Stalder of McLean is visiting her sister, Mrs. B. J. Renshaw, today.

John Studer is a business visitor in Stinnett today.

T. H. Bagwell of McLean underwent a major operation yesterday at a local hospital. He was reported to be resting well today.

Mrs. Carolyn Duncan, who was injured by a fall a few days ago, is improving today, it was said at the local hospital where she is a patient.

"I know an easy way to keep from getting fat Light a Lucky instead of eating sweets."

Nazimova
 Nazimova
 Famous Stage Star

THE modern way to diet! Light a Lucky when fattening sweets tempt you. That's what thousands of lovely women are doing—successfully. The delicately toasted flavor of Luckies makes them a delightful alternative for fattening sweets. Toasting does it. Toasting removes the impurities and improves the flavor of the finest tobacco. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Men who pride themselves on keeping fit discovered this long ago. They know that Luckies steady their nerves and do not impair their physical condition—many prominent athletes have testified to this fact. They discovered, too, that Luckies don't irritate the throat—a fact subscribed to by 20,679 physicians.

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say—

REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET.

PERMANENT WAVES That Look Natural Many women do not like a deep pronounced wave. For those fashionable moderns we suggest our realistic permanent wave that is more a suggestion of a wave than is a wave. . . that gives the hair the look of being naturally wavy or the Frederick which gives a more pronounced wave.

THIS HAS HAPPENED ASHTORETH ASHE, venture some little stenographer, has had a most unpleasant experience on a shipboard. Ashtoresh, on a cruise to the West Indies, has been the innocent cause of a fierce quarrel between her roommate—MRS. NADE SMYTHE, and JACK SMYTHE, an Englishman. Ashtoresh goes to the boat deck with Smythe, who has warned her that he proposes to kiss her. Then from the shadows steps Mona de Huxford. Mona, in a wild fury, denounces the Englishman. And tells Ashtoresh that he makes love in order to "put it in a book—and sell it." She swears that he made love to her—and then published the tale of their amours. The rebuke of her friends choked her, and she stopped for breath. She put her handkerchief to her mouth, and when she took it away there was blood on it. Ashtoresh persuades her to go down to their stateroom and sends for the ship's doctor. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXI

WHEN Ashtoresh came in, Mona had slipped into a crimson smoking jacket and was propped on her elbow, roving her lips. She had a gold-backed mirror in one hand, and in the other a little silver pot of ruby paste. "Now Mona, you know the doctor said you shouldn't as much as raise your arms!" "I am not going to be old." She smiled again, and shivered. And they were silent for a while. Then she said, "The fire of my life burns low. It is a light that will go out sometime, like all lights everywhere." She drew Ashtoresh's fingers to her lips. "I am not afraid," she whispered. "I like the dark." Ashtoresh was trembling violently. A horrible fear obsessed her. As if Death had come on stealthy feet across the shining sea, and entered, unbidden, their little cabin. She seemed to feel its presence. Mona lay on her back now. There were bright spots on either cheek, burning redly. Her eyes were blazing blue. Her skin was hot, and very dry. Presently she dropped her lids, and remained so still that Ashtoresh thought she slept. Ashtoresh stood up then, and went to the porthole. She saw the moon on the water, making it so magically lovely, that there seemed nothing real anywhere about. The night was full of beauty and mysticism. And Ashtoresh's spirit was troubled "with vague imaginings that had never come to her before. Mona's Swinburne lay, open, on the couch. Ashtoresh took it in her hands, and saw that it was open to the marked passage she had read the night before: "From too much love of living, From hope and fear set free..."

"Did you write it, Mona?" exclaimed Ashtoresh incredulously. "Non—non!" Mona shook her head weakly. "I am not clever, ma chérie. I cannot write what is in my heart. I find it in a magazine, and copy it. A lady by the name of Madame Alice Duer Miller wrote it. Read the last again, s'il vous plait." Ashtoresh repeated slowly: "If I were you, I would have held my hand in fire— Ah, well; you would not understand." "Non," murmured Mona. "He would not understand." Ashtoresh folded the paper. "And you want Jack to have it?" she asked. Mona nodded. "Put it in an envelope, and ask the steward to give it to him. Day after tomorrow we reach Antigua, and he goes."

ASHTORETH spoke decisively. "Well, I shan't as much as speak to him again, my dear! I never heard of such a mean thing in my life. But, Mona, are you absolutely sure it was you he was writing about? You heard him deny it. Mightn't it have been a sort of a composite woman? A conglomeration, you know, of all the women he has ever known?" Mona shook her head. "It was I," she insisted. "I know, ma chérie." Ashtoresh was intensely curious. "I never heard of the book," she remarked. "Was it popular, Mona?" "Popular?—oui—so-so." Mona's blue eyes flashed. "You will hear of it. It is to be a cinema. I've been asked to play the part of the bad woman. I tell them all no." "Who asked you, Mona?" "A movie man in Paris. He 'ear about me, and he see me also. He was one of the big fat men from Hollywood." Ashtoresh thought that was very exciting. "Mr. Smythe must have sold the movie rights then," she surmised. "And I suppose some other girl will have the part. I should think you'd have just loved it. Monal! Have you ever been in pictures?" The effort of conversation had tired the sick woman. She moved restlessly. "In Paris—oui," she said. "The movie man wanted me to have my voice tested for the talkies. He said I talked like the girl in Meester Smythe's book." "What was the name of the book, Mona?" Mona looked at her sharply. "You 'ave not heard," she questioned, "of 'Pariah-Girl'?" Ashtoresh shook her head. "'Pariah-Girl'—no. I don't think so. . . . Doesn't 'pariah' mean out-cast?" Mona sat up suddenly in bed. "Out-cast!" she screamed. "Mon Dieu!" And she beat with her closed fists upon her breast. Her nostrils dilated. And the pupils of her eyes disappeared beneath her lowered lids, so that the whites showed frighteningly. She raised her voice in long, sobbing wails. And tore her hair. (To Be Continued)

COMPLETE CHANGE OF PROGRAM DAILY

Two Thousand at Formal Opening of Phillips Agency

It is estimated that more than 2,000 persons attended the formal opening of the Phillips Motor company, Hudson and Essex dealers, last evening. The feature event of the evening was the oldtime fiddling contest. The Hot brothers took first and second prizes, with the third prize going to E. B. Cannack. Following the contest and a short program, the fiddlers struck up some old tunes and soon oldtimers of the range were dancing the now ancient square dances. A youngster, to compare him with the dancers, "called off" for the dancing, which lasted until after midnight. Many were the congratulations received by Roston Phillips on his new quarters on Frost street and the grace and beauty of the new Hudson and Essex cars.

who can judge this woman?
—married to a brute, in love with a man

SOMETIMES, Laura thought herself in the grip of some terrible nightmare. But the steaming, fever-laden jungle with its brooding loneliness—and that cattered, whiskey-sodden beast who was her husband—were only too terribly real. How could she have ever dreamed that she loved him—the scientist she had thought a man?
True, she was young when she married him, and came with him to the jungles of Brazil. But fever—that white man's curse of the tropics—had got into his blood—and she had seen him slowly degenerate into a booze-soaked beast.
Then Townley, young, clean, wholesome, came adventuring up the river. At first, looking into her eyes, he could scarcely credit his senses. What he saw was a girl of twenty, with the body of a youthful Venus—glistening hair, creamy skin and star-like eyes—eyes clouded with silent misery.
As Townley stayed on, anger, amazement, pity, struggled with a stronger emotion that daily flamed more fiercely in his breast. And when, one day, in an unguarded moment, an answering light illumined her soft, dark eyes, flashing him a wonderful message—
Thus began this strange drama of the jungle—a drama of maddening love on Townley's part—a tragedy of renunciation, of desperate battling with conscience, on the part of Laura.

Fame of Sargon Spreads Over Entire Nation

Never before, perhaps, in all history, has the demand for a proprietary medicine ever approached the wonderful record that is now being made by Sargon, the new scientific formula which has been accomplishing such remarkable results throughout this section. Its fame is rapidly spreading over the entire country and wherever introduced, Sargon is the most talked of medicine in the country today. Nothing like it has ever been seen before. Sargon was first placed on the market just a little over six months ago. Its success was immediate and people everywhere were quick to recognize in it a new and epoch-making product—a medicine of great power and extraordinary merit. In leading cities where it has been placed on sale it has required from 70,000 to 100,000 bottles to supply the unprecedented demand, establishing a record probably never before equalled in the history of the drug trade. Countless thousands of men and women, in all walks of life, suffering with stomach, liver and bowel troubles, some of them of long standing; as well as thousands of weak, thin, nervous men and women apparently on the verge of collapse have voluntarily come forward and testified that they have been fully restored to their normal health, strength and weight by its use. Still others, who seemed fairly well, yet suffered with constipation in its worst form, indigestion, dyspepsia, headaches, shortness of breath, bad complexion, bad breath, loss of appetite, sleeplessness at night and of terribly dejected, depressed feelings, state that they have been entirely relieved of these distressing symptoms and restored to health by its use. Sargon is the result of the last 10 years of world-wide scientific research; it embodies new knowledge of certain organs and fluid of the body recently come to light; it is helping build up run-down men and women by modern methods undreamed of a generation ago. Sargon may be obtained in Pampa from Fathere Drug Co., and in McLean from Erwin Drug Co.—(Adv.)
