COMMUNITY OPINION. Unexpressed, achieve little unanimity and few results.

What is your platform for Pampa? Lower water rates? Lower gas rates? More paving? Park development? Limited parking? More road paving? More published statements of how Pampa and Gray county money is being spent? Tighter law enforcement? More industries?

These things are constantly being discussed. It is not enough merely to want a thing; there must be organized effort to obtain it.

Public discussion will help. These newspaper columns are open for citizens to discuss public questions therein. This is an invitation to those who are advocating this or that in conversation only. If there is something that needs expression, there is nothing like saying it yourself. "George" can never say the right thing in the right way at the right time from an individual's standpoint.

Let no good idea die of lack of expression.

COMPARISONS ARE sometimes painful, and this may be the case if the example of the U. S. Marines in Nicaragua is placed along with that of the Mexican rebels at Naco, Ariz.

The Associated Press sends this dispatch from Tegucigalpa, Honduras:

"American planes from Managua, Nic., which bombed suspected rebel camps along the border, were reported today to have bombed the town of Las Limas in Honduras. The town was almost destroyed by the fire which followed. Citizens are much agitated and authorities are investigating."

Two factors appear immediately. One is that bombing of suspected rebel camps along the border of Honduras seems a rather queer business for United States forces. This is clearly a case of intentional aggression against men who have not offended this country except in being opposed to the Nicaraguan administration we are protecting. It would seem more logical for this country only to guard Nicaragua against attacks, and leave the aggression to the government there. It is a strange state of affairs that leads this country to wage aggressive warfare against rebels, or bandits, of another nation. A second factor is the danger of violating the rights of Honduras. And if Las Limas has really been bombed and set afire, it is a grave offense indeed that this nation has made against another. At Naco, Ariz., American troops line the border to shoot down planes which accidentally drop bombs into the United States. Will Honduras have to establish a patrol to keep us from despoiling her border towns? Of course not, but the comparison stands nevertheless.

And may not the Mexican federalists as logically ask this country to preserve order as may Nicaragua—except that Mexico is more powerful and her people would not permit it? Nicaraguan operations of this government should arouse more curiosity and inquiry than hitherto has been manifested in this country.

Popular Musical Taste

A short while ago, when De Groot, the popular violinist, was asked why he did not introduce more classical music into the recitals he was then giving at a Sheffield cinema, he replied that he would not be serving his public in any way if he played Brahms and Beethoven, because only a trained musician could appreciate such composers. Alongside this remark may be set a statement recently published to the effect that middle class people have been told so often that they are musically ignorant that they acquire in remaining so. There will probably always be some individuals to whom music is nothing but a disagreeable noise made on purpose, just as some people will always consider Charlie Chaplin to be no more than a clown. But both classes are in small minority; and it is difficult to believe that the fault is inherent in the masses if today they do not appreciate good music; if they do not like good music, it is because they get so little good music played to them.

But it is hardly true to say that middle class people do not appreciate even the highest kinds of music. Cinema audiences have listened to the second movement of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony with the liveliest enjoyment, even though most of the people in them were hearing it for the first time. An incidental proof that their taste in music would justify itself if it were given a real chance is provided by the fact that many of the most popular songs of recent years have been variations on classical models. "Yes, We Have No Bananas" opens with the Hallelujah Chorus, its middle section is the same as part of "I Dreamt That I Dwelt in Marble Halls," and it returns to the Hallelujah Chorus at the end. Albert Chevalier's once well-known song, "Knocked 'Em in the Old Kent Road," was identical with a passage in the Overture to "Die Meistersinger," and the Robbers' Chorus in "Chu Chin Chow" appears, note for note, in the first movement of Beethoven's String Quartet in G (Op. 18, No. 2). A people whose most "popular" songs are reminiscences of classical pieces cannot be altogether devoid of true musical instinct.

There would seem to be an opportunity for violinists like De Groot, who passes the favor of the masses, to strengthen and develop this instinct. Not all good music is complex; any number of essentially popular programs could be compiled from music of the quality of Chopin's Mazurkas, the marches and polonaises of Schubert, the Hungarian Dances of Brahms, and the lyric numbers of Brahms, Mozart, and Beethoven; and a violinist who consistently gave cinema audience music of this caliber would perform a national service.—Christian Science Monitor.

WASHINGTON—The old-fashioned private shaving mug, reposing in a special barber shop niche with its owner's full name and middle initial painted on the huff in large gold letters, still survives in the basement clipping and shearing establishment below the Senate wing of the Capitol.

Time was, no doubt, when the mug rack resembled a directory of contemporary American statesmen. Today only a few mugs remain and the absence of brushes within them indicates the sad estate to which that ancient and honorable tradition has fallen. Only two of the current senators are still represented, Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona and Joseph E. Ransdell of Louisiana. Most of the other mugs have been left as relics of senators passed to their reward.

Senator Ashurst, at least and however, will not desert the foaming bowl. Just the other day he walked in proudly with a brand new mug, resplendent in its gilded rim and the owner's full name. Some customers have since demanded that it be covered with a towel to save them bedazzlement.

Two cups bear the name of John J. McGrain, the Senate's deputy sergeant-at-arms, but it doesn't mean anything. "He shaves himself now," mutters the barber.

One of the heartiest dislikes existing in Washington is that between Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and ex-Senator Bob Owen of Oklahoma.

These two were not only born in Lynchburg, Va. They were also born in the same block. Glass is 65 and Owen is 67. It may have been the difference in ages or a complete indifference to each other which kept them from being playmates, although they were acquainted through boyhood days. Glass stayed in Virginia while Owen moved to Oklahoma. Glass had been several years in the House when Owen reached the Senate in 1907. Glass was the principal leader in the House for the Wilson administration's fiscal program which produced the Federal Reserve Act and Owen occupied a similar position in the Senate.

No sooner had Glass uttered a blast at the action of President Charles E. Mitchell of the National City Bank, in extending aid to borrowers after the recent stock exchange break, than Owen was out in opposition, declaring Mitchell all right and Glass all wet. Glass came back, asserting in effect that for anyone who pretended to have had anything to do with the Reserve Act, Owen showed a sad ignorance of its text.

Owen has grown up into a cold austere person. As a prohibitionist he deserted the Democratic ticket last fall. Drinking wine makes him ill. He has been a progressive.

Glass is distinguished, among other things, for his fiery temper and his sense of humor. He stood by Smith in the campaign and publicly defied the powerful dry leader, Bishop Cannon. He is a conservative Democrat.

A Texas congressman found his campaign enemies spreading the story that he was sending out many thousands of printed copies of his speeches at government expense and conceived the idea that this should be specifically denied whenever members of Congress sent out such propaganda in the future. Other senators and representatives realized that the misapprehension was common and seized upon the idea.

Now the printed speeches which are sent out—millions of them in any election year—bear the notice: "Not Printed at Government Expense." The Government Printing Office charges, of course, for printing and envelopes, using the type as set up for the Congressional Record.

Don't let anyone tell you that punctuation is unimportant. Three London boys who died because a decimal point was misplaced in a doctor's prescription could, if they were able, testify that punctuation is sometimes all important.

If they really dry up Amarillo, we think our officers and prosecutors ought to serve notice that this is no oasis.

Well, if Lindbergh's wife to be can put up with his unexplained nocturnal adventures, we suppose that the world ought to be able to do the same.

They Have Little To Do But Look Pretty

Thousands of New York girls compete for jobs as models in exclusive fashion salons where their time will be spent wearing gorgeous costumes and looking lovely. Some of the most successful are Lee Sherman (left), Joan Clement (upper center), Peggy Fish (lower center) and Marion Moorehouse (right).

By F. J. STARZEL (Associated Press Staff Writer) NEW YORK (P)—Spring is hailed as a glorious season by different people for a great variety of reasons.

For that regiment of girls who earn, or aspire to earn, their livings by the simple expedient of wearing stylish clothes, spring is a real boon.

The mannequins, those "marry turned out women who parade before the clientele of salons and style shows, enjoying a splendid season. Numerous shows, balmy spring weather and a lively competition are making their work profitable.

Frequent sittings before the camera adds to the income of the lucky few who can secure those assignments.

Wearing pretty clothes is a strong lure and every day finds dozens of girls storming the establishments which employ mannequins. Only the New York theater, perhaps, has a wider selection of pretty girls.

One house which uses mannequins extensively, has a list of 600 possibilities from which to choose. That 600 does not include the hundreds who are ranked as unsuitable.

Physical proportion and size are the two great stumbling blocks in the path of the aspiring mannequin. Requirements differ among the various houses. In some of them, all mannequins must be able to wear the same garments. In others a certain type is chosen and a selection of suitable gowns is made up.

Ability to wear the season's creations gracefully and to display their lines to the fullest advantage is the fundamental prerequisite. "Photographing well" is, of course, the quality that leads to the aristocracy of the profession—the models commissioned to pose for style pictures.

Admission to this inner circle is almost difficult to attain, but is worth waiting for as the leaders earn in excess of $250 weekly. Even in the lower grades the pay is better than that of stenographers and the work less fatiguing.

Visions of New York mannequins tend chiefly to the musical shows and the high auditorium.

the legitimate stage. Joan Clement, Marion Moorehouse, Doris Freeman and Nancy James are a few who have achieved Broadway shows but continue to demonstrate how modish clothes should be worn. The movies are either the goal or the accomplishment in this little world of beauty.

Dreams of rich marriages via the clothes model route sometimes come true but not so often as might be believed. There have been some, the people who deal much with mannequins tell you, but they have difficulty remembering names and dates.

For the mannequins it is a business, trade or art, as you choose and they look forward to the day when they will occupy the dais with such leaders as Marjorie Willis, Margaret Shea, Peggy Wehman, Dorothy Smart, Lee Sherman, Janet Stallings, Sally Grant, Peggy Fish, Dorothy Flood and the others in that select group.

Not a few find that not even faithful exercising and dieting can keep their figures within the strict requirements of their job. They fall out of the procession.

Temperament those who know them say, is abundant. A certain midtown street is the deadline and many of the best models will not work farther downtown. Poses in underthings and shoe and hosiery assignments are scorned.

Kansas City Man to Conduct Meeting for Presbyterians

Guy Green will be at the First Presbyterian church of Pampa for a series of special meetings from Wednesday, May 29, to Sunday, June 9, Mr. Green is not a preacher; he is a layman.

Mr. Green's home is in Kansas City. While editing the Walker livestock magazines that city he was persuaded to begin the teaching of a men's Bible class.

By reason of his success with this Bible class, Mr. Green was asked to do the work in which he is now engaged. He has been very successful.

Those who go to hear him will not be treated to any gymnastics. They will however, be entertained, amused and instructed in so charming a manner that they will lose track of the flight of time.

It is a custom of Mr. Green to run his services one hour. The preliminary song service occupies about 30 minutes. Then Mr. Green talks 30 minutes, and the service is over in time for those who attend to get home in decent season.

Rev. A. A. Hyde is acquainted with Mr. Green and he considers himself fortunate to secure him for this meeting in Pampa, May 29 to June 9—contributed.

Hardy Case Hinges on New Testimony

SACRAMENTO, Calif., April 11. (AP)—Whether Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sleaff, one of the accusers of Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy of Los Angeles, would come to Sacramento to testify at the impeachment trial of the jurist occupied the attention of the legislative prosecutors today.

Although Mrs. Wiseman-Sleaff, located in Seattle Tuesday, was reported to have left last night for Sacramento, the board of prosecutors here indicated she might not appear before the impeachment court voluntarily. They asked Seattle authorities to obtain a deposition from her if possible.

Mrs. Wiseman-Sleaff appeared as a witness against Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, during the latter's preliminary hearing two years ago on charges of conspiracy growing out of her kidnaping story. Judge Hardy is accused of acting illegally in advising Mrs. McPherson and in attempting to vindicate her story.

After being found in Seattle, Mrs. Wiseman-Sleaff made an affidavit declaring Judge Hardy made arrangements with her to produce a woman who would pose a "Miss X" and admit being with Kenneth G. Ormiston at Carmel, Calif., during the time the state charged Mrs. McPherson was there in Ormiston's company.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gillham and children of Canyon spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Gillham.

Railroad Dispute Is Argued Before Hoover's Group

DALLAS, April 11. (AP)—The story of efforts to prevent the removal of the Texas & Pacific terminal from Longview to Mineola through passage at the last session of the legislature of an amendment to an existing statute was told today before the federal emergency board of mediation by J. A. Somerville, vice-president of the road.

The story was told in presentation of part of the road's testimony on the controversy between the road and 4,000 of its employees which led to a strike vote recently. The hearing was ordered by President Hoover in an attempt to bring about an adjustment of the difficulties.

One reason for the change of the terminal was the run from Texarkana to Longview was short and the run from Longview to Fort Worth was long. It was said the heaviest traffic was over the long run, and that the 16-hour law governing the maximum time a train employs may work often hampered operations.

"At first arrangements were made for home terminals at Shreveport, Fort Worth, and Texarkana," Somerville related. "The employees objected to this, and after mediation an agreement was reached whereby the home terminal would be Mineola. The growth of Longview as a city prevented enlargement of the yards at that place."
