SOIL SURVEY WOULD BE WORTHWHILE

Gray county should put in a request for a soil survey by the extension division of A. & M. college.

The work could probably be obtained without cost, since it is project activity of professors and students of the state school and is carried on as conditions and requirements dictate. Gray county should get in line for a survey, which may not be available for a year or so.

The facts that would be made available probably would tell the oldtime residents little that they do not already know. They are familiar with the wheat lands of the north section, the sandy central portion, and the loam of the south portion of the county. But the stamp of authority has never been placed upon these facts. There is no survey to which one can refer a stranger who wants to know three soil factors in a tract he is considering buying.

Moreover, it is one thing to look at unbroken sod and another to know the chemical components of that soil. The scientific test has been tried and proven so many times that many farmers wish the test-tube analysis before planting certain crops. It is not a difficult analysis, but one that is not available at present in Gray county.

A soil survey would be worthwhile for publicity purposes alone, were there no other considerations. Let's get in our request now for an exhaustive survey.

JIM IS SHREWD AS USUAL

Jim Ferguson came to West Texas last week to make to desperate effort to rally votes to Ma's side of the political controversy. The wise, clever political "fox" that he is, played his hand well in bidding for Panhandle votes. At least in his appearance at Amarillo he used much more tact than did Tom Love a week previous.

Farmer Jim praised Clint Small, whereas, Tom Love lambasted him and drove many votes into the Small camp. Ferguson was high in his praise of the candidate from the Panhandle.

In the first place there is nothing about Clint Small about which they or any others can justly lambast Senator Small. His record and platform are high and clean and he is conducting himself in the campaign accordingly. Small is meeting great favor wherever he goes and the tide is swiftly swinging his way. His platform is one of business and the people of all sections of the state are readily realizing it.

The Ferguson plea for votes was indeed thin. One minute Jim was after the wets by declaring that he was anti-prohibitionist and would always be, while the next minute he was going after the dry element by pleading for the dry plank in Ma's platform.—Canyon News.

The Husband Hunter

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Natalie Converse, jealous of her husband's friendship with Bernadine Lamont, leaves him. Alan is consoled by his secretary, Philippa West, who is seeking to make an advantageous marriage.

Natalie returns, and Alan realizes that he loves her, but his chivalrous feeling for Philippa keeps her standing between them when she refuses to release him.

Natalie appeals to him in an emergency and he returns to their home, but he is too honorable to attempt a reconciliation. Natalie suspects there is another woman. One day she meets Bernadine in Alan's office. Her old jealousy flares up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan. That night he dines with Philippa.

The next day Natalie comes to the office to plead for forgiveness. Alan is out. Philippa, fearful lest his anger should not endure, plots to discredit Natalie. In a letter she changes the name of a stock Bernadine wants to one that is worthless. Bernadine comes to the office and discovers the substitution after the order has gone through. In the investigation that follows Philippa directs suspicion against Natalie. Alan believes her guilty and goes up to Hillshire to accuse her.

Natalie goes to an aunt in Philadelphia. Alan makes good Bernadine's losses. Not long afterward Bernadine dies and he turns to Philippa to help him care for Bobby, Bernadine's young son. Natalie reads of Bernadine's death and returns to make a last plea for a reconciliation. Alan misunderstands her motive and tells her he is going to marry Philippa West when he is free. But Philippa is not willing for him to adopt Bobby. Alan decides to go ahead with it. Geoffrey Norman, a friend, comes to his office and invites Alan to his apartment on a matter of great importance.

Alan accepts. Philippa is preparing to start to New York when the telephone rings. She rushes to answer it. She is greatly surprised to hear the voice that replies to her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVII "Geoffrey Norman!" Philippa fairly squealed his name in her surprise and unexpected pleasure. "When did you get back?" "Not long ago," Geoffrey told her. "But how did you know where to find me? Have you seen Alan?" Geoffrey permitted her first question to answer itself when he said: "Yes, I've seen Alan. Just had a minute with him in his office." "Did he tell you?" Philippa went on. Then she laughed. "I suppose you've called me up to wish me happiness?" "Why, Alan didn't tell me anything," Geoffrey answered truthfully. "Have you inherited a fortune or something like that?" "Oh," Philippa was rather taken back, but she instantly became gay again with the thought that Geoffrey had called her, then, simply because he wanted to. Not knowing she was engaged to Alan, he naturally thought it all right. "I'm coming down town," she cried excitedly. "I'd like to see you." "Well, I'm awfully sorry," Geoffrey said regretfully, "because I want to see you, too. But I've got a lot of important engagements for the rest of the day. I called up to see if you wouldn't come to a little party at my place tonight?" Philippa hesitated, but she was thinking hard and fast. Geoffrey's invitation presented an opportunity to show Alan she wasn't tied hand and foot to the life he was laying out for her. Let him stay away from dinner—and come up just to see Bobby!

"I'd be delighted," she said at last. "Do you mean your apartment on Park Avenue?" "Know the address?" "Of course. Haven't I mailed you bushels and bushels of bonds?" "Would you mind coming early? This isn't a fashionable party at all."

"I'll have dinner in town and come up about 8:30. O. K.?" "Right. It's awfully kind of you." Philippa smiled frequently to herself on the way to the station, to take a train to New York. Geoffrey had been a bit stiff, but that was his way, she thought. "And his tip not to dress—thoughtful lad."

"Thoughtful—and oh so right! As good looking as Alan, too, in his way. If she had the chance to choose between them... "Well, he hasn't forgotten me!" She smiled like a puss in cream. Alan, and his orphan kid! Going to adopt him. And she could like it or lump it. But who could say? Perhaps she wouldn't have to lump it.

She shopped with a high heart, buying herself a new and dressier blouse of eggshell crepe to wear with her smart blue suit. Kid gloves, a new hat and bag, even stockings. She could change after dinner—she would go to a hotel—before appearing at Geoffrey's apartment. She remembered it well—that apartment. She went there once on an errand. She needn't have gone—she could have sent a boy just as well, but she wanted to see the place. And she never forgot it. Astonishingly vast, and furnished with the magnificence of a Roman palace. Its impressiveness had remained in Philippa's mind as background against which she compared all other home interiors. No other that she had seen had measured up to it.

It had been quiet, and filled with subdued light when she first saw it. But tonight, she thought, there would be soft radiance flooding it, many flowers, and the haunting sweetness of waltzes. Geoffrey was like that—he never gave a jazz party. Philippa told herself, as she whirled upward in the bronze elevator to the roof—for the Normans occupied the penthouse apartment, with a number of rooms on the top floor.

Philippa had never seen the room to which she was shown by the man servant whom she knew to be Geoffrey's own personal factotum—valet, courier, cook, "anything you want," as Geoffrey said. She had a glimpse of the main hall, and found it surprisingly darkened. Then she was led up a short flight of hand-carved stairs to Geoffrey's wing.

There he received her in a small living room that was just like himself—restrained, attractive. "This looks like a very exclusive party," she said, smiling at him to show that it might be just they two and she'd be complacent. "We'll be joined shortly by a third member of the party," Geoffrey said. "I think a hear him now." He looked toward the door. "Ah, there, Alan, I was afraid you might disappoint."

Alan and Philippa stared at each other in amazement. "Just a little surprise I arranged," Geoffrey explained lightly. "I hope you will forgive me, but I've something to say to you two. A little coffee first?" Both refused, Alan indifferently, and Philippa with a touch of asperity. "Then let's all be seated," Geoffrey invited, and offered Philippa a chair. She sat down, feeling awkward and disturbed. Alan dropped into a wing chair and reached for a cigarette. "Alan," Geoffrey said, gazing steadfastly at his friend, "I've asked you to come here so that I might tell you I think you have made a great mistake.

Alan was staring back at him, his expression a decided question mark. Neither looked at Philippa. "About Natalie, I mean," Geoffrey went on. "Good God, man, how could you have believed she touched that letter?"

Alan started to rise. "Sit down," Geoffrey snapped. "You've got to listen. You judged Natalie without a fair trial. She's told me about it. I ran across her at the Penn Station yesterday, half out of her mind, fit for the hospital. I took care of her, and made her talk. She was in no condition to think—she just talked."

"I suppose she accused Mrs. Lamont?" Alan said bitterly. "She didn't accuse anyone. She seemed stunned. But I gathered that at one time she was very jealous of the woman you mention."

"Very?" It was Philippa, ending on a taunting laugh. "Yes?" Alan said to Geoffrey's pause. "Did it never occur to you to doubt everyone who had a chance at that letter?" Geoffrey asked abruptly. "Well, really," Philippa jumped to her feet, but Geoffrey motioned her to be quiet.

"I want Alan to answer that question," he said with a solemnity that stopped Philippa's protest. "Of course I did," Alan declared testily. "Are you certain of that?" Geoffrey insisted.

"Now see here," Alan began impatiently, "this is all very well, coming from a friend of Natalie's, but why did you drag Miss West into it?" Philippa whirled to him. "Let's get out," she cried. "This is con-

Mrs. Hoover Now Back at Home—Had Back Injury

WASHINGTON, July 7. (AP)—Mrs. Hoover presided again today over the social and domestic affairs of the White House.

After more than a month's absence from the executive mansion and three months of virtual seclusion as a result of an injured back suffered in a fall, she returned late yesterday with the president from their Rapidan river lodge.

Her coming was unexpected. Although Captain Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, had said last week that she had sufficiently recovered, it had been assumed that she would remain in the coolness of the mountains most of this month.

Well and strong again, however, and able once more to take up the chain of activity which she enjoys, Mrs. Hoover decided, herself, to return.

As she stepped from the car onto the front porch of the White House she smiled warmly and stood momentarily chatting with Senator and Mrs. McNary, who also had driven back in the president's car. Then she walked through the doors apparently untired and happy, despite the long drive from the mountain lodge.

John Friedman, Lucille Schaffner and Fred Schaffner returned yesterday from a week-end trip to Carlisbad, N. M.

MAGNOLIA'S REGULARS DEFEAT ARRAY OF GULF GUN STARS

VICTORS HIT GRAHAM AND RUN UP LEAD

An impressive aggregation of baseball stars, playing in the uniforms of Gulf Guns, lost to a smoothly-working Magnolia machine yesterday afternoon at Gun park, 11 to 3. The Mags played 100 per cent better baseball in every inning of the long game.

Only four of the Guns who helped vanquish Phillips played in the game yesterday. The others were from Wichita, Kans., Memphis and Berger. Although each Gun had a potent record, the club as a whole played loosely. Six errors committed by Gulf were responsible for four of the runs.

Unimpressed with Lefty Graham's reputation or his cranking, the Magnolias pounced upon him and drove him from the mound in the third inning after slugging out six hits and as many runs. Lefty hurled the Pampa Grays to victory last year, and undoubtedly he is a good pitcher, but the two strike-outs he got did not offset the runs, one of which was a homer.

Haddock followed Graham and he had better luck but the field gave him little support. The Mags scored two runs in the fourth, one in the fifth, one in the eighth and their eleventh in the ninth. Haddock struck out three. Varnell pitched the entire game for Magnolia, and the Guns found his ball harder to hit in the ninth than in the first. In the seventh, he struck out two men in a row, raising his total number of strike-outs to five. The circus catch of the afternoon was made by McKnight, Magnolia right field, when he caught a fly that ended the game.

To help them win the game, Magnolia recruited Cortez's Baldwin for the short-stop position and Phillips' Wright for left-field. The Gulf's imports, Spec Roberts, Magness, Marcum and Munds, a Gun regular, all of whom usually maintain good batting averages, failed to pound Varnell's ball sufficiently.

The Guns staged a rally in the sixth inning that netted three runs, but Varnell came back to the mound with blood in his eye and struck them out when he didn't allow files to second, short-stop and center. He walked one man and hit one, while Haddock hit one and walked none. Kozelski hit the only homer of the game, although Wright and Lister lost the ball once each and were given two-base hits.

SHIRES HITS IN PINCH TO BEAT YANKS

BY HUGH S. FULERTON, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer. A large part of the first half of the major league baseball season has been spent in strenuous efforts on the part of managers to strengthen their teams for the latter part of the year and the success of their efforts is quite evident in the current standings of the clubs.

Washington's big deals with the St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox turned out to be an important factor in making the American league campaign a duel between the Senators and Philadelphia Athletics. Acquisition of Heinie Manush gave them some batting punch where it was needed while Al Crowded has turned out to be an effective pitcher in Washington. Art Shires and Dave Harris, formerly of Chicago, also have helped improve the Senators' batting average.

The result is that the Senators and Athletics today are tied for the league lead although the dead lock may not last long in the quick shifts of the standing brought about by the fact that Philadelphia has played more games. It was Shires who brought about the tie, coming through with a pinch single with the bases full in the tenth inning Sunday to beat the New York Yankees, 3 to 2. Washington now has won 15 out of 16 games, showing the Yanks 5 1/2 games into third place by sweeping the series.

The Athletics kept their place in the sun by winning the third close decision in a row from the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3. George Earnshaw scored his eleventh victory of the year, gaining a slight edge over Dan MacFayden.

The fourth place Cleveland Indians, who have kept out of the second division during their recent slump only because the rest of the league is so far behind the leaders, showed signs of improvement as they opened against their western rivals at home. Clint Brown pitched a good game and they shut out the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 0. Waite Hoyt also pitched well and led Detroit to a 5 to 2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Brooklyn Robins, who chose to add strength to their team by obtaining Ike Boone from the Pacific Coast league, found good reason to be pleased with their new acquisition. Boone made his debut yesterday and played the principal role as the Robins regained first place in the National league by beating the Boston Braves, 10 to 4. He hit a home run and a single and made a great catch of a fly diving into the bleachers to grab the ball.

Cincinnati helped bring about this latest disturbance in the standing, which put Brooklyn ahead although tied with the Chicago Cubs in games. The Reds took both games of a double header from Chicago, 5 to 4, and 8 to 7, breaking a losing streak of five games. Brooklyn's second game, which might have sent the Robins down again was rained out in the third inning.

The third place struggle between the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals remained unchanged as both teams won double headers. The Giants trounced Philadelphia, 10 to 8 and 8 to 2. The Cards made it 12 victories in their last 16 games by winning a 21 decision over Pittsburgh in the first game although they made only two hits off Spencer and following it up with a 12 to 4 victory in a slugfest match.

CHURCHES

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES. "GOD" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, July 6.

The Golden Text was from Isaiah 44:6. "Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel, and his redeemer the Lord of hosts; I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible (Deuteronomy 6:4-5): "Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."

Included in the service was the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That God is a corporeal being nobody can truly affirm. The Bible represents Him as saying: 'Thou canst not see My face; for there shall no man see Me, and live.' Not materially but spiritually we know Him as divine Mind, as Life, Truth, and Love. We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, waring no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God" (p. 140).

"Quite Overcome," Says Bobby

"I am quite overcome by the welcome you have prepared for me... I don't know what to say... I'm mighty glad to be home." Thus stammered a bronzed and grinning Bobby Jones, greatest of golfers, when, as pictured here, he stood before microphones and a cheering crowd at New York's City Hall and was officially greeted by Mayor Jimmy Walker.

Pampa Golfers Turn Back Borger Invasion on Tricky Local Course

Sweet revenge for the defeats handed Pampa golfers by Borger was had yesterday when the local men won over the invaders, 35 points to 33.

The play was hotly contested throughout. Under the scoring system, each pairing gave three points to a match, one point to the winner of the first nine holes, one point to the winner of the second nine holes, and a third point to the winner of the whole eighteen.

Borger brought 22 players. The Pampa Country club course is being improved preparatory to a local flight tournament.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 7. (AP) — Bobby Jones introduced himself to Interlachen yesterday and demonstrated he could produce par golf, or better, as his defense for the national open championship.

The thirty-fourth annual gathering of the professionals and the amateurs opens Thursday but more than half of the hundred and a half entrants were already here for acclimating rounds.

The Atlanta amateur studied Interlachen's difficulties on two rounds Sunday and produced a par 72 on each. Bobby was not concerned with scores, however, but with a study of the course's character and contours.

The defending champion observed that he was glad to confirm his own belief that "I am in good shape for another meet, ready to make the best defense I can." He said he was convinced the course holds plenty of tournament tribulation.

Three others also had stepped out from among their fellows today by scoring par 72's Sunday during one trip over the links. Johnny Farrell, who defeated Jones in a 36-hole play-off at Olympia fields in 1928, turned the trick in his first round. Densmore Smith, Columbus, and Jack Collins, Los Angeles, playing with him kept pace. But most of the entries practicing are running into 76's and higher.

Mexican Polo Players Winning

SAN ANGELO, July 7. (AP) — Two victories today remained to the credit of the Mexican army's picked polo team in the international series, as it awaited a third game tomorrow against the San Angelo Rainbows.

Led by General Jesus Quinones, the Mexican team yesterday defeated the Bluejackets 10 to 2. It previously had won the initial game of the series Friday from another San Angelo group, 11 to 10.

The rainbows, due to meet the visitors tomorrow, won the Fort Reno annual tournament last season and were runners-up in this year's Southwestern circuit tournament at San Antonio.

Start Fire—Killed

DULUTH, Minn., July 7. (AP) — Marguerite and Francis Goodue, 9 and 7, played with matches yesterday.

They built a fire under the porch of their home. The blaze spread and the children crawled out. When the fire swept into the house, the children became frightened and crawled back under the porch. They were burned to death.

Their widowed mother collapsed.

First Picture of Chicago Flyers On Earth After Twenty-Three Days In Air

The world's record for continuous flight safely in their grasp, the famous flying Hunter brothers landed at Sky Harbor, north of Chicago, after more than 533 hours in the air, when an oil gauge broke. This picture was made just after the flyers were reunited with their family on the ground; in it, left to right, are: Gladys Hodam, a friend of the Hunters; Walter Hunter; Kenneth and John Hunter (in greasy overalls); who set the new record; Irene Hunter, a sister (standing in front of Mrs. Albert Hunter); Albert Hunter, and Mrs. Ida Hunter, mother of the flyers. Kenneth and John shaved every day while aloft, as their photographs indicate.

MODERNIZE BRING YOUR HOME UP-TO-DATE

A Mansion Can Be Made From an Old Style House at Small Cost

HAVE THE OLD HOME REMODELED INSIDE AND OUT

There are many homes in Pampa and surrounding territory that have been standing several years, houses that were considered good ones in their day, but the hand of progress has been busy in recent years building homes of a modern type. The old straight roof, narrow windows, plain floors, etc., are giving way to larger windows, hard wood floors, built in fixtures and more modern designs.

The old fashioned house will soon be a thing of the past; in its place will rise a home of modern architecture with all the conveniences that the housewife craves, there will be built into the new home many labor saving appliances and devices, and the housewife, while her heart swells with pride, will also take on new life. Life for the whole family will become more replete with joy. All this can be accomplished with very little expense.

Why not take enough time off from the routine of life to call on your favorite lumberman; he will courteously explain to you just how easy and economically you can

CONVERT THE OLD HOUSE INTO A MANSION

JULY CHORES FOR THE HOME OWNER DON'T NEGLECT PROPERTY

House maintenance costs may be reduced and house values may be maintained so as to defeat depreciation by a careful schedule of monthly activity.

Here is the July program:

Make thorough repair in place of earlier makeshifts. Repair fences, garages, barns, graineries, poultry houses, out-buildings, etc. See that all buildings are in perfect repair. Inspect gutters and leaders for patching, painting and replacement. Extra gutter spikes may be needed on iceforming north side. Make preparation for fall tree transplanting by putting the ground in proper condition. Trees and shrubbery are very essential to the beauty of any home whether city or rural and add greatly to the value of property.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF VACATION PERIODS

While you are away on vacation would be an ideal time to have the interior of your home decorated and built-in conveniences added. See your favorite lumberman and arrange with him to have this work done while you are away. The wife will be relieved of trying to keep house while the work is being done and you will be delighted to return and find your improvements have made the old home so much more attractive.
